evidenced by the trade returns. The British exports to Canada declined is owing to the general tendency to economy and curtailed purchases, which is one of the most notable features of Canadian life just now. Moreover, Canada year. y increases her own manufactures. It is emphatically true that Canada desires to strengthen her commerthe Australian and other colonies. The Ottawa conference emanated from that wish, and developed a strong pro-English sentiment. Doubtless the tendency is to look away from the States, although our attitude to them is perfectly friendly. The Behring Sea arbitration happily removed the most debatable question. The tariff changes in both countries must help the interchanged of trade and virtually constitute a reciprocity treaty. Canada has responded as far as possible to every lowering of the United States du-

Sinking Slowly.

London, Oct. 19 .- The latest dispatches received at the Russian Embassy here state that the condition of the Czar is extremely Acritical. The Paris Figure says it was discovered in Aug. 18 that the Czar was affected with Bright's disease.

A dispatch from St. Petersburg to the foreign offices at Vienna says the Czar is may come at any moment.

The Courier du Soir (Paris) says it is rumored that the Czar is dead. No confirmation of the rumor is obtainable, nor says that the Czar's condition has not changed in the last few hours. Keen anxiety is evident throughout the capitol this evening. The streets are unusually dull, and everybody is reading bulletins or inquiring for the latest news from the Czar's bedside. Solemn prayers for the Czar were said at the Cathedral of St. Isaac tonight. Ministers, high officials and the most conspicuous members of St.

Petersburg society were present. COPENHAGEN, Oct. 19 .- Private telegrams received from St. Petersburg at 10 o'cleck say that the Czar's condition is slightly less critical.

London, Oct. 19 .- The Standard's St. Petersburg correspondent says: "It is intended, unless events precipitate matters, to declare a governing council on the 29th, when the Senate will assemble and thus avoid the word regent. The council will consist of the Czarewitch, the Grand Duke, Michael, and Councilors Benge and Solisky.

Dispatches from all parts of the continent show that the whole European press is brimming over with articles on the Czar. The vast majority of writers praise him for his love of peace. Speculation as to the Czarewitch's future policy is rife. No two statements of his character agree. Many of them are exceedingly unravorable. The censorship of the St. Petersburg press is reported as being unusually strict. The newspaper which announced yesterday that Father Ivan, better known as Holy John, had been summoned from Crenstadt to Livadia. was seized by the police.

The Allegemeine Zeitung in Vienna suggested this evening that the Czar was already dead, and that the fact was concealed as it was in the case of Emperor

The Russian embassy in Rome received a dispatch tonight saying that a miracle lone could save the Czar's life. The London Times' dispatch from St. Petersburg says: Later symptoms strengthen the belief that the Czar has cancer. It is feared that he is now too ill for the solemnization of the marriage. The Princess Alix of Hesse met her sister, the Grand Duchess Feederovna, at Alexandrovo. They will reach Livadia on the 23rd. Accounts of the grief of the imperial family are heartrending. The anxiety in official circles is very great. All great important affairs are almost at a standstill. When the Czar arrived at Livadia he had not slept for ten nights. He immediately began to sleep and general improvement of condition fostered great hopes of his eventual recovery. The disease, povertheless, grew slowly, while the apparent improvement made it a difficult matter for his entourage to prevent his outings.

The correspondent of the Times at St. Petersburg telegraphe: The Czar has now taken to his bed and his imperial relatives are gathering around him. Special services are being held in all the schools as well as in all the churches.

A dispatch from the Vienna correspondent of the Times, commenting upon the illness of the Czar, notes the outburst of the Russian press against Great Britain's attitude in Eastern Asia.

The Daughter of Mr. William Keith the Victim.

Brutally Assaulted and Then Foully Murdered.

Her Body Discovered in the Woods-Escape of the Murderer.

LISTOWEL, Ont., Oct. 19 .- About 2 o'clock this afternoon a daughter of Wm. Keith was returning from town by way of the railway track, which crosses their farm, about two miles from town. The section men, finding groceries scattered along the track, thought there must be something wrong, and on going to Mr. Keith's house, which was not far distant, notified Mr. Keith, and a search was made of the bush between the house and track.

DISCOVERY OF THE GIRL'S BODY. Here they found the dead body of the girl entirely nude. She had evidently been outraged and terribly cut and stabbed in different parts, the body being covered

THE MURDERER

The outrage is supposed to have been done by a tramp, who was seen near by the scene, making his way towards Listowel, carrying a black satchel and afterwards reported to have been seen near Britten station, on the way towards Stratford. Several constables and the coroner are now out searching for the villain.

Another Account.

ONLY FOURTEEN YEARS OLD. LISTOWEL, Oct. 19 .- The victim of today's terrible tragedy was a girl named Jessie Keith, aged 14 years, daughter of Mr. Wm. Keith, a farmer, about one and a balf miles from this town. The unfortunate girl was met on the railway track as she was returning from town (where she had been to the postoffice), by a tramp, it is supposed, and outraged and murdered. The railroad section men, returning down the track after dinner, found some newspapers and spilled rice on the track. Upon further investigation they discovered evidences of foul play, and following the tracks across a plowed field and about 80 yards into a swamp, discovered the body of the girl recently COVERED OVER WITH MOSS AND ROTTEN WOOD, taken away, the body bearing evidence of the foulest of crimes. WAITING FOR THE CORONER. The body at this writing, 9 p.m., still reains in the swamp, guarded, awaiting the coroner, who is expected from Stratford at the clothing having been removed and 10 p.m., there being ne coroner here at present, he being from home. The perpetrator of this terrible crime no doubt came up the railroad track, met his victim and disposed of the body as stated: leaving the swamp crossed over a portion of Mr. Rolls' farm directly abutting Mr. Keith's, on the town line, east of Listowel.

lace, where he was seen about 4 o'clock this afternoon. THE SEARCH. A search party are scouring the country in all directions, and it is hoped they will succeed in discovering and bringing to and across to the 3rd concession of Wal-

justice this fiend in human shape, THE INQUEST BEGUN. County Crown Attorney Idington, Sheriff Hossie and the coroner from Stratford, arrived at the scene of the murder on the night train, stopping at the swamp, and after viewing the body and surroundings had it removed to the girl's late home. A jury has been sworn in, and at this hour (10:30 p.m.) the inquest is going on. The body presented a frightful appearance.

IN DAYS OF YORE.

How the Old-Time Apprentice Was Pledged to Promote His Master's Interests.

Many beys of today who work for a living are inclined to kick against the generally wholesome restraints imposed by parents and employers. Sad to say, not a few of these lads delight to "loaf" on street corners and comment on the passers by in terms the reverse of gentlemanly, while too many think it manly to assume a swaggering style and waste their pocket money foolishly. In this connection it is interesting to note some of the restrictions to which the boys of 40 years ago had to submit when serving their apprenticeship. A London man, doing business on Dundas street (he is an expert, too), showed his indenture papers to an ADVERTISER reporter recently. The document is a formidable-looking affair, covering three pages of foolscap, written in schoolbey "round-hand," but phrased in the stiff and stilted style that seems to characterize even the simplest forms of

After giving necessary names and dates, the document states that the youth in the case "doth bind himself with the consent of his said father unto Henry Robinson after the manner of an apprentice to serve him from the date hereof for and during the full term of seven years and three months " during which time he, the said opprentice, his master shall and will faith ally serve, his secrets keep, his lawful commands everywhere gladly obey, and diligently and carefully demean and behave nimse f towards him. He (the apprentice) hall not do, or willingly suffer to be done by others, any hurt, prejudice or damage to the goods and merchandises or other affairs of his said master, neither will be waste or lend them plawfully to others, but the same to the utmost of his power shall hinder or thereof forthwith warn." The document here mentions crime that the youth must not commit, and continues: Nor contract matrimony within the said term. At cards, dico-tables or any other unlawful games, he shall not play. " " He shall not absent himself by day or night from his master's service without his leave. He shall not haunt ale-houses taverns, play-houses, or any other places of debauchery, but in all things bebave himself during the said term as a good and faithful apprentice ought to do." The penalty for violating these conditions was "twenty pounds of good and lawful money of Great Britain, to be recovered as

The master, on his part, covenanted to provide the lad "with good and sufficient clothing, washing, mending, and medical attendance," with "good and sufficient meat, drink, and lodging fit for an apprentice" and to "use the utmost of his endeavors to teach or cause to be taught and instructed the said apprentice in the art or science of a hair-dresser as he now professeth and followeth."

Dress

Columns have already been devoted to the detansof these stocks. It seems we're always talking of Dress Fabrics of one kind or another, but it is not to be wondered at with such a collection -not such another store within your reach that shows such a wealth of Dress Fabrics. It is our gauntlet. We challenge all competition. The gathering of stylish wares surpasses all former competing collections. It isn't possible, in the limits of a newspaper, to picture the exquisite taste and unique effects of new Dress Goods, Clever genius has been at work, and improved machinery has helped to make stuffs better than they were. We'd be slow indeed to offer you this season the counterpart of what you had last. Among the more exclusive lines we would like you to see our range of Holland & Shorry's Dress Tweed Suitings and Vestings. They are confined to us for this section and cannot be had elsewhere. Of all desirable weaves this season, perhaps, those English Covert Cloths take the lead. There is a feel about them that is almost irresistible. We have them in all pretty shades of fawn, tan, brown, gray and blue, also black. English Broadcloths for street wear are among the quick-selling things. We have them in 21 different shades, 56 inches wide, 51-2 yards to the dress pattern, only one of a color. To finish off with, all we can say is that if you want to know what is the fashion we have here the very extremes of present styles. Not a penny wasted in buying them. It's hardly possible for anyone to own the stock for less than we, which means lewer pricea than others can afford. Colors are good, styles excellent, qualities perfect, and values better than ever.

LONDON'S UNEMPLOYED.

Steps to Aid Them by the Trades and Labor Council-An Important Meeting. Last evening the Trades and Labor Council met in Labor Hall and transacted a large amount of important business.

The report of the committee to arrange for the relief of unemployed members of organized labor presented a full report which was referred to the various unions for indorsation, the committee meanwhile to make arrangements for the opening concert to aid the fund.

An out of work depot will be instituted at which members out of work will be supplied with necessities at cost, and unions getting relief will supply their members with cards. It is expected that the merchants will cooperate and give the committee goods at very low rates. None of these goods will be sold to or used by persons who are in employment. No subscriptions will be taken to aid the work; everything will be paid for and the members will be made to feel that they are not accepting charity, but the protection that fraternal unionism extends to its worthy members. It is hoped that with these concerts and sums granted by the unions that a substantial amount of aid may be extended to those in need of it. The delegates from the newly organized Clerks' Union presented credentials and were received, as were also delegates from the Bricklayers' and Masons' Union, No. 5.

The financial report showed that the receipts were the heaviest ever collected in one meeting since the council was organized. It was resolved to ask the City Council to submit the proposition of publishing the assessment rolls to the electors at the municipal elections for their ratification or rejection. It was also resolved to ask all union men in the city to do their utmost to encourage the buying of Luidlaw & Wat. son's boots and shoes, as they employed only union hands, paid fair wages and turned out work equal to any in the Dominion and were a home manufactory. Their brands of goods were stamped with a beaver, and they were worthy of the support of workingmen. The council then adjourned for two weeks. THEY ARE NOW IN JAIL.

Two Young Hamiltonians Who Went Very Rapidly and Were Halted

Suddenly. WOODSTOCK, Oct. 20.-Two Hamilton young men have been creating a mild sensation in this county this week. Their names are given as Harry Harding and Monte James, and there address at present is Woodstock jail. They came to Woodstock Saturday night in company with a young girl, and registered at a leading hotel. On Sunday they deserted the girl, and, engaging a rig at Rapson's livery, drove to Ingersoll with two Woodstock girls, Mary Blackstone and Elsie Cook, aged 16 and 17 years respectively. The team was not returned, but was left over night in front of the R. C. Church, and on Tuesday the quartette drove to Simcoe to take in the county fair, hiring a rig at James Chambers', in Ingersoll. The young men were arrested at Simcoe and brought here for trial, the magistrate imposing a fine of $23 or three months. Miss Blackstone's father appeared at the police court door and assaulted James for betraying his daughter. An outcome of the escapade of these reckless people has been that a marriage license was taken out today to enable James to marry one of the girls he had away with him, her father insisting that this should be done. Both young people were willing; in fact they profess to be warmly attached to each other. Jailer Cameron objected the ceremony taking place in the jail, and it is expected that the money will be raised to pay the fine and have the boy released. In the meantime the bride to be is in tears outside the jail waiting for the release of her young man. GONE UP IN SMOKE.

UPSET BY A MASKINONGE. Curious Experience of Two Fishermen

in Chantauqua Lake. BUFFALO, Oct, 19 .- Charles W. Jones, an insurance man, of Jamestown, and Edgar C. Fowler, of Hartford, Conn., were trolling in Chautauqua Lake between Lakewood and Belleview, where they hooked a maskinonge of giant proportions. They were in a light skiff, but finally got the prize into it. According to their story, the maskinonge must have weighed about 40 pounds and was as full of life as a young bull. It struggled violently, and before they could kill it the boat was upset. Jones and Fowler clung to the sides of the frail craft and yelled for assistance. Frank Jenner was on the Belleview wharf, half a mile away, and heard the call, and though it was too dark to see them he pushed off in s, boat and rescued them after they had been in the chilling waters nearly an hour. When taken into Jenner's boat Jones was unconscious and Fowler was nearly so. They had bidden each other good-bye and had concluded that they were beyond bruman help.

WON A WIFE WHILE IN JAIL. A Prize Fighter Who Is to Marry the Sheriff's Daughter.

ALTON, Ill., Oct. 19 .- Feb. 5, 1892. Harry Sharp and Frank Crosby fought a 77-round mill for the light-weight chammionship of Missouri at Nameoka. The affair created a sensation and resulted in the arrest and incarceration of both princimals in the Edwardsville jail. Tuesday they were released. Shortly after his imprisonment, so the story goes, Sharp became infatuated with the sheriff's daughter, and in due time she reciprocated his attachment. They loved clandestinely for a sime, but when the girl's parents discovered the affair there was a great storm, and the lovers were forbidden to see each other. Notes were still passed, however, and a formal engagement followed, when another family quarrel took place and the young lady left home. She returned recently and the parents are thought to be reconciled to the match. "What a Piece of Work Is Man !" And so liable to get out of order, His food may not agree with him, his liver may be torpid, or his heart have some functional derangement. NINETEENTH CENTURY INTOLERANCE

The Rev. Lyman Abbott Denounces

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 .- The oath of the American Protective Association was read last night in Plymouth Church, Brocklyn, by the Rev. Lyman Abbott, and, in com-menting on it, he said: "The American Protective Association says that the Roman Catholic Church is opposed to our Roman Catholics, some powerful members of the church, are opposed to the schools, but the church itself—no." Collections Have Improved Somewhat The text of Dr. Abbott's sermon for the evening was from Luke, ix., 19, 50: "And John answered and said: Master we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and we forbade him, because he followed not with us. And Jesus said unto him: Forbid him ot, for he that is not against us is for us." After reading the taxt Dr. Abbott announced that he intended to speak in the Academy of Music on Tuesday night, at a meesing which was to be held for the purpose of honoring Father Sylvester Malone, whose 50th year of service in St. Peter's and St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church, Brooklyn, eastern division, was finished yesterday. Dr. Abbott said it was the duty of all Christians to commend the good done by members of all denominations. It was very easy, he said, to pass judgments on this and that creed, to pass judgments which placed all virtues on one side and all evils on the other side, but such judgments were false. There are those who say, he declared, that the Roman Catholic Church is the only divine church-that Christ founded it, that it contains all that is good; there are those who say that it is anti-Christ-that it is the scarlet woman, and both judgments are wrong. Gravely the doctor declared there were pages of history of the Roman Catholic Church that were written in blood. 'And yet,' said he, 'there are other pages luminous with light and noble has been done and condemn the evil.' Dr. Abbott asserted that Protestants had also shown the spirit of intolerance, and cited a few cases. In speaking of the "intolerance" of the American Protective Association, he read slowly and with emphasis that part of the oath in which the man taking it pledges himself not to employ a Roman Catholic servant, and then "I would rather combat the intolerance of the nineteenth century than combat the intolerance of the dead popes of the cess, and establishes a career in a way that fifteenth century. Combat intelerance whenever you find it. Combat intolerance in your own hearts. Combat intolerance that sneers at the black-robed women who only to fail. Thus it was a rehave devoted their lives to the care of the markable achievement in Marie Burroughs sick and poor, who have cared for the wounded on the battlefields. Combat the intolerance which manifests itself in your public and critics and the management as heart at the sight of a man who wears the cross on his heart." Dr. Abbott declared that he was a Protestant of Protestants, that he believed in the exercise of private judgment as against years, and when A. M. Palmer moved to the teachings of the Roman Cathelle the larger that has been known as Wal-Church, that he believed in the public lack's, and now as Palmer's theater, she schools and their protection. The doctor was still retained at the head of the comsaid it was not true that all Roman Catho- pany, sharing with Agnes Booth public lies were opposed to the American school attention, and taking all the parts for been 253 in the United States, against 341 dignitaries of the Roman Catholic Church | The first part that Miss Burroughs ever believed as he believed concerning the publie schools.

