Municipal taxes—Secretary-treasurer—M. C. 371, 378, 948, 999, 1000, 1001.]—When several immovable properties have been assessed and put up for sale for non-payment of municipal taxes, under the provisions of the Municipal Code, as being one property, for taxes due on each of them, only a small part of each of such immovables may be sold and not one of such properties alone. A secretary-treasurer charged with the sale of immovable property for municipal taxes is a public officer who should strictly observe his duties as prescribed by law; he can exercise no latitude nor discretion and cannot give a buyer the choice of the immovable sold. Corp. of County of Shefford v. Donais (1910), 16 R. Lu. n. s. 439.

"Offer"—Pleading.] — An offer of sale means the existence of a mutual agreement, and not simply an unaccepted offer, and therefore an action based upon such an offer will not be dismissed on inscription in law. Racette v. Vanier, 7 Que. P. R. 449.

Partnership lands—Death of one partners—Conveyance to surviving partner by administratrix — Infants — Consent of official guardian—Personalty.] — Two brothers in partnership in business were the owners of certain land as partnership assets used in the business. One of them died intestate, leaving a widow and infant children, and the widow took out letters of administration and conveyed the land to the surviving partner. Later the surviving partner died, and his personal representative agreed to sell the land. On an application under the Vendors and Purchasers Act, R. S. O. 1897, c. 134, in which the purchaser contended that the consent of the official guardian should be obtained to the conveyance to the surviving partner, under s. S. of the Devolution of Estates Act, R. S. O. 1897, c. 127:—Held, that the latter Act did not apply, as the property devolved by operation of law upon the personal representative virtue offici, and not by virtue of the statute, and that the children were not concerned or interested in the land in any sense contemplated by the Act. In re Fulton & McIntyre, 24 C. L. T. 225, 7 O. L. R. 445, 3 O. W. R. 406.

Purchaser of a substituted immovable from an institute who has the power to sell, on condition of investment of the price in other immovable property, to be held subject to the substitution, has an action against the institute for specific performance of the condition of investment of the price (remploi de prix), even after he has paid it voluntarily, instead of seeing to its investment at the time of the sale. Paquette v. Laurendeau (1910), 38 Que, S. C. 417.

Recital—Covenant—Additional consider-ation if sold—Rule against perpetuities— Lien on lands — Personal remedy,]—The plaintiff sold certain land to E. and S., the deed containing a recital that the plaintiff had agreed for $200 to sell the land to E. and S., their heirs and assigns, for railway purposes, with a proviso that the land should remain the absolute property, in the posses-sion of and under the absolute control of E. and S., and should not be fenced in other-E. and S., and should not be fenced in otherwise than as provided in the deed; and in the event of E. and S. selling, etc., the land, or erecting a fence contrary to the terms of the deed, E. and S., or their heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, should immediately pay to the plaintiff, his executors, administrators, or assigns, the further sum of $500 as additional consideration for the sale of the land making in all $700 therefor sale of the land, making in all $700 therefor. The land, in consideration of the payment of the $200 and the further consideration of the several covenants to be kept and per-formed by E. and S., their heirs and assigns, was then conveyed to them. The covenant was in effect that E. and S., for themselves, their heirs and assigns, covenanted with the plaintiff that they, the said E. and S., or their heirs or assigns, would, in the event of their disposing of or conveying the said land, immediately pay to the plaintiff the further sum of $500. E. and S. sold and conveyed the land, with other lands, to the E. and S. Company, subject, in express terms, to the covenants set out in the original deed; and the E. and S. Company sold and conveyed the lands, with other lands, to the defendants, also subject to the covenants. In an action to recover $500 for the breach of the covenant not to sell, claiming the payment of the $500, a lien on the lands, and ment of the $500, a hen on the tands, and a personal remedy against the defendants:—

Held, Riddell, J., dissenting, affirming the judgment of Boyd, C., 12 O. W. R. 3, that the plaintiff was entitled to a lien on the land, and to a sale thereof to realise the lien, the rule against perpetuities not applying, for, though under the covenant it might be held applicable, that was controlled by the recital; but the judgment was reversed in so far as it gave a personal remedy against the defendants. Quart v. Eager, 18 O. L. R. 181, 12 O. W. R. 735.

Rectification of conveyance.]— Defendants, husband and wife, conveyed to plaintiff, a farm, wife joining to bar dower. When plaintiff, went to register his deed, he found that defendant husband had conveyed said farm to defendant wife some 16 months previous. Plaintiff brought action for rectification of the conveyance by substituting wife's name for that of her husband as granter, and by eliminating wife's name as party of the second part. Clute, J., at trial, found that it was not present to the minds of the defendants that the husband had conveyed the land to bis wife, and held, that there was no agreement by wife to sell and action failed. On appeal to the Divisional Court, it was argued that the wife having been a party to the negotiations, was estopped from setting up her title against the plaintiff:—Held, 15 O, W. R. 34, that a new trial should be granted, that this aspect of the case might be heard by the trial Judge.—Britton, J., held, that the second action should be dismissed, the plaintiff to pay only the costs of this trial. No costs of the former trial or for the application for a new trial; that the plaintiff was entitled to the promissory note for $400 made by him, now in Court; that the defendants were entitled to a declaration that the conveyance in question was of no validity or effect. Lecroise v. Longtin (1910), 16 O. W. R. 240.

Reference—Report of referee — Setting aside judgment.]—A contract for the sale of land had been assigned by M. to plaintiffs as collateral security. Plaintiffs sued for arrears of instalments. Judgment was given at trial in favour of plaintiffs with reference to ascertain amount of liability. The Nova Scotia Supreme Court set this judgment aside and directed the referee to ascertain first, what, if anything, was due plaintiff from M. and, if anything, then to ascertain defendant's liability. The Supreme Court of Canada quashed an appeal. The setting aside the trial judgment is a mere matter of procedure. Union Bank v. Dickie, 6 E. L. R. SS.

Re-sale by purchaser—Subsequent resales of parcels to various sub-purchasers—Assignment of sub-purchasers agreements to original vendor — Credit for sums paid by sub-purchasers—Assignment of various sub-purchasers—Account — Construction of contract — Refund of payments not made voluntarily — Specific performance —Form of judgment.]—Plaintiff sold to M. certain land, who sold to defendant, who sold to a number of different persons. All sales were under agreement. Plaintiff indealing directly with sub-purchasers, refused to make title unless bonuses were paid him in addition to the amount mentioned, in each agreement:—Held, that plaintiff was not entitled to demand these bonuses, and, being liable to return them to the sub-purchaser, is not bound to give plaintiff credit for them. If plaintiff consents to indemnify defendant against these bonus payments order to go for specific performance with other directions. Rankin v. Wadleigh, 10 W. L. R. 402.

Right of redemption—Payment of interest — Default — Extension of time — Letter of purchaser.]—The purchaser of land upon condition of redemption by the vendor within 6 years, who allows the vendor to remain in possession in consideration of an annual rent, with a stipulation that default in any payment for 2 months after it falls due will destroy the power of redemption, extends for 3 months the period of 6 years by writing to the vendor a letter in these terms: "In reply to your letter, I am going to leave the deeds as they are; as to the interest which fell due lately, I hope you will not exceed 3 months; it is your advantage even more than mine to work to meet the regular interest, for the more money one has to pay at a time, the more difficult it is to pay. Be easy, although your réméré is finished, I shall not sell anything, and will wait 3 months for your interest. Hoping to give you satisfaction by this delay, which I consider reasonable, yours," etc. Dupont v. Cloutier, 30 Que. S. C. 514.

Sale under the direction of Court—

From in fixing reserve bid — Opening biddings.]—A purchaser at a sale under the direction of the Court, having no knowledge of an irregularity in fixing the reserve bid, cannot be affected by such irregularity; and a motion made to set aside a sale and open the biddings, on the ground that in fixing the reserved bid the value of one part of the property was not taken into consideration, was dismissed with costs. The referce not having in his report approved of the sale, but having made a special report regarding it, the purchaser, although ready, was unable to pay the balance of his purchase money into Court:—Held, that he should be allowed to pay it in without interest, and without prejudice to his right to object to the title. In re Jelly, Provincial Trusts Co. v. Gamon, 22 C. L. T. 64, 3 O.
L. R. 72.

Scrip certificate - Half-breed scrip Acquisition of rights in-Purchase of land allotted.]-The payment of money to a halfbreed entitled to land scrip, and the delivery of the scrip certificate by the half-breed to the person paying, conveys to the latter no right in the certificate, the transaction being no more than an agreement by the half-breed to exercise his rights under the certificate as he may be directed, and the delivery of the certificate being merely to protect the person paying the money against the exercise of such rights adversely to him.-An assignee of the person who made the original agreement with the half-breed has, therefore, no rights against an innocent purchaser from the half-breed of the land allotted to him under the certificate. Patterson v. Lane, 6 Terr. L. R. 92

Taxes — St. John Assessment Act.]
By agreement dated the 18th March, 1902, for the sale of land in the city of St. John, the vendee was to be given a "good title free of all claims on the 1st May," the date when possession was to be given. Section 131 of the St. John Assessment Act, 52 Vict. c. 27, enacts that "any assessment upon or in respect to real estate shall be a special lien on such real estate from the 1st day of April in the year of the assessment," etc. By 58 Vict. c. 49, s. 1, power is given to the city to sell real estate, on failure of the person assessed to pay taxes assessed in respect of the land. On the 1st May, 1902, the rate of taxation for the year from the 1st April had not been fixed by the assessors, and the rate was not determined, nor was the assessment list filed by the assessors with the common clerk until a number of weeks after the 1st May. The vendee contended that the taxes for the year beginning on the 1st April should be paid by vendor, and the matter was referred to the Attorney-General, whose decision it was agreed should be final:—Held, that the vendoe should pay the taxes, save one mont's proportion thereof, to be borne by the vendor. In re de Forest, 22 C. L. T. 400.

Tenant by sufferance—Use and occupation of lands—Art. 1608, C. C.—Promise of sale — Reddition de compte — Action ex vendito — Practice.] — The action for the value of the use and occupation of lands does not lie in a case where the occupation by sufferance was begun and continued under a promise of sale; in such a case the appropriate remedy would be by action ex vendito or for reddition de compte. That the preponderance of convenience was, upon the affidavits, entirely in favour of a trial in Halifax rather than in Digby. Levy v. Rice, L. R. 5 C. P. 119, and Church v. Barnett, L. R. 6 C. P. 116, followed. 3. That the fact that the trial would take place on an earlier day at Digby, which would suit the plaintiff's convenience, as he intended to go away, was not a justification for laying the venue should be with costs, as it had been opposed on unreasonable grounds. O'Hearn v. Keith, 21 C. L. T. 572.

Change—Agreement before action.] — A conditional sale agreement provided that "in case of any litigation arising in connection with this transaction, it is agreed that the trial will be held only in" (the place where the vendors carried on business):— Held, that this condition was binding, and in an action by the purchaser to recover damages because of the unsatisfactory condition of the article sold, an order was made changing the place of trial to the place carried upon, although the balance of convenience was in favour of the place named by the plaintiff in his writ. Change — Convenience — Fair trial.]—
The writ of summons was issued in Rossland, where all parties resided. The venue was laid in Victoria, and the defendants applied, on the ground of greater convenience, for a change of venue to Rossland. This application was refused because a fair trial by jury could not be had there, on account of the feeling among the mining classes. The defendants then applied for a change to Nelson, where they contended a fair trial could be had, but the plaintiffs filed affidavits to show that the feeling was the same as in Rosslaud:—Held, that, although the expense of a trial at Nelson would be less than at Victoria, still the venue should not be changed, unless it was clear that an absolutely fair trial could be had. Change—Preponderance of convenience— Undertaking as to expense.]—The plaintiff, who was a workman, was injured by an accident which took place near Welland, and he then went to Belleville, his place of residence, and received there medical treat-ment. The venue in the action brought by him to recover damages was laid at Belleville. All the eye-witnesses of the accident lived at or near Welland, and it appeared that there would be a difference in travelling expenses and witness fees of about $50 in favour of a trial at that place :-Held, that this difference in expense, and the fact that the cause of action arose at Welland, were not sufficient to do away with the plaintiff's prima facie right to have the trial at Belleville, especially when the evidence of pro-fessional men living there would be necessary.—Held, also, that an undertaking by the defendant to pay the extra expense to the plaintiff of a trial at Welland was not a ground for changing the venue, for that would not be of any advantage until the trial was over, and would not lessen the financial was over, and would not lessen the manched difficulty to the plaintiff of bringing his witnesses to a distant point. Contract-Sale of goods-Agreement as to place of trial - Action to set aside contract.]-An action for the cancellation of a contract of sale on the ground of failure of consideration is an action "arising out of the transaction" within the meaning of a provision in the contract that any such action shall be tried in the county where the head office of the vendors is situated, and, apart from any question of convenience, the apart from any question of convenience, the venue if laid elsewhere will be changed to that county. Wright v. Ross, 11 O. L. R. 113, 7 O. W. R. 69.

Contract-6 Edw. VII. c. 19, s. 22 (O.) -Retroactivity.]-An action was brought in the High Court by the purchasers of a machine against the sellers, for a return of money paid on the agreement of sale, damages for breach thereof, the return of the plaintiffs' promissory notes given there-under, and cancellation of the agreement. The plaintiffs based their action upon a new agreement which they alleged superseded the original one as to some of the terms but. except as specified, the engine was to fulfil the terms and conditions of the original agreement. The original agreement contained a clause providing that if any action or actions arise in respect to the machine or notes or any renewals thereof, the same should be entered, tried, and finally disposed of in the Court which has its sittings where the head office of the defendants is located, i.e., at Sarnia, and another clause providing that any action brought with respect to this contract or in any way connected therewith, between the parties, shall be tried at the town of Sarnia. and the purchaser's consent to have the venue in any such action changed to Sarnia:-Held, that the action did not come within either clause; but, if it did, that s. 22 of 6 Edw. VII. c. 19 (O.) applied, although the contract was made before it was en-acted.—Order of the Master in Chambers acted.—Order of the Master III Chambers refusing to change the venue to Sarnia affirmed. Bell v. Goodison Thresher Co., 12 O. L. R. 611, 8 O. W. R. 567, 618.

Convenience - Expense - Witnesses.] -Motion to change venue from St. Thomas to Sandwich refused, the result being to de-lay the trial, the difference in the expense heing small. Brown v. Windsor, Essew and Lake Shore Rapid Rw. Co., 13 O. W. R.

Convenience - Witnesses - Affidavit-Solicitor. Jordan v. Macdonell, 8 O. W. R. 947

Convenience-Witnesses - Cause of action. Gardiner 7 O. W. R. 136. Gardiner v. Beattie, 6 O. W. R. 975.

Convenience-Witnesses - Expense -Fair trial - Jury - Undertaking-Costs. Gillard v. McKinnon, 7 O. W. R. 161, 208.

Convenience - Witnesses ment of trial — Payment of additional expenses.]-Order made changing venue from Perth to Sault Ste. Marie. Plaintiff had four witnesses, defendants 16. The latter would be unable to get to Perth in time for trial, so a postponement would be necessary. Defendants to furnish such sum as reasonable to take plaintiffs to the trial. Gorman v. Hope Lumber Co., 13 O. W. R. 643.

Convenience of witnesses-Expense.] -Considering the convenience of the ma-jority of the witnesses, change of venue from Jority of the witnesses, change of venue from Welland to Ottawa was granted. Gardiner v. Beatty (1905), 6 O. W. R. 975, affirmed, 7 O. W. R. 136: Seaman v. Perry (1907), 9 O. W. R. 537. affirmed, 761, and Me-Donald v. Dausson (1904), 8 O. L. R. 72, 3 O. W. R. 773, followed. Doherty v. Mac-donell (1909), 14 O. W. R. 638.

Convenience of witnesses-Expense. -In an action for damages for alleged false representations regarding a farm in the county of Grey, made at Owen Sound, where the plaintiff, defendant, his solicitor and a third party were present, it was held that it was eminently a case for trial at Owen Sound. McDonald v. Park (1903), 2 O. W. R. 812. 972, and Gardiner v. Beattie (1905). 6 O. W. R. 975, affirmed (1906), 7 O. W. R. 136, followed. Clemens v. Faulkner (1909), 14 O. W. R. 637.

County Court action - Contract -Agent's representations.]—Action on a writ-ten contract, admittedly executed by de-Defence, misrepresentation plaintiff's agent. County Court action — Venue improperly laid by plaintiff — Costs of motion to change — Affadavit — Solicitor,]—Motion by defendant to change venue and transfer action to the County Court of Northumberland and Durham from the County Court of Victoria. Case under Rule 529 (b), which in Corniel v. Irvin, 2 O. W. R. 466, it was held to apply to the County Court—Held, there was nothing to satisfy what was said in Pollard v, Wright, 16 P. R. 507, to be necessary to have a change of venue. Not only was there no proof of "a very strong case," but, strictly speaking, there was no proof that could be considered. The only affidavit was one of plaintiff's solicitor. According to Hood v. Cronkrite, 4 P. R. 279 (per Draper, C.J.), affidavits on these motions should be made by the party and not by his solicitor, who can only repeat what his client has told him. Attention drawn to this in Baker v. Weldon, 2 O. W. R. at p. 434. The solicitor's affidavit was vague and indefinite. If plaintiff could not expect to obtain an order to have the trial at Lindsay. Leach v. Bruce, 4 O. W. R. 441, 9 O. L. R. 380.

County Court action against executors for specific legacy—County Courts Act. R. S. O. (1897), c. 55, ss. 23 (10), 36—Pleading—Witnesses—Convenience.—Order granted defendant to transfer an action from County Court of York to that of Hastings as the County Courts Act, R. S. O. (1897), c. 55, ss. 23 (10) and 36 (1), require that actions by a legate seeking payment or delivery of a legacy shall be brought and tried in the Courts where letters probate were issued or where the deceased resided. Macdonald v. Park, 2 O. W. R. 972, followed. Curlette v. Vermityca (1910), 15 O. W. R. 863.

Motion by plaintiff to change Mistake in laying venue — Solicitor's slip —Costs — Speedy trial. Garland v. York Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 7 O. W. R. 322.

Motion for — Convenience for evidence and acitnesses — Order granted.]—Motion for a change of venue from County Court of York to County Court of P. E. county. The action was for the price of cream separators and upon promissory notes alleged to have been endorsed by defendant. Defendant denied the endorsement and alleged that the separators were useless.—Master in Chambers granted the order asked on the ground that the evidence as to the alleged defects in the separators would be found at or near Picton. Empire Cream Separator Co. v. Pettypiece, 13 O. W. R. 740, 902, distinguished.—Gardiner v. Beattie, 6 O. W. R. 975, 7 O. W. R. 130, followed. Empire Cream Separator v. Ross (1910), 16 O. W. N. 922, 2 O. W. N. 26.

Motion for on grounds of fair trial and prejudice.]—Plaintif brought action to recover $3.700 which he alleged he was induced to invest in shares of the Toronto Roller Bearing Co., by fraudulent representations of defendant. Defendant was at that time the minister of the First Methodist Church at Owen Sound. The sales in question, with others, were admittedly made by defendant to persons in Owen Sound and throughout the county of Grey. Defendant alleged that such a strong feeling had been raised against him in Owen Sound and throughout the county that it would be impossible for him to have a fair and impartial trial before a jury of that county. Statement of claim was delivered but no place of trial was named. Afterwards an order was made allowing Owen Sound to be named, subject to right of defendant to move to change. Defendant was willing to have case remain at Owen Sound if the jury notice was waived, but plaintiff would not consent to this.—Master in Chambers held, 16 O. W. R. 939, 2 O. W. N. 43, that in a case so vital to defendant he was entitled to have a trial before a jury of some other county, and this had better be at Toronto, as it seemed probable that several of the necessary witnesses would be found here, or would have to come from Montreal. Costs in the cause.—Latchford. J., affirmed above judgment. Allen v. Turk (1910). 17 O. W. R. 40, 2 O. W. N. 52.

y. McAllister, 10 O. W. R. 117.

Motion to change—Time for.]—Application by the defendant to change the place of trial. A defence had been put in but the time for replying had not elapsed. The plaintiff's solicitor made affidavit that he intended specifically to reply:—Held, following Kidd v. Henderson, 20 N. S. R. 441, that the application was premature. Such an application should not in general be made until after issue joined or until it could clearly be seen what the issues would be. The defence raised many different questions, but, until the replication was in, no one could say whether or not the defendant would be obliged to sustain the whole of them by evidence. Balcom v. Croft, 20 C. L. T. 412.

Motion to set aside—Notice of trial.]—Plaintiff's statement of claim laid venue at Yarmouth, but as case did not come on for trial at Yarmouth, but as case did not come on for trial at Yarmouth sittings, he gave notice of trial at Tusket. Defendant moved to set aside notice.—Meagher, J., held, that plaintiff had the right to try his case at any place in the county in which the place of trial named in statement of claim was situated. Motion dismissed with costs. Crosby V, Yarmouth Elec. Co. (1910), 8 E. L. R. 542.

Naming place of trial in writ of summons — Nullity.]—The mention of a place of trial in a writ of summons not specially endorsed has no binding effect, and the plaintiff is free to name another in his statement of claim. St. Mary's and Western Ontario Ruc. Co. v. Webb, 18 O. L. R. 336, 13 O. W. R. 903.

No adequate reason for — Books of defunct company — Relevant entries could be verified and admitted.]—Motion by defendant to change venue in these actions from Welland to Toronto:—Held, that there was no adequate reason for any change, and the motion in each case should be dismissed with costs. The books, etc. spoken of in defendant's second affidavit, being those of a defunct company, could easily be taken to Welland if required, but copies of any relevant entries could, no doubt, be verified here and admitted. Mckeedie v. Dalton (1970), 15 O. W. R. 875.

No sufficient ground to postpone trial.]—Motion to change venue from Toronto to Port Arthur:—Held, that the evidence as to the contract in question would be largely documentary and there was no good reason to postpone the trial for five months. Motion dismissed with costs in the cause, defendant to be allowed extra costs, if it is shewn that the expense of the trial at Toronto has been greater than it would have been at Port Arthur. Can. St. Car Adv. Co. v. Port Arthur (1910), 15 O. W. R. 170.

Number of witnesses—Defendants reflected to give names—Increased expense.]—
Master in Chambers refused defendants change of venue from Hamilton to Toronto. Defendants stated they had 10 witnesses in Toronto but refused to give names or shew what they would prove. Plaintif had only 4 witnesses, 2 in Toronto. Increased expense by trial at Hamilton only $20. Not sufficient to take away plaintiffs right to have trial at Hamilton. There are serious objections to bringing cases from outside to Toronto; almost inevitably increases expenses.—Cameron v, Driscoll, 17 O. W. R. 649, 2 O. W. N. 338, and Saskatchevon, etc., v. Leadley, 9 O. L. R. 526, 4 O. W. R. 441, followed. Dickenson v, Toronto Rv. Co. (1911), 18 O. W. R. 431, 2 O. W. N. 833, Preponderance of convenience — County Court action. James v. Shemilt, 7 O. W. R. 828.

Preponderance of convenience — County Courts Act — Action by relative of registrar.]—The plantiff's right to select the place of trial is not lightly to be interfered with, and the onus is on the defendant moving to change the venue under s. 68 of the County Courts Act. to shew that the preponderance of convenience is against the place selected.—Under s. 70 of the Act, the venue will not be changed because the plaintiff is a near relative of the registrar of the Court in which the action is begun, unless indeed it is shewn that the registrar himself is the true plaintiff. Phair v. Sutherland, 12 B. C. R. 298.

Residence of parties — Change—Sheriff a party — Affidavits — Solicitors — Costs. Harcus v. Macdonald, 3 O. W. R. 411, 445.

Residence of parties — Convenience of totinesses — Expense.] — Where plaintiffs were induced to buy a horse by alleged false representations, it was held, that if plaintiffs would undertake to rely on the alleged misrepresentation as to the age of the horse alone, there would appear to be no reason for making a change in the place of the trial. Faragher v. Begg (1909), 14 O. W. R. 571.

Residence of plaintiff — Statement of claim.] — Rule 529 provides that (a) the plaintiff shall, in his statement of claim, name the county town at which he proposes that the action shall be tried; (b) where the cause of action arose and the parties reside in the same county, the place so to be named shall be the county town of that county:—Held. that the residence of the plaintiff at the time of the delivery of the statement of claim, and not at the time of the issue of the writ of summons, is the time referred to in Rule 529 (b). Edsall v. Wray, 20 C. L. T. 389, 19 P. R. 245.

Statement of claim—Naming place of trial other than the proper one under Rule 529 (b) — Irregularity — Walver by pleading — Motion to change venue under Rule 529 (d) — Time for making — Necessity for defined issues — Practice — Costs. Cummings v. Berlin, 8 O. W. R. 552.

Stratford to Berlin — Onus on plaintiff — Con. Rule 529 (b).]—Plaintiff laid venue at Stratford because the Berlin autumn non-jury sittings were fixed too early to enable plaintiff to get ready for trial. The cause of action occurred on 18th April, 1910, but the action was not begun until 9th July. Defendant moved to change venue to Berlin. Master in Chambers granted order, holding that the place of trial should be Berlin, under Con. Rule 529 (b); the cause of action having arisen and parties resided in Waterloo county; that the onus was on plaintiff to make out a sufficiently strong case to retain venue at Stratford and that onus had not been satisfied, Costs to defendant in any event. Schult's v. Clemens (1910), 16 O. W. R. 924, 2 O. W. N. 26,

Toronto to Port Arthur—Witnesses— Empenae.]—Plaintiff sued for damages for injuries sustained by reason of defendants alleged negligence at Fort William. Plaintiff had since removed to Toronto, where he laid venue. Defendants moved to change venue to Port Arthur—Master in Chambers held, that it did not seem justifiable to interfere with plaintiff's choice of venue. as the number of witnesses at each place were about the same. Motion dismissed with costs in the cause. Brulott v. Grand Trunk Pacific Rw. Co. (1810), 16 O. W. R. 928, 2 O. W. N. 28.

Toronto to Sault Ste. Marle—Motion for — Portuguese interpreter necessary — None at place proposed for trial—Master in Chambers refused change of venue — No preponderance of convenience. Campbell v. Doherty, 18 P. R. 243, and Macdonald v. Dausson, 3 O. W. R. 775, 8 O. L. R. 72, followed. Seaman v. Perry, 9 O. W. R. 527, 761, specially referred to. Alves v. Kearns Brothers (1911), 19 O. W. R. 150, 2 O. W. N. 1093.

Transitory action — Cause of action arising in another county — Preponderance of convenience — Application to change venue,1—The mere fact that the cause of action arose in another county is not sufficient for a change of venue. There must be obvious preponderance of convenience in favour of the latter county. The onus is on the defendant. Farguharson v. Weeks, 6 E. L. R. 456.

Venue — Change—Preponderance of convenience — Cause of action — Residence of parties — Defendants out of the jurisdiction.]—Held, Rule 529, as to naming and changing the place of trial of an action, contains the general provision of clause (a) that the plaintiff shall name the place of trial, as qualified by clause (b), "where the cause of action arose and the parties reside in the same county. the place so to be named shall be the county town of that county." The Court held that the equity of the Rule governed a case in which the cause of action and arisen in a county in which all the parties to it who were within the jurisdiction resided, although there are other parties who reside outside of Ontaio. Sastachewen Land & Homestead Co. v. Leadley, 25 C. L. T. 227, 5 O. W. R. 449, 9 C.

Venue previously fixed by Judge — Master in Chambers has no jurisdiction to order change—Must apply to an equal authority.]—Brennan v. Bank of Hamilton (1911), 18 O. W. R. 841, 2 O. W. N. 804.

Waterloo to Essex—An action brought on 19th Nov., 1910, in County Count of Waterloo, to recover $425 for goods sold and delivered on order of defendant Johnston, who had allowed judgment to be entered against him by default—If defendants agree to terms order granted — Otherwise motion dismissed—Election within a week. Metal Shingle Co. v. Anderson (1911), 19 O. W. R. 71, 2 O. W. N. 1018.

Witnesses — Preponderance of material — Vehicle in question — Could be seen by Judge and jury — Costa, — Action to recover $300, price of a bus sold defendant, shipped from Sault Ste. Marie to Sarnia. Defendant moved to change venue from District Court at Sault Ste. Marie to Co. Q. of Lambton Co.—Master in Chambers held, that there was no preponderance of material shewn and as the vehicle in question was at Sault Ste. Marie, it could be seen there by the Judge and jury. The defendant was not called in by the plaintiff, but gave the advice gratuitously plaintiff, but gave the auvice gratuitously after seeing the horses. As a fact, nasal gleet is not a contagious disease, nor incurable. The plaintiff sued the defendant for damages measured by the value of the horses, and asserted that the defendant had said that the horses had glanders and should be the horses had glanders and should be the norses and glanders and should be shot, and that he (the defendant) would see that the plaintiff was paid the proper sum by the Dominion Government: — Held, that the onus of establishing this was on the plaintiff, and had not been met; that the defendant's story, that

VOLUNTARY ASSOCIATION.

Member—Fine—Action for — Pleading.]
—A voluntary association may exist and sue and be sued in the name of its members.—The fact that the parties signed a deed of association constitutes them members of that association, and it is not necessary to allege that they had made the cessary to an ege that they had made that necessary application, and were competent to be members of the association.—If a member fails to comply with the rules of an association, and thereby incurs a fine and forfeiture of his membership, the remaining members, suing him for the amount of the stipulated fine, are not obliged to render him any account for the fine demanded.

An allegation that the defendant refuses to comply with the conditions of membership is a sufficient mise en demcure, in an action for the recovery of a fine. Arcand v. Hamelin, 2 Que. P. R. 437.

WAREHOUSEMEN.

Ballment — Obligation of bailee — Covenant as to special care — Liability for loss from frost.] — A warehouseman is bound, as a depositary, to apply, in the keeping of goods warehoused with him, the care of a prudent administrator. The proviso, in a warehouse receipt. "but without responsibility for any loss or damage caused, for want of any special care or precaution," does not relieve him from that obligation. Hence, a warehouseman who receives boxes of lemons during the winter and allows them to freeze, is liable for the loss. Vipond v. Canada Cold Storage Co., 35 Que. S. C. 144.

Negligence — Damages — New trial.]
—In an action against the owners of a grain elevator for negligence in the care of grain, one of the grounds of negligence found by the jury was, that the grain had been taken into the elevator from the vessel while rain was falling, and the hatches had not been protected:—Held, that the responsibility of the defendants did not commence till the grain was delivered to them; that therefore there was no duty cast upon them to protect the grain during unloading; and a new trial was properly ordered, Judgment in 26 A. R. 389, 19 C. L. T. 266, affirmed. Dunn v. Preacut Elevator Co., 30 S. C. R. 620.

The effect of the transaction caused the areas to become unoccupied lands of the Crown, within the meaning of the statute, and upon their re-location, the water record in connection therewith continued to subsist as a right appurtenant to the joint pre-emption, Judgment in Eastern Townships Bank v. Partnership-Banks and banking-Bank Act - Liability of partners - Promissory notes — Negotiation — Extinguishment of debt — Securities — Release of partner — Covenant not to sue-Reservation of rights.] -The defendant M. was a partner with the defendant G. in a commission and produce business carried on in the same building as a storage business in which G, was also engaged. It was alleged by the plaintiffs that the defendant F. was a partner in both businesses. The account of the commission and produce business was kept at the plain-tiffs' bank. For the purpose of enabling the partnership to purchase the produce in which they dealt, the plaintiffs gave the partnership a line of credit in the form of an overdraft on their account. From time to time the plaintiffs discounted their promissory notes, the proceeds of which were placed to the credit of the account. The goods purchased by them were warehoused with the storage branch, and receipts signed in the name of "The Ottawa Cold Storage and Freezing Company" by G. were given to M. on behalf of the commission and produce business, and were from time to time in-dorsed over to and hypothecated with the plaintiffs as promissory notes were dis-counted. The transactions involved in this action were represented by ten warehouse receipts indorsed to the plaintiffs by M., with a memorandum of hypothecation signed by G. and a certificate of valuation by him, and ten promissory notes made on behalf of the commission and produce business to the order of M. and indorsed by him and G. While these notes were current, the businesses ceased, and the plaintiffs took pos-session, and found that there was a large discrepancy between the goods in store and the amounts specified in the warehouse re-ceipts. Before this action, and while in-terpleader proceedings in relation to the goods were pending, in which the plaintiffs desired to obtain the evidence of the defendant F., their solicitors, by their instructions, wrote to F.'s solicitor a letter stating that the plaintiffs had no evidence that F. was a member of the partnership known as "The Ottawa Cold Storage and Freezing Company," which was liable to the plain-tiffs upon certain promissory notes, and that the plaintiffs had authorised the writers to undertake that the plaintiffs would not attempt to hold F. liable for the notes, or any of them as a partner in the company:

-Held, upon the evidence, that there was no ground for differing from the conclusion of the trial Judge that the defendant F. was a partner in both branches of the business.—2. That in the solicitors' letter there was a sufficient reservation of the plaintiffs' rights against the partnership and those who were undoubtedly members of it to prevent the letter from being treated as having any greater effect than a covenant not to sue; the language afforded a strong presumption that the parties were dealing with the liability of the other two; and the surrounding circumstances with reference to which it must be construed, led to the same conclusion; and therefore the debt as security for which the warehouse receipts were given to the plaintiffs was not extinguished, and the plaintiffs were entitled to the benefit of the securities, if otherwise valid.—3. That there was a negotiation of a note and an actual advance at the time of the acquisition of each warehouse receipt; although on most occasions when a discount was effected the account was overdrawn, that was in the course of dealing, and the circumstance did not deprive the transaction of its character of a negotiation of the note, for the proceeds were placed freely at the disposal of the customers, and the drawings on the account continued as before. Halstead v. Bunk of Hamilton, 27 Que. 435, 24 A. R. 152, 28 S. C. R. 235, distinguished.—4. That the firm by which distinguished.—I that the him by warehouse receipts were given was not the firm to which they were given. M. being a member of the latter and not of the former; and G., in signing the warehouse receipts on behalf of the storage business, was not giving receipts "as of his own property," within the meaning of s, 2 (d) of the Bank Act. Since the Judicature Act. there exists no reason why if two different firms have a common partner an action should not be maintained by one against the other.—5. That, on the evidence, the plaintiffs had shewn that the goods were not in the warehouse when possession was taken. Judgment of Meredith, J., reversed. Ontario Bank v. O'Reilly, 12 O. L. R. 420, 8 O. W. R. 187.

ment cannot plead that he had kept the pavement in good condition and that the accident happened by the fault of the person injured—which would be reasons for the dismissal of the principal action, but not of the action in warranty.—If the plea of a defendant in warranty is not well founded in fact and law, he will be ordered to pay the costs of the action in warranty, although the principal action has been dismissed with costs, and the action in warranty comes to an end with it. Monette v. Montreal, 9 Que, P. R. 377.

Action en garantie - Pleading illfounded defence - Want of notice of action to defendant in principal action repair of highway — Remedy over of muni-cipal corporation.]—In an action in war-ranty by the corporation of the city of Montreal for damages caused by default to keep a pavement in repair, the defendant must content himself with pleading to the action in warranty, and allege that he is not re-sponsible for the damages claimed, because he has committed no fault, and has kept his part of the pavement in good condition, conformably to the city by-laws. The defendant in warranty cannot plead that the principal plaintiff has not given to the city cor-poration the notice of action required by law; no law obliges the city corporation to give such notice to a defendant in warranty, and the latter cannot complain of an irregularity in procedure committed by the principal plaintiff in regard to the principal defendant, Hoffman v. Montreal, 9 Que. P. R. 383.

Action in warranty—Right of action— Tort.]—An action in warranty does not lie unless the person called upon to warrant is bound to the same extent and in the same manner as the plaintiff in warranty.—No action in warranty lies in cases of delict or quasi-delict. Hull v. Gatineau Road Co., 7 Que. P. R. 397.

Defective sidewalks—Costs.]—If a defendant in warranty's plea is bad in law and in fact, this defendant will be condemned to the costs of the action in warranty, although the principal action has been dismissed with costs and that the action in warranty has also been dismissed at the same time. Monette v. Montreal, 11 Que. P. R. 177.

Garantie simple—Remedy of warrantee
—Incidental demand — Intervention — Recursory action after judgment in principal action.]—The warrantee in a case of simple warranty, cannot demand that his warrantor shall take up son fait et cause, and be sub-stituted for him as defendant in the principal action.—The warrantee was the choice of an incidental demand to make the warrantor intervene for the purpose of contesting the action and abiding by the judgment, or, after that has been pronounced of a recursory action to recover the amount of the judgment and costs. In the first case, as in the second. the warrantor cannot be ordered to pay even the costs of the demand in warranty, unless the principal demand is itself followed by judgment against the warrantee. Montreal Street Rw. Co. v. the warrantee. Montreal Street Rw. Co. v. St. Louis, 18 Que. K. B. 160, 10 Que. P. R. 133.

Implied warranty-Liability for flooding - Evidence - Oral testimony - Coming — Eviaence — Oral testimony — Com-mencement of proof in veriting.]—D. & Co. occupied. as tenants, the lower flat of a building, and T. the upper flats, of which he leased part to sub-tenants. D. & Co. were in the habit of turning off the water at night as a precaution against floodings. thereupon wrote them as follows: "Please do not turn the water off, except on Saturday afternoons and Sundays, and oblige, E. H. T." D. & Co. having complied with this request, a tap was subsequently left open by a sub-tenant of T., causing a flooding and damage. In an action brought by D. & Co. against T.:—Held, that the above writing was an implied warranty that T, would be liable for damages following a compliance with the request and caused thereby, or, at all events. was a commencement of proof in writing which rendered admissible parol testimony of an explict verbal warranty to the same effect. Dawson v. Thurston, 31 Que. S. C. 225.

Implied warranty-Liability for flooding - Evidence - Oral testimony - Commencement of proof in writing - Damages for injury to goods - Proof of .]-An undertaking to fulfil the obligation of another is a warranty, and must be express. Consequently, in a letter written by the lessee of an upper storey of a building to the lessee of a lower storey in these terms, "Please do not turn the water off, except on Saturday afternoons and Sundays, and oblige E. H. T.." is not an engagement to pay the damages suffered by the sub-tenants of the writer of the letter. in consequence of ac-quiescing in this demand. — The letter amounted only to a simple request for a favour, without any indication that the writer wished to contract, or had contracted, any obligation to the one to whom it was addressed. The letter could not serve as a commencement of proof in writing of any contract whatever. — Damages claimed for injury to goods must be established by direct and specific proof of deterioration and diminution in value. General proof of their original cost, of the fact that they are no longer merchantable, with an offer to abandon them to the defendant, is insufficient. Judgment in Daveson v. Thurston, 31 Que. S. C. 225, reversed, Thurston v. Daveson, 17 Que. K. B. 148.

Inscription in law.]—A plaintiff may, on proper occasion, in respect of the allegations of a plea, institute an action in warranty. Manetti v. Notre Dame de Gräces, 11 Que. P. R. 59.

Joinder of cases—Principal action and action in warranty.]—When the defendant in warranty has simply contested the action in warranty and has refused to intervene in the principal suit, and the final judgment has dismissed the principal suit and maintained the action in warranty by condemning the defendant in warranty to the damages claimed by the principal action and to the costs of both actions, the inscription in review by the defendant in warranty must be accompanied with a double deposit, inasmuch as the judgment appealed from decides two distinct and separate rights of action. Charge of annuity—Life tenant and remainderman—Apportionment—Damages—Security—Timber.]—A testator seized in fee of land, subject to a mortgage, to secure an annuity for his wife, devised the land to one for life, with remainder over in fee. After his death, the life tenant paid the annuity to the widow. She also sold the timber on the land, and the purchaser having begun to cut the timber, this action was begun to cut the timber, this action was be gun by the remainderman to restrain waste. The life tenant contended that she was en-titled to be subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee in respect to so much of the annuity as she paid, and that being so subrogated, the land was an insufficient security for her claim, and that she therefore had a right to cut down the timber:—Held, following Yates v. Yates, 28 Beav. 637, that the periodical payments of the annuity must be treated partly as interest which the tenant for life had to pay, and partly as principal for which she would have a charge on the inheritance, in the proportion which the value of the life estate bore to the value of the reversion :-Held, also that, on the evidence, the land was adequate security for the claim of the life tenant against it in that regard, and that the purchaser of the timber having purchased in good faith, an injunction could not be granted, but the life tenant was liable for damages in respect of the timber cut. Tenant for life — Repairs — Sale of timber.] — All the niceties of the ancient learning as to waste which obtain in England are not to be transferred without discrimination to a new and comparatively unsettled country like this province. It is laid down in the English authorities that tenant for life cannot cut down trees for repairs, and sell the same, but that he must use the timber itself in making repairs, and that to sell it is waste. Where, however, the house and buildings were in need of repairs, and proper timber and shingles were obtainable from a dealer, whereas the timber on the place was unsuitable for the repairs needed, and the tenant for life proposed to sell a sufficient amount of timber off the place to pay for what was required, and for that purpose only, and an injunction was sought to restrain him:—Held, that no case of waste was made out to justify an injunction, nor could damages be awarded if the timber was cut with due regard to the situation of the bush and the cleared land, and no unreasonable amount was taken off to recoup the cost of the timber used or to be used in the repairs, but that the parties if they wished might have a reference to ascertain to what amount and in what locality the timber should be cut. 1. Dams.

Blocking stream by dam — Riparian rights — Obstruction to mill. — An action claiming an injunction to restrain defendants from backing up the waters of the Carlton branch of the Tusket river by means of their dam in such a way as to obstruct the operation of plaintiffs mill, and damages for such obstruction. Judgment $150 for loss of operation and $15 for damages to mill floor. Crosby v. Yarmouth St. Railway Co. & Yarmouth Elec. Co. (1911), 9 E. L. R. 330, N. S. R.

Consent judgment—Construction. Moffatt v. Canada Lumber Co., 2 O. W. R. 571.

Dam on river—To supply power to town—Flooding plaintiffs' lands—Action for domages—Evidence of cause of flooding—Action and appeal dismissed with costs.]—Action by plaintiff to recover $5.000 damages for flooding his lands, alleged to have been caused by the erection by defendants of a dam at the Ragged Rapids, on Severn River, for the purpose of supplying and furnishing electric power for lighting and other purposes in the town.—Middleton, J., at the trial dismissed the action with costs.—Divisional Court held, that the evidence did not shew beyond reasonable doubt that the dam was the cause of flooding plaintiff's lands. Appeal dismissed with costs. Doolittle v. Town of Orillia (1911). 18 O. W. R. 673, 2 O. W. N. 896.

Fishing and game rights.]—The lessee of lands under the fish and game laws of Quebec (62 Vict. c. 23 and 24 and 1 Edw. VII. c. 12), having the right "to take and retain exclusive possession of lands leased by him and to prosecute in his own name any illegal possessor," is qualified to take legal proceedings against any one who, by the unlawful erection of a dam across a floatable stream, disturbs his rights of enjoyment, if not to have the dam removed, at least to recover the damages which it has caused. St. Anne Fish & Game Club v. River Ouelle Pulp & Lumber Co., 36 Que. S. C. 486.

Floatable stream.] — The owner of a farm crossed by a floatable stream has no right to erect a dam across the stream for the purpose of storing the water and allowing it to run out, as found convenient, by means of flushboards, for the purpose of increasing, when required, the depth of water in a river, into which the stream flows, and upon the banks of which the owner of the land owns and operates a saw mill, which, without this artificial aid, is not sufficiently powerful to draw the logs. A construction of this kind and for the object mentioned in Arts. 5535 et seq. R. S. Q., and in 54 V. (Que.) c. 25, as amended by 4 Edw. VII., c. 14. St. Anne Fish & Game Club v. River Ouelle Pulp & Lumber Co. (1909), 36 Que. S. C. 486.

Flooding land — Damages—Summary procedure—Costs of action—Dam—Owners—Tolls—Persons using dam.] — A certain proceaure—Costs of action—Dam—Oreners—Tolls—Persons using dam.]—A certain dam was the property of an improvement company incorporated under the Timber Slide Companies Act, R. S. O. c. 104, and the original defendants had used it for the purpose only of floating logs down the river. The improvement company were added as defendants. The action was for flooding the plaintiffs' lands by such dam:—Held, that, although (as decided in Blair v. Cheve, 21 C. Lr. T. 404), a plaintiff is not bound to proceed summarily upon such a claim, under R. S. O. c. S5, but has a right to bring an action in the ordinary way, yet, in the absence of any good reason for not proceeding under the special Act, a plaintiff who brings an action should not be allowed the costs of it. 2. There is nothing in the Act under which the added defendants were incorporated which confers upon them any right to ated which confers upon them any right to flood private property unless they have first taken the steps authorized by the Act for expropriating the property or settling the compensation to be paid for flooding it, which compensation to be plant for mooting it, when these defendants had not done. 3. Nor were the defendants assisted by ss. 15 and 16 of R. S. O. c. 140, for, even if the dam was erected before the plantiff's purchase of his property from the Crown, there was nothing to shew that the price he paid was reduced in consequence. 4. But s. 1 of R. S. O. c. 142, places the public advantage of allowing lumbermen carrying their logs to a market, above the private damage and inconvenience which may necessarily be caused to individual riparian proprietors by their doing so; and the original defendants were not liable for any damage sustained by the plaintiff by reason of their having, during any spring, autumn, or summer freshet, caused spring, autumn, or summer freshet, caused damage to the plaintiff by using or repairing or maintaining any power; and that, upon this head, although they had not yet made use of the water power otherwise than in constructing a dam, they could claim the depreciation in the commercial value of such water power. Flooding lands of riparian owner— Cause of injury—Damages—Release—Statutory powers. Miller v. Beatty, 7 O. W. R. 605, 8 O. W. R. 326.

Grant of water power—Dam—Ownership by two persons in common—Agreement—Construction—Rights in regard to water—Surplus water—Injunction — Damages.]—The plaintiff and defendant owned grist mills on the Grand river, and were each seised in fee of an undivided half of dam No. 5, and both had the right, by agreement between them, to draw water therefrom "for their own purposes." The agreement provided for the maintenance and repair of the dam at the joint and equal expense of the parties, and that both should be equally interested in rents derived from supplying water to others.

For many years the parties and their pre-decessors had used the water as they re-quired it. The owner of a saw mill above the defendant's grist-mill had, under a lease from the common grantor of plaintiff and defendant, the right to use "surplus waters" stored by the dam and not required by the grist-mills. The right was continued by the separate owners of the grist-mills, and the plaintiff and the defendant, under the agreement referred to, shared equally in the renfendant acquired the saw-mill and the trouble began. Anglin, J., was of opinion that each party had an absolute right to use, in a reasonable manner, for their own purposes, so much of the dammed water which might properly be used for generating power as h required, not exceeding one-half of the whole and so much of the remaining water which might be properly so used, as would not inmight be properly so used, as well and the terfere with or impair the user in a reasonable manner by the other party of the water to which he was entitled, and which he from time to time required. "Their own purtime to time required. "Their own purposes" he construed as meaning any lawful uses to which the water might reasonably be put in a business owned and conducted by the party, as distinguished from a grant or lease to a third party of the right to use such water. Any water not required by either party for "their own purposes," thus defined, was "surplus water," Caledonia Milling Co. v. Shirra Milling Co., 25 C. L. T. 154, 5 O. W. R. 170, 9 O. L. R. 213.

Industrial purposes — Recourse of the owners of flooded lands—Future damage.]—Recourse by action is open to the owner of an immovable flooded by the construction of a dam in a river for industrial purposes, for only the damages actually suffered and not for those arising from the permanent depreciation of the flooded land. Bureaw v. Gale (1909), 36 Que. S. C. S5.

Injunction — Damages — C. C. 400, 508; C. S. L. C., c. 51; R. S. Q., as 5535, 5535, 5535, 1—A riparian proprietor whe rects a dam across a stream under the authority of the law, cannot be restrained by injunction from using the water in such manner as may be necessary for the operation of his power house.—The only recourse possessed by those who have been injured by this usage is for damages. Green v. Blackburn (1910), 10 R. L. n. s. 420.

Injury by—Statutory right—Action for treepass—Injunction—Arbitration clauses—Remedy by action—Failure of company to proceed under their Act.]—In an action for treepass on the appellant's land and interference with his water right, the respondents pleaded that they were authorized thereunto by their incorporating Act, 36 V. c. 102 (O.), and that the appellant's remedy (if any) was to proceed by arbitration under the Act.—Held, that according to the true construction of s. 5, the arbitration clauses only come into operation on disagreement as to the amount of purchase money, value, or damages arising after definite notice of expropriation and treaty or tender relative thereto; and that, as the respondents had not proceeded in accordance with the directions of their Act, the appellant had not lost his remedy by action.—An injunction was rightly granted in this case, but its effect will cease on the respondents proceeding to expropriate in the manner directed by their Act.—Judgment in 24 C. L. T. 201, 34 S. C. R. 650, reversed, and judgments in 1 O. W. R. 657, 2 O. W. R. 653, restored, with a variation. Saubby v. London Water Commissioners, [1906] A. C. 110.

Injury to flow of water — Riparian owners—Damages — Remedy — Action — Arbitration.]—In 1876 C., owner of two lots bordering on a river, sold one to the respondents, with all ways, watercourses, etc., "as such purchaser may choose to disturb, impede, and cause to rise by any dams or other artificial means." The vendor reserved his right to damages which might be caused by right to damages which hight be caused by the construction of dams by the purchaser, such damages to be fixed by arbitration. In 1880 C. sold to the appellants a lot situated 1,500 feet above that of the respondents, opposite to a natural fall, and the appellants constructed a dam there. The respondents having raised their dam, the appellants claimed damages resulting from the penning back of the water, and especially from the fact that the height of their fall was diminished:—Held, that in spite of the fact that s. 5535, R. S. Q., provides for the fixing of the amount of such damages by experts, the party injured has the right of recourse party injured has the right of recovered directly to the Courts, and that such right was not in this case taken away by the arbitration clause in the act of sale of 1876. 2. That, in spite of the concession by C. to the respondents of the right of utilizing the water power and of constructing dams, appellants, the assigns of C., could claim not only the damage caused to their lands and buildings, but also that caused to their water dam necessary to facilitate the transmission of their timber down the stream, 5. The rights given to persons desiring to float their own timber down a stream should not, however, be extended to companies incorpor-ated for the purpose of making a profit by improving streams and charging tolls to lumbermen desiring to use them; and this view is strengthened by s. 15 of R. S. O. c. 194. Neely v. Peter, 22 C. L. T. 297, 4 O. L. R. 293, 1 O. W. R. 499, affirmed, and, in addition to the damages awarded to the plaintiff against the added defendants, an injunction was granted restraining those defendtion was granted restraining those defendants from penning back the waters of the river in question, but the operation of the injunction was suspended for a year to enable those defendants to acquire the right to overflow the plaintiff's land, under the provisions of R. S. O. 1897 c. 194, or otherwise. Neely v. Peter, 23 C. L. T. 166, 5 O. L. R. 381, 2 O. W. R. 114.

Injury to land — Assessment of danatrom—Jurisdiction of equity — Diversion of stream — Riparian owner — Mandatory injunction.]—A dam erected in 1853 across a natural stream upon land owned by the defendants, and used for the defendants' purposes, was in 1891 altered in respect of its devices for carrying off surplus water by the defendants' immediate predecessors in title, contrary to the protest of the plaintiff, a riparian owner since 1880. tiff, to the insufficiency of the alterations in the dam, and it was alleged that material damage was done to the plaintiff's land, but the evidence as to its precise nature and extent was slight and unsatisfactory, and the defendants denied any liability:—Held, that the questions involved being the liability of the defendants, and the extent of the injury sustained by the plaintiff, and the Court doubting its jurisdiction to assess the damages, the bill should be dismissed, and the plaintiff left to his remedy at law. A diversion of a natural stream from its natural channel in front of the land of a riparian proprietor is actionable at his instance without proof of actual or probable damage. A mandatory injunction will not be granted except in cases where extreme or very serious damage will ensue if the injunction adopted in Jackson v. Normanby Brick Co., [1899] 1 Ch. 438, approved of. Saunders v. Richards Co., 21 C. L. T. 510, 2 N. B. Eq. R. 303.

Injury to land — Dumages—Statutory compensation — Action — Prescription.]—
The statute which permits owners of mills to construct dams upon watercourses, for the purpose of working their mills, creates in their favour a legal servitude over the lands upon which such dams make the waters flow. The exercise of such servitude makes them responsible to the riparian proprietors for the damages which it causes to them. 2. The special mode indicated by Art. 5536, R. S. P. Q., for determining the amount of compensation there mentioned does not take away from the complainant the right of recourse to the ordinary tribunals. 3. The damages caused not being the consequence of a tort, the action t recover such damages is not prescribed in two years. Larochelle v. Price, 19 Que. S. C. 403.

Mill privileges — Dam across stream—Raising height of — Easement — Flooding neighbours' lands—Statute of Limitation—Lackes—Injunction — Reference—Log driving—R. S. O. (1897), c. 142, s. 1—Costs.]—Defendant mill owners, having mill privileges on Crow river, built a new dam across the river. Plaintiffs brought action claiming damages for flooding their several properties, claiming that the new dam was considerably higher than the old dam.—Evidence was received as to the height of both the old and new dam—Teetzel, J., 16 O. W. R. 846, 1 O. W. N. 1133, found in favour of defendants on the evidence that the new dam was in fact no higher than the old dam, but that the old dam was in a very leaky condition, therefore, the new dam raised the level of the water on the neighbours' lands. Reference ordered to ascertain the damages sustained by plaintiffs. Having regard to the great delay of which all plaintiffs were guilty, and in their failure to establish that defendants raised the height of their dam, injunction was refused. Costs reserved until after report of referee.

WATER AND WATERCOURSES.

Divisional Court affirmed above judgment as to three of the plaintiffs, and reversed the judgment as to the fourth plaintiff. In the latter case the Court ordered that the case should be reopened and the matter disposed of in the least expensive manner possible. If parties agree it may be tried by the referee who disposes of the cases of the other three plaintiffs, if not then the case must go to trial. All costs to be in discretion of trial tribunal. Natural water course—Rights of ripar-ian owner—Injury to or invasion of rights of owners below — Action lies though no of others were actual damage sustained.]—H. had erected a mill in 1815, and about ten years before this action, L. built a mill higher up on the same stream. The natural flow of water at many seasons of the year would not keep up a head of water sufficient to drive the mills, and the defendant was in the daily habit of shutting the gates of his dam and stopping the water for considerable portions of time, when it was prevented from flowing to plaintiff's mill, who shewed a continued interruption of the natural flow of the interruption of the natural flow of the stream. At the trial the Judge told the jury that the running water of a natural stream was public property which no one had a right to interrupt or detain, that though slight detentions without actual damage might not be actionable yet substantial and continuous interruptions were so, even without actual damage to parties below, because if suffered for 20 years the right to continue them would be acquired, and that if they found defendant had been in the labit of detaining the water whereby its flow to plantiff's mill was interrupted, the plaintiff would be entitled to nominal damages for the injury to his right—The jury found for plaintiff, damages one shilling, the effect of which finding was that defendant has caused substantial interruption of the natural flow of the water, but that plaintiff has sustained no actual loss thereby. - A new trial was moved for, for misdirection, on the grounds (1) that every riparian owner has a right to erect a dam, and daily to detain the water, for such spaces of time as may be necessary to fill a dam of such size as is reasonably sufficient to drive his mill. (2) That this sufficient to drive his mill. (2) That this was at most a mere injury to a right without any actual damage, for which no action lies.—Held, Peters, J., that an action would lie without actual damage and that the rule for a new trial must be discharged. Howatt v. Laird & Crew (1850), 1 P. E. I. 7.

Navigable river—Interference with flow of water—Action for damages for having to close down mill.]—An action by plaintiff to recover $360 for damages from being compelled to close down his mill from lowness of water alleged to have been caused by defendants through erection of a dam across the river. At the trial judgment was awarded plaintiff for $8390 and costs.—Divisional Court dismissed defendants' appeal with costs. Ishervood v. Ontario & Minnesota Power Co. (1911), 18 O. W. R. 459, 2 O. W. N. 651.

Navigable stream—Damming tributary stream of a river to raise the latter during low acctor—Leases of land for hunting and fishing—Rights of the lessees — Recourse against those disturbing them in their enjoyment.]—The owner of land traversed by a navigable stream has not the right to build in it a dam to keep back the head waters and let them flow at his will, by means of sluices, to raise at need a river into which it flows, on which the owner has and operates a saw mill, but which without this artificial aid would not be strong enough to drive the mill. A construction of this kind and for this purpose is not covered by Art. 5535 et seq. R. S. O., and in the Act 54 V. c. xxv., amended by 4 Edw. VII. c. xiv. The lessee of lands under the game laws of Quebec (62 V. c. xxiii. and xxix, Edw. I., c. xii.) having the right "to take and keep the possession and to bring in his own name all actions against the illegal possessor," is entitled to sue any one who, by illegally constructing a dam in a navigable river, disturbs him in his enjoyment, if not to remove the dam, at any rate for damages suffered through it. Prescription — Scrvitude — Aggravation.]—The owner of a dam, which has been standing for more than 30 years, cannot oppose a 30 years' prescription to an action brought by a riparian proprietor to recover damages caused by waters backed down by such dam, during the five years preceding the date of the suit, especially when the owner of the dam has during these five years changed and aggravated the exercise of his legal servitude. Roy v. Royal Paper Mills Co., 21 Que. S. C. 533.

Raising height of dam — Nuisance — Measure of damages—New objection raised on appeal — Prescription — R. S. Q., 1888, Arts. 5535, 5536—Arts. 2242, 2261 C. C.]— The provisions of the statutes respecting the improvement of watercourses in the Province of Quebec, permit the raising of the height of dams erected by proprietors of lands adjoining streams; this right is subject to the liability to make compensation for all damages resulting to other persons from such works. — The mode of ascertainment of such damages by the arbitration of experts provided by article 5536 of the Revised Statutes of Quebec. 1888, does not exclude the right of action to recover compensation in the Courts.—In such cases the measure of damages is the amount of compensation for injuries sustained up to the time of the action; they ought not to be assessed once for all, en bloc, but recourse may be reserved in regard to future damages arising from the same cause.

—Per Idington and Anglin, JJ.—Objections based upon provisions of enabling statutes which have not been set up in the pleadings nor relied upon in the Courts below cannot be entertained upon an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada. Hamelin v. Bannerman, 31 S. C. R. 534 followed.—Per Anglin, J.—An action, brought in 1908, for recovery of damages in respect of injuries occasioned by improvements executed in 1904, upon works constructed many years before that time, is not subject to the prescription of thirty years; nor can the prescription of thirty years; nor can the prescription of which we would be supplied where the action has been commenced within two years from the time the injuries complained of were sustained. Gale v. Bureau (1910), 44 S. C. R. 305.

Raising level of watercourse — Increased danger from ice—Vis major—Climatic conditions.]—The owner of a mill who builds a dam or raises an existing dam in a river so as to change the level of the water, is responsible for the damage caused by the breaking up of the ice in the spring, the conditions of which are rendered more dangerous by the change.—A defendant in such a case cannot plead by way of exception vis major by reason of the exceptional rigour of the winter in which the ice was formed, that being within ordinary contemplation. Archambault v. Montreal Light, Heat, and Power Co., 29 Que. S. C. 356.

Riparian proprietors - Right to dam up the stream—No right to interrupt regular flow.]—Rights of a riparian proprietor to use of water flowing past his land explained and defined .- Every riparian proprietor has a right to the reasonable use of the water flowing past his land, namely, for his domestic purposes and for his cattle, and this, without regard to the effect which such use may have, in case of a deficiency, upon proprietors lower down the stream, has, also, the right to the use of the water for any other purpose, provided he does not thereby interfere with the rights of other proprietors, either above or below him. Subject to this condition a riparian proprietor may dam up the stream for the purpose of a mill, or divert the water for the purpose of irrigation. But he has no right to in-terrupt the regular flow of the stream, if he thereby interferes with the lawful use of the water by other proprietors, and inflicts upon them a sensible injury. Where a party pur-chased a piece of land with the right to use the water of a river in Lower Canada subject to a preference in favour of a mill thereafter to be built, and which preference was to be exercised in a particular mode, such purchaser is not bound by its exercise in a different mode, and in favour of a dif-ferent mill. The purchase of the right to use of a portion of the water of a river cannot prevent a subsequent purchaser from the same vendor of another portion, from diverting the water by virtue of a right which existed prior to the first purchase. There is no difference between the law of Lower Canada and the English law upon these points. Minor v. Gilmour (1859). C. R. 3, A. C. 230.

