Scrrowing Multitude of all Denominations Does Honor to the Sleeping Sovereign.

Colonial Tribute to the Life of one Long Loved and the leust do we thank Thee for the spife of Jesus Christ, Thy dear Son, Who died that we might be forgiven and out not the leust do we thank Thee for another gift from on High, that of our beloved and gracious Queen, Varoria. Verily, it has been truly said the mas a Queen of wives, a Queen of wives, a Queen of monarches. Such a Queen was truly the gift of Hisaven to a mighty nation. She distive the power and her influence for good from the Holy Ghost, and may we, by the shin and example of her gody and noble life, be so influenced and rise of the nation, give us this grace. By the life of our beloved ungent Thy Kinggom has been extended and it is our sincere hope and prayer that the manter of the swinting mother may fall upon King Edward's sheldides, so that he too may centingue the good work. All these mercies we ask for Jesus Almen."

The Queen Sleeps.

The vision pales and dies Which gladdened long our eyes, Great majesty in womanhood enshrining; She passes to her rest, Victoria the Blest, Her crown with a diviner luster shining; And, while her stricken people weep She lays her scepter down and falls asleep.

Hush! She is sleeping now nooth is the wrinkled brow-Closed are her eyes by Death's caressing fingers; Calm is the white, wan face,

Where the endearing grace Of motherhood and widowhood still lingers. Silence the trumpet and the bell! The Queen doth slumber-wake her not !-all's well !

Lo! where the pale North Star Rides in his sable car Pointing to man the way o'er land and ocean-

There is the symbol seen Of her, the great, good Queen, Who guided us with single-souled devotion-

A star whose clear and steadfast rays Hlumined our faltering steps and charted all our ways. Her gentle spirit drew,

As doth the sun the dew, Our hearts to her, alike in joy and sorrow; And when the daylight died She took our hands and cried,

"Be of good cheer, there is a bright to-morrow !" She was our Mother then, and more, And loved us as no sons were ever loved before.

But when, at war's alarms, She called her sons to arms, Then was she Queen, defiant, lion-hearted;

Then was she King and Lord, Girt with her empire's sword ;-Seaward the lightnings of her legions darted; War-worn they came again to her,

Who was their sovereign balm and sweetest comforter. Not as we bring the bloom

To deck her kingly tomb Shall we survey the splendor of her glory;

When pride hath dried our tears, Our children shall be told her wondrous story. Now let her rest, in Jesus sleeping-God guard her ever in His holy keeping! -Robert Dennis, in London Express

So it was in the case of Queen Victoria, and the history of the past three score years and ten was now being recapitulated. She was not marked as the Queen of a mighty Empress to She ed by the world on Her Gracious Ma-jesty. She was not may mad as the Queen of a mighty Empre alone. She regarded all her subjects, from the highest to the lowest, equal before the bar of justice. & STEPHENSON, - Proprieter. THE CENTURY'S PROGRESS IN MEDICINE. The New York Sun is printing a meries of end-of-the-century papers by eminent writers, dealing with the progress made in some of the great departments of human endeavor during the century. Of those that have appeared so far, perhaps the most interesting to the general reader, on account both of the matter and of the manner in which it has been treated, is the paper on medicine in last Saturday's issue by Prof. Wilham Osler, professor of medicine in the John Hopkins University. Prof. Osler, as is well known, is one of the recognized American authorities on medicine. He is a Canadian and a brother of Justice Osler, of B. B. Osler, and of E. B. Osler, M. P., all of them names of men who have become The century's progress in the art of healing is one of the glories of the age. It is worthy of note that ' at the opening of the century there were only three schools of medicine in the United States and only two general bospitals, and more than half of the century was spent before medicine was placed upon a thoroughly scientific basis. Before the discoveries of Pasteur, Koch, and Cohn in bacteriology, preventive medicine, says Prof. Osler, was a blundering, incomplete science, and the discoveries of Pasteur were not given to the world till 1861, while the victories of Koch and Cohn thear a date as late as 1876. It will thus be seen that great as the achievements of medical science have been in late years, it is as yet in its

and yet it is almost miraculous what has been accomplished. Smallpox, which raged everywhere at the opening of the century, is now, wherever preventive medicine has uninterrapted scope, almost unknown, In the German army it is unknown. In 1838 in England 1,228 people per millipn of population died of typhus and typhoid fevera. In 1892 only 137 per million died of typhoid and only 3 per million of typhus. Cholera is stamped out every time it endeavors to gain a footbold in either America or England. Diphtheria is still a dangerous malady; but since the discovery of the germ of the disease and the antitoxin there has been a great reduction both in its prevalence and in the amortality which it causes. On tuberculosis, of which consumption is the most dreaded and most familiar branch, a great flood of light has been thrown. The origin of the disnown: the conditions under which it thrives and spreads are familiar, and great progress has been made in the treatment of it.