He commended Bishop Watterson for Canada this week, compared with 37 last the stand he had taken against liquor week, 34 in the week a year ago, and 30 dealers, and expressed the hope that Protestants would oppose intemperance and the liquor interests as vigorously as had danger of holding out hope to novices, but Bishop Watterson and others of his faith. "I read the resolutions passed in an Episcopal convention recently," said Mr. Abbott. "It was recommended that church temperance societies be formedrecommended. I wish that our churches might feel it necessary to take more vigorous action." In addition, Dr. Abbett expressed the hope that Christians of all denominations would exercise larger charity in dealing with those who differ from them in their manner of worshiping the Almighty and Jesus Christ. He said that he did not expect that all churches would be united in one church, but he did hope that the time would come when all would be united in spirit,

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

ROLAND REED IN "THE POLITICIAN." Roland Reed at the Grand Monday will present for the first time here a new, vatirical comedy, "The Politician, or the Woman's Plank." As the name of the play indicates, it deals with politics. It is a very clever caricature of the politician as he is found in modern lite. In many cases the character is, of course, a caricature, but in the main it is true to life, and abounds in touches that will make Mr. Reed kin to politicians the public schools. That is not true, some country over. The scene of the play is laid in Central Illinois, where two Congressional conventions are held the same day. Mr. Reed's role is that of General Josiah Limber, the title having ne reference to the war. In the convention of the party to which General Limber belongs there is a contest between two rival candidates for the Congressional nomination, which suggests to his clever brain the idea of starting a "spontaneous" boom for an absent-minded man who loves his garden better than politics and has a good sized "barrel." This man's name is Wooley, and Limber's campaign cry is "Wooley, Wooley, bully for Wooley," much to the annovance of that timid man. Wooley has a niece who is twentieth century woman, a charming specimen of the woman's rights movement, who causes Limber no end of trouble by insisting on a woman's suffrage plank in the platform. He finally, after many amusing complications, succeeds in winning her over to his side by making desperate love to her. The piece abounds in novel characterizations and stirring scenes. The great act of the piece is the third one, which takes place in a schoolroom, which opens by folding doors into a convention hall, where the voting on the candidates take place. It is as exciting as the chariot race in "Ben Hur." the manner in which the twentieth century woman and Miss Wooley keep the vote on a blackboard is a caution. There is a great deal of action in the piece-in fact, it is all action, as all of Mr. Reed's pieces are, and things. Let us commend the good that it is studded with bright sayings touching on almost all the fads and features of the politics of the day. Miss Isadore Rush enacts the role of Cleopatra Sturgess, a twentieth century woman.

MISS MARIE BURROUGHS. Miss Marie Burroughs, who makesher first appearance in this city as an independent star at the Grand Opera House, Thursday, Oct. 25, in "The Scapegoat," is an example of that aptitude for the stage, which, without special training, acquires instant sucpuzzles the countless aspirants among the young women of the land. They come, after much training and trumpeting, when from the first moment she trod a New York stage she was accepted by the the leading lady of the leading company of New York. Her instinct for art, the desire to improve under the opportunity asserted that many eminent which Mrs. Booth had become too mature. played was Gladys in "The Rajah." She had met Lawrence Barrett in San Francisco, her home, and recited before him, and little was expected to come from the Interview. Barrett was sparing in his encouragement, for he was experienced in the he thought better of her than he chose to say. He at once reported in New York his knowledge of this promising material. The Madison Equare Theater was in need of an actress of her description, and the management telegraphed ber to come on. She was met at the theater by the staff, Mallory, Belasco, the Frohmans and others. Her recitation was satisfactory and she was engaged. Of of Mr. E. W. Boyle, druggist, narrates an course, recitations with modern managers do not go very far, but they discovered in her other elements. In the first place, she had an eye that was full and round, expressive, that could blaze with fire and beam | self had been troubled with indigestion and with tenderness. They discovered in her the emotional quality, and the emotional drama was just then the one thing that was cuitivated by that house. It was, however, the wholesome that she tried its use with her young child drama, and not the French product. In of 2 years, with the result that she pro-Willard, the English actor, came to this country under the management of Mr. Palmer, he at once gave Miss Burroughs the place second in honor to that distin- lady's experience, though the lady herself guished artist. The golden laurels she won during the four years she was with Mr. Willard are known to all. Mise Burroughs will be seen at the Grand Opera House Thursday evening, Oct. 25, ic. "The Scapegoat," It was first produced at the Globe Theater, London, where it met with great success. It deals with real emotion, as distinct from the merely romantic and the artificial. While the scene is laid in England, the conditions of society are so plainly set forth that it becomes an instructive study of a life full of color and those complications that are the very heart of the drama. Miss Burroughs has surrounded herself with artists of fame and experience, namely, John E. Kellerd, a well-known New York leading man; Louis Massen, of > is remembered; Minnie Monk, from Fanny Davenport organization, and others from first-class companies. "THE KID." Patrice in "The Kid" drew a fair sized ouse at the Grand last night. The show was eminently pleasing, as the frequent applause suggested. It was in reality a musical rifle and an amusing trifle as well. Like other shows of the vaudeville stamp, the interest centered around a rather fast papa of more than middle age, who had a fondness for gay young creatures. The singing was good, but some of the jokes were pretty nearly old enough to register as franchise voters. Adele Purvis Onri did a very clever slack wire turn and some good ball balancing and skirt manipulating. Joe Downs alternated between the tramp and the Bowery bum, as his song was best suited. All the members of the troups have good voices and the majority of them are clever dancers.

MONKEYED WITH THE MILK.

Several Cheese Factory Patrons Fined -The Inspector Spotted Them.

The following patrons of cheese factories ave recently been convicted and fined for tampering with milk, upon charges lald by T. B. Millar, inspector and instructor for the Western Dairymen's Association: Mrs. Sarah Steer, of Caradoc, pleaded guilty before Squire Campbell, of Appin, to taking the cream of the milk before sending to the factory, and was fined $8 and $3 25 costs. Before J. E. Terhune, police magistrate, Listowel, Mrs. Angus Bailey and Mr. Fred Hensell, patrons of the Monkton factory, in Elma township, pleaded guilty to skimming milk supplied to the factory and were each fined $20 and $3 30 costs. Mr. James Moir, a patron of the Lakeview factory, in Dunn township, pleaded guilty before John Taylor, P.M., Dunnville, to adding water to milk and was fined $15 and $1 50 coats.

The fines imposed in these cases are all considerably larger than are usually imposed. They are none too large, however, and if they were still further increased would have a more wholesome effect in preventing the tampering with milk supplied to our cheese factories.

[New York Evening Sun.] To run or not to run? That's the question.

That's the question.
Whether it's better to go a-gunning for a bird in the bush.
Or hang on so what I've got.
To run, to win-perchance to lose!
Aye, there's the rub!
For in that storm of votes what gales may blow!

May be a fav'ring wind to vict'ry's harkor; Perhaps an avalanche to bury one.
And if the latter, then farewell—
Along farewell to dreams of greatness;
Whereas, now
There's always a chance

-Are electric lights injurious to trees ? In this city there is as yet no evidence that they are. But the question was recently discussed at a meeting of the eastern arboriculturists, the conclusion being that the trees need darkness in order that they may sleep, and that being continually kept awake and active they have been worn out and made prematurely old by the action of the light. That this is probably the correct solution of the mystery of the drooping leaves may be judged from the fact that similar trees in the neighborhood of those affected (though not exposed to the illumination) still retain their color and seem bright and strong. The matter is worthy of close investigation in a city so embowered with trees as London.

THE CITY ELECTION. Our city contemporary dissents from the view that London, having been sending an Opposition member to the Legislature for over twenty years, should vary the monotony by sending a member who would give Sir Oliver Mowat's Government an independent support. Yet to most people in this fair city the proposition must commend itself as eminently reasonable.

Really it is the simplest and fairest way for those who have hitherto supported Mr. Meredith, largely on personal grounds, to get out of the labyrinth into which circumstances have led them. They freely acknowledged, on the morning of the day after the election, that Mr. Hobbs had proved an exceptionally strong candidate. They confessed that no other candidate but Mr. Meredith could have defeated the citizen nominee. Only Mr. Meredith's prestige as a then prospective Prime Minister, as a leader of Government, as a dispenser of favors, enabled him to get the small majority that was his. But to achieve even that small triumph, supporters of Mr. Meredith were compelled to hold out promises of coming offices that could never be realized, that were calculated to mislead poor voters out of work, and which in fact did mislead them. All this is notorious, and goes a long way to show why, now that Mr. Meredith, despairing of reaching the Premiership, has taken a judgeship, there is everywhere trouble in the ranks of the Ontario Opposition managers in this city. With the only man of towering ability removed from their head by voluntary abandonment of the post of leader, and a determination, if at all possible, to shunt the individual who, as early as June last, in the party caucus, laid claim to his mantle, there has been great shivering and shakmanagers within the last day or two. One section is pulling for the advancement of the self-nominated auccessor to Mr. Meredith; another is determined that under no circumstances shall he be selected as the standard-bearer, and even going the length of sending rich emissaries around to talk financial aid to anyone who will consent to enter the ranks against him. And so the battle goes on, to the edification of those who are called upon to witness the various developments.

How welcome a relief it would be to the sadly beset managers if they could find some reasonable way out of their difficul--Hon. Wilfrid Laurier continues his ties. Premier Greenway and several Opposition, with a chance of some day becoming Premier, could defeat Mr. Hobbs. and the Government of Sir Oliver Mowat being sustained, and Mr. Meredith having retired, why should not the opponents of the Government permit the citizen candidate on this occasion to be elected without opposition? By this means they could employes a needed rest from political turmoil. They would have a precedent for their course in the action taken a few years since by the Liberal leaders, who, for reasons that were less strong than those that should sway the Conservative managers to a like step now. permitted Mr. Meredith to take the seat for London without opposition.

It may be that other counsels will prevail in the Opposition ranks at this time. tail will wag the dog." If that is the ultimate outcome of the present running up and down the city subdivisions, trying to secure the defeat in the caucus of the unruly member, so be it, Mr. Hobbs, with a united following of the majority of the citizens of London, has nothing to fear if his friends see to it, as they will, that the entire vote is brought out on election day.

MORE MEN EMPLOYED THAN AGREED TO.

The one object that the London City Council had in view when it passed the bylaw granting exemption from taxation and free water for a period of years to anyone who would establish a new industry in the city and employ a stipulated number of workmen, was to provide for an increase in the industrial forces of this city.

This was the object which the taxpayers had in view when they, in their wisdom, voted a bonus of $100,000 to the Grand Trunk Railway a few months since, on condition that they concentrate their workshops in London.

In both cases the transaction was a business one, though not a few citizens do not believe in the principle.

One of the firms to accept the proposition of the City Council, as representing the people, was the Hobbs Hardware Company. They found the old John Ellion foundry standing idle, steadily deteriorating and likely soon to crumble away unless occupied by some industry. Though not in their line up to that date, the opportunity presented by the vacant factory and by the offer of the city, led the Hobbs Company to consider the question of introducing to London some industry hitherto confined to Toronto and Montreal. They had in mind two articles that in the then circumstances of the market it might be profitable to produce in London-plate glass mirrors and glass beveling and wire nails-though, in the event of its being impossible to carry on any one of these manufactures at a profit, and to employ the number of men stipulated in the agreement with the city, there were one or two other articles that they were ready to try.

Fortunately for the city, the plate glass mirror, glass beveling and kindred industry-one entirely new to London-has proved an eminent success. Its operation requires nearly the whole of the premises at the disposal of the firm, and its requirements necessitate the employment of 60 per cent more workmen than stipulated in the agreement with the city. Moreover, we have the best of authority for stating that the employes are among the highest paid mechanics in the city, and have had steady employment from the start

It has been objected to that the firm have not carried out their agreement with the city because they have not divided up their factory and their force and turned out nails as well as glass-work, etc., from the establishment. The objection, to our mind, is not well taken. It was the employment of a stipulated number of men that the city was after. The firm have employed 60 per cent more men than they undertook to provide with work, have supplied steady work and paid high wages. Wherein, then, have they not followed the spirit of the agreement? Under the circumstances, one is forced to the conclusion that the present attack on the firm is not warranted, and has for its object something else than the welfare of the industrial classes or the conservation of civic interests. We venture to prophesy that before the present campaign is over the object of the unwarranted attack will befully revealed. But let no intelligent citizen be misled.

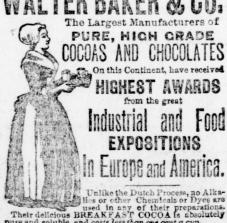

DISTINGUISHED ENGLISHMAN

DEAD. By cable this afternoon we learn of the death of Professor Froude, the distinguished English historian, at the ripe age of 76. Mr. Froude had been ill for a considerable time, and his passing away was not unexpected. He was regius professor and that, as they put it on the streets, "the of modern history at Oxford University, and it is believed that the arduous task of preparing for publication his lectures on Erasmus, recently delivered at the histori seat of learning, hastened his death. The historian was one of the many gifted sons that Devonshire gave to the motherland, and it was to Salcombe, loveliest of the land-locked harbors, that he retired to end his days. When, in his prime, Froude liked no better recreation than retirement to the Devonshire country home of his able brother William, the naval architect whose marvelous experiments on fluid resistence and skin friction of ships' surfaces have been practically used in building every ship of the British Navy in and since his time. There his friends were accustomed to sit and enjoy the quietly-pointed stories of the historian told with infinite humor and grave, impassive face. A cable correspondent chronicles the interesting fact that by no one was the music of Froude's prose better appreciated than by the blind poet, Philip Bourke Marston, and that several of the darkest hours of that last Euston Road lodging were lightened by a friend's quiet readings of "Short Studies."

ST. THOMAS, Oct. 19 .- The sixth annual meeting of the Baptist Convention of Ontario and Quebec continued its sessions in the Center Street Church last night, when a number of excellent addresses were given by several of those prominently engaged in the educational work of the church. The first speaker was Prof. A. L. Mc-Crimmon, M.A., of Woodstock College. Miss Alice M. D. Fitch, principal of Moulton College, Toronto, made a very pleasing address on educational work among women.

Rev. C. Cross, the next speaker, said that it was the aim of the Baptists that McMaster University and its affiliated colleges should be Christian institutions, and to be Christians in the fullest sense of the word they must be Baptists.

Rev. Dr. Thomas, of Toronto, eulogized McMaster, and said that there was no institution of the kind on the continent to which he would rather send a boy. The Baptist people would not appreciate what they had in McMaster University until its graduates were filling the pulpits of the country more efficiently than preachers from any other country. In concluding Dr. Thomas urged the whole Baptist denomination to rally around McMaster and its affiliated colleges with enthusiasm. FRIDAY.