Riparian proprietors - Servitude -Pleading—Petitory or possessory action.]—
The plaintiff had sold to the defendant's grantor a lot bounded by a river, with the right to build a mill there, to construct a dam, and to place such dam upon the prodam, and to piace such dam upon the pro-perty of the vendor on the other side of the river, and to pass and repass over the pro-perty of the defendant to comunicate be-tween the dam and a bridge. The dam built by the purchaser having been carried away by the waters, the defendant, in spite of the protest of the plaintiff, built a new one up the stream, one end of which rested upon the land of the plaintiff. The latter then began a possessory action against the defendant, claiming an injunction, the demolition of the dam, and $150 damages. The defendant pleaded that he had only exercised the right which the plaintiff had given to his grantor. The plaintiff replied on grounds of law that the defendant was joining a petitory action with a possessory one, and also replied that the defendant's grantor by building the old dam where he built it had fixed the place where the servitude was to be exercised :-Held, that the plea of the defendant was bad in law in that it combined the petitory and possessory. 2. That before building the new possessory. 2. That before building the new dam the defendant should have obtained perdam the deremant should have obtained permission from the plaintiff or from the Court.

3. That Arts. 503, C. C., and 5535, R. S. Q., do not authorize a riparian proprietor to build a dam upon the land of another riparian proprietor upon the other side of the river, without the permission of the latter, but are applicable only to the use of the watercourse. Use of watercourses — Right to build dams—Responsibility for damages.] — The proprietor of an immovable crossed by a floatable watercourse, has the right to build thereon a dum for the purpose of holding back the head waters and to increase, by allowing the water to escape through sluices, the volume of waters in a river into which such waters flow and upon whose banks such proprietor has and operates a saw-mill. This right arises as well from Art. 5535 et seq. R. S. Q. as from 54 Vict. (Que.) c. 25 as amended by 4 Edw. VII. c. 14. It exists, however, subject to the obligation of paying such damages as may follow the exercise of such right. Rivière Ouelle Pulp & Lumber Co. v. Ste. Anne Fish and Game Club, 19 Que. K. B. 178.

2. DITCHES AND WATERCOURSES ACT.

Award — Engineer—Appointment—Revocation—Notice—Jurisdiction — Estopp——Appeal.] — The defendants municipal council appointed R. their engineer, in manner provided by the Ditches and Water-courses Act, R. S. O. c. 285, s. 4 (1), in April, 1895, and he accepted the office and acted and continued in it. In 1898 tays, without any notice to R., and without any by-law expressly revoking his appointment, passed a by-law purporting to appoint S. as such engineer. In both appointments the form of by-law prescribed by the Act was used; the latter by-law in no way referred to the former or to R.:—Held, that the prior appointment had not been revoked; that S. did not become "the lengineer," and that an award purporting to be made by him as such engineer under the Act was invalid:—Held, also, even supposing that consent could confer jurisdiction, or that the plaintiffs might waive or be estopped from urging an objection to S.'s jurisdiction, that there was no reasonable evidence of any such consent, waiver, or estoppel; for the plaintiffs' requisition called for "the engineer," and it was the act of the township clerk which called in S. instead of R.; the plaintiffs' did not know who was the engineer; they had heard that S. had been appointed, but neither of them knew that R.'s appointment had not been revoked by by-law of which he had had notice. The point was raised upon an appeal against the award and was overruled; but, as it went to the root of the jurisdiction of the whole proceedings, including such appeal, there was nothing in such proceedings which could prevent a consideration of the question now. Turtle v. Township of Euphemia, 20 C. L. T. 71, 31 O. R. 404.

Drains Increasing flow of natural stream—Outlet—Engineer's award — Par-tics—Joinder of defendants — Joint tort-fea-sors—Damages—Injunction.]—The owner of land on the banks of a natural stream has no legal ground of complaint if riparian owners above him use the stream as an outlet for drains made by them in the reasonable agri-cultural use of their lands, although the result is to increase the amount of water in the stream and to flood part of his land. But this principle does not apply to persons not riparian owners, who, by proceedings under the Ditches and Watercourses Act, obtain an outlet to the stream; and they are liable to a person injured by the increased amount of water. A proper outlet under the Ditches and Watercourses Act is one which enables the water to be discharged without injur-iously affecting the lands of another, and, if the outlet chosen by the engineer is not in fact a proper outlet, his award is no protection to the persons acting under it as against a person not a party to it. An action to re-cover damages for flooding his land was brought by a riparian owner against a number of persons who were respectively parties ber of persons who were respectively parties to the construction of several drains under the Ditches and Watercourses Act, the alle-gation being that by means of the drains the flow of water had been unlawfully increased to the plaintiff's injury. Evidence was given as to the quantum of the plaintiff's damage, and judgment was given against all the de-fendants, for the whole amount:—Held, that, while the defendants who were parties re-spectively to the construction of each drain were jointly liable for any damage attributable to that drain, the different sets of defendants were not joint tort-feasors, and had been improperly joined as defendants; that a joint assessment of damages was improper; and that, there being no evidence of the proportion of damage attributable to each set of defendants, only nominal damages and an injunction could be awarded. McGillivray v. Township of Lochiel, 24 C. L. T. 346, 8 O. L. R. 440, 4 O. W. R. 193.

Municipal corporations — "Otener" — Hightways.]—A municipal corporation is an "owner," within the meaning of the Ditches and Watercourses Act, of highways under its jurisdiction, and as such may initiate proceedings under that Act. Where it has, pursuant to an award in proceedings initiated by it under that Act, constructed, without negligence, a drain from a highway to a river through an adjoining owner's land, it is not liable to make compensation under the Municipal Act to that adjoining proprietor on the ground that his land has been injuriously affected by the drain. In re McLellan and Township of Chinguacousy, '20 C. L. T. 302, 27 A. R. 355.

Railway.]-An award under the Ditches and Watercourses Act directed that a drain should be built through the land of private owners as far as a highway of the defend-ants, then by the defendants along the high-way to a point opposite the land of a railway company, and then by the railway company along the highway, or across the highway and through their own land, as far as might be necessary to give a proper outlet. Impat be necessary to give a proper outer. The drain was built by contract under the Act as far as the point opposite the railway company's land, but the railway company whose railway had been declared to be a work for the general advantage of Canada, refused to recognize the award or do the work directed. The defendants then built a culvert across the highway and brought the water to the railway company's land, and water to the ranway company shad, and the railway company thereupon built an embankment to keep it back, the result being that it overflowed from the highway ditches and caused damage to the plaintiff: Held, that there was no jurisdiction under the Ditches and Watercourses Act, as far as the railway company were concerned; that the award was therefore no protection to the defendants; that the damage resulted from the construction of the culvert; and that the defendants were liable therefor. Crimmon v. Township of Yarmouth, 21 C. L. T. 19, 27 A. R. 636.

Powers of waterworks company— Approval by Lieutenant-Governor in Coun-cil — Condition precedent — Damages—In-junction — Acquiescence — Laches.]—By s. of the Sandon Waterworks and Light Company Act (B. C., 1896, c. 62), the company were authorized to divert water from certain creeks and to use so much of the water of the creeks as the Lieutenant-Governor in council might allow, with power to construct such works as might be necessary construct such works as might be necessary for making the water power available, but the powers were not to be exercised until the plans and sites of the works had been approved by the Lieutennt-Governor in council. The company got their plans and sites approved, and proceeded with the construction of a tank and a flume on the plainstraction of a tank and a man be of the partitiffs' lands for the purpose of diverting water:—Held, that the authority of the Lieutenant-Governor in council to divert was a condition precedent to the company's right to interfere with the plaintiffs' soil, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to damages and a mandatory injunction. submission to an injury, such as the erection of a building by another on one's land, for any time short of the period limited by statute for the enforcement of the right of action, cannot take away such right; to amount to laches raising equities against the person on whose land the erection was placed, there must have been some equivocal conduct on his part inducing the expenditure by the person erecting it. Judgment of Irving, J., 24 C. L. T. 39, reversed. Byron N. White Co. v. Sandon Waterworks & Light Co., 10 B. C. R. 361.

Proces-verbal — Servitude—Artificial vatercourse—Municipal corporations — Parties.]—A proces-verbal establishing an artificial watercourse to bring water from a higher land to a lower, which would not flow there naturally, is illegal and will be annulled.—2. In an action to annul such a proces-verbal, it is not necessary to make a county council which, sitting in appeal, had amended the said proces-verbal, a party to the suit. Brouillet v. Parish of St. Severin, 22 Qu. S. C. 159.

Right to divert stream to prejudice of other riparian owners.]—The right of the Seigneur in Lower Canada to the water of an unnavigable river flowing through his fief does not entitle one of several co-seigneurs to divert the waters for his exclusive use, which had been accustomed for eleven years to supply the mills of another of his co-seigneurs. Judgment of the Court of Appeal for Lower Canada, affirming judgment of the Court of King's Bench for the District of Three Rivers set aside. St. Louis v. St. Louis (1841), C. R. 1 A. C. 148.

4. INJURY TO NEIGHBOURS' LANDS.

Adjoining proprietors of pulp mills -Cross-wall - Tail-race - Rights not ex-tinguished - No alteration of tenement -Enjoyment of easement - License - Damages.] - An action between pulp manufacturers carrying on business in the village of Thorold, on adjoining properties in reference to their respective water rights. The plain-tiff had a stone wall for 25 years and the defendants took down the wall, and the action was brought for trespass and for a decree that the defendants had no right to use the tail-race on the plaintiff's property. defendants denied claims and counterclaimed, asking an injunction to restrain plaintiff's use of the tail-race. Britton, J., held, that the building of the wall did not extinguish any rights of the defendants, there being no alteration in the condition of the dominant tenement. That the work done and alterations made by the defendants were reasonably necessary for the enjoyment of their easement. That no damages were proved. Action dismissed with costs and counterclaim dismissed with costs. Davy v. Foley (1911), 19 O. W. R. 195, 2 O. W. N. 1028.

Crown domain—Banks of navigable and floatable rivers—Borders of islands—Trespass and trouble de possession—Action encomplainte.)—The banks of navigable and floatable rivers include the borders of islands in the same, as dependencies of the Crown domain. Hence an act done on an island at the water's edge, within the space that would form the bank river along the bed of the river, is no trespass or trouble de possession to the owner of the island, and gives him no right to sue en complainte.—2. The bed of non-tidal rivers extends to the highest water-mark reaches from natural periodical causes—crue habituelle.—3. The servitude for the public utility of a foot-road or towpath along the banks of navigable or floatable rivers exists on the shores of their islands, Clément v. Bourassa, 33 Que. S. C. 365.

Depression in highway — Filling up with earth—Permission of municipality — Diversion of veater upon house and land adjacent to highway — Basement — School board—Acts of agent—Instruction to contractors—Joint liability of board and contractors — Damages.] — The plaintiff, who was the owner of a corner lot in a town and of a house thereon, sue a school board and two individuals for damages caused by the individual defendants, who were contractors with the board for the excavation of the basement of a new school building, slacing (with the consent of the nayor of the town) some of the earth taken from this excavation upon the highway to the north-east of the plaintiff house, in a depression on the surface of the soil theretofore existing, which the plaintiff alleged was a natural water-course, whereby water, which would otherwise have escaped by means of this water-course, was gathered and turned back upon the plaintiff's land so as to fill the cellar in his house and seriously damage it:—Held, that, although the depression was not a watercourse, the defendants had placed, not even on their own lands, but on the land of another (apparently, indeed, with that other's consent, but that made no difference), an artificial mound of earth which collected water from much of the surrounding land and turned it back upon the plaintiff's land to his damage, and were liable therefor to the plaintiff. Hurdman v. North Eastern Ruc. Co., 3 C. P. D. 168, followed. It was not a case of an easement, because most of the water came, not from the plaintiff's land, but from elsewhere.—Ostrom v. Sills. 24 A. R. 526, distinguished.—One G. had been appointed by the board overseer of the excavation, and had instructed the two individual defendants to place the earth where it was in fact placed:—Held, that G. was acting within the scope of his general autiority as an agent of the board, and the board were bound by what he did, and liable to the plaintiff, as well as the contractors, who were not independent contractors.—Reference directed to damages, and principle upon which damages should be assessed, pointed out. Rennick v. Vermillion Centre 8, D. No. 1446 Trustecs (1910), 15 W. L. R. 244.

Discharging water on neighbour's land—Remedy—Landlord or tenant—Servitude.]—Where a lessee of the defendants' land, being in possession thereof and having a contract for future purchase contained in his lease, raised for the purpose of building operations for his own benefit, and not as mandatory of the defendants, the lower part of the leased land, with the effect of diverting to the plaintiff's adjoining land, and thereby causing him damage, the water which would otherwise have been discharged over the defendants' land:—Hedd, that the plaintiff's remedy was against the lessee, and that an order negatoric against the defendants, who claimed no servitude over the plaintiff's land, was unnecessary. Judgment of Court of King's Bench, Quebec, 11 Que, K. B. 173, reversed. Kiefler v. Le Sémmaire de Quebec, [1903] A. C. S5.

Ditches—Lower lands—Easement—Serviced — Rural lands—Municipal code—Action xépatoire.]—The owner of a lower-lying farm is bound, by virtue of Art. 501, C. C., to receive the water overflowing from the ditches of the neighbouring higher-lying farm, the necessary ditching not being included in the exception contained in that article, "sans que la main de l'homme y ait contribué." Difficulties of this nature, between the owners of rural lands, are of the administrative competence, and must be regulated according to the provisions of the Municipal Code. They afford no ground for the action négatoire. Lapointe v. Tellier, 32 Que, S. C. 529.

Flow of water — Guarantee—Exception to delay.]—In an action to relieve from a servitude as to the flow of water, the defendant who denies the right of a neighbour upstream has no right to a formal guarantee from him. Therefore, he cannot under this pretext, stay, by exception to the time of action brought, the progress of the principal action. Cf. Gauthier v. Darche, 1 L. C. J. 2.2%, and Gosselin v. Martel, 27 S. hbourmages Galber mill on Constant Creek, in the township of Grafton, brought netion against defendants, owners of a mill above plaintiff's, on same creek, to recover damages for injuries done to plaintiff by defendants in fouling the stream and obstructing the flow of water to plaintiff's mill, by throwing refuse in said creek and otherwise injuring the plaintiff.— Latchford, J., gave plaintiff judgment for $200 and costs, and granted injunction restraining defendants from further discharging refuse into the stream, to the injury of plaintiff. Operation of injunction suspended for four months to enable defendants to so alter their mill that no additional damage shall be done. Hunter v. Richards (1911), 18 O. W. R. 813, 2 O. W. N. 853.

Hydraulic works on river—Injury to lands by ice — Liability — Vis major — Climatic conditions.] — The owner of hydraulic works established upon a river, and the lessee who carries them on, are jointly and separately responsible for damages caused by the breaking up of ice formed, retained, and heaped up by such works. The defendants cannot in such an action plead vis major, by reason of the exceptional rigour of the winter in which the damage was done, that being in accordance with the ordinary conditions. Injunction — Nuisance — Construction or road — Flooting neighbouring land — Accumulation and discharge of water—Damages — Injunction. Scope of — Culverts — Municipal corporation.) — A farmer consented to water, which came through a cultivert, being carried off by means of a drain which he dug himself, across one corner of his farm. There was no agreement in writing, nor was there any expenditure of public money on the drain, and there was no consideration given for the use of the drain — Held, there was only a license to use the drain and such license was revocable, and that the plaintiff was also entitled to an injunction. Damages of $100 were also allowed. The cause was a recurring one which would ripen into an easement by prescription if permitted to continue long enough to become such. Taylor v. Collingwood, 6 O. Municipal cororation — Water supply — Erection of dams — Overflowing private property — Trespass — Damages — Authorisation by statute — Compensation — Remedy — Action — Pleading.]—The plaintiff, in the first count of his declaration, alleged that he was in possession of a lot adjoining Ludgate lake in the parish of Lancaster, and that the defendants penned back the waters of the lake, thereby overflowing and flooding his land, destroying the trees and herbage on it, and otherwise injuring it, and depriving him of its use. By 59 V. c. 64 (N.B.), the defendants were authority and the control of the co

ised to utilize the water of the lake for the benefit, not only of the residents of Carleton, but for the use of the residents of Lan-caster, and by 61 V. c. 52 (N.B.), the defendants were given additional powers in reference to this water supply to meet cer-tain public requirements. The pleas alleged that by certain Acts of the Legislature (without naming them), the defendants were authorised to take, hold, and convey the waters of Ludgate lake and the water that might flow into the same to, into, and through that part of the city of St. John called Carleton, and also to erect and maintain dams to raise and maintain the waters therein, and also to lay pipes necessary for the furnishing and supplying of water for that part of the city. The pleas then went on to recite the provisions of 61 V. c. 52, and aver that the defendants published the notice required by s. 6, and that they used the water and took the land as authorised by that Act, and these were the trespasses complained of; that the plaintiff was entitled to compensation, but only to such compensation as might be given him by the tribunal created for the purpose by the Act itself:-Held, on demurrer, that the second, third, and fourth pleas to the first count were bad, and no answer to that count, because it did not appear that the trespasses complained of were committed by virtue of legislative authority for which compensation must be had by recourse to the special remedy provided. — The second and third counts of the declaration alleged, as causes of action, damages resulting from acts alleged to have been done under and by virtue of certain Acts of the legislature which entitled the plaintiff to compensation from the defendant: — Held, on demurrer, that these counts were bad, as the damages for which compensation was claimed arose from lawful acts done by the defendants by virtue of legislative authority, for the recovery of which recourse must be had to the special remedy provided. The defendants were liable for the water that came from the south ditch and gathered in the direction of the north-east por-tion of the plaintiff's land, but not for that which gathered on the west side.-The rainfall was a severe one, but not so much as to bring it within the term "act of God."— Special damages assessed at $200 and general damages at $25; costs of a County Court Rose v. Right to use watercourses — Art, 5535 et seq., R. S. O.—Real servitude—Dominant estate and servient estate — Conditional servitude — Payment of damages caused—Action to prohibit and to destroy the works - Real actions, against whom directed-The respective competence of the Superior and the Circuit Court-Value of the works whose demolition is demanded - Presumption of value-Recourse open in favour of the occupiers of the servient tenements.] The occupiers of the services tenements.]

The right to use watercourses given by Art. 5535 et seq., R. S. O., is a right to a real servitude. The tenement over which there is the user, the mill, etc., to which the water goes, is the dominant tenement, and the tenements subject in consequence of weirs and other works and to flooding are the subject tenements. This servitude is conditional, that is to say, that the owner of the dominant tenement can only enjoy it on condition of paying the owners of the servient tenements the damage caused. Failure to make terms with these owners gives rise to real action in the nature of an abatement, to have the works made for the advantage of the dominant tenement destroyed, and to have their tenements freed from the servitude. This action is directed against the actual owner of the dominant tenement whether the unpaid damages have been caused before or since he purchased. The Superior Court at the county town is competent to try this action whatever may be the amount of the damages claimed, when the value of the works whose demolition is asked, exceeds one hundred dollars, and in absence of proof to the contrary, there is a presumption that they exceed one hundred dollars. Recourse to the above mentioned action is open to the occupier of the servient tenements, Ducharme v. Houle, 18 Que. K. B. 219.

5. NAVIGABLE WATERS.

Dam—Riparian proprietors—Public right —Mistrial—New trial.]—The owner of the alveus of a navigable river and of the land on both sides of it upon which a dam stands, has an absolute right to maintain it for the purpose of operating his mill by the use of the flowing water, and he has this right as an incident to the ownership of the property. Such right must be exercised subject to the rights of other riparian proprietors to a rearights of other reparant properties to a reasonable use of the water and to the public right of passage. The public right is not a paramount right, but a right concurrent with that of the riparian owners; and if, in the exercise of their public right, the defendants. in driving their logs down the river, injured the plaintiff's dam, the onus is upon them to shew that they adopted all reasonable means and used all reasonable care and skill in order to avoid the injury: per Barker, J. Per Tuck, C.J., McLeod and Gregory, J.J., that where the clear weight of evidence is against the plaintiff's claim, and important questions involved have not received due ant questions involved have not received due consideration on the trial, the case should be sent down for a new trial. Per Haning-ton, Landry, and Barker, J.J., that if there is evidence to justify the jury in finding for the plaintiff on the material point in dis-pute, the verdict should not be disturbed, even though the case was not tried out with due regard to other important points. Roy v. Frascr, 36 N. B. R. 113.

Electric Light Act gave the defendants the right to stretch electric wires across the Desiardins Canal, so long as they do not interfere with navigation; that the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board has no power over the crossing of canals; that the Dominion Railway Board has no jurisdiction over the company; that the Canal Co. is placed in the same position as the municipality in Wandsworth v, United Tel. Co., 13 Q. B. D. 904. Dundas v, Hamilton Cataract Co. (1911), 18 O. W. R. 168, 2 O. W. N. 517.

Floatable or non-floatable—"Drive"—
"Raft"— Ovenership of bed of nonfloatable stream—Riparian owners.]— Rivers upon which drives or rafts may be floated are floatable within the meaning of Art, 400, C. C., and are part of the public domain: rivers in which floating cannot be done, except in the case of scattered logs, are not floatable and are within the private domain. — By a "drive" is understood to float in a river.—By "raft" is meant large timber or logs held together by poles and ties forming what is called in the popular language a "cage."—The bed of nonfloatable rivers belongs up to the middle to the riparian proprietors, and those who are on the two sides opposite to each other have the property in the whole bed of the stream lying between their lands. Therefore, a disturbance of their possession gives rise in their favour to an action of trespass. Tanguay v. Canadian Electric Lighting Co., 16 Que. K. B. 48.

Floatable river—Boom—Logs from up river—Retention—Freshet saleage—Vis major—Quantum meruit—Riparian rights.]—P. owned a saw-mill on the bank of a floatable river, and placed a boom across the stream to hold logs floated down to the mill. Thad a boom further up-stream, in which he had stored pulp-wood. An unusual freshet broke T.'s boom, and brought a quantity of his pulp-wood down with the current into P.'s boom, where it was caught and held until removed some time afterwards by T.'s men, without causing any damage or expense to P. In an action by P. to recover salvage or the value of the use of his boom for the time during which T.'s logs had been held therein:—Held, reserving the judgment in 14 Que. K. B. 513, that, as P. had no right of property in the river where he had placed the boom in which T.'s wood had been caught, those waters remained publicijuris, notwithstanding the construction of the barrier; that T.'s wood came to the boom and remained there in a lawful maner; that the water remained in stopping the pulp-wood was involuntary and accidental; and that P. could recover nothing therefor.—Per Fitzpatrick, C.J., that there is no difference between the laws of the province of Quebec and those of England in respect to the rights of riparian owners to the water of floatable streams flowing past their lands. Floatable river—Obstruction by dam—Removable by force — Justification — Absence of concenient opening — Statutes.)—The plaintiff's dam across the river Soutamattee was, up to the time of the spring freshet of 1904, provided with a slide constructed in conformity with the requirements of R. S. O. 1897, c. 140, and was in good repair, but part of the slide was carried away and part was damaged and broken by that freshet, which was an unusul one:—Held, upon the evidence, that the injury to the slide could not have been guarded against by the plaintiff, and was the result of vis major; that it was not reasonably practical for the plaintiffs to have repaired the slide before the defendants' drive of logs and imber coming down the river arrived at the dam; and that the sluice way did not constitute a convenient opening for the passage of the drive:—Held, therefore, that the defendants were in law justified in blowing up the slide and part of the dam in order to remove the obstruction which they offered to the passage of the drive. FarquiarronV. Floatable river—Ownership of bed of non-floatable river — Riparian owners — Trespass.] — A river is floatable within the meaning of Art. 400, C. C., when rafts of timber can be carried over it; a river which can only carry timber in logs is not floatable.—The bed of a non-floatable river belongs up to the middle to the riparian owners, and those who are on the two sides opposite have the property in the whole bed between their lands. They have consequently a right to bring an action for trespass against those who disturb their possession of the bed. Canadian Electric Lighting Co. v. Tanguay, 28 Que. S. C. 157.

Floatable river — Tolls — Improvements — Miving of logs — Proof of ownership — Onus.] — A floatable river is a public highway which all persons have a right to use for floating logs without liability to indemnify riparian proprietors or others who have constructed works of improvement thereon. The right of the latter to collect tolls from those who use the river is one conferred by statute, and arises only in the cases provided for therein.—When logs belonging to two owners are floated together down a stream and become mixed, either one who admits to have appropriated a part of those of the other will be held to a strict account for any missing beyond the quantity admitted, and the onus of proving their loss in some other manner will rest on him. Tourville Lumber Co. v. Dansercau, 29 Que. S. C. 126.

Floatable stream — Timber driving — Carrying away of bridge—Negligence—Damages.]—The owner of logs who floats them down a stream, suitable only for floating logs at random and not in rafts, across which a bridge has been constructed by a fisherman, in virtue of a license of the Lieutenant-Governor (Art. 803 C.M.), the councils of the municipalities not having concurred in granting same (Arts. 861, 862, C.M.), is bound to so properly order, guide, and oversee the floatation of such logs as not to injure this bridge, which offers every necessary facility for the floating of such logs; and if, by the negligence of the owner of such logs, in not properly guiding them and not having for this purpose a sufficient number of men, they carry away the bridge, the owner of the logs

Floatable streams — Rights of timber dealers — Damages — Independent contractors.]—Lumberers, grantees of the right to cut timber, etc., have the right to float the timber which they get out, in the rivers and watercourses of the province, on condition of paying the damages which they may cause; and they cannot escape liability by having the floating of their timber done by independent contractors. On interhouan Hunting & Fishing Club V. Quiatchouan Pulp Co., 31 Que. S. C. 133.

Floatable waters — Improvements — Joint user — Easement — Estoppel.] — In a petitory action by the plaintiffs for a declaration of title to a parcel of land on the bank of a floatable river, with certain water powers appurtenant, and the dams, mill-race, and privileges thereto belonging, free and clear from any servitude or right of co-ownership, it appeared that the proprietor of the land adjoining the plaintiffs' on the lower side had acquired it for manufacturing purposes, and for a number of years had taken his water power through a flume nad taken his water power through a fulline constructed on the river bank in continua-tion of the plaintiffs' mill-race, which brought the water from the dam to the plaintiffs' mills, and that, in several Jeeds and written agreements, there had been ac-knowledgments of the right of owners of the lower lands to use this water subject to the charge of defraying an equal share of the expense of keeping up the constructions incidental to the utilisation of the water power, and that both proprietors had, for a number of years, contributed equally towards such expenses: — Held, that, whether the rights so recognised constituted a servitude or a right of co-ownership in the lands upon which the constructions had been erected, the plaintiffs had no exclusive right to the enjoyment thereof as against the owner of the lands, although they were absolute owners of the strip of land on which the construction had been made. Lafrance v. Lafontaine, 19 C. L. T. 376, 30 S. C. R. 20.

Foreshore — Obstruction — Rights of riparian owner — Access to river — Plan of subdivision — Registration — Order cancelling — Exception of part — Effect of — Road allocance — Blocking up — Injunction.]— The plaintiff's predecessors in title to certain lands fronting on the Fraser river, in 1903, registered a plan of subdivision thereof, shewing a 33-foot road parallel to the river bank, some little distance therefrom, and to the south of this road a number of lots with various road allowances. The strip shewn on the plan abetween the road and the river was not subdivided. The defendant bought lot 6, facing on the road, to the west and south of which lot, as shewn on the plan, appeared an allowance marked "road" running from the river road to another road. In April, 1907, the registration of the plan was by order of the Court cancelled, on the application of the then owner of the lands shewn thereon, "except in so far as it c.c.t.—143.

affects lot 6." The plaintiff having certificates of indefeasible tile to the strip and to the land to the west of lot 6, sought to restrain the defendant from trespassing thereon:—Held, assuming that the plaintiff owned only to high-water mark, that the acts of the defendant in obstructing the foreshore were acts which the Court would restrain at the instance of a riparian owner, such as the plaintiff. The rights of the defendant, as one of the public, to navigate or fish in the river, did not include the right to obstruct the plaintiff's access from all parts of his land to the river, or the right to cross the plaintiff land above high-water mark in order to reach the river.—Held, also, that the effect of the order cancelling the registration of the plain (and the exception therein) was that the road running to the west and south of lot 6 continued to be a road; but the plaintiff, as the owner of the land to the west and south of this road, had a right to seek the aid of the Court to prevent that road being blocked up.—Lyon v. Fishmogrers' Co., 1 App. Cas. 602, and Harcey v. British Columbia Boat Co., 14 B. C. R. 121, 9 W. L. R. 415, followed. Rorison v. Kolosoff (1910), 13 W. L. R. 629.

Lake — Erection of bridge—Obstruction to navigation — Nuisance — Particular injury — Damages.]—The plaintiff occupied land at the head of a lake, which was a navigable tidal sheet of water, having an outlet into the ocean. The defendants, in accordance with a contract with the provincial government, constructed a new bridge at this outlet, which lessened the size of the passage and impeded the use of the lake by vessels, although the highway could thereafter be more beneficially used by the general public:—Held, that the latter circumstance should not be considered where individuals lost the benefits of navigation, and especially where a particular niury was caused by the change. Myrer v, Clish, Myrer v, MeDonald, 40 N. S. R. 1.

Land bordering on river Crown grant — Description — Conservation Quenership ad medium filum — Navigable or unnavigable stream — Alluvion — Bed of stream]—Lot 5 in the front concession of the township of Howard, was described in the Crown patent of the grant thereof issued on the 8th July, 1799, by metes and bounds as follows: "Beginning at a post marked 4/5 on the bank of the river Thames; then south 45 degrees east 68 chains; then north-easterly parallel to the said river; then along the bank with the stream to the place of beginning:"—Held, Magce, J., dubitante, that upon the true construction of the grant, and having regard to the provisions of s, 31 of the Surveys Act, R. Obstructions to navigation — Crown lands — Letters patent of grant — Evidence — Collateral circumstances leading to grant — Title to land — Riparian rights — Fish-eries — Arts. 400, 414, 503, C. C.] — A river is navigable when, with the assistance of the tide, it can be navigated in a practicable and profitable manner, notwithstanding that at low tide it may be impossible for vessels to enter the river on account of the shallowness of the water at its mouth. — Bell v. Corp. of Quebec, 5 App. Cas. 84, followed. — Evidence of the circumstances and correspondence leading to grant by the Crown of lands on the banks of a navigable river cannot be admitted for the purpose of shewing an intention to enlarge the terms of letters patent of grant of the lands, subsequently issued, so as to include the bed of the river and the right of fishing therein.—The judgment appealed from, 14 Que. K. B. 115, was reversed, and the judgment of the Superior Court, 25 Que. S. C. 104, was restored. Steadman v. Robertson, 18 N. B. R. 580, and The Queen v. Robertson, 6 S. C. R. 52, referred to.—In re Provincial Fisheries, 26 S. C. R. 444, [1898] A. C. 700, discussed. Attorney-General for Quebec v. Frazer, Attorney-General for Quebec v. Fadems, 26 C. L. T. 440, 37 S. C. R. 577.

Possession—Title.]—By the law of the province of Quebec, as by the law of England, no waters can be deemed navigable unless they are actually capable of being navigated. An arm or inlet of a navigable river cannot be assumed to be either navigable or floatable in consequence of its connection with the navigable asteam, unless it be itself navigable or floatable as a matter of fact. The land in dispute formed part of the bed of a stream called the Brewery creek, which was originally a narrow inlet from the Ottawa river, dry during the summer time in certain parts:—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (see 24 Que. S. C. 59), that, as the Brewery creek was neither navigable nor floatable in its natural state, the subsequent overflow of the waters of the Ottawa river into it could not have the effect of altering the natural character of the creek. 2 That, as there was no reservation of the lands covered with water in the original grant by the Crown in 1806, the bed of the creek passed to the grantee as part of the property therein described, whether the waters of the creek were floatable or not. 3. That the uninterrupted possession of the bed of the creek by the grantee and his representatives from the time of the grant with the assent of the Crown, was evidence of the intention of the Crown to make an unqualified conveyance of all the lands and lands covered with water described in the grant. Hull v. Scott, 24 C. L. T. 264; Attorney-General for Quebec and Hull v. Scott, 34 S. C. R. 603.

Riparian owners—Rights of Croven— High and low vater marks.]—When land is bounded by a navigable river, the waters of which are non-tidal, it extends to the lowest mark reached by the gradual diminution of the water during the summer months. Hence the Crown has no power to grant as beach lots, land lying between the highest and lowest water-marks along such rivers, the same being the property of the riparian owners.— The Crown may legally grant to any person other than the riparian owner, lots contiguous to his land in the bed of a navigable river. Chauret v. Pilon, 31 Que. S. C. 165.

River — Barren rock submerged at high tide — Rights of riparian owner — Public domain.]—A rock in the river St. Lawrence, so situated that it is nearly always submerged at high tide, and which has no sign of vegetation—vegetation being the mark of cultivable lands, and constituting an element in appropriation and a sign of private property—forms part of the public domain, and the riparian owner has no right to claim the exclusive property in it.—A petitory action brought by the riparian proprietor, in such circumstances, to evict a fisherman who has built thereon a cabin for fishing purposes, is not well founded, and will be dismissed. Turgeon v. Guay, 33 Que. S. C. 168.

River—Floatability—Minister of Croun—Admission—Third party — Mis-encause.]—The principles of the old French law govern the question of the navigability or floatability of rivers in the province of Quebec. 2. Navigable and floatable rivers form part of the public domain of the province, and cannot be alienated except by an express grant from the Crown. 3. It is otherwise with rivers which are unnavigable or unfloatable; they belong to the riparian owners unless there is an express reservation to the contrary. 4. A river may be declared navigable and floatable as to part only. 5. The admission of a minister of the Crown, and proof may be given that such an admission has been made by mistake. 6. A party has a right to bring before the Court a third party interested, in order to have it declared that the latter is subject with the former to the Judgment upon an intervention, Procureur-General v. Praser, 25 Que. S. C. 104.

River-Public domain-Right of user-Riparian owners — Improvements — In-demnity — Tolls — Dam — Logs floated on river - Liability for loss - Demand -Delivery.]-1. Navigable and floatable rivers form part of the public domain, and everybody has the right to use them as a means of transportation, without indemnifying the riparian owners for work done by them to improve the courses of the rivers. The right of these latter to exact tolls is conferred by a special statute, and only arises in special cases, and in the manner therein provided.—2. When the logs of two lumbermen are floated in a river and become mixed, the one who knows he is appropri-ating a portion belonging to the other, without taking count of the quantity, is responsible up to the value of the logs lost .- 3. The owner of a dam in a river, whereby he retains his logs, is responsible for the damage caused by the retention he makes of the logs of others; and it is not necessary for the latter to make a demand upon him for delivery. Judgment in 29 Que. S. C. 126, varied. Tourville Lumber Co. v. Dansereau, 34 Que. S. C. 516.

River — Riparian owners — Riphts of Crown — High and low vaster marks—Trespass — Boundaries.] — The bed of a non-tidal navigable river, whose volume of water rises or falls according to seasons, extends to the highest water mark it reaches without flooding. and belongs to the Crown, The grant, therefore, by the latter of a lot below such high water mark is valid as against the riparian owner.—2. An action en complainte for trespass on an immovable, against the owner of a contiguous one, may be brought, though no boundaries have been settled between them, when there is no doubt as to the acts of trespass having taken place well within the plaintiff's property. The settlement of boundaries is not a condition precedent in such a case. Judgment in 31 Que. K. B. 283, 5 E. L. R. 234.

Stream-Question of fact-Crown grant -Reservation - Prescription - Acquiescence.]-It does not follow that, because a river is navigable and floatable, all its branches or channels must be considered so. The navigability of a stream cannot be established by any rule of law; it is a question of fact. 2. The grant of land from the Crown includes the bed of a non-navigable creek running through it, and no specific grant of the bed of the creek is necessary. Moreover, in this case, the reservation of gold and silver mines in favour of the Crown, contained in the grant, indicated that every-thing outside of this reservation was granted. 3. Although there is no prescription against the Crown, yet the conduct of the constituted authorities in allowing a creek to be used by the patentees, and their successors and assigns, openly, publicly, peaceably, and un-interruptedly for 96 years, is evidence of acquiescence in their pretensions. Judgment in 24 Que. S. C. 59 affirmed. Hull v. Scott, 13 Que. K. B. 164. Affirmed 24 C. L. T. 264, and S. C. sub nom. Attorney-General for Quebec & Hull v. Scott, 34 S. C. R. 603.

6. RIPARIAN RIGHTS.

Accretion—Right to, as "Alluvion"— Formation.]—On the 27th March, 1894, a considerable mass of earth, which had crumbled away at St. Alban, was carried by the river Ste. Anne to its mouth. The mass of earth grounded in a shallow at the mouth of this river, which was navigable, and dried up a part of its bed, which remained dry for a distance of 2,280 feet in a straight line, dividing the old bank of the river (the property of the plaintiff) from the new bank thereof:—Held, that this accretion did not constitute an "alluvion;" that the addition of land to the bank of a navigable river belongs to the adjoining owner only where it is formed by imperceptible degrees; and the only exception to this rule is in the case where a considerable and noticeable part of a field on a river bank is carried suddenly towards a lower field or on the opposite bank; but, even in this case, the new land will belong to the riparian owner at that point only if the former owner does not reclaim it within the time the law allows. Germain v. Price, 27 Que, S. C. 101, 188.

Accretion to shore — Boathouse and dwelling erected on crib filled with stone and cement — After time boathouse became surrounded by accretion to shore — Action by owner of shore to recover possession — Dismissed without prejudice to other rights of plaintiff. Point Abino v. Michener (1910), 17 O. W. R. 98, 2 O. W. N. 122.

Artificial watercourse-Canal banks -Trespass - Possessory action - Bornage -Title to land.]-The possessory action lies only in favour of persons in exclusive possession à titre de propriétaire.-The ownership of a canal serving as a tail-race for a water-mill naturally involves the ownership of the banks of the canal and the right to make use thereof for the purpose of maintaining the tail-race in efficient condition.— In the present case, the bank of the canal had fallen in at a place adjoining lands belonging to D., and the projection thus formed had been, for some years, occupied by him. A. made an entry for the purpose of removing this obstruction, and re-building a retaining wall to support the bank. In a possessory action by D.:-Held, that, as the original boundary had become obliterated, the decision boundary had become obliterated, the decision of the question of possession should be post-poned until the limits of the canal bank had been re-established. Parent v. Quebec North Shore Turnpike Road Trustees, 31 S. C. R. 556. followed. Delisle v. Arcand, 37 S. C. R. 668.

Dumping rocks into river—Impeding flow of water — Rights of riparian proprietors — Sensible injury — Injunction. West Kootensy Power and Light Co. v. Nelson (B.C.), 2 W. L. R. 66.

Encroachment of water on land -Riparian owner - Preservation by erections —Property in land and erections.] — A parcel of land threatened with overflow by water and reclaimed therefrom by the erection of quays, etc., remains, as well as the works and erections, the property of the riparian owner who has made them, or for whom they have been made by others. Price v. Chicoutini Pulp Co., 30 Que, S. C. 293.

Erection obstructing access to foreshore — Injunction.] — Complainant, as riparian owner, complained that defendant was erecting a breastwork on his foreshore cutting off access therefrom to the river and obtained an injunction to restrain defendant from going on with the building. On motion to dissolve it appeared that complainant was very slightly if at all inconvenienced, that it was doubtful if the foreshore was really his and that defendant had spent a considerable sum of money on the work:—Held. (Peters, M.R.) that in deciding cases of this nature the respective convenience or inconvenience to the parties should be considered. 2. That this injunction should be dissolved with leave to complainant to move for another and with leave to amend his bill, so as to support a prayer for the removal of the breastwork. Garret v. Squarebriggs (1880), 2 P. E. I. R. 351.

Existence of defined watercourse — Diversion of watercourses.]— Action for damages to plaintiff's land. The B. C. Full Court in dismissing an appeal, holds that defendant is not liable where there being an intermittent danger of overflow of water sie guards against its recurrence by raising an obstruction to protect her property. The evidence did not shew that there was a defined natural watercourse. Graham v. Lister, 9 W. L. R. 589.

Expropriation — Trespass — Torts -Diversion of natural flow - Injurious affection - Damages - Execution of statutory powers — Arbitration — Injunction—Mandamus — 59 V. c. 44 (N.S.) — Construction.]-A riparian proprietor whose property has been injuriously affected by the unlawful diversion of the natural flow of a watercourse may recover damages therefor, and may also obain relief by injunction restraining the continuation of the tortious acts so committed .- The powers conferred upon the town council of the town of North Sydney, N.S., by the Nova Scotia statute 59 V. c. 44, for the purpose of obtaining a water supply, give them no rights in respect to the diversion of watercourses, except subject to the provision of s. 4 of the Act, and after arbitration proceedings taken to settle compensation for injurious affection to property resulting from the construction or operation of the waterworks.—Saunby v. Water Com-missioners of London, [1906] A. C. 110, followed. Leahy v. North Sydney, 26 C. L. T, 526, 37 S. C. R. 464.

Expropriation of lands of riparian owners — Navigable rivers — Non-naviga-bility of portions — Doctrine of ad medium filum aqua — Right of the Crown to bed of river - Arbitration and award - Directions to arbitrators.]-The restriction of the presumption of the common law, as adminis-tered in England, in favour of Crown ownership of the alveus of navigable waters, for the protection of public rights of navigation and fishery therein, to navigable tidal waters, is apparently due to the non-recognition in early times of the necessity of protecting such public rights in other navigable waters, and an acquiescence in the right of riparian owners of lands bordering thereon to the bed of such waters, ad mcdium filum aqua; whereas in the province of Ontario such public rights in all rivers navigable in fact have been deemed always existent in the Crown, ex jure natura, so that the title in the bed thereof remained in the Crown after it had made grants of lands bordering upon the banks of such rivers, the doctrine of ad medium filum aquæ not applying thereto.-Where a river is navigable in its general character, natural interruptions to navigation at some parts of it, which can be readily overcome, do not prevent it from being deemed a navigable river at such parts. -The Winnipeg river, which flows from the Lake of the Woods to Lake Winnipeg, is a navigable river, and although there are interruptions to navigation in it, they can be readily overcome by means of canals, or other artificial means. The channel just below the town of Kenora, which contains one of these interruptions, is properly part of the river, and must be deemed navigable in the sense mentioned, so that the bed thereof remains yested in the Crown, and nothing in the Crown grants to the plaintiffs of lands bor-dering upon such branch, nor in their rights as riparian proprietors, interferes with the title of the Crown to the bed, or gives to the plaintiffs any title thereto or interest therein, ad medium filum aqua .- The basis upon which damages were to be assessed to the plaintiffs as owners of lands on the banks of a navigable river are set out in the report, the actions ultimately becoming actions to settle the rights of the parties, and to obtain directions to the arbitrators in expropriation proceedings. Keewatin Keewatin Power Co. v. Kenora, Hudson's Bay Co. v. Kenora, 8 O. W. R. 369, 13 O. L. R. 237.

Floatable river — Timber driving—Obstruction — Mandatory injunction—Coats—Injunction for apprehended injury — Damages.]—The defendant, the owner of a saw-mill on a floatable river, erected booms in connection therewith, which, with logs of the defendant, impeded the passage of logs of the plaintiff. taking out and service of the injunction order. An injunction to perpetually restrain the defendant from closing or obstructing the river refused. The owner of land on a floatable river is entitled to erect booms and piers necessary for reasonable use of the river in operating a saw-mill. The Court refused to assess the plaintiff's datages, as he had a remedy at law, and at the time the bill was filed the grounds for an injunction had ceased. Watson v. Patterson, 23 C. L. T. 268, 2 N. B. Eq. R. 488.

Flood—Change in course of stream.]—When, owing to an extraordinary flood, a stream suddenly changes its course and washes away part of the land of a riparian proprietor, he is entitled, at any time before a prescriptive right, or right by estoppel, to keep the stream in its new channel is acquired against him, to fill in the places washed away and to turn the stream back to its original channel, York v. Rolts, 20 C. L. T. 60, 27 A. R. 72.

Flooding lands — Driving saw logs— Action.]—Action by the owner of lands on both sides of a stream used by the defendants for the purpose of driving saw logs, for damages for penning back the water on his land by means of a dam, including the road allowance reserved along the banks of the stream in question, and for an injunction to remove the obstruction. The defence raised was that the defendants were not liable by reason of the reservation in the grant from the Crown of the road allowance and by reason of the provisions of s, 1 of c. 142, R. S. O. 1897, an Act for protecting the public interest in rivers, streams and creeks:-Held, that the plaintiff was in such possession of the road allowance along the banks of the stream as entitled him to recover damages for flooding the same; that the defendants were liable for all damages caused by the dam complained of; and that c. 142, R. S. O. 1897, does not prevent a plaintiff recovering for unnecessary damage or for damages accruing after spring and fall freshets; and awarded damages accordingly and an order for removal of the dam, the defendants admitting they had done with it .- Held, also, that there is nothing in c. 85, R. S. O. 1897, compelling a defendant to proceed under it if he chooses his ordinary remedy of action. Blair v. Chew. 21 C. L. T. 404.

Improvements on stream—Injury to other lands — Demolition of works — Damages.]—The right given to a proprietor to improve a watercourse running along his land by means of necessary works, as dams, dykes, piers, booms, etc., does not entitle him to abut or rest such works on the land of another without his consent. When, therefore, such works are erected in such a way as to injure the owner of the land on which they abut or rest, or to interfere with his enjoyment of it, the latter will have an action to have them removed or demolished, as well as for damages. Bryson v. Davidson, 31 Que. S. C. 291.

Injunction - Penning back water Riparian rights.]-An injunction will lie for injury to right of riparian owner, without actual damage being sustained so as to preserve the right, but in interfering in such a case the Court will consider not only the strict legal rights of the parties, but all the surrounding circumstances, the injury the strict enforcement of the right would cause the defendant, etc. An injunction had been granted some years before, restraining the defendant from penning back the water for his mill, which was above plaintiff's on the same stream, between the hours of 4 a.m. and 11 p.m., each day. It now appearing that to allow defendant to pen back the water between the hours of 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. would not injure plaintiff's right, the Court ordered the injunction to be dissolved so far as it related to penning back the water between these hours, but that with respect to all other times it should be made perpetual. Howatt v. Laird (1857), 1 P. E. I. R. 157.

Injunction - Riparian owner-Right to natural watercourse not extinguished by unity of possession — Injunction not granted in all cases where a plaintiff would succeed in an action at law - Not merely a legal right but actual injury must be shewn -Public convenience — Laches or acquiescence in encroachment - Injunction dissolved in part.] — The plaintiff owned mills on the lower part of the stream, the defendant owned mills higher up and penned back the water. Plaintiff had already recovered nominal damages in the Supreme Court (Howatt V. Laird, 1 P. E. I. R. 7), for the injury to his right. The Bill alleges that since that judgment the defendants have, at different times, penned back the water so as to impede the working of plaintiff's mill, An injunction was granted ex parte to restrain the defendant from so penning back the stream and a motion was now made to dissolve it. There were two mills on the lower dam, one of which was formerly owned by the owner of the upper mill. It was argued that this unity of possession having existed extin-guished the original right of the lower mill to the natural flow of the water, but the two principal questions on which the case turned were:—Whether the riparian owner can daily interrupt the natural flow of the stream and detain the water for such times as may be necessary to drive his mill, without subjecting himself to an action by a lower riparian owner for an injury to his right, although such interruption cause no actual damage to the lower owner.—Whether after the lower owner has established his right in a Court of Law, this Court (when no actual damage is sustained) should interfere to restrain the upper owner from continuing the interruption:—Held, Peters, M.R., that the unity of possession had not extinguished the right to the natural flow.—That the riparian owner by interrupting and detaining the water would render himself liable to an action by the lower owner, without actual damage to the latter, as decided by the Supreme Court in the action at law between the same parties (1 P. E. I. R. 7).—That right of plaintiff to interference of the Court, rests not merely on his shewing a bare legal right, or on his having obtained with such actual loss or inconvenience to him as on equitable ground should be prevented and that plaintiff's laches and public convenience should be considered. Injunction dissolved in part. Hoveatt v. Laird (1851), 1 P. E. I. R. 7).

Land bordering on navigable lake—Rights of riparian owner — Access over shoal water to deeper water — Removal of sand or gravel from bed of lake at edge of water — Trespass — Diminution of soil—Recession of shore line — Special injury—Injunction — Damages. Littoral proprietors — Lake front — Removal of sand and gravel — Injury to plaintiffs land — Injurotion.]—The plaintiffs owned a lot running down to the shore of Lake Ontario, which shore consisted of sand and gravel and was of varying width, and the bank of which was a clay loam from 10 to 15 feet high. Notwithstanding the protection afforded by the shore, over 40 acres of land had been washed away since the Crown grant was made in 1799. The plaintiffs sought an injunction to restrain the defendant from removing gravel opposite to their land, as tending to render it more liable to encroachment by the waters of the lake — Held, that, notwithstanding that the metes and bounds in the Crown grant were expressed to begin "on the shore of Lake Ontario." the plaintiffs' land extended only to the line of the water at present low water mark, and not to what was that line in 1799, but that, as littoral proprietors, they were entitled to the injunction. Servos v. Steuert, 10 O. W. R. 528, 15 O. L. R. 216.

Logs floated over stream—Rivers and Streams Act — District Court Judge—Order to fix tolls — Past user of stream — Mandamus — Appeal — Res judicata.]—By R. S. O. 1897 c. 142, s. 13, the owner of improvements in a river or stream used for floating down logs, may obtain from a District Court Judge an order fixing the tolls to be paid by other parties using such improvements. On application for a writ of mandamus to compel the Judge to make such an order:—Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 16 O. L. R. 21, 9 O. W. R. 711, Davies, J., dubitante, and Idington, J., that such an order had effect only in case of logs floated down the river or stream after it was made.—Per Idington, J., that, as s. 15 gives the applicant for the order an appeal from the Applicant for the order an appeal from the Judge's refusal to make it, mandamus will not lie.—Per Duff, J., that the mandamus could issue if the Judge had jurisdiction to make the order, though he refused to do so in the belief that a prior decision of a Divisional Courr established res judicata as to his power. Re Beck Manufacturing Co. & Valin & Ontario Lumber Co., 40 S. C. R. 523.

Marsh lands — Rights of one owner against adjoining owner — Obstruction of access to shore — Mandamus to compel removal.] — Plaintiff, the owner of certain water lots on Ashbridge's Bay, brought action for a mandamus to compel defendants to amend a plan of theirs shewing certain works they intended to perform, and which in pursuance of said plan they had carried out and performed and had placed obstructions, it was alleged, which had deprived plaintiff of his riparian rights, and to compel defendants to remove the obstructions placed in front of plaintiff's said lands, and an injunction to restrain defendants from performing the work in such a way as to interfere with plaintiff's riparian rights.—Magee, J., dismissed plaintiff's action with costs.—Divisional Court held, that plaintiff's property was land and not water, and that he was not in any sense a riparian proprietor: That plaintiff's case failed in fact and in law and the appeal should be dismissed with cets.—Beatty v. Davis, 20 O. R. 373. distinguished.—Ross v. Portsmouth, 17 G. P. 195, 202, approved. — Review of Michigan authorities, History of Toronto Harbour and Ashbridge's Bay, Merritt v. Voronto (1911), 18 O. Mill-race — Boundaries—Banks — Riparian proprietors — Title — Prescription—Acts of ownership.]—There is a legal presumption that the property in a hydraulic mill and its mill-race includes the banks of the latter. Therefore, a neighbouring proprietor, whose title extends to the mill-race, is not by such title owner as far as the water, but only as far as the bank. The above presumption is not rebutted unless by reason of a contrary title in precise and formal terms, or by reason of a prescription acquired by an adverse possession clearly defined. Isolated acts or acts tolerated as being done in a neighbourly way, for example, mowing the grass as far as the water, will not suffice. Arcand v. Delisle, 16 Que. K. B. 90.

the exercise of an adverse claim of right or title to the lands in question, and is not of a permanent or recurring nature.—Davies and Idington, JJ. dissenting, were of opinion that, in the circumstances of the case, a possessory action would lie.—P. brought an action au possessoire against the company for interference with his rights in a stream, for damages, and for an injunction against the commission or continuance of the acts complained of. On service of process, the company ceased these acts, admitted the company ceased these acts, annutted the rights and title of P., alleged that they had so acted in the belief that a verbal agree-ment made with P. some years previously gave them permission to do so, that the agreement had never been cancelled, but was renewed from year to year, and that, although the privilege had not been exercised by them during the two years immediately preceding the alleged trespass in 1904, it was then still subsisting and in force:—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, Davies and Idington, JJ., dissenting, that, as there had been no formal cancellation of the verbal agreement or withdrawal of the permission thereby given, it had to be regarded, notwithstanding non-user, as having been tacitly renewed, and that it was still in force at the time of the acts complained of, and that P. could not recover in the action as brought. -Fitzpatrick, C.J.C., on his view of the evidence dissented from the holding that the agreement had been tacitly renewed for the year 1904, in which the alleged trespass was committed. Right to flow of stream—Easement—Severance — Conseyance in gross.] — The right to the use of the flow of water, in its natural course, is not an easement, but is inseparably connected with, and inherent in, the property in the land. It is parcel of the inheritance and passes with it.—The rights of a riparian owner or occupant, with respect to the water of a stream, cannot be severed and conveyed in gross, so as to enable a third party to sustain an action in relation thereto. Right to supply of water—Contract by owner of waterworks with riparian proprietor — Evidence — Injunction. Harrison & Sons Co. v. Oucen Sound, 3 O. W. R. 745.

River—Riparian owner—Use of teater— Preacriptive title — Mill dam — Interruption — Company — Statutory posceris — Remedies — Iniuncision — Ex post facto legislation — Construction.] — A riparian owner has a right to have the water flow to his land in its natural channel without material diminution in its volume or sensible change in its quality; and to use it for all ordinary and domestic purposes; he has also a right to the reasonable use of it for commercial or other extraordinary purposes incident to the enjoyment of his property, provided he does not cause material injury or annoyance to other riparian owners .- A prescriptive title to the uninterrupted use of the water of a river will not be obtained by a riparian owner who has made no use of the water different from that to which he was entitled as a riparian owner.-The defendants, an electric lighting company, owning lands on both sides of a river, and having power by their Act of incorporation to build and maintain dams on the river, erected a dam thereon in connection with their power house. The plaintiff was the owner of a water grist and carding mill, situate lower down on the same river. The defendants ran their machinery at night time, and in the morning it was their practice, without having regard to the length of time required for the purpose, to store the water until the dam was again full. In consequence the plaintiff was deprived of water, and his mills were forced to shut down for a long number of days at a time :- Held, that the defendant's use of the water was unreasonable, and should be restrained .- (2) That the statutory powers conferred upon the defendants to build the dam for the purposes of their business did not authorise them to make an unreasonabe use of the water, to the injury of the plaintiff, in the absence of proof, the onus of establishing which was upon the defendants, that their business could not be carried on except with that result.—(3) That a provision in the defendants' Act, that they should be liable to pay damages to any owner of property injured by the construction of their dams or works, did not apply to damages resulting from an unreasonable use of the water; that the loss sustained by the plaintiff in the enjoyment of his property was continuous and substantial; and that, under the circumstances, he was entitled to relief by injunction.-The defendants were empowered by Act to build a dam upon complying with certain formalities, including the filing of a plan thereof with and obtaining approval of the same by the Governor in council. A plan was filed with the Governor in council, but, owing to misapprehension, its approval was not obtained. The dam having been built, an Act was passed approving of the dam and providing that the approval should have the same force and effect as if given by order in council of the date of the filing of the plan :-Held, that the Act, as ex post facto legislation, was not to be construed as legalising the dam. Brown v. Bathurst Electric and Water Power Co., 4 E. L. R. 28, 3 N. B. Eq. 543.

Rivers and streams — Croien domain — Title to land — "Flottage" — Driving loose logs — Public servitude — Riparian ownership — Action possessoire.]— In the province of Quebee, watercourses which are capable merely of floating loose logs (flottables à buches perdues) are not dependencies of the Crown domain within the meaning of Art. 400 of the Civil Code. The owners of the adjoining riparian lands are, consequently, the proprietors of the banks and beds of such streams, and have the right of action au possessoire in respect thereof.— There is, however, a right of servitude over such watercourses in respect to all advantages which the streams and their banks, in their natural condition, can afford to the public, there being no distinction, in this regard, between navigable or floatable streams and those which are neither navigable nor floatable. McBean v. Carisie, 19 L. C. Jur. 276, and Tanguay v. Price, 37 S. C. R. 637, followed.—Judgment appealed from, 16 Que. K. B. 48, affirmed, Gironard and Idington, JJ., dissenting. Tanguay v. Canadian Electric Light Co., 40 S. C. R. 1, 4 E. L. R. 438.

Rivers and streams-Floating logs -Damage to riparian owners - Procedure.]-The Nova Scotia statute R. S. N. S. 1900 c. 95, s. 17, gives to persons engaged in the transmission of saw logs and timber down rivers and streams the reasonable use of and access to the same for their business and relieves them from liability for any but actual damage thereby, unless caused by their own wilful act: — Held, affirming the judgment appealed from 36 N, S. R. 40, that such persons are liable for all actual damage caused in transmitting logs, even without negligence, and the owner of the logs is not relieved from liability though they were transmitted by other persons under contract with him. On motion for a new trial one of the grounds was misdirection in the charge to the jury. The trial Judge reported to the full Court that he did not make the direction on which this objection to his charge was based, and gave a correct report of what he said:—Held, that this was not an objectionable course for the Judge to pursue. pertonable course for the Jugge to pursue, and in any case it was a matter for the Court appealed from, whose ruling was not subject to review. Judgment in 36 N. S. R. 40 affirmed. Dickie v, Campbell, 24 C. L. T. 50, 34 S. C. R. 265.

Rivers and streams-Nontidal rivers-Grant of lands bordering on-Title to bed of river ad medium filum aqua - Common law doctrine — R. S. O. 1897 c. 111, s. 1.]—
The common law of England relative to property and civil rights—as introduced into this province in 1792, now enacted in R. S. O. 1897 c. 111, s. 1.—except in so far as repealed by Imperial legislation having force in this province, or by provincial enactments, is the rule for the decision of the same. Where a grant of land is made bordering on a river, if a tidal river, the title to the bed is presumed to remain in the Crown, unless otherwise expressed in the grant; whereas, if non-tidal, whether navigable or not, the title in the bed ad medium filum aqua is presumed prima facie to be in the riparian proprietor, — Where, therefore, lands were granted by the Crown, bounded by the Winnipeg river, a non-tidal river, the title to the bed of the river ad medium filum aquæ was held to have passed to the riparian owners by virtue of the grant to them, there being nothing in the grants, particulars of which are set out in the case, to rebut the presumption.—Judgment of Anglin, J., 13 O. L. R. 237, 8 O. W. R. 369, varied. Keewatin Power Co. v Kenora, Hudson's Bay Co. v. Kenora, 16 O. L. R. 184, 11 O. W. R. 266.

Trespass to land — Conveying timber and lumber on stream.]—The plaintiff was the owner of land bounded on one side by a stream, above tidewater and not navigable.

The defendant was a lumberman, and, in order to assist his operations in driving logs down stream, erected a permanent dam, one end of which rested on the plaintiff's land. To an action by the plaintiff for damages the defendant pleaded inter alia that the entry complained of was a reasonable use of the land and was a use authorised by R. S. N. S. 1900, c. 95, "of the conveying of timber and lumber on rivers and the removal of obstructions therefrom," and amending Acts:—Held, that the erection of the dam was clearly a trespass and could not be justified under c. 95, or under the Acts of 1902 c, 33, no commissioner having been appointed for the stream in question or for the river into which it ran; that s. 15 of c. 95, which gives the right to construct dams necessary to facilitate the floating of logs down streams during freshets, is subject to the provisions of s, 6, which requires the assent of the owner of land entered upon to be obtained. and can only be construed to apply to temporary erections, and not to permanent erections, such as the one in question; that s. 17 of c. 95, as amended, only gives the right to enter for the purpose of driving or re-moving logs and not for the purpose of making erections; and that, as the plaintiff had failed to prove any substantial damage, there should be judgment in his favour for $5 damages and costs. Deal v. Cook, 23

Unnavigable pond—Fishing rights.]— The plaintiffs, with three others, are the owners, under grants from the Crown prior to Confederation, of certain lots of which extend to, or are partly covered by, an enclosed sheet of water known as " Brome Pond." There was no reservation by the Crown of the bed of the pond or of the fishing rights connected with the water. The paintiffs sought to recover damages from a person who had fished in the pond:—Held, that the riparian owners of a non-navigable water or pond, the bed of which was granted by the Crown to them or their auteurs before Confederation, have the exclusive right of fishing therein. 2. Where land granted by the Crown before Confederation to a number of proprietors extends into and includes the bed of a pond, the fishing rights of the whole pond do not belong to all in common, but the rights of each are limited to the water covering the portion of the bed to which each is entitled by his deed. Tetreault v. Lewis, 19 Que. S. C. 257.

