The five granite concerns, namely Utopia Granite Co., O'Brien and Baldwin, Tayte, Meating & Co., Epps, Dadds & Co., and Bay of Fundy, whose business is the manufacture of red, grey and black granite for monumental and building purposes, have had an exceptionally prosperous year...

Our town has been incorporated only a year and although no great or expensive improvements have been attempted the sewerage system has been extended, a new and substantial town hall has been erected, fire appliances procured, order maintained, the Canadian Temperance Act practically enforced without incurring any municipal debt, in fact leaving a substantial surplus on hand...

The one great handicap of our town for years has been the notorious service given by the N. B. Southern Ry. In the short time the C. P. R. has followed Dr. Trotter's lead with consummate tact and wisdom and secured additional pledges swelling the total subscription list considerably above $100,000...

A New Cult. Boston, especially the Back Bay section is the most fruitful soil on earth for cultivating religious plants. Generally, the success depends upon the new movement mothered by some distinguished society...

we hope for a large tourist business. No place in Canada has better natural advantages. The town is picturesquely situated on a hill, the south side overlooking a salt water basin...

LOCAL AND SPECIAL. Great bargains in Overcoats at Jas. O'Neills. The Tenders calling for the erection of the new English church will be opened Wednesday, Jan. 15.

The I. O. F. entertainment takes place tonight. The committee in charge have spared no pains to make the affair a success. On New Year's evening a number of the young people gathered at the home of Miss Marion Wetmore and were enjoyably entertained.

You cannot always trust to the New Brunswick Southern. Ask the young people who left the ice at the lake on New Year's day. They lost an hour's skating but they had the pleasure of seeing the train speed right past the watering tank, on into town. Then, as some of them were anxious to see friends leaving for the west—they did the best thing possible, they walked and ran into the station.

John Brown met with a serious accident on Saturday evening last. While driving into town from his home at L'Etang, in the darkness his horse got off the road, upset the wagon and ran away. Mr. Brown was thrown out of the wagon and struck on his head with much force. An ugly gash in the back of the head resulted and at first it was feared his injuries were fatal, happily they were not. It was a narrow escape, however. The horse was stopped near the station house.

Thos. Butler died on Sunday evening. He has been ill for some months. Mr. Butler was eighty-nine years of age, over half a century of his life being spent in St. George. He was a caulker by trade and years ago when ship building flourished here he was a valuable man. Before coming to St. George, Mr. Butler was a foreman in the employ of the Canard Co. and often had one hundred men under him. The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon. St. George Lodge No. 12 A. F. & A. M. attended in a body.

Interest in Thaw Case Lessened. New York, Jan. 6.—Harry K. Thaw today for the second time faces a trial on the charge of wilful murder. After months of waiting in the Tombs, the tedious work of securing a jury to try the famous Pittsburgher for the killing of Stanford White has begun in the criminal branch of the Supreme Court, the same of room in which Thaw sat daily for nearly three months during the previous trial. Compared with the former trial, interest in New York is at a low ebb. Re-arrangement of the court room has materially lessened the number of seats for representatives of the press, but the demand for room for reporters has been considerably less than at the former trial...

MONTRÉAL, Jan. 3.—The Canadian Pacific Railway started in at the beginning of 1907 with the claim that they would have gross earnings of $75,000,000 and they have succeeded. The approximate gross earnings of the Company were $75,254,000 in 1907, and $67,142,000 in 1906, against $30,444,000 the way back in 1905. The financial stringency seems, however, to have effected their returns for the last week of 1907, the gross returns being $1,974,000, against $2,068,000 for the same period of 1906.

When a man goes around talking about the good old winter time and telling people that cold weather is needed to kill disease germs, it is a sign that grip and measles and scarlet fever and chicken-pox and mumps and whooping cough and lumbago and sciatica and rheumatism and pneumonia have all passed by his house thus far. But the winter is young yet.—Exchange.

NASAL CATARRH PRODUCES DEAFNESS RELIEF IN PE-RU-NA. Mr. R. J. Arless, 401 City Hall Ave., Montreal, Quebec, is an old gentleman of wide acquaintance, having served thirty-eight years in the General Post-office of Montreal, a record which speaks for itself. Concerning his case of Peruna, see letter given below.

"I have been afflicted with nasal catarrh to such a degree that it affected my hearing. This was contracted some twenty years ago by being exposed to draughts and sudden changes of temperature. I had been under the treatment of specialists and have used many drugs recommended as specifics for catarrh in the head and throat—all to no purpose. About three years ago I was induced by a confrere in office to try Peruna. After some hesitation, as I had doubts as to results after so many failures, I gave Peruna a trial, and am happy to state that after using eight or ten bottles of Peruna I am much improved in hearing, and in breathing through the nostrils."

OUR PROBLEM CONTEST.

Have You Tried It—Send In Your Solution Today—It's a Brain Stormer. Here's a chance to exercise your brains. This is a problem that will keep you guessing. Get your paper and pencil ready and send in your answer. You may be right. It will do no harm if you are. It's a teaser, the hardest clue a hen and a half problem that puzzled all the who ees. This is the problem:

A dog is chasing a rabbit, and the rabbit has thirty yards' start on the dog. The rabbit runs at the rate of eight yards in a second and the dog at the rate of ten yards a second. How long will it be before the dog catches the rabbit?

The following are some of the answers received yesterday:

MABEL'S ANSWER.

Dear Problem Editor—In answer to your interesting problem published last week I would say the dog will catch the rabbit in one minute and eight seconds.

MABEL'S ANSWER.