One of the most remarkable discoveries of modern days is the cause of amalarial fever. Beyond all doubt it has been ascertained that the disease is transmitted by a certain kind of mosquito. The mosquito in sucking the blood from a diseased person takes up at the same time the germs of the disease. These germs find lodgment in the insect's stomach and eventually flevelop into peculiar thread-like bodies which make their way to the salivary glands, from which they are communicated to the next victim whom the mosquito visits. Who remedy is to get rid of the mosquitos by draining off the marshes in which the insects breed, Experiments have shown that a person living in a district far removed from malarial influences may become infected by being bitten by a mosquito eharged with disease germs, while a merson who takes the precaution to protect himself from mosquito bites will escape the disease, even in the anost affected regions. No section of the remarkable pe per, parts of which read like a romance, is more interesting or in structive than that which deals with the new dispensation in treatment. The old schools put their faith in drugs. For every symptom there were a score of medicines-what vile decoctions they were most of us know. The new school has firm faith in few drugs, little or none in the great mass of medicines still in use. Taks the case of typhoid fever, for instance During the first quarter of the century the patients were bled, blistered, purged and vomited, and dosed with ercury, antimony and other compounds to meet special symptoms. During the second quarter, the same, with variations in different countries lafter 1850 bleeding became less freent and the experiments of the Paris and Vienna schools began to shake the belief in the control of ver by drugs. During the last quarable doctors have reached the lusion that typho'd fever is not a see to be treated with medicines, at that in a large proportion of all as dist, nursing and bathing meet There is active sys ematic, careful, watchful treatment, t not with drugs. The public has been fully educated to this nt and medicines have sometimes be ordered for the sake of the and it must be confessed that are still in the ranks antiquers

ing of disease Prof. Osler bears eloquent tribute. Great as has been the progress made in the discovery of the causes of disease, and in the discovery of antitoxins for both prevention and cure, faith still plays a great part in the success of every practitioner, of whatever school. Here is what Prof. Osler says:

"Faith in the gods or in the saints cures one, faith in little pills cures cures one, faith in little pills cures another, hypnotic suggestion a third, faith in a plain, common dector a fourth. In all ages the prayer of faith has healed the sick, and the mental attitude of the suppliant seems to be of more consequence than the to be of more consequence than the powers to which the prayer is ad-dressed. The cures in the temples of Esculapius, the miracles of the saints, the remarkable cures of those nobl men, the Jesuit missionaries, in this country, the modern miracles at Lourdes and at St. Anne de Beaupre in Quebec, and the wonder workings of the so-called Christian Scientists, are often genuine and must be conof the so-called Christian Scientists, are often genuine and must be considered in discussing the foundations of therapeutics. We physicians use the same power every day. If a poor lass, paralyzed apparently, helpless, bedridden, comes to me, having worn out in mind, body and estate a devoted family, if she in a few weeks or less by faith on me, and faith alone, takes up her bed and walks, the saints of old could not have done more. St. Anne and many others can more, St. Anne and many others can scarcely do less. We enjoy, I say, no monopoly in the faith business. The faith with which we work, the faith, indeed, which is available to-day in everyday life, has its limitations. If will not raise the dead; it will not put in a new eye in place of a bad one (as it did to an Iroquois Indian boy for one of the Jesuit fathers). nor will it cure cancer or pneumon ot knit a bone, but, in spite of thes nineteenth-century restrictions, such as we find it, faith is a most precious commodity, without which we should be very badly off."

"This most excellent and never-failing cure for nervous headache," says the ap stle of physical culture, "is the act of walking backward. Just try it some time if you have any doubt about it. I have yet to meet the person who didn't acknowledge its efficacy after a trial. Nobody has as yet discovered or formulated a reason why such a process should bring certain relief. Physicians say that it is probably because the reflex action of the body brings about a reflex action of the brain, and thus drives away the pain, that, when produced by nervous-ness is the result of too much going forward. As soon as you begin to walk brickward, however, there comes a feeling of everything being reversed, and this is followed by relief. The relief is always certain and generally speedy. Ten minutes is the longest I have ever found necessary."

Reuben Purser, chairman of the Windson water board, brother of Reeve C. Purser, of Dover, who has many other relatives in shis vicinity, tells some interesting stories of Queen Victoria's girlhood. He was bern at Tunbridge, Wells, Eng., and, when a small boy, saw the Queen almost daily when she was out riding. "There were a large number of small hildren," said Mr. Purser, "who were in the habit of watching for Princess Victoria when she was out driving. We would play on the Kent road on which she always drove, and she was always accompanied by mounted servants who road in advance of the carriage containing the young princess. As soon as those outriders were discovered the cry of there comes the princess' would ge up, and we would draw up in a line beside the road to catch a glimpse of her as ahe was driving past. When the carriage would come opposite we would throw our would come opposite we would throw ou hats in the air and give three cheers. The Queen would always acknowledge our noisy welcome with a smile and wave of the hand, and many times a gift of money would be

"I can hardly describe Queen Victoris in those days. It is very long ago, and I was only a young lad. She had a rounded face, with a frank, friendly glance for every person. She appeared to be very modest and retiring, but acted as though she relished the homage we paid her on that old the homage we paid her on that old Kent road. She was only a child here self and used to sit on a raised seat in the front of the carriage when out in the front of the carriage when out driving. ## Something About Binder Twine

Farmers who intend placing their orders for Binder Twine, should not take any Twine unless they know some, thing about its brand There will be a great deal of cheap, rough Twine on the market this coming year, and farmers should bear in mind that they have no way of discovering this until they come to use it, when they are really too busy to have any mistakes rectified.