Use of water by—Dams—Retention of water — Liability to owners lower doen.]—Running water is a thing common to those whose lands it borders or crosses, and, according to the provisions of Art. 503, C. C., they may use it for their own purposes in its passage, but in such a manner as not to hinder the exercise of the same right by other riparian proprietors. Therefore, the owner of works up-stream who retains the water for certain periods, by means of dams, so as to render its flow intermittent, exceeds the limits of his right, and is liable to the riparian proprietors down-stream for the damage which he causes them, as provided in $8,5535 and 5536, R. S. Q. Brome Lake Electric Power Co. v. Sherwood, 14 Que. K. B. 507.

Q., in prescribing the mode of ascertaining the damages for injuries caused by those who exholit watercourses opposite their lands, makes the remedy of those who suffer injury subject to a condition precedent which they are bound to fulfil. Neglect to comply therewith affords a defence to an action, which the defendant must expressly plead, and which the Court will not supply of its own motion. Leclair v, Dufault, 28 Que, S. C. 14.

Water rights — Pollution of water—Proof of damage — Special use authorised by statute.]—The pollution of a river by a riparian owner will be enjoined at the instance of a riparian owner lower down without proof of actual damage. — Generally speaking, one not a riparian owner is mot entitled to complain of the pollution of the river, and a grant or license from a riparian owner to use the water does not entitle the grantee or license to complain of its pollution by another riparian owner.—Where the plaintiffs were authorised by Act to take a specified quantity of water per day from a lake for, among other purposes, the domestic use of their citizens, it was held that they were entitled to enjoin the pollution of the lake by a riparian owner. At the hearing before the Gold purposes." Commissioner the applicants requested him to deal with the application as one for mining purposes only, but he refused the request and dismissed the application:—Held, on appeal, that the Gold Commissioner was not justified merely on this ground in refusing to exercise his powers; and the matter should be referred back for rehearing.—Held, also, that water records, under Part II. of Water Clauses Consolidation Act, may be held jointly.—Quære, whether a supply of water for fire purposes would be neces-sary as being directly connected with the working of a mine or incidental thereto. diversion. This was opposed by the plaintiffs, who held a record, granted on the 20th October, 1906, for 5,000 inches of water out of the St. Mary's river at the new point of diversion, applied for by the defendants. The Commissioner decided that he had jurisdiction under s. 27, but, upon it appearing that the defendants had taken certain proceedings under s. 84 et seq., to have their undertaking approved by the Lieutenant-Governor in council, the Commissioner ruled that his jurisdiction was avoided by these proceedings. They appealed under s. 36, and afterwards withdrew, and they also withdrew their application to the Lieutenant-Governor in council, and secured an appointment from the Gold Commissioner to proceed again with the application for a change of point of diversion. On motion by the plaintiffs for prohibition:—Held, that the Commissioner had jurisdiction to entertain the application. Cranbrook Power Co., v. East Kooteney Power Co., 13 B. C. R. 275.

Water rights—Riparian owners—Effect on water record of abandonment of pre-emption.]—V. and M. held separate pre-emption records, and, as partners, a joint water record, dated January, 1888. In October, 1889, they formally abandoned their separate pre-emptions and relocated the same area as partners, obtaining in due course a pre-emption record to it in their joint names. The water record was left unchanged, standing in the names of V. and M.—Held, that when V. and M. abandoned their pre-emptions, the water record obtained in connection therewith lapsed. 8. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Bed of non-floatable river — Crown patent — Scire facias — Attack on later patent — Acts of possession — Prescription — Fraud — Tender of price — Riparian proprictor — Presumption — Right to bed of stream — Description in patent — Negotiability or floatability] — The plaintiff in an action of scire facias, begun by him as grantee, by prior letters patent, of property (in this case the bed of a non-floatable river) granted by the letters patent which he attacks, cannot rely upon acts of possession which he has exercised before the issue of the letters patent, when such acts have not given him a prescriptive right to the property in question and add nothing to his own title.—2. The remedy by scire facias, the object of which is the cancellation of letters patent obtained by fraud or issued in error, is open to a grantee by prior letters patent of the propose of attacking those issued to a third person, even when the latter acted without fraud, and the Crown issued the letters with knowledge of the respective contentions of the parties.—3. A plaintiff who sues by way of scire facias for cancellation of letters patent issued to a third person, is not obliged to render with his action the price or the consideration upon which they were granted.—4. The presumption that the property in land bordering on an unnavigable or non-floatable river extends up to the middle of its bed (ad medium filum aque) is rebutted when it is manifest from the description in the title deeds that it stops at the bank. Therefore, the riparian proprietor on the two opposite sides of such a river has not the right of property in the bed of the river, when his title deeds expressly limit his lands to the banks.—5. A river is navigable or floatable, if navigation or floatation therenare practicable up and down for a space of time considerable enough to make it a means of transport or a public way. The particular circumstances which render the use of it little or not at all profitable, such as artificial obstacles, banks, dams, etc., which hinder the use of it, do not take away the character of navigability or floatability. Gouin v. McManamy, 32 Que. S. C. 19.

Construction of aqueduct—Powers of municipal corporation — Interference with private aqueduct — Rights acquired by possession — Damages — Injunction.] — A municipal corporation who pass a by-law and contract for the construction of an aqueduct must take into consideration the rights acquired by one who has already constructed a similar aqueduct within the limits of the corporation, and has exploited it publicly for 15 years, without objection, although not authorised by by-law to do so. The corporation cannot, for the purposes of the new aqueduct, order the owner of the old one, by resolution, to remove his pipes within 40 hours, nor permit their contractor to destroy them. The owner of the old aqueduct, in the above conditions, has a right of action for damages against the corporation and contractor who cut and removed his pipes, as well as a remedy by injunction to restrain them from interfering with his possession. Warieick v. Baril, 14 Que. K. B. 467.

Ditch—Servitude—Expropriation—Indemnity—Damages.1—The owner of lower land is obliged, under Art. 501. C. C., to receive waters brought upon his land by a line ditch constructed by the owner of higher land for the benefit of his land, such neessary work not falling under the exception in the article created by the words "without the hand of man having contributed thereto,"—2. Indemnity paid to an owner of land expropriated for the construction of a railway is not to be regarded as including damages caused by the obstruction to the flow of water. Grand Trunk Rue, Co. v. Langlois, 14 Que. K. B. 173.

Improvements on streams — Logs Roated over stream—"Reasonable tolls"— Action for—R, S. O. c. 142—Restriction to future tolls—Previous binding decision.] — The right to demand reasonable tolls upon logs floating over improvements on a stream proceeds entirely upon ss. 11 and 13 of R. S. O. 1897, c. 142, and such tolls are only chargeable upon logs going down after an order under the later section has been made and not those going down before such order was made. Beck Manufacturing Co. v. Ontario Lumber Co., 6 O. W. R. 54, 1 O. L. R. 193.

Lake front — Accretion of alluvial deposit.]—The executors of C. claimed the land lying between defendant's admitted property and a lake. Some title deeds of defendant and his predecessors in title stated that his property ran to the lake, others made no mention of the lake. Defendant also claimed the disputed land by accretion, but in one of the title deeds to defendant's father, C. gave him the refusal to purchase the property in dispute.—Held, that plaintiffs were entitled to the land in question. Toronto v. Delaney, 12 O. W. R. 1116.

Lands bordering on river — Crown grant — Description — Construction — Owner-sinj ad medium filum — Alluvion — Bed of stream.]—A lot in the front concession of a township on the south side of the river Thames was granted by Crown patent. "with all the woods and waters thereon lying and being," by the following metes and bounds: "Beginning at a post marked 4-5 on the bank of the river Thames, thence south 45 degrees east 68 chains, then north-easterly parallel to the said river 30 chains, then long the bank with the stream to the place of beginning": — Held, Meredith, J.A., dissenting, reversing the decision of a Divisional Court, 15 O, L. R. 655, 11 O. W. R. 475, that the northerly boundary went to the centre of the stream. Williams v. Pickard, 17 O, L. R. 1051; 12 O. W. R. 1051.

Land washed away by navigable river—Reclamation — Private domain — Grant by Crosen as part of bed of river—Action en bornage — Onus.]—Land bounded by a navigable river and gradually washed away by the waters of it does not cease to be part of the private domain nor fall into the public domain until it has been definitely overflowed and become part of the bed of the river. Where the soil is preserved from overflow or reclaimed by means of works executed by the owner or by third persons, the land of which it forms part remains in the private domain, and a grant which the Crown assumes to make of it by letters patent as a part of the public domain is void. The onus is on the grantee of the Crown to shew that the land has passed into the public domain. In default of such proof, he cannot by virtue of his grant maintain an action en bornage against the owner of a contiguous lot. Chicoutimi Pulp Co., N. Racine, 20 Que. S. C. 194.

Lessees of watercourse—Right to flow of water—Title—"Proprietors' Committee."]
—The plaintiffs claimed to be lessees in possession of a watercourse running through a pond in the vicinity of the town of L., and, as such, entitled to the flow of brook and the use of a dam at the pond to regulate the flow of water in connection with the working of a grist-mill situated upon a lot of land owned by the plaintiffs further down the stream. The plaintiffs' claim was based upon a resolution passed at a meeting of the "proprietors' committee" of the township of L. in 1895. There was no evidence to shew who the persons were who called themselves the "proprietors' committee" at that time, nor how, or when, or by what authority the "proprietors' committee" was appointed. The township grant, which bore date the 26th November, 1764, under which both parties claimed, shewed that the township contained 200 rights or shares of 500 acres each, of which only 157 appeared to have been granted at the time. It appeared from the grant that before it was issued, a division was made but none was proved, and it was im-possible to say whether the land covered by the brook passed under the grant, or was included in the ungranted shares or rights. Evidence was given, however, to shew that, from the first, the grantees had assumed to control the management of the brook, and that from time to time they had passed resolutions for that purpose; but no authority was shewn for these proceedings, and it did not appear that the grantees had any:— Held, assuming that the original grantees had authority to so deal with the brook and pond, that, in the absence of evidence that their rights were transferred to the persons who, in 1895, assumed to exercise such authority, no right or title to the brook, pond, or dam passed to the plaintiffs, as lessees or otherwise, and they must fail in their action. Moore v. Ritchie, 33 N. S. R. 216.

Regulation of streams-Action to annul - Difficulty of execution from lapse of time - By-law to amend proces-verbal -Mode of apportioning work - Resolution of council ordering apportionment-Grounds of nullity.]-A procès-verbal to regulate several streams, that appear formally to comply with the law, and has been in existence for a period of thirty-six years, will not be set aside on the ground that it has become impracticable or difficult of execution through the insufficient description of the lands affected, of the streams themselves, of the work to be done, nor because it regulates six streams for each of which, it is alleged, a distinct and separate procès-verbal should have been made. A by-law, purporting to amend the above proces-verbal, that apportions the work among the contributories proportionately to the extent of their lands, declaring that no other apportionment is required, is null and A resolution of a municipal council ordering the apportionment of the work to be done on two only of six streams regulated by a proces-verbal, will not, for that reason, be set aside, nor on the ground that appor-tionment could be made only of work of repair or rebuilding (Art. 816a, M. C.), nor on the ground that it is in effect an amendment of the proces-verbal, inasmuch as it casts the burthen of the work on different lands (because differently described) from those in the proces-verbal, Vaillancourt v. Rivers and Streams Act-Tolls-Order fixing—Condition precedent to right of ac-tion—Remedy.]—Section 13 of the Rivers and Streams Act, R. S. O. 1897, c. 142, confers exclusive jurisdiction to fix tolls payable for floating saw-logs over constructions and improvements made by others in rivers, streams, and creeks, upon the different tri-bunals mentioned in it; and it is incumbent upon any persons seeking to levy such tolls to produce as a condition precedent to recovery an order or judgment by one of such tribunals fixing them.—Per Osler and Garrow, JJ.A .- It is not necessary that the tolls should be fixed before the logs are floated,-Aliter, per Meredith, J.A.—Per Garrow, J.A.

—An action will lie for such tolls, after the same have been duly fixed, and parties are not confined to the remedy by distress given by s. 19. Beck Manufacturing Co. v. Ontario Lumber Co., 12 O. L. R. 163, 8 O. W. R. 35. See 3 O. W. R. 333.

Supply of water — Deed—Covenant— Easement—Servitude—Personal obligation.] -A covenant in a deed by which P. acquired the right to erect a wind-mill pump on his neighbour's land to supply water to his pre-mises by a pipe, "that he agrees to permit F., another neighbour, to take water for the use of his premises from the pump, and for that purpose to connect a pipe with the one to be laid by P.," does not establish a servitude in favour of F.'s premises. The latter are not described so as to be made a dominant tenement, and there is no servient tenement on which the charge is imposed. The covenant only gives rise to a personal obligation by P. to F.; and the subsequent owners, à titre particulier, of F.'s premises have no rights of servitude that can be en-forced against P. Christin v. Péloquin, 28 Que. S. C. 299.

Timber—Saw Logs Driving Act—R. S. O. (1887) c. 121—Arbitration and award.]—Cockburn & Sons, in driving logs down Bear Creek, District of Nipissing, found them stopped by a drive in front belonging to the Imperial Lumber Company, which had reached their destination and were held in the stream until they could be transported to the mill by means of a jack ladder. The logs of C. & Sons were detained so long that they could not be driven further that season, which not be driven that the that season, which caused considerable damage, and an arbitration was agreed on under the Saw Logs Driving Act, C. & Sons claiming damages for detention, and the company cross-claiming in respect to jams detaining another drive behind that of C. & Sons. The arbitrator disallowed the company's claim, and awarded C. & Sons some $1,100 for un-necessary and unreasonable detention. In an action on the award the company pleaded that the arbitrator had given compensation for delay caused by the mere fact that their drive was ahead of the other, and the Court of Appeal so held and gave judgment in their favour on the ground that C. & Sons' only remedy was by breaking the jam:—Held, reversing the judgment, 26 A. R. 19, 19 C. L. T. 61, that C. & Sons had also a remedy by arbitration under the Act; that the company had not made before the arbitrator the pany had not made before the arbitrator the claim raised by the plea; and that they had failed to establish such plea on the trial. Cockburn v. Imperial Lumber Co., 19 C. L. T. 374, 30 S. C. R. 80.

County road—Boundary between local municipalities.]—Where one side of a road runs along the boundary line between two local municipalities, although such road is wholly situate in one of them, it is a county road, under the provisions of Art. 755, paragraph 2, of the Municipal Code. Walsh v. 8t. Anicet. 25 Que. S. C. 319.

Deviations — Substitute for boundary line between counties — Declaration — Mandamus. — The question was whether a "deviation" road came within s. 617 (1) of the Municipal Act, 1903, (3 Edw. VII. c, 19), so as to be regarded as a boundary line between counties. The deviation in question was rendered necessary owing to a sharp bend in the river Madawaska, where the boundaries between the township of Fitzroy in the county of Carleton, the township of McNabb in the county of Renfrew, and the township of Pakenham in the county of Lanark, meet:—Held, by Court of Appeal, Justice Osler dissenting, that the deviation road was to be regarded as a boundary between Pakenham and McNabb, and between Fitzroy and McNabb, but not between Fitzroy and Pakenham. The history and the meaning of the boundary line road legislation discussed. Fitzroy v. Carleton, 25 C. L. T. 292, 5 O. W. R. 615, 9 O. L. R. 686, Ditches — Width of road — Presumption — Municipal corporation — Possession — Paesement.] — Where a road is bounded by ditches, there is no presumption that the space between the ditch and the fence of an owner of land fronting on the road forms part of it. Therefore, the remedy by an action for restoration against an owner who has built between his fence and the road-ditch is not open to the municipal corporation in whose territory the road lies, unless it can establish possession of the land for a year. The existence of a paesement at the place in question does not constitute a proof of possession by the corporation or the public, where it appears that it has been constructed by the owner of the land or his grantors in order to give more easy access for his customers to his shop. Corp. of St. Francois Xavier de Brompton v. Salois, 34 Que, S. C. 258.

Public highway between townships
—Survey — Road allovance — Evidence—Departure from instructions and plan.]—
The township of Lochiel forms part of the original township of Lancaster laid out and partly surveyed about the year 1784 or 1785, as composed of 17 concessions. Subsequently an 18th concession was added, and, in 1818, concessions 10 to 18 of Lancaster were de-tached as the township of Lochiel. During the year 1798, the township of Hawkesbury (now divided into East and West Hawkesbury) was laid out and partly surveyed by a deputy provincial surveyor named Fortune, who returned his plan and field notes without the double lines generally in use to shew road allowances between Hawkesbury and the lands now lying upon the northerly and the mains now lying upon the northerly and easterly limits of Lochiel. In completing the survey of portions of Lancaster and Hawkesbury, in 1816, a deputy provincial surveyor named McDonald planted posts on the ground, but also returned plans and field notes without indicating road allowances at the points in question. The departmental instructions, under which these surveys were made, directed that the mode of survey, etc., should be according to a model plan shewing rectangular townships surrounded by double haes. None of these reservations were shewn on the plan of Hawkesbury, and, in the Lancaster boundary, the rectangular form was broken:—Held, that there could be no inference from the instructions and model, in view of the other circumstances, that road allowances were intended to be reserved on the eastern and northern boundaries of Lancaster where the rectangle was broken .- Held, also, that, even if the work subsequently performed on the ground by McDonald or other Crown officers might afford some evidence of an intention on the part of the Crown to dedicate as a highway certain portions which may have been reserved for the purpose, yet, having regard to the decisions in Tanner v. Biscell. 21 U. C. R. 553, and Boley v. McLean, 41 U. C. R. 271, officers employed for the survey of an old line could not conclusively establish a road allowance along the boundary, if none had been reserved by the original survey. Judgment in 1 O. W. Repair — Municipality — Strip between ditch and fence.]—A municipal road consists of all the land comprised between the fences which bound it, provided that the width is not more than that prescribed by statute; and therefore the owner of land bordering on a road, when he is not obliged to keep the road in repair, cannot be called upon in respect of work done in the strip of land between the ditch and the fence, which is part of the road. 2. DEDICATION OF HIGHWAYS.

Absence of acceptance by the municipality of the streets, and evidence of a user of the streets by the public or of evidence of the sale of lands in the subdivision, prevent the streets shewn on the plan from becoming highways. Marsan v. G. T. P. Rw. Co. (1909), 2 Alta. L. R. 43; 10 W. L. R. 405; 9 Can. Ry. Cas. 341.

Acceptance — Acquiescence — Tax deed —Description — Estoppel. Piper v. Paipoonge, 6 O. W. R. 287.

Acceptance - Acquiescence - Time . Statutes.]-The respondent and another in 1873 bought land in a town, divided it into lots, separated by a certain number of streets, to which they gave names by which the streets continued to be known, and had a plan made and sent to the Crown Lands Commissioner, who transmitted a copy of it to the registrar in order that it might form part of the official cadastre. The streets were afterwards opened by order of the respondent, ditched, fenced, and partly paved. The respondent also acquired a neighboring piece of land in order to extend these streets to meet neighbouring streets, which was done. He sold lots facing on these streets and in conveying covenanted to leave these streets open in perpetuity :- Held, that by these acts the streets were dedicated to the public as public streets .- 2. Dedication may result from a unilateral declaration of the owner, and need not be the subject of a regular contract.—3. This dedication was accepted by the public by the user of these streets for fifteen years. It was not necessary that the traffic over them should be the same throughout; it was of little importance that the streets had got into a bad state, the fences and pavements disappeared, and the streets themselves used as pasturage, as long as they remained visible and marked out upon the ground.—4. The acceptance of the dedication resulted also from the fact that the municipal authority had included the streets in their homologated plan, declared final and obligatory by the terms of the charter, and the more so be-cause the respondent, who was then a muni-cipal councillor, had taken part in these proceedings without claiming any right of property in the streets, and that the municipal authority had paved them and put in sewers and water pipes.—5. This dedication and acceptance were not affected by the fact that the officers of the corporation had, by error and without the authority of the corporation, levied some taxes from the respondent upon a small part of these streets, the corporation having brought the amount into Court with their pleading.—6 Semble, that the provision of 18 V. c. 100, Art. 40, s. 9, as to possession during ten years of streets by a municipal corporation, should be restricted to roads existing before the 1st July, Westmount v. Warminton, 9 Que. Q. B. 101.

Acceptance-Altering level - Injury to land — Liability — Damages — Plans — Interest.]—When the owners of the soil of a private street have offered to give this street for nothing to the city corporation, and the latter has accepted this offer, as well by resolution of its committee and of its council as by works, such as the construc-tion of a sewer and sidewalk, lighting and levelling the soil of the street, executed by the corporation upon the street, and when the street has been opened for public travel, such street becomes a public street, even in the absence of a contract or of its inscription as such in the city registers .-Even if the street was a private street, the city corporation becomes responsible for an overflow of water from which the plaintiff has suffered, when the corporation has altered the condition of the street by raising the level near the property of the plaintiff, and by filling up a ravine by which water formerly flowed away without difficulty, in such a way as to expose the property of the plaintiff to an overflow, especially when the evidence shews that the sewer and the culvert which the city corporation has placed in the street are insufficient in the case of a heavy rain to receive the surface water .-In this case, it being necessary for the purpose of the action and on account of the particular condition of the locus in quo, to have a plan made by an expert and a state-ment of the damages suffered, the plaintiff is entitled to recover as part of his damages the fees of such expert.—Interest upon the amount awarded for damages runs from the date of the judicial demand. -Injunction - Declaratory judgment -Costs. | The defendants were the owners of a block of land in the city of Victoria, fronting on Lime street. About 23 years before action the defendants' predecessor in title built a lean-to on the south side of his buildand this had been maintained ever since by him and the defendants. The territory which included Lime street was not taken into the city until 1892, and prior to that it was under the direct control of the Crown. In 1861 the "Nagle map" was deposited in the land registry office, under the provi-sions of s. 54 of c. 3 of the British Colum-bia Statutes of 1860, which enabled the registered owner of an absolute fee to subdivide his land for the purpose of selling the same in allotments, and deposit a map of the same, provided such map should exhibit all roads, streets, etc., set apart for public use. The lots owned by the defendants on Lime street were shewn upon this map. The southerly portion of Lime street had been used by the public to a limited extent to gain access to a railway, but the road was not graded nor was any public money expended upon it before being taken into the city limits; since then its use had been about the same as formerly; it was still ungraded: but the plaintiffs in 1894 constructed surface drain along the street, and in 1895 erected and had since maintained poles on the street, carrying city electric light and fire alarm wires :- Held, that there was a dedication of the street by the depositing of the Nagle map, and an acceptance by the of the Nagle map, and an acceptance by the acts of the plaintiffs, if an acceptance was necessary in view of the fact that the defendants lots were originally purchased under the Nagle map, which furnished the original description by which they were known, and in view of the provisions of the Victoria Official Map Act, 1893. — Held, also that the defendants' claim to a title also, that the derendants cann to a true by prescription failed for want of time (20 years), as well as for want of possession of the necessary charter. The plaintiffs acquired a title only in 1892, before which the title was in the Crown, against whom a possession of 60 years would have to be shewn. The defendants' possession was of a very small portion of Lime street, was not an exclusive possession, and did not appear to have been under a claim of right — it might have been a mere indulgence. In order to acquire a title by prescription the possession must be an adverse one of such a character as to presuppose a grant. Held, also, that, in face of the provisions of the Victoria Official Map Act, 1893, and the "Ralph map," deposited with the Regis-trar-General in 1894, shewing upon it Lime street, with the same boundaries that were shewn by the Nagle map, the defendants could not contend that they had any right to the use and occupation of Lime street.— Section 21 of that Act provided for a board of three arbitrators to fix, in case of disagreement, the amount of any compensation payable by the plaintiffs; and the plaintiffs asked in this action for a mandamus to compel the defendants to appoint an arbitrator under that section. By section 3 of the Victoria Special Powers Act, 1907, the legislature validated the Ralph map as an official map, and provided that ss. 13, 14, 15 and 21 of the former Act should apply to such map, and be binding on all persons But s. 3 went on to proaffected thereby. vide for the appointment of a sole arbitrator between the corporation and all persons affected.—Held, that the Act of 1907 substituted a sole arbitrator for the board of three arbitrators, and, a sole arbitrator having been appointed, there was no necessity for a mandamus in this action .- Held, also, that until the arbitrator had made his award and the plaintiffs had paid the defendants the compensation fixed, if any, the plaintiffs were not entitled to an injunction and mandamus in respect of the removal of the de-fendants' lean-to.—Held, however, that, as the defendants went to trial on the issues as to whether Lime street was a public high-way and whether the plaintiffs' rights were barred by the Statute of Limitations, and all the evidence as directed to those issues, on which the defendants failed, they were on which the decembants failed, they were not entitled to the costs of the action.— Quare, whether, in view of the principle enunciated in London and North Western Rw. Co. v. Donellan, [1898] 2 Q. B. 7, the Court had jurisdiction to deal with any of the matters in question before arbitration.— But, as the defendants had not raised that point, held, that the plaintiffs should have a declaration that the portion of Lime street lying between Mary and Catherine street was a public highway; this declaration not to hamper the proceedings or judgment of the arbitrator.—No order as to costs. Victoria v. Silver Spring Brewery (1910), 14 W. L. R. 626.

Acceptance by public — User.]—An action was brought by the corporation of the city of Toronto against the Grand Trunk Railway Company to determine whether or realiway Company to determine whether or not a street crossed by the railway was a public highway prior to 1857, whon the company obtained their right of way. It appeared on the hearing that in 1850 the trustees of the general hospital conveyed land adjoining the street, describing it in the deed as the western boundary of allow-ance for road, and in another conveyance made in 1853 they mentioned in the description a street running south along said lot, being the street in question. Subsequent conveyances of the same land prior to 1857 also recognised the allowance for a road :-Held, Idington, J., dissenting, that the said conveyances were acts of dedication of the street as a public highway.—The first deed executed by the hospital trustees and a plan produced at the hearing shewed that the street extended across the railway track and down to the river Don, but at the time the portion between the track and the river was a marsh. Evidence was given of use by the public of the street down to the edge of the marsh.—Held, Idington, J., dissenting, that the use of such portion was applicable to the whole dedicated road down to the river, and the evidence of user was suffi-cient to shew an acceptance by the public of the highway.—Judgment of the Court of Appeal in Toronto v. Grand Trunk Rv. Co., 4 O. W. R. 491, reversing judgment of MacMahon, J., 2 O. W. R. 3, affirmed. Grand Trunk Rv. Co. v. Toronto, 26 C. L. T. 248, 37 S. C. R. 210.

Acquisition by municipality—User— Opening — Fences.] — Besides the modes prescribed by the Municipal Code, municipalities may acquire lands for public roads; (1) by dedication or abandonment by the owner of the land with the object of openowner of the and with the object on pen-ing and establishing a public road; (2) by user and public and continuous possession of such land as a road by the public during thirty years; (3) by the opening and user as such by the public of the whole road, without contestation of the right, for the space of ten years or more, according to the provisions of 18 V. c. 100, s. 40, s.-s. 9 (Q.) . Fences erected by the ancient proprietors fencing off a public road are recognised according to Quebec usages and presumed to have been established by such proprietors with the object of separating their properties from the road, and that in the interests of good administration and also with a view of protecting the crops and the property itself generally, and such fences will serve and aid considerably in determining the question of dedication. Jones v. Asbestos, 19 Que, S. C. 168.

Prior to 1865 the lot was subdivided, and on the plan of subdivision the strip of land was shewn as a lane or passage. Reference to this lane or passage was made in a deed of sale executed by the owner in 1865, and the cadastral plan of the municipality, made in 1879, for registra-tion purposes shewed it as a public road. In 1881, in connection with the registration of charges on the land, the owner made a statutory declaration and gave a notice to the registrar of deeds as required by the "Cadastral Act," describing the strip of land in question as "a road 20 feet wide." It was also shewn that, during more than thirty years prior to the action, the strip of land had been used as a lane or passage by the general public :- Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, 17 Que, K. B. 60, Idington, J., dissenting, that these circumstances constituted complete, clear, and unequivocal evidence of the intention of the owners of the beach lot to dedicate the strip of land in question for the purposes of a public highway; that no formal acceptance of such dedication by the corporation of the municipality was necessary to render such dedication effective in favour of the general public; and that, even if there had originally been any limitation reserved as to the use thereof by a special class of persons only, it had become a public highway by reason of long user as such .- Although no right of ownership can be effected by cadastral plans, they must, in view of their publicity, be considered as having some pro-bative effect in respect to persons having interests in the lands described therein. Rhodes v. Perusse, 41 S. C. R. 264, 6 E. L. R. 158.

Conduct - Implication - Intention -Sale of lots - Description - Plan.] -Dedication of land to the use of the public, as a road, is distinguished from conveyance by the fact that the latter is express and by title, and the former is implied in acts, which must, however, clearly disclose the intention of the owner. When such acts appear to be in execution of a condition under which the owner has acquired the whole property, they will bear out the inference more readily than if performed by an absolute owner, free to deal with his property as he chooses. Hence, the grantee under letters patent from the Crown of a beach lot, upon the condition that, if it be laid out for building lots, a sufficient number of cross-streets will be left open, etc., who (a) sells a lot bounded on a given side to a lane or passage of 20 feet, with the right of way over it to the purchaser in common with the neighbouring proprietors; (b) describes this 20-foot strip as a road, in a notice of renewal of registration, though he renews his registration simultaneously as to the land itself of which the strip is a part, and (c) sells half a dozen lots by the numbers given on a plan which has no numbering of the strip, and with the actual mention of the continuation of it as being a reserved road, will be held to have dedicated the strip to the use of the public as a road. — 2. When land is granted on the condition that if it be laid out for building lots, a road or roads will be left open, etc., the obligation arises as be left open, etc., the obligation arises as soon as any building lots are laid out and sold for which the roads may be required, and not only after the whole land granted has been so laid out and sold. used as a public highway, it becomes vested in the Crown by virtue of s. 622 of the Act, and a subsequent purchaser, although he bought without notice of the prior conveyance or of the existence of the road, and registered his deed before the registration of the deed to the municipality, acquires no title to the road as against the Crown, notwithstanding s. 68 of the Registry Act, R. S. M. 1992 c. 150, which does not apply to the Crown, and notwithstanding the failure of the municipality to register the by-law establishing the road, as required by s. 639 of the Municipal Act. — Such purchaser, therefore, has no title to complain of the registration of the deed to the municipality as a cloud on his title. Failure to prove-Private way-Profit à prendre - Seaweed - Custom - Prescription. |-- In an action for trespass the defendant alleged that he was going to the shore to gather seaweed, that there was a public way to the shore, and that because the plaintiff's fence was across the way he threw it down. The defendant also claimed a private way acquired by grant or prescription. The trial Judge found that there was no public way, and that the plaintiff had failed to establish a private way:— Held, that where the road in question was a mere cart road, not a thoroughfare, and there was not a public terminus at each end, and there was no statute labour per formed on the road, strong evidence would be required to shew a dedication.—Seaweed deposited by the sea above high water mark. constitutes a profit à prendre, and the right to take it and pile it on the land of another could not become established, either by custom or prescription, in favour of the in-habitants of a district. Highway laid out by private person—Assumption for public user — Expenditure on sidewalk. I—A highway in the township of York laid on by a private person had been used as such for many years, and a sidewalk had been built upon it by the defendants under the supervision of their pathmaster, and the council had by by-law appropriated money to pay for the construction of it, and payment had been duly made C.C.L.—144.

to the persons who built it:—Held, that this was sufficient to establish that the highway had been assumed for public user by the corporation within the meaning of s. 607 of the Municipal Act, 3 Edw, VII. c. 19 (O.). The purpose of s. 598 is to declare that certain classes of roads are public highways; and it has no bearing on the question whether an actual highway laid out by a private person has been assumed for public user. Maintenance — Cost of work—Action to recover from land-owner — Work done by inspector - Evidence of inspector - Account — Report — Authorisation — Per-centage.]—It is the imperative duty of a municipal corporation and its officers to put its roads in good order without delay. The testimony of the inspector who has done the work is a sufficient proof, if not contradicted, that the work has been executed, that the sum claimed is the value of it, that the formalities required have been followed, and that the defendant in an action to recover the cost of the work is the person bound by law to pay such cost. 3. It was not necessary to give the defendant in this case a municipal notice, she residing in England, nor to give notice to her agent, who resided at Quebec, inasmuch as no writing had been deposited at the office of the municipal council giving the address of the defendant or of her agent. 4. A road crossing the defendant's lots and other lots in the 4th range of Gosford having been for a great many years open and free to the public as a road in front of such lots, and being governed by a procés-verbal which declared such road to be the road in front of such lots and to be at the charge, as to its maintenance, summer and winter, of every land-owner in the 4th range whose land abutted thereon, should be maintained by the defendant as regards the part which crossed her lots, and there was no ground for an act of apportionment to execute such part of proces-verbal, for there were no works to apportion. 5. Even if there was need of any act of apportionment, in default of such an act, Art, 824, M. C., would apply until such act was made, 6. The inspector of roads himself did the work which the defendant should have done; he rendered an account for it without adding the statutory 20 per cent.; and he did the work without first having made the report required to the council and without the authorisation of the council. Later the plaintiff corporation paid the inspector the amount of his account without the 20 per cent .:- Held, that the corporation had a right to pay the amount of the account; in paying it, they paid the defendant's debt. (b) The corporation had an action against the defendant to recover what they had paid. (c) But they had not the right to recover the 20 per cent, from the defendant. (d) The corporation would have no right in their own behalf to the 20 per cent. except in cases falling under Arts.

Ownership of part not used-Servi-Ownership of part not used Scruitude Litigious rights — Warranty.]
The plaintiff, by petitory action, claimed the ownership of a strip of land, under the deed of purchase in 1897. It appeared that a street in the villege of Hochelaga was opened in 1874 or 1875. street in the villege of Hochelaga was opened in 1874 or 1875, and the width proposed was 100 feet. In 1884 the village of Hoche-laga was annexed to the city of Montreal, and the city reduced the width of the pro-posed street from 100 feet to 60 feet, leaving a strip 40 feet wide which was not used, as originally contemplated, for street pur-The question was, in whom did the hip of the strip vest. The plaintiff poses. ownership of the strip vest. ownership of the strip vest. The planting relied upon her title by purchase from the parties who held the title prior to the proposed widening. The defendant called in posed widening. The defendant called in her vendors, the Banque Jacques Cartier, in warranty, and also pleaded possession for over ten years. The defendant further over ten years. The defendant further pleaded to the action, alleging ownership; that the strip in question had formed part of Ontario street for more than ten years; that when the width of the street was, in 1887, reduced to 60 feet, the excess, 40 feet, reverted to her as the adjoining proprietor, and that the defendant had ever since been in possession. To the action in warranty the defendants in warranty pleaded that, when they bought the property subsequently sold to the principal defendant, it was bounded in front by the proposed street, and that the subsequent action of the city in reducing the width to sixty feet could not make them liable to an action in warranty :- Held (in the principal action) :-- 1. That when the width of the street was reduced, the possession of the forty feet deducted reverted to the parties who owned the land before the improvement was projected, viz., in this case, the plaintiff's auteurs, and that the title on which the plaintiff rested existed at the date of the sale by the bank to the defendant. 2. The special laws and usages applicable to the dedication of streets can only be resorted to where it is proved that the owner has, in fact, voluntarily and gratuitously abandoned his property to the public use. Otherwise, the principle that no servitude can be established without a title governs. 3. The plea of litigious rights cannot avail the defendant unless the price and incidental expenses of the sale, with interest on the price from the day that the buyer has paid it, be tendered with such plea (Art. 1582, C. C.). 4. The defendants in warranty, having sold the land in question to the principal defendant, sous les garanties de droit, as fronting on the street, whereas, at date of the sale, a strip of forty feet wide inter-vened, were liable for the damages thereby occasioned to the principal defendant. Gauthier v. Monarque, 19 Que. S. C. 93.

Plan—Crown — Obstruction — Nuisance —Injunction.] — The defendants, claiming under the original squatter on certain Dominion lands, erected a building thereon fronting on claims of himself and his assigns, registered an old trail; the original squatter subsequently, in expectation of the Crown recognising the claims of himself and his assigns, registered a plan of the entire land, whereon was shewn a highway approximately conforming to the lines of the old trail, but so that the building in question projected into the highway shewn on the plan. The Crown did, afterwards, grant a patent to the original squatter for the entire land, excepting the portions shewn on the plan, as reserved for the defendants and others in like position. These excepted por-tions as they appeared on the plan approximately conformed in size and position to the portions which the squatter had assumed to convey to the defendants and others, Patents for these excepted portions were granted by the Crown to the defendants and others, respectively:—Held, that the Crown, by issuing patents in accordance with the registered plan, had adopted it, and thereby dedicated to the public the highway as shewn thereon; that the plaintiff municipality, within which the land lay, having demanded of the defendants the removal of the building, so far as it encroached on the highway as shewn on the plan, and the defendants having refused to comply with the demand, the plaintiff municipality were entitled to a mandatory injunction to abate the nuisance. - Held. also, that the defendants were consequently not entitled to compensation as owners or occupiers under the provision of the Muni-cipal Ordinance. Plan—Municipal corporations—Expenditure.]—The owners of two adjoining lots agreed between themselves to give twenty feet of each lot to form a street, and a plan of sub-division of the lots shewing a street of this width was filed by them, the consent of the municipality being given by resolution. The line fence was then taken down, and one owner fenced his land so as to leave twenty feet of the lot open to the public, but the other fenced his land some grading on the sixty feet, and the sixty feet were used by the public for the purpose of a highway:—Held, that the giving of forty feet by the one owner did not relieve the other owner from his obligation to give twenty feet, and that ecould not, after the expenditure of public money upon it and its user by the public from the purpose of a land its user by the public, retract the dedication of the twenty-foot strip. Shorey v. Cook, 26 Que. S. C. 203.

Plan-Other acts-Servitude-Violation.] -The proprietors of certain land prepared an official subdivision plan of the property, divding it into lots and tracing a street thereon. They registered this plan as the official plan, and sold lots described as fronting on the street indicated on the plan. They also constructed a sidewalk along the street, and permitted the public to pass freely without objection. They also petitioned the municipal council to annex the property in accordance with the plan, which petition was granted :- Held, that there was a valid dedication of the property as a public street. 2. In any case, the acts above mentioned constituted at least a servitude of right of way over and through the pro-perty, in favour of the purchasers of lots described as fronting on such street, and the erection of platforms thereon was an illegal obstruction, and a violation of the servitude. Geoffrion v. Montreal Park and Island Rw. Co., 20 Que. S. C. 559.

Plan-Registration before incorporation.1 —A plan shewing the locus in quo as a street was made and filed before, but practically contemporaneously with, the locality being set apart as an incorporated village, the former being on the 3rd June, 1873, the latter on the 25th June, 1873. Lots were first sold under the plan in 1876. Subsequent legislation, which was retroactive, declared that allowances for roads laid out in cities, towns, and villages, fronting upon which lots had been sold, should be public highways:—Held, that the road in question was a public highway and subject to the jurisdiction of the municipality. McGregor v. Watford, 13 O. L. R. 10, 8 O. W. R. 479.

Plan.] - The plaintiff's predecessor in title bought a certain lot according to a plan (then unregistered), on which was shewn a strip 33 feet in width, running along one side of the lot. The plaintif alleged that this strip had been dedicated, either as a public highway or a private way for the use of the owner of the lot, and claimed a declaration to that effect and an injunction. On the evidence, the Court found for the plaintiff and gave judgment accordingly. Daly v. Robertson, 1 Terr. L. R. 427.

Presumption - User-Closing up road Presumption — User—Closing up road—Municipal corporation,—A road originally opened as a private road on private property will not be presumed to have become a public road in the possession of the municipality in which it lies merely because the owner has allowed the public the use of it for 6 years without objection. The municipal corporation cannot therefore proceed en complainte against the owner who closes the road. Onslow v. McGough, 30 Que. S. C. 256, Private person-Necessity for writing-Plan — Registration — Priorities — Rights of creditors.]-The indication of a proposed street upon the official homologated plan of a city is not equivalent to the writing required by Art. 551, C. C., for the creation of a servitude par destination du père de famille; such dedication must be by writing and not otherwise. 2. The homologation such plan does not give a title to the property; such title can be acquired only by expropriation, compulsory or voluntary.

3. A servitude created par destination du père de famille is effective as against third persons only by registration indicating the lands subject to the servitude, in conformity with Art. 2168, C. C., and is not valid as against claims previously registered. 4. In this case the claim of the petitioner was already registered at the time of the creation of the pretended servitude, and the city of Montreal not having carried out its project for the extension of Hutchinson street, the petitioner had a right to require that the land should be sold in insolvency proceedings to satisfy his claim. of the Sessions was never opened, but another road, following the same general direction, was opened across this lot and the others, in 1835 or 1836, and from the time it was opened was regularly travelled and used as a highway. The title to the lot in question remained in the Crown until 1904, when the plaintiff, claiming as successor in title to the original locatee, obtained a patent for it, in which no reservation or mention of any road was made. It was quite plain that the plaintiff and his predecessors had acquiesced in the user of the road, but it was contended that there was no dedication by the Crown, and that the acts of the locatee before the patent were not binding upon him after its issue, Street, J .:-From the time the road was laid out, between 60 and 70 years ago, it has been a recognised, well travelled public highway, connecting locally important centres, fenced off from the farm in question, improved from time to time by statute labour and public money, and treated by the plaintiff and his predecessors in the equitable title to the farm as being an undoubted public highway. In these circumstances, there is evidence of dedication by the equitable owner, acquiesced in by the Crown; and the fact a Sessions order was made for the establishing of a highway, but never acted upon, and abandoned at once, is no reason why the establishment and user of a road parallel to it should not be treated as evidence of a dedication." At that time there were numbers of persons in occupation of different purcels of the land forming the settlement. McD. was in occupation of the parcel shewn on the government plan of survey as river lot 8, and had been so for some years previously. McD's rights as a "squatter" under the Dominion Lands Act, R. S. C. 1886 c. 54, s. 33, were recognized by the government, and he was given a right to purchase the lot outright at $1 an arc. He exercised this right, and a patent was eventually issued to him, on the 30th September, 1889. It appeared that at the date of the survey there were two well defined trails crossing the lot, and that both had been used as public roads for a period of more than 20 years previous to the attempted closing by McD's successor in title of the trail in question in this action—the southerly trail of the two above mentioned. Per Scott, 1,.—The fact that the patence before the issue of patent never interfered with the user by the public of the trails crossing the lot, or that he permitted such user, would not constitute an implied dedication by him of such trails as highways. Having no legal right or title of occupation, he was not in a position to prevent such user, and it would be unreasonable to hold that a dedication should be implied against him merely because he permitted an act to be done which he was powerless to prevent. The patent contained the following prevent. The patent contained the public road words: "Reserving thereout the public road width crossing the or trail one chain in width crossing the said lot:"-Scott, J., held that this reserva-tion was not void for uncertainty, but that the defendants, upon whom the onus of proof lay, had failed to shew that the trail in question was that one of the two trails which was intended by the reservation. In the year 1894 the defendant municipality expropriated a part of river lot 8. McD, was then the owner of the portion expropriated. The plaintiff represented McD. on the arbitration proceedings. Upon the arbitration it was material that the arbitrators in order to arrive at the amount of the compensation should ascertain whether the trail in question was a highway. His counsel contended that it was a highway. The award found that it was a highway. Scott, J., held that the plaintiff was estopped from denying that the trail in question was a highway. On appeal, Richardson and Wetmore, JJ., held, that, taking into account all the facts, and applying the principles laid down in Turner v. Walsh, 6 App. Cas. 636, a dedication of the trail in question ought to be presumed, and on this ground agreed in dismissing the and on this ground agreed in dismissing the appeal. Rouleau, J., dissented, and was of opinion that the appeal should be allowed. Section 5:09 of the Judicature Ordinance, 1893, provides, amongst other things, that the Court on appeal "shall have power to draw inferences of fact, and to give any inference and pulse any order which contributions." judgment and make any order which ought to have been made, and to make such further or other order as the case may require: Per Wetmore, J.:—The exercise of these powers is discretionary with the Court, and powers is discretionary with the Court, and possibly the Court ought not to find facts not found by the trial Judge, unless they are clearly established by the evidence, if the weight of testimony is manifestly in favour of the finding. Where such is the case, however, the legislature intends that the Court shall dispose of the case without sending it back for a new trial. Heiminch sending it back for a new trial. Heiminek v. User—Plan — Deed — Estoppel — Evidence.]—In an action for obstructing a highway there was conflicting evidence as to its location and user by the public. In support of the defendants' title a lease and an assignment thereof were produced, both of which had a plan attached exhibiting the highway as located where the plaintiffs claimed it to be. Neither the lease nor the assignment made any reference to the plans. The defendants' evidence shewed the highway as actually used in a location differing had been considered as the constant of the state of the second constant o

from that shewn by the plans. The jury found in favour of the defendants, both as to location and user. The trial Judge held that, as the deeds and plans must be read together, the defendants were estopped from disputing the location of the highway, and, disregarding the findings of the jury as to its location and user, ordered a verdict to be entered for the plaintiffs:—Held, that the verdict was properly so entered. User by public — Action — Parties— Attorncy-General — Municipal corporation— Ownership in fee,]—In an action for a de-claration that a portion of the River road lying between Burgar and Dorothy streets, in the town of Welland, was not a highway, but the private property of the plaintiffs, it appeared that the road had been continuously travelled by the public since the district was first settled, and that in 1855 B., the plaintiffs' predecessor in title, as owner of the lands adjoining this portion of the road, agreed with the municipal corporation, the township in which these properties were then situate, to dedicate to the public as highways and to open up for traffic Burgar and Dorothy streets, and, in consideration of his doing so, the corporation agreed to of his doing so, the corporation of close up and convey to him the portion of the River road in question. For this purpose a by-law was passed, admitted by the defendants to be legal and sufficient, and a conveyance to B. was duly executed, which, as admitted, vested the fee in him: -Held, that if a highway now existed, it must be by that it a highway how existed, it must be by virtue of an express or implied dedication by the owner since 1855; and, as such private dedication would vest in the municipality not merely the surface, but the soil and freehold of the highway, it was unnecessary for the purposes of the present action that the Attorney-General should be added as a party.—The by-law enacted that B. should have the right to close up the road as soon as Burgar and Dorothy streets should be opened for public use and travel. Until 1873 or 1874 Burgar street was unfit for use as a public highway, and the public continued to use the River road, and even after Bur-gar street was opened and used the user of the portion of the River road in question continued, and no attempt was made at any time to close it; the public continuously used it without objection, and public money was spent upon it from time to time:—Held, following Mytton v. Duck, 26 U. C. R. 61, that, even if the user for the first 18 years should not be taken into account, because of the special clause in the by-law of 1855, there had been, since the right to close be-came absolute, 32 or 33 years of uninter-rupted user before the bringing of this acrupted user before the bringing of this ac-tion, sufficient to establish conclusively a dedication. Macoomb v. Welland, 12 O. L. R. 362, 7 O. W. R. 876. Divisional Court reversed above judgment

Divisional Court reversed above judgment of Anglin J., holding that the evidence did not establish dedication, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to succeed—Held, also, that the Attorney-General was not a necessary party. Maccomb v. Welland, 9 O. W. R. 143, 13 O. L. R. 335.

Expense of widening street—Contribution of land-oveners—Apportionment.] — Held, reversing the judgment in 15 Que. S. C. 43, that 57 V. c. 76 (Q.) having enacted that the cost of the expropriation for the widening of Notre-Dame street, in the city of Montreal, should be paid in the proportion of five-eighths by the city of Montreal and of three-eighths by the owners of property abutting on the street, the commissioners should apportion the amount equally upon the two sides of the street, and should not take into account the benefit to the owners by the widening in such a way as to increase the contribution of one side of the street. Bélanger v. Montreal, 9 Que. Q. B.

Expropriation — Compensation.]—The city of Montreal had made and adopted a plan indicating a strip of land belonging to the appellant which was needed for the widening of a street. The respondent asked the city to expropriate in conformity with the plan, and moved back his fence to the new line. The city began expropriation proceedings, and, without waiting longer, the inspector, with the assent of the street commissioner, took possession of the strip in question, laid down the pavement according to the new line, and incorporated the strip into the street. The expropriation proceedings were afterwards abandoned in consequence of a subsequent statute which allowed the city to abandon such proceedings, saving the owners' recourse for damages:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the respondent could claim from the city the value of the land of which possession had thus been taken. Montreal v. Hogan, 8 Que. Q. B. 534.

VII., c. 10, s. 60—Municipal Act, 1993, s. 606 — Ordinary traffic—Interpretation of statutes—Imperative or directory—Condition precedent.]—Action for damages for negligence on part of defendants in maintaining a bridge over a river which broke down when plaintiff's traction engine, used for threshing purposes, was crossing, letting the engine down to the water and injuring it. The traction engine weighed about 7 tons—IHeld, that under the second amending Act above it is a condition precedent for the one in charge of the engine to lay down planks on the bridge before crossing, as required in the proviso in said last mentioned Act, and as plaintiff had not done this, action dismissed. A county council can approve of a report fixing the respective contribution to the up-keep of a bridge situated between several municipalities within the county, and may put the expense of building and of looking after such a bridge upon three of such municipalities, although there has existed for 30 years another report, approved by the Board of Delegates, declaring the bridge to be a local bridge and entrusting it to one municipality alone, without having the former report set aside by the Courts, if the former Board of Delegates were without jurisdiction and acted ultra views. County Councils cannot order that a road respecting which a proces-verbal is made, be maintained by each municipality through which it passes. Beaudet v. Lectereville (1910), 38 Que. S. C. 77.

County road—Cost of repairs—Owners of lands.]—A county road being under the control of the county municipality, the local municipality in which it lies has no power to repair it and no right to recover the cost of such repairs from persons in default.—The owner of a lot under 30 arpents in depth is not liable for the maintenance in repair of more than one front road. Corporation of Parish of Ste. Marthe v. Leblanc, 31 Que. S. C. 193.

County road—Liability of county corporation — Procès-verbal and sentence of homologation.]—Where a procès-verbal provides that the maintenance of a road shall be at the charge of a group of ratepayers of a local municipality, and the sentence of homologation at the same time declares it a county road, under the direction of the county corporation, the latter will be obliged to carry out the provisions of the procés-verbal, and levy the cost of such maintenance directly from the ratepayers in the manner provided by Art. 941. C. M., without having recourse to the intervention of the local municipality in which the road is situated. County of St. John v. Corp. of St. John v. Corp. of County road — Local municipalities — Maintenance.]—A road situated partly in one municipality and partly in another is a county road, even when it extends only a few feet into one of the municipalities.—The county council cannot declare such a road to be local and put it in the charge of the municipality in which the greater part lies, especially when it has not divided the road so as to put under the control of each municipality the part lying therein. Rocan v. Corporation de St. Vincent de Paul, 16 Que. S. C. 379.

Location of road — Statute — Rights under,]—The town of Longueuil was obliged, by the terms of its charter, to epea and maintain during the winter a road upon the river St. Lawrence to communicate with the city of Montreal, the cost thereof to be borne one-half by the city, three-eighths by the county, and one-eighth by the town:—Held, that the town alone had the right to localize the road and fix the terminus of it in the city of Montreal, Longueuil v. Montreal, 16 Que. S. C. 351.

Lots and ranges—Liability of ratepayers—Depth of lots.]—1. There is nothing in the statutes providing that a range shall only be 30 arpents deep. All that the law enacts is that a ratepayer is not bound to keep in repair in respect of the same land, to a depth of 30 arpents, more than one front road, and that too in a case in which the front road is not regulated by a proces-verbal or a by-law.—2. The law does not limit the extent of the land nor the number of lots which are comprised in a range. It simply says that where lots adjoin each other and border on the same line, the lots of the second range shall border on the same line; and the fact that the depth of one range is more considerable than that of others does not constitute a sufficient reason to justify the Court in relieving the ratepayers from the maintenance of the road. Goulet v. Corporation de Ste. Anne, 35 Que. S. C. 289.

Municipal corporations charged with maintenance of a road cannot make any exceptions other than those mentioned in Art. 535 M. C., therefore a road built by the government and handed over to a municipality must be maintained under the conditions existing when it was built, viz., the frontage proprietors must, for due indemnity received, keep the fences bordering on the road in good condition in perpetuity. Carden v. St. Michel (1909), 38 Que. S. C. 42.

Beauchemin v. Roxton, 31 Que. S. C. 86.

Owner in default-Works done by the municipality for him — Damages arising therefrom.]—The owner failing to maintain the road in front of his property has no recourse against the municipality for slight damages caused to his land by the works he finds himself forced to do in its place. Salois v. St. Francois du Lac (1909), 36 Que, S. C. 69.

Powers of municipal councils — Amendment of proces-verbaux by by-law— Fences and ditches — Maintenance of two roads at expense of same locality—Remedy of land owner—Intervention of Court.]—1. The appointment of a special superintendent and visiting the places in question are not required for the passing of by-laws which amend procès-verbaux.—2. Art. 774, C. M., bearing upon the fencing and ditching of roads in front, is for the purpose of cases where it is not otherwise provided for, and municipal councils have the power to depart from it by by-law or proces-verbal.—3.—A by-law which has the effect, when establishone road upon owners of land of more than 30 arpents deep, is not void on that account. These owners may require the new road to be maintained as a route, as regards the part with which they are charged, and, in default of a declaration to this effect, they, are only bound to do work upon the road nearest their place of abode: Art. 825, C. M. -4. The Courts should intervene to restrain the exercise of the discretionary powers of municipal councils only in the case of injustice or manifest illegality. Blanchard v. Corporation of the Parish of St. David, 35 Que. S. C. 277.

Powers of special superintendent — Municipal by-law—Uncertainty.]—A special superintendent has no powers other than those which have been conferred upon him by the council, and everything which he does going beyond the instructions of the council is void.-A by-law which enacts that a road shall be laid out, and maintained in future, at the expense of certain contributories, without saying in what manner it shall be so opened and laid out, is too vague and will be declared illegal. Piché v. Portneuf, 17 Que.

Road opened to public across land proposed to be divided into lots and leading to a railway station—Mainten-ance of such road before allotment of lots— M. C. 763, 822, 824, 829.]—A road opened by adjoining proprietors across land proposed to be divided into lots, and leading to a railway station, and open to public for over ten years, and which Courts have de-clared to be a front road, is a road under control of the corporation. Such road can no longer be closed, and the corporation is bound to see to its maintenance as a front road, and pending the dividing up of the land into lots, the maintenance of such road falls upon the proprietors fronting thereon. Pt. Claire v. Cooke (1906), 16 Que. R. de J. 324.

The planntiff was injured by reason of cinders which the third parties had, about a week before the accident, spread upon the road in order to afford a passage across it:—Held, that the defendants ought to have anticipated that some such means of passing from one side to the other would be adopted by the third parties, and were liable for negligence in the performance of their statutory duty to keep the highway in repair, but the third parties were liable over to the defendants. Approach to rallway crossing—Pence—Municipal corporation.]—By s. 611 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1807 c. 223, first introduced in 1896, no liability is now imposed on a municipal corporation by reason of want of repair of railway crossings through there being too high a grade and the omission to fence, the obligation therefor being under s. 186 of the Dominion Railway Act, 51 V. c. 29, imposed on the railway company. Where, therefore, under s. 186, the approach to a railway crossing must not be more than one foot rise or fall for every twenty feet of the horizontal length of such approach, unless a good and sufficient fence shall be made by the railway company on each side thereof, and in this case the grade line was four feet without any fences, the municipal corporation was held relieved from liability to a person who was injured. —Actions for damages sustained by plain tiff, who was crossing a bridge in the defendants' township during a thunderstorm between 9 and 10 o'clock at night on the 6th May, 1902, when a sudden flash of lightning caused his horse to swerve, and the horse's foot went into a gap in the logs of which the bridge was constructed, close to the edge of the bridge, and, there being no railing at the side of the bridge, they all fell raning at the sade of the bridge, and over into the water, which was within 18 inches of the bottom of the bridge, and the plaintiff sustained injury. On the 26th May the plaintiff gave notice to the defendants of the accident as having occurred on the 7th May, instead of on the 6th May, describing the circumstances and stating it was during a thunderstorm, and also that he had rescued his horse by the aid of a certain neighbour, whom he named:—Held, that the cause of the accident as a matter of law and fact was the negligence of the defendants in not providing the bridge with a proper railing, and that the thunder-storm was one of those ordinary dangers which ought to have been provided against, which ought to have been provided against, and that the notice given to the defendants was sufficient within s.-s. 3 of s. 606 of the Municipal Act, and the defendants were liable, and the damages ($200) were not excessive. Failure of municipality to remove snow-Negligence - Agreement with street railway company - Breach - Liability.] —A railway company acquired a street railway in 1894, subject to the obligations of keeping in repair the streets in which the railway ran, as provided by s. 10 of 50 V. c. 33 (N.B.), and also the obligation of removing the snow and ice as provided by s. 10 of 55 V. c. 29. In 1895, 58 V. c. 72 was passed, s. 6 of which authorised the company to agree with the city of St. John to pay an annual sum to be agreed upon as a consideration for taking care, etc., of the s reets and the removal of the snow thereon, relieving the company from all liability for the same during the continuance of the agreement. Acting under the authority of this section, the company and the city entered into a contract by which the city undertook to do what, by the section, it is authorised to do:-Held, in an action for damages for injury to the plaintiff caused by the de-fendants' negligence in not removing the snow in a street through which the railway ran, that s. 6, and the agreement made thereunder, imposes upon the city no greater liability in respect to the care of the streets than otherwise attaches to them as a municipal corporation, and neglect to remove the snow was a mere nonfeasance for which they were not liable at the suit of a private individual; and a nonsuit should be entered. McCrea v. St. John, 36 N. B. R. 144.

Injury to horses — Municipal Act, s. 667 — Adoption of road by municipality — Work done on another part — Obstruction —Notice.]—If work is performed on a public road by a municipality to facilitate travel between points on both sides of the place where the work is done, so as to provide a completed road between such points for the use of the public, the municipality is liable, under s. 667 of the Municipal Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 116, in case an accident happens by reason of non-repair of the road at any place between those points, although no work has been done at or near that par-ticular place.—2. When an obstruction in the shape of a barbed wire fence has been allowed to remain across part of a high-way for more than three months at that way for more than three months at that season of the year during which road repairs would naturally be made, notice of its existence should be imputed to the municipality, notwithstanding the absence of direct evidence of notice. Injury to pedestrian — Negligence — Street crossing in town — Unexpected rise — Defect. Dodds v. Aurora, 6 O. W. R. 510

Injury to pedestrian - Notice of accident — Omission to give — Excuse — Liability of municipal corporation — Depression in pavement.]-In an action brought by the plaintiff against the corporation of a city for damages for injuries sustained by reason of alleged want of repair of one of its streets, such non-repair consisting in one of the granolithic blocks, where it joined another block, having sunk from three-quarters to half an inch, thereby caus-ing the other block to be above it to that extent, but which has been worn down at its edge about one-quarter of an inch, and had been in this condition from eight to ten years, there was no evidence of any prior mishap or complaint made regarding it, and, though the city officials did not regard it as dangerous, they admitted that it would be better to have it bevelled down :- Held, that there was no actionable negligence on the defendants' part.—The notice of the accident required to be given within seven days thereafter, under s. 606 (3) of the Municipal Act, 1903, 3 Edw. VII. c. 19, is not dispensed with by reason merely of the defendants not being prejudiced by the omission to give it. There must be some reasonable excuse therefor; the plaintiff's illness, the result of the accident, must render him mentally or physically incapable of 80. Anderson v. Toronto, 15 O. L. R. 643, 11 O. W. R. 337.