HOW A HIGH SCHOOL BOY FIGURED IT.

Problem Editor—Let x = the rabbit and y = the dog. Then $x = 8y$. The dog runs ten yards a second, therefore $10x = y$ or $x = 10y$. The dog will therefore catch the rabbit in ten seconds.

HIGH SCHOOL BOY.

NO HIGHER MATHEMATICS NECESSARY.

Problem Editor:

Dear Sir—I am much interested in your dog and rabbit problem and have been mulling it over for some time. The answer can be found without resort to the higher mathematics, but the puzzle is most ingenious. The dog will catch the rabbit in just 4 1/2 seconds. MATHEMATICIAN.

A PROTEST.

Problem Editor:

Dear Sir—As a lover of all wild creatures I wish to protest against the needless cruelty of your recent problem. Any one who has seen, or I have, the tortured, quivering, innocent furry thing in the cruel jaws of the savage murderer can take no delight in speculating on the all too short term of life allotted to the inoffensive rabbit. NATURE LOVER.

P. R.—I hope the dog will never catch the rabbit.

NO, THERE IS NO PRIZE.

Problem Editor—The dog will catch the rabbit in just one minute. Thus: $10 - 8 = 2$; $2 \times 30 = 60$. Sixty seconds is one minute. Is there any prize for correct answer? R. D.

A SOLUTION FROM BOSTON.

Problem Editor—The velocity of the dog minus the velocity of the rabbit will equal the difference of velocity between the two quadrupeds. The are subtended by a chord described in an equilateral circle having a radius of thirty yards can readily be determined. The dog would therefore overtake (not necessarily catch) the rabbit in 1 1/2 seconds.

PUBLIC LIBRARY.

AN ANSWER FROM WASHINGTON.

Problem Editor:

Sir—Your problem is calculated to give grossly inaccurate ideas concerning rabbits to every child who reads it and may do great harm. A rabbit does not run, but bounds or leaps, and I have never known an ordinary rabbit to run eight yards in a second. A rabbit may do so, but you do not mention a jack rabbit. I have known a jack rabbit and never know one to travel faster than seven yards a second, so any statement or implying the contrary is purely a deliberate mendacity. T. R.

After the Storm.

By LULU JOHNSON.

Brooks raised the shade and looked out, saying things softly to himself. A sudden landscape merged into leaden skies and a fine, driving rain veiled but slightly the misery of the scene.

Across the road a score of ducks waddled contentedly through the muddy field to a paddie that had formed in a corner of the lot, but half a dozen bedraggled hens squawked dolefully as they pecked up the angleworms driven to the surface by the continued rain and rushed back to shelter. The cows in the side pasture huddled under the dripping trees, and the dog trotted across the road with his tail dragging almost in the mud as he made for the protection of the barn after being driven from the inviting kitchen door.

Brooks had come to Centreville for a purpose—a purpose that was not best served by confinement in a country boarding house for seven days and nights. Once or twice there had come a break in the steady rain, but in an hour or so it only came down the harder, as though to make up for the time it had lost.

He had wanted to take Bess over to the Big rock, where they had first met the summer before, and there make the avowal of love that had hung treacherously upon his lips ever since. He had been able to take a whole month the year before—four golden weeks filled with sunshine and love.

Then Bess had gone to Europe as companion to a rich relative, and just as she returned Curtis Brooks had been called to South America on a matter of great importance. They had corresponded with such regularity as their uncertainty of movement permitted, but there had been no opportunity for a proposal, and now their waking time was divided between the parlor and the dining room of the old farmhouse.

Seven days of rain had got on Brooks' nerves. With his whole enterprise he was up on his knees beside her. He had given up all hope as the long wet days wore upon his patience. He had not supposed that she would trust her future to him. Now that she looked at him he poured out his love in a torrent of speech, oblivious to all else. For a quarter of an hour he gave heed to nothing save the sweet face before him, looked at nothing through a rift in the clouds, fighting with prismatic splendor the arch of a rainbow.

"Life is like that, dear," she said gently. "There must be some stormy days that we may better appreciate the sun."

"Of course not, you foolish boy," she suggested demurely.

THE POOR CAT.

One Occasion When the Animal Did Not Come Back.

When the cat died the whole family went into mourning, figuratively if not literally. No common back door cat this, but one that must be buried with all honor. The question was how and when.

Some one proposed cremation, but this was rejected on the ground that it would be too much like lynching. It was finally proposed that the father, who had to cross a ferry every day to his place of business, should drop it overboard, and as a burial at sea rite appeared to the cemetery the procession of the family this idea was received favorably.

The following morning the remains of the cat were made into a package and securely tied. It was a lovely day, and the ferryboat was crowded with passengers, and what had seemed so simple at home assumed unexpected difficulties in the face of a curious crowd, ready to imagine anything and to put the worst construction on an apparently mysterious action.

Finally it occurred to the father that the best time would be the evening, and he took his package to the ferryboat without attracting notice in the dusk. Through the day it occupied a corner of his office, and he was glad when the time came for the return trip.

He waited until the boat was well out in the stream and then, glancing around furtively, laid his hand on the package. Suddenly it struck him what would seem doubly so at night.

With a smothered groan he replaced it on the seat beside him. There was no help for it—he would have to carry it home again.

As he took his seat in the train that was to convey him the rest of the way he placed the cat on the shelf above his head, and for the first time that day forgot all about it. Hurrying to get off the car when he reached his destination, he was halted by some one who had a message for him.

"The cat is waiting for you," he said. "The cat is waiting for you," he said. "The cat is waiting for you," he said.