The Baptist Convention opened this morning at 9 o'clock with a devotional meeting and an address on the personality of the Holy Spirit.

At 10 o'clock the Hon. John Dryden presented the report of the senate and board of governors of McMaster University, and in moving its adoption congratulated the different departments on the strongly marked Christian character of the work done. A larger number of students had been enrolled than last year. Chancellor Rand, J. S. McMaster and others also spoke on the report, after which the the following were elected as governors: J. S. McMaster, Hon. John Dryden, Hon. J. A. Boyd, LL.D., and Rev. S. S. Bates.

The afternoon and evening meetings were taken up with the subject of missions. The superintendent's report showed success all along the line-1,600 baptisms in home mission churches, 105 missionaries and 52 students preaching the Gospel in 333 churches and preaching stations; new chapels, new fields opened, and many other tokens of success. Addresses were also given by Rev. Messrs. W. J. McKay, B.A., and J. O'Neil on the need, obligation and encouragement to reach out still further in

In the evening Mr. J. Stark, chairman of the home mission board, took the chair, and addresses were delivered by Rev. Thos. Shelds, of Victoria; Rev. J. B. Warnocker, and Rev. W. B. Hinson, of Montreal. The addresses were full of force and gower, and had a noticeable effect on the large audience gathered to hear them. The meetings are proving to be the largest and most enthusiastic that have been known for years.

WOMEN IN POLITICS.

The Ladies in Colorado Are Taking a Great Interest.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19. - Letters received from Colorado indicate an interesting feature of the campaign in the part the women are taking in it. They will have their first vote on a general State election in November next and it is represented that they are evincing an interest in politics which had not been supposed probable before the right of suffrage was conferred. All of the three parties, the Republican, Democratic and Populist, have tickets in the field, and there are female candidates on each of them. Furthermore, the ladies, besides co-operating with the men on the State, county, ward and precinct committees, have independent clubs and other party organizations of their own, at which they discuss general political questions, canvass party prospects, and do all they can to instill into the minds of the members of their sex the necessity of a full party vote and of creating an ante-election enthusiasm which will insure this result.

This state of affairs is due largely to the bitter feeling that exists between the Republican and Populist parties. The Republicans predominate in the cities, while the Populists have their greatest strength in the mining districts. As there are proportionately more women in the cities than in the mining camps, the Republicans expect to gain the advantage from the female vote.

THE WEATHER TO-DAY-Eome showers

These are the times when nearly every lady is stitching or having stitched her winter dresses-getting ready for the cold weather. We will guarantee that more of our Fashionable Dress Fabrics are being put together now than those of any other house in London. We know this, because our stock has already been greatly reduced. And no wonder. Wise purchasers will buy from the house that does its utmost to please in every particular as

OUR HOUSE DOES.

We don't need to tell it again. Every lady knows that we lead in everything we handle. No second place is good enough for us. Our customers won't have second rate goods and we want to please our customers. This is how we do it:

Plain Serge, Jacquards and Diagonals, all 42 inches, for 25c. Tweeds. Shot Serges and Plain Cloths, all 42 inches, for 30c. Tweeds, Fine Serges and Shepherd Plaids, all 42 inches wide, for 35c.

Navy Serges, Diagonals, Brown Serges, Black Serges, Swivel Cords and All-Wool Cashmere, all 44 inches, for 40c. A great variety of Tweeds. very comfortable for fall and winter.

for 45c. Estamine Serges, Diagonale, Royal Armure Cloths, Hopsacking in Shot Effects, Cashmere, Amazon Cloths, Black Soleil, Brown, Myrtle, Olive, Navy and Black Rough Serges for 50c.

Estamine Serges, Diagonals, Heavy Twill Serges, Tweeds in endless variety, Whipcords, Swivel Cords and Black Soleil for 65c, Reversible Cloths, Satin Doubles, in black and colors, Serges, Ladies' Cloths, Tweeds, Jacquards and Black Soleil for 75c. Black and Navy Worsteds, suitable for suiting, 58 inches, at $1.

Nothing out of Style; all good. One price to everybody, marked in plain figures.

INGRAM,

147, 149 and 151 DUNDAS STREET.

A Helpmate. "Where's yer daddy?" "He's plowin'."

"An' where's yer mammy?" "Makin' him plow!"

False Premises. Mrs. Brown-We ought to have a voice in making the laws, because we have to bey the laws that are made. Brown-My dear, that is an exploded theory. If the male voters had to obey the laws they made, they'd repeal half of Minard's Liniment for Rheumatism.

WORK AND WACES.

The Brantford Cotton Operatives Out Still-Trouble at St. Marys.

A deputation of the striking Brantford cotton operators waited on Manager Cook, but met with no success in bringing about an agreement,

The employes of Measrs. Weir & Weir's flax mill at St. Marys have quit work on account of the firm wanting to make a reduction of wages during winter. Outside hands will be imported and operations are likely to be resumed.

Four Men Did It.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Oct. 19.-The westbound Texas and Pacific through express train for California leaving here at 9:05 o'clock this morning was robbed about noon today near Gordon, 70 miles west of here. The robbers secured about $20,000 from the Pacific Express Company, and but for their inability to open the safe of the Texas and Pacific Coal Company, containing $20,000 in gold, would have made a better haul. Four men did the work.

-Sporting News. By the Petrolea Topic-Somebody Sore

The following from the Petrolea Topic, written by one who did not see the game, will be considered by those who did as a poor excuse and consolation for defeat: 'Last Saturday a good team of Petrolea boys went to London to play their return match in the intermediate series. London had their best team in the field and went in for the game with a determination to win, by hook or by crook, and not being able to outplay our boys resorted to brute force in their well known way, and by that they won the game, by a score of 21 to 6. Those who looked on at the game said it was one of the most disgraceful they ever witnessed. Several times one or two of the Londoners so far forgot themselves as to use their clenched fists, and some wicked tackles were made, evidently with the intention of disabling the Petrolea men. Londoners don't play Rugby, they fight it. They are more like a team of prize fighters than football players, as some of our boys remarked, and they certainly bore marks of very rough usage. Jack Harley carried home a vari-colored eye with him, and most of the boys had a collection of bruises to rub for several days after-in fact, several limp yet. Some of them think that Harry Pope will require a pneumatic nose for a time, as his 'proboscis came in violent collisision with Tom Anderson's head, which proved the harder of the two. The boys don't want to play London no one will deny that the Petrolea boys felt sore—as much in mind as body, perhaps, BILLIARDS. They were without power to stop them; remonstrance availed not with madam. limes the dinners were impromptu, or nearly to, madam inviting afternoon callers at the fall to stay, or bringing home a carriagefull of guests with her. As was partly the tase on this day. Captain Arthur Bohun, who liked to take most things easily, dressing included, stood hair brush in hand. He had moved away from the glass, and was looking from the open window. His thoughts were busy. They ran on that little episode of the morning, when madam, passing in her carriage, had seen him with Elien Adair, and had chosen to display her sentiments on the subject in the manner described. That it would not end there, Arthur felt sure; madam would inevitably treat him to a little more of her mind. It was rather a singular thing

-as if Fate had been intervening with its usual cross purposes - for circumstances so to have ordered it that madam should still be in ignorance of their intimacy. Almost always when Mrs. Cumberland was at home, it chanced that madam was away; and, when madam was at the Hall, Mrs. Cumberland was elsewhere. Thus, during Mrs. Cumberland's prolonged stay at Niton, madam's presence blessed her household; the very week that that lady returned to Dallory Ham, madam took her departure, and had only recently returned. She had spent the interval in Germany. Sidney North, her well beloved son, giving trouble as usual to all who were connected with him, had found England rather warm for him in early spring, and had betaken himself to Germany. His chief point of sojourn was Homburg, and madam, with her daughter Matilda, had been making it hers

s nce the spring. Mr. North, in the relief her absence brought him, had used every exertion to supply her with the money she so rapaciously sent home for. It would appear that the accommodation had not been sufficient, for - as was soon to be discovered by Richard - the checks shown to him by his father had been drawn by her at Homburg. And so, as Fate or Fortune had willed it, Mrs. North had been out of the way of watching the progress of the intimacy between her son and Ellen Adair. A quick knock at the chamber-door, and madam swept in, a large crimson rose, just brought from the greenhouse, adorning her jet-black hair, her white silk gown rustling and trailing after her. As well as though she had already spoken. Arthur knew what she had come for. He thought that she was losing no time and must have hurried over her toilette purposely. The carriage had not long returned home, for she and Matilda had been to a distance, and remained out to Juncheon. Arthur. not moving from where he was, began brushing his hair haphazard. "I suppose I am late, madam?"

"Was it you that I passed this afternoon in Dallory Ham, talking to some girl?" began madam, taking no notice of his remark. "It was me, safe enough; I had been calling on Mrs. Cumberland," replied Arthur, carelessly. "Dick also. By the way you

table, and stood opposite him at the window.

"What girl were you talking to?"
"Girl! I was with Miss Adair."

"Who is she, Arthur?" "She is Mrs. Cumberland's ward."

"What do you know of her?" "I know her as being at Mrs. Cumberland's. I see her when I go there.' Was he really indifferent? Standing there brushing away at his hair lazily, his apparently supreme indifference could not be exceeded. Madam scanned his face in momentary silence; he was closely intent upon two sparrows, fighting over a reddening cherry on the branch of a tree.

Will you attend to me for a short time, Captain Bohun?" spoke madam, irritably. "Certainly; I am attending," was the captain's ready answer.

Just for an instant madam paused. This was not one of the daily petty grievances that she made people miserable over, but a of life or death. In this, her own grave in-trests, she could control her temper, and she thought it might be the better policy to do so while she dealt with it.

"Arthur, you know that you are becommore valuable to me," she said, with calmness; and Arthur Bohun opened his surprised ears at the words and tone. Sidney took up his abode away from Eng-land, and cannot come back to it, poor fellow, for the present you are all I have here. If I speak, it is for your welfare."

"Very good of you, I am sure," returned Arthur, seeing she waited for him to say something, and feeling how two-f ced the words were, mother of his though she was. "What is it you wish to say?"

"It's about that girl, Miss - what do you call her!- Adair. Young men will be young men; soldiers especially; I know that; but wrong is wrong, and it cannot by the most ingenious sophistry be converted into right. It is quite wrong to play with these village girls, as you seem to be doing with Miss

Arthur threw back his head as though his pride were hurt. Madam had seen just the same movement in his father. "I have no intention of playing with Miss Adair."

A gleam shot from her eyes — half fear, half defiance. She bit her lip, and went on in a still softer tone. "You cannot mean anything worse,

"I do not understand you, madam. Worse! Worse than what?" "Anything serious. To play with village girls is reprehensible; but _____"

"I beg your pardon, mother; this is quite unnecessary. The playing with village girls - whatever that may mean - is not a habit of mine, and never has been. The caution might be more appropriate if applied to your men-servants than it is to me. "Allow me to finish, Arthur. To play with village girls is reprehensible; but to intend anything serious with one would be far more so in your case. Will you profit by

"If you wish me to comprehend the word 'serious,' you must speak out. What does

"It means marriage," she answered, with an outburst of temper—as far as tone might convey it. "I allude to this absurd in-timacy of yours with Miss Adair. You must be intimate with the girl; your look and attitude, as I passed today proved it." "And if I did mean marriage, what

He asked the question jokingly, laughing a little; but he was not prepared for the effect it had on his mother. Her eyes flashed fire, her lips trembled, her face turned white as death.

"Marriage! With her? You must be dreaming, Arthur Bohun."
"Not dreaming; joking," he said, lightly.
"You may be at ease, madam; I have no intention of marrying any one at present."
"You must never marry Miss Adair."

"Arthur Bohun, you are treating all this with mockery," she exclaimed, beginning to believe that he really was so; and the relief was great, though the tactic disrespect angered her. "How dare you imply that you think seriously of these village girls?-

only to annoy and frighten me."
"You must be easily frightened today, madam. I don't think I did imply it. As

"Yes, as to Miss Adair," fiercely inter-rupted madam. "Go on."
"I was about to say that, in speaking of Miss Adair, we might as well recognize her true position. It is not quite respectful to be alluding to her as a 'village girl.' She is a lady, born and bred.

"Perhaps you will next say that she is equal to the Bohuns?" "I do not wish to say it. Don't you think this conversation may as well cease, madam?" added Arthur, after a short pause. "Why should it have been raised? One might suppose I had asked your consent to my marriage, whereas you know perfectly well that I am a poor man, with not the slightes chance of taking a wife." On Thursday evening Miss McWilliams

a returned missionary and teacher from Indore, India, gave an interesting address in the Presbyterian Church here to an appreciative audience on her mission work. In introducing the speakar, Mr. Graham, the paster, spoke of the work being now done by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, under whose auspices Miss Mc-Williams came here. Although comparatively a young organization, they already hold a very important position as workers in the Presbyterian Church, having raised last year over $40,000. On coming to the platform Miss McWilliams spoke of the immensity of the work in India, of the density of the population and the many disadvantages at which missionaries work. India alone has 23,000,000 more people than all Europe. In order to teach successfully it is necessary to learn at least two or three of the languages or dialects spoken in the country. The written language is the language of only a fractional percentage of people. It is the language of the educated, but to reach the great masses it is necessary to learn the language as it is spoken. This is not altogether to be deplored. If the language could be learned from books it would be studied at home, and the young missionary going in with his western ideas would do more harm in three months than could be undone in years of consecrated labor! But going as he now is compelled to do, with his tongue practically tied to the people, he learns much that will help him in his work while he is learning the language. There is at present a wave of interest passing over the whole of that country-a general waking up to the idea of attaining something better, and an intense desire for education. There are three classes of schools—the native schools, the Government schools and the mission schools. Nothing is taught in the native school of real practical worth. The Government schools are schools whose support the British Government guarantees, although they are supported by a tax on the natives. They are taught and inspected by English scholars, and a thorough education in practical and scientific subjects is given; but they are pledged not to interfere with the religion of the pupils. The pupils are thus brought to that point where in disgust they discard everything pertaining to their native religions, but receiving nothing in its place they become infidels or atheists. The mission schools are doing a good work in education as well as in purely mission work. In these schools all subjects are taught, from the very lowest to the preparation for a university degree. Suitable solos were sung during the evening by Mrs. S. G. Brown and Mrs. (Dr.) Meldrum.

Indisputable Testimony That South American Nervine Tends to Longevity-Many Years Added to the Lives of Those Who Use This Great Discovery-An Age of Great Old Men-What a Windsor Resident of 70

Years of Age Says.

JAMES SHERWOOD, WINDSOR, ONT.

What with Gladstone 84 years of age. Pope Leo XIII. 84, Bismarck 79, Francesco Criepi 74, Oliver Wendell Holmes 85, and Ontario's G. O. M., Sir Oliver Mowat 75, this is indeed an age of grand old men. They are holding their places with the young men nobly.

A study of the men, who, at these advanced years, perform so much intense been one of the essentials of their remarkable longevity. It may be that all the old men of the age have not a personal acquaintance with the invigorating and healthy-enlarging effects of South American Nervine, but with much in the way of testimony before us, we do know that this great medicine is toning up the systems of men and women to such an extent that their years are being lengthened beyond the allotted three score and ten. There it something in this medicine that is peculiarly efficacious as a health builder. Is operates with sure success on those who are weak and perhaps suffering from indigestion, nervous prostration, and debility in one shape and another.

Mr. James Sherwood, of Windsor, Ont. has attained the ripe old age of 70 years. A few years back he suffered from an attack of paralysis, and a second attack came on him 12 months ago. The result of this trouble was to seriously derange his digestive organs and complicated nervous troubles followed. He obtained from N. La Bell & Co., druggists of this city, a labor, all show that care of health has bottle of South American Netvine. It had an immediate effect on the stomach and nerves, besides strengthening the heart action which had become weak. He says: "I cohsider it a splendid medicine. It has relieved me of very much pain, built up my health and has given me a much better appetite than I had before using it. I have so far used four bottles, and will always keep it in my house."

Would you be healthy and live long? Then become acquainted with South American Nervine.