Injury to pedestrian—Sidewalk—Nonrepair — Negligence — Supervision — Notice.]—Action for damages for injuries from a fall upon a sidewalk that was out of repair. The street in question was somewhat frequented by workmen, but it was not a very important street of Bracebridge, and those who frequented it did not consider it in a dangerous state; no complaint was made at any time, and the break in the plank where the plaintiff stumbled had not existed longer than 6 days. The plaintiff and passed over the walk in the morning and had noticed the broken plank, which caused an angular depression of not more than two inches; at this spot she fell in the evening. There was evidence of a weekly supervision of the sidewalks of the town. "Taking it then," says the Chancellor, "that this condition of disrepair existed 6 days before on the particular street, and was not actually noticed by any of the officials of the municipality, and that no notice or complaint as to its state was lodged with them, can it, as a matter of law, be inferred that the corporation had notice of the breakage, and delayed to make repairs for an unreasonable time? In Rice v. Whitby, 25 A. R. 191, 200, it is laid down that where there is no actual notice, the inferring of such notice after the lapse of a reasonable time, dating from the origin of the defect, is proper and permissible; but the questions.

tion as to the length of time sufficient to raise such inference depends altogether on the circumstances of the case and varies accordingly." And he held that notice was not in this case to be attributed to the town corporation. McNiroy v. Bracebridge, 25 C, L. T, 398, 6 O. W. R, 75, 10 O. L. R. 369.

Injury to pedestrian — Vancouver Incorporation Act — Right of action — Court of appeal — Comity of Judges — Decisions of Jull Court.] — The Court being evenly divided in opinion, an appeal by the defendants from a Judgment upon the findings of a jury in favour of the plaintiff in an action for damages for injuries sustained from a defective sidewalk, was dismissed: — Held, per Macdonald, C.J.A., and Galliher, J.A., that an action based upon non-repair or nonfeasance was maintainable; from the language of a clause in the defendants' Act of incorporation providing that every public street and highway should be kept in repair by the corporation, it was intended that a person injured by a breach of the duty imposed should have an action.—Irving and Martin, JJ.A., were of the contrary opinion; and were also of opinion that the Court of Appeal should follow the decisions of the full Court of British Columbia when it was the appellate Court for the province. McPhalea v. Vancower (1910), 14 W. L. R. 424.

Injury to person—Liability of municipality — Nonfeasance — Misfeasance — Nusance — Damages — No statutory liability for non-repair.]—While plaintiff was driving over a culvert one of his horse's feet went through the crust of the road into the culvert beneath and he and his wife were injured:—Held, that in the absence of any statutory enactment in British Columbia the defendants are not liable for maintaining a nuisance, as it is only where the nuisance is caused by misfeasance that a municipality is liable. Relands v, Fletcher doctrine not applicable. Cooksley v, New Westminster (B.C.), 10

Injury to person—Portion of roadway occupied by street railway — Liability of railway company — Misfeasance — By-law of municipality, Van Cleaf v. Hamilton Street Rw. Co., 5 O. W. R. 278, 628.

Injury to person — Right of action against municipal corporation — Action for penalty — Action for damages — Independent actions — Plead of action pending — Notice of action — Pleading.]—The penal action and that for damages mentioned in Art. 793 of the Municipal Code are remedies distinct and independent of each other; the fact of a plaintiff having instituted against a municipal corporation a penal action for neglect to keep a highway in repair is not a bar to an action for damages caused by the non-repair—2. In such an action for damages it is not necessary to allege that the notice required by Art. 793 of the Municipal Code has been given; and if it were necessary, the absence of the allegation of notice could only be pleaded by exception to the form.—3. Where the plaintiff proves, upon exception to the form, that he gave such notice, the defendants cannot set up the want of the allegation in their defence to the merits. Pageau v. St. Ambroise, 10 Que, P. R. 208.

Injury to person—Sidewalk—Negligence—Municipality — Municipal Act, R. S. M. 1992 c. 116, s. 667 — Winnippe charter, s. 722.]—The plaintiff was injured in consequence of stepping on the end of a loose plank in a comparatively new sidewalk in a city, and so being thrown down. There was evidence that the plank had been loose for two or three weeks before the accident, but none to shew that any of the city's securate or officials had knowledge of it, and many persons, including an inspector of sidewalks in the employment of the city, had walked over it without noticing that there was any defect there:—Held, that the defendants were not liable, as negligence on their part was not proved. Iceson v. Winnipeg, 18 Man. L. R. 352, distinguished. For-rest v. Winnipeg, 18 Man. L. R. 440, 10 W. L. R. 307.

Injury to persons driving—Logs piled on highway — Municipal corporation — Wegligence — Motice,]—On the side of a road allowance in front of a saw mill large quantities of logs, bark, and rubbish were allowed to be piled and to be left there. The plaintiffs were driving with their horse and buggy along the allowance; while passing the place in question, the horse became frightened and swerved from the beaten track in the direction of the pile, and, in attempting to turn back again to the road, the front wheel of the buggy came in contact with a log lying about about two or three feet from the travelled way, whereby the buggy was overturned, and the plaintiffs thrown out and injured:—Held, that the defendants were liable therefor, Kelly v. Whitchurch, Baker v. Whitchurch, 11 O. L. R. 155, 6 O. W. R. S39, 12 O. L. R. 83, 7 O. W. R. 279.

Injury to traveller by defective condition of sidercalk — Original fault of construction — Misfeasance or nonfeasance — Liability of municipal corporation — Vancouver Incorporation Act and amendments.] — Action for damages for injuries received by plaintig through defendants regligence in respect of the condition of a grating let into the sidewalk:—Held, misfeasance and defendants liable. Under s. 219 of above Act the defendant city is liable for nonrepair. Judgment for plaintiff. MacPherson V. Vancouver, 11 W. L. R. 501.

Injury to traveller—Liability of municipal corporation — Misfeasance or nonfeasance — Nuisance — Statutory duty to repair.]—Action to recover damages for injuries sustained by plaintiff through a culvert upon a highway being out of repair. An appeal allowed and judgment given for plaintiff. The maintenance of the culvert in disrepair is misfeasance, Cooksley v. New Westminster, 11 W. L. R. 476.

Injury to waggon and contents

Obligation of municipality — Climatic conditions — Fee and snow — Injury to waggon and contents — Imprudence of driver.]—
The obligation of municipalities to keep the streets and roads in a passable state of repair is subject to consideration as to climatic conditions, and implies the reciprocal obligation of the public to use the streets with prudence. Therefore, a carter who in broad daylight in traversing a street in Montreal with a heavy load, upon a steep down grade covered with ice, and who, when his dray has already commenced to slip, aggravates the movement by turning his horses in the wrong direction, is solely responsible for the accident which results from it, and has no recourse against the city corporation.

Liability for death arising from defective approach to bridge — Notice of claim — Time within which to be given — Form of notice — Signature by solicitor.)—C. attempted to cross a bridge that had been purchased, rebuilt, and kept in repair by the defendants, with a traction engine weighing 9 tons. The spans of the bridge at the approach broke under the weight of the moving engine, which fell to the ground, carrying with it C., who was killed. After the accident it was found that one of the joists had rotted nearly through. Within a month after the occurrence, C's widow obtained letters of administration to her husband's estate and served defendants with a notice of action under s, 667 of the Municipal Act, R. S. M. 1902, c. 116:—Held, following Manley v. St. Helens, 2 11. & N. 840, and Lucas v. Moore, 3 A. R. 602, that the duty to repair cast on the city required the city to keep the bridge of such strength as would make it safe for such heavy traffic as was known to the city officials to be carried on over it and to keep increasing that strength in order to make safe the increasingly heavy traffic from year to year. To carry out the intent of the statute, words must be read into the section: The words "after the happening of the alleged negli-gence" should be construed to read "after the happening of the injury or damages resulting from the alleged negligence." notice given in this case was given within the time required, and was sufficient in form. The act does not say that the notice must be signed by the claimant personally or that it shall be signed at all. Signature by a solicitor for the claimant is quite sufficient. Curle v. Brandon, 24 C. L. T. 279.

Liability of municipal corporation

—Injury to person partly due to accident —Liability for quasi-tort — Apportionment of damages.]—Municipal corporations are responsible for injuries caused by the bad condition of roads which they are bound to keep in repair—2. When an inevitable accident and a quasi-tort combine to cause an injury, the remedy of the victim or of his representatives is none the less open against the author of the quasi-tort; but the Court in ascertaining the damages should take into account the combination of causes, as in the case of common fault. Parker v.
Corp. du Canton de Hatley, 33 Que. S.

Liability of municipal corporation—Proximate cause of injury—Precautions.]—It is not sufficient for a plaintiff, claiming damages from a municipal corporation on account of injuries received in an accident upon a road under the control of the corporation, to prove that the road was in a bad condition to prove that the road was in a bad condition of the road was the direct and immediate cause of the accident, and that he could not have avoided it by taking the precautions which would be expected from a prudent man. Montreat (1910), 39 Que. S. C. 13.

Municipal corporation—Action against—Third party — Garantic.]—The city of Montreal, being sued for damages caused by an accident upon the highway, may, by dilatory exception, demand a stay of proceedings in order that it may bring in engarantic a person who is bound by law to keep the highway in repair. Montreal v. Roberts, 8 Que. P. R. 148.

Municipal corporation—Action against for injury to person — Defences — Difficulty of repair — Contributory negligence]. —A municipal corporation is responsible for an accident caused by the bad condition of a public road which it is obliged to keep in repair. The corporation cannot escape liability by alleging the difficulty of maintenance at the spot where the accident took place, the imprudence of the person who is the victim of the accident in using a vehicle and horse not suitable for the road, and his neglect to drive with care. Municipal corporation - Liability for Multiplia corporation — Dadwing for death arising from defective approach to bridge — Misfeasance — Notice of action — "Happening of the alleged negligence" - Action by administratrix - Expectation of pecuniary benefit.]-Where a heavy traction engine broke through rotten timbers in the approach of a bridge on one of the highways of the defendants, on which work had been done and improvements made by them, and over which such engines had for two years previous been accustomed to pass, to the knowledge of the defendants' officials, and no attempt had been made to stop such traffic or warn those in charge of it of any danger, the bridge in question being one of the strongest across the river in many miles: -Held, that the defendants were liable for damages under s. 667 of the Municipal Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 116, but that they could not be held to have been guilty of negligence amounting to misfeasance, so as to make them liable in damages independently of the statute, by reason of having failed to stop up a spike hole in one of the joists in the approach, in consequence of which it had rotted more than the others on account of water lodging in the hole; that the notice of action required by the Act need not be signed by the claimant personally, or shew that she was claiming in the capacity of personal representative of the deceased; that the words "happening of the alleged negligence," in the section referred to, should either be construed to read, "happening of the injury or damages resulting from the alleged negligence," or it should be held that the negligence continued to "happen" up to the time that the damages resulted from it, otherwise no notice of the action or claim could be given, in compliance with the statute, in any case where the negligence had existed for more than a month before the injury resulted from it; and that the plaintiff could recover nothing on behalf of a son of deceased, who, in the circumstances and position of his father, could have had no reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefit from the continuance of the life, nor on behalf of a nephew or an adopted child, as they do not come within the provisions of R. S. M. 1902 c. 31, or any other enabling Act. Curle v. Brandon, 24 C. L. T. 279, 15 Man, L. R. 122 1 W. L. R. 76.

Municipal corporation — Negligence— Bridge — Traction engine. Pattison v. Wainfleet, 1 O. W. R. 407.

Municipal corporation — Negligence-Condition of sidewalk during construction work — Plaintiff's knowledge.] — The defendants were taking up an old board sidewalk and putting down a new one on one of their streets, and had completed the work up to a point somewhere in front of the plaintiff's shop, when the men were taken away to perform some urgent work in another part of the town, and were away part of a Saturday and the whole of the following Monday. The plaintiff, who was aware of what was being done and the uncompleted state in which the work was left, drove up in a cart with goods for his shop, and in alighting slipped off the unfinished end of the sidewalk and was injured:—Held, that the defendants, as far as they had constructed the walk, did so in a proper manner and were complying with a statute in improving the condition of the street; that they were not negligent; that the walk was not at the time the accident happened, unsafe for persons lawfully using it or going upon it; that it was not dangerous or a trap to persons having ordinary eyesight; that there was no duty on the defendants to put up barriers to prevent persons walking across it; that, as the plaintiff knew about its condition, a printed notice was not required; that the accident was a mere misadventure; and the plaintiff could not recover. Belle-isle v. Hawkesbury, 25 C. L. T. 16, 8 O. L. R. 694, 4 O. W. R. 271.

Municipal corporation -- Negligence — Injury to person — Proximate cause — Obstacle in road — Warning — Liability 1 -Where a road is so constructed or altered as to present at one part two paths, both of which exhibit the appearance of having been used by travellers, and one of them leads to a dangerous place, it is the duty of those in charge of the road to indicate in a manner not to be mistaken, by day or by night, that the unsafe path is to be avoided, and, if it cannot otherwise be done, to put up such an obstruction as will turn the traveller from the wrong track. barrier in this case was a mere stick of wood laid across the road, and it was held by the Divisional Court that it was insufficient for the purpose, and that the defendants were liable for injuries to the plaintiff, although there was a "concurring cause of injury," in the horse driven by the plaintiff's father becoming unmanageable because of the unhitching of a trace, owing, however, to no fault or negligence of the driver. Thomas v. North Norwich, 25 C. L. T. 398, 6 O. W. R. 13, 9 O. L. R. 666.

Municipal corporation - Negligence-Injury to person — Subsidence of roadway —Indications on surface — Faulty construction - Omission to inspect - Notice of accident - Reasonable excuse for want of.] -The question of what is reasonable excuse for failure to give the notice of accident required by the Municipal Act as a preliminary to an action against a municipal corporation for non-repair of a highway, upon which there was a difference of opinion among four of the Judges of the High Court, but the remarks made by Mr. Justice Osler were certainly unfavourable to the plaintiff's excuse being regarded as reasonable-"the plaintiff was not misled by any one into not giving notice, and was under no disability except that of ignorance (of the law), which can hardly be invoked as excuse for omitting to observe the requirements of the Act." The case in the Court of Appeal was decided in favour of the defendants upon the ground that there was no actionable negligence on their part. While the plain-tiff was engaged in driving a watering cart along the street, the surface suddenly gave way, and the cart falling into the hole thus caused, the plaintiff was thrown out and in-jured. The break in the street was caused by the falling in of a sewer pipe laid 12 feet below the surface. The negligence alleged was the disregard of alleged surface indications of mischief below and negligence in the original construction of the sewer or the absence of subsequent examination and inspection, and the Court found that these allegations were negatived by the evidence. Lambert v. Corp. of Lowestoft, [1901] 1 K. B. 590, was referred to as much in point. O'Connor v. Hamilton, 25 C. L. T. 458, 6 O. W. R. 227, 10 O. L. R. 529.

Municipal corporation — Negligence-Injury to traveller — Steep and narrow, road — Want of rail-guards — Contriburoad — Want of rate-plaras — Contribu-tory negligence — Defect in harness of horses driven by plaintiff's mother—Absence of knowledge of plaintiff — Damages.]— Meredith, J., held that the failure of the defendants to place guard-rails on the sides of a road at a place where it was narrow—from 11 to 17 feet wide—with banks sloping down on both sides, was a breach of the defendants' statutory duty to keep the road in repair, and that they were liable to the plaintiff on account of injuries which she received in an accident which would not have occurred had there been guard-rails at the place. There was some question as to contributory negligence, and the learned Judge held that the driver of the vehicle. the plaintiff's mother, was negligent, and that if she had sued she could not have recovered, but that the mother's negligence was not to be attributed to the daughter, who was the guest of her mother, and had no knowledge of the facts constituting the mother's negligence. Plant v. Normanby and Minto, 25 C. L. T. 398, 6 O. W. R. 31, 10 O. L. R. 16.

Negligence — Laying gas pipes — Excavation — Injury to personal property — Recovery against municipal corporation — Recourse in warranty — Costs. Montreal v. Montreal Light, Heat, and Power Co., 3 E, L. R. 484.

Negligence of municipal corporation — Injury to pedestrian—Notice of accident — Omission to give — Reasonable excuse — Absence of prejudice. —On one of the streets of the city there was a hole in the sidewalk about 20 feet long, caused by the stone flags having fallen in, the bottom being covered with broken stones, iron, and other débris; while along the side of the curb, bricks to the height of eight feet had been piled, at one end of which a lamp had been placed; but the place where the cavity was, was in total darkness. The plaintiff, who was not very familiar with the city, was walking after dark along the street, when he fell into the hole, and was so seriously injured that he had to be taken to the hospital, where he remained over three weeks, during two of which he was obliged to remain in bed, his condition being such that he was mentally incapable of giving to the city the notice of the accident within the seven days prescribed by s. 606 (3) of the Municipal Act 3 Edw. VII. c. 19 (O.). It appeared that the city was not prejudiced by the want of notice: - Held, that the street was out of repair, so as to render the city liable to the plaintiff; and that, under the circumstances, the plaintiff had shewn sufficient excuse for not giving the notice. Notice of accident - Joint liability -Waiver.]—The notice of the accident and the cause thereof required by s. 606 (3) of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. c. 223, must now, by 62 V. c. 25, s. 39, be given to each of the municipalities where the claim is against two or more as jointly responsible for the repair of the road. Leizert v. Town-ship of Matilda, 26 A. R. 1, not now appli-cable. Where notice in writing was given to one township municipality of two sued as jointly liable, but not to the other, it appeared that the reeve of the latter had been verbally notified by the plaintiff, and had then promised to write and had writ-ten to the reeve of the former, after which both reeves attended with the plaintiff and examined the place of the accident, and the reeve of the latter afterwards wrote to the plaintiff advising him that the township corporation did not recognise his claim because it was considered that the loss arose from the fault of the plaintiff, and all this within thirty days after the accident: -Held, that there was no waiver. Jones v. Stephenson, 20 C. L. T. 452, 32 O. R. 226.

Notice of accident — Reasonable excuse for want of — Knowledge of corporation - Prejudice - Appeal from ruling of trial Judge.]-In an action against a municipal corporation to recover damages for injuries sustained by reason of non-repair of a highway, the ruling of the Judge at the trial as to whether there is reasonable excuse for the want or insufficiency of a "notice in writing of the accident and the cause thereof," and whether the defendants have been prejudiced in their defence, under s. 606 of the Municipal Act, 3 Edw. VII. 19 (O.), is subject to appeal. The defendants had actual knowledge of the accident to the plaintiff and its cause on the day it happened. It was caused by the cave-in of a well travelled public street in the centre of a city. The plaintiff's left and only remaining arm was broken and he sustained other injuries. He was in a hospital, suffering great pain, during the seven days allowed by the statute for giving notice, and notice was not given until the eleventh day after the accident :- Held, Meredith, J., dissenting, reversing the judgment of Meredith, C.J., at the trial, that there was reasonable excuse for the want of a notice in due time; and, affirming the judgment of Meredith, C.J., that the defendants had not thereby been prejudiced in their defence. Armstrong v. Canada Atlantic Rw. Co., 2 O. L. R. 219, 4 O. L. R. 560, applied and followed. O'Con-nor v. Hamilton, 24 C. L. T. 370, 8 O. L. R. 391, 3 O. W. R. 918.

Notice of accident—3 Edw. VII. c. 18, s. 130, s.-s. 5 — Failure to give notice — Reasonable excuse. Biggart v. Clinton, 3 O. W. R. 625.

Notice of action - Pleading-Defence to action - Municipal corporation-Third party - Garantie - Separate contestation -Costs.]-The corporation of the city of Montreal, defendants in an action for damages for neglect to maintain and repair a pavement, may, in a plea to the merits, allege that the notice of action required by their charter has not been served within the time prescribed.—2. Where the land-owner whose duty it is to maintain and repair the pavement is brought in en garantie by the city corporation, and makes a separate contestation, he will be required to pay his own costs, even where the plaintiff fails in the action, the plaintiff not being obliged to pay for two contestations, where one would suffice. Bray v. Montreal, 9 Que. P. R.

Notice of non-repair — Duration of time — Negligence.]—Where the evidence shews that a side-walk in a municipality had been in a bad and dangerous condition for a period of time anterior to the accident sufficient to allow the municipal authorities to put it in a safe and proper state, the facts establish negligence on their part, for the consequences of which the corporation is responsible. Gaffney v. Montreal, 16 Que, S. C. 260.

horse — Liability — Character of horse— Contributory negligence. Hemphill v. Haldi-mand, 3 O. W. R. 605, 4 O. W. R. 163.

Obstruction — Trap-door — Continuing missence created by another.]—The owner of a house abutting on a highway placed without authority a trap-door in the sidewalk in order to obtain an entrance to his cellar, the hinges of the trap-door projecting about an inch above the sidewalk. The defendant obtained title from this owner, and continued to use the trap-door, and the plaintiff, while lawfully using the highway, stumbled against the hinges and was burt: —Held, that the defendant could not be held to be continuing the nuisance, as she had no title to the highway and no right, strictly speaking, to remove the trap-door constructed by another, and that, as the accident was not caused during or by her user of the trap-door, she was not liable. Busing V. Heweitt, 20 C. L. T. 202, 27 A. R. 236.

Open excavation unguarded — Injury to person crossing highway — Liability of municipal corporation — Negligence—Lawful obstruction — Substituted crossing provided — Injury due to negligence of person injured. Burns v. Toronto, 10 O. W. R. 723.

Opening in street — Injury to person—Municipal corporation — Nonfeasance—Limitation of actions — Negligence of licensee, 1 — Section 606 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, which requires an action against a municipal corporation for neglect to keep the streets in repair to be brought within three mouths, applies to an action against a corporation for an injury occasioned by the failure properly to guard an opening made, with the corporation's permission, in the sidewalk adjoining certain premises for access to the cellar thereof; at all events it was never intended that the granting of such permission, authorised by S. 639 of the Act, should render the corporation liable for the acts and omissions of its licensee, except subject to the requirements of s. 606. Personal injury to pedestrian—Negligence of municipal corporation — Notice of action — Requisites — Municipal Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 116, s. 667.]—Under s. 722 of the Winnipeg charter, which is the same in effect as s. 667 of the Municipal Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 116, the corporation will be liable in damages for injury sustained by a person in consequence of a fall caused by stepping on and so breaking down a rotten plank in a sidewalk laid down by the corporation on a public highway, the said sidewalk being very old and decayed underneath, it being shewn that the defect, although not apparent, would have been detected if there had been a proper and adequate system of inspection employed .notice of the action given by the plaintiff, pursuant to s.s. (b) of the same section, stated that she claimed from the defendants $1,000 damages with respect to the matters therein set out, and that she would commence an action in the Court of King's Bench to recover that sum for injuries sustained by her through the omission and default of the defendants to keep in repair a public sidewalk on the east side of Main street between Polson and Bannerman avenues in said city. The accident happened at a point between Polson avenue and Atlantic avenue, which is between Polson and Bannerman avenues. It was given within a month from the date of the injury, but did not state such date or the nature of the injury or how it had occurred, or the place more specifically than as above. The trial Judge gave plaintiff a verdict for $3,000 damages: — Held, that the statute which only requires "notice of any such claim or action," should receive a liberal construction, and requirements, not specifically stated and not necessarily implied, should not be read into it, and that the notice given was sufficient.—Curle v. Brandon, 15 Siven was sumcient.—Curle v. Brandon, 15 Man. L. R. 122, Jones v. Bird, 5. B. & Ald. 837, Martins v. Upscher, 3. Q. B. 662, and Bond v. Conmee, 16. A. R. 398, followed. Clarkson v. Musprave, 9. Que. B. D. 386, and 84, John v. Christie, 21. S. C. R. I., dis-tinguished.—Held. also that we the about tinguished .- Held, also, that, as the plaintiff's injuries had resulted much more seriously after the notice was given than she anticipated she was not precluded by the terms of the notice from claiming and recovering in the action a larger amount than $1,000. Iveson v. Winnipeg, 5 W. L. R. 118, 16 Man. L. R. 352, Pitch holes and ridges — Injury to horse. I—Defendants with knowledge of their servants having allowed pitch holes and ice ridges to be formed and to remain on a well travelled highway, were held liable in damages for injuries to plaintiff's horse. (fallagher v. Lennox, 13 O. W. R. 227.

Prescription—Former action — Reservation.]—The plantiff sued a city corporation in the Circuit Court claiming $50 as damages for injuries sustained by a fall, and obtained a judgment for $50, without recourse for future damages, this action not admitting of any such reservation. Afterwards, alleging that the injury which she had sustained was incurable and rendered her incapable of working, which she did not know at the time of her first action, the plaintiff proceeded again against the corporation for $1,000 damages. This action was begun more than six months after the accident, and was not preceded by a notice given within thirty days after the accident:—Held, that, under these circumstances, the action was barred by the six months prescription. Chartrand v. Montreal,

Proximate cause — Repair of road— Obstacle — Warning — Liability. Thomas v. North Norwich, 4 O. W. R. 517.

Proximate cause - Snow-Township corporation — Notice — Pathmaster — Statute labour.]—The plaintiff in travelling on a highway under the control of the defendant corporation, with a team of horses and waggon, came to a place where the road was impassable on account of drifted snow for more than half a mile. At the side of the road between the ditch and a farm fence was a temporary track made by the travelling public which was safe while the frost lasted and the snow was hard. But a thaw was in progress which had commenced three days before, and when those in the waggon sought to use the track the horses broke through and the waggon was in danger of being upset. The plaintiff got out and in assisting the horses was injured by one of them :-Held, that, under the circumstances, it was the duty of the defendants to have opened a way through the drift sufficient to enable vehicles such as the waggon in which the plaintiff was travelling to have passed in safety along this highway; that the defendants had no-tice that the highway was out of repair; that the non-repair was the proximate cause of the injury; and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. — Semble, that was entitled to recover. — Semole, that it was the duty of the pathmaster to use statute labour to make a safe track. Judgment of a Divisional Court (2 O. W. R. 139) reversing judgment of Falconbridge, C.J. (1 O. W. R. 568), affirmed. Hogg v. Brooks, 24 C. L. T. 171, 7 O. L. R. 273, 3 O. W. R. 120.

Public highway—What constitutes.]—A winter road, open to everybody, over which a great number of persons pass and which has nothing about it to indicate that it is a private road, is a public road, and the corporation of the municipality in which it is situated are liable for injuries caused by non-repair, Duchesne v. Corp. of Beauport, 23 Que. S. C. 80.

Repair — Mandamus — By-law — Closing road.]—A petition for a writ of mandamus to oblige a municipal council to repair a winter road will not be granted, if previous to the presentation of this petition, the municipal council had determined to close that road, and an effective by-law to that effect had been passed. Desjardins v. Ste. Rose, 9 Que, P. R.-257.

Right of action.] — The provisions of The Municipal Ordinances in force in 1893 or subsequently relating to the repair of sidewalks, etc., are not applicable to the City of Calcary, although not expressly declared inapplicable by the special Ordinance incorporating the city which was passed in that year, Although a duty to repair streets may be expressly imposed upon a municipality, no action lies against it for damages for injuries resulting from non-repair. Clark v. Calgary (1907), 6 Terr. L. R. 399.

Road allowance — Road opened up in lieu thereof — No compensation to owners, but original road allowance taken by them —Subsequent intention to abandon road so laid out and open up original allowance -Necessity for compensation - Notice of intention to open up allowance - Sufficiency -Municipal corporations.] - On a survey made in 1791, a road allowance was set out along the front of certain lots, which ran down to a lake. The road allowance, however, was not opened up, or used as a road, but some time prior to 1850 a road running along the lake shore, the land therefor being taken from these lots, was, as a matter of taken from these lots, was, as a matter of convenience, opened up and used in lieu of the original road allowance, and continued to be so used ever since, the township doing work and expending money thereon. No compensation was paid to the owners; but they took over and enclosed the road allowance as part of their lands and occupied it for a period of some sixty years. In consequence of the waters of the lake encroaching on the lake roadway, it had, from time to time, to be moved back, these owners giving the lands for the purpose without any compensation. In 1908, by reason of the expense occasioned in keeping this road in repair, through the encroachment, the township council determined to open up the original road allowance, and served a notice on the owners of the lots stating that a by-law would be introduced for this purpose on a named day, but without making any offer of compensation:—Held, that the notice was sufficient; for, even if the time of the meeting should have been stated in the notice, as it appeared that the applicants had either attended the meeting or were repre-sented by counsel, and were heard before the by-law was passed, they were now precluded from objecting thereto .- Held, however, that, as no compensation was paid for the lands originally taken for the lake shore road, or from time to time therefor as the road was encroached upon, and the applicants were legally in possession of the lands constituting the original road allowance, such lands could not be taken away from them, for the purpose of opening up the road, without their being awarded compensation, as provided for in s. 641 of the Municipal Act, 3 Edw. VII. c. 19 (O.); and the by-law for the opening up of the road was therefore quashed. Lister v. Clinton, 18 O. L. R. 197, 13 O. W. R. 582.

Road company—Contract with electric railway company — Leave to operate tramway — Condition of keeping road in repair — Failure to perform — Lien on tramway.] — A road company whose duty it was to maintain a public road agreed with an electric railway company that the latter should be allowed to construct and operate a tramway upon the road, upon condition of doing the work necessary for the maintenance and repair of the road:—Held, that the road company had acquired no lien upon the tramway for the cost of such work, which they were obliged to do themselves by reason of the insolvency of the electric railway company, Morse v. Levis County Rv. Co., 30 Que. S. C. 353.

Roadway—Defect in—Findings of trial Judge, 1—The plaintiff, in crossing at night on foot a busy street in the city, did so at a point thirty feet distant from the crossing, proceeding in a diagonal direction across the carriage way. There was a hole or depression in the asphalt pavement from one and a half to one and seven-eighths inches deep at its nearest part, and the plaintiff slipped upon the edge and was injured. In an action against the city corporation for damages for negligence, the trial Judge found that the accident was caused by the defendants' negligence in allowing the pavement to be and remain dangerously out of repair: that the plaintiff was not guilty of contributory negligence in crossing the street diagonally; that the street was not sufficiently out of repair to be dangerous to horses or vehicles; and assessed damages to the plainvenices; and assessed damages to the plain-tiff:—Held, Falconbridge, C.J., dissenting, that the plaintiff, using the carriage-way when on foot, had no right to expect a higher degree of repair than would render the way reasonably safe for vehicles; and the last finding of the Judge put the plaintiff out of Court. Boss v. Litton, 5 C. & P. 407, explained and distinguished. — Semble, per Street, J., that the defect in question was not one from which a reasonable man would have apprehended danger to any person either on foot or in a carriage, and therefore the corporation could not be guilty of negligence in regard to it. Belling v. Homilton, 22 C. L. T. 110, 3 O. L. R. 318, 1 O. W. R. 124.

Roadway-Obstruction - Injury to traveller - Contributory negligence.]-Action for damages for injuries caused through the alleged negligence of a municipal corporation in permitting a mound of earth about eight inches in height to remain at the filling over a trench dug to lay a pipe across a public street. In passing over the obstruction during the night, the plaintiff's horse stumbled and fell, throwing the plaintiff from the vehicle, and causing the injury complained of:—Held, affirming the judgment in 33 N. S. R. 291, that there had been no negligence on the part of the defendants; that the obstruction was not serious or unusual; and that the accident occurred through want of proper care by the plaintiff in approaching, in the darkness, the dangerous place which he had previously seen in the same condition by daylight.

Messenger v. Bridgetown, 31 S. C. R. 379.

Roadway—Obstruction — Telephone pole —Negligence — Proximate cause — Third party — Costs.]—A person driving on a public highway who sustains injury to his person and property by the carriage coming in contact with a telephone pole, lawfully placed there, cannot maintain an action for damages if it clearly appears that his horses were running way, and that their violent, uncontrollable speed was the proximate cause of the accident. The defendants, the city corporation, were ordered to pay the costs of the telephone company, the third parties, it being shewn that the company placed the pole where it was, lawfully and by the authority of the corporation. Decisions in 18 C. L. T. 310, 29 O. R. 518, 19

Roadway—Vis major — Action — Security for costs — Deposit — Preliminary ex-C.C.L.—145. ception.]—The failure by a plaintiff who is not a ratepayer to deposit $10 as security for costs of an action against a municipal corporation, in accordance with Art. 793, M. C., must be raised by preliminary exception and not by plea to the merits. 2. In regard to the deposit required by Art. 793, M. C., there is no distinction between actions for penalties and actions for damages. 3. A municipal corporation is bound to keep roads at all times in good order, and can only be relieved by proving force majurer. Young v. Stanstead, 21 Que, S. C. 148.

Sale of area - Invalidity of by-law-Notice to owner of abutting land — Condi-tion precedent — Status of plaintiff to at-tack by-law — Land purchased according to registered plan - Municipal Ordinance, s. 101 — Regina — Municipal Orainance, s. 101 — Regina city charter s. 307 — No application to quash by-law — Action — Declaration of invalidity.]—A plan was recorded in the land titles office, shewing blocks and lots, streets and lanes. The defendant city acquired block 197, excepting one lot, which was subsequently acquired by plaintiffs, and other land, and being desirous of creating a number of warehouse sites, the city closed the streets and lanes leading to said block, and passed a validating No notice of the by-law was given the registered owner of the lot subsequently acquired by plaintiffs. After passing the by-law, they proceeded to sell said block and portion of the streets and lines so closed. Buildings were erected which obstructed the way to plaintiffs' lot. Plaintiffs brought action to have it declared that the streets and lanes closed were public highways, and to have the obstructions removed :- Held, that until notice was given to the owners of all land abutting upon any street or lane which it was proposed to close under the provisions of s. 5 of c. 28 of the Ordinances of 1903, the defendant city had no power to pass the by-law; and the by-law being passed without notice, the provisions of s. 101 of the Municipal Ordinance (c. 70, C. O., 1898), s. 193, City Act, c. 16 of 1908, could not validate such by-law. Gesman v. Regina (1909), 2 Sask. L. R. 50, 10 W. L. R. 136.

Sidewalk — Defect in — Injury to pedestrian — Supervision — Notice to municipal corporation — Notice of accident — Sufficiency. Breault v. Lindsay, 10 O. W. R. 890.

Sidewalk—Defect in—Notice of defect—Damages — Quantum.]—Where a sidewalk on one of the principal streets of a town, on which there was considerable traffic, had been laid down for so long a period as to become unsound, the scantiling or stringers being so rotten as to be unable to hold the nails fastening the boards placed across them:—Held, that its condition was such as to impose on the corporation a constant care and supervision over it; so that when one of the boards was proved to have been missing for a week, leaving a hole some six or eight inches deep, into which a person fell and was injured, notice to the corporation of such defect in the sidewalk must be assumed, and liability for the damage occasioned by the accident imposed on them. damages assessed at the trial, $1,500, were reduced to $500. the Court being of the opinion that the latter was the more reasonable amount, having regard to the injuries sustained, a sprained ankle and an affection of the sciatic nerve, from which recovery might be expected at no distant date. McGarr v. Preacott, 22 C. L. T. 281, 4 O. L. R. 280, 1 O. W. R. 54, 439.

Sidewalk—Excavation — Municipal corporation — Gas company — Joint liability — Negligence — Relief over.]—A municipal corporation having placed a barrier round a portion of a sidewalk in course of repair, the plaintiff, at night, passing around the barrier, fell into a trench dug by a gas company, with consent of the corporation, under an agreement for indemnity and to properly warn and protect the public. No light was put up by the corporation or company:—Held, that both were liable to the plaintiff, the corporation for non-repair and not warning the public, and the company under their special contract with the corporation and under R. S. O. 1897 c. 199, s. 26; but that the corporation should have judgment over against the company. McIntyre v. Lindsay, 22 C. L. T. 292, 4 O. L. R. 248.

Sidewalk—Executation insufficiently protected — Municipal corporation — Negligence.]—The defendant company made an excavation across a sidewalk on a public street, in the city of Halifax, for the purpose of laying cables underground. The excavation was protected after working hours by a number of barrels, with planks laid across the tops from one to another. Plaintiff, while passing along the sidewalk, after dark, in the absence of the watchman, fell into a portion of the excavation, from which the barricade had been removed after it had been placed in position, and was severely injured. The evidence given on the trial of an action for negligence shewed that the barrier erected was of a frail and insufficient character, and that the place was insufficiently lighted, and that if it had not been for the want of care on the part of defendant in these particulars, the accident would not have happened: —Held, that plaintiff was entitled to a verdict. Cox v. Nova Scotia Telephone Co., 35 N. S. R. 148.

Sidewalk — Injury to pedestrian — Liability of municipality — Negligence — Contributory negligence — Damages.
v. Port Dover, 7 O. W. R. 292, 758.

Sidewalk — Injury to pedestrian — Liability of municipality — Negligence — Notice of action — Sufficiency — Damages—Quantum. Ivison v. Winnipeg (Man.), 4 W. L. R. 53.

Sidewalk—Injury to pedestrian—Negligence of municipal corporations—Notice.]— Sources of recurring and repeated danger on a street are to be waterhed and guarded against by a municipality—Where a contractor for taking down a building had laid planks on a sidewalk, which were fastened at both ends with iron straps to keep them together, which straps were raised from time to time by teams and waggons passing over the planks, leaving a space between the straps and the planks, into which a passerby put her foot and was thrown to the ground and injured:—Held, that when the normal condition of a sidewalk is disturbed, it is the primary duty of a municipality to see that in its altered state it is kept in proper repair, and in a busy and much frequented place in excellent repair; and that when the source of danger has existed in a crowded street of a city for two weeks or even somewhat less, notice of the want of repair and of dangerous condition will be attributed to the authorities.—In this case the corporation was held liable notwithstanding there was evidence of repair by nailing down the straps when discovered to be loose. Judgment of Britton, J., affirmed. Gipneo v. Toronto, 11 O. L. R. 611, 7 O. W. R. 693.

Sidewalk — Injury to person — Negligence of municipal corporation — Notice of defect — Evidence, Kew v. London, 9 O. W. R. 224.

Sidewalk — Loose plank—Injury to pedestrian — Liability of city corporation — Winnipeg Charter, s. 722 — Negligence—Notice — Reasonable precautions — Inspection.]—Action for damages for injuries sustained by plaintiff, a boy of 13, by a fall on a sidewalk, a plank being loose:—Held, on the evidence, that sufficient notice of its being loose had not been brought home to defendants. Reasonable precautions had been taken and inspection made. The condition of the sidewalk was not conspicuous and there was no negligence on the part of defendants. Action dismissed. Forrest v. Winnipeg, 10 W. L. R. 307.

Sidewalk—Negligence — Want of drainage — Formation of ice. Rockwell v. Bridgewater, 2 E. L. R. 378.

Sidewalk - Opening in - Injury to pedestrian - Want of guard - Municipal corporation - Non-feasance - Limitation of actions — Trap-door — Master and servant.]—Two servants of the defendant G. were engaged in their master's business in unloading and storing a cask of beer in the cellar of his house by means of opening a trap-door in the sidewalk in front of the house. This was at night, and the trapdoor being left open, and no light or guard being provided, the plaintiff fell into the opening and was injured:—Held, that this negligence of the servants was attributable to the master who was liable for the injury. No act of negligence was proved against the village corporation, nor was there evidence upon which notice to the corporation might be attributed; the construction of an opening in the sidewalk is anthorised by the Municipal Act, s. 639, and no fault was alleged in its construction or maintenance; the corporation had no knowledge of the opening being left after dark without protection, and it was not shewn that they had means of guarding against it.—Semble, that, under these circumstances, the corporation were not liable. Homewood v. Hamilton, 1 O. L. R. 266, considered. But, supposing the corporation liable, it could only be for nonfeasance, and not for misfeasance, and three months after the damages had been sustained. Minns v. Omemee, 21 C. L. T. 561, 2 O. L. R. 579.

Sidewalk-Opening in - Injury to pedestrian — Want of guard — Municipal cor-poration — Relief over.] — The plaintiff, whose eyesight was defective, was walking in a city street, when stepping towards a doorway leading into a tavern, he stubbed his toe against the step or door-sill, and, stumbling back, fell into an area in the sidewalk used by the tavern-keeper, by the permission of the municipality, for the purpose of putting beer into his cellar, and then open and being used for such purpose. A keg had been placed at each of the outside corners of the opening to warn passers-by :- Held, that the municipality were liable for negligence in leaving the opening without an adequate guard; that contributory negligence could not be imputed to the plaintiff; and that the tavern-keeper was liable over to the defendants. Homewood v. Hamilton, 21 C. L. T. 206, 1 O. L. R. 266, Sidewalk—Snow and icc — Liability of municipality.] — The obligation devolving upon a city corporation to keep the sidewalks of the city in a safe condition is temporarily suspended where the climatic conditions—such as a heavy rainfall accompanied by high temperature, followed by strong wind, sudden frost and low temperature—are such that the city could not, by the exercise of reasonable diligence, have remedied the condition of the sidewalk in question before the accident happened. 2. The fact that the sidewalk in question, which was in front of vacant lots, had not been properly attended to throughout the winter, does not affect the decision of such case, the city not being responsible for damages in consequence of negligence which does not apply to the particular circumstances when the damages were incurred. D'Estimonville v. Montreal, 18 Que. S. C. 470.

Sidewalk—Snow and ice—Municipal corporation — Gross negligence. Stevens v. Chatham, 1 O. W. R. 199.

Sidewalk—Snow and ice—Municipal corporations — Negligence — Maintenance of streets—"Gross negligence."]—About 10:30 on a morning in January a man walking along a street crossing in Toronto slipped on the ice and fell. receiving injuries from which he eventually died. His widow brought an action for damages under Lord Campbell's Act, and on the trial it was shewn that there had been a considerable fall of snow for two or three days before the accident, and on the day preceding there had been a thaw followed by a hard frost at night. There was evidence, also, that early in the morning of the day of the accident employees of the city corporation had scattered sand on the crossing, but the high wind prevailing at the time had probably blown it away:—Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 27 A. R. 410, 20 C. L. T. 300, that the facts in evidence were not sufficient to shew that the injury to the deceased was caused by "gross negligence" of the corporation within the meaning of R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, s. 606 (2). Ince v. Toronto, 21 C. L. T. 365, 31 S. C. R. 323.

Sidewalk — Voluntary subscription — Statute labour.]—A township municipality was held liable in damages for an injury arising through the non-repair of a sidewalk on a highway within its limits, notwithstanding the fact that the sidewalk was built by voluntary subscription and statute labour, and although the municipality never assumed any control over it, nor was any public money or statute labour expended on it with the knowledge of the council, where the latter was aware of the existence of the sidewalk, and there had been opportunity and time to repair it. Madilt v. Caledon, 22 C. L. T. 175, 3 O. L. R. 68, 555, 1 O. W. R. 299.

Snow — Notice. Hogg v. Township of Brooke, 2 O. W. R. 139.

Snow and ice-" Gross negligence."] -"Gross negligence," in s. 606 (2) of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. c. 223, means at the least "great negligence," and when it is attempted to make a municipal corporation responsible in damages under that sub-section for an accident caused by ice on a sidewalk, it must be shewn that the sidewalk was allowed to remain in a dangerous condition for an unreasonable time. If the sidewalk has been constructed in accordance with the plans of competent engineers and is in good repair, the possibility of an improved or less dangerous plan of construction is not an element to be considered in deciding the question of the municipality's gross negligence. Where there was a sudden change in temperature about six in the morning, and ice then formed on the sidewalk in question, it was held that the municipality, in the absence of actual notice of its dangerous condition, were not liable in damages for an accident which happened about eleven o'clock on the same morning. The icy condition of a road, when it does not appear that it was due to a sudden change of temperature, and that there had been no time to mend it, does not constitute force majeure which will avail to relieve a municipality from liability for accidents. Gunlack v. Montreal, 17 Que. S. C. R. 294.

Snow and ice — Nepligence—Notice of accident—Sufficiency of.]—This was an action to recover damages for injuries alleged to have been sustained by the plaintif owing to his slipping on a quantity of snow and ice in a street in the town of St. Mary's, which the defendants were alleged to have negligently allowed to accumulate. The statutory notice required by R. S. O. C. 223, s. 606, s.-s. 3, given on behalf of the plaintiff, described it as having taken place opposite to a certain shop, whereas, in fact, it took place opposite a different shop, about twenty feet farther on the same side of the street:—Held, that the notice was sufficient, as it gave information enough to enable the corporation to investigate, and that is all that can be called for. McQuillan v. St. Mary's, 20 C. L. T. 42, 31 O. R. 401.

Snow and ice—Notice to municipal corporation — Gross negligence — Damages. Ludgate v. Ottawa, 8 O. W. R. 257, 865.

Snow and ice—Reasonable precautions.]

—A town corporation is liable in damages only for such accidents on streets as arise from its neglect and want of care; and where it is established that the corporation had adopted all reasonable and necessary precautions to maintain the sidewalks in good order and condition, and that the accident complained of occurred parity through the imprudence of the injured person and partly through extreme and uncontrollable climatic conditions, the corporation will be relieved from responsibility. Olive v. Westmount, 16 Que. S. C. 426.

Snow and ice.]—The Municipal Ordinance gives municipalities in the Territories jurisdiction over roads, casts upon them the duty of maintaining them, authorizes them to bate nuisances, and affords them means for raising money for corporate purposes: —Held, therefore, that where a municipality had constructed a sidewalk upon one of the roads within its limits, upon which snow and ice had accumulated, which it had not removed within a reasonable time, in consequence of which the plaintiff slipped and fell and was injured, the municipality was liable. Cusner v. Culgary, I Terr. L. R. 162.

Uneven surface—Liability — Objection—Waiter, I—Action for damages for injury to a horse claimed to have been occasioned by non-repair of a highway. The non-repair consisted in the continued existence of a series of hollows, styled pitch holes, produced by traffic in the snow-covered surface of a travelled road; the holes were in almost uninterrupted succession, at intervals of only a few feet, varying in depth from one to four feet below the level of the travelled snow-road. The descent and ascent of the pitch holes were so steep and their depth so great as to make travel, especially with loads, extremely difficult and even unsafe. A small expenditure of municipal moneys would have so mitigated the evil as to render the travel safe:—Held, that under s. 618 of the Municipal Act, R. S. M. c. 100, the defendants were liable for the damages. Casveell v. St. Mary's Road Co., 28 U. C. R. 247, and Walker v. Helifax, 16 N. S. R. 371, Cass. Dig. 175, followed.—Held, also, following Prootor v. Parker, 12 Man. L. R. 529, that, by not raising the objection at the trial, the defendants had waived strict proof of the facts which, under s. 610, would render them liable to keep the road in repair. Kennedy v. Rural Municipality of Portage la Prairie, 20 C. L. T. 26, 12 Man. L. R. 634.

Unguarded excavation — Negligence—Contributory negligence—Findings of jury.]

—The plaintiffs sought to recover damages from the defendant town coporation for injuries sustained a leading income the states of the town by a contractor under the town authorities in connection with the construction of a system of drainage. The evidence shewed that the plaintiffs drove out of town in the morning before the trench was dug, and were returning after dark, when they were thrown into the trench which, in the meantime, had been dug across the greater part of the street, and had been left unguarded and insufficiently lighted. The jury found, in answer to questions submitted to them, that the town corporation were guilty of negligence in not properly guarding the exeavation, but that the driver of the carriage could have avoided the accident by the exercise of reasonable care—Held, on an equal division of the Court, that the judgment entered on the findings, in the defendants' favour, must be affirmed. Weir v. Amberst, 38 N. S. R. 447.

6. OBSTRUCTION OF HIGHWAYS,

Blocking highways — Contrary to lease from city — Interference with business — Damages. —Action for damages in connection with closing up of portions of streets near defendants' brewery. The portions so closed had been leased to the Canadian Pacific Railway Co., the agreement between the City of Montreal and the latter company respecting same having been sanctioned by the Legislature. This sanction does not create for defendants any new ground of damages allowed, calculated on delay defendants put to in teaming to and from the premises in question. Montreal v. Montreal, 6 E. L. Action lant to aration part of kefield, to occupy or obstruct same, and that defendant should be ordered to go out of possession of same, and to remove all obstructions therefrom. At trial judgment was given for plaintiffs, as prayed. Divisional Court held, that the injunction should be suspended for three months to enable defendant to remove his boathouse. Building materials-Injury to bicyclist -Negligence of municipal corporation -Contributory negligence-Notice of claim-Letter to chairman of board of works—Re-lief over against landowner.] — The plaintiff's claim was for damages caused by falling from his bicycle into a deep unguarded excavation in a lot owned by the defendant L. on the corner of a public street and a lane in the city of Winnipeg. He was riding down an inclined part of the highway towards and close to a portion of it which was only about 30 feet wide, and which was obstructed for half its width by a pile of building materials in the possession of and maintained there by L. and, observing that the remainder of the roadway was at the moment occupied by a team with a loaded waggon, he attempted to stop by back-pedal-ling. But the claim then came off the sprocket wheel, and, being unable to check his speed, he tried to turn into a lane on the hither side of the obstructions. His speed was too great, however, and he ran into the excavation at the edge of the lane, being seriously injured. It appeared that the pro-per city officials had notice of the obstructions being on the street for a considerable time previously, and that they had requested L. to remove them. It was contended on behalf of the defendants that the plaintiff had been guilty of contributory negligence, as he was aware of the condition of the street and of the chance that it might be wholly blocked at any time, and should not have run the risk of the chain slipping off whilst going down the incline. He was, however, an experienced bicycle rider, and had used the same wheel for several years without the chain having ever come off:— Held, that he was not guilty of contributory negligence in the matter, and that the defendants were liable to him in damages.— The defendants also set up that notice of the claim had not been served on the city clerk as required by s. 722 of the Winnipeg charter, I & 2 Edw. VII. c. 77. The notice relied on was a letter which the plaintiff delivered on was a letter which the planting delivered personally to the chairman of the board of works, and which contained full particulars of the accident and of the in-juries received, and asked for payment of $350. This letter reached the city clerk within the time required by that section :-Held, that the statute was sufficiently complied with to enable the plaintiff to recover. plied with to enable the plantifit to recover.—Held, also, that the defendants were entitled, under s. 728 of the charter, to relief over against L. for the amount of the plaintiff's judgment and all their costs in the action. Conviction-Old trail - Hudson's Bay company—Transfer to Territories—Crown— Expropriation—Compensation—Petition of right.]-When a statute authorizes the expropriation of private land, the owner is not entitled to compensation, unless the statute so provides. Even where compensation is payable by the statute, the party expropriating may (unless the statute otherwise pro-vides) enter upon the land for the purposes expressed by the statute, without being liable to an action for damages; the owner must take such proceedings as may exist for obtaining compensation-in the case of expropriation by the Crown by petition of right in the Exchequer Court. Where land, which was part of the lands reserved to the Hudson's Bay Company, was sold in a state of nature to a purchaser, who obtained a certificate of ownership therefor under the Territories Real Property Act, and cultivated and enclosed it, thus preventing the use of an old trail, which, subsequently, was surveyed and transferred to the Lieutenant-Governor for the use of the Territories:-Held, that the purchaser was rightly convicted of obstructing a public highway. Re-gina v. Nimmons, 1 Terr. L. R. 415.

Damage to business of boarding-house keeper—Permission of city engineer to obstruct for building purposes — Effect of,!—Action by boarding-house keeper for damages caused by defendants "obstructing the sidewalk and road in front of plaintiff's residence, so that the boarders not having convenient access to the louse left for more convenient and agreeable quarters: "—Held, that there was no evidence that these our convenient and agreeable quarters: "—Held, that there was no evidence that these our dark the service of the servi

Dwelling house — Survey — Lowering grade—Compensation.] — A survey of the town of Cornwall was confirmed by 47 V. c. 50 (O.). This Act declared the survey to lay down correctly the lines of the street as originally laid out, and provided that:— "Where any dwelling house or shop ... had been before the 1st January, 1888, partly built upon any street as ascertained by said survey, it shall not be incumbent upon the owner or occupant of such dwelling house, shop or building to remove the same off such street until the rebuilding of such dwelling house, shop, or building, or the repairing thereof to the extent of 50 per cent. of the then cash value thereof; but this proviso shall not apply to any fence, steps, platform, sign, porch, or projection attached to any such dwelling house or shop." The survey shewed that a certain dwelling encroached four feet upon the street. This verandah was made of wood, rested on stone pillars, had its own roof, and was firmly attached to the house: — Held, that the verandah was an integral part of the dwelling house and not a porch or projection attached to it, and was not to be considered an obstruction on the street which should be removed, within the above provise:—Held, therefore, that the position of the dwelling-house and verandah did not barr the owner from applying for compensation under the Municipal Act for damages sustained by reason of the corporation having lowered the grade of the street in front to an extent interfering with his access. Williams v. Cornwall, 20 C. L. T. 457, 32 O. R. 457, 32

Injury to traveller — Electric railscay tracks on highway, 1—The administratrix of one P. sought to recover damages for his death by being thrown out of his carriage while travelling on a highway in defendant township, the said highway being alleged to be out of repair. The Court of Appeal held that the township, not the county nor the defendant electric company, was liable for the non-repair. Pow v. West Oxford, 13 O. W. R. 162.

Injury to traveller—Knowledge of danger—Negligence — Municipal corporation — Misjeasance or nonfeasance.] — The mere fact that the plaintiff knew that a heap of dirt was standing upon a highway is not sufficient to disentitle him to recover damages from a municipal corporation for personal injuries sustained by him owing to the heap having been negligently left there unguarded.—Gordon v. Belleville, 15 O. R. 26, and Copeland v. Blenehim, 9 O. R. 19, followed.—It was argued that the municipal corporation, in discharging their duty of cleaning the highway, had a right to cause the dirt to be raked into a heap, and that leaving it there unguarded was mere nonfeasance:—Held, that the doing of a lawful act in such a way as to endanger the safety of the public was misfeasance—the whole was one act and an unlawful act.—Rove v. Corporation of Leeds and Grenville, 13 C. P. 515, Dickson v. Hadimand, 2 O. W. R. 269, 3 O. W. R. 52, and Bull v. Mayor, etc., of Shoredisch, 18 Times L. R. 171, 19 Times L. R. 64, followed. Keech v. Municipal corporation — By-law — Power to close roads.] — The roads mentioned in s.s. 127 of s. 50 of the Municipal Clauses Act, which may be closed by by-law, are not only such roads as are wholly situate within the limits of the municipality, but include also highways or trunk roads leading into the districts beyond the boundaries. Styles v. Victoria, 8 B. C. R. 406.

Municipal eorporation — Misfeasence —Liability for wrongful acts of committee of council—Injury to traveller—Damages.]—The municipal council of a township, havaing decided to construct a ditch along the injury and the provisions of the Ditches and Watercourses Act, appointed three of their number a committee to meet on the highway, and there to let the contract for the work by public competition. This the committee did, and, in order to indicate where the ditch was to be constructed, they drove stakes in the highway, one being near the centre of the travelled portion. The contract was let, and the stakes were left in position, projecting about six inches above the ground, and unprotected by barrier, light, or otherwise. One of the plaintiffs, in walking upon the highway, struck her foot against one of the stakes, and was thrown to the ground, and injured:—Held, that the injury was caused by misfeasance, and that the municipal corporation were liable for the acts of the committee, who were acting within the scope of their authority.—Damages were assessed for the plaintiff who was injured at $1,500 and for her husband at $500. Biggar v. Crowland, 8 O. W. R. $500. L. R. 104.

Negligence — Damages.] — A milkstand built on a highway by an adjoining proprietor, and projecting slightly over the travelled way, is such an obstruction as to constitute want of repair within the meaning of the Municipal Act, and when such an obstruction exists for three years, and the municipal corporation having jurisdiction over the road in question take no steps to have it removed, they are liable in damages for an accident caused by it. Castor v, Uxbridge, 39 U. C. R. 113,

Non-feasance—Municipal corporation—Knowledge—Pleading,]—The declaration alleged that the defendants wrongfully and negligently allowed a sidewalk in one of the streets to be obstructed by a pile of lumber, and wrongfully and negligently allowed it to remain there for an unreasonable time, without lights or other signals thereon, whereby the plaintiff was thrown down and sustained the injury complained of:—Held, that, as the declaration did not allege that the defendants had knowledge of the obstruction, it disclosed a mere nonfensance, and was bad on demurrer. Rolsten v. St. John, 36 N. B. R. 574.

Nuisance—Prevention of access to property—Right of action—Individual injury—Injunction—Remoral.] — The right of ingress from and egress to a public highway parting a person's land is a private right, differing not only in degree but in kind from the right of the public to pass and repass along such highway; and any disturbance of the private right may be enjoined in an action by the land owner alone. W. R. 279), that there should be judgment for plaintiffs declaring that the said highways were public, and that the defendant be restrained from occupying or obstructing the same, and to be ordered to go out of possession and to remove all obstructions therefrom—Divisional Court (14 O. W. R. 1231, 1 O. W. N. 287), affirmed above judgment,—Court of Appeal dismissed an appeal therefrom with costs. Hoy v. Bisonnette (1910), 17 O. W. R. 321, 2 O. W. N. 189.

Proof of abandonment-Obstruction-Action to compel removal-Owner of abutting land.]-The appellant removed a fence and took possession of a strip of land which originally had been detached from his pro-perty, but which for many years had formed part of a public highway, and had served to give the respondent access to his property. The respondent brought suit asking that the appellant be ordered to cease his disturbance, and replace the fence as it was:— Held, (affirming the judgment in 20 Que.
S. C. 26, but omitting one considerant), that it was incumbent on the appellant, in order to make good his pretension that the strip in question had ceased to be a public road, to prove that by some act of duly constituted and competent authority qualified to act on behalf of the public, the road had been closed or abolished and the rights of the public thereto renounced, or, at least, such a total cessation of use by the public of the road as a public road, and such a conversion thereof to other uses, acquiesced in by competent authority, as would constitute a total aban-donment by the public and such competent authority, of all rights thereto as a public road. 2. A person owning land abutting on such road, and who is deprived of the direct access which he previously had thereto, suffers special damage by the closing and obstruction of the road, and has in consequence a right of action in his own name to compel the removal of the obstruction. Meloche v. Davidson, 11 Que. K. B.

Railways—Fences — Municipal corporation—By-lave—Railway Act of Canada — Railway Committee of Privy Council — Injunction — Removal of obstruction—Jurisdiction.]—The allowance for a road made by a Crown surveyor, is a highway, within the meaning of s. 599 of the Municipal Act, and, although not an open public road, used and travelled upon by the public, it is a highway within the meaning of the Railway Act of Canada, 51 V. c. 29. 2. Although the road allowance had not been cleared and opened up for public travel and had not been used as a public road, it is not necessary for the municipality to pass a by-law opening it before exercising jurisdiction over it; the council may direct their officers to open the road, and such direction will be sufficient. 3. The right of a railway company under s. 90 (g) of the Railway Act to construct their tracks and build their fences across the highway is subject to s. 183, which provides against any obstruction to the highway, and s. 194, which provides against any obstruction to the highway, and s. 194, which provides against any obstruction to the highway of the rectain the relief sought. Fencion Falls v. Victoria Rv. Co., 29 Gr. 4, and City of Toronto v. Lorsch, 24 O. R. 227, followed. 6. That the highway, being vested in the township corporation, who desired to open and make it fit for public travel, the plaintiffs were entitled to have the defendants enjoined from obstructing it and or dered to remove the fences. Gloucester Canada Allantic Rv. Co., 22 C. 1. 2, 163, 284, 3 O. L. R. 85, 4 O. L. R. 262, 1 O. W. R. 18, 63, 485.

Raised crossing—Injury to person driving—Misfeasance — Liability of municipal corporation — Negligence — Contributory negligence.]—The plaintiff in driving along a highway in a town, in order to pass a vehicle in front of him, turned somewhat to the side of the roadway, but was still upon the part of the highway designed for vehicles, when he encountered an obstacle and was thrown out of his waggon and injured. The obstacle was a wooden crossing, raised at the side of the street to a height of 12 inches above the level of the roadway:—Held, that it was an obstruction in the highway; that leaving it there was misfeasance; and that the defendants, the town corporation, were liable at common law for the plaintiff was not guilty of contributory negligence. Williams v. North Battleford (1910), 14 W. L. R. 684.

Restricting width of street.]—A servitude of a right of way created, in the deed of sale of an immovable, by these words, "and, in addition, to a right of way in the proposed Napoleon Street, until it is opened "—the proposed street in front of the property sold being traced on the endastral plan as having a width of thirty-six feet, must be construed as extending over the whole width. Hence, the building of a fence in the street and thereby restricting the ground upon which the servitude can be exercised will give rise, in favour of the dominant proprietor, to an action in recognition of servitude to stop the disturbance. Labonte v. Carrier (1910), 20 Que. K. B. 280.