"The cat is waiting for you," he said. "The cat is waiting for you," he said. "The cat is waiting for you," he said.

Making Her Will

On the morning of her natal day, Frederica came down to breakfast with a puckered brow. Neither the dewy white roses, meet offering for a three month bride, nor the golden September sunshine, nor the congratulations of her husband and sister, dispersed the gloom which caused the pucker. She played with toast and bacon with a far-away look in her blue eyes, and sat absently twirling her wedding ring as her husband kissed her good-bye before rushing off to his office. "I feel rather a beast," she remarked as she watched Oliver down the street. "He will think all day that I have quarrelled with him, and it isn't that a bit. It's my will. You see Barbara—" Barbara looked puzzled. Was Frederica at last waking up to the fact that her will power had never been her strong point.

"But a married woman must always make a will, even if she has made one before. What does revoke mean?" continued Frederica. Barbara suggested it might mean calling back or repeating. "Well, then, darling, I shall have to call back and repeat the will I made leaving everything to you," said Frederica, with her mouth full of toast and marmalade.

It says on the form we bought, "A will is revoked by the marriage of the person making it."

"Listen, Barbara," said Frederica, impressively, as she unfolded the document "and you will see that I cannot help it! A will is revoked by the marriage of the person making it." Barbara did listen. "Well, that's all right," she said, cheering up. "All right!" echoed Frederica in dismay. "How can it be? If I died, it would mean that Oliver had every single thing belonging to me, even the pearls you gave me."

"Well, isn't that what you want?" smiled Barbara.

"You are not generally so dense. You might help me. A will made by a married woman is no mere child's play, I assure you," she added loftily.

Barbara did help her, for whenever there was a sound of tears in Frederica's voice everyone came to her assistance.

"You mean we must go to the lawyer together and produce a legal document, she suggested. Frederica's eyes danced.

"Yes, you fear old thing, and won't it be a lovely way of keeping my birthday? Such a surprise for Oliver, too," she continued, as she capered round the room. "He thinks I can do nothing without him," she chuckled.

"I think we had better find a very old and wise lawyer," pondered Barbara, as she watched her.

They consulted the charwoman, who seemed to be a sort of walking encyclopaedia of information.

"Then you can't do no better than to go to old Huggins down street. He knows law right enough; when my husband took and broke his leg in the path of duty, he made his master pay up, he did."

"Mr. Huggins? Yes, mum. Please step upstairs."

Barbara hesitated. "He is old, isn't he?" she inquired.

"Folks do say he has been here nigh on 40 years."

The office boy was so young and dimwitted that he said this with bated breath. Then they were ushered into the presence of the great man. He certainly seemed to have caught some of the dignity and antiquity of the great cathedral opposite his office. The way he shook hands was absolutely magnificent.

Frederica had taken her glove off showing her wedding ring.

"I want to make my will," she began. Mr. Huggins glanced at the little white hand and bowed low, as he murmured that was very unusual with a bride.

Frederica blushed becomingly.

"Quite an easy matter," pursued the lawyer.

"I wish to leave everything to my husband," remarked Frederica loftily, "except £100."

"Quite so, quite so, very proper and befitting." The lawyer rubbed his hands. "Do you think," proceeded Frederica rather nervously, "that my husband will miss just £100? It is unusual for a married woman to leave even £100 away from her husband?"

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is not a symptom of, and not to be treated as, a disease. We think of dyspepsia, heartburn, and indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific nerve sickness—nervousness.

Dr. Shoop's Restorative

"ALL DEALERS"

Mr. Huggins coughed. He said that depended on the bulk of the estate.

Frederica turned to Barbara. "Do tell him what I have to leave. I don't know."

The lawyer bent over the sheet of foolscap to hide the shadow of a smile.

Barbara explained as far as she could while Frederica remained wrapped in thought.

"I do know," she said, suddenly, in triumph, "that I have the leaving of something I don't possess. Do explain that, Barbara!"

Barbara remarked that was a reversion. It was comforting to find that the words "All the property of which I die possessed, and which will revert to me as heir-at-law," covered the whole situation.

"How about the £100 you wished to leave in legacies?" asked the lawyer.

"Yes, I must do that," said Frederica, in sudden desperation. "I can't give up everything just because I am married. I don't mind about my father and mother, because I haven't got any, but I won't give up Barbara and Dick. Please leave them £50 each."

The scratching of a quill pen intimated that was done.

"I shall require you ladies to attend tomorrow to sign the document," said the lawyer, "and may we hope"—and here he again softly rubbed his hands—"may we hope that it will be very long before this will takes effect!"

"Yes; I do think I don't like the words 'last will and testament,'" said the little bride, as they returned down the sunny street. "Anyhow, it can't make me die to make my will," she continued.

By this time they had come to the ancient stone bridge spanning the river. Barbara leant over to watch the fishes.

Her cheeks were flushed from the effects of talking law. Suddenly Frederica gave a scream. "I forgot all about Bob!" she gasped. What are we to do?

Barbara suggested dividing £100 between Bob and Dick and herself. But Frederica was inconsolable. By that time they were back at Mr. Huggins' door. The boy remarked: "It's gone to dinner." Frederica wondered why lawyers always had dinner in the middle of the day.

Barbara was practical. She suggested they should go to a farm and get some tea. It is wonderful what cheering views tea infuses, especially if it be drunk with cream and golden butter. Frederica manifestly recovered, was soon able to dictate her last wish in a calm voice.

"I think you had better sign them," said Barbara, as canary, cat, dog, and kitten had finally been disposed of.