We are selling the well-known brand "Our Superior" that we have sold here for 3 years and which has given universal satisfaction. We guarantee that the twine will be the same this year as last, hence, farmers will be perfectly safe in ordering it.

Last year some dealers sold a so-called Superior Twine, but it was not the genuine article, as Our Superior Twine is made by the Plymouth Cordage Co, and every ticket on the balls bears their trade-mark on the back, viz., a sheaf of grain. No twine that has not this trade-mark on the back of the ticket is genuine "Our Superior Twine."

Farmers, remember this and do not allow yourselves to be imposed on. We are now taking orders for Binder Twine and are guaranteeing the price against any decline or advance up till the time you take your twine home. Our aim has always been to give the farmers a good working twine, and we think that considering the quantity we sell, there is no firm in Canada who receive fewer complaints.

THE OLD ENGRAVERS.

THEIR ART IN THE WORKING OF STEEL PLATES A LOST ONE.

its Downfall Was Brought About by the Introduction and Pertection of Photography-The Work of Muller

Twenty-five or more years ago, when Art was not spelled with a capital letter, no self respecting citizen would have ventured to invite his friends into a "parlor" not adorned with specimens of the alleged art of more or less incompetent steel ed art of more of less incompeted, and engravers. "The Pilgrim's Progress," "The Guardian Angel," diminutive and irritating children offering loaves of bread to preposterously grateful and ragged "poor"—such works of art as these adorned the walls of 90 out of every 100 houses. It was depressing from an artistic point of view, but this feeble imitation testified to the supremiser of the noble art of steel engraving, of which the masters were an inspired few. The engraved atrocities have vanished from the walls, and along with them. walls, and along with them the truly beautiful specimens of the art have grewn to be less and less highly prized, except by the connoisseur. Steel engrav-ing has come to be one of the lost arts. In a few years all its followers will have passed away, and the good engravings now extant will even more distinctly becollector rather than for the admiration of the many.

Steel engravers have not yet found their occupation gone entirely. The old these who once engraved pictures of ambi-tious size and scope now toll—such of them as are left—over the details of bank notes. It is the one living branch of steel engraving, one worthy enough in its way, for the work is beautiful, but one which will never win the admiration once showered on huge copies of great pic-tures. To the general public the figure rather than the design of a bank note is of importance, and few stop to note the delicacy of the lines, the grace of the composition, all engraved, very likely, with loving care by some old man whose pride in his art remains, although the glory of it has gone forever.

This branch of engraving has reached a higher development in America than anywhere else. The delicacy of the work is sometimes extreme and gives an idea of the standing of the artist in the days when his skill was put to higher uses. The old men are growing fewer every year. For the special profession of banknote engraving young men are being trained to take their places, but for the broader work, as it used to be carried on, there will be no successors. The old en-gravers are the last of their ancient guild, and with them the art of steel engraving as it relates to large pictures

But, narrow as is their field, it is interesting to find that these old artists recognize one another's work by the minute details of the bank note or stock certifi-cate. Much of it is done by geometric lathe in the hands of apprentices, but the touch of the true artist is perceptible to his brother, just as it is possible to de-tect in a moment the style of a painter. There is always infinite pathos about the idea of the world's losing anything beautiful it once possessed. It does not matter whether or not there has come something to take its place—the sadness As a matter of fact steel engraving has passed away because somehas been discovered. Photography is a good enough substitute for the inferior work which was so familiar a quarter of a century ago. The rage for etching also helped to overthrow steel engraying from its position of security, but the ing from its position of security, but the downfall was brought about chiefly by the invention of photography. The plates engraved by really good workers cost a large sum of money and an amount of time disproportionate even to the high price. Muller spent six years in perfecting his "Sistine Madonna," and the price paid for it rewarded his time at a less rate than that of an ordinary dry goods rate than that of an ordinary dry goods clerk of today. Such works were, indeed, a labor of Such works were, indeed, a labor of love, and to them there attached a sentimental interest that can never cling around the photograph which has driven the engraving from the field. An ordinary photographer—that is, a man with no special artistic inspiration—can produce the beautiful work which hangs in the place of those once honored copies of great pictures. Of course, steel engravings are still bought and sold and still hang in the houses of artistic people, but those who buy are in the main collectors. The general public no longer looks at the old time favorites. To take up some volume of a good art journal of 25 years ago and compare it with recent issues is to meet a forcible reminder of the way in which taste has changed. A quarter of a century ago the pages of such volumes. century ago the pages of such volumes were filled with steel engravings and nothing else, while now dashing color effects, daring "studies" in charcoal, fill

The position in the art world of the great engravers is quite beyond dispute.