Sidewalk — "Trap" — Negligence of municipal corporation—Damages—Aggrevation.]—In performing a contract for a town, contractors placed temporarily across a sidewalk a two-inch plank, the whole edge of which was exposed. There was no light there at night. A girl one night struck her foot against the edge of the plank, fell, and was injured:—Held, that the plank was a "trap,"—Semble, that even if it were shewn that the injury was aggravated by unskilful surgical treatment, the damages would be deemed to follow proximately from the negligence of the town. Small v. Westville, 40 N. S. R. 226.

Telegraph pole - Brace-Injury to tra-Telegraph pole — Brace—Injury to traveller—Liability of telegraph company.]—
The defendants, a telegraph company, used a line of telegraph formerly owned by another company, who by their charter had power to "set up posts... but the company shall use the power... in such manner as not to interfere with the free use by the public of such road." The defendants placed a brace against one of their poles, and the foot of the brace ex-tended 5 feet towards the centre of the highway, the road being narrow at this point. In the spring of the year this road is bad, and the track travelled in summer is usually abandoned by those travelling in carriages, the ground nearer this pole being better, and it being impracticable to go to the other side of the road. The plaintiff, in driving his carriage in the month of April along this road, kept in or near the travelled track. When the horse's head was about opposite the pole, the horse's feet sank in the mud. The horse, to recover himself, sprang toward the pole side, the left forward wheel came in contact with this brace, and the waggon was broken, and the plaintiff was injured :--Held, that the erection of the brace in that narrow place was not authorized by the Act of Parliament; it interfered with the free use by the public of the high-way. The boggy road, and the departure in the spring from the travelled track, were matters for the consideration of the defendants when they erected the brace. The position of the brace was the proximate cause of the waggon being overturned. Wells v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 40 N. S. R. S1.

Telephone company — Indemnity.] — Under its Acts of incorporation the Bell Telephone Company is authorised, with the consent of the municipal council interested, and under the supervision of the engineer of the municipality, or of such other officer as the municipal council may appoint, to erect and maintain poles along the sides of any street, but so as not to interfere with the public right of travelling on and using the street. Under an agreement with the municipal council of the defendants, the company erected a line of poles in one of the streets of the city, one pole being placed in the travelled portion of the street. The defendants had no engineer, and did not appoint any officer to supervise the erection of the poles but there was some evidence that the work had been done under the supervision of an officer of the defendants known as the "street surveyor," who discharged the duties usually discharged by an engineer of a municipality. The pole was allowed to remain in the street for several years, and the plaintiffs were injured by coming into collision with it, while lawfully using the street:—Held, affirming the judgment of Ferguson, J., 29 O. R. 518, 18 C. L. T. 310, that the pole was an illegal obstruction in the highway, which was therefore out of repair within the meaning of the Municipal Act, and that the defendants, having neglected to remove it, were liable in damages.—Held, also, reversing the judgment on this point, that the pole had not been erected under the supervision of the proper officer, and that the defendants were entitled to indemnity from the Bell Telephone company. Atkinson v Chatham, 19 C. L. T. 382, 26 A. R. 521.

Toll road—Action negatoire—Conclusions injonctives.] — An action négatoire with conclusions injonctives which are the essential accompaniment of it, is an action at common law, and may properly be brought by commissioners of toll roads against any person who causes obstructions upon the roads of which they have the control. Montreal Toll Roads Commissioners v. Montreal Water and Power Co., 8 Que. P. R. 38.

Verandah — Municipal by-law—Injunction.]—In an action to restrain the defendants from enforcing a by-law to compel the plaintiff to remove a verandah projecting some distance over one of the streets of the town, it was held, on the evidence, that the verandah had been bullt after the street had been dedicated and laid out, and that it was therefore an unlawful elestruction; but, as it had been in existence for a great many years, and as no special necessity for its removal was made out, the Court refused to grant the defendants a mandatory injunction against the plaintiff for its removal, leaving them to enforce their by-law in such way as they should be advised. Calducell v. Galt. 20 C. L. T. 203, 27 A. R. 162.

7. OPENING AND CLOSING OF HIGHWAYS.

Appeal from Mayor's Court of Charlottetown—Encroachment on streets—City council under a. 50 of Act of Incorporation have not power to open new streets, etc., except by authority of Governor in Council—Old boundaries.]—The 4th section of the city by-laws enacted that the city surveyor should not allow any erection facing on a street to project beyond the line of houses already built, or upon what has heretofore been considered and used as a street, and that when in doubt he should be guided by a plan made by Surveyor-General Wright. On that plan defendant's fence was represented as encroaching fourteen feet on Sydney street. The old fence was lately removed and a new one built on the same site, but the fourteen feet had been fenced and held by defendant before and ever since the plan was made. The Act of Incorporation, 18 V. c. 34, s. 50, under which the bylaw was made, gives the city council exclusive power to open, lay out, etc., the streets and to prevent encroachments, but adds a proviso that nothing therein contained should be construed as to authorise the opening of roads, etc., through private property without complying with the provisions of any Act or Acts then in force for awarding damages to any person injured thereby. It was contended that this section gave the city council supreme power to widen or open streets, and to remove buildings, fences, etc., also that section 4 of the city by-laws, established Wright's plan as conclusive evidence of the position of the streets, and that anything represented on that plan as an encroachment must be held to be so; also that the lot of which defendant contended the ground in question formed part exceeded the quantity which, according to the deed or grant there of, it ought to contain, and that his lot should be limited to the quantity described in his grant:—Held, Peters, J., that section 50 of the Act did not give the city council supreme power as contended .- That under that section the city council must apply to the Governor in Council for power to open new streets or to widen the present streets.—That the fence was not an encroachment notwithstanding the plan.-That disputes respecting old boundaries are not to be decided so much by what would be the metes and bounds contained in the deed, as by what would be the metes and bounds actually laid down by the surveyor acting for the grantor. Pleadwell v. Brenan (1857) 1 P. E. I. R. 147.

By-law-Closing of portion by municipal corporation - Original road allowance Corporation — Griginal rosa autocance Right of way over portions of road closed —Another convenient way — Action for damages — Arbitration — Municipal Act damages — Arbitration — Municipal Act (1903), ss. 629, 637, 660.] — Municipal corporation closed a portion of a public highway by by-law. Plaintiffs brought action claiming damages, and asked to have the by-law declared invalid or in the alternative to have it declared that one of the plaintiffs was entitled to a right of way over the north half of the portion of the highway so closed .- Sutherland, J., dismissed plaintiff's action with costs, holding that the evidence was inadequate to establish that the highway in question was an ori-ginal allowance for a road, therefore s. 660 (2) of the Municipal Act did not apply, and that it could not be said that the clos-ing of that portion of the highway left plaintiffs without another convenient road to their lands, and that their remedy was under the arbitration proceeding initiated by plaintiffs. Hanley v. Brantford (1910), 16 O. W. R. 812, 1 O. W. N. 1121.

Compensation for land taken—Arbitration — Motion for judgment to enforce accard—Leave to appeal refused.—Clute, J., gave plaintiff judgment enforcing an award and an order of mandamus requiring municipality to proceed with the opening of the road set out in their by-law No. 1042.—Riddell, J., refused leave to appeal. Usher v. North Toronto (1911), 18 O. W. R. 808, 2 O. W. N. 851.

Contract between municipal corporations to open and maintain highway

— Contract not under corporate seal —

Breach — Mandamus — Damages.]—Plaintiff township claimed that defendant township entered into an agreement with plaintiffs to open, build and maintain a public road in continuation of a road to be built by plaintiffs; the plaintiffs relying on said agreement, built their portion of said road, but defendants refused to build their portion, and plaintiffs claimed a mandatory order to compel defendants to build their portion, and damages for breach of said agreement. Defendants pleaded, inter alia. that such agreement was not under their corporate seal, and therefore not binding on them. At trial MacMahon, J., dismissed the action on above ground, Court of Ap-peal dismissed plaintiffs' appeal therefrom with costs, but defendants to repay plaintiffs $100 received from them. Judgment of MacMahon, J. 14 O. W. R. 122, affirmed. East Gwillimbury v. King (1910), 15 O. W. R. 601, 20 O. L. R. 510.

Conveyance of part of road allowance—Title to land—Statute of Limitations—Appurtenance—Former action—Rese adjudicata—Estoppel—Deed—Municipal corporation—By-law—Ejectment—Declaration of title, Pirie & Stone v. Parry Sound Lumber Co., 11 O. W. R. 11, 13 O. W. R. 319.

Damage resulting to plaintiff's hotel by closing highway — Compensation allowed by arbitrators—Con, Mun, Act, a. 447.1—Defendant council closed a portion of a public highway leading to plaintiff's hotel. Her hotel did not abut nor front upon the highway closed, — Mulock, C.J.Ex.D., held (15 O. W. R. 733. 1 O. W. N. 669) that its proximity to such highway enhanced its value and the closing of such highway ehranced its value. Plaintif awarded $500 damages.—Re McCauley and Toronto, 18 O. R. 416, specially referred to.—Court of Append dismissed defendants' appeal with costs.—Shragae v. Winnipeg (1910), 15 W. L. R. 96, 20 Man. L. R. 1, and Rex v. McCarthy (1904), 34 S. C. R. 570, distinguished Taylor v. Belle River (1910), 17 O. W. R. S16, 2 O. W. N. 387.

Damages caused to property holder.]

—The closing of one end of a street may result in direct and real damages to a property fronting on it; and the owner of the property has the right to recover the damages he has suffered from the municipal corporation which ordered the street to be closed although the corporation acted in the public interest and in pursuance of the provisions of its charter. Beaulac v. Three Rivers (1911), 17 R. de J. 198.

Damages to adjacent owners — Nature of the damages recoverable.]—Municipalities in exercising the right streets or public roads, are responsible to owners adjacent thereto for damages caused by the greater difficulty in reaching their lands. When the damage consists in the additional expense and the change of approach without cutting it off altogether, the owner can recover only that additional expense so far as it has occurred. lump sum for the depreciation of his property, as this cannot be determined on account of contingencies. Montreal V. Montreal Brewing Co., 18 Que. K. B. 404.

Depreciation of property — Lease by municipality — Interference with business —Damages, Montreal v. Montreal Brewing Co. (Que.), 6 E. L. R. 198.

Highway Act. 14 Vict. c. 1, s. 16—Information — Denurrer.]—An information for preventing the opening of a road directed to be laid out by the Governor in Council, under 14 V. c. 1, s. 16, must allege that the road ran through defendant's land. Att.-Gen. for P. E. I, v. Westaway (1856), 1 P. E. I. R. 114.

Injury to abutting lands — Municipal corporation — Damages.] — Municipalities exercising the right of closing streets or public ways are liable for damages for the injury done to the property abutting thereon by making access thereto more difficult. Montreal Brewing Co. v. Montreal, 30 Que S. C. 280.

Jurisdiction of municipal council—Closing part of highway extending into other municipalities — Consolidated Municipal Act, 1903, s, 637 — "Wholly within the jurisdiction of the council."]—By s. 637 of the Consolidated Municipal Act, 1903, the council of every county, township, city, town and village may pass by-laws, (1) for . . stopping up roads . . wholly within the jurisdiction of the council."—Held, that the word "wholly" is used with reference not to the locality of the road, but to the jurisdiction of the council over it; and the council of a municipality has jurisdiction to pass a by-law closing part of a continuous highway passing through that municipality and extending into other municipalities. In re Falle and Tilsonburg, 23 C. P. 167, followed. Hecison v, Pembroke, 6 O. R. 170, commented on, Re Taylor and Belle River, 18 O. L. R. 330, 13 O. W. R. 778.

Local improvement - Construction of roadway — By-law — Work not done as provided for — Different kind of road — Action by ratepayer-Injunction-Remedy.] —The defendants proposed to construct a macadam roadway upon a certain street, to be paid for by the ratepayers whose property would be benefited thereby according to the local improvement plan. There was no petition against the proposal; a by-law was passed; the work commenced, and was proceeding when the plaintiffs, suing on behalf of themselves and the other ratepayers affected, brought this action for a mandatory injunction, alleging that the defendants were not building a macadam road nor performing the work in accordance with the report referred to in the by-law, but were doing the work in a defective and unworkmanlike manner:—Held, Martin, J.A., dissenting, that this disclosed a cause of action, for the defendants were, assuming the truth of the allegation, doing something directly contrary to statute.-This does not involve assent to the proposition that a ratepayer can oversee the work and interfere whenever the quality does not suit him .- Quare. as to the plaintiffs' proper remedy.—Judgment of Irving, J., dismissing the action summarily, reversed. Arbuthnot v. Victoria (1910), 14 W. L. R. 440.

Persons entitled to compensation— Lands injuriously affected by closing of streets—Determination by council — Appeal to Judge as persona designata—Time fixed by statute—" Within 10 days after the passage of the by-law."]—By sec. 15 of the amendment to the Winnipeg charter, passed in 1904, repealing sec. 708, and substituting a new section therefor, the plaintiffs were authorised to close up certain streets and lanes in the city, and to determine what persons or classes of persons were injuriously affected by the exercise of these powers and entitled to compensation; and the section provided that no other persons or classes of persons should be so entitled unless such determination should be amended on appeal to a Judge of the Court of King's Bench: and also that any person dissatisfied with the determination of the council, as to the persons or classes of persons injuriously affected. might appeal therefrom to a Judge of the Court of King's Bench; "in which case he shall, within 10 days after the passage of Judge . . . may change, add to, or diminish the persons . . . or may dismiss such appeal, and, according to the result of such an appeal, may award costs for or against the plaintiffs. . . . The decision of such Judge shall be final and conclusive, and shall not be appealed against or moved against by any party." On the 30th September, 1907, a by-law was passed by the plaintiffs' council, reciting an agreement entered into between the plaintiffs and a railway company, ratifying and confirming it, closing the streets and lanes referred to, and prescribing the persons entitled to compensation therefor. This bylaw was then signed and sealed, but it was provided in it that it was to come into force on the execution of a certain supplementary agreement, which was not executed until the 20th July, 1908; and on that day another by-law was passed by the plaintiffs' council ratifying and confirming the former by-law and declaring it to be in force. Within 10 days from the passing of this last by-law an application was made by the defendants, by summons dated the 24th July, 190s, to a Judge of the Court of King's Bench, by way of appeal from the determination of the council as expressed in the first by-law, and, upon the application, the Judge, on the 8th October, 1908, made an order adding the defendants' names to the list of persons injuriously affected. On the 9th November, 1910, the defendants served upon the plaintiffs a notice that they had appointed an arbitrator to assess their compensation; and the plaintiffs, in this action, sought an injunction restraining the defendants from further proceeding and for a declaration that the order of the Judge was made without jurisdiction and was null and void:—Held, that, though the order of the Judge was, by the terms of the statute, final and conclusive, the plaintiffs were not deprived of all remedy; if the Judge had not jurisdiction, he could not confer jurisdiction upon himself by an erroneous decision to that effect: and the plaintiffs were entitled to have the question determined in this action.—Held, 592 udgtion oria a the Held,

Held,

also, that in making the order the Judge acted as persona designata, and the Court in this action was not bound by his deter mination that he had jurisdiction. - Held, also, that the 10 days began to run from the date on which the by-law was finally passed by the council and signed and sealed, which was on the 30th September, 1907; it was then a valid by-law, though it was to take effect in the future, upon the happening of a contingent event; upon the happening of that event, it came into force automatically. The order was, therefore, automatically. The order was, therefore, made without jurisdiction and was a nullity. and the plaintiffs were entitled to an injunction.—The words "passage of the by-law" are simple English words, and the Court should not give them any other than their plain meaning, unless coerced to do so by some very serious injustice or hardship which would arise from a literal interpretation The only inconvenience or injustice suggested here as a result of a literal interpretation of the Act was that persons desiring to appeal might be compelled to do so before it was known whether or not the by-law would ever come into force, and thus become involved in costs of proceedings which might be wholly abortive; but the Act gave the Judge full power over costs; and that was not such an operation of the statute as should drive the Court to the conclusion that there must have been some "clerical mistake" in the language of the Act.—Ex p. Rashleigh, 2 Ch. D. 9, followed. Winnipeg v. Brock (1910), 16 W. L. R. 45, Man. L. R.

Powers of county councils-Opening of a by-road situated partly in one local municipality and partly in another local municipality.]—A county council has the right to have drawn and to homologate a proces-verbal-or minute-for the opening of a by-road which lies partly in one local municipality and partly in another local municipality. Giguere v. Beauce (1910), 19 Que. K. B. 353, Proces-verbal - Homologation-Time.] -Where by a definitive judgment of the Circuit Court, a proces-verbal for the opening of a road has been declared regular, and its homologation granted, this homologation does not lapse by efflux of time, especially where most of the bridges have been completed, a part of the road built, and the material for the construction of the whole road purchased. Bigras v. Laval, 7 Que. P. R. 419.

Proces-verbal - M. C. 6, 125, 794, 796 798, 810a, 811, 826; C. C. 528, 529, 530, 531.]—Petition for opening of a new byroad from one range to another may be presented to municipal council by one or more interested parties .- Opening of a new by-road cannot be considered to be a private undertaking, when such by-road is demanded in public interest, for purpose of avoiding steep hills, almost impassable during certain periods of the year, and for purpose of facilitating communication with the village or chief place in locality.-Oath to be taken by a superintendent before he enters upon the discharge of his duties may be subscribed before the mayor of the place where it is declared.—Delay within which a superintendent must make his report is apparently provided in interests of such superintendent; the omission to fix such delay in resolution of council appointing a superintendent is not fatal.-A municipal council may, in its discretion, give super-intendent further delay, when he requests it, or confirm filing of such report by receiving it during or after delay first fixed. -A municipal council may, at any time, amend a report and distribute the work to be done upon or the cost of a road in such a way as to do justice to all; and it is for the parties interested to demand such amendment, either at time of its homologation, or afterwards according to provisions of Art. 811, M. C .- In opening of a by-road and distribution of work, the council may exercise its discretion, and power to correct any injustice done, provided it is legally brought to its attention, and the Courts should not exercise their superintending powers unless there is abuse of authority or irremediable justice.-It is only in absence of a proces-verbal or of a resolution in council that the work of maintaining by-roads leading from one range to another in repair is performed by the proprietors or occupants of taxable property in the range to which such by-roads lead from any older range.-In case of a decision upon merits of a proces-verbal, costs are within discretion of municipal council. -A superintendent is not bound to indicate in his proces-verbal what the law is respecting clearance of land,-Petitioners in present case could not raise this question; proprietors adjoining by-road could alone do so .-Proces-verbal in present case is not nuga-Processerout in present case is not nugatory by reason of any illegality or irregularity. Bernier v. St. Marcel (1909), 16 Que. R, de J. 294.

Proces-verbal - Municipal corporation -Powers of — Prescription — Pleading— Statute - Retroactivity - Part performance - Irregularities of procedure.] - A procès-verbal for the opening of a municipal road, made and homologated before the statute 69 V, c. 27 (Q.), remains in force until it is abrogated by a subsequent procesverbal or by-law. A municipal council has therefore the power by resolution to order the performance of work specified in such a proces-verbal which has been allowed to remain in abeyance for a period of over forty years .- 2. A procès-verbal cannot remain in force for a part and become inoperative for another part under 60 V. c. 27, s. 7 (Q.). When therefore it is made and homologated for the opening of two roads, one a front road and the other a by-road, and its provisions are carried out in respect of the latter, it is in force as a whole and does not become prescribed in respect of the front road .- 3. Prescription of a proces-verbal under the statute must be expressly pleaded by the party who seeks to avail himself of it.—4. The above statute has no retrospective operation and applies only to procès-verbaux made after it into force .- 5. The rule of Art, 825, M. C., that no one is bound to maintain more than one front road on the same lot of thirty arpents' depth, affords no ground of annulment of a proces-verbal, but only of application to the municipal authorities to shift the burden in conformity with it .- 6. Irregularities of procedure are not sufficient grounds for an action to set aside municipal proceedings but of appeal or petition to quash provided in the Municipal Code for the purpose.—Thericult v. Corp. of St. Alexandre, 8 Rev. de Jur. 527, approved. Corp. of Ste. Justine de Newton v. Leroux, 15 Que. K. B, 159.

Proces-verbal for the opening and maintaining of a road is null and void for all, or any one, of the following omissions or informalities: When the resolution of the council appointing the special superintendent does not prescribe a delay for making it, Art. 794. M. C. Cf. O'Shaughnessy v. Corp. of Stc. Clotilde de Horton, 11 Que. L. R. 152. When the special superintendent has not been sworn before making it, Art. 796 and 187 M. C. When the special superintendent onlist to give notice of the time and place of public meeting of the interested ratepayers, Art. 79 M. C. When no notice is given of the time and place at which the council is to make the examination of the proces-verbal, Art. Sof M. C. Proces-verbal that imposes on a ratepayer the obligation of erecting and maintaining fences on a third front road, when he has already two such roads to maintain, at a distance of less than thirty arpents from that in question, is illegal, unjust and oppressive and gives him a right of action in the Superior Court, to have it quashed. Meredith v. Corp. of South Pert of Township of Onslow (1909), 36 Que. S. C. 243.

Road allowance — Sale — Powers of Lieutenant-Governor — Croon.]—By 60 & 61 V. c. 28 (D). s. 20, the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Territories in conneil is empowered to close up "any road allowance or trail which has been transferred to the Territories:"—Held, that the words "which has been transferred," etc. qualify "trail" only, and not "road allowance;" and therefore the Lieutenant-Governor in council has power to close any road allowance.—Held, also, that the power to "deal with" the land composing a road allowance when "closed," "as he sees fit," enables him to transfer and convey a title without any authorisation from the Crown other than is contained in s. 20. In re Sale of Road Allowance, 20 C. L. T. 146.

Sale of area—Invalidity of by-law—Notice to ovener of abutting land—Condition precedent—Saskatchevan Municipal Ordinance, 101—Regina City Charter, s. 307.1—Action for a declaration that a street and lanes in Regina, as set out on a plan which the city council purported to close by a by-law, are public highways, and to have obstructions removed.—Held, that under above s. 101, the by-law is invalid, no notice of intention to pass it having been given to the then owner of the lot now owned by plaintin—Held, further, that action is maintainable notwithstanding above s. 307. German v. Regina, 10 W. L. R. 136.

Title to land—Res judicate.]—A previous action by these defendants against one L., with respect to certain lands, had been dismissed because these defendants could not make title. Plaintiffs herein, who had purchased from L. adjoining land, claimed the judgment in former action was a finding in their favour in this action:—Held, it was not and that the council had power to convey under s. 426 of the Municipal Act, 1873. Piric v. Parry Sound, 13 O. W. R. 319.

S. TOLL-ROAD.

Avoiding by private way—Damages.]
— A person whose land abuts upon a toll road upon one side, and upon the other side upon a public road upon which no right of toll exists, may open upon his land a road communicating with the latter road, and thus avoid passing over the toll road and paying toll, and the commissioners of the road cannot claim from him, as damages, the tolls which he would have had to pay if his vehicles had passed over the toll road. Commissioners of Roads at the Barriers of Montreal v. Penniston, 23 Que. S.
C. 40.

Breach of law - Passing without paying — Privity of contract respecting col-lection of tolls — Municipal contract and municipal by-law — Interpretation of statutes and of contracts.]—The passing of a toll-gate after the keeper's refusal because of the non-payment of toll is a forcible passing and a criminal offence.-The privilege, enjoyed by a turnpike company, to collect tolls from travellers may be contractually abandoned, but the same exemptions should apply impartially to every one, and a clause in the contract which would necessarily give greater privileges to some of the public and not to all, is illegal.-Turnpike companies are subject to, and bound to observe, the bylaws and regulations of the municipalities in whose territory they carry on their operations .- Ambiguous terms in a contract or statute granting exclusive rights to a turnpike company should be interpreted in favour of the public and against the company.— In the present case, the agreement entered into between the city of Quebec and the turnpike company conceded to the defendant the right to pass the toll-bars without paying and in exercising his right he committed no offence. North Shore Turnpike Co. v. Renaud (1911), 17 R. de J. 238.

Evasion of tolls — Tort — Damages — Closing of private roads.] — When a turnpike trust is authorised by statute to levy tolls for the use of its roads, and, for that purpose, to place toll-gates on them, and it is made an offence, punishable by fine, for owners of contiguous lands to open roads thereon, to be used so that the payment of tolls may be evaded, such offenders are liable to the trust, as tort-feasors, for the amount of tolls lost—2. The Court has no power, in such a case, to order the closing of the roads so opened. Montreal Turnpike Trust v. Westmount Land Oo., 34 Que. S. C. 5.

Running through two counties and several minor municipalities — Road owned by individual — Disrepair — Report by inspector of toll roads—Statutory duties — Forfeiture of rights — 3 Edw. VII. c. 4, s. 3 (1). — Action for a declaration of forfeiture by defendants of a toll road: — Held, that evidence that road in good repair will not be received, as it is for inspector of toll roads to decide as to that. The inspector is not bound to take evidence as to disrepair. After he reports he is not functus officio. It is not necessary for county council to decline to pass a by-law taking over the road. Estoppel does not arise. Plaintiffs entitled to forfeiture of portion within their limits altflough owned by an individual. South Dumfries v. Clark (1909), 14 O. W. R. 158.

Syndies — Control—Notice—Repair and maintenance.]—The statute 4 V. c. 17 leaves it to the discretion of the syndics of toll-roads to take the control of the roads there mentioned, or of sections or parts thereof; and it is only after they have assumed such control, giving the notice there required in the manner there pointed out, that the road authorities cease to be bound to maintain and repair such roads.—Without a previous taking possession in the manner provided by a full provided by the control. Repair such to the same provided by a judgment ordering them to to so, the syndies cannot be bound to repair and maintain a road of which they have not assumed the control. Roy v. Les Syndies des Chemins & Barrières de la Rive Nord, 16 Que. S. C.

9. OTHER CASES RESPECTING HIGHWAYS.

Bridge - Cost charged against parties benefited, although span of bridge less than eight feet-Order varied by local council-Order re-enacted by county council-Action to quash.]-Notwithstanding article 773 M. C. which provides that bridges of less than eight feet span form part of the municipal roads upon which they are situated, a report for the upkeep of a water course by the parties may order that the cost of new bridges required by the widening, which the report calls for, shall be met by them, and this even when the bridges are of less than eight feet span. Hence, if the report is amended by the local council to the effect that such bridges are to be paid for by the persons liable for the work upon the road, the county council, to which an appeal has been taken, does not violate the above mentioned article by setting aside the order the local council, and an action to quash the decision of the County Council will be dismissed. Cote v. Nicolet (1911), 39 Que. S. C. 421.

Bridge—Crossing by engines—Condition precedent—R. S. O. (1897), c. 242—3 Educ. VII. c. 7, s. 43—4 Educ. VII. c. 10, s. 60.]—R. S. O. (1897), c. 242, as amended by 3 Edw. VII., c. 7, s. 43, and 4 Edw. VII. c. 10, s. 60.]—ror it shall be lawful to run such engines over any highway whereon no tolls are levied, it shall be the duty of the person or persons proposing to run the same to strengthen, at his or their own expense, all bridges and culverts to be crossed by such engines, and to keep the same in repair so long as the highway is so used.—(2) The costs of such repairs shall be borne by the owners of different engines in proportion to the number of engines run over such bridges or culverts. R. S. O. 1887, c. 200, s. 10.—(3) The two preceding sub-sections shall not apply to engines used for threshing purposes or for machinery in construction of roadways of less than eight tons in weight. Provided, however, that before crossing any such bridge or culvert it shall be the duty of the person or persons proposing to run any engine or machinery mentioned in any of the sub-sections of this section to lay down on such bridge or cul-vert plank of such sufficient width and thickness as may be necessary to fully protect the flooring or surface of such bridge or culvert from any injury that might otherwise result thereto from the contact of the wheels of such engine or machinery; and in default of such engine or machinery; and in default thereof the person in charge and his em-ployer, if any, shall be liable to the munici-pality for all damage resulting to the floor-ing or surface of such bridge or culvert as aforesaid, 3 Edw. VII., c. 7, 8, 43, 4 Edw. VII., c. 10, s. 60."—Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 19 O. L. R. 188, Fitzpatrick, C.J., and Girouard, J., dissenting, that the strengthening of a bridge or laying of planks over it is a condition precedent to the right to run an engine over the same; and any engine crossing without observing such condition is unlawfully on the bridge and liable for injury resulting there-from.—Held, also, Fitzpatrick, C.J., and Girouard, J., dissenting that planks required by s.-s. 3 over a bridge or culvert were not intended merely to protect the surface from injury by reason of inequalities in the wheels of the engine or machinery passing over it, but was also to guard against the danger of the flooring giving way.—Appeal dismissed with costs. Goodison Thresher Co. v. Mc-Nab (1910), 31 C. L. T. 392, 44 S. C. R.

By-road which crosses obliquely and divides a lot bounded by a front road, does not become a front road for the rear portion of such lot which has passed into possession of another proprietor. Carden v. St. Michel (1909), 38 Que. S. C. 42.

Destruction of highway - Stream breaking through dams — Bridge over stream stopping flow of water — Duty of municipality to repair — Reasonable cost— Damages - Mandamus - Indictment Injunction.]-Where the destruction of a highway is caused by the gradual encroachment of the sea or a lake, arising from natural causes, the water occupying the former location of the highway, and whereby there is a change of ownership in the land encroached upon, it becoming vested in the Crown, and available for purposes of navigation, there is no liability on the part of the municipality by virtue of its duty to keep highways in repair, to replace the highway; but, if the element of ownership does not arise, a duty to repair may exist where the destruction is of such a character, taking into consideration the cost of repair, that the restoration of the highway may not unreasonably be regarded as coming within the bounds of such duty.—In a creek, in the town of Dundas, a couple of dams built some 60 years ago had broken away, whereby large quantities of stones, sand, and other débris were carried down and deposited in the channel adjacent to the plaintiff's land, the accumulation being added to by a bridge across the creek, built by a railway company, which choked the flow of water, the effect being that a portion of the highway in front of the plaintiff's land, and which was the only mode of ingress and egress to and from it, was washed away, rendering it difficult for two vehicles to pass each other. By removing the check to the flow of the water, caused by the bridge, and by the expenditure of $150, a roadway 30 feet wide could be furnished, while at a cost of $800 a permanent and satisfactory roadway could be provided :-Held, no question of ownership arising, and taking into consideration the cost of repair, that the destruction of the highway was not of such a character as would relieve the municipality from their obligation to repair; and that they were liable to the plaintiff for the special damage he had sustained by reason of their neglect .- A mandamus will not be granted in such a case.-If the relief was sought by the plaintiff as one of the public, sough by the plantilit as one of the public, the remedy would be by indictment.—An injunction was also refused, it not appearing that the municipality had interfered with the flow of water.—Judgment of Street, J., 10 O. L. R. 300, reversed. Cummnigs v. Dundas, 9 O. W. R. 107, 13 O. L. R. 384.

Emeroachment by building — Evidence,]—In an action brought to compel the removal of a porch as an encroachment on the street line, reliance should not be placed on such data as conjectures from the length of side lines on the street line elsewhere—Halifax v. Reeves, 23 S. C. R. 342, referred to. Attorney-General v. Nagle, 40 N. S. R. 165.

Encroachment by building — R. S. N. S. c. 78, s. 15 — Commissioner of streets — Application to, to define street line—Evidence — Injunction — Fences, Attorney-General v. Zink, 40 N. S. R. 633.

Insufficient lighting—Injury to person—Liability of municipality.]—A municipal corporation is responsible for an accident happening in one of its streets in consequence of insufficient lighting. Montreal v, Ryan, 17 Que, K. B. 143.

Ornamental trees — Destruction of, by street railway company under statute—
Rights of owners—Injunction—Construction of statutes.]—The plaintiffs were owners of land, and as such claimed ownership by virtue of s. 688 of the Municipal Act, Manitoha, of all shade trees, shrubs, and saplings growing on the road opposite to their lands; the defendants cut down and destroyed a number of the trees, and, as the plaintiffs asserted, intended to cut down the remainder. The plaintiffs claimed an injunction and damages. The defendants were incorporated by an Act of the Manitoha Legislature, 1 & 2 Edw. VII. c. 71, and authorized to construct an electric railway along such parts of the highways in the municipality of Assiniboia as might be required, provided the permission of the municipality was first obtained. An agreement was entered into between the company and the municipality authorizing the company to proceed with the construction. A plan of the roadbed, including the portion opposite the plaintiffs land, was approved by the counci:—Held, that the plaintiffs had such an interest in the trees in question and in the eight feet of the highway adjoining their land, as would entitle them to maintain an action to prevent destruction of the trees and encroachment upon the eight-foot strip by an unauthorized person. Where a statutory right has been conferred, the legislature will not be deemed to have taken away that right by a later statute, unless the plain language of the statute shews the intention so to do. It did not appear that the intention of the legislature in the present case was to put an end to the plaintiff's rights summarily, but rather to give to the railway company the right of way and power to construct; the disposal of the plaintiff's rights forming the subject of another consideration and of other provisions contained in the Acts embodied in and forming part of the special Act. The plaintiffs' rights formed a subject of compensation which might be dealt with in the manner provided by the Manitoba Railway Act and the Manitoba Railway Act and the Manitoba Railway Act. Banatyne v. Suburban Rapid Transit Co., 24 C. L. T. 380, 15 Man. L. R. 7.

Patentees to mining rights - Owners of surface rights — Roadway from mines — Right to search for minerals on town streets — Survey — Dedication — Sales of town lots — Priority of claim.] — Plaintiffs' actions were brought to restrain defendants from interfering with a certain roadway and the use thereof by plaintiffs, and that the town of Cobalt be restrained from interfering with plaintiffs' employees in searching for minerals upon the streets of the town of Cobalt, or upon any of the lots in said town. Plaintiffs claim title to the mines, minerals and mining rights in and upon and under mining claim J.B. 6. situate within the present corporate limits of Cobalt, the user of a certain roadway and the right to mine on the surface of said lands under letters patent. The private defendants claim title to certain lots laid out on the surface of J. B. 6, except the minerals, etc., and that they are entitled to have the surface of their lands undisturbed, and the town claims title to its streets and also claims that if plaintiffs have the right to mine on the streets they must exercise such rights subject to the statute 7 Edw. VII. c. 18, ss. 23 and 24. The actions were tried before the Chancellor, who held that the plaintiffs were entitled to the use and possession of the surface of the private defendants' lots for the purpose of mining operations, and that they were also entitled to mine on the streets in question, subject, however, to the enactment mentioned, but their claim to use the roadway in question was dismissed.—Court of Appeal dismissed defendants' appeal. Plaintiffs' cross appeal allowed in part both with costs to plaintiff. Judgment of Sir John Boyd, C., 13 O. W R. 333, varied. Coniagas Mines v. Cobalt & Jamieson Meat Co.; Coniagas Mines, Ltd. v. Jacobson & Blais (1910), 15 O. W. R. 761, 20 O. L. R. 622.

Registered plan — Vacant space — Reservation — Intention — Vendor and purchaser — Land Titles Act — Highway —Lane — Open space. Re Scottish Ontario Investment Co. and Bayley, 12 O. W. R. 130. Removal of sand from street laid out on plans — No dedication or acceptance as highways—Mortgage—Foredosure —Extinguishment of mortgagors' rights — Resolution of council — By-law. Birney v. Scarlett, 2 O. W. R. 300, 3 O. W. R. 136.

Respecting rights of pedestrians and vehicles — Automobile accident — Uustom of the road — C. C. 1053.]—When conditions are equal, pedestrians and drivers of vehicles have equal rights upon streets or highways; both must use prudence and care in the exercise of their respective rights.—In the present case, the pedestrian having a prior right of passage, the utmost care was required from the driver of the vehicle.—A moving vehicle should be stopped if an accident can thereby be avoided.—Independently of proof made on the question, this Court is bound to take judicial notice of the custom of the province which requires vehicles to keep to the right, Gagmon v. Robitaile, 16 R. L. n. s. 235.

Road allowance — Evidence of owner-ship.]—The plaintiff claimed that a certain road should be 99 feet wide while the defendant contended its width should be 63 feet. The defendant made title through the Hudson Bay Company, and it appeared that prior to the transfer of Rupert's Land to the Crown this road or trail, then of the width of 66 feet, had been used. The Surveyor-General of Canada had instructed that this road be surveyed of a width of 99 feet, which was approved of by order in council and the road was vested in the province:—Held, that the approval by the Dominion could not interfere with the right of the defendant. St. Vital v. Mager, 9 W. L. R. 161.

Road allowance — Issue as to width— Evidence — Government surveys — Orders in council — Crown patents — Reservation— Travelled trails — User — Dedication— Trespass — Municipal corporation—Damages — Injunction. Heath v. Portage la Prairie, 9 W. L. R. 512.

Turnpike roads — Tolls on.] — When turnpike trustees enter into an agreement with a city corporation to surrender to it the management of a part of one of their roads that becomes thereby free from tolls, and reserve the right of erecting on it a toll-gate to receive tolls from those who use the remaining part of the road, there is no evasion of such tolls by one who reaches the part of the road made free, by a private road, without using the part subject to tolls. Hope v. Montreal Turnpike Trust (1910), 20 Que. K. B. 139.

Width of highways in Manitoba—Crown patent — Reservation of travelled road — Subsequent survey increasing solidit of road.]—The Crown patent under which the plaintiff held the land in question reserved all travelled roads crossing the same "existing as such on the 15th day of July, 1870, which by and under the laws of Assiniboia were or may be held to be legally public highways," and the evidence shewed that the road in question had never extended south of a fence which the plaintiff had built along the south side of the road, and he had been in undisturbed occupancy and enjoyment of the land south of the fence up to the time the defendants had removed The defendants, however, relied on a survey of the road in question made in 1886 by D., a surveyor, alleged to have acted under instructions from the Dominion government, of which instructions no proof was given. It appeared that D. had, by his field notes, made the road 99 feet wide on the plan prepared by him, but it was not shewn by whom he was sent to make the survey or what authority he had to make it. It also appeared that the provincial government had, by order in council dated in 1899, approved of a report referring to the surveying and transferring to the province of certain thoroughfares or trails, and amongst them the road in question as surveyed by D. in 1886, and that the Dominion government had, by order in council dated in 1900, approved the above report and directed the said trail to be transferred to and vested in the province of Manitoba:-Held, following Pockett v. Poole, 11 Man. L. R. 508, that the survey in question was not originally legal and binding and was not made so by the Dominion order in council passed 14 years thereafter, and that the Dominion government, after granting the patents for the lands, could not afterwards interfere with the private rights of persons holding under them. Heath v. Portage la Prairie, 18 Man. L. R. 693, 9 W. L. R. 512, 11 W. L. R. 99.

Action to establish—Way of necessity—Acquired by prescription — Between two farms—Easement at an end, if ever existed etachon dismissed.]—Plaintiff brought action to establish a right of way between two farms, either as a way of necessity or as acquired by prescription. — Middleton, J., held, that if the claim to an easement of necessity ever existed it was now at an end and plaintiff's claim based upon prescription also failed. in rear of city lots "in common with others," as an easement appurtenant to the lots conveyed, entitles the purchaser to make any reasonable use, consistent with the common user, not only of the surface but also of the space over the lane. The construction of a fire-escape, three feet wide, with its lower end 17 feet above the ground (in compliance with municipal regulations), is not an unreasonable use nor inconsistent with the use of the lane in common by others; consequently, its removal should not be decreed at the suit of the owner of the land across which the lane has been opened. Judgments in 31 Que. S. C. 405, 2 E. L. R. 228, affirmed; Maclennan, J., dissenting, Meighen v. Pacaud, 40 S. C. R. 188, 5 E. L. R. 202.

Conveyance of right of way — Possession — Right of cultivation — Deed — Rectification.]—A conveyance of a right of way to a power and light company for a pole line and any other purpose which it may use it for, and the sole and absolute possession of the right of way, does not divest the grantor of his right to cultivate the right of way in such a manner as will not interfere with the company's poles or pole line. A claim for rectification of the conveyance was dismissed. Tarry v. West Kootenay Power and Light Co., 11 B. C. R. 229, 1 W. L. R. 186.

Deed of grant — Construction — "A good and sufficient roadway not less than 10 feet in width" — Termini and location —Loss of right by abandonment — Extinguishment by merger — Obstruction — Action for removal — Damages — Mandatory order — Costs. Brocklebank v. Colwill, 8 O. W. R. 231.

Easement — Boundaries.]—As plaintiff could not prove any right gained as an easement or otherwise, and defendant's boundary fence being within his metes and bounds according to plan and his description, action for declaration for right of way dismissed. Young v. Belyea, 13 O. W. R. 429.

Easement—Extinguishment by unity of possession — Revival on severance — Implied reservation — Land Titles Act.]
Unity of ownership extinguishes all presisting easements, such as private right of way over one part of the land for the accommodation of another part, and nothing in s. 26 or 46, or in any other provisions of the Land Titles Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 138, affects the matter.—The owner of a certain property, upon which was a saw mill, in 1887 built a grist mill upon another part of the same property. In 1888 he conveyed the part of the property on which the grist mill was, and in 1891 he also conveyed the rest of the property, with the saw mill property was conveyed to the defendants' predecessors in title, and in 1895 the grist mill property was conveyed to the plaintiff's predecessor in title. Throughout all this time access to the grist mill had been obtained by a more or less defined way running through the saw mill property, and so continued until 1906, when the defendants obstructed it. The plaintiff brought this action for an injunction restraining the observables.

struction and for damages. In none of the conveyances or transfers was there any mention made of the way now in question, by way of grant, reservation, or otherwise:—

Held, affirming the decision of a Divisional Court, 15 O. L. R. 67, 10 O. W. R. 630, that the action must be dismissed, upon the above principle. *McClellan v. Powassan Lumber Co., 12 O. W. R. 473, 17 O. L. R. 32.

Easement — Implied grant — Intention. Styles v. Towers, 1 O. W. R. 523.

Easement — Prescription — Joint right of neighbours — Disturbance — Remedy — Trespass — Possessory rights — Property rights.]—The land upon which a way is established between two tenements is susceptible of becoming by prescription the joint property of the two owners. Therefore, one of the two being disturbed in the legal possession which he has had for a year and a day, has a remedy in trespass against the author of the disturbance. The Court which adjudicates upon his claim must avoid dealing with his right of property and at the same time his right of property of the parties. Morel v. Dorval, 16 Que. K. B. 448.

Easement — Prescription — Lost grant —Permissive use — Evidence — Trespass. Smith v. MacGillivray, 5 E. L. R. 561.

Easement — Prescription — Presumption of lost grant — Evidence — Interruption — Inconsistent user by others — Juspublicum. Adams v. Fairweather, 7 O. W. R. 785, 8 O. W. R. 886.

Easement - Prescription - Railway--Station grounds - Implied grant-Powers of company - Benefit - Superfluous lands Necessity.]-The defendant claimed a right of way through the plaintiffs' station grounds at M. by virtue of open, continuous, and uninterrupted user for more than 30 years: Held, that the right must rest upon the presumption of a grant, and if an actual grant would have been illegal and void, a grant implied from 20 years' user could not be valid. The user on which the defendant relied began in 1872. At that time the Northern Railway Company of Canada, through whom the plaintiffs derived title, had no power to make a sale or grant of any of their property otherwise than for the benefit and account of the railway, 12 V. c. 196 (C.). In 1868 the Northern Railway was declared to be a work for the general advantage of Canada, but none of the general Railway Acts passed by the Dogeneral Railway Acts passed by the Do-minion Parliament was made applicable to it until the passing of the Railway Act, 1888, ss. 3 and 5; and by s. 90 (d) the power of a railway company to sell and dispose of land and other property was limited to so much thereof as was not necessary for the purposes of the railway. The land in question was acquired for use by the com-pany as a railway station, and the area was within the quantity which they were auththe meni, by se:— ional 630, n the assan R. 32.

orised to acquire for the purpose:—Held, that neither at the time when the user on which the defendant relied began, nor since, was there power in the railway company to make a grant of such a right; it was not for the benefit of the railway; neither was it of lands not required for its purposes; and the defendant had, therefore, failed to establish his right. Between the lot owned by the defendant and the station grounds there was a strip of land laid out as a street which he was occupying as part of his premises:—Held, that, even assuming that he had acquired title to the strip by possession, that did not carry with it any right to a way, of necessity or otherwise, over the plaintiffs' lands in order to give him an outlet. Judgment of Boyd, C., 1, O. W. R. 895, reversed: Osler, J.A., dissenting. Grand Trunk Rw. Co, v. Valliear, 24 C. L. T. 207, 7, O. L. R. 364, 3, O. W. R. 88.

Easement — Prescription — User for 40 years — Interruption — Evidence — Statute of Limitations — Fresh evidence on appeal. Avery v. Fortune, 11 O. W. R. 784.

Easement - Way of necessity - Parol grant - Prescription - Constructive notice.]-The defendant asserted a right to cross the plaintiff's land in going from his farm to the travelled road. The plaintiff's predecessor in title, as part of an agreement for an exchange of lands with the defendant had a superstant of the superst ant, had promised verbally to allow the latter to cross the parcel in question, and the defendant had exercised the right for four or five years. After that, the user ceased for six or seven years and until about 1886 when the defendant began to use the trail for heavy loads, but in 1892 the defendant himself built a fence, without any gate, across the trail. There was no evidence to shew that the plaintiff had any notice of the verbal agreement when he bought:-Held that the intermittent use of a convenient old trail was not sufficient to affect the plaintiff with constructive notice of the alleged agreement. 2. That the defendant was not entitled to use the trail as a way of necessity, although there were natural obstacles to his reaching the highway by any other road. 3. That there was no such continuous enjoyment of the way as is necessary to establish an easement by prescription under 2 & 3 Wm, IV. c. 71, s. 2. Carr v, Foster, 3 Q. B. 581, and Hollins v. Verney, 13 Q. B. D. 308, followed. 4. That the evidence was not sufficient to establish a definite agreement for a perpetual right of way or to warrant the interference of a Court of equity by way of specific performance, as the agreement was made when the country was sparsely settled and the road allowances were not expected to be speedily made passable, and the passage across the intervening land not owned by either party might have been shut off at any time. Huddleaton v. Love, 21 C. L. T. 447, 13 Man. L. R. 432.

Enclave - Servitude - Parties to action.]-The plaintiff, who was the owner of a farm lot abutting upon the rear of the defendant's property, and without communication with any highway, complained that he had been prevented from exercising the legal servitude of passage to which the defendant's property was subject in favour of the plaintiff's. He asked that the servitude be located, and prayed that it be located on the defendant's farm road:—Held, that the legal servitude of passage in favour of the owner of a property enclavée over the neighbour's property, to gain access to a, highway, exists upon the shortest line which communicates from the nearest highway to any part of the property enclavée, unless up on this line serious obstacles exist which would render the cost of constructing and would render the cost of constraints and using the road very onerous, in which case the servitude would lie over the shortest road which would avoid such obstacles, 2. No part of the property enclavée can be counted in computing the distance to a highway, which distance would be measured from any point of the property enclavée to the nearest highway. 3. Even where a servi-tude of passage is held to exist, the person whose land is subject to it is not obliged to permit the person exercising it common use with himself of his farm road,—the situation of the servitude depending upon the natural conditions of the several properties, and not upon the works which the surrounding proprietors may make. 4. In case of doubt as to the locating of the servi-tude, the plaintiff ought to make the various persons interested parties, so that the location of the servitude may be ascertained by experts. It is not the duty of the defendant to bring these parties into the cause. Boyer v. Perras, 17 Que. S. C. 522.

secial case — Prescription.]—Plaintiff and defendants owned adjoining water lots to channel, the public had been accustomed for some years to travel on the ice over plaintiff's lot, defendants had 'erected a wharf which had encroached on plaintiff's lot and plaintiff brought ejectment for land so encroached upon.—Defendants set up the user by the public as giving them an easement over defendant's lot. Defendants also claimed right to hold that portion of land encroached upon fay their wharf, by prescription:—Held, (Peters, J.). That there was no easement as claimed by defendants.—That defendants had not acquired a title to the land by prescription. Carvell v. Charlotteions (1876), 2 P. E. I. R. 115.

Failure of vendor to reserve a way.]

—The sale of a part, not contiguous to the servient land, of the land to which is due a right of way, without reserving another way in favour of the remaining part of the vendor's property for the purpose of permitting of the exercise of the way first created, extinguishes the right as to the part so sold.

and Art. 556 C. C. is without application. Gosselin v. Charpentier, 19 Que. K. B. 18.

Gate closed by lock.]-The proprietor of the servient land of a right of way can do nothing which tends to diminish the use of the way or to render its exercise more of the way or to request the cannot obstruct the passage-way with a gate closed by a lock and key, if it results in more inconvenience. The Court, adjudicating upon the conclusions of a confessory action instituted by the owner of the land in favour of which the way is established, may fix the hours during which the gate may be locked. Rioux v. Nesbitt, 19 Que. K. B. 75.

Grant of right - Exception - Reservation — Evidence — Onus — Prescription. Reid v. Goodwin, 6 O. W. R. 944.

Lane - Closing up - Registering plan -Amendment and alterations - Application for — Title of applicants — Registry Act — Construction of — Evidence.]—The effect of s. 110 of the Registry Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 136, whereby, after a plan has been registered and a sale or sales made thereunder, the plan is binding upon the persons so registering it, is that it is not irrevocably so, but it may be amended or altered on a proper case being made out. Notice of any proposed amendment or altera-tion must be given to all purchasers thereunder, who are entitled to oppose the amendment or alteration. Such application may be made not only by the person registering the plan, but also by a purchaser or any one claiming under him; but when it is sought to close a lane laid out on a plan the soil of which remains in the person registering it, a purchaser seeking to close the lane must shew that he represents the title of the person who registers .- Where, therefore, an application was made by a purchaser of lands laid out on a plan situated in a city to close a private lane laid out thereon, and the applicants failed to shew that they had acquired the title to the soil in the lane, the application was refused. In re Hamilton Terminal Rw. Co. and Whipple, 9 O. W. R. 463, 14 O. L. R. 117.

Lane - Dedication and acceptance by city — Sidewalk thereon out of repair — Person using walk injured — Liability of former owner - Finding of jury.] - Defendant was owner of certain property.
About 40 years ago he laid it out in building lots, reserving a lane leading from public highway. This lane has ever since been open. The city laid gas and water thereon many years ago and never assessed it to anyone. Since then defend-ant built a sidewalk thereon and plaintiff was injured by the same being out of re-He brought action claiming damages for injuries sustained. At trial Latchford, J., dismissed the action on the ground that the lane had been dedicated to and accepted the mane had been dedicated to and accepted by the city. Divisional Court affirmed above decision and dismissed plaintiff's appeal with costs. Rushton v. Galley (1910), 16 O. W. R. 12, 21 O. L. R. 135, Leave to appeal to Court of Appeal from above judgment refused, 16 O. W. R. 256, 1 O. W. N. 972.

Lane-Reserved in deed-Right of owner of land to fence in sides of lane-Leaving gates for owner of right of way-Inconvenience would be enormous-In winter large quantities of snow would have to be removed —Falconbridge, C.J.K.B., held, that plaintiff had failed to establish right to fence—
Motion for declaration of right dismissed with costs. Ross v. McLaren (1911), 18 O. W. R. 818, 2 O. W. N. 861. Affirmed by D. C. 19 O. W. R. 460, 2 O. W.

Lane-Right of user by several in com-mon — Servitude — Building — Fire escape.]—The owner of a shop or store adjoining a lane, of which he has the use in common with others, has the right, for the exercise of this servitude, under Art. 553, C. C., to erect a fire escape giving access from the building to the lane in case of fire, provided he places it so as not to interfere with those who have the same right of servitude as himself. Meighen v. Pacaud, 31 Que. S. C. 405, 3 E. L. R. 20, 4 E. L.

Lane-Strip of land adjoining used as part of — User as one of the public—Easement.]—To constitute a legal possession of land, not only must there be a corporeal detention, or that quasi detention which, according to the nature of the right, is equivalent thereto, but also the intention to act as owner of the land; no legal possession as owner of the land; no legal possession is acquired by the exercise of a supposed right as one of the public.—The rear portions of the plaintiff's and the defendant's lands abutted on a public lane, a strip of land between the fence erected on the defendant's land and the boundary of the lane being unenclosed. The plaintiff, for over 20 years, believing this strip to be a part of the lane, had been accustomed to drive over it to get to his stable, doing so in the exercise of a supposed right as one of the public, and not as an easement to his land: -Held, that he had not acquired any right to use the strip. Adams v. Fairweather, 7 O. W. R. 785, 8 O. W. R. 886, 13 O. L. R. 490.

Lane in city — Surveys Act, R. S. O. 1887, c. 181, s. 39 — Trespass — Tracks laid and cars run by street railway company — Engineer's consent.]—A 14-foot lane is not a road, street or commons under s. 39 of above Act. The city engineer was mistaken in considering this lane a public one. Damages allowed plaintiff for defendone. Damages allowed plantin for derend-ants laying their street car tracks on such lane. Bret v. Toronto Rv. Co. (1909), 13 O. W. R. 552. Appeal permitted directly to Court of Appeal, an interest in real estate being in question and plaintif not being prejudiced or delayed. Doubtful if Supreme Court of Canada would have jurisdiction. Bret v. Toronto Rv. Co. (1909), 13 O. W. R. 604. Appeal dismissed (1909), 14 O. W. R. 74.

Obstruction - Grant-Conditions.] The parties were owners of adjoining lots bounded in the rear by a lane. Their common grantor had divided his land into eight lots, leaving the lane in the rear of them. He had afterwards sold lots 1, 2, 3, 4 to the immediate grantor of the defendant and

W. has granted or shall afterwards grant the right of way over the said lane, without obstructing it at any time, nor depositing filth or snow, and in case of its being deposited, to remove such filth or snow so that the said lane may be clean." On the side of the defendant's land the lane had no opening into the public highway, but on the plaintiffs' side it opened on a public street. The defendant built a stable upon the lane in rear of his land, and the plaintiffs asked that it should be removed:—Held, that, in virtue of their title the plaintiffs had a right of way over the whole extent of the lane, and not only over the part which they could use as a means of access to the public highway, and the defendant could not obstruct the lane in rear of their property, although, on that side, the lane had no means of exit. Removal ordered. Pigeon, 16 Que. S. C. 235. Germain v.

Passage — Closing.]—The owner of an urban property subject to right of passage thereover, may enclose it by means of a gate with panels in one of which there is a small gate locking with a key, and a key is sent to the owner of the dominant tenement. Rioux v. Nesbitt (1909), 36 Que. S. C. 160.

Private street—Registration of plan—Sale according to plan — Reservation of streets — Servitude — Easement — Maintenance.]—The sale of an immovable described as "iot 5 of the subdivision of lot 212 of the cadastre," etc., with the use in common with all persons having a right thereto of the streets bounding the lot, when the plan of subdivision previously deposited for registration by the vendor contains the indication of a strip of land destined to serve as a street, is sufficient to constitute a servitude of passage, and give to the purchaser the remedy of an action confessoire against the person who subsequently acquires the strip which forms the servient tenement.—It is the owner of the dominant tenemeat who must do the work necessary for the establishment and maintenance of the way over the servient tenement. The obligation of the owner of the latter is to submit to the servitude and nothing more. Lamontagne v. Lecterc, 30 Que. S. C. 418.

Railway on.]—A right of way ceases to exist when the construction of a railway line upon the servient land renders the exercise of the right impossible. Gasselin & Charpentier, 19 Que, K. B. 18.

WAY.

Right of way—Severed farm — User—Right to place gates at termini — Deed.]—The plaintiff, being the owner of a part of a farm which was subject to a right of way connecting two other portions of the farm, reserved by a former owner of the whole farm, for the use and benefit of himself, his heirs and assigns, as a lane or roadway 33 feet wide across so long as needed or required in passing to and from the other lands now owned by (the grantor), brought his action for a declaration of his right to place gates at the termini of the right of way:—Held, that he was so entitled; Oslev and Maclennan, JJ.A., dissenting. Judgment of Falconbridge, C.J., 2 O. W. R. S58, reversed. Siple v Blow, 24 C. L. T. 392, S O. L. R. 547, 3 O. W. R. S58,

Right of way—Termini—Possession— Prescription.]—When the document of title constituting a right of way does not fix its situation in precise and formal terms, length of possession (33 years in such case) determines it. Thuot v. Ménard, 16 Que. K. B. 174.

Right of way appurtenant to land Prescription — Enjoyment for 40 years— Interruptions - Life estate - Pleading.]-In an action by the plaintiff for trespass to land, of which the plaintiff was the admitted owner, the defendant justified under an alleged right of way appurtenant to land owned by his father, J. W., which J. W. and the defendant were farming jointly at the time the alleged trespasses were committed. The evidence shewed that J. W. became the owner of and went into possession of his land in 1855, at which time A., the plaintiff's predecessor in title, was owner of and in possession of the servient tenement. That in April, 1856, J. W., with the knowledge and assent of A., made use of the way claimed, being informed by A. that he had the right to do so, and that the way had been given by the previous owner, P. A., for the benefit of the lots owned by J. W. That there had been a user, at various times in each year, as required, from 1856 down to 1890, the time of action brought, without any interference by plaintiff, or others, until 1896, when, and in 1897, 1898, and 1899, the plaintiff obstructed the way, and sought to prevent the defendant from using it. That the ob-structions placed by the plaintiff were in each instance, removed, or protested against, by the defendant, Evidence was given on the part of the plaintiff to shew that a gate had been maintained across the way, and that the user was permissive, but the trial Judge found that the gate was maintained with the defendant's permission, and that its purpose was to avoid the expense of fencing, and to prevent cattle straying at certain seasons of the year. As to the char-acter of the way, the evidence shewed that it was a well defined road, with deep wheel tracks over its entire length, except for a few feet close to the gate, where the ground was hard and stony. Also, that the road had been in the same condition throughout the whole period during which it had been used:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to the way claimed.—Held, also, (following Symons v. Leaker, 15 Que. B. D. 629), that the period from 1871 to 1895, during which a life estate was outstanding in the plaintiff's mother, was not to be excluded in computing the period of forty years referred to in R. S. N. S. 1900 c. 167, s. 30, although it should be excluded in computing the shorter period of twenty years. Semble, that the tenancy for life, being a matter in respect to which the defendant would not ordinarily have knowledge, and the plaintiff would, should have been replied by the latter.—Held, also, that the occasional attempts at interruption by the plaintiff in 1897, 1898, and 1899, not acquiesced in by the defendant, were not sufficient to defeat the operation of the statute. Eisenhauer v. Whynacht, 35 N. S. R. 295.

Right of way in gross—Easement— Permissive or adverse were—Prescription.]—In an action for trespass the defendant pleaded a right of way in gross, claiming the right to land at the shore and use the way in question:—Held, that, in order to succeed in his defence, the defendant must shew that he used the landing and way "as of right," and that, even if during portions of each year the defendant's user was such as would in time give him an easement, the fact that, at another portion of the year, the user became permissive, rendered unavailing the previous adverse user.—Semble, that a right such as was claimed could not be gained by prescription. Hayes v. Hayes, 40 N. S. R. 320.

Servitude — Extinguishment by union of tenements—Title—Sale of servient tenement—Revival of servitude—Description of way — Submission to arbitration — Civil Code.]—1. Where the purchaser of two properties, over one of which there is a servitude for the benefit of the other, extinguished by their reunion in the same hand, executes a deed of sale of the first subject to a servitude such as is constituted by the original title deed to which it refers, this deed of sale becomes in its turn a title deed, which revives the servitude.—2. The situation of a servitude of passage which is not fixed in the title deed constituting it is sufficiently determined by the description which is given of it, accompanied by a plan, in an agreement by the owners of the two properties to submit to an arbitrator the decision of the difficulties between them regarding this servitude.—3. Before, as after, the promulgation of the Civil Code, apparent servitudes are not purged by a sheriff's sale of the servient tenement. Judgment in 32 Que. S. C. 289 reversed. Simard v. Thompson, 18 Que. K. B. 24. Affirmed by the Supreme Court of Canada. Thompson v. Simard, 41 S. C. R. 217.

Servitude — Right of vay — Obstructions by owner of servient tement—Possessory action — Trouble de droit.] — Obstructions, refuse, and filth placed or thrown in a passage-way by the owner of the servient tenement, without any intention to assert an adverse right to that of the owner of the dominant tenement, do not amount to a disturbance (trouble de droit) affording a legal ground for a possessory action. Roumithac v. Dennies, 35 Que. S. C. 186.