South American Nervine is sold by all reliable druggists, among which number in London we would mention Cairneross & Lawrence, W. T. Strong W. S. B. Barkwell and J. G. Shuff.

SUPPLEMENT TO DAILY ADVERTISER --- SATURDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1894.

Motto for the Week:

The law of the harvest is to reap more than you sow. Sow an act, and you reap a habit; sow a habit, and you reap a characters sow a character, and you reap a destiny .- [George Dana Board-

Judge Senkler, of Lincoln, the commissioner appointed to investigate the burking of the St. Catharines license reduction bylaw by a majority of the alderman of that city, has reported strongly condemning the tactics pursued. The electors of St. Catharines should remember the men who thus defeated the popular verdict.

The New York Voice, one of the most radical prohibition journals of the United States, writing of Gladstone's recent letter, in which he favors the Bishops of Chester's proposal to municipalize the saloons -- something after the Gothenburg system-goes on to say: "Municipal saloons deprived, as the South Carolina dispensaries are deprived, of the facilities for social drinking, treating, etc., and also deprived of all features of either public or private profit, would be unquestionably a gain over the license system, and a change which Prohibitionists could heartily welcome, even though they could not accept it as a final solution. If this is what Mr. Gladstone means, his latest utterances will prove a powerful auxiliary to the temperance cause. In any event it is a cheering indicatian that his personal interest has been at last so keenly aroused to the importance of the issues involved in the drink evil."

Since last week's writing we have relocal option question. The letter confirms the opinion already expressed by the HOME GUARD that the Grand Old Man not only favors local option, but as much more in the direction of prohibition as is now obtainable in the British Parliament. Writing for his father Mr. H. Gladstone says:

"What he thinks of local option is that it is a sound principle which has every title to be pressed on Parliament, and which will be useful whenever it is adopted. But the mischief of drink is so frightful that he is not willing to trust exclusively to a remedy which, he fears, may not be of wide operation. He thinks that the principle of sale under public authority is defensible, and it seems to be the most hopeful of the methods now attainable for producing benefit on an extended

No doubt public opinion has not yet so far advanced in England that an out and out prohibition law is yet available. Mr. Gladstone, as a practical man, favors what he supposes can now be obtained, and would, we believe, go much farther if there was hope of success. Prohibition is, of course, the final goal.

Canada's Convictions for Drunkenness.

There were, according to the last published official report of the Dominion Minister of Justice, 11,651 convictions for all crimes put together. Of these Ontario led off by 3,870. Quebec came in a good second by 3,778, which was a much greater number in proportion to its population. It has also a much greater proportionate number of licensed liquor sellers. New Brunswick's list stood. next highest, being 1,385. British Columbia came next, having 725, which is larger than any in proportion to its population. There is less prohibition in force in British Columbia than in any other Province in the Dominion, which accounts for it. Manitoba reported 592. It has nearly are therefore unwilling to make any membership of 17,000. The following P. O., John S. Litster, W. duction of the number of such convictions for the coming year. These facts go far to indicate, as has been frequently demonstrated, that the amount of drunkenness in any locality very largely depends on the number of places where facilities for drinking are afforded. T. W. CASEY.

New Brunswick's Experience.

The Ontario liquor interests newspaper wants to make a point against prohibition by stating that "the con victions for drunkenness in New Brunswick, the banner prohibition province, are nearly double in ratio to population to what they are in Ontario under a license law."

As a matter of fact New Brunswick is not "the banner prohibition province" of the Dominion at all. Prince honor. Not a liquor license has been issued in it for years, and the whole province is now under the Scott Act, and therefore under prohibition. Nova Scotia, too, has far less licenses in proportion to its population than New Brunswick. As a natural result the number of convictions for drunkenness is far less in either of these provinces than in New Brunswick.

So far as New Brunswick is concerned, the late published official report of criminal statistics of the Dominion of Canada states that there were 1,365 convictions for drunkenness in it last year against 3,787 in Ontario. To show that prohibition does prohibit, even in New Brunswick, to a much larger extent than the liquor

St. John does not contain one-tenth of the population of New Brunswick, though it supplied over two-thirds of the province. On the other hand, some of the old and well-settled counties, now under the Scott Act, and with a population greater, or about | brings some reward. equal to, St. John, report comparatively few convictions for drunkenness at all. Carlton county, for example, 24,184 in St John, reports but 35 such convictions. Charlotte county, with a population of 23,752, or nearly as great at St. John, had, under the Scott Act, but 37 such convictions. York county, with a considerably larger population, and including Fredericton, the capital city of the province, had but 151, or not one sixth as many as St.

The people of New Brunswick, where even the Scott Act has been tried, have practically demonstrated, by their deliberate verdicts at the ballot boxes, that they prefer even such a limited measure of prohibition as the Scott Act to the license system. We believe that the act has never been repeated in a single county in that province where it has once been put into practical operation. In some localities, like Fredericton, Westmorland, Charlotte and York, the liquor men have made strong attempts to repeal the act, which they would not have done if they found that more liquor could be sold under it than before, while the temperance people made strong and successful attempts to retain the law, which they would not have done had there been more drunkenness under it than before.

The experience of New Brunswick can hardly be appealed to by the anti-Prohibitionists to help them in their losing fight for a continuance of the license system. That system has been long and fully tried in all the provinces and the majority of the people are well convinced that some more effectual law is needed in the best interests of the people.

Just the Difference.

TUVENILE TEMPLARLY. - We have not received from Mr. J. E. Wilson, the new Ontario general superintendent, any report of what is being done, as we would like to do. We notice, however, that a new temple has been organized to meet in Broadway Hall, Toronto. It is working in connection with Albion Lodge of that city. At Liverpool, England, there was a grand celebration last month, being in connection with the twenty-second anniversary of the introduction of the order in that country. It was a splendid success.

English Items.—The last received number of the English Alliance News contains the following Good Templar items. Some of them ought to be valuable hints to Canadian workers:

1. "A scheme of monthly lessons on every phase of the temperance question has been inaugurated for the 1,-400 Good Templar lodges throughout England." That is a decided improvement on the "entertainment programme" of many lodges we know of.

2. "Successful special sessions of the Grand Lodge of England have just been held by G. C. T. Malins at Exeter, Plymouth, and Truro, followed by rousing public temperance meetings in each place." How would some such experiments do in Ontario?

3. "W. P. Hanny, of Bradford, died on the 25th ult., aged 93 years. He was a Good Templar and was Chief Templar of his lodge when go years old. He abstained from tobacco as well as liquor." What grand old man can some of our Canadian lodges boast of-past 70 years, for example? Let them report to the HOME GUARD.

The most important features to be considered in judging of the merits of a life insurance company are: lst, the safety and equity of its plans and policy contracts; 2nd, the care and economy exercised in its selection of risks and general management; 3rd, the character of its assets and their relation to its liabilities.

If these features are right everything is right, whether a company be large or small, eld or young. No company stands better in any one, or all of them, than the Temperance and General Life Assurance Company.

> Question 4. Do you favor the formation of an independent prohibition political party? Answer.-We do not. Such a course would be suicide for the prohibition cause. Under our British system there will never be more than two parties. The historic parties with their historic names will hold the field, but they will be modified from time to time in favor of prohibition or of anything else that a majority of the people show that they want. If you are to have your prohibition law enforced after its being placed on the statute book, you must either get a dominant party to make itself responsible for the enforcement of the law, or in some way make it a nonparty measure to which both parties shall consent or be committed. In any case, to form an independent prohibition political party is clearly the way not to do it. The third party propaganda has been in full blast in the United States for many years, with the result, after enormous expenditure of money and effort that there are not today even a handful of Prohibitionists in either Congress or Senate. Why is so much deference paid in Canada by both political parties to prohibition sentiment, and why so much readiness to amend license laws according to the request of the temperance people? And why is the temperance sentiment treated with comparative disrespect by the "old parties" of the United States? Because in Canada the bulk of the earnest temperance people have not committed the mistake of withdrawing themselves and their moral influence from the historic parties. If the Christian electors in both parties were to take actual trouble to ask earnestly for candidates sound on prohibition, they would not long have to ask in vain. But they have never done so-Rev. The Provincial Convention.

To the Women of the Western Peninsula: Dear Comrades, - By this time you have all received or seen the call for our Eighteenth Provincial Convention. You have read it, perhaps, as you would the announcement of a W. U. T. U. rally in England-with a mild curiosity to ascertain the provisions made for the profit and pleasure of the fortunate attendants, but with no thought of being one of these yourself. Cornwall is so far off, you say. Why should such a distant point be chosen? Well, that is just the way the Cornwall women telt when Chatham opened its nomes and churches to the Provincial Union. This change of sections brings each year a new element into touch with the skilled workers and abounding enthusiasm of the yearly meeting. But why should you settle down into the idea that your county, or local union, will not be represented at Cornwall? No funds, do you reply? Then hold a public meeting and raise them, or see what each member will contribute towards such a laudable object. If you are a county worker, find out if each local union will not give a little to help send the president (who is an ex-officer vice-president of the Ontario Union) to her proper place on the executive board.

Do you feel that the return would not be adequate compensation for the outlay? That is another side of the question. Let me say that it is the opinion of all the great W. C. T. U. leaders that conventions are the best schools our workers can attend. Unions that undervalue them are rarely a credit to us. Ignorance of what can be done, and how to do it, lies at the root of $6 85. most failures.

A Reptile Swallowed While Drinking in the Dark.

Excruciating Agony Suffered by Mrs. Westfall-Nerves Shattered and Death Looked for as the Only Relief, [From the Trenton Courier.] The editor of the Courier having heard of this strange case of Mrs. Simon Westing facts: Mrs. Westfall said that one evening some three years ago she went -Kate Field's Washington, a strong to the well and pumping some water drank a portion. As she did so she felt something go down her throat kicking and told her mother so at the time, Little she thought of the agony in store pump in the dark, for a female lizard found its way into her stomach and brought forth a brood. After a while the sight of milk would make her tremble and she had to the very sight of milk would produce convulsions. She lost her appetite, but would feel so completely gone at the stomach that to drink. Large numbers of others she would have to eat a cracker and take some barley soup frequently to quiet the disturbance within. She took medicine for dyspepsia and every known stomach disease, but got no relief. She changed doctors and the new doctor having had an experience of this nature before, gave her medicine to kill and expel the lizards. For three years the poor woman suffered all kinds of physical and mental agony. Her whole system, kidneys, liver and stomach, were all out of order. Her heart would flutter and palpitate so faintly as to be imperceptible, and a smothering feeling would come over her, that it was often thought she had given her last gasp. Her memory was almost gone, her nerves shattered so that the perience most depressed feelings and lowness of spirits. After the removal of the reptiles, the doctor sanctioned the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and she took three boxes but found no apparent relief. She then gave up their use believing she was past the aid of medicine. At this time a Mrs. Haight, who suffered twelve weeks with la grippe, and who was completely restored by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, urged Mrs. Westfall to begin the use of Pink Pills again. She did effects. Her appetite began to improve and for two months she has steadily gained strength, health and steadiness of nerve and memory. She can now do her household work and feels as well as ever. She says she cannot speak as strongly of Pink Pills as she would like to, and feels very grateful for the great good resulting from the use of this wonderful medicine. Mrs. Haight, before referred to, is enthusiastic over her own perfect recovery from the after effects of la grippe, feeling as well as ever she did in her life. She also corroborates the above statement regarding Mrs. Westfall's cure. These pills are a positive cure for all troubles arising from a vitiated condition of the blood or a shattered nervout system. WM. DEAN, Esq., Dear SIr:

I have taken six bottles of your remedy after suffering intensely for several weeks with Sciatica. During that time I used almost everything recommended, but found nothing to relieve me until I got your remedy. In ten days after commencing it I was able to go about my work, but continued taking it until I was completely cured. I have had no traces of it since, and would most earnestly recommend it to every sufferer from this most painful disease. Yours truly, R. GRAINGER, Willisoroft P. O., Ont.

A Very Little Experience in Domestic Upholstery Will Enable Clever Fingers to Work Household Wonders-A Hanging Cabinet and a Model Shoe Box.

The women of this country seem to take great interest in manufacturing odd bits of decorative furniture for their homes, and many are the pretty and useful things that have been constructed by them.

The only tools necessary for this work are a hammer, small saw, medium-sized chisel, an awl, plane and nails of assorted sizes. With these implements she can do a great deal toward beautifying an unpretentious home.

This is done by boring two small holes through the wood side by side, and, having threaded the eye of the button with a bit of twine, pass the string through the holes and tie the ends tightly together at the under side of the lid. The material is to be tacked all around to the outer edge of the tops with ordinary carpet tacks driven close together. Next upholster the back, placing some curled hair behind the material and give it

WHAT REAL TASTE IS. Merely a Clever Appreciation of "the Eternal Fitness of Things." From whence that most suggestive and admirable phrase, "the eternal fitness of things," is derived, I must own myself at a loss to say, but wheever first originated it deserves our heartiest thanks for expressing so clearly and in so small a compass what we instinctively feel to be a great truth. For, though Eternal Fitness is probably one of the mighty laws which govern this universe itself, it is so all-embracing that it applies with equal force to our own little lives, and ought to regulate -even if it does not-our mode of garbing ourselves and decorating our homes. Indeed, if only some of us could remember oftener than we do, that such a quality does actually exist, this world would be a good deal freer than it is now from the ridiculous mistakes and terrible eyesores which are continually annoying us!

For instance, who has not experienced a feeling of vexation at seeing some such error in taste as a too lavish display of jewels at the breakfast table, or a silken and trailing skirt in the street on a particularly muddy day? Worse still, do not many of us number among the houses we visit one or two where somehow the tout ensemble is not restful or pleasing to the eye, where the furniture is too aggressively new, the plate too self-evident, and our hostess herself over-dressed? The explanation of all this is generally not far to seek—the eternal fitness of things has been violated—that is all. But strangely enough the mere parvenus are not the only sinners in this respect, for people of culture, and what they are pleased to consider taste, have been known ere now to commit the most terrible solecisms. I am writing more particularly about mistakes made in furnishing, and, as a passing remark, let me venture to say that attempting to improve what already approaches as nearly as possible to perfection is one of the snares we most easily fall into. Many an Old World drawing room, once haunted with dim, sweet memories of the First Empire, has been transformed into something like a bric-a-brac shop by an inartistic crowding of Japanese or Indian curios! And many a tiny modern room has been tortured into a carcature of the aforesaid Empire salon, with an utter obliviousness of the fact that this style demands lofty ceilings and long perspectives! A terrible instance of mistaken energy of this kind came to my notice the other day. I was visiting a friend's house in England and as it was an historic one, where, if report said true, "good Queen Bess" had once actually dined, and the young Pretender sought refuge from his enemies, I expected to find it both quaint and interesting. Upon entering the long, low hall, with its hangings of exquisitely tinted tapestries and wealth of blue china displayed above the old-fashioned chimneypiece, it seemed as if my most sanguine expectations were about to be fulfilled; but alas! a downward glance showed that the beautiful oak floor was almost entirely hidden by staring Indian rugs, and in one corner stood a terrible Japanese jar, doing duty as an umbrella stand. make angels—at least those endowed with and the owner of such personal gifts anything like artistic proclivities-weep. It was a small room, panelled from floor to ceiling, and it had a magnificently carved chimney-piece, in the centre of which the portrait of some ancient worthy had evidently once been framed. Not that a trace of it remained now, for it had carefully been removed and replaced by a meaningless square of flowered brocade, while every scrap of oak paneling and carving had been painted ivory-white!

"And is it not too utterly charming?" inquired my volatile friend, as the writer of this article stood speechless with what she doubtless thought was admiration, "You cannot have any idea how different this room looks since I took it in hand," she continued. "It was all that horrid, dark oak, you know, and looked ever so of needless offence to any one." There lirty, but it really is wonderful what a difference enamel judiciously applied will make, and the whole effect is quite modern now, is it not?"

I assented. This was indeed a case where "eternal fitness" had been compelled to give way before a fashionable craze.