There is no question of whether or not there is general interest in their manner

The value of their engravings is fixed, and their service to the world is beyond question. Were it not for Morghen we might have had no idea of the beauty of might have had no idea of the beauty of Leonardo da Vinci's "Last Supper." The true spirit of art has been nobly preserved by such engravers and their followers, and there is about their work a charm which fashion cannot affect.

But these works are too high priced for the public to know much of them, and every year will increase their value. For an engraving, if it is to be perfect, must be printed at the time the plate is made. Copies made after many years are from

TWO WELL-KNOWN EX-CHATHAMITES.

Are Paying Their Friends in This City a Flying Visit.

Hon. D. M. Eberts, attorney general of British Columbia, and R. L. Gosnell, at one time editor of The Planet, are visiting in the city. Mr. Eberts is stopping with his sister, Mrs. Robert Mercer. He will leave for Ottawa to-night accompanied by Mr. Gosnell. It is thirteen years since Mr. Gosnell left Chatham. He says he of course finds it a different place now and marks the many improvements.

She had not totled for honor, but that she might bring sunshine into the homes of the people of the nation. The homage done during the past few weeks to the Queen was not homage to her wealth, her rank or her genius. There was gold on her coffin genius. There was gold on her coffin and a magnificent pageantry attended her to the grave, but there was that about her funeral besides which these things were nothing. There was a grander thing in the nation's tears. Her character had always risen above all things. Her subjects honored the Queen, but they revered the woman, and humbly they addred Him Who made her what she was. Hers was Christian goodness and it was because of this her life was meek and good and simple. good and simple.

The hymn followed,—
"A few more years shall roll,
A few more seasons come." REV. DR. HANNON.

Rev. Dr. Handon gave an excellent address. He took as the subject of his remarks the power and influence of the Queen as exerted in matters of state and diplomacy. There were some extremists who declared that the soveressions has a parameter in the ereign was a mere automaton in the state, but this was a fallacy. The

Once more the Cheft led in the singing of "Neuver, my God, to Thee," after which the challeman pronounced a solemn benediction. Then, as by one arrord the immense gathering rose and the new national anthem rang forth in prayer and praise-

God save our gracious King, Long live our noble King, God save the King. Send him victorious, Hippy and glorious, Long to reign over us; God save the King, Thy choicest gifts in store On him be pleased to pour ; Long may he reign: May he defend our laws, And ever give us cause To sing with heart and voice, God save the King.

HOLY TRINITY. The memorial service at Holy Trin The memorial service at Holy Trinity Church on Saturday was most impressive. The city Masons, some 150 strong, assembled at their lodge hall and attended in a body, combining the exhibition of personal sorrow with sympathy for King Edward VII., Grand Master of the order.

The proceedings at the church were profoundly memorable. The order of service was presented to each worshipper in souvenir form—an artistic arrangement prepared by The Planet.

The services opened with the singing

The services opened with the singing of the hymn "O God our help in ages past," and continued with the earnest service for the dead. The Rector, Rev-Robert Sims, presided and conducted the prayers for the new King.

Mr. Gladstone had endeavored to pass a measure making promotion in the army possible only by pure merit. The opposition, led by Beaconsfield, was clear, clever and effective and the measure was thrown out by the House of Lords Gladstone then threw the respon ibility of settling the difficulty on Her Majesty. She was equal to the emergency and she destroyed the royal warrant making it possible for men to purchase promotion in the army.

At the time Peel and the Duke of Wellington were called on to form a ministry, the Queen showed that she understood her constitutional privileges and refused to dismiss her household attendants. Livid Palmerston, when he was Secretary of State, sent eges and refused to dismiss her bouse-hold attendants. Livid Pulmerstom, when he was Secretary of State, sent despatches without the authority of the Queen and also amended her despit hes. Her Majesty objected and laid down two rules for Palmerston. One was that he must not expect her to sanction any dopuument until the was absure of its contents, and, secondly, that the minister must not amend it after the rogal sanction had been given. He did not observe these rules but approved of a stand the Emperor of France had taken after the Queen had ordered her minister to remain passive. This was too must for Her Majesty and the great Lord Palmerston was dismissed.

Punctuality was regarded by the Queen as one of the golden virtues, and it was a characteristic feature in all details of to-day's mournful but stately pageants. The Queen's company of Grenadiers was drawn up with the Queen's colors near the entrance to Osborne House at the appointed time, and presented arms as her devoted Highlanders reverent ly brought out the coffin and placed it on the gun carriage with the frown and the orb of the empire be-

Royal Simplicity.

Behind the khaki-colored gun carringe walked, with bowed heads, the King, the German Emperor in naval uniform, and eight English, Germa and Danish Princes, and Queen Alexandra and nine English and German Princesses in deepest black.