Servitude of passage—Interpretation of deed.]—In an action for the removal of the fence and for disturbance, upon the proper interpretation of the deed, the purchaser had the right to exercise his right of passage over the full width—forty feet—of what was to become the location of the proposed street. Labonte v. Carrier (1910), 17 R. d. J. 181.

Servitudes—Titles and acts of recognition—Right of vay — Clauses and recitals in deeds—Commencement of proof in veriting.]—The acts of recognition mentioned in Art. 550, C. C., are not governed by, nor subject to, the requirements of Art. 213, C. C. Hence, a title to a right of way may be recognised in a deed by the owner of the servient enement, without giving even the substance of the clause of the contract establishing it. Acts of recognition, however, must be of the servitude as existing upon the property claimed to be the servient tenement. Therefore, a clause in a deed of sale, by the owner, of one of two contiguous lots, "subject to charges, etc., mentioned in a certain deed between L. and B. respecting the common passage existing between the said lot of ground, now one ceded and the one remaining," etc., does not amount to an act of recognition as contemplated in Art. 550, C. C., of a title creating a right of way on either of the two lots, as a servient tenement, for the benefit of the other, as the dominant one—2. Nor is a rectlail in a reference to an arbitrator for a decision of the point whether a sale by the sheriff did or did not extinguish a right of way, that "whereas W. B., etc., was possessed of a lot of ground, etc., subject to a servitude, namely, a right of passage, etc.," an act of recognition of a title to the servitude.—3. The above clause and recital are, however, a commencement of proof in writing which permits the adduction of oral evidence to establish that the owners of one lot used the passage-way on the other, in common with and as freely as its owner. Simard v. Thompson, 32 Que. S. C. 289.

Sufferance — Floatable river—Improvements—Riparian proprietors — Damages — Malice—Threat.]—A way of sufferance is not a public road, and the owner may forbid the use of it to any one he pleases. 2. A floatable river is part of the public domain, and the riparian proprietors cannot hinder the doing of work thereon for the purpose of facilitating the floating of logs. 3. The exercise of a right within permitted limits cannot serve as a basis of an action for damages; and the forbidding of a certain ting, accompanied by a threat of instituting proceedings, in case it is done, in order to cause one's right to be recognized, implies no malice which can afford ground for an action for damages. Pierce v. McConville, 12 Que. K. B. 163.

Turnpike roads trustees — Public road—Private road — Tolls — City of Montreal — Agreement.] — A person who uses a private road paralleling and turning into a public road at a point beyond a toll-gate, maintained by the trustees of such public road, is not bound to pay at such toll-gate. An agreement entered into between the city of Montreal and turnpike roads trustees respecting the remand of a toll-gate from the public road is one in the public interest, and every one, whether a resident within the city limits or not, may reap the benefit of such agreement. Hope v. Montreal Turnpike Trust, 16 R. L. n. s. 229 (reversed on appeal to the C. K. B.)

User — Prescription — Abandonment.] —L and H., who owned and occupied a farm in common, agreed upon a division of the property between them, and called in a surveyor for that purpose, who ran a line, upon which a fence was erected and by which the parties continued to hold. At the time of the division there was a road upon the property which had been used as a means of obtaining access to the public road, and which both parties continued to use. After a time H. constructed a road on his part of the property, which gave him a more convenient mode of access to the public road when going in certain directions, but he continued from time to time, as necessary, to use the former road. After the death of H., L. erected a fence for the purpose of preventing the defendants, who claimed under H., from making use of the portion of the old road which passed through his land, and upon the defendants taking down the fence brought an action for damages for the removal of the fence and an injunction to prevent the defendants from passing over his land. The evidence shewed a continuous user of the way for a period of about 30 years, and the plaintiff failed to shew any abandonment or interruption of the user:—Held, that the plaintiff could not succeed in his action; also, that the construction by H. of the new road over his own land and its use as mentioned was not an abandonment of his right to use the former way. Horne v. Horne, 38 N. S. R. 404.

User — Prescription — Deed — Reservation — Lost grant—Easement.]—To establish a right of way the facts must shew a bona fide user of the disputed way for some intelligent and definite purpose and for a period or at time clearly stated.—Glover v. Coleman. I. R. 10 C. P. 108, and Carr v. Foster, 3 Q. B. 581, distinguished.—An implied reservation cannot be read into an absolute grant. Facts insufficient to warrant presumption of lost grant—Guere, whether temporary non-user will prevent the acquisition of an easement. Ternan v. Flinn, 40 N. S. R. 167; O'Mara v. Eden, ib. 172n.

User for many years.]—Plaintiff had used and travelled for many years a well defined road across defendant's land, leading to a concession road. Defendant placed a gate across one end of the road. Plaintiff brought action to have it declared a public highway and to restrain defendant from placing obstructions thereon: — Held, that plaintif had failed to establish that the road was a public highway, but had established a right as against owners of the land over which the road passed. Declaration granted that plaintiff, his heirs and assigns, are entitled to free and uninterrupted use of the road and that defendant should remove the gate. White v. Keegan (1910), 15 O. W. R. 172.

Way — Private — Right to means of communication with public thoroughfares — Necessary accessories of an immorable existing at the time of its sale—Enclosed land—Responsibility — C. C. 549, 548.]—The land acquired by the predecessor in title of the plaintiff from defendant's father, included all its accessories and whatever was at the time destined for its use in perpetuity. Consequently, the exercise of the right of way along the road used, at the time of the sale and since, as a means of communication from the land sold to the public highways, not only by the predecessor in title of the plaintiff but also by the plaintiff himself since the purchase of the land, cannot be looked upon simply as the result of toleration on the part of defendant's father nor on the former's part, his universal legatee, but it must be considered as the exercise of a right to an accessory of the property to which it is attached in perpetuity. In effect, without such road, the land in question would be completely enclosed and the defendant, as his father himself would have been, would be obliged to give such means of egress or of right of way, even without any compensation therefor—It is true that according to the provisions of Art. 549 C. C. no servitude can be established without a title, and that possession, even immemorial, is sufficient for that purpose, nevertheless, this principle of law does not apply to legal servitudes among which Arts. 549 C. C. have placed the servitude of a right of way in favour of the proprietor of enclosed land.—In the present case, plaintiff's action against the defendant, its object being to have him remove obstructions which he, contrary to his obligations, had placed in the road or right of way in question, to the plaintiff's prejudice, must be maintained. Latour v. Guevrement (1910), 16 R. de J. 270.

What is necessary to acquire by prescription? — Evidence.]—Divisional Court, held, that in order to acquire a right of way over the lands of another by prescription, the user must be open, notorious, visible, uninterrupted, and undisputed, exercised under a claim of right adverse to the owner, acquiesced in by him and must have then existed for 20 years; that there can be no prescriptive right to pass over another's land in a general manner, and where a right of way by prescription is claimed, a certain and well defined line of travel must be shewn. —Bushey v. Sanliff (1886), 86 Hun. N. Y. 384.—Wimbledon, etc., v. Dixon (1875), 1 Ch. D. 362, at p. 369, and Avery v. Fortune (1908), 11 O. W. R. 784, followed, MoLachlin v. Schlievert (1911), 18 O. W. Accumulation of income during minority.]—A testator gave to each of his children, on attaining the age of twenty-five years, an equal share of the income of the whole of his residuary estate, but until each child had attained the age of twenty-five years what would have been his or her share of the income was to accumulate and form part of the testator's general estate: —Held, that the accumulations so directed were intended to be for the benefit of the general estate and not for the exclusive benefit of a particular child. Judgments of the Court of Appeal for Ontario and Riddell, J., affirmed, with a variation. Fulford v. Hardy, C. R. [1909] A. C. 255.

Accumulation of revenues.]—Where the trustees under a will, to whom the entire estate is bequeathed in trust, are directed by the testator to apply certain amounts for specified purposes until a division of the estate shall be made at a time prescribed by the will, it is their right and duty to retain and accumulate the surplus revenues of the estate although not specially instructed by the testator to do so. The fact that the estate is much larger at the date of the testator's death than it was when the will was made, is an extraneous circumstance which cannot be taken into account by the Court in the interpretation of a will, so as to change its meaning from that fairly deducible from the contents of the entire instrument itself. Ogilitie v. Ogilitie, 2 Que. S. C. 130.

Action to set aside — Administrator pendente lite — Foreign Court — Possession.]—A person who has been appointed by a French Court provisional administrator pending a suit to set aside a will, the estate being situated in France, cannot claim, against a sequestrator appointed by a Court of the Province of Quebec, possession of the property of the estate situated in that Province—The Courts of the Province of Quebec have full power to decide as to the provisional possession of real and personal property situated in this Province of a person who died abroad, and their decisions are absolute in this country.—Art. SQ. C. P. C., does not apply to the provisional administrator or sequestrator of the property of an estate pending a suit to set aside a will, inasmuch as he does not represent, in any sense, the deceased. Lavoignate v, MacKay, 17 Que. S. C. 378.

Annuities — Purchase of — Assets of estate,]—Motion under Rule 938 for directions to executors of a will as to the distribution of the estate among the residuary legatees and as to providing for the payment of annuities bequeathed by the will:—Held, that the parties interested in the residue were entitled to have sums set apart to answer the annuities from time to time, as sufficient assets should be in the hands of the executors, or to have sums applied in the purchase of Government annuities in the same way from time to time, as should seem most expedient to the Master if the parties (including the annuitants) differed. In re MeIntyre, 21 C. L. T. 380.

Annuity — Ademption — Evidence.]—A testator gave by his will to each of two daughters an anuity for life of $6,000. After making the will be gave to one daughter absolutely bonds sufficient to produce an income of a little more than $1,200 a year, and by a codicil reduced her annuity by that amount. He subsequently also gave to the other daughter absolutely bonds sufficient to produce an income of a little more than $1,200 a year, and instructed his solicitor to alter his will so as to reduce her annuity by that amount. He died suddenly, and the will was not altered:—Held, that the doctrine of ademption applied, and that, notwork that the doctrine of ademption applied, and that, notwork that the doctrine of ademption applied, and that, notwork that the doctrine of ademption applied, and that, notwork that the doctrine of ademption applied, and that, notwork that the doctrine of ademption applied, and that, notwork that the doctrine of a demption applied, and that, notwork that the doctrine of a demption applied, and that, notwork that the doctrine of a demption applied, and that, notwork that the doctrine of a demption applied, and that, notwork that the doctrine of a demption applied, and that, notwork that the doctrine of a demption applied and that the doctrine of a demption and the doctrine of a demption and the doctrine of a demption and the doctrine of the doctr

Blanks in will—Charitable gift—Trust for benevolent purposes—Uncertainty—Failure of trust.]—A testator by will provided for a bequest of money to the defendants, to be puid yearly or at such times as his executors about think advisable, but omitted to fill in the amount. In the same paragraph of the will it was then declared that, when "Home Missions" were considered more needy, an amount might be given to then, or to any such good and benevolent Christian objects as the executor should consider most deserving. The will then directed the executor to sell a part of the testator's real and personal estate, "and the proceeds to be placed, so as to be conveniently drawn to assist in aiding good and worthy objects."—Held, that the gift of an unnamed amount of money to the defendants was void, and that the gift in the rest of the will was not a gift to charitable, but to benevolent, uses, and failed for uncertainty. Breuster v. Foreign Mission Board of Baptist Convention of Maritime Provinces, 21 C. L. T. 131, 2 N. B. Eq. R. 172.

The same clause of the will gave the executors a discretion, "notwithstanding anything in this clause hereinbefore expressed," to apply the income in the promotion and support in the city of H. "of such charitable institutions and religious orders in connection with the Roman Catholic church as my said executors shall think proper." The testator died in 1881. The Archbishop of H. made unsuccessful efforts from 1883 to 1889 to induce cessful efforts from 1883 to 1889 to induce cessful efforts from 1883 to 1889 to induce few years to establish a college in H. A few years to establish a college in H. A few years to establish a college in H. A few years to establish a college in H. A few years to the property of the property of the years of the Archbishop, against the executors, for a declaration and directions: — Held, that the refusal of the Archbishop to give his assent to the introduction of the Jesuits rendered that mode of applying the residue impossible. As to matters within his ecclesiastical jurisdiction, he was the sole judge. He was not precluded from taking these proceedings as relator. The executors were ordered to formulate at once a scheme for the application of the income for the benefit of some charitable or religious order. In default of their doing so, the Court would take upon itself to formulate such a scheme as would best agree with the testator's wishes as expressed in the will. Attorney-General v. Power, 35 N. S. C. 526.

Claim for services—Rendered testator during his lifetime.]—Action against executors for alleged services and expenses in connection therewith, rendered deceased during his lifetime: — Held, that plaintiff's claim was incredible in the light of the facts disc'sed. Sullivan v. National Trust (1909), 14 0 W, R. 444.

Conditions and trusts — Breach by grantee — Action by cestui que trust for declaration of trust or charge.] — Action for a declaration that defendant holds lands subject to a charge in favour of plantiff. A father executed a document giving all his property, real and personal, to two sons, subject to charges to five other children. This document was under seal, and was at once recorded:—Held, that it was a deed, not a will. Declaration made as prayed, other children to be added as plaintiffs if they consent, otherwise to be added as defendants, Application for sale to be made later. Pratt v. Balcon, 7 E. L. R. 236.

In 1903 C. conveyed the premises to W. Q.'s son, A. Q., who, at the same time, gave C. a mortgage on them. In 1905 C. sold the premises under a power of sale contained in the mortgage to one A. S., who immediately reconveyed them to C. This suit was originally to set aside the conveyance from W. Q. to C. on the ground of fraud, but the bill was amended, and it was by agreement treated as a redemption suit, the sole question of fact being what was the amount necessary to be paid C. in order to redeem the property:—Held, that where a mortgais seeking to discharge himself from liability by payment, the onus of proof is upon him .-- Held, that where a conveyance, absolute on its face, but subject to certain verbal agreements as to reconveyance, is taken by a creditor to secure advances, stead of ordinary form of mortgage in which the terms of agreement would have been set out, the onus of proof, in case any dispute arises, is on the creditor to show the exact sum for which the conveyance is to stand as security .- Held, that where there were several debts, in the absence of any appropriation by the debtor at the time of payment, the creditor had the right to appropriate the payment to any of the debts he chose, and this right could be exercised at any time, and need not be shown by any specific act or declaration, but might be inferred from facts and circumstances.-Held, that the parties wishing a sale, there will be an order for sale in case the plaintiff fails to redeem, instead of the bill standing dismissed with costs, as is usual. Gifts of issue-Lapse-Gifts to a class Executors—Shares in company—Purchase by executor.]—Section 36 of the Wills Act, R. S. O. c. 128, which provides that gifts to issue who leave issue on the testator's death, shall not lapse, applies only to cases of strict lapse, and not to the case of a gift to a class, such as a residuary bequest "equally among my children share and share alike." A testator died possessed of shares anne. A testator died possessed of shares in a company. Afterwards, upon a fresh allotment of stock being made, his executrix took up the additional shares, paying the premium out of her own money as to some of the shares, and selling her right to others: -Held, that she was entitled as against the estate to such new shares, but only to a lien thereon for the amount advanced by her to take them up. "to and among my legatees hereinbefore named and referred to and my said trustees or the survivor of them in even and equal shares and proportions:"—Held, that the children of the niece, who were five in number, were entitled between them to one-fifth the residue and not to one-ninth each, Proceedings were taken in the year 1882 for the administration of the estate, and, without, as was held in the previous judgment of this Court, 27 A. R. 242, proper proceedings being taken, it was assumed that there were no children of the niece, and the amount of their legacy and their share in the residue was divided among the charitable institution, the trustees, and one of the other legatees:—Held, that the trustees and the charitable institution were bound to repay the excess which they had received; per curiam, with interest from the date of proceedings taken by the children of the niece; and per Maclennan, J.A., dissenting, with interest from the date of distribution under the report in the administration proceedings. Originating notice of motion — Determination of questions.] — Testator by his will dated 13th October, 1896, gave certain portions of his estate to each of his 7 children, naming them, who were all then living. Four of his children predeceased the testator, leaving personal representatives who are still living. In 1908 testator made a codicil to his will. He died in 1909. The residuary clause of his will directed the residuary clause of his will direct the residuar should be divided into seven shares, one to go to each of the three surviving children and one to the representatives of each of the four deceased children, or should it be divided into seven shares. As to interest payable by one of the four deceased children, or should it be divided almongst the three surviving children only:—Held, that the testator intended that the residue should be divided into seven shares. As to interest payable by one of the children in respect of lands devised to him it was held that the interest was to be paid annually upon the whole amount from time to time remaining unpaid:—Held, also, that the executors, while the residuary estate remained in their hands, could exercise their discretion as to payment of interest on another child's share. If, in their opinion, she needed the interest for her maintenance they could pay it to her, and if they paid the money to the children of said child (as permitted by the will) they would not be liable after such payment. — Divisional Court affirmed judgment of Britton, J., 15 O. Partition — Renunciation by one of the children now become of full age, in favour of his mother who had been his guardian — Renunciation before rendering account of the guardianship.]—A minor on becoming of full age may validly renounce in favour of his mother his share in their common property inherited from his father, and this may be done before his mother, who had been his guardian, had rendered him an account of her guardianship. Hence it is useless to move to set aside a sale of real estate, the property inherited, made by the mother to a third party at the same time as the renunciation, Montreal Fire Ins. Co. v. The institute was represented by a curatrix. The question specially submitted to the Court was whether the curatrix to the institute required the authorisation of a family council as to the reinvestment to be made of the price of an immovable belonging to the substitution, which had been sold under the power conferred by the will:—Held (affirming the judgment in 13 Que, S. Trusts.]-R. died in 1876, leaving practically all his property upon trust for the benefit of his widow and children. In his will, in order to make an equal distribution of a large portion of his estate among his of a large portion of his estate among his five daughters, he grouped together certain properties, in part real estate and in part personal, in five separate schedules. The property in schedule (a) was devised to the testator's daughter M. A. A., who died in 1902, leaving a will by which, in exercise of the power of appointment in her father's will, she devised one-third of her estate to her husband who survived her.—The clause in the will relating to the final distribution in the will relating to the final distribution of the scheduled property was as follows:-And upon trust on the death of either of my said daughters to convey one-third of the said lands, tenements, hereditaments, and premises apportioned to her in such schedule, to such person or persons upon the trusts and for the ends, intents and purposes or in such manner as my said daughter may by any writing under her hand, attested by two or more witnesses, or by her last will and testament, direct and appoint, and as to the remaining two-thirds, to hold the same for the child or children, or such of them of my said daugnter so dying, upon the or my said aughter so dying, upon the trusts and in the proportions, and for the intents and purposes my said daughter may by her last will and testament direct and appoint and in default of such directions and appointments then and in such case the said two-thirds and one-third shall be held by said executors and trustees in trust for such child or children and be divided equally between them and their heirs, share and share alike, on the youngest child living attaining the age of twenty-one years, and in the meantime and until such child shall attain such age, the rents, issues and profits thereof shall be applied by my said exnts thereor shall be applied by my said ex-ecutors toward the support, maintenance and education of such child or children, and in the event of my daughter dying, leaving no issue her surviving, then and in each case I will and direct that the said two-thirds and one-third before mentioned (if no disposition of the same shall be made by my said daughter) shall be equally divided by my said executors and trustees between her sisters and brother and their respective heirs in equal proportions per stirpes and not per capita":—Held, that the trustees, in order

The residuary clause in the will was:—"The rest, residue and remainder of my said estate, both real and personal and whatsoever and wheresoever situate, I give, devise and bequeath the same to my said executors and trustees, upon the trusts and for the intents and purposes fol-lowing, that is to say: upon trust after paying my brother, Duncan Robertson, or his heirs, to whom I give and bequeath the same, the legacy or sum of four thousand dollars, Dominion currency, to sell and dis-pose of the same as and when they shall in their discretion see fit and consider to be most for the benefit and advantage of my estate, and shall apportion the same or the proceeds of such parts or portions or the proceeds of such parts or post-one as shall be sold from time to time, equally to and among my said children, share and share alike, and shall hold the same for my said children and their heirs, share and share alike, subject to any advances or sums made or to be made by me, as aforesaid, upon the same trusts, with regard to my said daughters, as are hereinbefore declared with respect to the said estate in the said schedules mentioned": — Held, that the deceased daughter had a disposing power over onethird of her share of the residuary estate; and that the remaining two-thirds was divisible as was directed in regard to the scheduled property. Woid legacy — Distribution — Residuary legatees—Next of kin.] — A testator gave, subject to the payment of his debts, etc., to his widow a life estate in all his real and personal estate, and, subject to bequests to a university and a mission board, gave the proceeds of his real estate (with power of sale to the executors) to certain residuary legatees. The personal property being insufficient to pay the debts, etc., sufficient of the real estate to pay those debts, etc., and the specific legacies, was sold. The bequest to the missionary society was admittedly void under the Mortmain Act:—Held, that the amount of it fell into the residuand should go to the residuary legatees, not to the next of kin. In re Smith's Will (Carlton, C.), 7 O. L. R. 619, 3 O. W. R. 380.

2. Construction.

Absolute bequest — Bequest for maintenance—Discretion of executors — Division of residue.]—In construing a will it was held that certain legacies were not a charge upon lands; executors had power to sell lands to satisfy debts and legacies if personal estate was insufficient; widow must elect between dower and legacies; legacies to abate equally in full and widow should receive residue. Re Petty (1909), 14 O. W. R. 350, 487.

Action to recover what has been paid by error—Tax upon property devolving by succession—Duty of particular legatee — Interest—C. C. 891, 1047, 1140, et seq., R. S. Q. 1374 et seq.]—The will in question in this case provided for a legacy of $1,200 in plaintiff's favour, and contained the following clause: " And it is understood that the four hundred dollars due me by her husband, or any other sum of money which he may owe me at my death, shall be deducted from the said sum of $1,200, and any balance remaining will only be payable to the said legatee out of the revenue collected by my testamentary execu-tors:"—Held, affirming the judgment of the Court below, that, at the testator's death, all interest accrued at that date having been paid by the legatee's husband, the sum of $400, being the amount of the capital of the sum due by her husband, had become extinguished, and that the interest on that amount, from the date of the testator's death, could not be charged against the legatee, payment was subsequently made to the legatee by the testamentary executors of the balance remaining payable out of the legacy of $1,200; that interest having been illegally charged against the said legatee upon the said sum of $400, she had a right to be reimbursed that interest. Daust v. Boileau (1910), 17 R. de J. 8.

Administration of trusts — Power of appointment in heir—Time for distribution—Implied power in trustees to sell property.]
—Bill for directions as to administration of the trusts declared in will of deceased:—Held, that trustees have power to sell and dispose of property in order to make payments to executors of one of the devisees. Second, that as to the unappointed two-thirds share of a devise it should be equally divided now between surviving children of testator and heirs of D. Third, that the above devisee had a disposing power over one-third of her share of the residuary estate. As to the remainder, it should be distributed as declared in second answer. Smith v. Robertson, 6 E. L. R. 483.

Testator directed that certain property left.

Testator directed that certain property left to his daughter was to be divided if she left no issue, between her sisters and brothers and their respective "heirs," in equal proportions per stirpes and not per capita. Held, that the widow of a deceased brother is not included in the word "heirs." Ibid, 7 E. L. R. 312.

Administration with will annexed—Land—Power of sale—Trustee.]—Deceased directed his executor to sell his real estate. The executors obtained probate and died and his executors renounced as to this estate. The widow and another then took out letters of administration with will annexed. The widow entered into an agreement to sell the homestead farm mentioned in the will, she, and the next of kin, with the exception of an infant and a legatee, executing the conveyance. Specific performance refused:—Held, that the power of sale was confined to the original executor. There is no trustee of the trusts in the will to give a discharge. If debts and funeral expenses are paid, a trustee may be appointed under the Trusts Act. Wymers v. Hilton, 6 E. L. R. 326, 43 N. S. R. 161.

"All my children" — Children of predeceased child.]—The testator by his will directed that after the death of his wife his estate should "be divided amongst all my Allowance to guardian of infants-Additional to infants' allowances for main-tenance—Income of estate—Direction for ac-cumulation of part—Annuities out of surplus income—Costs—Action brought where sum-mary application sufficient. Hardy v. Sheriff, 10 O. w. R. 1045.

Alternative absolute gifts.]-A testator gave to his widow his real estate for life, tor gave to his widow his real estate for life, and at her death to his eldest son John for life, and thereafter to "become the absolute property" of John's eldest son, alternatively "to become the property of my son James or of his eldest son," and failing either of them to the appellant. John died in the testator's lifetime without male issue; James and his son, who predeceased him, survived the widow: — Held, that the gift to John's eldest son being of an absolute interest, it must, in the absence of words importing a different intention, and having regard to the context, be deemed to have been the intention of the will that the alternative gift to James should also be absolute. The gift to James should also be absolute. The gift over to the appellant in case of the death of James without male issue was defeated if James without male issue was defeated it either James or his son lived to take absolutely. — Judgment of the King's-Bench, Quebec, 15 Que. K. B. 515, affirmed. See also 29 Que S. C. 368. McGornick v. Simpson, [1907] A. C. 494, 16 Que. K. B.

Alternative disposition — Death of testator and wife "at the same time." |—H. by his will provided for disposal of his property in case his wife survived him, but not in case of her death first. The will also contained this provision: "In case both my wife and myself should, by accident or otherwise, be deprived of life at the same time, I request the following disposition to be made of my property." . H. died sixteen days after his wife, but made no change in his will:—Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Appeal, 4 O L. R. 686, 22 C. L. T. 405, which affirmed the judgment of a Divisional Court, 2 O. L. R. 168, 21 C. L. T. 434, that H. and his wife were not deprived of life at the same time, and he therefore died intestate. Annuities—Creation of fund for—Right to resort to corpus.]—The testator by his will made certain specific bequests and devises, and then gave to his executors all the residue of his property, real and personal, in trust to provide means to pay the expenses of administration, to pay debts, and to pay the bequests thereinafter made, with power to the executors to sell lands, etc., posit at interest, lend on security of mort-gages, or invest in the Dominion funds, any balance that may be on hand at any time, to form a fund to keep up the yearly payments to my sisters . . . namely, to pay to each one of my sisters . . . $250 a year, or, if there be not so much available in any year, then to divide equally between them what may be available and make up the deficiency to them when there are funds to do it with, and to pay to any of them who may have greater need on account of ill-health or misfortune a greater sum than the others, and a greater sum than $250." The will then directed the executors, after sufficient funds had been invested to keep up the payments to the sisters, to pay certain specific sums to four named persons, or in like proportions to each of them, "if there be not enough to pay each of them, "if there be not enough to pay them in full," and "to pay to the children of my brother . . . whatever may remain of the estate:"—Held, that the sisters of the testator had the right to resort to the corpus testator had the right to resort to the corpus of the fund provided for the payment of their annuities, if the income was sufficient. Annuity to widow—Claim to dower in hands of deceased—Implication—Intention of testator. McDowell v. Shankie (1910), 1 O. W. N. 813.

Appeal — Rules.] — Motion was made for an order construing the will of Michael Shepard, who died in 1873, and for an order determining the boundaries between the portions of lot No. 17 in the first concession west of Yonge street in the township of York, and authorising the plaintiff to mortgage the land devised to Joseph Harkness Shepard, deceased. — Divisional Court reversed Judgment of Latchford, J., 19 O. W. R. 25, 2 O. W. N. 1012, which defined the boundaries and authorised the mortgage.— Testator taken to have specifically disposed of all estate; (2) Court leans against intestacy; (3) residuary clause covers payment only; (4) antural construction should be given; (5) plain words of limitation not to be ignored—not to yield to equity view; (6) apparent omission "of my part" filled in. Shepard v Shepard (1911), 19 O. W. R. 497, 2 O. W. N. 1274.

Application by the widow and one of the executors, of Elijah Becksted, for an order determining her interest, and the interest, if any, of the next of kin of deceased in a certain piece of land:—Held, that the devise to the son was vested and not contingent upon his death. His sister having predeceased him and he baving also died, his mother as his sole heir became entitled to his interest in the said land. Re Becksted Estate (1910), 15 O. W. R. 302.

Appointment of executor — Bishop—Corporation sole.] — Testator by his will gave his real and personal estate to the Roman Catholic Bishop of St. John, and appointed the Roman Catholic Bishop of St. John one of his executors. The Roman Catholic Bishop of St. John is a corporation by Act of Parliament:—Held, that the bishop took as executor in his personal capacity, and that it was not sought by the will to appoint him in his corporate capacity. "Benefit"] — Widow was given the "benefit" of all the real and personal property, particularly all monies, as long as she remained the widow of the testator:—Held, that the word "benefit" is not a word of art, not a technical legal expression, to which a certain fixed interpretation must be given; that the will should be construed as if it had read, "I also will my wife all my real and personal property as long as she remains my widow," and that the widow should receive the instalments of a mortgage as they were paid. Bequest — Church — Trust — Mixed fund — Perpetsity — Abutement — Mortmain Acts.1—A testator, who died on the 12th April, 1895, by his will made the 6th September, 1894, directed land to be sold and out of the proceeds thereof and some personalty directed $2.00 to be paid to N. W. for the use of the Reformed Preshyterian Church, such sum to be expended by N. W. in the manner best calculated by him to advance the principles of that church. N. W. assigned the whole fund to the trustees of the church:—Held, also, that the assignment by N. W. to the trustees of the church was a valid exercise of the discretion given by the will. In re Johnson, Okambers v. Johnson, 23 C. L. T. 189, 5 O. L. R. 459, 1 O. W. R. 806, 2 O. W. R. 280.

Bequest — Classes of relatives "most in need" — Distribution — Representation,]—A clause of a will, directing that the surplus of assets, if any, be distributed amongst the brothers and sisters or nephews and nieces of the testator, who are most in need, in the discretion of the trustees, is not void for uncertainty. Such distribution need not be made by representation, i.e., amongst the brothers and sisters living, and the children of those deceased at the time of the testator's death, but may be made, in the discretion of the trustees, amongst the brothers and sisters, and nephews and nieces, children of brothers and sisters, even if such brothers and sisters be also living at the time of the testator's death. Bequest for life to widow — Use in specie of furniture — Income, Valleau v. Valleau, 1 O. W. R. 65.

Bequest in lieu of dower-Election-Dower out of land sold pursuant to option,] —The testator by his last will devised to his executors all his real and personal property, in trust to pay to his wife during her natural life, or so long as she remained his widow, one-third of the income arising from his real estate, and to divide the remaining two-thirds among the persons mentioned. The executors were empowered to sell or rent and convert into money said real and personal property, at such times and for such sums as they deemed best in the inter-est of the estate. By another clause of the will the executors were directed to hand over absolutely to his wife all the household furniture situated in the part of the house occupied by him:—Held, that the bequest to the wife, being in excess of her legal rights, was intended in lieu of dower, and that she was compelled to elect, and that, having done so by accepting such bequest, she was barred from claiming dower. -Held, also, that the wife was entitled to receive from the executors, under the terms of the will, one-third of the proceeds of the sale of a piece of land upon which the testator had given an option during his lifetime, which option was exercised after his death. McDonald v. Slater, 42 N. S. R. 183, 4 E. L. R. 263.

Bequest of bonds - Specific or demonstrative — Succession duty.] — A testator possessed both at the time of making a codicil to his will and at the time of his death a considerable number (more than 5) of $1,000 debentures, bearing interest at four per cent., of a certain city, by the codicil devised to each of two devisees "one de-benture of (the city) for the sum of $1,000, bearing interest at four per cent. per an-num," and directed "that, if I should deliver over any of the said debentures in my lifetime to any of the above legatees, such de-livery shall be considered and taken as a satisfaction of the legacy of the person to whom it is so delivered." He had in previous clauses bequeathed to each of five named persons one debenture of (the city) for the sum of $1,000, bearing interest at four per cent:—Held, that the legacies to the two legatees were not specific legacies; and that, even if they had been, the legatees were not entitled to receive them free of succession duty, and the executors should either deduct or collect the duty before paying them the legacies. In re Mackey 23 C. L. T. 297, 6 O. L. R. 292, 2 O. W. R. 230, Bequest to wife - Limited power of disposal — Summary application — Rule 938 — Scope of.]—A will was as follows: "I bequeath to my wife all that I possess with full power to dispose of part or the whole as she and the children may think wisest and best at any time:"-Held, that the widow took the absolute ownership of the real and personal estate of the testator, and that the children took no interest under the will. The testator also directed his executors to give another son W. $5,000, as follows: $500 five years after his decease and $500 each year thereafter for 9 years, and that before receiving any part he should appear personally before the executors at the said place: — Meld, that T had not as extraction. place: - Held, that T. had not an estate vested in him; that the restriction against being engaged in the liquor traffic or gambling was with the object that he should, if physically able, be engaged in some honourable calling, exclusive of the liquor traffic or gambling, as a means of livelihood, and had no reference to merely playing games by way of amusement or diversion; and as to the appearance before the executors, this would be complied with by appearing once before them. Charitable bequest-Gift of income-Vesting of corpus — General rule — Contrary intention.]—The rule that a gift of income without limitation of time operates as a gift of the corpus, in the absence of other disposition thereof, does not apply to a case in which the testator has expressed an intention that the corpus should not be vested in the donee .- Therefore, where a testator directed by his will that a sum of money should be invested by his executors upon trust to pay the interest to the A. W. hospital in the city of S., for the benefit of poor patients, so long as said A. W. hospital should be used for hospital purposes, and that, in the event of said hospital ceasing at any time to be so used for one year, the interest should be devoted to other charitable purposes:-Held, that the testator's intention that the corpus should not be vested in or paid to the hospital was sufficiently expressed and precluded the application of the general rule. —A devise in a will that "all my property, real and personal, be retained in trust for the maintenance of a manual labour school for girls," is not void for uncertainty, and an appointment in a codicil of two persons "to act as executors of my will and take charge of all property of all kinds which I may leave for the purposes contained or expressed in my will," is in reality an appointment of trustees governed by Art. 981a, C. C., and following, to which Art. 1918 does not apply. Hence, trustees so appointed are vested with and represent the estate of the testatrix, and are competent to contest, alone, a suit brought to have the will set aside—Judgment in 28 Que. S. The minister and committee and ruling elders shall give me a decent funeral monument not to exceed £100 sterling, and then the widow and the orphan and neglected children to be seen after by the minister, committee, and ruling elders, having succeeding authority to remember the poor of the church at Christmas every year, and to cheer the poor and the broken-hearted with the joy of Christ's death and sufferings, together with the presents presented by the minister, committee, and ruling elders at the Christmas time every year." By a codicil he appointed two persons executors and trustees, and vested all his property in them as trustees for the purposes mentioned in the will. He died within six months of the making of the will and codicil, leaving both real and personal property: — Held, that the beneficiaries, namely, the widows and neglected children and the poor, were sufficiently well designated, and came within the meaning of s. 6 of the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 2 Edw. VII. c. 2, and, Charitanic Uses Act, 2 Eaw, vii. c. 2, and, the gifts being charitable the rule against perpetuities did not apply to them. The minister, committee, and elders were the almoners named for the purpose of carrying the charitable design into effect .- Held, also, that the word "assurance" in s.-s. 6 of s. 7 of that Act refers to a deed, not to a will, and therefore leaves s. 4 of R. Charitable gift - Mortmain-Testator Charitable gitt a formally domiciled in England — Money invested on mortgage of freehold land in colony — Impure personalty — Invalid gift—Charitable Uses Act, 1736 (9 Geo. II. c. 36).]— A testator domiciled in England, died in 1888, possessed of money invested on five legal mortgages of freehold land in Ontario, by his will made in 1878 gave his residuary real and personal estate to his wife for life, and after her death he gave one-third part of it to charity .- At the time of his death the Charitable Uses Act, 1736, was in force in England and in Ontario.—The wife died in 1906.—It was decided that the gift of one-third part of his residuary estate to the charity constituted a good charitable gift so far as such one-third part consisted of pure personalty; but, in answer to the enquiry directed as to how much of such one-third part consisted of pure personalty, it was certified that the testator's Ontario mortgage investments were impure personalty .-On a summons taken out to vary the certificate on ground that the money invested on Ontario mortgages was pure personalty:-Held, the testator's Ontario mortgage investments were impure personalty, and that the gift to the charity was invalid as to the moneys invested therein. Charitable use — Bequest to poor house — Mortmain — Void condition — Costs.]—

A testator directed his farm to be sold and the proceeds paid over to the Bruce County Poor House Treasurer, to be expended in luxuries for the immates, said sale to be made at the expiration of four years from the date of the will, namely, the 21st February, 1900. The testator died a few days afterwards. The House of Refuge of the County of Bruce was generally known as the Bruce County Poor House:—Held, that the county was entitled to the proceeds of the sale under R. S. O. c. 112, the bequest being a charitable use within that Act.—Held, also, that the provision postponing the sale more than two years from the death of the testator, contrary to s. 4 of that Act, was invalid, unless the period allowed by the Act were extended by the Court or Judge. Codicil-Annuity payable out of legacy-Revocation — Lapse of legacy — Date of distribution.]—Testator by his will gave to his trustees $600 in trust to pay an annuity from the interest or corpus thereof of $300 to his son R. during his life, and upon his death to pay to R.'s children P., S. and M., one-half, one-quarter and one-quarter of said principal, respectively. In a subsequent clause it was provided that in case of the death of R. while any or either of the said children should be under the age of 25 years, the trustees should pay to their mother while such children should be under that age an annuity of $300 from said principal, "to which such child or children will be entitled on the decease of their father," for the maintenance of such child or children respectively, while he or she should be under that age. A codicil revoked the annuity to R. Testator was survived by R. and R.'s children, all being under the age of 25 years at testator's death, but S, was now of that age:—Held, that the codicil did not revoke the gift to R.'s children; that each child on attaining the age of 25 years was entitled to be paid his or her share; and that it was not the meaning of the will that the was not the meaning of the that age was not the meaning of the build be kept intact until the young-est of the children attained that age. In the codicil to the will he said: "I am sorry, my dear William, to make this alteration. I cut you off my will and leave you $200. I leave $500 to Acton school. . . and $300 to the three oldest and poorest people in Rosedale municipality "—Held, I. That the bequest of $2,000 to the son was revoked and one of $2,000 to the son was revoked and one of $2,000 to the son was revoked to the school district of Acton, so far as it was directed to be paid out of land or the proceeds of land, was void, but that such proportion of the amount as the pure personalty of the estate bore to the whole estate should be paid, subject to abatement pro rata with other legacies if the estate should not be sufficient to pay all. Should he not survive till the age of twenty-five years, I give" (the same land) "to my son Andrew, and should be die without heirs of his natural body, I give" (the same land) and saigns forever!—Held, that the land was vested in the grandson, subject to be divested in the event of his not attaining the age of twenty-five years. Doe dem, Hunt v. Moore, 14 East 601, Phipps v. Ackers, & Cl. & Fin. 583, and other cases cited in Theobald on Wills, 5t ed., p. 497, referred to.—Semble, that the executors, having no estate in the land given to them by the will, and none under the Devolution of Estates Act, seven years having elapsed since the death of the testatrix, had no locus standi to make an application under Rule 935 to have questions arising under the will determined. Conflicting bequests of personalty— Reconciling — Ejusden generis rule — Residuary bequest. Re Pink, 4 O. L. R. 718, 1 O. W. R. 772.

Contingent legacies - Infants - Interest as maintenance.] — The testator bequeathed to his two infant sons $4,000 each contingent upon their attaining 25 years of age; the only other provision for them was a gift to each of one-tenth of the residuary estate :-Held, that interest as a means of maintenance is payable out of the general residence of an estate, upon a legacy which is merely contingent, when the legatee is an infant child of the testator, and no other maintenance is provided; and it was proper in this case that an allowance should be made for the maintenance of the infants until their majority out of the interest on sums set apart to answer the legacies; the gift of a share in the residue was not intended as a provision for maintenance. The will was to be read as directing the execu-tors to apply the income of each legacy for the benefit of the infant during minority, to the extent required for maintenance, and this involved the reserving and investing of an amount equal to the amount of each legacy, not as the legacy, but to secure the amount of it in case it should become payable. He also devised certain other property to the trustees upon trust to sell from time to time as they in the exercise of "full discretion" should think fit, and to pay the income to his widow for life, and upon her decease to divide the corpus among his children, naming them, in certain shares: — Held, that the children took vested interests. C. F. and W. J. H. F., two of the testator's children.—In December, 1907, negotiations were entered into by the defendant J, and W. T. H. F., act-ing for and with the consent of his cotrustee and mother, for the sale and pur-chase of the Linden Hall property, which with other real estate had been devised by with other real estate had been devised by the testator to his executors. An agreement was made, and a memorandum containing its terms was drawn up by J., and signed by him and W. T. H. F.; there was only one copy of this memorandum which was retained by J., and later destroyed by him, when he determined not to go on with the purchase. This memorandum as stated by the plaintiff W. T. H. F. was as follows:—
"December 13th, 1907, Johnston to purchase from Fenety estate property on Brunschase from Fenety estate property on Brunswick Street, 76 x 185, 25 to be cleared on upper side, 15 feet on lower side; estate to give an unencumbered title; Johnston to hand the estate 25 shares of Toronto Street Railway and 10 shares Fredericton Gas Stock—all furniture, including that belonging to Mrs. Roberts, to be removed from the premises, Stock not to be transferred before January 2nd, 1908. Sgd. L. W. John-ston, Wm. T. H. Fenety."—It contained the ston, will. T. H. Fenery.—It contained the name of the vendor and purchaser, the pro-perty to be sold and the price to be paid:— Held, that there was a valid agreement for purchase and sale; that the memorandum was amply sufficient to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, and was capable of being en-forced.—The will contained the following provisions:—"I give, devise and bequeath all my other property both real and personal whatsoever and wheresoever situated of which I may be seized or possessed or otherwise entitled, to my executors and trustees herein named upon the trusts following, etc." The clause in the will which referred to the Linden Hall property was:—"Upon London T. 268.

If, however, the above property be leased or sold during my wife's lifetime, with her consent, then in such a case I desire, if leased, the rent derivable therefrom shall be used as rent for a house for her to live in and such house is to be as good as one of my present houses situate on College Road, Sunbury Street, Fredericton, and if after paying such rent with the money received from the rent of the said Linden Hall property there remains a balance from time to time, this balance shall be added to the principal sum already set aside wife's maintenance, the income in the meantime being paid to my said wife. however, the said property be sold during my wife's lifetine, with her consent, the purchase money shall be used as follows: so much of it shall be invested as will yield enough interest to pay rent for as good a house as one of my College Road houses, and in such a house my wife may live, such interest being used to pay the rent therefor, and the balance of the said purchase money shall be divided equally among my children then living:"-Held, that while no express power of sale was contained in the will, there was an implied power in the executors and trustees to sell the Linden Hall property, to be drawn from the provisions contained in the will itself, and to enable them to carry out the trusts declared in the will: and that a conveyance executed by the surviving trustees and executors, in whom the title was vested, and the widow of the testator, gave a good title to the property in question, and that it was not necessary that the beneficiaries under the will, other than the widow, should join in the conveyance. Memorials of judgment on record against some of the cestui que trusts are not a bar to the trustees giving a good title to the property, as they have no interest in the real estate involved, which would be liable under an execution.—Courts of first instance in deciding questions of title are bound to decide according to their own view, whether they have doubts or not, leaving it to be decided by a Court of Appeal. Fenety v. Johnston (1909), 4 N. B. Eq. 216.

Declaration of trust.]—J. A. C. the testator died April 15th, 1907. In his will, which was dated March 13th, 1906, there was the following residuary clause: "All the rest and residue of my estate, real and personal excepting only such personal property as may be found in my private cash box, or in my box in the vaults of the Bank of New Brunswick, St. John, and which I have already given to my daughter Hanna Gertrude, to meet the immediate personal necessities of herself and her sister Jean, I give in trust to my executors, etc."—On or before April 11th, 1905, the testator gave to J. S. C., one of the executors afterwards named in his will, an envelope which J. S. C. believed to contain securities, and which the testator at that time stated he had given to his daughter H. G. C., and requested J. S. C. to take the envelope and deposit it in a vault box in the Bank of New Brunswick. J. S. C. leased a vault box as directed, in the name of J. A. C. and H. G. C., either to have access, and gave both the keys of the box to J. A. C. After J. A. C.*

death a number of securities were found in the private cash box and in the vault box an envelope containing securities was found, addressed "Rev. John A. Clark, Hannah Gettrude Clark," and also a number of loose securities:—Held, that only those securities which had been actually assigned, and to which she had the legal title, and which were therefore ear-marked for her, were the property of H. G. C. as given to her by the testator during his lifetime.— Held, also, that in respect to the other securities there was no perfected gift inter the testator during his lifetime.—Weld, also, that in respect to the other securities here was no perfected gift inter the was no valid declaration of trust by the testator in favour of H. G. C. that the case no valid testamentary gift to H. G. C. and that therefore the other securities were a part of the testator's residuary estate, where the only evidence of a gift of a promissory note is its endorsement to the alleged done without delivery, the title does not pass. The estate consisted of realty:— Held, that the words were sufficient to create a condition; that the condition was a valid one; that there was an absolute gift of the whole residue to the widow, followed by a gift over as to two-thirds if she married again; and that the executor should retain in his hands two-thirds of the estate, paying the widow the income till her death or mar-riage, when it would fall to be disposed of, in the latter case under the testator's will, and in the former by her own will or otherwise in due course of law. "Afterwards he acquired the northerly half of lot 10:—Held, that the after-acquired property passed under the devise. In re Smith, 10 O. L. R, 449, 6 O. W. R. 390.

Devise - Charge - Debis and legacies -Bequest of rents - Estate - Proceeds of sale - Principal and interest - Administration expenses - Apportionment.] - A testator devised land to his son, and in his testator devised and to his son, and in his will directed the son to pay debts and legacies:—Held, that the effect of this was to charge the payment of both debts and legacies upon the land devised. Robson v. Jarvidne, 22 Gr. 420, followed. McMillan v. McMillan, 21 Gr. 594, distinguished. The testator by his will gave a house and lot to his daughter, but by a codicil purported to revoke the gift, and directed as follows: "I will that the said house and lot be held by my daughter . . who shall receive all rents and benefits therefrom during her natural life, and at her decease that all rents shall be invested for the benefit of her heirs on their coming of age."—Held, thab by the rule in Shelley's case the daughters took an estate in fee simple in the lands. Van Grutten v. Foxwell, [1897] A. C. 658, and Verulam v. Bathurst, 13 Sim. 374, followed. With reference to another parcel of land, the codicil directed that all rents derived from it were to be divided between the testator's wife and daughter equally, and that on the death of a life-tenant the property should be sold and one-half the proceeds given to his wife or her heirs, and the other half invested, the principal for the benefit of the heirs of his daughter, and interest to go to his daughter during her life. -Held, that as to one-half of this land also the daughter took an estate in fee simple. The testator did not provide for the payment of administration expenses, though he directed that his debts and funeral expenses should be paid by his son.—Held, that the estate as a whole should defray the expenses of administration, and if there was a different disposition of the real and personal parts, there should be ratable apportionment according to the respective values of the real and personal estate. In re Thomas, 21 C. L. T. 594, 2 O. L. R. 660.

M. and E. M., share and share alike. To her son, A., she devised her half of the homestead property charged with the comfortable maintenance of M. M. and E. M. upon such homestead during their lives:—Held, that the maintenance of M. M. and E. M. under the terms of the will was made a charge upon the property, and not upon A. personally:—Held, that a declaration made in the decree, with the consent of the plaintif, the surviving beneficiary, restricting the liability of A. to a charge upon the land, could not be varied by the Court of Appeal: — Held, that a sum of money having been set apart which would be sufficient for the support of the plaintiff for the period of 13 years, and such maintenance being a charge upon the land, binding it as effectually as a mortgage, it was not necessar:—Held, also, no partition having been asked for in the statement of claim, that the appeal from the decree, on the ground that partition had no been ordered, must be dismissed. Held, also, that the specific devises of the lands and the charging of them with the legacies and the annuity, indicated that the testator had no intention of making them liable for the payment of debts, unless there was not sufficient movable property or cash was not sufficient movable property or cash to satisfy these.—Semble, that the provisions of the Land Titles Act, 1894, 57 & 58 V. c. 28, s. 3, and 63 & 64 V. c. 21, s. 5, making land descend as personal property, have not altered the common law rule that the personal property is the primary fund for the payment of debts.—Held, further, that the payment of debts.—Held, further, that the executors could not convey the lands to the devisees, without seeing that the proper registrations were made, and that, with the consent of the devisees, the proper manner of carrying this out was for them to execute incumbrances to be handed in for registration at the same time as transfers in their favour from the executors. — Held, lastly, that the costs of these conveyances and registration should be paid out of the estate. The will then provided that, notwithstanding the directions thereinafter contained, if the testator's son returned to Toronto within 5 years from the date of the testator's death, the trustees were to hold in trust for him from the time of his return certain specified lands (being a part of those before devised), subject to the existing life estate of the testator's wife during the term of the son's natural life, and to pay over to him the rents and profits thereof, and after his death to divide the same among and after his death to divide the same analysis children. The son returned and entered into the receipt of the rents and profits of the lands, but died without issue. The first the lands, but died without issue. He devised his farm on use and benefit. He devised his farm on which he was residing at his death, to his sons, who were compelled to sell it, as it was heavily incumbered: —Held, that all the sons were bound to do, was to offer to support and maintain the sisters, free of expense, in a suitable manner, either on the farm devised we is the house of either of them but in a suitable manner, either on the farm devised, or in the home of either of them, but that they were not bound to allow the sisters to reside wherever the latter wished, and to pay the cost of their maintenance. to have the bequest declared lapsed, and to set aside the transfer of the land in question to a cemetery company: — Held, that the fact that the land in question did not form a portion of any cemetery lawfully established at the time of the testator's death, did not destroy the validity of the will, nor prevent the execution of the testator's instructions as regards his burial. 2. The principal and controlling condition and requirement of the will was that the restator's body should be buried in a certain place on his farm, and that a monument should be erected over his grave. The provision that certain land comprising the burial lot should be donated to a particular church, as a cemetery, was only a detail in the mode of executing the testator's principal bequest, and not an essential and controlling condition which must be exactly complied with, and therefore the refusal of the church to accept the land did not invalidate the bequest. Devise — Estate—Defeasible fee—Executory devise over.]—A testator dying in 1833 devised land "to his loving son Alexander, during his natural life, after the demise of his mother, and after his death, then he did bequeath the same to his heir-at-law should he have any (sic); if not, he did bequeath the same to his brother John Grant:"—Held, that the gift to Alexander gave, by the operation of the rule in Shelley's Case, a fee simple or tail to him. Heir is nomen collectivum and carries the fee. But the last clause of the devise imported a defeasible estate in Alexander, should he die and have or leave no child, and, as he left no "lawful heir," or "heir-at-law," his fee tail or simple was defeated by the executory devise in fee simple in favour of John. Grant v. Squire, 21 C. L. T., 379, 2 O. L. R. 131.

Devise — Estate — Fee simple — Life estate — "Je veux" — Words of direction or desire — Real Property Act — Refusal to register transfer to devisee in fee.]—By his will, written in French by himself, the testator gave everything to his wife, using language which, if uncontrolled by what followed, would have been sufficient to make an absolute gift to her of all his property, real and personal. He then used language translated as follows: "I direct that ... my body be sent to Belgium ...; I direct that my wife pay ... $400 to Z.G. I leave to my wife ... to give what she shall think suitable to our daughter B. when she shall marry. In case that our daughter B, shall not marry, or that she shall die without having a child, I direct that, after the death of my wife all that she shall die without having a child, I direct that, after the death of my wife all that she shall have had of my succession be divided between the Simon and Pirson families "—that is, his own and his wife's relatives. The words "I direct" in the translation read in the original "je veux" wherever they occurred. The wife was executrix, and, its such, executed a transfer of certain lands of the testator to herself personally in fee simple, the title to the lands being registered under the Real Property Act.—Semble, that the absolute estate to the widow was cut down to a life estate by the subsequent words:—

Held, at all events, that the words 'je veux' could not, in the absence of the Simon and Pirson families, be construed as words of mere desire, and that the District Registrar was justified, upon the will as it stood, in refusing to register the transfer. Re Simon (1910), 14 W. L. R. 56.

Devise—Estate—Rule in Shelley's case—Specific performance.]—Action by the vendor to compel the purchaser to specifically perform a contract for the purchase of certain lands, the title to which was obtained under the following devise: "I give and bequeath to my son Francis (the plaintiff!) for the term of his natural life and at his decease to his heir, all that, etc. . "The defence was, that, on the proper construction of the will, the plaintiff was not entitled to the lands in fee simple, but only for the term of his natural life. The will was dated the 19th July, 1881, and the testator then had a wife, three daughters, and two sons; the devise to the other son, Gregoire, who was then the father of two children, was as follows: "I give, devise, and bequeath to my son Gregoire for the term of his natural life and at his decease to be divided between the children of my said son, share and share alike, but in the event of his leaving no issue the said property shall go to the next heir," etc.:—Held, that, as it was doubful whether the testator so used the word "heir" as to make the rule in Shelley's case applicable, and thereby confer a fee simple, the devisee could not get specific performance of a contract for the purchase of land, his title to which depended on the will. After devising other land to another son, he directed that, should any of his sons die leaving no children, the property given to such son should be equally divided between all his children, and should any of the children be disposed to sell, they should give the refusal to one of the family. At the time of the testator's death (1878) P. was married and had two children, and he and they were alive at the time of this action, the widow having died in 1898, and seven children of the testator having survived him:—Held, that the estate having survived him:—Held, that the estate in fee in Philip was subject to being divested by his dying "leaving no children," which night still happen, and in which event the executory devise over would take effect. Olivant v. Wright, 1 Ch. D. 346, followed:—Held, also, that the provision in the will as to any of the children of the testator being "disposed to sell" did not shew a "contrary intention:"—Held, also, that a "contrary intention" was not indicated by a devise in the same will to another son subject to the the same will to another son subject to the same limitation and conditions, but subject also to the payment of legacies of $2,000 at the expiration of two years from the testa-tor's death—which appeared to be inconsistent with anything short of an absolute estate in fee. Cowan v. Allen, 26 S. C. R. 292, followed:—Held, therefore, that the plaintiff's title was not one that could be forced upon an unwilling purchaser, and a decree for specific performance should be refused. Van luven v. Allison, 21 C. L. T. 468, 2 O. L. R.

Devise - Estate tail-Estate of life-Mistake of title — Improvements.]—A will made in 1877, by a testator who died in 1882, contained the following provision: "To my son Moses I give and bequeath fifty acres my son Moses I give and bequeath mity acres during his lifetime and then to go to his children, if he has any, but should be have no issue then to be equally divided among all my grandchildren." Moses married after his father's death, and left children survivies him as the time of his own darks. ing him at the time of his own death :- Held, that Moses took an estate for life with a remainder in fee to the children and not an estate tail:—Held, also, that a person who had purchased the land in question under the bona fide but mistaken belief that Moses took an estate tail, was entitled to a lien for lasting improvements, the statute being held to apply to a mistake of title depending upon a question of law. The point for determination in such a case is whether the person claiming for the improvements made them under the bona fide belief that the land was his own. Chandler v. Gibson, 21 C. L. Devise—Provision as to division of land—Proof of accomplishment by testator—Survey—Action en licitation—Intervention—Distraction of part of land—Judgment—Bornage—Costs.]—Where a testator in a devise of immovables declares that he intends to have a line drawn which will shew the boundaries, and the proc.js-verbal of which will bind those interested, the accomplishment of this is sufficiently established, after the opening of the succession, by the production of a certified copy of a plan and an explanatory letter from a surveyor, found between the leaves of the draft of the will, and by oral proof of the operation itself, and the existence of boundary marks and posts planted in the ground by the surveyor.—2. Where a third party intervenes in an action en licitation and prays that a part of the immovables shall be withdrawn from the quantity demanded by the plaintiff, upon the ground that they belong to the intervener, the Court, when maintaining the intervention, is not bound to order bornage of the territory in question. Costs should be awarded against the party who fails. Guay v. Langevit, 17 Que. K. B. 76.

Devise—Repugnancy.]—The testator gave his wife an interest for life, or until she should marry, in his dwelling-house and lot and the furniture, etc., therein, and after her death or re-marriage, whichever first happened, he gave them to his children, living when he made his will or living at his decease, or born after his decease, share and share alike, and their heirs and assigns for-ever.—Held, that the gift thus made to his children was the largest the law admits of and the endeavour, by subsequent clauses in his will, to take away the gift to his children, which he had bestowed by the above clause, was fruitless. The will plainly offended against the principle recognized in Holmes v. Godson, 8 DeG. M. & G. 152; Shaw v. Jones-Ford, 6 Ch. D. 1; Boxeman v. Oram, 26 N. S. R. 318. Corning v. Bent, 23 C. L. made the property inexigible during the lives of the devisees. Banque Jacques-Cartier v. Tozer, 10 Que. Q. B. 81.

Devise-Restrictions against incumbering - Mortgage by devisee - Breach of condition - Vendor and purchaser.]-A will providing for the division in specific halves of a certain farm lot, between the testator's two sons, contained restrictions against the devisees selling or mortgaging their respective halves until after the expiration of twenty-five years from the testator's death, and also against incumbering it for a like period :- Held, on a petition under the Vendors and Purchasers Act, that the later restriction was void; but, following Chisholm v. London and Western Trusts Co., 17 C. L. T. 172, 28 O. R. 347, that the former restriction was good, so that the giving of mortgage by one of the devisees on his half constituted a breach of condition for which the heir might enter and divest the devisee; and therefore the title was not such a one as a purchaser could be compelled to take. Devise—Sale of land devised—Mortgage for purchase money.] — The testator bequeathed all his personal estate to his wife absolutely, and devised his land to his executors in trust for her benefit during life or widowhood, and then over. Between the date of the will and his death the testator sold all his land, and took back a mortgage for part of the purchase money, which mortgage was an asset of his estate at his decease:—Held, that s. 25 of the Wills Act. R. S. O. c. 128, had not the effect of making the devise applicable to the interest in the land which the testator had at the time of his death by virtue of the mortgage; was part of the personal estate and fell under the absolute bequest to the wife. The above Act does not affect lands unsold at testator's death. Re Spragge, 13 O. W. R. 741.

Devise—Substitution — Partition.] — A devise by will of an estate to the wife of the testator to "hold in usufruct only during her natural lifetime" and after her decease to his children, with a proviso that, in the event of the death of any one or more of them, without children during the life of the testator, or of his wife, the share of such child or children shall accrue to the others, creates a substitution which only opens on the death of the surviving widow. —The testator made his will on the 17th December, 1885, and died on the 25th December, 1885. He bequeathed to his wife all the rents and profits arising or accruing from his real or personal estate, during her lifetime, and at her decease the rents and profits of his real estate of Jane McA. during her lifetime, and at her decease he devised his real estate (describing it) to her son William, his heirs and assigns, but if William should die without issue before his mother, she was to have one-half of real estate to dispose of as she might think fit, and the other half was to go to the Presbyterian Church in Canada. There was no residuary clause. The widow died on the 1886, and William on the 3rd 26th March, November, 1889, under the age of 7 years, November, 1999, inner the age of A years, his mother surviving him:—Held, that William took a vested estate, liable to be divested upon his death in the lifetime of his mother; that one moiety had been divested beyond dispute, and as to the other, that a provision for divesting is not ten-dered of no avail by the fact that the gift over is void by the Statutes of Mortmain.

—Robinson v. Wood, 6 W. R. 728, 27 L.

J. Ch. 726, followed.—Held, also, that the gift over to the church, if effective, vested in the church not later than the death of the infant, in 1889; and, therefore, the statute 63 V. c. 135 (O.) was not applicable; moreover, that Act, when it provides that "all gifts, devises . . . which have been or shall hereafter be made to or intended for the Presbyterian Church in Canada . . . , shall vest in the said board of trustees," must refer to valid and effective gifts, not to such as are void by the statutes or otherwise; and therefore, the gift over to the church was void by the Statutes of Mortmain.—Held. lastly, that, there being no residuary devise, there was an intestacy as to the moiety intended for the church. Re Archer, 9 O. W. R. 652, 14 O. L. R. 374.