"It has been quite a sporting day," said Frederica rapturously, as they walked home. "Won't Oliver be delighted and surprised? I think she added thoughtfully, I will make a new will every birthday."

Barbara made a mental reservation to pass no more birthdays with Frederica. Aloud she remarked, "I think you will find that rather an expensive amusement."

"Good heavens!" protested Frederica: "does it cost anything to make a will? I thought the government or the king paid all that."

"I know I had to pay a pound when I made mine," said Barbara.

"As usual she came to Frederica's rescue. "I will give you the fee as a birthday present," she said.

"You darling, and I will keep it as a secret, and give my will to Oliver as a Christmas present. It will be like giving him all I possess."

Barbara wisely refrained from any comment, and the next day the last will and testament of Frederica Mary James was duly witnessed and sealed and attested.

THAT JEWEL CONSISTENCY.

The demand for strictly temperate men in business is growing. Our railroad and other corporations are pressing the demand. Even liquor dealers, we see, are falling into that line and calling for strictly temperate bartenders.

It is not strange, passing strange, that when there is demand for sober men everywhere, and no demand for intemperate men anywhere, there should be such a persistent determination on the part of some of our Towns and Cities to go on in the criminal work of making drunkards. Note the results of recent elections in the States. We rejoice in the improved and improving condition of things in our own town. There is yet room for improvement.

A GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY.

Behold your opportunity, Mr. Borden, Mr. Stanfield. You pledged yourselves to a clean canvass, a pure election. We hold you true to your position until proven otherwise. The Liberals have opened the door, in their protest. Be consistent and enter in and prove to the people who expect much from you, that you were sincere in your declaration. To prove it will be a jewel in your crown. To shirk the issue will be ruinous to your cause.

The Conservative party is on trial in this protest. On the verdict it stands or falls. The public stands ready to applaud or hiss according to the result. Face the issue like men.

POWER OF IDEALS.

Honesty in public life. Fairness in elections. These are chief among the things demanded of our politicians by the representatives of the people. Are these demands as made by Rev. W. C. Goucher and his confederates unreasonable? Are they such as can not be realized? Some say they are too much of an ideal to be realized under present conditions.

Do we forget that ideal rule—are the formative forces in the world. It is only as these ideas are lifted up above the common dead-level, and shaped into ideals, or lofty schemes for attainment in character or conduct, and thrown into the minds of men, that there is anything that can lift men up above the common dead-level of life.

Push your ideals friends. They may at first take possession of only a few, but they will in time crystallize into arrangements, systems, institutions, that will mould the many, and in this way shape the destiny of the nation. What would the world be today without the ideals of men who in time have become Empire builders.

BY THE WAY

Trust.

Awake! the people can be trusted.

We like to think and we take great comfort in the expression that the people can be trusted.

We must modify this sentiment to give it any worth. The fact is that the people can be trusted awake and the fact equally is, that the people are a negligible quantity asleep.

It would be well for the people of St. George, well for the people of Charlotte County if they would awaken. They are inclined to allow three or four to do the thinking for them, inclined to be flattered into the belief that they themselves are the leaders in matters political, in matters effecting the vital interests of our town and county. Awaken! Let the people of St. George look out for their own town; that is for themselves, in the approaching local election. Do not be flattered into forgetting home and home interests, in the advancing of the political fortunes of men, personally ambitious, filled with egotism and overflowing with selfishness—who despise you because you are so easily cajoled and who care just so much for this town (this county) as will serve to advance themselves into the limelight.

On Thursday last three young lads went through the ice at Lake Utopia. Apart from the discomfort following the wetting received, the boys were not injured. The world went over the town in quick time and mothers given to worry and fathers prone to scold, without rhyme or reason forbade the young folks in their care, the pleasure of an hour or so on the ice, at the Lake. This was not reasonable nor fair. There were miles of ice perfectly safe and the fact, that the three boys did get a wetting, did not materially effect the solidity of the ice where most of the skaters enjoyed themselves. It is also wrong to place too much blame on the boys. The spirit of youth is ever filled with love of adventure in land or water it is ever the same. I will go a little farther, venture a little more than the other fellow. If accidents follow then the rest of the world is wiser. The lads were foolhardy to venture where they did, but they found out that the ice would not carry them and their mishap made other skaters cautious.

St. Stephen, N. B., Jan. 1—(Special)

The town council held its annual meeting last evening. For some time it has been considering the appointment of a commission to manage the new water works system. The commission was appointed, and consists of Mayor Teed, who is appointed for one year; F. E. Rose, for two years, and Councillor A. A. Laffin for three years.

At the expiration of each of the above terms, an appointment will be made to fill the vacancy. The council has delegated power to this commission to appoint a superintendent of the water system, and Councillor Laffin will receive the appointment within a few days. The salary will probably be $1,200 or $1,500 a year.

Mayor Teed's acceptance on the commission will probably retire him from the office of mayor at the close of the present term, the last of January. Councillor Laffin will also retire as a representative from Dukes ward.

Samuel Topping fell on the sidewalk this morning and fractured his hip bone.

Old 1907 was given a noisy send off by the boys, and the advent of 1908 was hailed with the pounding of tin pans, the blowing of horns and bell ringing and music. Tuesday night Dec. 31, was on the whole, one that will linger in memory for years to come. Early in the evening the remark might have been heard in many places, "Well it is not like old times, New Year's eve of long ago was a big night," etc. However, before midnight, it became evident, that the spirit of long ago, still dwelt in the boys of today. Everybody in town knew something was happening, knew that passing time was attracting attention. Perhaps when age has sprinkled the youthful locks of the participants in Tuesday night's celebration, the same remarks will be heard, concerning the good old times of long ago. "Boys will be boys" and time no doubt places a halo round the deeds of such particular generation and gives the old fellows a notion that the 'boys of old' are no more. The rattle of guns, the shrill blare of horns, and music, the midnight, the dash shatters this notion and causes the remark: "Well, there is a few of them left!"