The households of the Queen and King followed on foot the Royal mourners as at a simple village funeral, and behind them the military officers, Mayors of the Isle of Wight, Royal, servants and tenants of the Oshorne estate. The pipers played until the Queen's gate was passed, and then the mased bands which had been stationed in advance with mounted grooms in shire Carbineers and files of staff officers, began the slow movement of Chopin's funeral march.

The Embarkation. The bands ceased to play when Trinity pier was approached, and the long, muffled roll of the drums alone broke the stillness. Trinity pier was reached a few minutes be-

Historic Demonstration in Which Forty-Six Warships Took Part-Multitude to See the Pageant,

Portsmouth, Feb. 1 .- The body of her late Majesty, Queen Victoria, lies aboard the royal yacht Alberta tonight, close beside the Clarence pier. Four giant guardsmen stand watch above it, motionless. At their nearby moorings float four royal yachts, the Kaiser's great white Hohenzollern rising conspicuously above the rest. Only a few lights show in the fleet and for all the sound it makes it might be a mirage in the harbor mists. Fereign Ships in the Fleet. The southern line of this magnificent avenue embraced fifty vessels sent by Germany, France, Japan, Spain and Portugal to pay the last tribute to England's departed Queen.

Each vessel in the long, winding fleet displayed the white ensign of the Union Jack at half-mast. The white flags of seven admirals fluttered from the tops of the mainmasts of their respective vessels. The Japanese battleship was painted a solid slate color and was, according to common consent, the most dangerous looking ship in the assemblage.

Multitude to See the Pageant.

The biting air and brilliant sunshine made a perfect day for the nautical tribute. Only a few clouds flecked the blue and they served but to beautify the Solent by prottling its smiling waters. For hours the great fleet assembled in the Solent road had lain sleeping in the sun, when suddenly, far away toward Cowes, the guns of the cruis er Alexandra broke the stillness, and Portsmouth knew that the naval procession had stayed. The Camperdown, the Rodney, the Benbow, the Collingwood and the Colossus took up the signal. On it came down the winding line of ships like fire along a fuse. There was a fresh rush for positions on the part of the crowd massed from Portsmouth harbor south to Sea castle. Reinforcements came pouring out of the city and country until the whole coast was black with eager sightseers. The gdns continued to thunder m mentarily until the stately procession, headed by eight torpedo-boat destroyers carrying the body of the late Sovereign, rounded Spithead buoy and passed the last ship in the fleet, creeping slowly toward the Clarence pier. All the while the warships deep-toned guns alone had rent the silence. Huge black masses of mourners looked on, speechless, reverent and sorrowful, as the royal yacht Alberta, bearing its flag-wrapped burden, followed the destroyers.

TRICKS OF WAITERS.

METHODS BY WHICH THEY INCREASE THEIR REVENUES.

They Get Small Wages, but Manage to Swell Their Pay by Tips, by Making Mistakes and by "Standing In With the Cashier."

Men who patronize the German resorts club, restaurant and debuting society and possess many of the characteristics of the real German "bierlokai," have seen a great change in the manner of conduct ing them in the last few years. There are still some places where the regular customer, the "stammgast," makes his own score and tells the waiter how much he owes when he leaves the place, and there are many places where the waiters call for what they want for their patrons and make a lump settlement before go-ing home. But those are the small places, and even in these there are cash registers as checks on the person who finally

But in the larger establishments there are many elaborate systems by which the waiter is held in check and com-pelled to curb his inclination to tip himself. A system which was introduced by one of the largest resorts of this kind is known as the metal check system. When the waiter goes to work, he buys $10 worth of metal checks, and with these he pays for what he takes from the bar. At the end of the day or night he receives cash from the cashier for the checks still in his possession. "That system worked spleudidly," said an old waiter. "as long as the cashier was honest, but when he formed a combination with a waiter or with several it became an easy matter to make a nice bit every day. A waiter would throw down a dollar check and receive twice as much in change, and at the end of the day or week there would be a di-vision. Could this last? Well, I should think so. I have been here for seven years, and in that time several $15 a week cashiers have opened places of their own. Some of the best places in town beflong to men who were waiters and cash-ders, and when they become proprietors their help 'does' them just as they 'did' their former bosses. But the metal checks were not enough for the new saloon people, and they put in a new thing, in which many slips, rubber stamps, cash registers and spotters were applicated to keep the cash out of the employed to keep the cash out of the waiters' pockets. "Well, that was the worst of all. Com-Binations can be made in that game just as well as in the old one, and at one place the waiters ran things so high that the smart ones cleared as much as $10 a night. Wait till I get this order," and a night. Wait till get the he halted in his German discourse.