Devise—Vested estate, subject to be divested — Rents — Expenditure for improvements.] — Testator devised a farm to his grandson "when he arrives at twenty-one years of age, the said farm to be kept in repair by my executors, to expend at least $50 each year in improvements," with a devise over in case of death "before receiving the share," and a residuary devise to a son and daughter:—Held, that the land vested in the grandson by the will, subject to be divested should he die before attaining twenty-one, and he was entitled to the benefit of the surplus of rents over and above what should be properly expended for repairs, which was to be not less than $50 each year, but more if necessity should, in the oplinion of the executors, arise. Devise creating substitution—" Usufruct" — "Usufructury,"] — Notwithstanding the use of the words "usufructurary and "usufructuary" therein, a universal legacy by a husband to his wife "in usufruct during her natural lifetime, but from the moment of her death or that she enters wedlock, the same to go in full property to his children, then living," is not a devise of usufruct and ownership, but of ownership only, subject to a substitution (à charge de substitution), the widow being the institute, and the children living at her death or second marriage the substitutes. Whelan v. Whelan, 35 Que. S. C. 78.

WILL.

Devise for life—Remainder to devisee's children — Estate tail.]—Land was devised to D. for life "and to her children, if any, at her death," if no children to testator's son and daughter. D. had no children when the will was made:—Held, that the devise to D. was not of an estate in tail, but on her death her children took the fee. Judgment of the Court of Appeal, 1 O. W. R. 452, affirmed. Grant v. Fuller, 23 C. L. T. Sl, 33 S. C. R. 34.

Devise for Hfe—Remainder to issue— Estate tail.]—Testator devised land to W. for life and after her death to her issue, providing that in case W. died without issue, and without making a will, the land should be divided among certain named persons.—Latchford, J. (17 O. W. R. 92: 2 O. W. N. 120), held, that W. was not given an estate tail, but took only a life estate.—Divisional Court held, that W. took an estate tail. Judgment of Latchford, J., reversed. Costs out of the estate. Watson v. Phillips (1910), 17 O. W. R. 489, 2 O. W. J.

Devise for life and that of wife or survivor.—Special occupant.—Part intestacy.]—A testator by his will devised his farm to his son, Ahore Butler. "for and during his natural life, and, in the event of his marriage during the life of his wife or the survivor; and at his or their decease to his children, if any, but if the said Ahore Butler should die, without issue, the said alone to descend to my then living children." The son married twice, having children by his first wife, but none by his second, who was left a widow:—Held, that the widow was not entitled to a life estate by implication, and that there being no special limitation to the heirs of Ahaer, they could not take as special occupants during her life, and the result was, that the estate for the residue of her life went to the executors of Abner, and were assets in their hands. Wilson v. Butler, 21 C. L. T. 564, 2 O. L. R. 576.

Devise in trust—Estate of cestuis que trust—Bequest of personalty — Absolute interest—Condition subsequent in restraint of marriage—Invalidity.]—The testator by his will appointed executors and devised and bequeathed all his property, real and personal, to them in trust for the benefit of his wife and two sons, share and share alike, and then provided: "In the event of my said wife's marriage again after my decease and my said executors finding that the advantage of the children will be promoted by the grant to them of all the property they may apply it to them:"-Held, that the testator's widow was entitled as beneficiary to an undivided onethird share in all the testator's interest in the real estate, both as regards the corpus and the profits thereof, and also an undivided one-third share in the testator's personal property and any income to be derived therefrom. -In the absence of an intention to the contrary, it was to be assumed that the testator intended to yest in the beneficiaries an estate as large as the legal estate which he devised to the executors.—Knight v. Selby, 10 L. J. C. P. 263, followed.—The same words which were used for the purpose of passing the real estate were used for the purpose of passing the personal property, and it could not have been the testator's intention to give an unlimited interest in the real estate and a limited one in the personal estate:-Held, also, that the clause above quoted, as to the event that the chause above quoted, as to the event of remarriage of the widow, was a condition in restraint of marriage, and, being a condition subsequent, was void—Morley v. Renoldson, 2 Hare 570, and Re King's Trusts, 20 L. R. Ir. 401, followed. Re Tucker (1910), 16 W. L. R. 172, Sask. L. R.

Devise in trust—Substitution—Accumulation—Perpetuity—Distribution of estate.]
—A provision in a will, made before the promulgation of the Civil Code, whereby the testator gives and devises his property to his executors and trustees upon trust, with a direction to divide it into as many shares as he has children to pay (at the end of 10 years) half the income of each share to each child during his life, and after his death the whole of the income of his share to his children, to invest and keep invested the surplus, with substitution of such in-come, for descendants, from generation to generation "indefinitely or so far as the law permits," is a universal legacy to the children of the testator, subject to substitution in favour of their children, and, after them, to their grandchildren, for two degrees be-yond the institutes. This provision being yond the institutes. This provision being made jointly, at the decease of one of the institutes without children, his share of the property accrues to the benefit of the other institutes, subject to a substitution in favour of those who are still grevés, and definitely in favour of those of the last degree. The remedy by way of action en partage is open to the last named for such share, for that of their branch, and for the undivided residue of the estate. Masson v. Masson, 33 Que. S. C. 108.

who resided and carried on business at such place, to the testator. Judgment of the Devise of family residence on trust

—Use and occupation "while unmarried"

—Tenants in common — Residuary devise—

Right to possession]—Testatrix devised her family residence to trustees to hold upon trust for her son John during his natural life while unmarried, on condition that he should not alienate it, and that he would permit his sisters and nephew, while unmarried, to also reside therein. On the death of John, the daughters were to occupy the residence while unmarried, and on the death of John, the nephew was to become absolute owner, subject to his aunt's right to reside therein while unmarried. The residuary clause gave residue to the two daughters, son John and the grandson equally. One daughter son John and the grandson equally. One daughter died, John married, and nephew came of age. — Middleton, J., held, that John's estate came to an end at his marriage. Nephew only took estate on death of John. The estate, during remaining years of John's life, passed to those mentioned in residuary clause, the representatives of deceased daughter taking her share, Re Ryan (1910), 16 O. W. R. 1001; 2 O. W. N. 32

Devise of land not owned by testator—Intention to devise other lands — Misdescription — Parol evidence inadmissible to explain will — Intentacy.]—Testator directed that his wife, M. Clement, should have the S. W. ½ lot 3, in 4th concession of North Dorchester, to have and to hold for and during the term of her natural life. As fact testator did not own the S. W. ¼ or any part of it, but he did own the south half of the north half of the lot. Riddell, J., k-ld, that it was perfectly manifest that the testator intended to devise, 3 and which he owned—the very precise description of it proved that beyond question, but it is not enough in our law for a testator to intend to devise, he must use words which are in law effectual to make a devise. Declaration granted that the testator died intestate in respect of the land in question, there being a clear and well-defined rule of law which stands inexorably in the way of receiving parol evidence as to what land was intended. Re Clement (1910),17 O. W. R. 110; 2 O. W. N. 127; 22 O. L. R. 121.

Devise of land not owned by testator—Mistoke in description—Intention of testator to devise land he did own—General scords of devise —Sufficiency of to passe estate.]—Testator made a mistake in his will, in the description of the location of 50 acres of land which he bequeathed to an heir. He willed 50 acres which he did not own—Riddell, J., held, that the testator had used general words in his will which were sufficient to pass the 50 acres which he did own and had intended to devise. Re Clement (1910), 17 O. W. R. 110, 2 O. W. N. 127, explained. Smith v. Smith (1910), 17 O. W. R. 251; 2 O. W. N. 179; 22 O. 18, 187.

Devise of land to executor in trust to sell and apply proceeds—Power restricted to person named.]—W. by his last will directed his executor to sell his real estate, and invest and apply the proceeds as directed.—After the death of the executor named in the will, before carrying out the power vested in him, an administrator with the will annexed was appointed, by whom an agreement was made to sell the land to defendants. A deed signed by all the heirs of W., and the next of kin and all the beneficiaries under the will with two exceptions was tendered, which defendants declined to accept.—In an action claiming specific performance:—Held, affirming the judgment of the trial Judge, that the power of sale conferred upon the executor under the terms of the will was personal and could not be exercised by the administrator with the will annexed.—Held, nevertheless, that the Court had power, under the Trustee Act, R. S. 1900, c. 151, to appoint a trustee who could give a good title, and that, while plaintiff's appeal must be dismissed, defendants' right to costs of the trial and appeal must be made conditional upon their accepting the title joined in by the trustee so appointed. Wymers v Hillon, 43 N. S. R. 161, 6 E. L. R. 226.

Devise of lands subject to mortgages Devises — Charges — Exoneration.] Motion by executors under Rule 938 for an order declaring the construction of the will of Alexander Goulet, who died in February, 1902, leaving a will and codicil, the material parts of which were as follows:-"1, I hereby constitute and appoint my two sons Francis Xavier and Alexander Blake to be my executors of this my last will, directing my executors to pay all my just debts and funeral expenses. 2. In place of land mentioned in the 4th clause of my will I devise and bequeath to my son Alexander Blake the south 95 acres of lot 8 in the 14th concession of the township of Raleigh mentioned in the 3rd clause of will, and further will him $500 and hold the lands willed to my son Francis Xavier for the said amount. 6. I devise and bequeath to my daughter Rachel Jane the westerly half of the south 80 acres of lot number 7 in the 14th concession of the township of Raleigh, in the county of Kent. 7. I devise and bequeath to my daughter Margaret Christenna the easterly half of the south 80 acres of lot 7 in the 14th concession of the township of Raleigh, in the county of Kent, 8. I devise and bequeath to my daughter Delia Eugenie the westerly half of the northerly half of lot 7 in the 14th concession of the township of Raleigh, in the county of Kent. 9. I further will that my wife Mary shall have full use and control over all my lands for 10 years after my death in order to pay off the mortgage now standing against my real estate if not paid off at the time of decease. This is a codicil to my last will and testament. 1. I will that if at the time of my decease the mortgages on my real estate are not paid off, each of my daughters shall pay to the executors of my last will and testament the sum of $150 to assist in meeting that debt, and I charge the lands willed to each for the respective amounts. 2. I will to my wife Mary all money to be derived from a policy in the Edinburgh Life Insurance Company. all other respects I do hereby confirm my last will and testament." The testator's wife predeceased him. At the time of his death the land mentioned in the 3rd paragraph of the will was subject to a mortgage for $750, and all the other parcels mentioned in the will were subject to a mortgage for about Alexander Blake Goulet declined to take the lot in the 4th paragraph mentioned, and elected to take the lot in the 5th paragraph mentioned, with the charge upon the lands of Francis Xavier of $500:—Hela, 1, that Francis Xavier was not bound to pay the sum of $1,000 because the will did not require him to do so in the event which happened, but substituted a payment by him of $500 to be made to Alexander Blake. -Held, 2, that any trust created by that clause terminated at the death of Mary Goulet .-Held, 3, that he was unable to find in the language used by the testator an intention to exonerate the daughter's lands from all but $150 of the mortgage debt. The ques-tion was governed by s. 37 of the Wills Act, R. S. O. c. 128. Under that Act every devise of land which was under mortgage was treated as a devise of the equity of redemption only, and the devisee takes subject to he obligation of paying off the mortgage, or a proportion of it, if it covers lands devised to others, unless the testator has by his will or some other document signfied a contrary intention. The three daughters by the will took therefore an equity of redemption in the land devised to them, subject to the payment of a proportion of the $4,000 mortgage. The codicil directed them to pay $150 each to the executors to assist in paying the mortgage, and created a new charge upon their land for that amount. The testator had not anywhere signified an intention that the payment of this $150 should relieve them from the liability which existed under the devise in the will of paying their shares of the $4,000 mortgage debt. The $450 to be paid by them was by the terms of the codicil to be applied in reduction of both mortgages, that for $750 as well as that for $4,000. Re Goulet, 6 O. W. R. 161, 140 O. L. R. 197.

—The testator devised land to his wife for life and after her death to the Bishop of St. A., "less a note amounting to $250 given in aid of the St. A. Cathedral:"—Held, that the Bishop was entitled to the land, subject to the life estate of the widow, and subject to the life estate of the widow, and subject to the life estate of the widow, and subject to the life estate of the widow, and subject to a charge for the amount of the note. The testator devised to his nephews J. H. C. and J. C. certain described lots of land, containing 523 arcss—"J. C. to have the easterly half of said land, together with the house and other buildings on said farm." He also devised to his nephew R. C. other land, 208 acres. He then provided that the lands devised to all three should not become their absolute property until the youngest, R. C., had attained majority.—Held, that the devises took a vested interest in the lands, subject to divestment in the case of any of them who might die before the youngest attained majority. The testator also bequeathed to his wife the sum of $50 to be paid by his nephews upon her decease in defraying her burial expenses:"—Held, notwithstanding the fact that the title to the land must remain in the executors during the minority of the youngest devisee, that the eldest (who had become of age) and the guardian of the other two were entitled to immediate possession, and it would be their duty to apply the rents and profits, so far as necessary, in payment of the annuity to the necessary, in payment of the annuity to the widow; in case of deficiency, the annuity to be lessened by the amount of the deficiency. The testator devised other lands to two ouer nephews, subject to the conditions that they should provide for and keep their mother "in the house in which she is now living, during her widowhood, and also to their sisters S. W. and R. W. the sum of $25 each," and when the younger of these two nephews reached the age of 21, they should pay their sister M. C. $100:—Held, that groupers should not be charged with the two other nephews, subject to the conditions that executors should not be charged with the duty of seeing that the conditions of this devise were fulfilled; that should devolve upon the guardian of the devisees during their minority, and upon them when they reached the age of 21; if proper charges were executed by the devisees in favour of the persons entitled, the executors should convey the lands to the devisees. "To . . . R. C. I leave 5 cows and other chattels belonging me in her possession at this date:"the date of the will.—Held, also, that the legatee was entitled to 5 cows only from the number in her possession at the date of the will.—Held, also, that, under 17 & 18 V. c. 113 and 30 & 31 V. c. 69, the devisees took the land subject to the payment of the mortgages thereon. The testator directed that the residue of his estate should be converted into money and the money applied in payment of debts and bequests, and that the balance should be distributed "among my heirs at the discretion of my executors:"

—Held, that "heirs" meant those who —Held, that heirs meant those who would take real estate upon intestacy, the meaning not being affected by the provision of the Land Titles Act that real estate shall be distributed as personal estate. Coatsworth v. Carson, 24 O. R. 185, approved.—Held, also, that the "discretion" of the executors was to be exercised as to the share or proportion of the residue which each heir should deprive any one of a share. In making a deprive any one of a share. In making a devise the testator described the land as "the southwest quarter of section 6." It was admitted that he never owned the south-west quarter, but that he did own the east half:— Semble, that evidence might be admissible to shew that the southeast quarter was intended, but not the northeast quarter. Devise of real and personal estate—Mistake in description of real estate—Jife interest to vidoue—Remainder to daughters with power of appointment — Then construed to mean "in that event"—Sale under Settled Estates Act (Ont.)—Unborn children—Representation of by official guardien.]—On motion for construction of a will, Middleton, J., held, that widow took life estate; that the word "then "should be read to mean "in that case" or "in that event "; that upon death of widow the property was to be divided between two daughters if living. If either daughter should die leaving issue, such issue to take, and if either leave no issue she was given power of appointment under the will, and if power of appointment under the will, and if power of appointment is not exercised, there will be an intestacy as to her prospective share. Order granted for sale under Settled Estates Act on consent of son. Official guardian appointed to represent any unborn issue. Costs out of estate. Re Hunsley (1910), 16 O. W. R. 995, 2 O. W. N. 29.

Devise of real and personal property to husband and daughter to jointly enjoy so long as husband remained unmarried—Husband died—Right of sur-vivorship of daughter—Sale of personal pro-perty by order of Court—Was jevelry in-cluded in contents of house?] — Testatrix willed a house and contents to her husband and daughter to jointly enjoy the same so long as husband remained unmarried. Husband died. The contents of house were sold by order of Court. The will contained no provision for case of husband's death, and the question arose as to what interest had the daughter in the estate :- Held, that the daughter was entitled, for life, to the income on the sum derived from the sale of the contents; that daughter was entitled to a life estate in the house; that certain jewelry which was in the house at the time of testatrix's death was to be deemed part of the contents of the house and the daughter was entitled to the use of same during life; that daughter being life tenant of the house was under obligations to repair, etc.; that trus-tees could not sell the house without daughter's consent and if she gave her consent the contract must be approved by official guardian. Devise of rents to wife, subject to annuity-Death of annuitant - Amount of rent payable to wife — Amount raised to pay debts — Proportion.]—A testator, after directing payment of his debts, bequeathed to his wife his household furniture, and "balance of the rents arising or accruing" from his homestead farm, after pay-ment thereout and therefrom of $200 per annum to a daughter during her lifetime. He then devised the farm to two grandsons, who "were not to receive or to be allowed the possession thereof" until after his wife's death. The testator owned another farm, which he devised to another daughter. The daughter died in the lifetime of the testator. The executor, for the payment of debts, was obliged to raise $200, while for the repairs of the homestead farm, a yearly expenditure of $30 would be required:—Held, that the widow was entitled to the whole of the rent of the homestead farm, subject to any expension. diture for repairs, and that the annuity to the daughter did not fall into the residuary estate.—Held, also, that the amount raised for the payment of debts was chargeable on the whole of the testator's realty proportionately to the respective interests of the parties in the two farms, Re Brown Estate, 18 O. L. R. 245, 13 O. W. R. 597.

Devise of residue—Executory devise—Event happening in part.]—A testator by his will gave his wife a life interest in his estate, directed payment at her death of some specific legacies, and then provided: "The residue . . . -Held, that, as the event provided for, viz., the death of both R. M. and M. M. during the widow's lifetime, had not happened, the devise of the residue to R. M. and M. M. was not divested, and R. M.'s widow took his

Devise over-Condition - Estate.] testator devised all her real and personal estate to her son in fee and provided in case the son should die without issue previous the son should die without issue previous to the dearh of her brother and sister, that they should take certain interests. The sister died in the lifetime of the son:—
Held, that, as the event, the death of the son previous to the death of both the brother and sister, could not happen, the son took an estate in fee simple. Lillie v. Willis, 20 C. L. T. 14, 31 O. R. 198.

Devise to children as joint tenants-Subsequent clause — Jus accrescendi — Issue of child dying to take parent's share, in default of issue, surviving children -Effect on devise.]-Vendor's and purchaser's application. By the ninth clause of a will certain property was left to four daughters as joint tenants. By a later clause upon the death of one of testator's children their lawful issue should stand in their place, etc.:—Held, that the later clause does not make a severance of the joint tenancy, and this objection to the title is not valid. The fifteenth clause may relate to other devises or it relates to the death of the children during the lifetime of the testator or the during the incline of the testator or the lifetime of his wife, and does not take effect after the estate is vested. Devise to one of testator's sons to be selected by widow.] — Testator bequeathed his property to one of his sons his lawful heirs and assigns absolutely forever, his wife to appoint and choose the worthier. She failed to make a selection, one of the sons having predeceased his mother unmarried. A son and a daughter survived the mother:—Held, that the property vested in the sons on the death of the father as joint c.c.l.-148 tenants. No partition. Administration ordered as children infants. Hutchinson v. Hutchinson, 7 E. L. R. 454.

Devise to son of residue on attaining age of 25 years—Devise over in case son died before 25—Income—Gift of to son son area before 23—Income—Gift of to son an infant—Motion for allocance for increase of maintenance as provided in will—Vested extate subject to be divested.]—Motion by Homer Carr, an infant, and Catherine Carr, his mother, for the opinion, advice and direction of the Court as to the construction of the will of the late Alexander C. Carr, father of Homer and husband of Catherine, and as to whether Homer Carr took under the will a vested estate in the property given to will a vested estate in the property given to him; and also a motion by Catherine Carr for a larger allowance for the support and maintenance of Homer Carr:—Held, that Homer Carr took a vested estate subject to nomer Carr took a vested estate subject to be divested upon certain events. Order granted for maintenance as asked. Re Carr (1910), 16 O. W. R. 869, 1 O. W. N. 1142.

Devise to two persons - Death of one before testator - Lands and personalty -Lapse — Residue — Tenants in common — Joint tenants - Survivorship.]-A testator, by his will, amongst other provisions, de-vised certain land to two sisters, naming them, to whom he also gave his residuary estate. One of the sisters predeceased the testator:-Held, that, as regards the land, the sisters would have taken as tenants in common, and therefore as to the deceased sister's share there was a lapse, and it was undisposed of, but as to the personalty they would have taken as joint tenants, and the survivor took the whole. Re Gamble, 8 O. W. R. 797, 13 O. L. R. 299.

Devise to wife — Condition—Children.]—A testator devised his estate to his wife absolutely for herself, her heirs and assigns forever, in lieu of dower, but upon the express condition that she make a will providing for two of his children, "and if she should fail or neglecy to make the will, lits my will that instead of my said estate being so devised and bequeathed to her, the same shall be equally divided, share and share alike, between my said two children, their heirs and assigns forever. All the residue of my estate not hereinbefore disposed of I give and devise and bequeath unto my said wife: "—Held, that under the above devise the widow, who had complied with the condition by making the will in favour of the two children, took an estate in fee simple in lands forming part of the said residuary estate, but that she could not revoke the will, and the judgment should so declare. In re Turner, Turner v, Turner, 2C C. L. T. 389, 4 O. L. R. 578.

Devise to wife - Life estate-Power of sale - Use of proceeds - Income.]-The testator gave and devised to his wife "all my personal estate of every description for her own use and that my landed property and the balance that may be coming due on the . . . mortgage shall be disposed or after the death of my wife and shall be made into fifteen parts of which fifteen parts each of my sons shall receive two fifteenth parts and each of my daughters one fifteenth part and that so long as my wife . . . lives she shall have the use of the landed property and either use it, rent it or sell it and use the money as she thinks best:—Held, that the interest of the wife in the landed property was a life interest only with a power to sell the land, if she so desired, and, in that event, a right to invest the proceeds as she should deem best, and enjoy the income derivable therefrom during her life, Re Silverthorn, 10 O. W. R. 798, 15 O. L. R. 112.

Devise to wife—Words sufficient to pass estate in fee—Contrary intention expressed in will—Cut down to life estate—Vested interests in remainder—Fersonally to follow same as realty.—Gravenor v. Walkins, I., R. 6 C. P. 500, followed, Re Cotterill (1911), 18 O. W. R. 500, 2 O. W. N. 745.

Devise to wife during widowhood—Devise over in ease of vidow re-marrying—Vested remainder,1—Testator devised to his wife Elizabeth lots Nos. 6 and 7 on Davenport Road, "to have and to hold for her personal benefit so long as the said Elizabeth Branton shall remain my widow, and in the event of the said lelizabeth Branton enarrying, the said lots, houses and appurtenances will all the privileges thereof to become the property of my children. Fanny Lydia Branton and Mary Johnson Branton, to have and to hold as theirs without let or hindrance. Elizabeth Branton died in 1880 without having married again. Mary J. Branton died in 1804 intestate:—Held, that there must be a declaration that the two daughters took under the will a vested remainder in the land, to take effect in possession upon the marriage or death of the wife. Upon the death of the daughter, M. E. Branton, intestate and without issue, her undivided one-half of the land became under the provisions of the Devolution of Estates Act distributable in like manner as personal property, and the applicant, though but a half brother, was entitled as one of her next of kin to share equally with the other next of kin, the surviving sister. Declaration accordingly. Costs out of estate. Re Branton (1910), 15 O. vi. R. 783, 29 O. L. R. 642.

Devise to wife for life—Power to use and enjoy the "corpus" — Remainder to brothers and sisters—Implied power of sale.] -A testator gave "all my property of every nature and kind to my wife for her use and benefit so long as she lives, with full power to use and enjoy the same and such corpus of the estate as she may require or desire to use for her own benefit during her life, and should any part of my estate remain unused at her death, then such part so remaining is to be divided equally among my brothers and sisters, and my wife is not to be required to account for my estate or any part thereof."-The widow claimed this to be an estate in fee simple to her.-Teetzel, held, that the widow was entitled to a life estate with a right to use such of the corpus as she might desire for her own enjoyment, and not to the mere use of the farm in specie, which would limit her to the rent and profits, and whatever remained unused should go to the brothers and sisters. For the purpose of giving effect to her right to use the corpus; that she had, by necessary implication, a power to seil and convert the farm into money; that the three essentials to a power existed; that, unless a main purpose of the wife was to be defeated, a power of effectuating such purpose of sale must of necessity be implied. Order accordingly. Costs out of the estate. Re Davey (1910), 17 O. W. R. 1034, 2 O. W. N. 467.

Devise to wife for life and for maintenance of children—Remainder to children and issue of children dying before testator and his wife—Sule of land by wife—Vendors and Purchas-rs Act, 1—A testator devised all his real and personal estate to his wife in trust for her support during her life-time, and for the maintenance and education of his children, and on the wife's death to be equally divided amongst them. By a codicil he directed that if M., a married daughter, should die before her parants, leaving a child or children, they should receive her portion, with a like provision in case of his two other children, then unmarried. On the testator's death, his wife and children surviving him, they sold a portion of the lands, joining in a conveyance to the purchaser S., who agreed to sell to N. On a petition under her Vendors and Purchasers Act:—Held, that the conveyance to S. was effective to pass the fee in the land to him. Re Street & Nelson, 12 O. W. R. 339, 17 O. L. R. 50.

Devise to wife for life or widowhood—Election between dower or right under will.]—Riddell, J., held, that a widow must elect whether she will take dower or an estate for life or widowhood under the will.

ness.]-A testator by his will gave the defendant all his estate on condition that he should pay the plaintiff $50 a month, and that she should have the use of the testator's house and furniture for her life, and by a codicil provided that if "in his (the executor's) own absolute judgment he is of opi-nion" that it would be best for her to be cared for in some institution, he should have the right and authority to place her there (with her consent in a specially mentioned case), and that the charges for caring for her there should take the place of the use of the house and furniture and the monthly allowance. The defendant chose an institution where the plaintiff would be a paying inmate and be cared for (not the specially mentioned case), but the plaintiff refused to leave the house, and the defendant ceased paying the monthly allowance, and the plaintiff brought this action for the arrears of the allowance and for the construction of the will:—Held, that the will, executed in 1896, indicated that the condition of the plaintiff was one that needed care and oversight; that in 1901 the defendant came to the con clusion and made it known to the plaintiff that it would be for her welfare to give up housekeeping, and take the benefit left to be brought into effect by his absolute judgment; that he had the right and authority to place her in a sufficiently adequate home (other than the specially mentioned case), without her consent, and that the choice he had made was such a one, and he was entitled to possession of the house, and to cease paying the monthly allowance. Devisee dying without living issue—Life estate. Re Blackwell, Blackwell v. Blackwell, 3 O. W. R. 232.

Direction to accumulate - Contingent interest — Acceleration — Cancellation of legacy if will attacked.]—The testatrix, who died on the 14th February, 1892, by her will devised certain moneys and lands to her executors and trustees, with directions to invest and keep invested and re-invest (compounding interest) until the 17th March, 1915, when the whole accumulated fund was to be handed over to the plaintiff, if he was then alive; but if he died at an earlier date, then alive; but it he died at all earlier and, leaving living issue, then to his children, and if he died without leaving any living issue, then to the other children of the testatrix:— Held, that the illegal part of the will was not that deferring payment of the corpus till 1915, but that directing the undue accumulation of income for over twenty-one years: that the plaintiff's interest was merely contingent or subject to be divested if he did not live until 1915; that the Court will accelerate payment in cases which rest on the postponement of enjoyment of property abso lutely bestowed on the beneficiaries, as it is against public policy to restrain a man in the use or disposition of property in which no one but himself has any interest, but that no one but nimsel; has any interest, but that in this case there was no acceleration in the enjoyment of any interest under the will as an effect of R. S. O. 1897 c. 332, and no such absolute vested interest in the plaintiff as entitled him to stop the accumulation in order to claim a present payment; that the executors might proceed with the conversion of the lands and the combination and accu-mulation of the interest for twenty-one years; that for the following two years the accumulation must cease and the income be paid out to those entitled, personally to the next of kin and realty to the heirs-at-law if next of kin and realty to the helra-u-law in the plaintiff were then alive:—Held, also, that the plaintiff's action was to obtain a construction of the will and declaration of his rights rather than seeking a modification or changing of the will, and so did not operate a forfeiture of his share within the meanare a forfeiture of his snare within the meaning of the prohibition in the will against action adverse to the testatrix's bounty. Harrison v. Harrison, 24 C. L. T. 222, 7 O. L. R. 297, 3 O. W. R. 247.

Direction to pay debts and testa-mentary expenses—Specific legacies—Residue-Succession duties - Exoneration or specific legacies.] - It was contended that under a direction in a will to pay debts and funeral expenses, the executors were bound to pay the succession duties out of the residue, to the exoneration of the specific lega-tees:—Held, by the Divisional Court, approving Kennedy v. Protestant Orphans' Home, 25 O. R. 235, Manning v. Robinson, 29 O. R. 483, and Re Holland, 3 O. L. R. 406, that succession duty does not come within the description either of a debt or a part of the testamentary expenses, and that the specific legacies not being specially exonerated by the will, were not to be exonerated from their proportion of the successive duties payable upon the whole of the estate, at the expense of the residuary legatees. The property had been sold, but possession not given at date of will, nor was testatrix at time of her death actually aware of final closing of sale:—Held, that the sum of $2,000 must be set apart and invested. Re Crysler, 13 O. W. R. 613.

Disinheritance-Does not deprive right to share in dower.]-The declaration on the part of the testator that he excludes one of his children from the estate "because he has already received from me more than any share to which he might be entitled " is not such a disinheriting as will deprive that child of his right to a share in the legal dower. Douglass v. Fraser (1910), 20 Que. K. B.

Distribution of estate—Disappearance of devises, 1—on an application for an order declaring that one son owned a certain lot subject to a payment to the heirs of another son who had disappeared twenty years ago, an order was made for the administration of the estate, no satisfactory evidence of the latter son's death having been furnished. Re Stubbins, 12 O. W. R. 1104.

"Next in heirship"—Period of ascertainment.]—Following a gift to the testator's widow of his real and personal estate for her life, there was this clause in a will: "My whole estate (after the death of my wife) be equally divided between my brothers Luke Gardner, Joseph Gardner, Mrs. Catharine Walkins, and my deceased sister, Mrs. Sarah A. Hutchinson's children, or their heirs. Should no heirs of any of the above he alive, that it go to the next in heirship:"—Held, that the persons entilled in the first place were all the children of Luke, Joseph, Catharine, and Sarah, living at the testator's death or born afterwards during the life of the widow, per capita, and not per stirpes. The words "children or their heirs" meant "children or their issue," and gave the shares of a child dying in the lifetime of the widow to the issue of the child so dying, in substitution for, and not by descent from, the child so dying. The shares of the children entitled to share became vested at once; but if any child died in the lifetime of the widow leaving issue, the share of that child was diverted and went to such issue, and vested at once and finally in the issue, who then became the stock of descent. The words "next in heirship" meant the heirs at law to the realty and the statutory next of kin are to be ascertained at the death of the person whose vested share they took. In re Gardner, 22 C. L. T. 119, 3 O. L. R. 343, 1 O. W. R. 157.

Distribution of estate — Shares—Income — Corpus — Survivorship — Period of distribution. Re Totten, 7 O. W. R. 886, 8 O. W. R. 543.

Distribution of fund—Intention of testator — Distinct contingencies.]—Where it appeared from the testator's will, in relation to the distribution of a certain fundamental by the still of the distribution of a certain fundamental in mind two distinct contingencies, in one of which he provided for the distribution of the fund in one way and in the other in a different way:—Held, that it made no difference whether a reason could be discovered for the distinction made by the testator between the two cases, the duty of the Court being merely to interpret the will, and not to make a new one.—The cases provided for being mutually exclusive, and the event that happened being that provided by the testator in the earlier clause of his will:—Held, that the fund must be disposed of as in that clause provided. McDonald v. Jones, 41 N. S. R. 536, 3 E. L. R. 241.

Distribution of fund between "the legatees named in the will"—Persons entitled to share—Persons to whom specific chattels bequeathed—Representatives of persons dying before period of distribution—Representatives of legatees predeceasing testator—Hospital fund—Evidence to aid designation—Provision for payment of an obligation—Equality among distributees—Abatement. Re Solmes, 11 O. W. R. 985.

Distribution of residue after death of annuitants—Ambiguity — Intention of testator—Avoidance of intestacy—Punctuation. Re Carmichael, 12 O. W. B. 1266.

Division of estate per stirpes or per capita. Macdonald v. Jones, 3 E. L. R. 241.

Dower—Election — Annuities — Pre-decease of first annuitant—Rights of subsequent —Intestacy—' Balance' of estate.] — The testator gave annuities to his wife and only child; the latter pre-deceased him. He gave to his wife $200 a year during widowhood, and to his daughter $200 a year as long as she remained unmarried, but in case she married, only $150, the other $50 to go to the wife. At her death the $150 was to go to a charity. Until the testator's farm was sold, his wife and daughter were to have the house and lot with furniture and chattels while they remained unmarried; at the death or marriage of either it was to go to the other, but after the death or marriage of both the house and lot were to be sold and the money was to go to a charity. The annuities were to be taken out of the farm rent. Any balance of money received from rent was to go, with the interest of money on deposit, annually to two charities until the farm was sold. The executors were to have power to sell the farm in case of increased expenses or rise in property, and the amount was to be invested, and the amount of interest required was to be used in place of rent, and the balance of interest to go to the two charities until the death or marriage of the wife or daughter. After the death of both, the estate was to be divided among charities: —Held, that the widow was put to her election between the provisions of the will and her dower.—2. That because the first annuitant died in the testator's lifetime, it did not follow that those who were to take at her death took nothing; the annuity was payable to them from the testator's death, but only $150 a year.—3. There was no intestacy as to the additional $50.—4. Upon the facts, as found by the Judge, with regard to the money on deposit, there were no reasons impelling the conclusion that there was an intestacy as to the interest therein, in the face of the testator's declaration that he disposed of all his property.—5. There was no intestacy as to the corpus or any part of it. By the word "balance" the testator meant the rest or residue of the whole of his property.—6. There was no intestacy as to the furniture and chartles, after the expiration of the interest therein given to the widow; his property was included also in the "balance." In re Newborn, 22 C. L. T. 120, 1 O. W. R. 122.

Dower—Election—Specific devise of portion of lot — Use of driving house, etc. — Rooms in ducelling house.]—A testator by his will devised to his widow for life 17 acres and the west side of a lot, together with the use of a drive house on his lands for the storage of crops, taken off the 17 acres, and of two rooms, certain furniture and bedding, and all the fruit she wanted for her own use from that now grown thereon; and, subject to such life estate and a payment of $100 to his daughter, he devised the same to one of his sons. To another son he devised the remainder of the lot, containing 33 acres, together with all buildings and erections thereon, reserving such privileges as were theretofore given to his widow during her lifetime, and subject to a bequest of $150 to the said daughter, and the payment of the funeral and testamentary expenses:—Held, that the widow was not entitled to dower in the dwelling house, but was so entitled as to the 33 acres, but being put to her election by reason of the disposition made in her favour. Judgment of Anglin, J., affirmed. Re Hurst, 11 O. L. R. 6, 6 O. W. R. 417, 721.

Dower—Election to take under will—Bale of lands—Intestacy as to surplus from sale—Election no bar to widow's interest in surplus—Devolution of Estates Act, s. 4.]—Middleton, J., held, that testator intended to prevent his wife from asserting dower in lands in question to the prejudice of the scheme of his will, i.e., an immediate sale, and that the widow having elected to take under the will could not assert any claim against the lands, but as to the proceeds of the lands not disposed of in the will the testator died intestate, and the widow had the same right in the surplus as if the testator had declared on the face of the will that it was to be so distributed, McEven v. Gray (1911), 18 O. W. R. 888, 2 O. W. N. 945.

"Dying without heirs"—Estate.]—A testator gave and devised to his daughter all his real and personal property, subject to the payment of certain legacies and charges, and "in the event of her dying without heirs" then to the testator's brothers and sisters:—Held, that the ulterior devisees being related to the first devisee, he "heirs" of the first devisee must be construed to be "heirs of the body," and therefore that as to the realty the daughter took an estate tail, and as to the personalty an absolute estate. In re McDonald, 23 C L. T. 326, 6 O. L. R. 478, 2 O. W. R. 968.

"Dying without issue "-Vested estate on birth of child-Absolute estate in fee.1-

A testatrix by her will gave certain real estate to an adopted daughter; but in the event of her "dying without issue" the devise was to lapse. There was no devise over: —Held, that "dying without issue" meant without a child being born; and therefore, on the birth of a child, the devise became absolute. Re Johnston & Smith, 12 O. L. R. 202, 7 O. W. R. 845.

Enumeration of properties—Absence of specific disposition — Residuary gift.]—The testator, by his will, first directed that all his just debts and funeral and testamentary expenses should be paid and satisfied by his executors. Then followed: "I give, devise and bequeath all my real and personal estate of which I may die possessed in manner following, that is to say;" and immediately thereafter an enumeration of six properties, followed by: "All the residue of my estate not hereinbefore disposed of, I give, devise, and bequeath unto" his son and daughter, naming them:—Held, that there was not an intestacy as to the enumerated properties, but that all the property of the testator, real and personal, was included in the residuary gift. In re Fraser, Lauther v. Fraser, [1904] I. Ch. 720, distinguished Re Conger (1909), 1 O. W. N. 57, 19 O. L. R. 490.

Estate — Rule in Shelley's case—Vested remainder subject to be divested—Executory gift over to class.]—The testator devised to his wife, the defendant, all his real estate for life, and directed that at her death it should be divided equally among two brothers, the children of a deceased brother, and a sister. He then added: "Should either of my two brothers or my sister predecease my said wife, then one-quarter of my real estate is to go to their heirs, executors and administrators." The sister predeceased the wife, leaving a son, the plaintiff, and by her will disposed of her real and personal property — Held, that the sister took a vested remainder to which the rule in Shelley's demander to which the rule in Shelley's demander to which the rule in Shelley's demander to which the rule in Shelley's actions above quality of the sister of the same and the signature as a personal designature as upon an executory gift to them as a class; and that the plaintiff was, therefore, entitled to take his share as purchaser under the will of the testator. Express revocation by subsequent document—Validity of document as a will notwithstanding invalidity of bequests—Relationship of witnesses to legatees—Mode of revoking wills — Evdence of intent, when admissible — Dependent relative — Revocation.]—A testatrix, by a holograph will, after directing her executors to pay her debts and funeral charges, gave to them the residue of her estate, in trust to pay certain legacies therein provided for, which included legacies to her sister E. A. R. and her nephew E. B. F. R., and to pay the residue, if any, to the said E. A. R. By holograph if any, to the said E. A. R. By holograph if any, to the said E. A. R. By holograph

R. and the wife of E. B. F. R.:—Held, that, while the effect of the relationship of the witnesses to the beneficiaries was to nullify the bequests made to them, the document was, in other respects, valid as a will, and duly revoked the original will, including the appointment of executors. Judgment of Winchester, Surrogate Court Judge, reversed. Re Tuckett (1907), 9 O. W. R. 979, overruled. The mode of revoking wills, the admissibility of parol evidence of intent, and the doctrine of dependent relative revocation, discussed. The Court directed the issue of letters of administration with the will annexed, and the division of the estate as upon an intestacy. Freel v. Robinson (1908), 18 O. L. R. 651, 13 O. W. R. 1164.

Extending powers of executors -Powers given with respect to a universal legacy without reference to particular lega-cies.]—The clause in a will whereby a testator enlarges the powers of his executors, either as to their nature or their duration, beyond the provisions of art. 918 C. C., is to be strictly interpreted against them. Hence, in a will containing a universal legacy to several legatees, with substitution, and on condition the property so devised is not to be divided until the youngest of the male institutes reaches a stated age, a clause which provides, in the interval, for the seizing by the executors of all the property bequeathed, with the evident intention of securing the observance of the conditions respecting such legacy, does not refer to property bequeathed in the same will, and by particular legacy, the more so when the testator ex-presses his desire that such particular legacies should be enjoyed after the happen-ing of an event distinct from the partition. Bruncau & Genereux (1909), 19 Que, K. B.

Free from seizure.] — A condition attaching to a legacy and declaring it free from seizure does not also mean that it is inalienable. Consequently, the legates, under such a condition of an immovable, may hypothecate it. Germain v. Rousseau, 37 Que. S. C. 189.

Determi: atign of class—Discretion of trustees.]—I died in 1889, having made a will in 1898, ay which be left all his property to two tru-tees, to hold in trust for the benefit of the iniant children of two nephews. The trustees were to use the income, according to their discretion, for the support, maintenance, and education of these children, until each reached the age of twenty-one years. The words in the will were: "And on each child attaining the age of twenty-five years, to pay to such child what they consider would be his or her share in my estate, dividing the same equally between such children living, and the children of any deceased child when such payment shall be made, such payment to be per stirpes, and not per capita." etc.—In 1904 one of the children died without issue, and in 1906 another child was born to one of the The oldest child had now reached the age of twenty-five years :- Held, that the child who had reached the age of twenty-five years was entitled to be paid her share of the corpus of the estate, which share was to be ascertained by dividing the corpus equally among the children then in esse, they being the only ones entitled to rank, as the class was then determined.—Held, that the child born after the death of the testator, but before the time for payment to the oldest child, was entitled to rank equally with the other children, as the class was not determined until then.—Held, that, as the testa-tor had given the trustees full discretion to use the income as they might see fit, for the purposes mentioned in the will, the Court would not, in the absence of fraud or wrongdoing, interfere or direct them in this respect. Earle v. Lawton, 4 N. B. Eq. 86, 5 spect. Earle E. L. R. 472.

Fund for maintenance and education.]—B. G. F., the testator, died October 1st, 1895, leaving him surviving a widow and one child, a son, the present plaintiff.
The will contains the following provision: "And I hereby will and bequeath all my estate, real and personal (of which I may die possessed) to my said executors and trusfor the following purposes-that they shall, in the first place, convert all property into cash within one year from the date of my death, and after the payment of my just debts shall invest the remainder in safe interest paying investments, and out of such investments I direct that one thousand pounds (£1,000) or the equivalent thereof be set apart and used by my executors and trustees for the purpose of educating and giving a profession to my son, Gordon Winslow Taylor, providing he has not already been educated and received a profession." The will also provides that the plaintiff is not to receive his share of the residue of the estate until he reaches the age of twenty-five years. G. W. T. became twenty-one years of age September 2nd, 1909:—Held, that as the plaintiff has reached the age of twenty-one years he is now entitled to have paid over to him the £1,000 fund with accumulations and interest, or to have transferred to him the securities in which this fund is invested. securities in which this fund is invested. Trustees who refuse to pay over a legacy when they have no reasonable doubt but that it should be paid, will not be allowed any costs in an action to compel its payment.——Quare, in such a case are not trustees personally liable for the costs of the proceedings. struction. Decision of Clute, J., affirmed. The will dealt with certain lands and all the goods of the testator. The goods were given by general (not by specific or residuary) bequest to the widow, and nothing was said in the will as to payment of debts. The in the will as to payment of deuts. The testator left some real property not mentioned or included in the will, and as to which he died intestate. As against the widow, it was contended that the debts should be paid out of the personalty in experiments of the lands descended:—Held, oneration of the lands descended:—Held, that, notwithstanding the Devolution of Estates Act, ss. 4 and 9, the personal estate is still the primary fund for the payment of debts. WILL.

General gift-Context - Real estate-Deleted words. |-By one of the clauses of his will, a testator gave to his nephew his mill, tannery, houses, lands, and all his real estate, effects, and property whatsoever, and of what nature and kind soever, at a named place, chargeable with certain legacies:— Held, that the clause, when taken by itself, would include personal as well as real property, yet when read with other clauses of the will, and the whole context taken into consideration, the gift was limited to the real estate.—Quare, whether in construing a will deleted words can be looked at. Thorne v. Parsons, 22 C. L. T. 379, 4 O. L. R. 682, 1 O. W. R. 608.

General intention of testator.] - The following provisions were contained in the will of Miss F.:—" That the sum of twenty dollars per annum be paid annually to Madeline Fisher, daughter of G. Frederick Fisher, formerly of Fredericton, now deresult, normerly of Fredericton, now deceased, as long as she lives and remains single." M. F. had been married, but before the date of the will, had been divorced a vinculo, which fact was well known to the testatrix.—Held, that M. F. was entitled to the legacy. The following clause was contained in the will of Mrs. F:—"I release and direct my executors to cancel, without collecting the money the mortes. collecting the money, the mortgage to me from John Doherty." Mrs. F. held no mortgage from J. D., and she never had any dealings with anyone of the name of J. D., but she did hold one from W. D.:-Held, that out see did hold one from W. D.:—Held, that parol evidence was admissible to correct such a mistake. The codicil to Mrs. F.'s will contained the following provisions:—"All the residue of my estate given to the city of Fredericton by the said will I give and bequent to J. Carleton Allen and J. Aibert Gregory both of these id city. Gregory, both of the said city, barristers at-law, in trust for the purpose of founding an institution to be called the J. J. General scheme of will.]—R. died in 1876, leaving a will by which he devised practically all his property to trustees, upon trust for the benefit of his children and their heirs. D. D. R., a son of the testator, died after his father, leaving him surviving a widow and five children:—Held, that the word "heirs" in the will should be construed in its strict legal and technical sense, and was intended to mean the heirs of law and not the statutory next of kin; and that the widow of the deceased son was not entitled to any part of the testator's property under his will. Smith v. Robertson (1909), 4 N. B. Eq. 252.

Gift — Restrictions—Investment—Estate —Responsibility of executors—Defeasance— Executory devise over. Re Kennell, 7 O. W. R. 566.

Gift "during natural life"—Absolute interest.]—A testator gave $500 to A. S., but Ilmited the disposition of it so that she got for her own use absolutely, only the interest upon it. He provided that at her death this $500 was to be given to her eldest son, E. C. S., and that he could use this sum "for his benefit during his natural life." Then the testator purported to give to his wife all that remained after the $500 was taken out, but he limited her for her own use absolutely, to the interest only, and when the capital should be no longer needed to earn interest for his wife, he gave it to certain persons named, and in all cases "for their benefit during their natural lives:"—Held, that the testator intended to dispose of all his real estate, and had carried out his intention by a payment over of the $500 after the death of A. S., and by a division of the rest after the death of his wife; and that the sum of $500 was an absolute gift to E. C. S., and upon the death of his mother he was to be entitled to it absolutely; and the testator did not die intestate as to any portion of his estate. In re Chapman, 22 C. L. T. 259, 4 O. L. R. 130, 1 O. W. R. 434.

Gift during widowhood.]—A testator devised all his real and personal estate to his wife for her sole and absolute use, and then added: "The real property while the said (wife) remains my widow. But in case my wife should again marry, I request my executors to sell all my real and personal estate when the youngest child should come of age, and that they, my executors, shall divide the proceeds between my 6 younger children." The widow did not marry again and left a will devising all her real and personal estate: —Held, that the absolute devise to the wife was not cut down by the subsequent words, which were applicable only to the widow's marriage, and that the real estate passed under her will. Order of Street, J., 3 O. W. R. 146, affirmed. In re Mumby, 24 C. L. T. 315, 8 O. L. R. 283, 4 O. W. R. 10.

Gift for life—Codicil—Request of life interest with power of appointment by will—Bequest of corpus of legatee in default.1—A codicil gave Louis merely a life interest in an income, with a power of appointment by will in default of the exercise of which the testator would be intestate as to the disposition of the corpus after Louis's death. While an unlimited gift of income carried to its donee the corpus as well, no authority could be found for holding that a gift of income for life had this effect. Nor did that superadded power of appointment, which could never be exercised in his own favour, increase in any wise the interest of the donee of this power in the fund which was its subject. By clause (e) of his will the testator had devised the rest and residue of his property to Louis. The corpus of the $10,000, of which the income by the codicil was given to Louis, would not, under the scheme of the will as originally framed, have been residuary estate. By a preceding clause, (d), which the codicil revoked, Louis E. Hanner was given the entire principal of his father's estate, except a sum set aside to produce an annuity for his mother; the testator by this codicil revoked the gift to his son of the principal of his father's estate, except as unset aside to produce an annuity for his estate; by the same instrument he expressly confirmed, inter alia, the residuary bequest to him, which, the testator being otherwise intestate as to the corpus of the $10,000 (except that he gave his son a power of appointment. The authorities seem uniform that such provisions constitute an absolute gift entitling the legatee to have the fund paid over. Re Hanmer, 4 O. W. R. 474, 9 O. L. R. 348.

Gift of aliquot share of residue to each child of testator—Share of one child to be applied by trustee for maintenance—Gift to trustee of unexpended balance—Right of trustee to receive share.]—Residuary devise upon trusts to sell and divide proceeds equally among the testator's eight children (naming them), including E., with directions to executor to pay the share bequeathed to E. to W., upon trust, to pay for proper clothing for E., while an inmate of an insane asylum, provided that, in case she died before her share was exhausted, "then I bequeath the remainder of her said share to W., to be applied by him towards the liquidation of the debt on the Roman Catholic Church at C." E. died in testator's lifetime:—Held, that, inasmuch as the children did not take as a class, but of an aliquot part of the estate bequeathed to each child, W. was entitled notwithstanding the death of E., to receive the one-eighth share which she would have been entitled to, to be applied by him as above mentioned. He also directed a distribution of so much of his estate, as from time to time was necessary to furnish capital to produce the necessary to turnish capital to produce the annuities. Both widow and daughter died. —Middleton, J., held, 18 O. W. R. 371, 2 O. W. N. 605, that the capital invested, to produce widow's annuity, fell into the residue and became divisible: That one claiming under daughter's will was entitled to share in the distribution.—Divisional Court held that there was no intestacy, that the interests of the residuary legatees were vested, and the widow and a daughter having died, that the capital invested to produce widow's annuity fell into the residue and became divisible; that those claiming under daughter's will were entitled to share in the distribution .-Rule in Leeming v. WILL.

bility for taxes—Advancement — Interest— Use of house—Survivorship — Proceeds of sale—Distribution.]—Motion by executors of sale—Distribution.]—Motion by executors of will of Charles Tuck for a summary order determining certain questions arising as to the construction of the will and distribution of the estate of the testator, who died on 26th May, 1877. The words of the will which dealt with this property were as follows: "Also I give, devise, leave, and bequeath to my said wife the full possession and occupation of the lands and premises now owned by me for and during her natural life. owned by me for and during her natural life, together with all my household furniture, personal property, goods and chattels, money, notes, and securities for money of every kind notes, and securities for money of every kind soever, to be for her use and behoof during her natural life, in lieu of dower, which she consents to accept instead thereof, and which possession is to be held by her so long as site shall remain my widow. And finally I do hereby will and ordain that all the personal property consisting of goods, chattels, money, or notes receivable, of what kind sever that may be in possession of my said beloved wife at her decease, and not otherwise discovered. at her decease, and not otherwise disposed of shall within one year after her decease be sold snail within one year after her decease be sold by my executor hereinafter named, and the proceeds or moneys arising from the same shall be equally divided among my daughters as being part of my estate:"—Held, that the widow, May Ann Tuck, took absolutely all of the personal property which she appropriated the personal property which she appropriated to her own use and used up during her life, and that there was a gift over of only so much of the personal property of Charles Tuck as was in the possession of the widow at the time of her death. The part of the will referring to the daughters was as followed.

lows: "And also I hereby will and ordain that at the decease of my beloved wife the said lot shall be sold for the benefit of my daughters, the legatees hereinafter named. daughters, the legatees hereinatter humen, and the moneys arising from the sale of said lot shall be equally divided among my daughters, the legatees of this my will, share and share alike. The names of my daughters, the share alike. The names of thy dauginers, the legatees herein named and who are alive at the date hereof, are as follows and if any one or more of the above named legatees shall be deceased before receiving her or their interest or share in or from my estate, then and in such case her or their heirs shall inherit the same, and if any one or more of the above legatees shall have become deceased and have left no legal heirs then her or their shar's shall revert to the other legatees, or their heirs, and shall be equally divided among them:" — Held, that the share of Martha had become vested at the time of her Martha had become vested at the time of her death, and that share must be paid to her estate. The words "before receiving" might in this case well be interpreted as "before time to receive." The words of the will as to William Tuck were: "Also at or upon the decease of my beloved wife, I give and devise to my son William Tuck for and during his natural life, and his lawful heirs after him, subject nevertheless to the provisoes and conditions herein contained, all that and conditions herein contained, all that certain parcel to have and to hold the same from and after the decease of my said beloved wife, during his natural life, and subject to wife, during his natural life, and subject to this express condition, namely, he the said William Tuck shall have no power to sell nor any right to dispose of the above real estate or any part thereof, but shall transmit to his lawful heirs unimpaired, if he shall have any. And I further will and ordain that should my said son William Tuck fail to have any lawful heirs, then my will is that the said lands and premises thus devised shall at his decease be sold and the proceeds arising therefrom equally divided among the arising therefrom equally divided among the other legatees or their lawful heirs. And I further will and ordain that whether my said son shall have lawful heirs to inherit after him or fail therein, the above provisions made by me in his favour shall be and constitute his entire share in my estate:"—Held, that the effect of what the testator did was, by the operation of the rule in Shelley's case, to give the fee simple in the land mentioned to William Tuck. In re Tuck, 6 O. W. R. 150, 10 O. L. R. 300.

Gift to charitable institution — No institution by that name—Claimed by an institution in same city — Application by cypres doctrine—Residuary clause—Gift to persons hereinbefore named — Only person actually named included.]—Testnor willed $500 to the "Methodist Children's Orphans' Home," at Kingston. There was no such institution. — Falconbridge, C.J.K.B., held, that a clear charitable intention was expressed, and that the cy-près doctrine should apply. Legacy ordered to be paid to the Kingston's Orphans' Home and Widows' Friend Society:—Held, also, that only persons actually named in the will should take under the residuary clause certain institutions and the Methodist ministers referred to in the will by description were thus excluded. Re Clapper (1910), 17 O. W. R. 57, 2 O. W. N. 111.

Cast to child — Condition—Marriage—Conacat of executors — Invalidity — Mixed fund.]—Testator died on the 1st May, 1900, leaving a will dated 14th March, 1898, in which he gave to his son out of and from the annual income and profits of the investment and rents of his real and personal estate $300 per year while unmarried, "but, if he marries to the satisfaction of and with the consent of the executors, then he is to receive the whole annual income of the estate during his life." There was no bequest over in case the son married without consent, nor any subsequent disposal of the estate affecting these assets. The son married without consent:—Held, nevertheless that he was entitled to the whole income. With regard to personalty, the Court of Chancery long ago adopted the rule of the civil and ecclesiastical law by which such a condition is void or regarded as merely in terrorem; and according to modern rules a mixed or massed fund is to be treated in the same way as personalty. Gift to children—Conditional substitution of grandchildren — Enjopment of usufruct—Restraint of alienation—Construction of 60 V. c. 95 (Que.).—A testator having seven children, directed his estate to be divided into seven shares: each child was to receive the usufruct of one share during life. Upon the demise of any child, then the children born to that child were to have full proprietary rights and interest in their parents' snare. The grandchildren were given the right to use, enjoy or dispose of their parents' share as to them might seem best, subject, however, to two conditions: (1) that the property so bequeathed to his children in usufruct should not be assignable, or capable of being seized by their creditors: (2) that the property so bequeathed by him whether movable or immovable, should not be sold or alienated under any pretext, but should pass en nature to his grandchildren. The testator by a codicil provided that should his children or any of them die before his wife, without leaving children or legitimate descendants, then such share or shares should go to the testator's wife during widowhood, and after her death the property should go to the surviving children of the testator's death his estate was divided and the division confirmed by an Act of the Quebec Legislature, being 60 V. c. 95.

On the death of one of the testator's children, who left a will, but no issue, the questions arose, was the division provisional or final? and was there an accretion to the other legatees, or did the share of the deceased child pass under his will?:—Held, that it was the intention of the testator to give each of his children a specific share of his estate and that those shares had been ascertained by partition and confirmed by 60 V. c. 95 (Que.) And, that each child was sole proprietor of his specific share, subject only to his passing it in the course of nature to his children:—Held, also, that, there was no right of accretion to the other legatees, either the children or the grandchildren of the testator, and that the share of the deceased child did not devolve to them jointly, but passed under his will to his executor. Judgment of the Superior Court of Quebec, 28 Que. S. C. 257, and Fortin, J., at trial, restored. Précost V. Précost, C. R. [1908] A. C. 94.

Gift to children—Substitution in favour of grandchildren—Distribution per capita.]
—Where by a will property is given to the children of the testator, a charge de substitution in favour of his grandchildren in equal shares, the division should be made per capita among those named. The "substitution" opens on the death of each heritor for life as to his share in favour of all the grandchildren living at the time of the opening of the "substitution" for each share. Rémillard v. Chabot, 26 Que. S. C. 498.

Gift to children on attaining 30 years of age—Child dying prior thereto— 'eriod of vesting.]-A testator, out of certain insurance moneys, amounting to $70,000, by his will gave to his wife, during widowhood, $10,000, and the balance equally amongst his children. He also, out of the rest of his estate, gave to his wife during widowhood a further sum of $10,000, and of the rest and residue thereof, he gave one-third the test and two-thirds to his sons. In case his wife should marry, $15,900 of the $20,000 was to be equally divided amongst his children, and the remaining $5,000 was to be hers for life. The children's shares were not to be paid until they attained 30 years of age, but they were to have the interest thereon, on attaining 21 years of age, his executors, however, being empowered to expend on them before attaining such latter age, such part of the interest as they might deem advisable; on attaining 30 years of age, the executors might still, if they deemed it advisable, continue to pay the interest only. All moneys invested in his partnership business with his brother were to remain therein so long as his brother desired, and out of the annual profits thereof, if amounting to 10 per cent. or less, one-half of the profits on one-third of his interest therein was to be added to the daughters shares and the balance to the sons; but, if the profits should exceed 10 per cent., 5 per cent. thereof on such one-third interest was to be added to the daughters' shares, and the balance to the sons; and upon the dis-solution or winding-up of the partnership, the amount so added to the said shares was to be paid to those entitled, in the manner and subject to the same terms and conditions, and the executors' discretion, heretofore expressed. cord, purchase the daughters' interest in the partnership, and were to have the first right to do so, should the daughters desire to sell the same. One of the daughters, who survived the testator, died before attaining the age of 30 years: — Held, that she had a vested interest in her share. Re Livingston, 9 O. W. R. 353, 14 O. L. R. 161.

Gift to church.—"To St. James Presbyterian Church $375 which I owe it "—There were two Presbyterian churches in the city—One St. James to which he did not owe anything—Other "Zion" church which he did owe $355—Testator life-long adherent and pew holder of "Zion" church — Question which church was entitled to the legacy.—Held, that "Zion" church was entitled—Evidently mistake in name—Admissibility of evidence. Re McLaurin (P.E.I. 1911), 9 E. I. R. 326.

Gift to class—Ascertainment.]—A tentror bequeathed the sum of $500, as to income to be applied for the support of his grandchildren, children of his son John, and as to principal to be paid to them equally as they respectively attained the age of twenty-one years, and that those grandchildren born after the death of the testator and before that time were entitled to share. In re Archer, 24 C. L. T. 230, 7 O. L. R. 491, 3 O. W. R. 510.

Gift to class—Death of member before testator—Children of deceased member.]—The testator, who at the time of making his will in 1891, had four children living at Barnstable, England, devised Evo houses to his "children at Barnstable, England, devised his children at Barnstable, England, to be divided among them in equal shares." One of the four children died after the making of the will and before the testator, leaving children.—Held, applying the principle of Re Williams, 22 C. L. T. 136, 5 O. L. R. 380, 4 C. W. R. C. L. T. 390, 8 O. L. R. 590, 4 O. W. K. 444.

Gift to class—Time for distribution — Income—Provision for maintenance—Costs.]—Held, upon the terms of the will in question in the next preceding case, that the oldest child, having reached the age of twenty-five years, was entitled to be paid her share of the corpus of the estate, and took an absolute vested interest:—Held, that the remainder of the capital was not to be set apart now, but held in trust until another child reached the age of twenty-five years, when another division must be made.—Held, that the closes the death of the control of the control only share of the accumulated income. That could only be divided when all possible claims upon it had ceased.—It was ordered that the costs in this matter, as between solicitor and client, be paid out of the corpus of the estate. Earle v. Lawton (No. 2), 4 N. B. Eq. 92, 5 E. L. R. 502.