On Monday, Arthur Hemmerson, keeper of the light at Point Midget, received a telegram from Philadelphia, saying his brother Peter was dead in that city. Mr. Hemmerson has been going to sea for over thirty years and only last Saturday a letter was received from him saying that he was coming home. No particulars as to the cause of his death have been received.

Edward Hanlon the famous oarsman, died at Toronto on Friday last. Many a man will hear with regret of Hanlon's death for he was almost the greatest hero of our boyhood days.

Helen Lynott who is dangerously ill with pneumonia at her home in Red Beach, underwent a delicate and serious operation from which it is hoped good results will follow. Dr. Russell and Webber two of the most skillful physicians in the St. Croix, attended to her.

Many of our readers will remember little Helen who appeared here on two or three occasions in musical concerts, and we are sure we all wish her a speedy recovery.

New Year's Greetings to You

We wish you all a Happy New Year, and take this opportunity to thank you for the liberal patronage accorded us during the past year.

THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

LOCAL AND SPECIAL

Try O'Neill's for an overcoat. Good value for little money.

Everybody is going to the Foresters' entertainment tonight in Court's Hall.

It is holiday season with the Granite mills. The closing down season is somewhat later than usual.

A runaway horse made things lively on Main St. Saturday morning. The horse belonged to Robert White and ran from the Upper bridge through town to the station.

Friends of Rev. M. E. Fletcher, of Charlotte-street United Baptist church, Carleton, called at the parsonage Tuesday night and, through Deacon J. S. Clark, presented a fine Morris chair to Mr. Fletcher, and a handsome oak flower stand and jardiniere to Mrs. Fletcher.

Thos. L. Simmons, Engineer of the Railway Commission, made a trip of inspection over the New Brunswick Southern on Saturday last. The inspection of Mr. Simmons is generally followed by renewed efforts for better service on the part of the railway company and the people of this section should be thankful indeed that the commission exists. Present railway accommodations are fine, in a great measure, to the recommendations of the commissioners.

On New Year's Night the pastor and family were invited to the vestry of the U. B. Church where a very pleasant evening was spent with the members of the church and congregation. Senator Gillmor in an appropriate address presented the pastor in behalf of the church with a purse of money.

Many useful articles for the pantry were also donated for all of which the pastor desires to express his appreciation and gratitude.

Ottawa, Jan. 2.—The Canadian branch of the royal mint was declared formally opened today by Lord Grey, in the presence of a distinguished gathering, comprising the ministers of the crown, leading officials of the government, prominent citizens and representatives of the press. From now on the mint will be turning out copper, silver and gold pieces. Those who were present today received a cent each newly struck off. The Countess of Grey moved the lever which turned off the cent pieces, and Lord Grey struck off the first fifty cent piece. Refreshments were served after the ceremony was over.—Telegraph.

A large number of skaters, including happy, straight ahead speeders and old timers, girls and boys with some hockey players, gathered through the kindness of Mr. Harold Goss, enjoyed two evenings last week on the Lake ice. A special train, consisting of a push car and a pumper, left town about 7 p. m. on the evenings in question and landed the party at the lake, in a very few minutes. An enjoyable couple of hours followed on the ice and around the bonfire. Conductors A. D. Frauley and Lewis McGrattan were equally solicitous in seeing that the young ladies on the return trip and looked carefully after the safety of all. The evenings were very pleasant breaks in a somewhat dull season, as far as amusements are concerned.

The Granite manufacturers have been served with a new bill to take effect June 1st, 1908. The leading features of the demands of the cutters are, an eight hour working day and pay every two weeks. The other items of the bill are about the same as those now in force. A section, dealing with the cutting machines specifies that no man who has not served a three years apprenticeship, shall be allowed to run a machine. At present the men work nine hours a day and are paid by the month. In the articles of settlement between the Union and the manufacturers, signed some three years ago, it was agreed that any changes desired on the part of either party would require a five month's notice.

The Lower bridge is completed. While we do not perhaps concern ourselves in the question as to whom belongs the credit of having it built, we do appreciate the fact that it is, in the language of the small boy, "a dandy." The bridge is what is known as the Lattice Truss style of work. The span stretches 160 feet from pier to pier, it is 18 ft. 6 inches wide—with a clear roadway of seventeen feet, from the roadway the height of the trusses is 30 ft. with 14 ft. clear headway. The carrying capacity is eighty pounds to the square foot. The erection of the steel part has taken two months. This is quick work, considering that the laborers were local men, unaccustomed to this kind of work. Mr. J. E. Carroll has been in charge of the work for the bridge Co. and Mr. James O'Brien has been inspector for the Government.

Monday was Little Xmas.

All roads will lead to Frauley Bros. for four days next week.

Rev. E. Thorpe, of St. George's S. C. Church, who so acceptably filled the pulpit in the Presbyterian church during the past summer, will officiate here on Sunday the 12th. The Rev. gentleman is exceedingly popular with the congregation and will remain here for some time.

New Year's day was generally observed in St. George. There were services in the Roman Catholic church, most of the stores were closed and the day being fine clerks and employees enjoyed themselves as they saw fit.

The splendid skating at Lake Utopia took a large number over the hills to that popular resort. Many others enjoyed the slides on the hills and those creek and the "riterials" near town. Others spent the afternoon calling and several of the Nature lovers hastened to the call of the wild and spent the day in the woods.