"Yes," he resumed, "it's pretty hard for an honest man, because he gets no credit for being honest. The boss knows arrivaled but he makes that he's being swindled, but he makes money just the same, and if he got all he made he would be able to ride about in a carriage on his day off the same as the cashier does. Low wages do it all.
A cashier gets from $10 to $15 s week and handles all the cash, and he naturally pays himself a little every day on account. He usually swears at the waiters and puts on a stern front, but those who know all about the business will tell you that the waiters at whom he yells the most are the ones who are his secret

"A waiter at a 'bier kneipe' gets the princely pay of $4 to $7 a week. In some of the best places there are old hands who get as much as $8, but they are few. They go on duty at 6 o'clock in the evening and remain until 1 o'clock in the morning, and in those places where there are dancing halfs in connection with the regular business the waiters often have to remain until 3 o'clock and later. Many of these waiters have 'down town jobs' during the day, where they work from 10 o'clock in the morning until 3 in the afternoon for $4 a week. What do you think of that?" And after propounding that question the waiter burried off to fill an order.

"But the waiter doesn't get left," he resumed, making marks on the pad which the carried, "and tips make the jobs worth holding. In places like this waiters make good pay even when they don't stand in with the cashier. Men give big tips to show off before the women, and at times when there's a fight at a table as to who shall pay, when every one insists that he should foot the bill, the fellows who getof free usually tip the waiter liberally. but in such a way that every one at the table sees just how much they give. Cases of that kind make up for those where a man gets even with the house for serving heer with too much or too little. serving beer with too much or too little 'collar,' or a poor sandwich, or a flat siphon of water, or mustard with a by in it, by refusing to give the waiter a tip.

Making a mistake in addition is a fine way to make an extra dollar in those places where the check is not made out at the desk, but, taking it all in all, standing in with the cashier is the best game." Many waiters in up town establish-ents took their first degree in the service in Bowery resorts where brawn and muscle were counted among the necessaif requisites for success. The old waiter arry experience he said:

"Down there we had to serve a rough, tough gang and often had to fight for our pay. Occasionally we could 'do' a man who had too much or forgot to set-tie for a trayful of stuff at the bar, or maybe sneak a couple of glasses in the rush. But that's the only way there was of making an extra cent. The bosses know that, and that's why waiters in the Bowery district, where tips are scarce get three times as much pay as the met who work up town. A good, stout waiter who will keep sober during business hours can make $15 a week in wages in some Bowery places."

The waiter stopped in his discourse to greet three men who took their places at an empty table with the air of men who gree prepared to make an avening of it.

were prepared to make an evening of it. Beer in large glasses was served to them without much delay, and then the watter whispered: "Those are the customers we like to see. They know how to treat a watter."

Who are they?"

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was refused by a dozen publishers, and it was at length brought out in serial form by a weekly paper. Afterward a small firm was found to publish the tale at the usual rate of percentage.

Miss Marie Corelli's "Romance of Two Worlds," her first work, was nearly lost to the world through the want of belief in its merits by all Mr. Bentley's readers, whom no less a literary light than Hall Caine was one.

Rider Haggard is said to have had his rmously successful work, "King Soloenormously successful work, Aing Solo-mon's Mines," rejected by two or three publishers before its ultimate appear-ance, when it "caught on" at once and was the beginning of his fame.

"Mr. Barnes of New York" was rejected by all the American and London houses alike to which it was offered. Mr. Gunter's eventual decision was to publish the story himself. It was an instant success, and it is said that out of that tale and "Mr. Potter of Texas" the fortunate author made a fortune running into six figures.

JEWELRY JOTTINGS.

Newest necklaces are elaborate affairs of many and various colored stones and the richest of rose gold. One of them presents a superb ensemble of diamonds, pearls, sapphires, rubies and emeralds.

The costlicat of new gold mesh purses bear a tiny watch in the gop, and the fancy for introducing there diminutive timepleces into the most unconventional environment shows no sign of decadence. Great is the vogue of green enamel on either gold or silver. Nearly every woman who buys a new brooch or belt clasp demands in it at least a touch of that golden green color which is just now the fad in fashion.

Pave effects with pearls and colored stones appear again in the ascendant. A number of small pearls and olivines are thus combined to form the ernament of a very dainty ring, which is quite an unusual use of this species of work.

WORRY AT CUSTOM HOUSES.

Women Should Know the Law Be-fore They Travel Alone. If there is one thing more than another which makes a woman wish that she had never been born under the stars and stripes, it is the annoyance and worry en-tailed upon her through the customs in-when she returns from Europe for the first time.

The discomfort begins about the time the lightship is sighted—it may be the day previous. Everybody asks everybody else for advice. Old travelers awap experiences, harassing and disconcerting

Of course, it is presupposed that no portion of your dress has been utilized for storing are questionable articles. ing away questionable articles.

One regulation gives you your first help. Presents must be declared, no matter how small their value. The term is elastic, however, and does not need to include anything which can be used by yourself. Paying the duty on your pres ents settles the question. Another secret of success lies in your smile. If you have traveled much on the continent and looked after your own bag-gage, you have learned the value of a smile—a distinctly feminine smile, bearing good will to man. It is a great lever and as useful in New York as abroad.

Again, it is necessary that you be among the very first in signing your declaration, before the official is worn out by the idiotic and evasive answers of both men and women, for when the question comes of declaring nothing dutible among one's baggage men as well as women are given to evasion.