Taste is not a peculiar property which some people may have and others may lack, it is merely a true appreciation of the "eternal fitness of things;" and this everybody by the exercise of that most precious gift, common sense, may obtain.

These have a fitted collarette at the top and look well on tall, slight women. They are hardly so comfortable for general wear as those cloaks without sleeves, as to some extent the arms are confined.

MANNERS IMPORTANT.

AND HOW MUCH THEY MEAN IN THIS WORLD.

in Every Walk of Life-How About Yours ?- The Greatest Scholars, Rulers and Saints Should be by Inference the Greatest Gentlemen.

Manners are important. They mean much in the world. They form a large element in the success or failure of life. Yet, like all good things, they are both over-valued and under-valued. It is a human characteristic to judge by appearances, and from them to draw conclusions, even though the experiences of life should teach us differently. When we see a man with an attractive personality and refined manners we have no hesitation in deciding that his inner self, his character, must correspond with his outer self, for few people are able to resist the charms of polished and agreeable conduct. Happily the natural conclusion is most often the true one, but we should not forget that appearances are deceitful, and that the old saying that the broadcloth coat hides the rogue is not always untrue. On the other hand, some of the truest and best people in the world, men and women who are widely known for their genuine excellence, their intellectuality, their goodness of heart, possess only the most indifferent and unattractive manners. Even though they stand pre-eminent in ability and character, we are apt to harbor unpleasant judgments against them because of abrupt and unpolished conduct. When we understand this we should realize that a man's personal deportment is not a safe guide. We shall learn that manners, while unquestionably to be desired and cultivated, should neither be over-estimated nor under-estimated. There is a happy medium, a fortunate union. Of course character is to be preferred to polish in genuine worth, but there is no good reason why the two should not be united. While such undue prominence should not be placed on manners as to make them the chief qualification of success, they should not, on the other hand, be decried as frivolous or foppish accessions to earnest manhood. To forgive a man every social vice, to condone even his offences against honor or honesty, to sympathize with his well-merited punishment, because of his manners, which attract and please all coming in reach of his influence, are attitudes of society highly dangerous to to that perception of truth and fact which is necessary to all right thinking. should only be held to stricter account for misusing so potent a means of inspiring affection and confidence his fellow-men. Yet this is not an argument for rudeness, for good manners should be held absolutely indispensible. They mean to the handsome man greater leauty, to the intellectual man greater mental power and wider influence. Perfection-that is, human perfection-is impossible without refined and careful manners. Their value is absolute, not fictitious. "Rudeness is a social sin, for it transgresses against the charity which avoids from principle the giving is no excuse for intentionally giving way to one's own arrogance and petty personal tyranny; to allow the coarse, selfish part of one's nature to hide and overpower the better self. Good manners may be artificial and assumed, but they are better than rudeness if rudeness is natural and spontaneous. There are some things in nature which should never be in evidence, and of these one of the most important is rudeness. On moral grounds it is unchristian, for it transgresses the golden rule, sins against justice, and causes the passions of anger and ill-feeling in the one to whom it is addressed. Mentally, it is a want of sense and judgment, for a clear perception will show that it is opposed to intellectual justice, and socially it is a bad policy to pursue, for it alienates friends and creates enemies. It may be added, moreover, that good manners show a sense of self-respect and a recognition of the respect and rights due to others. marks of courtesy which alone distinguish the true gentleman. People of position and influence stand as patterns for their inferiors; hence, to them good manners are essential. The religious person loses the best part of his religion courtesy which is the companion of all in any degree as leaders and men of influence should realize their most complete possibilities by cultivating courtesy as a distinguishing characteristic.

Even the Best of Stories Misses Fire When Awkwardly Told.

Last year while a certain distinguished English lady was traveling in this country she expressed astonishment at the vast fields of corn presented to her during a journey through Indiana and Illinois and she wondered what the Americans did with the enormous crop. To this a bright young American girl in the party answered: "We eat what we can and can what we can't." The witticism would have been lost upon her ladyship had it not been for the friendly dint of labor, diagrams, chisels, etc., pleased she put it down in her note-book to spring it upon her friends at home. This is the way the witticism sounded when it was let loose at one of her ladyship's dinner parties: 'In America. you know, they have so much maize that they eat what they can, and tin

When the Knights Templars journeyed to San Francisco the most felicitous toast offered at their splendid banquet was in these words: "The ladies-God bless them! what would our Knights be without them?" An Englishman present was so delighted with the pleasantry -for the British adore punning-that when he got back to Australia he attempted to perpetrate the toast at a local banquet, and he wondered why there was no outburst of hiliarious [applause when he arose solemnly and cried passionately: "The ladies—God bless them! what would our Knights Templars be without them?"

Record. A German's Impressions. A German critic has been giving his views of England and English life in the Cologne Gazette. He talks of "Savoye's Restaurant," and of that place, as, indeed, of all places where man eats and drinks, he has a peculiar and extensive knowledge. There was some sherry at the Reform Club which appealed to him very strongly, and what impressed him very deeply were the "perambulating tables," as he calls them, on which joints were carved for him. He enjoyed lounging in the Park, which he compares with the Bois de Boulogne, saying that what strikes him most in England

French in Germany. Tourists in the Black Forest this autumn have been astonished at finding such numbers of Frenchmen traveling upon German soil. It used to be said, before the war, that the French tourist knew only three places in Germany-Baden-Baden, Homburg and Wiesbaden. It is said that the first of these places has suddenly regained its ancient attractiveness for the Frenchman upon his summer tour, although the former deabolished. The real cause of this new rush of the French across the Vosges into the German health resorts is probably due to the generous action of the Kaiser in the matter of the French offi-

The Queen and Fire. Queen Victoria has a great horror of fire, and has arranged quite a complete fire brigade among her servants, so that it is at hand whenever she is in residence. They had a very successful "false alarm" the other day at Osborne, and everyone was at his post, according to order, as if on board ship. Prince, Henry, among his other useful domestic roles, is chief of the little brigade. The Queen has taken the greatest interest in the whole concern, and frequently amuses herself by watching the drill, The firemen are chiefly stalwart young stablemen, grooms and footmen.

Who'd Be a King? I hear, says a writer in the Lady's Pictorial, that a great deal of anxiety is felt in the Russian Imperial family just now on account of more than one alleged Nihilist conspiracy against the life of the Czar. Curiously enough, autocracy if he forgets that kind and uniform or democracy seems to make little difference to Anarchists and their kin, for true charity. In brief, those who stand M. HERE'S A LESSON.

Love Often Goes Out as Money and Social Cares Come In.

"Did nobody ever tell you that in some far pre-historic time I was in love with my husband?" said Mrs. Romaine carelessly. "Well, I was. I used to go to afternoon services in Lent and pray for that love to last, because the sensation was so much to my taste. I used to have ecstatic feelings when his foot was on the stair, and I sat sewing little baby clothes. We lived in a plainish way, then; $3 spent in two theatre tickets was a tremendous outlay; and offices of others in the party, who, by we walked out to dinners-I tucking up the train of my best gown under finally got her ladyship to see the point a long cloak, and laughing if the of the joke. > Teach Them to Swim. In view of the many and harrowing deaths by drowning that are always among the distressing incidents of the summer season, it would seem as though parents should consider it far more necessary to have their children taught to swim than to spend so much care and trouble on accomplishments that are of no earthly value to the latter who gets into water over his or her head.

THE GREAT SEAFARING ABILITY OF THE OLD NORSMEN.

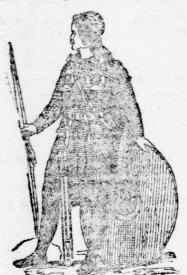

Paul Du Chaillu Writes of the Archæological Trees of a Once Wonderful Race -He Declares That Anglo-Saxons Were Never a Seafaring People. What a glorious history is that of the Vikings or Norsmen! Their civilization rose upon that of fallen Rome and their regenerating blood gave new vigor to many of the countries of Europe. The seafaring tribes of the north who conquered part of Gaul and Britain, whose might the power of Rome could not destroy, who overran Germania, who knew the art of writing, who sailed in the Mediterranean before the Christian era, who led their conquering hosts to Spain, Italy, Sicily, Greece, the Black Sea, Palestine, Africa, and from the Baltic sailed through the present Russia to the Caspian, then ascended the Oxus and later crossed the broad Atlantic to America, who were undisputed masters of the sea for more than twelve centuries, were not barbarians. Civilization was agressive in those days, as it is in our own time.

The Vikings were the bravest, most daring and best seafaring men of ancient days. Their descendants have inherited their love of the sea and are the best sailors of our own times.

One of the most important factors in the life of the Viking was his ship. Their vessels are minutely described in their literature. Their war ships were classified under the several names: The dreki (dragons), skeid, snekkja, skuta, buza, karfi. The dragon ships were the most powerful and finest and could carry a crew of 800 men. The fighting power of all the ships was known by the number of their benches. The Viking ship that came to the 1893 world's fair is a fourteen or fifteen bencher, a skuta, one of the very smallest of their crafts. There are ships mentioned in the sagas of twenty to twenty-five benches, and others from thirty to sixty-two benches; the length of these must have been over 400 feet. Many of the dragon ships and skeid were sheathed with gold above the water line.

From the Icelandic records we find that some of the fleets of the Norsemen exceeded sometimes 3,000 vessels. The Frankish chronicles in the times of Charlemagne mention fleets of 800 vessels and more. Thousands of these ships were on the seas at the same time. Their crews must have numbered 1,000,000 men.

The Viking was not only a seafaring man, but a land warrior. Cavalry was used extensively by them in their expeditions. Their country is thus described by Eginhard, the historian of Charlemagne: An arm of the sea of unknown length (the Baltic), but exceeding nowhere a hundred thousand paces in width, and in many places narrower, extends from the western ocean toward the east. Many nations inhabit its shores. The Danes and the Sucones, whom we call Northmen, occupy the northern shore and all the islands. From the Baltic, the earliest seat of their power, they gradually extended their dissoveries eastward. The ancient Friesland -part of the present Holland and Belgium -according to Frankish historians, they considered as belonging to them. They conquered a great part of Britain and northern Gaul, discovered the Orkneys, the Hebrides, Iceland, and later America. When a powerful chief, known for his great bravery and luck, was to undertake an expedition he made it widely known, sometimes a year or two before the time, and warriors from every part of the Norselands came with their ships or fleet to join his standard.

In 885 the Vikings came before Paris with a fleet of several hundred large ships and a multitude of smaller ones called barques and landed 40,000 men, and soon after all the rivers of France were attacked by them. Between the years 985 and 1015 they discovered Greenland and America, making several voyages to the western hemisphere.

The Vikings had excellent laws. Women in her days held property in her own right. At her marriage the dower given to her by her father and her husband was her own; her husband could not touch it, neither could he use the property she in-herited during her life, and she willed her estate. Her husband could not take her out of the country against her will. She was also entitled to a third of the wealth sequired by her husband. Thieves were punished, and when a man was caught three times stealing he was called thiefborn, and was hanged, for such a man was called irredeemable. To me this law was to the point; so their country was never overrun by thieves.

The monuments which those seafaring tribes of the Romans have left behind them are those to tell where their people lived and of the countries they overran. First from these monuments we find that the legends of Hengist, the "stallion Horsa," the "mare," given to us as fact by historians as being the first people that came to England, is a myth as truthful as the former history of Cyrus. The monuments show unmistakably, with their Roman coins found with them and Norse or Viking antiquities, that the Norsemen had been settlers long before that period in ain and had begun their peaceful sett of Britain in the first century-at their settlements were few and

Over the shoulders a cloak was worn, resembing that of the Romans or Greeks. These cloaks were fastened by costly fibulæ or brooches.

The men wore their hair long, hanging over their necks, and parted it in the middle. Slavery existed from the earliest time. Captives in war formed the only supply of slaves, who consequently came from many different countries. The slave was recognized by his closely cropped hair; his dress was of coarse white woolen stuff, called vadmai; he could not wear a mustache. Such was his badge of servitude. The women were captured generally on account of their good looks. The Viking represented is dressed with the antiquities found in the Norse lands. His helmet is of solid silver.

The finds, as well as the sagas and Roman records, fully cooroborate the fact that the Norsemen were a very warlike

Their arms of offense were the sword, the axe, the spear, the bow and arrow, the sling. Those of defense were the coat of mail, the shield and helmet. The hilts of the swords were of iron, bronze or wood, often ornamented with gold, silver, precious metals, garnets, ivory. The Viking knew the art of damascening before the Christian era and some of the blades found show that they were of exquisite workmanship. The scabbards were ornamented with gold. Axes and spears are found to be inlaid with gold or silver. Their chain armor was of exquisite workmanship. The Trojan column shows no chain armor. The helmets of the chiefs were often of gold or silver. Their shields were sometimes sheathed with gold or silver or gorgeougly ornamented with precious metal.

PAUL DU CHAILLU WATER THE CURE-ALL.

Father Kneipp's Discovery and Simple Remedy for Disease.

Father Kneipp, with his water-cure, can safely be said to be the most celebrated as well as popular specialist in the world. All so-called "nature, or water physicians" dwindle into significance when compared with this venerable priest, who has made the healing of the bodily ills of his fellowmen at large an important adjunct to the spiritual care he gives his own parishioners. Let nobody for a moment suppose that this man is in any way to be mentioned in the same breath with the thousands of self-styled physicians advocating some eccentric fad or other. Father Kneipp's original calling is that of a priest, and even to-day he administers to the spiritual needs of his congregation in Worishofen, an insignificant little village in Bavaria. Born of poor parents he had reached his 21st year when he, with the assistance of a good-hearted priest, was enabled to begin studies. These he kept up with indomitable courage and indusan try, though suffering the most bitter privations. All this labor, he says himself, came near being in vain. Before he had passed his examination for the priesthood his health had, on account of over exertion and neglect, become so completely shattered that he was beyond the aid of physicians. While he was in this pitiful condition he chanced to come across an old book about the "Art of Curing by Water." "I turned the pages forward and backward," writes Father Kneipp. were written incredible things. The thought flashed through my head: "You might find your own condition described in this book.' I kept turning the pages. Sure enough here was what I had been looking for, my own case described almost to a hair." This was the birth, one might say, of the now famous treatment. Father Kneipp began to treat himself according to the instructions of this old book. At first with little or no success, but gradually he noticed the change. He became stronger and was able to resume his studies. A few years afterward he passed his clerical examination and was ordained priest. After being connected with the educational institution a few years he came to Worishofen, and has for more than forty years been in charge of this

Ever since he through this water treatment regained his, as he thought, irretrievable lost health, Father Kneipp has been indefatigable in his endeavors to make known this wonderful form of healing. The Kneipp cure is replete with the application of water in every possible way. You are treated to whole baths, half baths, siting baths, foot baths, douches, washings, compresses, etc. Father Kneipp's strong point seems to be the local application of water, that is to say, he will sometimes only tree a particular part of the body. He often refrains from prescribing the whole bath, though he in many cases approves of it. For healthy people he earnestly advocates cold baths as the very best thing for strengthening the body. The shorter the bath the more efficacious it will be. He says that a cold bath should never exceed three minutes' time. He is particularly emphatic that you must not wipe yourself after the bath. Only hands and face may be wiped dry with a towel, but the other parts of the body must dry of themselves after the patient has dressed himself and regained his normal temperature through exercise. There is one feature of the treatment which is very important and at the same time decidedly original. Like every skillful physician, Kneipp endeavors to, by raising the strength of the patient, establish a counterbalance against the weakening influences of the disease. He has a number of ways for thus fortifying the system. Foremost among these he holds the "barefoot" cure. He ardently advises everybody to at least a few minutes a day go barefooted, either in or out of doors. Such a promenade is particularly beneficial if made out of doors in wet grass. In Worishofen most all of Father Kneipp's patients are compelled to at a certain hour laily walk barefooted. There are several

ACURE FOR DIPHTHERIA

WONDERFUL DISCOVERY OF DR. ROUX' THE FRENCH SAVANT.