St. John wholesale firms have, it is said, been pushing their goods through Nova Scotia, selling in territory tributary to Halifax. The visit of a representative of a wholesale Halifax dry goods house, here last week, would indicate that Halifax was awakening and that St. John wholesalers are to have their firm in meeting competition on their own territory.

The body of Thomas Charles Druce, of Highgate cemetery, London was exhumed Monday just 43 years to a day after its burial. The coffin was found to contain the remains of a human body, thus exploding the romantic tales told by Robt. C. Caldwell and others who swore during the recent hearing of the Druce perjury case that it contained a roll of lead.

The movement in connection with the conversion of the plains of Abraham into a national park, is to be taken up by the Canadian clubs. The club at Ottawa intends issuing invitations to the Presidents of other Canadian clubs to attend a meeting at Ottawa Jan. 17, these to consider the best means to raise funds to carry out the ideas of Earl Grey who has taken great interest in the movement.

St. Stephen, N. B., Jan. 2.—Hugh McAdam, sub-collector of customs at Milltown, died this morning, after a brief illness. He was 72 years of age, and had been in the customs service for twenty-nine years. His funeral was held on Sunday. He was the eldest son of late Hon. John McAdam, and he leaves one brother, John McAdam, now in British Columbia, and two sisters, Mrs. F. H. Scammell, of New York, and Mrs. G. F. Pinder. Of his four sons three survive, Kenneth, with whom he made his home in Milltown, and Edward and Lorne, who are in business elsewhere.

St. John received a magnificent New Year's gift. The following telegram from Hon. Mr. Pugsley dated at Ottawa Jan. 1 explains itself:

Mayor Sears, St. John (N. B.): I have informed you by letter today, the government has decided to grant the request of the common council recently presented for the building of wharf extension Sand Point. I trust that the year on which we are just entering will be one of great prosperity for St. John, and that another important forward step will be taken toward the working out of its destiny as one of Canada's great ocean ports. I wish you many happy returns of the New Year.

WILLIAM PUGSLEY.

The deep sea fishermen of the Maritime provinces received $159,015 as bounties for their catches of fish during the past year. More than three-fifths of this amount was paid to boat fishermen, of whom there were 29,871 in the provinces during the season. The owners of the 957 fishing vessels, which went out after the fish during the year, received as their shares of the bounties $62,208, about two-fifths of the total amount. Nova Scotia's fishermen received nearly double the amount of one bounty paid to those in the other three provinces, receiving almost $100,000. The bounties are distributed in the other provinces were as follows: Quebec, $34,410; New Brunswick, $16,247; and Prince Edward Island, $8,839.

Truth-telling George

Now, George Tellum—yes, you're old friend George—made up his mind one day at 5:20 that there's nothing to his hot air, four-flush game anyhow. "A fellow'll get along a whole lot better," he reflected, "if he just talks. What good does it do to keep handling out the salve and getting everybody to thinking they're the only real goods when all the time you know pretty much what's in their sample cases? What's the use of having people thinking that they've advanced about 400 points above their real value? Nope, there's nothin' to it. It'll be me for the old time system of strict veracity and candor from now on. That was the way George had it doped out.

The next day George resolved to try out his new system. He called up a certain sweet, estimable young person with a No. 8 pompadour, and the sort of a figure that makes all the other girls call her names—he called her up and suggested that as he hadn't anything special on hand that evening he would like to take a little run out her way.

There was something in George's way of putting it that didn't just entirely appeal to the stuffy young thing at the other end of the line, but she overlooked it.

"I had planned to join a crowd of girls tonight," she said, "but maybe I can break the engagement. Are you real anxious to see me?"

George hesitated. A day or two before that he would have replied instantly: "Anxious to see you? If I thought I had to wait another day to see you life wouldn't be worth living! That's how glad I am to see you." But he wanted to give a fair trial to that new system of his and he had to frame up a different reply. He had to be truthful, and he knew that if he didn't see her he couldn't probably arrange to be a freemason company that evening to some other equally prepossessing young person. What he really said, therefore was something like this:—

"Why, I'll be glad to see you again, of course, but then I don't want you to change your plans just on my account, because I can drop in some other evening just as well."

That seemed to him a moderate and frank statement of the situation, but it came mighty near ending the conversation. Her first impulse was to hang up the receiver and let George draw his own conclusions. But then, she reflected, George had always spent his money rather freely, and if he was out of humor for any reason the best plan would be to let him come and have it out with him.

"Well, come on out," she said.

Now George had been in the habit of buying a box of 50-cent bon bons every time he went out to see this little person because he felt that the label on the box would advertise his affluence and put him in just right. And a young man who draws only $24 each Saturday evening has to think about those little things that bespeak prosperity. But when he stopped at the corner drug store to buy he happened to notice a box containing another brand of confectionery. It was only 50 cents, the man told him, because it wasn't in such a cute little box and didn't have the name. George thought if it tasted just as good he might as well try it, and he handed the man only 50 cents.

"This is a different kind, isn't it?" observed the stuffy young thing, when he handed her the box of confectionery that evening in the cozy little parlor.

"Yes," admitted George, truthfully, "it's a little cheaper than the kind I've always been getting, and the man says it's just as good, all but the name and the box. I made up my mind that I was foolish to throw money away just because some fellow has a graft in his name."

She didn't say anything but she remembered how George used to remark that only the best would match her. This kind was probably all right, of course—but then he acted sort of funny.