Once on the wharf the same rapidity must be used in getting your baggage together and then securing your inspector while he is still in a good humor. It is well to remember that this inspector uses his own judgment to a great extent. The thing is to make his judgment and your own agree. He looks you over and decides what sort of clothing suits you and then examines your trunk to see whether you and its contents harmonize. If you have declared your presents you must show one or two of them and state the price of each. When the duty is paid, ou walk off while the evaminations are but just beginning.

Menu of a Japanese Beauty.

The satin skinned, almond eyed flower of Japan is very fastidious about her food and does not suffer like her Caucasian sister from indigestion. She begins in the morning when she awakes by gins in the morning when she awakes by eating two little green plums pickled in vinegar and rolled in sugar. A cup of tea completes this almost traditional breakfast of Japan. The dinner is of the drollest composition. It is brought in on a tray of red lacquer in microscopic cups with covers and consists of a hashed sparrow, a stuffed prawn, seaweed with a sauce, a salt sweetmeat and a sugared

After all these dishes, which are brought in, bound around with copper and filled to the very brim with rice plainly cooked in water. The flower of Japan fills another large bowl from it, mere make believe, a woo darkens its snowy white surface with a black sauce flavored with fish, mixes it all together, carries the bowl to her lips and crams down all the rice, shoveling it with her two chopsticks into her throat And so ends the dinner.

He was very particular in his inquiries as to who to pay the money to, and the uniformed conductor was pointed out to him. The conduct-or came along presently and took his nickel. An old man sitting next to him gave the conductor a dime, and the latter gave him the little boy's nickel in change. The child was perfectly astounded. He gazed at the old man a moment as though wondering how any one could be so unjust; then he burst into tears.

"Mamma," he sobbed. "I des gave the p'liceman my nickel, and that old man stuck it in his pocket."

Nothing would satisfy the lad. His mother gave him another nickel to solace him, which he promptly wanted the con-ductor to take. Finally the offending old man gave him back his first nickel, re-ceiving another from the conductor, and the ride was finished in harmony.

One of Gilbert's Criticisms. A friend of Gilbert, an actor, was play-

clous Two Hours, It Seem but a Few Minutes to the Victim.

"I have received a number of pretty bad shocks in my life," said an experienced electrician, "but have had only one really marrow escape from death. The sensation of an ordinarily severe shock is familiar to the majority of people and is not especially peculiar, but a knockout dose of the current is something entirely different. I was splicing a connection in a power house when I got my jolt and mistook an are light feeder which had sagged down for a dead wire. I had a pair of pliers in my left hand and attempted to push it out of the way with them. That much I remember perfectly. Then all of a sudden I had a most extraordinary sensation. I felt as if my blood was expanding and swelling every vein in my whole body to the last pitch of tension. The great arteries in my neck seemed to stretch until they were as big around as ship cables and suffocated me with their pressure, and I suffocated me with their pressure, and I had the same bursting feeling in my eyeballs, my tongue, my nostrils and even the roots of my hair.

"All this came over me with terrible swiftness, but it was nothing like a stroke of lightning or the twinkling of an eye. On the contrary, several seconds seemed to elapse, and the feeling was so seemed to elapse, and the feeling was so entirely different from what I had always imagined it would be that it never entered my mind that I had been shocked by a high power current. Then, as nearly as I can describe it, my overstrained tiegram approach to give way some nearly as I can describe it, my overstrained tissues appeared to give way, something exploded in my brain like a 100 ton gun, and everything became black. Almost immediately, or so I could have sworn, I opened my eyes and found myself on the floor, fully conscious, but very weak. As a matter of fact I had been hurled a dozen feet. What I imagined had consumed at least a tenth of a minconsumed at least a tenth of a min ute had possibly occupied a thousandth part of a second, and I had been insensible fully two hours. It simply shows, as we have often observed in dreams, that under abnormal conditions the brain loses all conception of time. I am pretty positive from questioning a number of peo-ple that everybody who survives a shock from a current over a certain voltage has an experience very similar to my own.

The trouble is in describing it, which I have done very imperfectly. One of our linemen probably hit it off better. He said he felt as if he had 'swelled up and busted.'"

The Reporter Was Green, and Huntington Helped Him Out, The late Mr. Collis P. Huntington, the multimillionaire, was a hard man for reporters to reach or to get an interview from even after being seen. Miss Nono Ryan, a young girl about 19 years of age, sat near and with her back toward the stove, when Charles Spurgeon once said that there were 3 great enemies to man —"dirt. debt and the devil." He might have added one more d and included dyspepsia. The evil results of this disease could hardly be exaggerated. It's effects are feit in mind and body, and as far reaching as the effects of the curse that was laid on the Jackdaw of Rheims which was cursed in "eating and drinking and sleeping, in standing and sitting and lying." The good effects of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery are most marked in aggravated and chronic cases of dyspepsia. It enables the stomach glands to secrete the necessary quantity of digestive fluids, and this at once removes that graving or gnawing sensation so common to certain forms of indigestion. It tones and regulates the stomach, invigorates the torpid liver and gives the blood making glands keen assimilative power. Many interesting experiments to test the digestive powers of Stuart's Tablets show that one grain of the active principle contained in them is sufficient to thoroughly digest 3000 grains of raw meat, eggs and other wholesome food.