The Serum of the Blood of Horses Has Saved Thousands of Lives in France-An Infallible Remedy for the Dread Disease

In a comfortable laboratory, flooded with sunshine, in the Pasteur Institute at Paris, Dr. Roux is the hero of the hour from the fact that he has discovered a cure for diph-His dark, serious face lighted up with a winning smile as your correspondent saluted him as "the man who is saving 30,000 lives a year in France alone." "Pardon," he said, quickly, "you exaggerate. It is true that diphtheria and croup claim more than 30,000 victims every year in this country. It is also true that out of 118 children whom I have recently treated for one or the other of those terrible maladies I have saved 116. That is, we think, a very pretty reduction of the mortality from the old rates."

"It is so wonderful that the mothers of France ought to build you a monument of

The smile swept over the dark face again. "Yet we are only on the threshhold of success. At the Trosseau Hospital, where the mortality among the children used to be 63 per cent.—think of it, monsieur, 63 per cent. i-it has been reduced since the introduction of our treatment of diphtheria and croup to 24 per cent. "At the Hospital of the Enfants Malades," continued the doctor, "where I have been experimenting with my-shall I call it my discovery?-for three years, the average mortality has been lowered from 11 to 1 per cent. This is a good confirmation of the value of our remedy."

The young savant's face was now aglow with enthusiasm. Here was a man who took as much pride in saving life as successful generals take in destroying it. The correspondent asked Dr. Roux to tell how he came upon the astonishing and beneficent discovery.

"Briefly, what do you claim?" "I will repeat substantially what I said at the Medical Congress at Budapest the other day. My co-workers, MM. Martin and Chaillou, and I, maintain, after a series of careful experiments extending through three years, that by the use of the serum separated from the blood of horses which have been previously vaccinated against diphtheria we have succeeded in lowering in such large proportion the mortality of children attacked by diphtheria or croup that the malady may be considered as conquered. We are beyond peradventure now. But what we wish specially to do is to impress upon the minds of mothers everywhere the need of flying at once to the remedy, the moment the diphtheria declares itself. Otherwise we shall continue to have such discouraging results as at the Trousseau Hospital.

"This is what should be done," he went on. "When a child complains of a sore throat an examination should be instantly made. If the mucous surface shows little white spots scattered over it a physician should be called without delay. The white spots may be indications of a simple quinzy, or they may be the first symptoms "In either case, the physician should at once give the child a sub-cutaneous injection of the anti-diphtheric serum. If the attack is one of quinzy simply, the remedy will do no harm. If it is diphtheria, the name of nearly every celebrity in Paris, the serum will infallibly effect a cure." "Infallibly?"

"I have just told you that the statistics at the Hospital of the Enfants Malades show that since the use of the serum in diphtheria cases where there is no complication with other maladies, the average of mortality has been lowered from 11 to 1 per cent. Contrast this with nearly 70 per cent. of mortality where the old-fashioned treatment alone is used."

Dr. Roux is deeply in earnest. "Give us just the chance that we ought to havefair play against the disease," he says, "and we will conquer it every time."

The correspondent remarked that diphtheria is a disease about which every mother has a different theory.

"There are many vulgar errors concerning it," said the Doctor. "Nine times out of ten diphtheria does not kill, as is generally supposed, by suffocation. The false membranes which develop at the back of the throat rarely cause total obstruction of the respiratory canal, and even if they did, tracheotomy could save the patient.

"But the diphtheritic microbe, which swarms on these false membranes, secretes a poison that, sooner or later, according to the virulence of the attack, must contaminate the blood. My pupil Yersin and I claim to have been the first to discover this 'toxine,' and to have proved that diphtheria patients die from poisoning. "Now, the sub-cutaneous injection of the anti-diphtheritic serum confers immediate immunity, but acts as an antidote only at the end of several hours, so that if the ravages of the 'toxine' are too far advanced (and this is pretty generally the case among poor children here when the family doctor says that the attack has become too serious for him and that the patient must go to the hospital), the remedy is given in vain. Neither must it be supposed that the serum has any power to cure other diseases which the sufferer may have concurrently with diphtheria." "How did you happen to hit upon the serum of the blood of the horse as a remedy for diphtheria?" "We never come upon anything by chance here," answered Dr. Roux. erything is the result of patient, even wearisome research. I first became connected with Pasteur when he was experimenting with a view to the discovery of the anti-hodrophobic vaccine. Naturally we experimented upon all kinds of animals, and I came on some facts about the horse which led me later to choose that | account.

Then came the moment of those terrible first experiments upon human beings with Pasteur's new vaccine matter. The good old savant, engrossed in his re-searches, had omitted to put himself right with the local faculty of medicine in the matter of his grades, and he was forbidden to undertake the vaccination of persons who had been bitten by mad dogs without the assistance of a doctor who would assume the responsibility for the operations."

Did you feel any trepidation when you undertook the task, and supervised and made yourself responsible for the first vaccinations?

"I never had a moment's hesitation, nor an instant's doubt. And the triumph of Pasteur's principles in successfully grappling with hydrophobia by vaccination was a proof to my mind that the other victories now at hand could be achieved."

"And how do you obtain the serum?" "Well, we will now return to our friend the horse. The great number of experiments made in our laboratory showed that of all animals capable of furnishing antidiptheritic serum in large quantities the horse was the easiest to vaccinate. He supports the 'toxine' much better than the dog or than ruminating animals. Nothing is easier than to draw from the jugular vein of a horse, as often as one wishes, great quantities of pure blood from which a perfectly limpid serum separates."

"And is the horse sacrificed?" "Not at all. The operators of the Pasteur Institute have horses from the jugulars of which they have drawn blood more than twenty times, and the vein remains all young horses, sound and with excellent appetites. They are bled once a month, and at each operation a little more than four quarts of blood, capable of furnishing half that quantity of serum, is taken from

"Is there any cruelty in the operation?" "Mon Dieu! No. The bleeding causes no pain, and the animal is not much enexceeded. There is a 'but'-" and here the doctor paused.

"Some drawback, do you mean?"

"The drawback of expense is the only one. I was about to say-'But' if we are to be expected to cure all the cases of diphtheria and croup in Paris, we shall need a smart cavalry brigade. You see, it requires nearly seven-eighths of a pint of serum to cure the croup. The preparation of serum is costly, and our hospitals for children would find the new cure a tremendous drain upon their resources were it not for the public subscription which the Figaro has started, and which has already yielded nearly 50,000 francs.

"The money is to be used in providing sufficient quantities of the serum. Baron Edmond de Rothschild alone has given 20,000 francs for this purpose."

and probably the sum raised will reach hundreds of thousands. "It will be worthy of imitation elsewhere," said the doctor. "And it is for the best of uses-the saving of young lives! What is more mysteriously touching than the struggle of a poor little child with the croup? What more dreadful than the anguish and despair of the mother? And think of 30,000 little lives annually snuffed out in France-perhaps twice that number in America-by the insidious maladies? Think of the lives that may be saved in ten years! "As for the serum," continued Dr. Roux, "we have demonstrated that it will keep for a year if protected from the light. We hope to show that its possible duration is much longer. At any rate it can soon be had in proper quantities almost everywhere. No nobler disposition could be made of surplus money by a millionaire than to secure the supply of the precious fluid which will every year save tens of thousands of young lives.'

Scene at Dr. Holmes' Grave. As Dr. Holmes was laid away in his grave at Mount Auburn, the homely old couplet was irresistibly recalled:

A POSTMASTER'S STORY.

A Strange Attack and the Dire Results That Followed.

Mr. Robert Sharp, of Starkville, Tells of His Sufferings-Lost the Use of Both take Hands and Feet and Was Forced to Give Up Business-The Timely Action of a Friend Pointed the Way to Renewed Activity.

(From the Bowmanville News.) Mr. Robert Sharp is a well-known resident of Starkville, Durham county, who has been living in Canada for about thirteen years. He is by trade a blacksmith, and on coming to this country located in the township of Haldimand, in the county of Northumberland. After working there tor a time he purchased a residence and shop at Starkville, where he worked at his trade and established a nice business. Being both courteous and obliging he was well liked and was appointed postmaster for the place. He was in the best of health and with the exception of a slight asthma trouble had no complaint of any knd. In the month of March, 1892, he attended an auction sale in the neighborhood and came home in the evening apparently all right, but during the night was taken with a chill, accompanied with a violent pain which gradually grew worse and before morning he went into convulsions and became unconscious. A doctor was summoned who bled him freely, which seemed to relieve him for a time, and next day he seemed better and the doctor told him he would be all right in a few days. This, however, was not verified, and aithough he could go around he was fast failing in health and at times would be in an agony of pain. One doctor said he had sciatica, and another told him that his trouble was rheumatism of the spine and that he would never be better. He tried many medicines, but all failed to do him any good. At this time he was so weak that he could only hobble around with the assistance of two sticks, and had to give up work. The pain continued day and night and finally he lost the use of both hands and feet and often longed for death to relieve him of his suffering. About this time Mrs. as supple as at the first 'drawing.' The Sharp wrote a letter for him to a friend animals used for this purpose are nearly for whom he had worked when he first came out to the country, and this friend sent him a couple of boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, urging him to give them a fair trial. Before the second box was done he felt somewhat better and purchased another supply. To hasten the story, Mr. Sharp continued the use of the Pink Pills until he had taken fourteen boxes, by which time he had completely recovered, feebled if the specified quantities are not and is now as well as ever he was, and bas lost all the asthma trouble as well. He is now abl to do a hard day's work, and is loud in his praises of Dr. Williams' wonderful Pink Pills. As the reporter was leaving, a Mr. Stark, an intelligent farmer who lives close by, called, and verified all that Mr. Sharp had said, and referred the reporter to others in the neighborhood who knew the circumstances as well. One who had never seen Mr.

> him today, that he had come through the ordeal he has, as he seems the very picture of health, and both he and Mrs. Sharp attribute the whole cure to Pink Pills. Dr. Williams Pink Pills strike at the root of the disease, driving it from the system and restoring the patient to health and strength. In cases of paralysis spinal troubles, locomotor ataxia, sciatica, rheumatism, erysipelas, scrofulous troubles, etc., these are superior to all other treatment. They are also a specific for the THEtroubles which make the lives of so many women a burden, and speedily restore the rich glow of health to sallow cheeks. Men

broken down by overwork, worry or excess, will find in Pink Pills a certain cure. NYMPHŒA ODORATA. vided one has a bit of water on his premises that offers conditions somewhat similar to those this lily delights inslowly moving water and a muddy bottom, where the long, prostrate rootstocks may have a chance to anchor themselves. I have never tried them in tubs of water sunk in the ground, but I am quite confident that if proper care were exercised, the plants would adjust themselves to such new conditions. At all events, they are such delightful little friends that the experiment would well be worth the trial by any one whose home is not in the vicinity of their natural abiding place, as is my own home, fortunately for me. A faint blush of pink is sometimes seen upon the pond lily, and much rarer still is seen a suggestion of blue. There is another member of this branch of the water lily family, the Nymphœa tuberosa, that is common in the West and South, while still another is the blue water-lily of Egypt, which is tender, and cultivated in this country only by artificial means. -Webb Donnell, in Country Gentleman.

Planting Orchards. A recent bulletin issued by the Cornell experiment station treats this important subject at some length. We condense soms of the more important paragraphs as follows.

Preparation of land.—It is generally best to put the land in hoed crops the season before planting, as most soils need the cultivation to bring them into a mellow and uniform condition. If the subsoil is hard and impervious, plow very deep, and in some cases, as for dwarf pears, subsoiling will pay well. Lands which hold surface water must be tile drained, whether flat or

When to plant.—Fall planting is generally preferable to spring planting upon thoroughly drained soils, particularly for the bardy tree fruits, like apples, pears and plums; and if the ground is in good condition and the stock well matured, peaches can sometimes be set in October with success. The trees for fall planting should be well matured. Some nurserymen strip the leaves from trees before growth is complete, in order to put the trees on the market for September delivery. This weakens the trees and is the cause of many failures. Place your orders for trees in August and September, with orders to let the trees stand unmolested till the leaves begin to fall. Get everything ready, and plant the trees as soon as delivered. without heeling in. Trees are mature enough to take up, in this latitude, in late September or early October. Unless all conditions are right, spring planting is safest.

Distance apart. - Do not set too close. Trees are wide feeders. Roots nor branches should interfere. Do not set outside rows close to fences. Trees must be sprayed, and they should be planted so as to be most easily accessable. The following represents the outside average limit when the trees are allowed to take

|---------------------|--|
| Apples | 40 ft. each way |
| Pears, standard | 20 to 25 ft. |
| Pears, dwarf | 12 ft. to 1 rod. |
| Quinces | 1 rod. |
| Peaches | 20 ft. |
| Plums | 20 ft. |
| Apricots | 20 ft. |
| Grapes | 6x8 to 8x10. |
| Currants | \dots 4 x 6 to 6 x 8. |
| Blackberries | $\dots 4x7 \text{ to } 6x9$ |
| Raspberries | $\dots 3 \times 6 \text{ to } 5 \times 8.$ |

Where the soil is strong and the grower makes a thorough work of cultivating, fertilizing and pruning, these distances may be reduced somewhat, except with apples. In general it is not best to plant short-lived trees between, but a first-class orchardist may do so with profit. How to plant.-Plow the whole land first, and fit it well. Level culture is best. Dig holes by hand, broad and ample; in hard soils make the holes larger than in loose, mellow soils. Set the trees an inch or two deeper than they stood in the nursery. Dwarf pears should be set three to six inches below the bud. Get the soil thoroughly firmed about the roots. Leave no air spaces. Fill the hole full enough to carry off surface water and stamp the earth firmly about the tree.

Fruit Storage.

There is some hope that sanitary reasons will banish the cave under our houses that goes by the name of cellar.

But there are other reasons why a storage room for fruit and vegetables should not be under a house in which people live. The ideal cellar for fruit should have an even temperature and does not require ventilation. In fact, apples will begin to rot rapidly as soon as windows are opened in April. Keep the cellar closed. But it must be added that to keep apples well a cellar must be slightly damp; not wet or moldy but moist. This is not the right atmosphere to have under our habitation rooms.

Besides a moist air cannot be had in connection with a furnace. The object of the moisture is to balance the natural waste by evaporation or drying of the fruit. Such a cellar as described, moist and close, preserves fruit far better than one that is ventilated. The apples are then placed in bins or hammocks that rise in tiers one above another;

leaving the fruit not over six inches

LESSON IV, FOURTH QUARTER, INTER-NATIONAL SERIES, OCT. 28.

Text of the Lesson, Mark ii, 1-12-Memory Verses, 9-12 - Golden Text, Mark ii, 10-Commentary by the Bev. D. M.

1. "And again He entered into Caperpaum after some days, and it was noised that He was in the house." The leper who had been healed blazed the fact abroad so much that Jesus could no more dwell in the city, but had to find a resting place without (chapter i, 45), but wherever He went the crowds flocked to Him. Does bot that leper and the lepers of II Kings vii, 9, put us to shame, for surely we have good tidings, and yet how many hold their peace? When Jesus came into Capernaum, it soon became known. In chapter vii, 24, it says, "He could not be hid." How is it that many who bear the name of Christian can so hide Him that no one would know from their conduct or conversation that Christ is in them? 2. "And straightway many were gathered together, insomuch that there was no room to receive them-no, not so much as about the door-and He preached the word unto them." One would think from the many devices resorted to nowadays to draw the people to church that there was no longer power in Jesus nor in His gospel. Were it not for Heb. xiii, 8, one might think He had greatly changed. But knowing that with Him is no variableness, neither shadow of turning, we are compelled to conclude that many preachers do not preach the word; hence the need of such exhortations as Jonah iii, 2; II Tim. iv, 2, "Preach the preaching I bid thee,"

"Preach the word." 8. "And they come unto Him bringing one sick of the palsy, which was borne of four." When those who know Jesus thus earnestly labor to bring their friends to Him, it is good evidence of their faith in Him, but what shall we say or think of those who profess to know Him, yet never put forth an effort or say a word to bring another soul to Him? Can it be that they have a name to live, but are dead or lukewarm and ready to be spewed out of His mouth (Rev. iii, 1, 16).