"George isn't like himself tonight," she thought. Maybe if I play something it'll get him into better spirits." She played over two or three popular comic opera selections.

"Do you like those?" she asked him, whirling about on the piano seat, adjusting a side comb as she did so.

"They're pretty catchy, all right," complimented George, and then hesitatingly

"Of course they'll sound lots prettier when you get a little more practice playing them." And if there was anything that she took pride in it was her piano playing.

"I haven't been practicing so much on instrumental music," she said in her own defense. "The fact is I have been taking vocal lessons. What do you think of that?"

George was getting ashamed of him self. But he was going to give his truth telling system a good try out if it killed him. "I wouldn't go in for the vocal end of it if I were you," he said. "It always struck me that unless a girl has an—er—unusually good voice she oughtn't to attempt to do any singing. They're mighty few girls that can sing, I tell you."

She thought it was time to change the subject. Wasn't that a perfectly delightful dance last Thursday night, thought she exclaimed.

Once again George determined that truth should not down. "Oh, yes, it was a nice affair," he admitted, "but I got awfully tired before it was over. The last four or five dances seemed to me would never end! Now that was strictly true, but if George had stopped to recall who had been his partner for the last four or five dances, he might not have stuck to his new system so faithfully particularly inasmuch as he had remarked at the time that he could have danced forever with such a partner."

"I think you are acting perfectly hateful tonight," spoke up the girl sharply. "You're not like yourself at all. You haven't even noticed my new gown that I put on tonight just on your account. Don't you like it?"

"Ye-e-s" murmured George, doubtfully. "It's all right. But you used to have a green dress that I liked better. This one seems to look too fussy or something. Of course I'm no judge of anything, but—"

The girl had risen from her chair, "Mr.

Tell me I've got such a queer feeling in my head—it's been bothering me all day that I'm going to ask you to excuse me for the rest of the evening," she said.

A moment later George, in deep disgust, was waiting for a car. "Queered once more!" he muttered to himself savagely. That's what a fellow gets for trying every fool game that pops into his head. Maybe I'll learn some day!—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Odd Things Women Are Doing

At Rochester, Ind., Miss Iva Wagouner is accused of attempting to wreck a Lake Erie & Western passenger train so that her sweetheart, who was a section laborer would be called to the scene of the wreck which would have occurred near her home if the obstruction had not been discovered.

A woman who refused to pay a second fair demanded by a Cincinnati street car conductor literally fought her way to her destination, striking and scratching the man every time he demanded the money.

For seven years Mrs. Henry Marriott has rung the bell and worshipped alone in an abandoned church at Richmond, O. Now people from Marion are going to start a revival there and try to re-establish the congregation.

Mrs. Stanley S. Atkins of Columbus, O., nearly died after taking the second of two headache powders. She followed printed directions in taking the medicine, but a physician had to work hard to save her life.

While hoeing potatoes at Cresona, Pa. Mrs. Charles Persing sliced off one of the tubers, simultaneously striking her toe. A wound was inflicted, the Doctor developed and the woman died of lockjaw.

The coeds at Bucknell University joined the annual mixup between the sophomore and freshmen, endeavoring to assist the worsted second-year men.

Mrs. Minnie McKarath has made a affidavit at Chester, Pa., that she heard a neighbor boast of bribing the board of health to overlook a nuisance for $12.

Because her husband would not take her to a 5-cent theatre Mrs. Rose Curtis, a St. Louis bride of six months, attempted suicide with carbolic acid.

Mrs. Lulu McIntosh of Kansas City is trying to avoid hydrophobia by applying a madstone to the wound. She borrowed the stone from a family that asserts it has been used successfully three times.

A woman who mourned the theft of nine of her hens at East Ottumwa, Ia., felt better when she found a pocketbook containing over $900 that the thief had dropped.

Bessie Downing, a pretty Cincinnati girl, but a cripple, has tried to poison herself because of an estrangement from her sweetheart.

No very radical change is proposed. There will be an increase in the penalties provided for infractions of the election law and additional safeguards will be made against bribery and corruption and for the better enforcement of the act.

Toronto, Dec. 29—Fire in the upper story of George Hees, Son & Co.'s five story building on Bay street, Saturday afternoon did damage exceeding $150,000. Hees' window blind stock was the most damaged. Hees estimates the value of the building at $50,000, and the insurance at 80 per cent. The stock is worth $100,000, and is insured for $50,000.

Turner & Hamilton, manufacturers, agents; Clark & Clark, leather goods; Pooock Bros. & Co., shoe manufacturers; and Winch, McLaren & Co., smallwares had their stocks damaged by water.

An accident occurred to the firemen handling the water tower, the handle got loose, and revolving, knocked Lieutenant Davidson down and broke his leg, besides injuring other firemen.

The fact that Wood has given the worst of it from every possible angle has not disconcerted him, for he is now before the public with a scheme for building a set of tunnels to cost $400,000,000. They are to travel from Jersey City and Hoboken under the Hudson River through Twenty-third street and under the East River to Brooklyn. Connecting with the big tunnels will be seven or eight smaller ones, stretching to every part of Greater New York. Wood has been before the Public Service Commission with his scheme.

Evil Comes to Men Who Cheat

Henry S. Wood, contractor and builder of No. 25 Broad street, says he is a good man to play fair with. In support of his assertion he submits a list of men who, he asserts, didn't play fair and later departed this life in anything but a peaceful manner. Some of them have committed suicide, others have been murdered and many have been burned to death, while in a few cases railroad trains have acted the part of Wop's avenger.

"I can't account for it," Mr. Wood said, "but it seems retribution overtakes anybody who displeases me or gives me the double-cross."

