Even the love of my husband, which fell upon my troubled soul like a strange, sweet melody, had not the power to subdue the fierce spirit of revenge that rose within my being. This spirit had been breathed into me by my father, who taught that the first duty of life was to bring the following story:

Was in great danger, that he had been condemned to death by that terrible society of Italians, the Montieblos, and he implored me to assist him to escape their vengance. He would fly from the place, but he had no money, and if he remained it would be only to meet his death. All this he poured out to me in a wild, almost incoherent the first duty of life was to bring the following story:

CHAPTER IV.

I shall give the story just as it came to me from Mrs. Buford's lips, only omitting such parts of it as have no direct bearing upon my story. After relating briefly the incidents of her meeting with Martin Buford and the tragic death of her father she continued:

"When I saw my father lying dead before me, all the vengeful impulses of my nature rose in my soul, and I swore to heaven to be revenged upon his slayer. I knew properties, but oreates an appetite for food. Use if and try your weight. Sold by all programs of the difference in the difference in the country I was now in and the country I was now in and the one I had quitted. There my deed would have been looked upon by many as a just one, and by the aid one I had slain nuy father, but in America I realized it was vastly different. Once I had committed the deed I would be branded as a murderess and nothing could protect me from the vengeance of the law. Not only that, but I would bring disgrace upon my husband, whom I "We should never" said a dervise."

"We should never" said a dervise. me. I realized the difference in soul, and I swore to heaven to be revenged upon his slayer. I knew the murderer, though I had never seen him before. He was a Balacco, I knew the instant my eyes fell upon him, for he had the same dark passionate face that had been possessed by his father. There was a most deadly feud existing between the house of Pinelli and that of Balacco, and for many generative within me I felt that to carry out.

Only that, but I would bring disgrace upon my husband, whom I loved as my own life.

"We should never" said a dervise to an Eastern King, "begin a thing of which we have not well considered the end." Had this observation been heard and heeded by all how much evil had been avoided! A wise remark is a seed worth sowing.

There is nothing which will of Balacco, and for many generations they had shed each other's blood. Young Anton Balacco, the slayer of my father, had been in that I must wait—wait till I could religious faith in the over-ruling, slayer of my father, had been in Sardinia for years, and being the last of the Balaccos I knew that he would sconer or later return and attempt the life of my father, for I heard that he had sworn to do so. Hon. Mr. Tweedia: Then why don't you Dr. Stockton: Under the law you have the right to prevent the granting of license a a parish by a petition of a majority of the ers, but see the position we are sed in in St. John. There are different rds in that City, many of which have very large population, yet to prevent a liceuse being granted in some of these wards we would have to have a majority of the entire City, which I say is unfair. If you want to deal fairly with the temperance people of St. John let a majority of the different wards prevent the issue of the ifferent wards present the issue of the tennes, and then it will soon be stopped. Hon, Mr. Tweedle said the hon, member had not yet assured him as- to where the enefit was going to be of requiring najority petition, instead of one third, alone he was trying to arrive at prohibition. secential to the efficient carrying out of the license faw. Where had any petitions come from, asking for a change ?

Dr. Stockton : Why, the whole a ance community of the Province of New wick, through their convention in this city, saked for the change.

Hon. Mr. Tweedie said the convention the temperance people but not all If there was a doubt about the constitutionality of the law it was better that the Hous ald stay its hand. One speaker had said that he did not care if chaos reigned as long as the traffic was put down, but that was sall liquor, and not giv. it to another. It would be an unfair thing and very difficult consrol. The honorable member who sated the traffic relegated to the slums of St. John did not know what he was talking and Princess that you see the young man going to destruction, but in the slums of St. John. If the temperance people could carry ne license in St. John it would really retard the cause of temperance, because the traffic would be carried on in these slums and secret dens. · You do not see the young men ning into the hotels and getting drunk, but go out the Marsh road and you will find them. Every man knows that temperance is correct, and that the temperance senti-ment prevails strongly in this Province. It has grown very greatly in the last 20 years. We ought to be satisfied and ot be too eager to make unwilling everts. Outside of the question of revenue altogether, very disasterous effects might be produced in the city of St. John. What would prevent, fo oe, a combine of the whole business What would prevent a few shrewd mer embining together and creating a monoply ess of the city? Dr. Stockton: No more than they could Besides these a number of other build political bridges to eatch honest farmers. The tax on incorporated companies yielded the government last year $27755; the succession duties $9729.

How Mr. Alward—Well, it is not to build political bridges to eatch honest farmers. The tax on incorporated companies yielded the government last year $27755; the succession duties $9729.

How Mr. Mitchell—It is not corporation companies at $27000.

The fiscal year was changed last year, and we only had the receipts from this source for one half of the other section of this continent. He did not believe any country in the world had stood the great commercial strain of the past two years better than Canada, and no province of Canada in this respect had a record superior to New Brunswick. As a conservative he gave a large amount of the credit for this to the Dominion government, and he trusted that hon, gentlemen opposite would be equally candid with respect to the good works of the close of last year our bonded indebtedness stood at $2,675,000.

The auditor's report of the present year should not be expense.

For the Natural History society $125 was proposed, and at the urgent solicitation of the leader of the opposition and others $125 had been alloted for the New Brunswick Historical Society. For public been the trusted that hon, gentlemen opposite would be equally candid with respect to the good works of the present local government.

It would be remembered that at the close of last year our bonded indebtedness stood at $2,675,000.

The actual increased to the extent of $2,000, making in all $2,709,000.

The actual increase, however, had a capital account; the revenue of the whole expense.

For the Natural History society $125 was proposed, and at the urgent solicitation of the leader of the opposition and others $125 had been alloted for the New Brunswick Historical Society. For public printing, $11,000; for public works, $195,150; for refunds upon crown lands $2,00; for relief to Chatham fire sufferers, $500.

A very disastrous fire had occurred at Cuatham last fall and the government being appealed to had promised to give this amount. For surveys and railway inspection is going to claim that the government is going to

The net total indebteduess of the province at the close of 1894 was $2,252,829,83; at the close of the past year it was $2,321,412,66, an increase of $68,582,83, of which sum, as alresdy stated, $67,000 was covered by the additional bonds it would be seen that the sinking fund had been added to, so that it now comprised $28,000 upon horse now comprised $28,000 upon horse importation, $22 503 upon bridges in 1894, $9,974,93; six per importation, $22 503 upon bridges, and $9,500 for debt falling due in but not, presented for redemption but not presente

Much of the legislature report was crowded out of the ADVANCE last week by the Chatham incorporation bill. We, therefore make rounder the following as the most important portion thereof:

How Mr. Mitchell submitted the estimates of the moneys required for the services of the province (not ortherwise provided for) for administration of justice was $14.

385.05. This was very much larger than it was last year, because last year only covered a period of ten months but the item was about the same as it had been in former years, though stenographers and other facilities had been added to the meahing of the courts of the months had been added to the meahing of the courts of the general was performed and the house went into committee of supply.