4. "And when they could not come nigh unto Him for the press they uncovered the roof where He was, and when they had broken it up they let down the bed wherein the sick of the palsy lay." In Luke v, 19, it says, "Into the midst before Jesus." Like the poor woman whom no physician could help, they felt if they could only get to Him He would surely do it for them. What blessed confidence in Jesus! Such trust is never put to shame. We must ask without wavering. Have faith and doubt not (Jas. i, 6, 7; Mark xi,

5. "When Jesus saw their faith, He raid unto the sick of the palsy, Son, thy sins be forgiven thee." How such faith does please Him! Hear Him concerning the centurian, "I have not found so great faith-no, not in Israel." And to the woman of Tyre and Sidon: "O woman, great is thy faith. Be it unto thee even as thou wilt" (Math. viii, 10; xv, 28). See how the great physician goes right to the root of the matter and attends to the soul before the body. A sick body is often, but not always, the result of a sick soul (III John, 2).

6. "But there were certain of the scribes sitting there and reasoning in their hearts." This mode of treating His words or His doings will never bring light or peace. All reasonings must be cast down (II Cor. x, 5). It is only the entrance of His words that giveth light. His word must be received with meekness and received, as it is indeed, as the word of God (Ps. cxix, 130; Jas. i, 21; I Thess. ii, 13).

7. "Why doth this man thus speak blasphemies? Who can forgive sins but God only?" If they had not been so hardened against Him, they might have said to His glory and to their soul's good, "This must be God, for only God can forgive sins.' They might have thought of Isa. xliii, 25, and said, "This must be the Lord God of the holy prophets, even our Messiah."

8. "And immediately, when Jesus perceived in His Spirit that they so reasoned within themselves, He said unto them, Why reason ye these things in your hearts?" The fact that He could read their thoughts and tell them what was passing in their minds should have convinced them that He was none other than the one who said long before, "I know the things that come into your mind, every one of them" (Ezek. xi, 5), even the great searcher of reins and hearts (I Chron. xxviii, 9; Jer. ground or into any receptacle placed to

9. "Whether is it easier to say to the sick of the palsy, Thy sins be forgiven thee, or to say, Arise and take up thy bed and walk.' The last would seem to many to be the greatest, for bodily infirmity is to many a more grievous thing than unforgiven sin. What numbers there are who would give all they have for health of body who are not at all concerned about the forgiveness of sins! They are blind and dead to spiritual things and to the unseen and eternal realities of heaven and hell.

10. "But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins (He saith to the sick of the palsy).' Here is the truth to be proclaimed around the world, "The Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins." He receiveth sinners; He casts out none who come to Him: He blots out all sin and will remember it no more. The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin (Luke xv, 2; John vi, 37; Isa. xliii, 25; John i, 7) Many in China have received the glad tidings the first time they heard them, and multitudes in all countries are vainly seeking rest of soul concerning this because they know not of Him. Where is the faith and seal of these four friends?

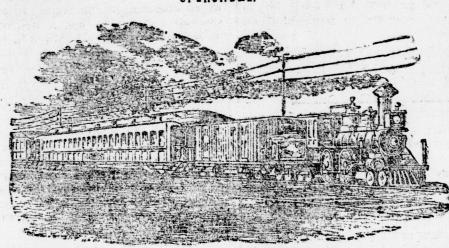

11. "I say unto thee, Arise and take up thy bed and go thy way into thine house." This is the word that has all power in it, the word that at creation spake and it was done, commanded and it stood fast (Ps. xxxiii, 9), the word that said, 'Let there be light," and there was light. It is the "thus saith the Lord" of the Old Testament. The same voice is saying to many today, "Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light" (Eph. v, 4), and will ere long say to Israel, "Arise, shine, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee" (Isa. lx, 1).

12. "And immediately he arose, took up the bed and went forth before them all insomuch that they were all amazed and glorified God, saying, We never saw it on this fashion." A clean soul and a whole body—how suggestive of the resurrection morning, when, having been preserved blameless, we shall be presented faultless. We shall be like Him, even our bodies like His glorious body (I Thess. v, 23; Jude 24; I John iii, 2; Phil. iii, 21). More confidence in Him and more yieldedness to Him would bring more of His power even in these mortal bodies, to His great glory and our great joy.

AN EXTENSION LADDER.

Two Views of a Handy One That Can Be Made at Home.

Fig. 1 shows a ladder that is made for putting up tracks to hay carriers where it is necessary to get into the peak of a barn at any set of rafters. The long hook is made to run over the rafter between any two roof boards. For two seasons we have used one to advantage in fruit gathering. By running the long hook over a limb a little higher from the ground than the length of the ladder, the weight of a person on the ladder brings the lower end onto the ground and the spring of the limb steadies the upper end. It is readily made, easily

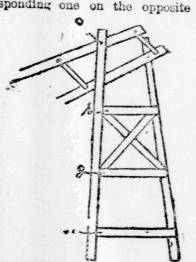

EXTENSION LADDER, FIG. L. handled, and on large trees, or even small ones, fruit can be picked from it where no other ladder would answer the purpose. One piece that we use, 18 feet long with long hook and splicing attachment at bottom, weighs 26 pounds. Its construction is as follows:

For standards 11x11 in. tough hickory, planed on all sides and well cornered. The long hook is flat where it is inserted into the upper end of standard A, and fastened by two bolts passing through both standard and hook. The part of long hook inserted may be 1x11 in. and the same amount of iren rounded by the outer portion, or for fruit picking only, may be flat and rounded on the under side. The rounds are of 1-in. rod, 9 inches long, with the outer end slightly turned up. These might be made of wood but would need to be larger, which would weaken the standard and be dangerous when they had been used a season.

The standard may be of any convenient shape and size, even 2x4-inch scantling worked edgewise. It may be more convenient in some cases to have two or three short pieces and in some it may be necessary to have two or three long ones. For such, the extension attachments are provided. Piece f is made of 1x1-in. iron and passes around on three sides of standard B and the ends drawn into a hook to hook over rounds e and c (for example) and is fastened with one bolt passing through standard. The piece j is of 4x2-in. iron and in a similar way passes around standard A. The ends are crotched so as to admit rounds h and k and is fastened to standard with one bolt

Hook i drops over round k and a corresponding one on the opposite side

EXTENSION LADDER, FIG. II. drops over round h, which, of course, is the other end of round k, but lettered for convenience. These attachments must be the same distance above and below the last round on the standard, as the rounds are apart so that they will fit one place as well as another.

Another convenience I have to-day been using with much satisfaction: We had a ladder that had been on the place at least twenty years. The sidepieces were white ash 2x4 at bottom and tapered from bottom to top, and 12 feet long. One rainy day the past summer (we had a very few such) I took it into the shop and re-dressed the side pieces and rimmed the holes from the inside tapering. I turned all new large rounds out of seasoned white ash and hickory small limbs spread so that neither the extension ladder above de-scribed nor the 6-foot step ladder were available. I took two ½x3-inch by 13 feet, seasoned red beech pieces, and fastened to the top of the the 12-foot ladder as shown in Fig. 2. I put on three cross-pieces 1 inch thick and fitted in an X for braces. Cross-piece p is only long enough to allow the side-piece to turn freely on bolt o. Piece r is 4 feet long and piece g short enough to draw the side-pieces a little to that point. I like this ladder because I can stand on the highest round and reach the otherwise tantalizing fruit 18 feet from the ground. It took two of us only about twenty minutes to put on the whole thing, and when not needed can be quickly removed by taking out the two bolts (one on each side) at top and laid up in a dry place until another fruit season.—E. THE HARROW.

Its Free Use Advocated by Prof. Thomas Shaw of Minnesota.

The harrow has never been used to anything like the extent to which it ought to be in our systems of agriculture. The necessities of some of the prairie soils of the far west are compelling many of the farmers to do what science and good judgment should have taught them long ago. I refer to the harrowing of the grain after it has appeared above the surface of the ground. Owing to the persistence with which they have grown wheat on the same lands from year to year, those lands are becoming very foul with weeds. Two ways of cleaning them have been resorted to. The first is through the instrumentality of the bare fallow, and the second is through the free use of the harrow after the grain has appeared above the surface of the ground. The latter practice has not been resorted to very generally, but some farmers have tried it, and with results that are most encouraging.

When the grain appears above the surface, numberless weeds present themselves at the same time, and these grow to such an extent as to seriously interfere with the yield of the grain at harvest time. Those weeds, if left alone, will steal from the grain what it ought to have by way of nutriment; hence it less ready for emergencies. must be injured just to the extent to which the weeds draw from the soil. Introduce a harrow of the right make at such a time. The teeth will put those weeds into a tribulation from which they will never recover. The whole surface of the ground will be so stirred that the weeds which are shallow rooted at such a time, will be torn from their place, and in consequence will perish in the hot rays of the sunshine. Another advantage follows. The surface of the ground having been thus stirred and mouldered, the dust blanket formed in this way arrests the tain referred to himself as the captain ascension of ground moisture; that is to of "a large steamer," and so exaggeratsay, it prevents its escape, and holds it ed his position in life that he appeared for the advantage of the crop.—Thomas Shaw, Minn. Restoring Fertility.

"Having rented out 30 acres of my land for several years, it having been planted in corn each year, was almost unfit for anything. I concluded to try to restore it to productiveness. I sowed it in wheat, then in the spring in clover. When I cut my wheat I found a very poor stand of clover. On July 20 I began to plow again for wheat, using rolling coulters and chains, so as to hide everything in the way of the drill. I began to sow my wheat Sept. 10. When I cut this wheat I had about a half stand of clover. In September following I sowed in wheat again, having begun my plowing on July 25. The plowing under the clover seemed to make the ground fresh and new. After cutting this third crop of wheat I had a perfect stand of clover. "The first crop of wheat yielded about eight bushels per acre the second crop yielded twenty-two bushels, and the third crop twenty-eight bushels per | mark.

EDITOR FROM HAWAII.

SOME OF THE QUEER EXPERIENCES OF W. S. SMITH'S CAREER.

He Conducted a Paper in the Domain of "Queen Lil," and Found Journalism Not a Bed of Roses-Some of the Things He Has to Tell of Other Experiences.

Walter G. Smith, the young editor who made such a stir in Hawaii in his conduct of the Star, which he founded and used fearlessly in his attacks on Hawaiian royalty and its supporters, returned recently to his former home, Sherwood. His old friends greeted him enthusiastically, and have been listening eagerly to the narratives he has told of the many exciting episodes in Hawaii during the time of suspense which the American government inflicted upon the residents there. Mr. Smith has also brought home some amusing anecdotes.

The system of the jail management in the islands is peculiar. It is the custom there to rent out the prisoners to citizens as laborers at so much a day. Every one who pretends to any social standing in Honolulu has a telephone in his house, and a conversation over it like this is said to be of frequent occurrence:

"Is this the jail?" "Yes."

"Well, won't you please send up a murderer to the house to-day? That burglar you sent up yesterday was not satisfactory."

The prisoners are required to return to the jail before 6 c'clock every night. Mr. Smith is said to have asked the keeper what he did when the prisoners failed to return.

"What do I do?" said the keeper in surprise at such a question. "Why, sir, I lock 'em out!'

It will be remembered that Mr. Smith was threatened with assassination by Paramour Wilson because Smith dared to give expression to Wilson's scandalous relations with the royal house. Upon receipt of the news to expect death Smith went out on the street armed, and exposed himself purposely to meet his antagonist. The other man didn't shoot, but Smith was none the

It turns out, however, that it wasn't Smith's first experience of this kind in newspaper life. Before Smith went to Hawaii he edited 'a newspaper in San Diego, Cal. There was a tugboat captain there who came from Smith's native place, Sherwood. One day the editor found in a paper sent to him from his old home an extract from a letter that the tugboat captain had sent home, and which, because of the glowing account it gave of the writer's success, got into print as an instance of what push would do in the far west. The tugboat capto be one of the magnates of the town. Smith, in a spirit of fun, reprinted the article without comment.

Soon after its publication a sound of heavy feet was heard rushing up the stairs to the editorial rooms of the paper. The excited tugboat captain dashed in and inquired for Editor Smith, He hadn't come down yet, the boy said.

"Well, you tell him," said the cap-tain, "that I shall be here to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock to shoot him dead. I give him warning."

Smith received the message, and has acknowledged since that he did not like it. Still it would not do to show the white feather. He procured two large revolvers, had them cocked and hidden under a newspaper on his desk that had been thrown down carelessly, as it seemed, and tried to show no concern when on the following day the lookout reported that the angry captain was headed for the office exactly on time. He burst into Smith's office, and the latter's right hand stole under the newspaper and grasped one of the cocked revolvers. With a tremendous amount of profanity the captain shouted:

"What did you mean by printing that thing about me!" "You wrote it, didn't you?" asked

Smith, as his hand stole under the paper and grasped the second revolver. and both hands began to tip up th muzzles for instant use, the editor at the same time trying to conceal his trepidation.

"Yes, I wrote it, but what the blankety, blankety blank did you mean by printing it?"

'If I choose to reprint such an article," said Smith, the points of the revolvers coming up still more and his hands shaking a little more, "I have a right to do so."

"You have, have you?"

"Yes I have." "Well, do you know what I am going to do?" asked the furious captain.

"No. I don't," said Smith, prepared now to shoot and kill if his trembling hands would permit him to hit the

Where Was the Garden of Eden?

The Garden of Eden has been located almost everywhere on the earth's surface; at the pole, at the equator, in Siberia, in Peru, by the Caspian Sea, on the banks of the Ganges. In an extended article on this subject in the American Ecclesiastical Review, October, the Rev. J. A. Zahm, C.S.C.,

University of Notre Dame, tells us that Livingstone sought for Eden in head-waters of the Nile. Prof. D. G.

Brinton, in a recent lecture, expresses his belief that the first home of our race was either in Western Europe or Northern Africa. Columbus thought he had found the site of Paradise in what is now Venezuela or Colombia.

A writer in La Nouvelle Revue argues that the Desert of Sahara embraces what was once the Garden of Eden.

Dr. Zham gives very many of the views to his own conclusion, which is that the true site of Paradise is the land in-

A Modern Hero.

(A True Story by Mary Willis.)

The children had decided that a day in the woods was the one experience that they must have to complete their happiness. It was so easy to meet their desires that I smiled when they presented it as a difficulty.

The very next morning they were surprised to find baskets packed, blankets strapped, everything ready for the picnic.

We had decided where we were going-into woods that had stood on a far-away hill, with all possibilities of an unknown land. A few gravestones marked a spot we had promised we walked with a pail toward the well. would visit again when we left it last year-a wierd place that seemed forgotten by everybody. We arranged our baskets, got the water, gathered sticks for a fire, and made the fireplace; doctors-and the neighbor's daughter !" then we started to explore the woods and visit the graveyard. I wonder what he wanted to say? the graveyard the haycocks stood about, and we sat down, leaning against them. One of the children commented on the neglect, and concluded that the people did not care for their dead as city people do. Her etterson was called to the long hours of labor, the little money, the distance that must be traveled from any house we knew, the absence of water, the stony soil. "I don't believe they care for their families as we do, anyway," continued the little skeptic, A wave of memory recalled a story about the family in the little house on the other side of that wooded mountain, and it

Then he washed and dressed her in her plain garments, whose rough lines told of untutored fingers in laundry-work. When the neighbor came she found everything ready, and mother and boy keeping each other's courage up. There was the noise of wheels, and the great doctors were entering the little house. The boy waited until all was in readiness, and then he found his favorite seat back of the barn. An hour later the neighbor came to him with a white face. He had no mother. He walked into the house and took the money from his pocket and handed it to the doctors. He did not let his little world know how he felt; he lived in silence. The years went by; the boy lived in the little house, and worked harder than ever. At 23 he had paid the debt, and was married to

A brown-eyed boy lying on the grass turned with flashing eyes, saying: 'That would have made no difference; such a boy would have done it even if he had known." He recognized a born hero.