"Who are the most important men in your morality list?" he was asked.

"Charles T. Barney and Sanford White was the reply. 'I'm satisfied that if these men had dealt fairly with me their names would not be heading my list.'"

WHAT BARNEY DID TO HIM.

"How did they displease you?" the reporter asked.

"Barney made it possible for me to lose $6,000 on a real estate deal. I sold a piece of property for him on West Thirty-second street, between Fifth and Broadway, and got stung for the mortgage tax. That was a year ago, and you remember Barney's finish. I'm suing the Knickerbocker Trust Co. to recover the money."

"Stanford White owned a tumble-down house on Bleeker street, I built several storehouses next to his property and he entered into a contract to build a party wall. He was to pay me $5,000. Part of his building fell while I was excavating and he sued me. To settle the matter I had to make him a present of $5,000. That was five or six years ago. You remember his finish."

"Is it true that you are in the pay of the coffin trust?" he was asked.

"Absolutely untrue. I know how that story got in circulation. Every time my birthday comes around the Social Order of Undertakers, Gravediggers and Bone Jugglers always sends me a birthday cake."

"How many candles were there on your last cake?"

"Seventy," said Henry. "It took me half an hour to blow them out. The undertakers show me many kindnesses. They furnish me with ice for nothing."

"Will that arrangement continue after death?"

"I hope so," said Henry, laughing heartily at the reference to his final rest.

"In addition to some of those you've mentioned were there any others who took a short cut to the cemetery after their business relations with you."

"Really, I can't keep track of all of them. There are about seventy in all. Butchers and bakers short-weighted me in the morning, and in the afternoon the Coroner was going through their pockets and their relatives were saying how natural they looked. They can't trim me and die in bed."

"If this story displeases you I suppose I might just as well get measured for a tombstone," said the reporter.

"Let me see," said Henry, running down his list. "Architects, bankers, brokers, butchers, bakers, engineers, &c. Yes you'll have the honor of being the first newspaper man in my who's who."

"If you don't mind I'd like to live till pay day," suggested the reporter.

STILL OTHER VICTIMS.

Wood then told about the president of a large concern who defrauded him out of $20,000 and was burned to death a few years later. A real estate man who lives on Long Island got to him for a few thousand dollars and the cars soon dismembered him.

The fact that Wood has given the worst of it from every possible angle has not disconcerted him, for he is now before the public with a scheme for building a set of tunnels to cost $400,000,000. They are to travel from Jersey City and Hoboken under the Hudson River through Twenty-third street and under the East River to Brooklyn. Connecting with the big tunnels will be seven or eight smaller ones, stretching to every part of Greater New York. Wood has been before the Public Service Commission with his scheme.

"If I get any sort of support from the public," he said yesterday, "I will go ahead and get the franchises. I intend to have bills introduced in the New York and New Jersey legislatures. I've arranged to float the proposition in London and Paris. I can't divulge my plans just yet, but if everything works satisfactorily in a few years every commuter will have his own private tunnel."

Wood says he lives at No. 8 East Thirty second street. While discussing his tunnel proposition it might be well to state that a Henry S. Wood, of that address, filed a petition in bankruptcy last March. He had liabilities of $59,029 and no assets. Henry asseverated yesterday that he was in comfortable circumstances, but any one who heard him letting millions fall from his lips would be inclined to think his own estimate of his financial condition was just a bit modest. In addition to his other qualifications Henry admits that he is the greatest living authority on nature subjects. He is a nervous, energetic little man with gray moustache and hair, and a tendency to exceed the speech limit.--N. Y. World.

SYNOPSIS OF Canadian North-West Homestead Regulations.

Any even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person or by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at an Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

The homesteader is required to perform the homestead duties under one of the following plans:

- (1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.
- (2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.
- (3) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased) of a homesteader has permanent residence on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of the homestead, or upon a homestead entered for by him in the vicinity, such homesteader may perform his own residence duties by living with the father (or mother).
- (4) The term "vicinity" in the two preceding paragraphs is defined as meaning not more than nine miles in a direct line, exclusive of the width of road allowances crossed in the measurement.
- (5) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

Six months' notice in writing must be given to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of intention to apply for patent.

You May Need It

Ask your doctor about the wisdom of your keeping Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, ready for colds, coughs, croup, bronchitis. If he says it's all right, then get a bottle of it at once. Why not show a little foresight in such matters? Early treatment, early cure.

Many a boy is called dull and stupid, when the whole trouble is due to a lazy liver. We firmly believe your own doctor will tell you that an occasional dose of Ayer's Pills will do such boys a great deal of good. They keep the liver active.

New Brunswick's Progress.

The St. John Sun is receiving many well-deserved compliments on the excellence of its New Year edition which it gave a very complete and instructive review of the business and industrial operations of the sister Province in 1907. In addition to its annual reports on the progress of the towns and cities of the Province, reviews of the lumbering, fishing and agricultural industries, it printed a number of timely special articles dealing with the public schools, the need of industrial education, the work of the University of New Brunswick and trade with the West Indies which is now a question of live interest for Canadians. Premier Robinson contributed exceedingly interesting survey of the events of the year which was one of awakening in New Brunswick. It was the banner year in the great lumbering industry, and as a result the territorial receipts of the Province have been in excess of $320,000, as compared with $132,000 in 1896. In short the sixteen pages of the Sun tell a pleasing story of progress in the old year and promise of large development in all the great basic industries of the Province in the near future. The Sun is doing invaluable service for New Brunswick in giving publicity to its achievements and pointing the way to larger success.