Stuart's Dyspep in Tablets do not ac upon the bowels like after dinner pills and cheap catharties, which simply irritate and inflame the intestines without having any effect whatever in digesting, food or caring indigesassisted in the work of digestion it will very soon recover its normal vigor, as no organ is so much abused and overworked as the stomach.

This is the secret, if there is any secret, of the remarkable success of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, a remedy practically unknown a few years ago and now the most widely known of any stomach weakness.

practically unknown a few years ago and now the most widely known of any stomach weakness.

This success has been secured entirely upon its marits as a digestive pure and simple because there can be no stomach trouble if the food is properly and promptly digested.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets act entirely on the food eaten, digesting it completely, so that it can be assimilated into blood, nerve and tissue. They cure dyspepsia, water brash, sour stomach, gas and bloating after meals, because they furnish the digestive power which weak stomachs lack, and unless that lack is supplied it is useless to attempt to cure by the use of "tanics," "pill" and cathartics which have absolutely no digestive power.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets can be found at all drug stores and the regular use of one or two of them after meals, will demonstrate their merit better than any other argument.

Hush of a Multitude Marks Route of the Gun Carriage.

Five Monarchs Were Together as the Train Drew Up at Victoria Stationat 11.20-Order of the Procession Took Two Hours to Traverse Three Miles-The Arrival at Windsor-Service

London, Feb. 2 .- One great, deep sigh, direct from the hearts of millions of earnestly sincere mourners, was the accompaniment this morning the passage of that particularly short built coffin containing all the mortal remains of the greatest Queen the world has known over the whole three miles and a half separating Victoria from l'addington station.

You ask what was the most touching sight of to-day, which thrilled even the most callous with a feeling of intense tenderness. The reply is, when as that beloved body passed, borne upon the gun carriage of khaki color, as by natural instinct, every hat was removed, every head was bowed, every voice was hushed, every face displayed an awe-stricken appearance, as though what was passing was too secred to look upon. Women burst into tears.

The Throng Countless. An estimate of the number in the crowd was well nigh impossible. The side streets leading to and parallel with the route of the funeral were filled with thousands of people unable to reach the thoroughtarest through which the cortece passed. Every minute added to their num-bers, and it seemed as though all Lordon was making for the west without the slightest chance of reaching the line of the procession.

King Edward and Emperor William then took their places in the carriage reserved for them and the crape-bedecked engine steamed out of station with its load of illustrious mourners.

Display of Power.

Within ten minutes after entering the station all was ready. The fun-eral procession started at 12.20. It would be a mistake to describe this wonderful funeral cortege as a great pageant. It was what it typfied, as in the jubilee procession of three years ago, not its actual display of power, that made it marvelous above all other tributes to dead onarchs which the world has seen. It is in that sense that the spectacle which London has just witnessed should be viewed.

The funeral cortege was exclusive ly royal and military, with court functionaries mounted or in carriages. Neither the Government nor Parliament was represented in it, nor any public services. The Ministers, members of Parliament and judges were allowed to look on from special stands erected near St. James' Palace.

The three miles from Victoria Station to Paddington took two hours eached Paddington at 12.30 Presently the sweet, sad strains of Beethoven's most familiar funeral march and the low, thrilling roll of thirty muffled side drums penetrated the station. Strange Hush Fell.

As the gun carriage entered, a strange hush fell upon the crowd, every hat was again removed, and soldiers saluted until it was drawn up opposite to the funeral

Then, when the King, with his re gal and princely company had enter ed, there was for the first time and only or a few moments a scene of bright, kaleidoscope movement.

An army of silk-hatted, black-coated grooms rushed forward to take away the horses, Kings, Princes, attaches and aides dismounted, and in moment the crimson-carpeted platform was covered with a brilliant moving throng. Next came the moving of the coffin. Its coverings were removed, and the plain oak, brass-mounted coffin stood in its bare simplicity upon the khaki-colored gun carriage, At the moment the gun carriage et tered the station the Queen's colors were dropped to the ground and the black-draped royal standard upheld. The aged prelate read from a desk inside the communion rail, and could not be heard except by those sitting very near him. He said, in part. "All our thoughts to-day are about the greate and gracious personality whom we have lost. The end of her long reign marked an epoch, which gave rise to gratitude, sorrow and hope, to gracious memories and great anticipations. The years brought some pressure at the helm and some violence of waves, but never once was there any loss of governance: never any alienation of the hearts of her people. "All are pleased that the new King has determined to call himself after the greatest of her ancestors, we has greatly pure and clean. we has greatly grown, and along the lines of his policy we now seek a seven-fold blessing from the Seventh Edward."