The next week, without telling the children, I took them along a road that passed the little house on the mountain where love had made a hero. On and on we climbed; at first we came to the level at the top, and there was a little house, with flowers growing all about it-gay, old.fashioned flowers.

Opposite the house, on the other side of the road, stood a barn, with doors painted green-one of one shade, and the other of such a different shade as to appear almost blue. Through the doors came a man, tall and thin. He wore blue overalls crowded into boots that wrinkled round the ankles; one suspender held them over his shoulders. A torn straw hat was on his head. A shy-looking little girl held his hand. Just then a woman came out on the side stoop, and Before she could reach the sweep the man sprang over the fence to help her. The fascinating author and unceasing traveler, Mrs. Isabella Bird Bishop, recently made an address, in which she said:

An Old-Time Boarding-School.

Here is a glimpse of an old-fashioned boarding-school for young ladies, which may well make our modern girls equally thankful for the present scientific methods of instructing their minds and for the liberty and athletic training accorded to their bodies. The unfortunate little maiden of 10 who records her impressions as a pupil was not, happily for herself and the world, long condemned to such a repressive existence. She was in after years known as Mary Somerville, the great mathe-

And this was the best to be had for the instruction of the most powerfully intellectual woman of her time! It is pleasant to think that she lived to hail, in her old age, the establishment of the Girton College for Ladies at Cambridge, to which, after her death, her scientific library was appropriately

Nature's Most Invincible Creatures.

(As described by Eugene M. Aaron in the Scientific American.]

We are apt to consider ourselves the most powerful and all-conquering members of the animal word, and next to us we range such creatures as the lion, tiger, grizzly bear, and elephant, as capable of maintaining their own against all others in an open hand-tohand or mouth-to-mouth fight. Yet in doing so we err greatly, simply because we consider mere bigness or muscular force, forgetting the energy and the intellectual powers that make one of nature's tiny creatures, when combined in the vast numbers in which they are always found, by far the most formidable animal force known on land. Therefore, when the question is put to us, "Which do you consider the most resistless of all animals?" it is always safe to reply that, if warlike manifestations are referred to, the soldier or driver ants are far and away the most terribly invincible creatures with which we can be brought in contact.

Monsieur Coillard, a French missionary in the Barotse Valley of South Central Africa, thus writes of those terrors there: "One sees them busy in innumerable battalions, ranked and disciplined, winding along like a broad black ribbon of watered silk. Whence come they? Where are they going? object change their route. If it is an inanimate object, they turn it aside and pass on; if it is living, they assail it venomously, crowding one on top of the other to the attack, while the main army passes on, business-like and silent. Is the obstacle a trench or a stream of water? Then they form themselves at its edge into a compact mass. Is this a deliberating assembly? Probably, for soon the mass stirs and moves on, crosses the trench or stream, continues in its incessant and mysterious march. A multitude of these soldiers are sacrificed for the common good, and these legions, which know not what it is to be beaten, pass over the corpses of these victims to their destination." Against these tiny enemies no man, nor band of men, nor dion or tiger, nor even a herd of elephants, can do anything but hurriedly get out of the way. Among the Barotse natives a favorite form of capital punishment is to coat the victim with grease and throw him before the advancing army of soldier ants. The quickness with which the poor wretch is dispatched is marvelous when it is considered that each ant can do nothing more than merely tear out a small particle of flesh and carry it off. Yet in a surprisingly short time the writhing victim will have been changed into a skeleton of clean and polished bones that will make the trained anatomist envious. All are familiar with the tales of how these armies of ants enter a tropical village and take entire possession of it, driving its inhabitants out in terror, and at last in a few hours or a day or two abandoning it cleaner than the arts of the most orderly housekeeper could ever make it. These are not travelers' tales. The most gifted pen must fail to give an adequate idea to the uninitiated of just how thorough and searching these creatures are in ridding a house of every bit of animal or vegetable matter in it. Perhaps, however, the narration of the following bit of personal experience may help to illustrate it. I had returned from a day's tramp in the hills, laden with trophies in the shape of tropical insects, some of them, perhaps, new to the eye of scientists, and all of certain value, when I was called out of my house by the cry, "The driver ants, the driver ants." Hastily placing most of my collections in glass jars and tin boxes, so as to be out of the reach of the invaders, and gathering such clothes as I would need for a day or two, I made a rather undignified retreat. After I had done so I remembered that I had left some rare beetles pinned in a box that was in the pocket of my collecting coat, but as the coat had been placed in a strong chest and this chest was heavily scented with naphthalin or "tar camphor," and the lid fitted down very tight, I felt that they were safe. The next morning when I went back, after a night spent In my hammock in a tamarind tree, I found that of a bunch of bananas, consisting of a thick stem and about 100 of the fruit, there was no trace whatever, save the dangling string with which it had been hung from the ceiling; and not a vestige of bread, chocolate, coffee, and other eatable odds and ends could be found on the thoroughly cleaned shelves on which some food had been left. Even the cracks between the floor boards had been cleaned out, the particles of edible matter having been carried away or devoured and the mere dust left where it could easily be swept away.

This was not so bad, for a good cleaning never hurts a house in the tropics; but when I came to examine my chest and found that a hole quite two inches in diameter had been torn in one end through an inch board of hard wood, that the box in my coat pocket had also been pierced and every wonders of a blife in all its phases. | cure.

One Great Bargain.

It is, or ought to be, a pleasure to us to see other men happy, and therefore we feel certain that a rather unusual scene described in the Fergus Falls Journal will be enjoyed by all sorts of readers. A Duchman came into the clerk's office, with a broad smile on his face, and asked for a marriage license. "An old Dutchman of about 50," the Journal says, but the word "old" must have been an inadvertence.

The paper was made out, and the German produced his pocket-book. "Two dollars and a half," said the Witty Retorts.

The late James G. Blaine was credited, even by those who disliked him, with remarkable command of temper, and his courtesy was unfailing.

On one occasion a decision which he made as speaker of the House greatly enraged a new member, who waited on Pennsylvania avenue after the House adjourned, with some friends, declaring he would "have it out or fight."

"You can't," said one of his friends. 'Nothing you can say will get the better of Blaine's good humor and politeness."

"We'll see !" said the enraged man, as he caught sight of the stately figure of the Speaker coming slowly toward stood across his path.

"Mr. Blaine," he said, loudly, "I don't know you. I am no acquaintance of yours. But I take the liberty of telling you, sir, that you are a fool and a jackass !"

"Indeed!" said Blaine, mildly. "Now I wonder," regarding him you would have taken if I had been one of your intimate friends?" and bowing courteously, he passed on, while the companions of the Congressman burst into a shout of laughter.

A Cruel Affront.

When Gen. Thiebault, then a young man, was with the French army in Italy near the close of the last century, he had for one of his comrades La Salle, a brilliant soldier, but capable of all manner of strange and foolish pranks. One such escapade is narrated by Thiebault in his memoirs, recently published.

At the head of a small body of troops La Salle entered Perugia at nightfall, on his return from some expedition. As he rode through one of the streets he noticed a house lighted from top to bottom. A passer-by told him that it was the residence of Madame So and So, a beautiful young widow, who was giving a ball to the elite of the city.

La Salle was seized on the instant by one of those strange whims for which he was famous. He halted his squadron, and covered with dust as he was, rode to the door of the house, mounted the steps and rode into the hall. Then at the risk of breaking his neck a hundred times, as Thiebault expresses it, he put his horse to the marble stairs, and rode across the marble tiles of the second-story hall into the parlor. He entered the ball-room "at a gallop," and took his place in the middle of the floor. He had plenty of room, for the dancers, as was naturally to be expected, hastened to make way for him. The orchestra had stopped playing, but he ordered them peremptorily to resume, and still on horseback he went through the quadrille. Then he helped himself to punch, gave his horse lemonade and cakes, drove to the window that his men could see him, made a low bow to the widow and her guests, rode down the stairs and rejoined his command in the street, where he was received with acclamations.

It appears certainly true of the late Rev. C. H. Spurgeon that his works that the demand for his sermons continues to increase, notwithstanding that this is the 40th year of publication, and that there are vet as many unpublished sermons as will require another ten years to get out.

A Dominican monk, named Pere Didon, has created quite a sensation in Paris by his preaching. Whenever he preaches he attracts crowds, not only of the faithful, but of the intellectual lights of society, attracted by his wit, eloquence and learning. But he is of very questionable orthodoxy; he directs his hearers to the study of Christ in the New Testament, and it is not improbable that mother church will feel called upon to investigate.

Bishop William Boyd Carpenter, of Ripon, England, is the court preacher. A story is told of him that when he was asked how he managed to address so exalted a person as the sovereign and yet maintain his composure he replied that he never addressed her at all. He knew there would be present the Queen, the princes, the household, the servants, down to the scullery-maid. "And," said the bishop, "I preach to the scullery-maid, and the Queen understands me."

Queen Margherita of Italy had a narrow escape from a tragic death the other day. She was crossing a glacier under the Matterhorn, aud was fastened by a rope in the usual way with the guides and the other attendants. One of the latter, Baron Pecooz, who led the line, suddenly fell dead of heart disease, and the whole party were dragged by the weight of his body to the edge of the precipice. The Queen behaved with remarkable courage and presence of mind, when she might well have been excused for womanish agitation.

The Queen is an Anglican in England, but a Presbyterian in Scotland. Last year her Majesty laid the foundation-stone of the new parish church at Crathie, near Balmoral. The building has been completed, and last Tuesday a bazar was opened in aid of the building fund by Princess Louise. It is even reported that the Queen herself contributed articles in plaited straw, worked by her own hands. The him. "How Doth Death Speak,"

We often hear it said that an excellent rule in speaking of others is to say only what we would say of them if they were present. A still better one thoughtfully, "what kind of a liberty is to speak always of people as we would if they were dead. This disposition to look upon the best side of those who have gone is very beautiful, but how much happier all would be if everyone would speak of the living with as much kindness and gentleness as they do of the departed. Many have acquired a habit, almost unconsciously, of making sharp speeches without really intending or expecting to be taken in earnest; but O! the harm they do, these little stinging arrows!

An incident lately occurred in a family well known to the writer, which illustrates what has been written. One day the conversation at the dinnertable turned upon a lady who was so unfortunate as to have incurred the dislike of certain members of the household because of some little peculiarities. After several had expressed their views in no gentle terms, the married sister added:

"I can't endure her, and I believe ! willinot return her call if she comes here again."

Her husband who had hitherto remained silent, replied: "She will not trouble you again, my dear, as she died an hour ago."

"You do not mean it. Surely you are only teasing us for our uncharitableness."

"She is really dead. I learned it on the way to dinner." Overwhelmed with shame the little group realized for the first time the awful solemnity of such sinful conversation. Let us take warning, and speak of those about us as we will wish we had done when Death sweeps their faults with heavy Gladstone on Temperance Legislation.

So much has been written in the various Canadian journals about live after him. His publishers report Mr, Gladstone's recent letter to Lord Thring regarding temperance legislation it may be of interest to give extracts from English papers that have come to hand since our remarks appeared in the HOME GUARD. The fuller reports confirm the opinion we then expressed that the venerable statesman has not condemned local option in principle, but given expression to the strong conviction that a good deal more than that is required to prove an effectual remedy to the existing evils of the drink traffic.

What Mr. Gladstone wrote was as follows:

"For many years I have been strongly of opinion that the principle of selling liquors for the public profit only offers the sole chance of escape from the present miserable and almost contemptible predicament, which is a disgrace to the country. I am friendly to local option, but it can be no more than a partial or occasional remedy. The mere limitation of numbers, the ideal of Parliament for the last twenty years is, though pretending to the honor of a remedy, little better than an imposture. The growth of the system of tied houses continually aggravates the prevailing mischief. Of details I do not speak, but in principle you are working on the only lines either promising or tenable. I am glad to see that Mr. Chamberlain is active in your cause."

Sir Wilfred Lawson, M.P., an old friend and supporter of Mr. Gladstone, wrote as follows to the Manchester Guardian: "If the liquor traffic were to be nationalized or municipalize dtomorrow it would not weaken by one jot the necessity and urgency of our demand for the popular veto on the liquor traffic, as substantially embodied in Sir William Harcourt's bill. It would be just as cruel to force a degrading and ruinous traffic on resisting localities if that step were taken by the national executive, or by a municipal authority, as though it were taken as at present, by the magistracy. Mr. Gladstone himself, speaking at Chester, on June 25, 1892, on the eve of the general election, distinctly described the demand of the workingman in this matter. He said, "He" (the working man) "demands no more than this, that in areas reasonably defined and marked out the population shall have the power of regulating the conditions under which the liquor traffic is to be dealt with, and that that power shall extend even to the local extinction of the traffic."

Mr. W. S. Caine, M.P., a leading Liberal and co-worker with Mr. Gladstone for years, wrote as follows to the pondents advise, and use Mr. Gladstone's letter as a flimsy excuse to turn his back upon his solemn pledges, there is no man living who would censure him more sternly than Mr. Gladstone himself, who by his own words to the deputation from the Covent Garden Convention, which waited on him and Sir William Harcourt at Downing street, on Dec. 7 last, bound the present Government to its Direct Veto Bill by ties that cannot be broken. Mr. Gladstone's letter to Lord Thring has been used by the enemies of the temperance movement to condemn, were it worth while. It an experiment as the Bishop of down on a measure to which he stands traversed in any way by the bishop's Mr. James Whyte, secretary of the United Kingdom Alliance, in a letter to the Manchester Guardian, said: "Now, it has for long enough been the contention of the Alliance that the mere limitation of the number of licenses in any district would be a very inadequate way of dealing with the liquor traffic, and it is undeniable that the organization has always taught that the self-interest of the liquor traffickers is a great obstacle in the way of the honest and efficient administration of the laws for controlling the traffic. Such being the case. I am unable to see why Prohibitionists should be agitated because Mr. Gladstone greatly prefers a method of regulating the liquor traffic intended to eliminate the publican to a method which would not do so." The British Weekly, one of the leading journals of its class in England, writing on the subject, remarks: "The Gothenburg system may or may not be a good one, but nobody should mistake its meaning. It means the sanction and perpetuation of the moderate drinking, and will be, if adopted, the heaviest blow ever dealt against 51 King Street East total abstinence."

"I think my boy is going to be a great mathematician," said Lemonby. "He's wonderful at it. He can multiply five by three and make twenty out of it every time. I don't see how he does it, but it seems as simple as can be to him.

A Parliamentary Awakening.

Questions to be Asked Candidates—A Northwest Plebiscite.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Dominion Alliance, held at the secretary's office on Thursday afternoon, proposed questions to be asked by Prohibitionists to Parliamentary candidates were framed. Dr. J. J. Maclaren, Q.C., presided.

It was resolved that the following be published as suggestions of forms of questions to be addressed to candidates in different constituencies with the recommendation that Prohibitionists should support in conventions and at the polls only such candidates as would give affirmative answers thereto: 1. Are you in favor of prohibition of the liquor traffic? 2. If elected to the House of Commons will you support and vote for a prohibitory liquor law?

3. Will you co-operate with the other members of Parliament who avor prohibition to secure the introduction and enactment of such legislation at the earliest possible opportunity?

The idea that is held by many people that a plebiscite is at hand in the Northwest Territories is erroneous, Mr. F. S. Spence said recently. The real state of the question is that a straight prohibition resolution was introduced in the Legislature up there. It was defeated in favor of a resolution FERROL MANUFACTURING CO. declaring for prohibition when the people should have expressed their desire for it. But nothing was done to provide for the plebiscite which was understood to be implied if not promised. Now the elections are coming on nothing can be done.

Their Choica.

People who find it tiresome to read a book more than once will scarcely credit the story which is told of one of the Scilly Isles. The entire library of this little island consisted, a century or more ago, of a single copy of the "History of Dr. Faustus."

As most of the inhabitants were able to read-provided words were not too difficult—the conjurer's story had been handed from house to house, until from perpetual thumbing very little of his enchantments or his catastrophe was left legible.

When this alarming state of things became evident, a meeting of the principal inhabitants was called to discuss what could be done to remedy it, for the people must have something to