Gift to daughter to take effect at death of wife — Death of one daughter before death of vije—Vested interest—Designated legatecs — Survivorship not provided for.]—Testator devised his estate existing at the death of his wife in trust to his executors to divide same equally among his four daughters. One of the daughters who survived the testator, predeceased her mother:—Held, that this daughter had a vested interest at the time of her father's death, as the distribution was not delayed for any reason personal to the legatee, nor was there any intention to provide for survivorship. Re Abell Estate (1959), 14 O. W. R. 369.

Gift to members of a class — Substitution — Ascertainment. [—The testator directed that the residue of his estate should be divided equally among the children of his named brothers and sisters, share and share alike, "so that each nephew and niece shall receive the same amount; and in the event of any of my said nephews or nieces predeceasing me or dying before the time for distribution arrives, leaving children, that the share which would have gone to such nephew or niece, if alive, shall be distributed equally among his or her children." The will was dated the 6th May, 1902, and the testator died on the 9th February, 1903. One of the testator's sisters named in his will, and who survived him, had a daughter who died in 1886, leaving a son:—Held, that this son was not entitled to a share of the residue. Christopherson v. Naylor, 1 Mer. 320 followed. In re Potter's Trust, L. R. 8 Eq. 52, not followed. A nephew of the testator, a son of one of the named brothers, was living at the date of the will, but died before the testator, leaving a daughter, who was held entitled to a share. In re Fleming, 24 C. L. T. 323, 7 O. L. R. 651, 3 O. W. R. 622.

Gift to niece or heirs — Predecease of niece.]—A testator, by his will, after a provision in favour of his wife for life, directed that at the death of his wife any money that might then be remaining should be equally divided and paid to two nephews and two nieces, naming them, or their heirs, executors, or assigns. One of the nieces predeceased the testator, having a husband and children:—Held, that the gift to the deceased niece did not lapse, and that her heirs were those who would have taken her personal property under the Statute of Distributions in case of her dying intestate possessed of personal property. In re Wrigley, 20 C. L. T. 387, 32 O. K. 108.

Gift to "surviving children"—Period of distribution.]—Middleton, J., held (18 C. W. R. 646, 2 O. W. N. 782), that "where there is a gift to 'A.' for life, and after his death to others, that any words used in connection with the gift in remainder indicating survivorship, refer to the period of distribution and not to the death of the testator."—Clute, J., approved of the above holding, Re Elliott (1911), 18 O. W. R. 902, 2 O. W. N. 936.

Gift to two named daughters — Subsequent provision in case of dying eithout issue—Death in testator's lifetime.]—A testatrix, after leaving the residue of her estate to be equally divided amongst her four daughters, C., M., H., and E. directed that if C. and M. should "die without leaving a child, or children," her executors should pay annually the interest accruing on the money bequeathed to them to her son R. during his lifetime, and after her son's death the principal should be equally divided amongst all the living children of her two other daughters, M. and H., on attaining their majority: —Held, that the words "die without leaving a child or children "meant in the testator's lifetime; and that the daughters, C. and M., who survived the testatrix, took the shares bequeathed to them absolutely.—The rule in Bovers v. Bovers, L. R. 8 Eq. 283, applied. In ve Wilkin, 15 O. L. R. 646, 11 O. W. R. 468.

Heirs and personal representatives —Near of kin.] — By his will the testator directed that his executors were, after his widow's death, to divide the residue and pay same in equal proportions to those of his heirs and personal representatives who would be entitled if he died intestate. "Personal representatives" here mean "hext of kin," excluding the widow. "Heirs and next of kin" here mean "heirs," that is heirs at law at the death of the testator. The division is to be per capita. Re Read, 12 O. W. R. 1009.

Heirs-at-law by laws of Massachusetts—Same as in England and Ontario—Etis—Same as in England and Ontario—Bridence as to.]—An action for a declaration as to who were the heirs-at-law of one Dixon, who died in Massachusetts in 1849. Several members of the bar of Massachusetts were examined, and they agreed that by the law of Massachusetts the heirs-at-law must be the heirs-at-law at the time of the testator's death.—Riddell, J., held, that the cases cited fully justified the above statement, the law being the same as in England and Ontario. Declaration accordingly. Dixon v, Dixon (1910). 17 O. W. R. 406.

Heritable sponse — Declaration — Art. 1276, C. C.]—The explicit declarations by which an ancestor of a heritable married man makes known his wish that a devise, apparently in his f-vour, is not intended for him, may be made not only by a formal expression to that effect, but also by the acts and the manner of acting of the ancestor. In this case the ancestor having declared in a former will, subsequently revoked, that he devised to his son, a heritable married man, a certain part of an immovable, and having afterwards declared in another will that he devised to his daughter-in-law the same part of the same immovable, his wish thus expressed in his last will is equivalent to an explicit declaration that the devise is made to the non-heritable spouse, and must be considered as the declaration required by Art. 1276 of the Civil Code. Bourassa v. Bourassa, 32 Que. S. C. 533.

In lieu of dower a testator devised certain chattels, his town house and his Bethel farm to his wife "to have and to hold while she remains my widow—when her claim shall cease by death or marriage, then I will my said farm to W. and O.":—Held, that "to have and to hold" refers to the Bethel farm only. There is nothing shewing that the different devises go together, but the contrary. Re Burk, 12 O. W. R. 999.

"Inadequacy of maintenance."]—George Wright, father of the complainant. Phebe Brecken, and of defendant, devised certain lands to his wife of the complainant. Phebe Brecken, and of defendant, devised certain lands to his wife of life, more of the complainant of the complainant of the complainant, in a manner suitable to her station in life." In case of dispute as to the "inadequacy of the maintenance," the testator directed that £40 per annum should be paid to her in lieu thereof. The daughter resided with her mother and defendant until her marriage with R. Brecken in 1844, and for eighteen months afterwards, when she went to her husband's house. The mother died in December, 1851, and the defendant paid the £40 a year up to November. 1860, when he discontinued paying. The defendant contended that there was no dispute as to the adequacy of the maintenance supplied by him, and, therefore, he was not liable to pay the £40 in money:—Held, Peters, M.R., that the wording of the will made the daughter the sole judge as to the inadequacy of the maintenance, and she was not bound to give a reason for objecting to it, but could demand the £40 a year at any time. Also, that her marriage and removal to her husband's house was, in itself, notice that she considered the previous maintenance inadequacy of the maintenance.—That adendant having paid the £40 for nine years was precluded from objecting to continue the arrangement. Breeken v. Wright (1867), 1 P. E. I. R. 267.

"Including" — "Estate" — Policies of insurance.]—By a clause in his will a testator bequeathed to his wife one-half his sestate, "including policies of insurance made payable to her upon my death." The testator left three policies, one for $1,000 payable to his wife, the second providing for payment to his wife of an annuity of $250 per annum, for twenty years, and the third payable at his death to the "legal heirs." There were no children, grandchildren, or mother, living at the time of the testator's death, but his widow survived him:—Held, that the third policy, being payable to the heirs and not to the widow as a preferred state, the high payable to the same although as a fact the opticies did not form part of the state of the state

Incomplete bequest — Legatee not named—Vagueness as to subject—Extrinsic evidence, inadmissibility of—Void bequest—Bequest—Bequest to church—Income—Perpetuity—Charitable bequest—Validity. Re Cameron, 7 O. W. R. 416.

Inconsistent bequests — Reconciling —Formal bequest of residue.] — A testator bequesthed all his clothing, wearing apparel, and personal effects to his brother; all his household furniture and other personal property to his sister. He then devised to his sister for life all his real estate, with remainder in fee to his nephew, subject to certain legacies and annutifies which he charged upon it; and wound up his will by devising and bequeathing the rest and residue of his real and personal property to his nephew. At the time of his death the testator's personal property consisted of: household goods and furniture, $150; farming implements and live stock, shout $500; hook debts and promissory notes, $35; cash, $273; wearing apparel, watch, chain, etc., $25; total, $985; —Held, that all the brother took was the wearing apparel and the watch and chain; that the sister took all the remainder of the personality; the nephew taking none of it. The proper view of the residuary clause was that the tostator, having disposed specifically of all his estate, both real and personal, added the residuary clause was that the costator, as a usual form. In rePink, 23 C. L. T. 16, 4 O. L. R. 718, 1 O. W. R. 772.

Inconsistent clauses — Executory devise—Failure of issue—Estate in fee.] — A testator, by the third clause of his will, devised a lot of land to a son, "his heirs and assigns forever," and in the fourth clause stated it to be "my will and desire, provided my (said) son shall have no lawful heir or children, that the above mentioned tract of land, after his death, that (the plaintiff) shall have it with all the right and title that my (said) son had to it herefore." By the fifth clause he gave to his wife "the nee" of halif the lot "during life after her decease my will is that the same shall belong to my (said) son, his heirs and assigns forever." The son died after the testator without having had any children:—Held, that the fifth clause removed from the operation of the third and fourth clauses one-half of the lot, which vested in the son subject to the mother's life estate, while as to the other half the son had under the third clause an estate in fee simple, subject under the fourth clause to an executory devise over in favour of the plaintiff, which, in the events which had happened, had taken effect. Insurance policy—In favour of wife— Afterwards devised to executors—Trust—Attempt to dispose of property over which testator had no control—No election by widow—Costs.]—Motion by executors of estate of Richard Edwards, under Con. Rule 938, for an order construing the will. The late Richard Edwards, in 1883, insured his life for $1,000 in favour of his wife, Jane Ann Ed-wards, still living. He afterwards by will devised and bequeathed to his executors this policy and a large amount of other property to be held in trust for the maintenance of his wife, and at her death to be divided in man-ner in his will set out. The testator attempted to dispose of property over which he had no power of disposition, and by the same will gave his wife property to which she had no claim. It was argued that the will raised an election and that the widow must either allow the insurance money to be disposed of as the will directed or lose all benefit under the will. -Riddell, J., held, that there was no reason why the widow should not have the insurance money as well as the other benefits under the Costs of all parties out of insurance money. Re Edwards, Allen v. Edwards (1910), 17 O. W. R. 643, 2 O. W. N. 323, 22 O. L. R. 367.

Inter vivos and testamentary dispositions — Gitts in contemplation of death—Holograph will—Post letter—Legacy left in trust.] — A gift in contemplation of death is not a method of disposing of property explicitly prohibited by law. It is only implicitly forbidden, and that by reason of an omission in Art. 754 C. C. respecting the disposal of property by gift. A gift made to take effect only after death is of no effect when it is not valid as a will or as permitted in a contract of marriage. (758 C. C.) Hence, the Courts may give to a gift which appears to be a gift in contemplation of death the effect of a will, if the Court is of the opinion that it contains the necessary elements. Thus the Court can legally declare that a provision in a letter, whose author died without revoking it, is a legacy left in trust under a holograph will, although conceived in the following words:—
"In case of my death and without other notice previous to such death and modifying my views, this hypothee assumed as a trust by you, will revert to Madame E. B., etc.; you will grove the rinterests, and you will come to some agreement with her as soon as possible respecting the repayment of the capital." De Sieyes v. Thompson (1909), 37 S. C. (Que.) 424.

Interest passing on a devise.—Devisees under will of Alexander Muir, who owned ½ interest in a shipbuilding business at Port Dalhousie, sued the executors, (owners of the other half interest) for $745.32 claimed to have been received by them out of the estate as executors. Middleton, J., held, that a testator can only deal in his will with what he owns, i.e., the net equitable value or balance due him on an accounting.—Judgment for plaintiffs for $47.71 without costs. Muir v. Currie (1911), 19 O. W. R. 513, 2 O. W. N. 1275.

Interlineation — Custody — Evidence.]
—D. Green, senior, who died in 1825, before the passing of the Will Act of 1843, devised 100 acres to his son, D. Green, junior, and "the heirs of his body forever," the words

"heirs of his body forever" being interlined. The devisee died unmarried, and the plaintiffs claimed as co-heirs of D. Green, senior, against the trustees of Joseph Green, residuary devisee under the will of D. Green, senior. D. Green, junior, survived the testator over thirty years. The will was drawn by Samuel Green (no relation of any of the parties), and the interlineation was in his hand-writing, and appeared to be in the same ink as the rest of the will, and he was a witness to the will. He survived D. Green, junior, several years, and he had had the custody of the will from the time of making it until the testator's death, and no question was raised during his lifetime. another subscribing witness, swore that he believed the will was now in the same state as when he signed it. It was not disputed that if the words interlined were not to operate as part of the will the lessor of the plain-tiff would be entitled to recover, and it was contended on their part that there was no sufficient evidence to shew the interlineation to have been made before the execution of the will. At the trial the Judge directed the jury that if they were satisfied from the evidence that the interlineation had been made before the will was executed to find for de-fendants, which they did. The lessors of the plaintiffs moved to set aside the verdict on the ground that the evidence did not warrant the finding.—Held, Peters and Hensely, JJ., Hodgson, CJ., concurring, that the evidence warranted the finding and that the rule must be discharged. Green v. Green (1872), 1 P. E. I. R. 384.

Investment of trust funds.]—Motion under Con. Rule 938 for the determination of the right of a son of the testator to the profit made by the trustees on the sale of land purchased by them under powers conferred by the will:—Held, that the son was not entitled under the direction in paragraph 21 of the will to be paid as part of the "interest," which the trustees were directed to pay to him, the profits realized from the money invested by the trustees in the purchase of land. I give and bequeath to my brother:"—Held, that the will must be construed to prevent an intestacy as to the lapsed devise, and that the lands given to the sister passed to the brother under the residuary clause. Legacies — Abatement — Devise — Revaleuc—Distribution—Surplus,]—A testator by certain clauses of his will devised and bequeathed property to some of his children, adding to each of these clauses a statement the clause.—By another clause he devised certain land to his daughter Margaret, subject to a payment of a legacy of $200 to her daughter. He did not add to this clause a statement of the value of the land. The will provided that in case of deficiency in the estate, each legatee should be liable to abatement, but that in the event of a surplus, "the same shall be divided equally between each." There was a residue:—Held, that the stated valuntions were not intended to be the basis for abatement, and that Margaret and her daughter were entitled to participate in the surplus, the devisees and legatees taking share and share alike. On the death of K. she was survived by her said son A. and two other children: —Held, that the fund vested absolutely on the death of K. in her three children, and that it was not the meaning of the will that the fund vested in C. in event of A. dying, leaving no brother or sister surviving him. Kerrison v. Kaye, 23 C. L. T. 158, 2 N. B. Eq. R. 455.

Legacies — Interest.]—A will directed that the estate, real and personal, should be sold, and that the executors should hold the proceeds in trust to pay an annuity of $800, and then to pay all the residue of the income to the testator's widow for life, and on her death to divide the corpus, paying to two grandchildren $1,000 each, and dividing the residue among the testator's children. The will declared that the two legacies to the grandchildren were subject to the widow's life interest, and directed that they should be paid when the grandchildren should attain twenty-one, but in case the estate should be divided before they attained that age, interest should be paid on their legacies. If the grandchildren died before attaining twenty-one, the legacies were to fall into the estate. Both the grandchildren attained twenty-one before the death of the widow:—Held, that interest on the legacies should be paid by the estate only from the death of the widow. Toomey v. Traccy, 4 O. Legacies — Payment out of real estate.]
—A testator by his will devised a farm to each of his two sons, subject to the right of his widow to work and manage the farms for her own benefit until certain fixed dates, and subject to the payment to her after those dates of certain sums of money by the devisees. He then gave legacies to his daughters, and proceeded as follows:—"I give to my wife all the moneys that remain after paying my former 'bequeaths,' debts, and runeral expenses, and all that may accrue from the farm during her term of management, to dispose of as she pleases, but if she should die without disposing, then I order that the undisposed part he divided among my sons and daughters then living. I creder my executors to sell my undisposed real estate and divide it equally amongst my chidren then living:—Held, that there had not been created a bleuded fund composed of the sensurary renated and personal stablished in Greville v. Florone, 7 H. L. C. 689, and that, the undisposed of personal estate being insufficient to pay them, the legacies to the daughters could not be paid out of the undisposed of real estate. The policy by endorsement was made payable to Amanda Hope Francis, mother of insured. The insured by his will directed the $500 to be paid to his executors to invest and retain all interest earned by the investment as a fund to which the mother might resort in event of her having exhausted her own money; her funeral penses were also to be paid from the fund, and after her death, fund was to be applied for general support of his family. The mother survived insured a few days only. Her estate was left to the grandchildren. who would take under their father's will if the word "family" was construed as chil-dren. — Middleton, J., held, here the word family might well mean children alone, indeed that was its primary meaning, and the Court would only attach a secondary mean-ing, which would invalidate the gift, when driven to do so by the context: That the claim of the executrix failed and the money must remain in Court to the credit of the infants and divided among them share and share aike, and the shares paid out to each on attaining majority. Marriage settlement — Rights under will — Distribution.]—A marriage contract made in Quebec reserved to the widow all matrimonial rights which she might be entitled to according to Ontario laws:—Held, that this does not give her the same interest in her husband's estate as if he had died intestate. The will gave a daughter by his first wife a lien for $8,000 on his property unless this should be varied by his will. According to his will all of his children were to share alike.—Held, that this lien was of no avail. The shares of his children were to be held in trust until they attained twenty-one, but as this manifesty refers to the children mentioned in the preceding part of the will, the child born after the date of the will takes nothing. action is based — Judgment maintaining the conclusions.]—The word "heirs" applies to both universal legatees named by a will and to those persons called by law to succeed to an estate.—The judgment which maintains the conclusions of an action in licitation instituted by a widow, owner of one-half of the assets of a community, against those persons whom she alleges have succeeded, in different capacities, to her late husband's estate, is res judicata between her and such persons as to her recognition of their quality as heirs. Hence she is not at liberty to deny, under pretext that she had committed an error in her action for licitation, the benefit of the quality so given by her to such heirs. Faureau v. White (1909),

"Mill" does not include the fee in the soil under the mill-stream and dam.]—A devise to testator's wife for life, and at her death to be divided among his sons and daughters in such proportions as she should by will direct does not give a child a vested remainder.]—S. G., father of both parties, by his will gave a mill and 30 acres of land to plaintiff. All the re-mainder of his real and personal property he gave to his wife for life and at her death to be divided among his sons and daughters (except plaintiff and another son otherwise provided for), in such proportions as his wife should by will direct. One daughter, Ann, died in her mother's lifetime, and in 1872, the mother died intestate, without having exercised the power of appointment. Plaintiff, on testator's death, went into oc-cupation of the mill. In 1873 the dam was carried away by a freshet and plaintiff built a new one higher up in the bed of the old a new one higher up in the bed of the oid pond, with a pipe to carry the water down to the mill. Defendants then built a fence below the old dam, and fenced it and cut the pipe, and plaintiff brought this action for trespass. The Judge told the jury that plaintiff had the fee simple of the land under the pond and that even if he had not, yet he had a right to build the dam there, and not, and plaintiff got a veriliet. On motion for an ew trial for misdirection, plaintiff contended (1) that the word "mill" in the will passed the fee of the land under the will passed the fee of the land under the mill and stream, and such adjoining land as was necessary for its enjoyment; (2) that even if the word 'mill' 'did not pass the fee, yet that Ann had a vested remain-der which, at her death and the death of her mother, passed to her next of kin, of whom plaintiff was one, and that, therefore, he was tenant in common with defendant to the extent of his interest in Ann's share, and as such had a right to place personal property on the land and the defendants had no right to destroy it when there, and having done so are liable for trespass:— Held, (Palmer, C.J., and Hensley, J.) that the word "mill" in the will did not pass the freehold in the soil under the mill and the freehold in the soil under the hills and stream. 2. That Ann had not a vested remainder, which on her death in her mother's lifetime would pass to her next of kin. Green v. Green (1875), 2 P. E. I. R. 8.

Mortgage to be paid.] — Testatrix directed a mortgage to be paid, not as a debt but as a bequest, and there was not sufficient personal, or undisposed of, or residuary estate to pay the claims:—Boyd, C., held, that 10

Edw. VII. c. 56, s. 6. made the real and personal estate comprised in the residuary bequests primarily and pari passu liable for the mortgage burden as per directions in the will; and that s. 38, s.-ss. 1 and 2, left the equitable rule in force as to paying of pecuniary legatees in priority to devisees, where the personalty or residuary estate fails to answer both. Motion for—Absolute gift— Enjoyment postponed — Possibility of being divested—Power of advancement by executors—Rights of any possible issue.]—Testator gave property absolutely with enjoyment postponed, but in event of death of beneficiary leaving issue the gift was to go to said issue. By another clause executors were given power to make advancement—Middleton, J., held, that beneficiary could not take any portion of estate immediately unless executors saw fit to make an advancement, which he recommended, as beneficiary was in poor health and unable to maintain himself. part of residuary estate though not mentioned.]—A testator directed a sale of his chattel property, and that the proceeds thereof should form part of his residuary estate, as should also the proceeds of his notes and mortgages, and "the whole" (of the residuary estate) should be divided, etc.:—Held, that money on deposit in a bank, though not mentioned, formed a part of the residuary estate. Where two or more documents bearing same date, purport to make a disposition of an estate, the probate issued by the Surrogate Court conclusively determines what documents constitute the last will of the testator, and it is not open to a High Court Judge, upon a motion for construction, to go behind the letters probate to determine what documents constitute the last will. Motion under Con. Rule 938 — Devise of dwelling — Structural changes made after date of will — No effect on will.]— Testator devised, to his adopted dauchter, a Mrs. Anderson, "the dwelling on the south side of Banfield street in which we now reside in the town of Paris," subject to the life estate of his widow. During the interval between the date of the will, October, 1907, and his death, December, 1909, he added two rooms to the original house, and removed a barn, which had been on the rear of the lot, to the front and converted it into another dwelling house. The executors moved under Con. Rule 928 for an order construing the will as to the disposition of the testator's property. Boyd, C., held, that the structural changes did not affect the testator's intention to deal with all his property and that the devisee took the whole premises on Banfield street, Re Stokes (1910). 16 O. Motion under Con. Rule 938—"Perstirpes"—Payment out of Court to Surrogate yuardian — Costa.]—A testator prior to his death made advances to each of his children, stating in his account book taat these advances were to be charged against the amount willed to them. One of the testator's sons predeceased him and the question arose as to whether that son's son was chargeable with the advances made to his father: — Held, that the expression "per sirpes" used by the testator shewed that he had considered the issue of a deceased son in their representative capacity and that the share of the infant must be reduced by the amount advanced to the father:—Held, also, that it was the settled policy of the Court, not to sanction the payment out of some $30,000, the share of the infant, to his Surrogate guardian, even though she is the mother and of ample means. Re Carter Estate (1909), 14 O. W. R. 1244, 1 O. W. N. 275, 20 O. L. R. 127.

Motion under Con. Rule 938—
"time for distribution hereinafter mentioned"— "Distribute" and "Pay."]— Motion under Con. Rule 938 for construction of the wil! of Charles Gurney. The questions submitted were: (1) Should the widow L. Gurney receive the interest upon the share of N. Gurney until he attains the age of 20 years? (2) What is meant by the words "the time for distribution hereinafter mentioned?":—Held, that A. Gurney was entitled, May Sth, 1900, to receive a part of the principal, that made it the duty of the trustees to lay aside $10,000 and pay her the remainder. The other half should not then be distributed, but should remain in the hands of the trustees.

has not come for the payment; that testator made the words "distribute" and "pay" synonymous in respect of principal by the second paragraph of this clause, and there is no reason why the "time for distribution" may not be the two times for distribution or payment. Until the death of the son, or until he attains the age of 20 years; that there was no reason why the widow should not receive the income unless and until after the son is 25 years, the executors should see fit to pay some part of the son's share to him under the provisions of the last paragraph of the clause. This answered both questions. Costs out of the estate. Re Gurney (1910), 15 O. W. R. 876.

Motion under Vendors and Purchasers Act — "Bequeath" — "D#vise.")—Motion by vendor under the Vendors and Purchasers Act, to have it declared that the vendor acquired a title to the land in question under the will of his wife, and could make a good title thereto. The words in the will were: "I hereby bequeath to my husband, George W. Booth, all my earthly goods and possessions:"—Held, that while the word "bequeath" in the language of wills is primarily applicable to a disposition of personal property, yet if the intention of the testator to be gathered from the whole will is to dispose of his real estate, the use of the word "bequeath" instead of the more appropriate word "devise" cannot defeat that intention, and that the language of above will disclosed an intention of the testatrix to give her real as well as her personal estate to her husband; therefore vendor had a good title so far as the will was concerned. Re Booth & Merriam (1910, 15 O. W. R. 759.

Motion under Vendors and Purchasers Act — Restraint upon alienation—Invalid—Object to title fails]—Middleton, J., held, that the words, "Directing that my said son not to sell or dispose of the said lands during his life," do not constitute a valid restraint upon alienation.—Blackburn v. Reading the will literally, no share was given to the widow, beyond a share of the interest payable to her, until the estate came to be divided, but it was obvious that it was the intention of the testator that the widow should share equally with the four children named, and that, on her death unmarried, such share should go to his son W., and on his death be equally divided among his children: Held, that the Chambers Judge, on application under O. 55, r. 2, was right in disregarding the literal reading of the will and in so construing it as to give effect to the obvious intention of the testator.—Held, also, that the Judge was right in construing the direction made by testator in relation to the division of his property among his children, as referring to the four children named. On default of appointment being made in favour of her step-son, then Janet Gibson should receive the estate upon attaining the age of 21 years: — Held, that Janet Gibson took a vested interest in the estate, and not being divested by the contingency provided for happening, it was further held that neither the heirs-in-law of the testatrix nor the said step-son had any interest in the estate. Judgment of Divisional Court (1908), 11 O. W. R. 868, reversing judgment of Falconbridge, C.J.K.B., at trial (1908), 11 O. W. R. 162, affirmed. McNeil v. Stewart (1909), 14 O. W. R. 651, 1 O. W. Payment of debts — Mixed fund — Specific bequest to widew of third of personalty.]—By clause 3 of his will, the testator directed all his real and personal property to be converted into money, and, by the first part of clause 4, directed payment of his debts, funeral and testamentary expenses, and expenses of administration; after payment of which, also by clause 4, he bequeathed to his wife "a one-third part of the proceeds of all my personal property and effects, in satisfaction and lieu of all claims she may have as my widow on my decease ":—Held, that the debts, etc., should be paid out of the fund raised by the conversion of the real and personal property into money, and that the bequest to the widow was a specific one, of one-third of his personal property, provided one-third was left after payment of debts. Period of distribution will - Survivors - Vested estates, 1-By clause 3 of his will the testator devised all his real estate to his executors and directed them to pay thereout his funeral and testamentary expenses, and that all the residue should be at the disposal of his wife for her maintenance during her lifetime, and that after her decease the real estate be converted into money and divided equally among his children or the survivors. But in the event of any of the children predeceasing the wife, his or her share was in the event of him or her leaving no issue, to be divided between the survivor's other heirs, etc. should the executors determine to sell the real estate during the wife's lifetime, the proceeds were to be invested for her ma'n-tenance during her life, and at her death to be divided equally among the three children, or the survivors, share and share alike but if the wife elected to take her third of the proceeds instead of the annual income from the whole, the remainder was to be divided in the same way among the children. The testator died in 1880, leaving a widow two sons, and a daughter. The widow died in 1901. The daughter died in 1892, leaving an infant child, who died in 1894. The two sons were still living. The executors sold the lands in the lifetime of the widow, and she did not elect :-Held, that the executors having acted with regard to the land under the provisions of clause 3, that clause only was to be looked at to ascertain the testator's intention, being a complete clause in itself. The period of distribution was that of the death of the widow, and the daughter's share went to the sons or survivors, and not to the daughter's child, vors, and not to the augmer's child, as claimed by the child's father. Period of distribution — Gifts to class — "Wife and child or children" — Life insurance policy - Declaration-Trust -Immediate vesting.]-A testator directed a certain investment, after the death of his son, "to be appropriated for the benefit of his wife and child or children:"-Held, that it being a gift that was not immediate, a second wife and also all the children coming into existence before the period of distribution were entitled to share in the bequest, as well as the children living at testator's death.-A testator, having a policy of life insurance which was made payable to his executors, subsequently executed a declaration indorsed on the policy, which stated that all advantages to arise from said policy should accrue for the benefit of all his children the policy to be held in trust for said children, who were to share equally. The children of the first wife claimed the whole fund. to the exclusion of the children of the said wife :-Held, that such a gift was, in effect, immediate, the right to the fruits of the policy vesting in the trustee at the moment of its delivery to him in trust, and the gift, being then complete, both as to the settlor and the children of the settlor, then in existence, vested in such children exclusively. Starr v. Merkel, 40 N. S. R. 23.

Period of vesting - "My heirs-atlaw"—Date of death of testator—Costs— Advancement—Annuity.]—The testator bequeathed the sum of £10,000 to trustees in trust to pay the income thereof to his wife for life, on her death to his only son for life, and on his death, without issue, to pay one-third of the £10,000 to his heirs-at-law. The son survived the widow and disposed of his estate by will. The plaintiffs, nephews of the testator, claimed as heirs-at-law of the testator: — Held, that the expression "my heirs-at-law" must be construed to mean the heirs-at-law of the testator at the time of his death, and consequently the gift over of one-third of the corpus passed under the will of the son .- Held, also, that where a legatee makes an un-successful claim, and the case involves difficulty owing to conflicting decisions or the acts of the testator, or if the legatee has a fair ground for making the claim, each party bears his own costs. Jost v. McNutt. 40 N. S. R. 41.—Further construction of will as to advancement to a son of the testator and the annuity payable to a legatee, considered. In re Jost, Crowe v. Bell, ib.

Perpetuity — Determinable fee — Wrongdoer — Doctrine of Cy-près.] — In 1810 Captain J. McDonald devised the Donaldson estate, of which the locus was part, to W. & A. McDonald in trust, to permit his daughter, Flora, to enter into possession and have the sole management of it, and, during her life, to receive the rents and profits free from the control of any husband she might marry, and after her death he directed the trustees to permit the rents and profits to be laid out by guardians appointed by her or (failing such appointment) by her brother, in bringing up the eldest and younger children of her first marriage, until the eldest son by her first marriage should arrive at the age of thirty years, and then to convey the estate to such eldest son and his heirs male. In 1821, after testator's death. Flora married plaintiff's father, and she and her husband continued in possession until his death in 1864. and she continued in possession until 1864, when she also died, intestate. The lessor of the plaintiff was their eldest son, and was over thirty years of age. There was no conveyance from the trustees to him. D. McIsaac, brother of defendant, had been in possession of the locus and paid rent to plaintiff's mother and to plaintiff and then abandoned, when defendant entered. For defendant, it was contended that the legal estate was in trustees, and no demise being laid in their name plaintiff must be non-suited. The plaintiff argued that the trustees took no estate under the demise, or if they took any it was only an estate in fee during Flora's life:—Held, Peters, J., that the trust in favour of the eldest son was void for perpetuity. — That the other trusts having been executed, and no further trust existing, the objects of the trust ceased, and, therefore, the trustees' estate also ceased, and the plaintiff, as one of the testator's heirs, had a right to recover, — That plaintiff was entitled by prior possession to maintain ejectment against the defendant, who was a wrongdoer,—That the doctrine of cy-prés would probably apply, and if so Flora would take an equitable estate tail, and on her death plaintiff would become legal tenant in tail, and as such would be entitled to recover. McDonnell v. McIsaac (1871), 1 P. E. I. R. 353.

Personal estate — Life interest with power of control.]—The testator by his will provided, "If I predecease my wife, I give and bequeath to her the whole control of my real and personal estate as long as she lives." He then made disposition of his real estate to take effect after the death of his wife, and of the stock and implements appertaining thereto, but did not otherwise dispose of his personal estate. As a fact his personal estate included a mortgage. His widow survived him only a few days and made no disposition of the mortgage: -Held, that the widow had only a life interest in the mortgage, with power of con-trol during her life; and, as she had made no disposition of it, whether entitled to do so or no (as to which, quare), it fell into the testator's undisposed of estate, and went according to the Statute of Distributions, the widow's next of kin taking the moiety to which she was entitled notwithstanding her life interest under the will. Power of advancement - Exercise of. by trustees — Division of estate.]—A testatrix by her will directed her trustees to pay an annuity to each of her three children, and empowered the trustees "from time to time to make such advances as they may deem proper out of the corpus or income or both of my estate for the benefit of or to my said children or any one or more of them either on their marriage or as an advancement in life or for any other purpose that may appear to them wise and reasonable." On the death of all the children of the testatrix the undisposed of residue was directed to be divided among their children then living, and in default of a grandchild living at the death of the last surviving child of the testatrix, then the undisposed of residue was to be divided among certain charities:—Held, that a division of the estate among the children made by the trustees in good faith two years after the death plainn to dant, etrine if so tail ecome ld be

Power of wife to continue business.] When a testator devises the usufruct of his estate to his wife and the ownership of his children and provides that a business he carried on may be continued by his wife, the usufructuary, with all the powers of a sole universal legatee, and she does so; the business is not merely her business, but is that of the testator's estate and the heirs of the ownership become liable for debts contracted by her on its account. Sewell v. Peters (1910), 20 Que. K. B. 255.

Powers of executors - Promissoru note—Advancing legatee's share.]—M. by his will gave a special direction for the winding up of his business and the division of his estate among a number of his children as legatees, and gave to his executors, among other powers, the power "to make, sign and indorse all notes that might be required to settle and liquidate the affairs of his suc-cession." By a subsequent clause in his will cession." By a subsequent clause in his will he gave his executors "all necessary right and powers at any time to pay to any of his said children over the age of thirty years, the whole or any part of their share, in his said estate for their assistance, either in establishment, or, in case of need, the whole, according to the discretion, prudence, and wisdom of said executors," etc. In an action against the executors to recover the amount of promissory notes given by the executors, and discounted by them as such in order to secure a loan of money for the purpose of advancing the amount of his legacy to one of the children who was in need of funds to pay personal debts:—Held, that the two clauses of the will referred to were separate and distinct provisions which could not be construed together as giving power to the executors to raise the loan upon promissory notes for the purpose of advancing the share of one of the beneficiaries under the will. Banque Jacques-Cartier v. Gratton, 20 C. L. T. 271, 30 S. C. R. 317.

"Principal of this money" — Application for payment out of Court — Per capita or per stirpes.]—A testator gave onethird interest on certain monies to one legatee and two-thirds of the interest to another, and further directed that at their death or the death of either of them "the principal of this money" should be divided between the members of the Marr family who would be his natural heirs:-Held, that the testator gave to each of the two legatees not an aliquot part of the interest upon the whole of the residuary estate, but the whole of the interest upon an aliquot part of the estate, and that the death of one of the legatees realised only one-third of the residue, the other two-thirds going on to earn interest for the other legatee. On another question, as to whether the division should be per capita or per stirpes, it was held that it should be per stirpes. In re Estate of Bint (1909), 14 O. W. R. 1270, 1 O. W.

Probate - Testamentary writings of different dates standing together.]—Testatrix died in 1908, leaving two properly executed wills, one dated 1875 and the other 1879. The two documents were found, after death, folded together. The first four paragraphs of each were in the same words. The fifth paragraph of each was the same, except that in the later document additional provision was made for paying off a mort-gage on a certain cottage. The sixth paragraph of the first document provided for graph of the hist document the division of the surplus of the estate (except articles therein specifically bequeathed) among three nieces of the testatrix. This paragraph was omitted from later document, which contained no direc-tion as to the disposition of the residue of the estate, nor any revocatory clause. The sixth and seventh clauses of later document disposed of the said cottage, and the sub-sequent paragraphs disposed of various articles of personal property, some to some persons to whom they were given by first document, while in other cases the destina-tion was changed. No pecuniary legacy was given by second document. The same executors were appointed in both. The later one was called "my last will." If the later one alone was admitted to probate, there would be an intestacy as to part of the estate as there was a considerable residue and no residuary gift:—Held, that the two documents together constituted the last will of the testatrix, and letters of administration with both documents annexed were properly granted. In re Estate of Bryan, [1907] P. 125, 76 L. J. P. 30, distinguished. —Judgment of Surrogate Court of Northumberland and Durham, affirmed. Re Molson, Ward v. Stevenson (1910), 21 O. L. R. 289.

Prohibition to alienate — Exception in favour of the heirs of the legatec—Meaning of the expression "heirs."]—The exception made by a testator, in prohibiting his legates to alienate, made in the following terms "except in any event in favour of their heirs" is intended to mean those to whom they leave their property by will. Favrau v. White, 37 Que. S. C. 305.

Property in trust — Motion for directions — Statute-burred creditors entitled.1—Motion by executor of the will of Alice Kerr, for an order interpreting the disposition clauses of the will under Con. Rule 1269. The property was bequeathed upon trust to pay the proceeds to her husband in such sums as the executor should see fit, and on his death to pay funeral and testamentary expenses. "And any just debts that he may owe, a list of which I hope my said husband will make out and leave, shewing those he desires to be paid." The Court ordered that the surplus in the hands of the executor be paid to the creditors of her husband, and the executor now asks if he should regard the Statute of Limitations.—Middleton, J.:—The Statute of Limitations applies only between debtor and creditor. When a third party creates a trust all within the trust take despite the Statute of Limitations having barred their rights as against the debtor. Re Alice Kerr (1911), 19 O. W. R. 642, 2 O. W. Residuary bequest - " Parties mentioned" in will-Application to beneficiaries only-Restriction to those in will but not in only—restriction to those in tent out not in codicils.]—A testator by his will, after a number of bequests, directed the conversion into cash of the residue of his real and personal estate, and, after the payment of the winding-up expenses, that it should be divided, share and share alike, among the different parties mentioned in my will who shall be living at the time of the winding-up of my estate;" and by a subsequent clause he appointed executors and trustees of his will: -Held, that the testator intended by the words "parties mentioned" those named as beneficiaries, and not persons whose names were mentioned only for the purpose of identifying the objects of his gifts or for the purpose of dividing the estate, as the executors; and that the parties intended to be benefited were those mentioned in the will and not those in the codicils. Residuary bequest - " Personal Effects" - Mortgage - Debts and expenses of administration - Ratable charge on real and personal estate,]-A will was in part as follows: "My will is first that all my just and lawful debts and funeral expenses be paid by my executors . . and the residue of my estate real and personal which may not be required for the payment of my said just debts and funeral expenses and the expenses attending the execution of this my will and the administration of my estate I give, devise and bequeath as follows: I give, devise and bequeath absolutely to my beloved wife all my furniture, books, plate and other personal effects and so long as she remains my widow but no longer I give, devise and bequeath to my said wife all my real property of which I may die possessed for her sole use and benefit so long as she may live "and then to his children. The estate consisted of household furniture and chattels a policy of life insurance, two parcels of real estate, and a mortgage on real estate:-Held, that the beneficial interest in the mortgage passed to the widow, under the words "other personal effects." These words occurring in a residuary gift were not to be read as restricted to things ejusdem generis with those described by the preceding words, the testator's intention being to dispose of the whole of his personal estate:-Held, also, following Re Thomas, 2 O. L. R. 660, that the testator's debts and funeral expenses and the expenses attending the execution of his will and the administration of his estate should be charged ratably upon his real estate and personal estate according to their respective values:—Devolution of Estates Act, R. Residuary bequest to children as a class — Death of one child before testator —Wills Act, a. 86 — Rights of issue of decased child.]—The testator gave the residue of his estate in equal shares to all his children except J., and directed that J.'s shares or a double share should go to M. At the time of the making of the will the testator's eight children were all alive and all survived him except M., who predeceased him leaving issue:—Held, that in the case of gifts to children as a class, as tenants in common, the shares of members of the class dying before the testator do not pass to the issue of those dying, as under s. 36 of the Wills Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 128, but go to the other members of the class, and the fact that one of the class is named specially makes no difference; and therefore the residue was divisible among the six surviving members of the class in equal shares. Re Moir, 9 O. W. R. SSS, 14 O. L, R. 541.

Residuary clause — Division of income among children—Nomination with substitution of grandchildren—Death of a child before period of distribution of corpus—Devolution upon next of kin.]—Testator devised income of residue of property to his children A. B. C. D. E., share and share alike, grandchildren to be substituted for a deceased child. Corpus to be divided equally between surviving two children. All the children survived. B. died a bachelor shortly after:—Held, that B.'s share of the income went to his next of kin. Re Stephens, 13 O. W. R. 998.

Residuary clause — Gift inter vivos — Declaration of trust—Testamentary gift—Wills Act (N.B.).]—Testator in the residuary clause of his will gave all the residue "excepting only such personal property found in his private cash box or in his box in certain bank vaults, and which he had already given to his daughter Hannah," to, etc.:—Held, that Hannah took nothing in these boxes except what was in her name, the testator not having perfected the gift in his lifetime. Residuary devise — Vested remainder class — Distribution of estate.]—A testator devised the residue of his property, both real and personal, to his son A. by a second marriage, and, in the event of the death of A. to the testator widow for her lifetime, this value of the control widow for her lifetime, this value of the control widow for her lifetime, this value of the control widow for her lifetime, this value of the control widow for her lifetime, this value of the control widow for her lifetime, this value of the control widow for her lifetime, the value of the control widow for her lifetime, the value of the survivors of them. A predeceased his mother. There being no survivors at the period of distribution:—Held, that on the death of the first family, subject to being defeated in favour of the survivors at the period of distribution (the death of the life tenant), but there being then no survivors, there was nothing to defeat it, and it remained the property of the representatives of the children. In the previous part of his will the testator referred to some of the children of the first family as having received in his lifetime all that they were then entitled to out of the estate.—Held, that the children mentioned were not thereby excluded from participation in the distribution of the remainder consequent upon the death of A. Ward v. McKay, 2 E. L. R. 353, 41 N. S. R. 282.

Residuary estate — Income.]—A testator gave to each of his children, on attaining the age of twenty-five years, an equal share of the income of the whole of his residuary estate, but until each child had attained the age of twenty-five years would have been his or her share of the income was to accumulate and form part of the testator's general estate: — Held, that the accumulations so directed were intended to be for the benefit of the general estate and not for the exclusive benefit of a particular child. Judgment of the Courr of Appeal for Ontario and Riddell, J. affirmed, with a variation, Fullford v. Hardy, C. R. [1909] A. C. 255, [1909] A. C. 570, 79 L. J. P. C. S.

Residue - "Survivors" - "Child"-Distribution of estate |-Testator, by his last will, after providing for his wife during her lifetime, and setting apart a sum of money to be invested after the wife's death for his two daughters, left his business and the residue of his estate to his two sons .-In case of the death of either or both of the daughters without issue, it was provided that her or their shares of the estate should become part of the residue thereof, and be divided equally among the survivors, and the issue of any child who should then be de-ceased. One of the daughters having died without leaving issue:—Held, that the use of the words "survivors" and "child" in the clause in question excluded the idea that the share of the deceased daughter was to go to the two sons as part of the residue of the estate, and indicated an intention, on the part of the testator, that this particu-lar part of the residue was to be divided equally among the surviving children of the testator and the issue of any deceased child; and that it was only subject to this disposition that all the rest and residue of the estate was to go to the two sons exclusively. In re Mackinlay, 38 N. S. R. 254.

Restraint against allenation — "The property that shall remain." — Testator directed his estate to be divided between his two daughters, Cecilia and Mary Ann, after providing an annual income for his widow. The widow died in 1936. He further directed that in case either daughter should die without leaving issue, then her share should go to her sister, and in case both daughters died without leaving issue then her whole estate should go to the Roman Catholic Episcopal Corporation. Cecilia married one Brown and is now a widow Mary Ann married one Tobin and died in 1996, leaving a daughter Cecilia Mattida. Before Cecilia married the executors of the estate conveyed to her certain lands in question. Cecilia Conveyed these lands to one J. Hamilton Burgar. The Roman C. E. Cor, and Cecilia Mattida Tobin both filed adverse claims and claimed to be contingently interested in the event of Cecilia Brown dying leaving no issue:—Held, that neither the Roman C. E. Co. nor Cecilia Mattida Tobin both filed adverse claims and claimed to be contingently interested in the event of Cecilia Brown dying leaving no issue:—Held, that neither the Roman C. E. Co. nor Cecilia Mattida Tobin bad sin question, as the devisees were intended by the testator to have power of disposition over their property during their lives subject only to the limited restriction above mentioned, and as Cecilia having exercised that power, it could not be part of "the property that shall remain" at her decease. Re Burgar (1900), 140. W. R. 772.

Restraint upon alienation.]—Testator willed land to two grandchildren as tenants in common, without power to incumber the same during the lifetime of either, but with power of disposing of their interest to each other, but to no other person.
One purchased the share of the other, and sought to quiet his title to the land:—Held, that the restraint as to mortgaging in the life of the devisees was valid, but he restraint as to disposal of the land except from the one to the other was valid. Re Buckley (1910), 15 O. W. R. 329.

Kennedy, s. 13 O. W. R. 684, an order for had no interest in the sale of the land, the gift being void for perpetuity, nor in the Rights of wife — Usufructuary or institute — Action by heirs — Inconsistent claims—Election.]—The respondents charged against the appellant waste of certain of her deceased husband's estate, rights in which she possessed under his will, and neglect to secure the appointment of a "curator to the substitution," and it appeared that there was doubt whether under the will she was a usufructuary or an "institute;" and claimed, in case the Court should decide that the will only created a simple right of usufruct, the extinction of such right, or, in the alternative, that the estate be vested absolutely or qualifiedly in the heirs called by the will to succeed her; and, in case the Court should decide that there was a substitution, that the appellant might be "assufetle à souffrir l'encoi en possession des appelé à titre de séquestre, et que tel séquestre soit ordonné par le jugment à intercei;" and other relief appropriate to the situation:—Held, that the relief claimed was inconsient and contradictory, and that the respondents should be required to exercise an option as to which relief they would claim. Hurtubise v. Décarie, 13 Que. K. B. 306.

Roman Catholie bishop — Corporation sole—Decise of personal and coclesiastical property — Construction.]—The will of the Roman Catholic Bishop of St. John, N.B., a corporation sole, contained the following general devise of his property:—"Although all the church and ecclesiastical and charitable properties in the diocese are and should be vested in the Roman Catholic Bishop of St. John, New Brunswick, for the benefit of religion, education, and charity, in trust according to the intention and purposes for which they are used and established:"—yet to meet any want or mistake, I give and devise and bequeath all my estate, real and personal, wherever situated, to the Roman Catholic Bishop of St. John, New Brunswick, in trust for the purposes and intentions for which they are used and established:"—Held, affirming the judgment in 36 N. B. R. 229, that the private property of the testator, as well as the ecclesiastical property vested in him as bishop, was devised by this clause, and the fact that there were specific devises of personal property for other purposes did not alter its construction. Travers v. Casey, 24 C. L. T. 169, 34 S. C. R. 419.

Rule in Shelley's case applied.] —
Testator, by his last will, devised to his sister, M. B., one-half of a lot of land described "to have and to hold...for and during her natural life, and after her decease to go to and be enjoyed by her heirs." M. B. died in testator's lifetime:—Held, there being nothing in the will to shew that the testator used the word "heirs" in any other than its ordinary technical sense, that the rule in Shelley's case applied; that the devise to M. B. was a fee simple, and lapsed upon her decease before testator. Atkinson v. Purdy, 43 N. S. R. 274.

" cash, Wills Act, s. 21—Lapsed legacy—Compensation to executors.]—1. Notwithstanding s. 21 of the Wills Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 174, a devise of land specifically described fails when the testator has, after making the will, entered into an agreement to sell the land, although no part of the purchase money has been received during his lifetime, and the devisee takes no interest in either the land or the purchase money.—Ross v. Ross, 20 Gr. 203, followed.—2. Unpaid purchase money of land sold by the testator in his lifetime will not pass under a bequest of "all cash, negotiable notes, and mortgages," if there were, at the time of his death, mortgages which would answer the description in the will.—3. A legacy lapses if the legatee dies before the testator, unless it can be regarded as a legacy to a class.—4. The executors in this case should be allowed as compensation the following commissions: one half of one per cent. on cash in the bank, three per cent. on collections of all other sums, and one per cent. on all payments out. Re Ferguson Estate, 18 Man. L. R. 532, 10 W. L. R. 637.

Separate gifts — Rule in Shelley's Case — Lien for improvements.]—Action for the recovery of land, into the possession of which the defendants had entered under an agreement of sale made between them and the plaintiff. The plaintiff alleged a title in fee to the land by a conveyance from a devisee under a will as follows; "I give and devise to my grandson J. H. the last half after his death I devise the same to his children, lawfully begotten, in equal shares; should he die without a child living at the time of his death, then I devise said land to my son G. for the term of his natural life, and after his death the life of his natural life, and after his death to his children in equal shares, and if G. skould die without a child living at the time of his death, then, "&c., &c., J. H. was alive at the time of his action, aged 50 years, and had one child, a daughter, born after the death of the testator:—Held, that neither the rule in Wid's case nor that in Shelley's case applied. There were plainly two gifts, one to J. H. for life, and the other to his children in equal shares, which carried the remainder in fee to the child, or children, subject to be divested if he died without a child living at his death. The plaintiff, therefore, could not make title. The defendants were entitled to a lien for improvements, and for purchase money paid on account, with interest, less an occupation rent. Young v. Denike, 22 C. L. T. 27, 2 O. L. R. 723.

—Appeal from the judgment of Laurence, J., ordering calls on shares to be paid out of the general funds of the estate. Reported sub nom. In re Longworth, S. E. L. R. 235. McDonald v. Eastern Trust Co. (N. S. 1910), 9 E. L. R. 173.

Speaking from death - Stock in trade "Now" — Household furniture—Books— Legacy—Incomplete words.]—A testator gave all his estate of which he might die possessed in manner following: "to my sister E. the house and lands with all household furniture and all stock and trade now in house and out of house, with all book accounts now due to me, wherever found, for her own use and benefit forever, and out of this she shall pay $100 to my brother W." At his death, and when he made the will, the testator was the keeper of a country village shop, and his possessions consisted of a house and lot, where he carried on his business and lived, the capital employed in his business, his stock of goods, and what was owing to him by his customers, and his household and other effects, consisting of furniture, books, horses, harness, carriages, and sleighs. Shortly after he made his will be sold his house and lot and business and afterwards re-purchased them :-Held, that although the gifts of the household furniture, the stock in trade, and the book debts, were specific bequests, nevertheless, being specific gifts of that which is generic, of that which may be increased or diminished, the will carried the household furniture, the stock in trade, and the book debts, as they existed at the time of the testator's death; and the use of the word "now" did not limit the gift to them as they existed at the date of his will. This was confirmed by the words of general bequest at the commencement, as also by certain other features of the will.—Held, also, that in the gift of the "stock in trade" the money of the testator on deposit in the bank and cash in hand and a quantity of cordwood for use in the shop and dwelling-house, two horses, harness, and vehicles, were embraced.—Held, also, that a number of books belonging to the testator passed as part of the household fur-niture. The incomplete words of the gift to one brother were insufficient. In re Holden, 23 C. L. T. 52, 5 O. L. R. 156, 2 O. W. R. 11.

Specific bequests of shares — Change in shares by statute — Rights of legatees. Re Thompson, 3 O. W. R. 627.

Specific devise — Charge of "dobts" and testamentary expenses in residuary jund — Municipal taxes — Looke King's Act. |— The testatrix made a will in 1896 leaving certain lands to devisees therein named. Between the date of the will and her death, in 1900, municipal and provincial taxes had accumulated on the devised lands. The persons taking the lands under the will claimed the right to have the taxes paid out of the executors from the other parts of the estate, on the ground that the residuary fund was, by the will, expressly made liable as a fund for the payment of her funeral and testamentary expenses and debts: — Held, that the succession duty payable under the Succession Duty Act, R. S. R. C. 1897 c. 175, in respect of the real estate of a deceased person, did not form part of the testamentary expenses of the deceased, but was chargeable against the different properties devised under the will.—2 That the taxes due by deceased were payable out of the residuary estate, and not chargeable against the different properties devised under the will.—3. To allow taxes to fall into arrears does not charge land by way of mortgage so as to bring it within the operation of Locke King's Act, 17 & 18 Vict, c. 113. In re Watkins, 12 B. C. R. 97, 3 W. L. R. 471.

Specific devise - Residuary devise Bequest of personal estate — Provision for payment of debts, etc., "out of my estate"— Incident of—Bequest of chattels under conditional sales agreement — Devolution of Estates Act.]—A testator bequeathed all his personal estate to his son, to whom he also specifically devised a farm, and he devised the residue of his real estate to his executors upon certain trusts, and directed that the debts and funeral and testamentary expenses should be paid "out of my estate:"—Held, that the whole personal estate was primarily chargeable with such payments, and that the balance remaining unsatisfied should be borne by all the real estate pro ratā.—Sec-tion 7 of the Devolution of Estates Act pro-vides that "the real and personal property of a deceased person comprised in any residuary devise or bequest shall (except so far as a contrary intention shall appear from his will or any codicil thereto), be applicable ratably, according to the respective values, to the payment of his debts:"—Held, that this section does not apply where there is not both real and personal property comprised in the residuary gift, and, as the bequest of the testator's personal property was not in its nature residuary in the original sense, the section did not apply to it. — Among other personal property bequeathed were a threshing machine and engine under the usual conditional sales agreement: Semble, that, as the gift was in no sense a specific legacy, these chattels were not exonerated from the liens created by such agreement at the expense of the real estate. Re Moody, 12 O. L. R. 10, 7 O. W. R. 808.

Specific legactes — Bequest of residue— Condition — Application of,]—There were two distinct dispositions in one clause of a will. In the first part of the clause the testator gave specific legacies of $200 each to five of his children, and in the second part he divided the residue of the moneys and book debts which he should leave at his decease among his ten children and the chil dren of Malvina, a decased daughter. At the end of the clause he added: "But on condition that the children of the deceased Malvina and Amabel and Joseph (how were two of the five specified legatees) shall renounce the succession of the late Dame Julie Leclerc, their mother and grandmother, in order that they may be on a footing of equality with my other children, and that of the said Amabel and Joseph and the children of the said Malvina claim the succession of the said dame, their mother and grandmother, the property which I have given them above shall pass to my other children above lastly named:"—
Held, that this condition did not apply to both dispositions, but only to the latter disposition, namely, of the residue. Belanger v. Belanger, 10 Que. K. B. 207.

Specific legacy — Lapsed legacy—Absorption in residue—Distribution per capita—Sale of lands—Payment of incumbrances and other debts. Re Feaver, 9 O. W. R. 769.

Statute interpreting will — Construction—Income of estate—Saisissabilit.)
—A statute interpreting or modifying a will should be construed as a codicil to such will. If such statute detaches from a considerable sum, to be divided later among the heirs, a certain sum to be used as income, without declaring that the latter sum shall be regarded as a alimentary, the sum so detached will not be insaisissable, even if the capital would be. Union Bank v. Ogiteie, 4 Que. P. R. 157.

Subject of devise — After-acquired property.]—Testator by his daughter "the homestead farm on which I reside," and the residue of his real estate to his wife for life. After the date of the will he acquired other real estate, including land known as lot A., upon which he resided at the time of his death. By s. 19 of c. 77. C. S. N. B., "every will shall be construed with reference to the real and personal estate comprised therein, as if it had been executed immediately before the death of the testator, unless a contrary intention shall appear by the will:"—Held, that lot A. was not included in the devise to the daughter. Ayer v. Estabrooks, 22 C. L. T. 328, 2 N. B. Eq. R. 392.

Substitution — Annuity — Accumulations.]—A testator set apart a fund as a provision for his wife, and also for his children until majority or marriage. He gave the residue of his estate to his children living at his death, and directed that it should be divided on the death of all of them. He further directed that from majority or marriage each child was to receive the revenue derivable from his share, limited to $6,000 a year, each child being charged with a substitution in favour of his or her children:—Held, that the annuity of each child was a charge on the revenue of his own share and its arrears, not on the total revenue of the estate.—2. That each child was entitled from the testator's death to an equal share of the net revenue current and accumulated, without regard to the benefits which during minority he received from the fund set apart or under other clauses of the will.—3. That the substitution was confined to the share of each child in the capital of the residue, and did not extend to the accumulation of its revenue. Beaudry v. Barbeau, [1900] A. C.

Substitution — Clauses creating.] —
The testator bequeathed to his wife all his property it be enjoyed by her during her natural lifetime;" by the next clause of his will be bequeathed to his brothers and sisters all his property "to be enjoyed by them in absolute property and ownership," share and share alike, but only from and after the decease of his wife. The testator's wife survived him, and at the time of her death. It was the only one of the brothers and stars and the sum of the brothers and stars of the sum of the brothers and stars will be sufficiently and the sum of the brothers and stars will be sufficiently and the sum of the brothers and stars will be sufficiently and the sum of the decease of the will, brought this action for one-sixteenth of the estate, claiming that the will gave the widow only the usufruct, and that the brothers and sisters of the testator were bequeathed the naked ownership:—Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Review, that the will created a substitution, and that B, as the sole survivor of the substitutes at the death of the widow (the institute), was entitled to the whole estate. Ryan v. Ryan, 23 C. L. T. 116.

Substitution — Degree — Accretion—Partition.]—In the case of a will containing the following clauses:—"As to . . . ali that I will leave at my death . . I direct and desire that it be divided into as many equal shares as I shall leave children at my death, issue of my marriage and that each of my said children shall receive only one-half of the revenues of such shares during his or he life-time shares during his or he life-time shares of my property shall, at the death of each of my said children, revert to their children born in lawful wedlock and be substituted from descendants to descendants to the last degree allowed by law, with this provision that I direct and desire that at each succession to or substitution of my property, partition shall be effected, as far as possible, between each of my descendants in such a way that it will be possible to know and distinguish the share or part of my property of which each of my said descendants is to have the enjoyment of the revenues during his or her life-time, the whole subject to the clauses and provisions hereinafter mentioned," and when one of the testator's children dies without leaving issue, his share in the estate does not pass by accretion to the other legatees but such share passes to such other legatees but such share passes to such other legatees but runsmission in such a way as to form one degree in the substitution. Masson v. Masson (1910), 10 R. L. n. S. 244.

Substitution — Legacies of usufruct and concrating — Intervention — Costa, — In construing a will regard must be had chiefly to the intention of the testator as subsets to the document reads as whole, the concept of the document reads as whole, the concept of the document reads as whole, the concept of th share of an estate from the executors, he cannot in an issue so raised seek for a judicial pronouncement on his own pretended rights against the parties defendant.—3. An order to pay costs of litigation respecting a will and its construction out of the estate, will not be made unless it appears clearly to the Court that it was instituted and carried on for the benefit of all parties interested. Bond v. Macfarlane, 29 Que. S. C. 220.

substitution — Opening — Legacy to substitutes — Per stirpes or per capita.]—By his will, which created a substitution, the testator bequeathed the usufruct of all his property to his widow, and after her death to his surviving children, and then gave it to the legitimate children of his children, to enjoy and have in equal parts and development of the complex of Substitution of legatees.] — In a legacy to the children of the testator with substitution in favour of their children, by roots, the provision whereby in the event of the death of one of the institutes without children or leaving children who die in minority, his share will revert to his brothers and sisters, will not prevent, if the death of an institute is followed by that of one of his minor children, another child surviving, the share of such deceased minor child from accruing to its legal heirs, subject to the resolutory condition, if it occurs, resulting from the surviving child dying during minority without leaving children. Turcofte v. Skelly (1910), 38 Que. S. C. 506.

Substitution or usufruet.] — In the interpretation of a will, if it is doubtful whether a certain provision creates a substitution or a legacy of usufruct and bare property, the decision must be in favour of a substitution. 2. There is a substitution when there are in one provision two successive gifts, a period of time between, and a successive order. 3. If the testator in disposing of his property does not say, whether it is absolutely or by way of usufruct, it will be held to be absolutely. 4. The following clause in a will creates a substitution: "I will, devise, and bequeath unto my beloved wife . . . all my property and estate . . to be enjoyed by her only during her natural lifetime. I will, devise, and bequeath unto . . my beloved brothers and sisters all my property and estate . . to be enjoyed by them in absolute property and ownership, share and slare alige, but only from and after the decease of my said wife." Cabana v. Latour, 24 Que S. C. SS.

Succession to estate of alien-Laws of England as to who are aliens. 1-In 1831 an alien could not devise by last will and testament. The succession of an alien then devolved to his grandchildren, natural born British subjects, to the exclusion of his own children who were aliens. Who is an alien' is a question to be decided by the law of England, but when alienage is established the consequences which result from it are to be determined by the law of Canada. If an alien dies, without issue, his lands belong to the Crown, but if he leaves children, some born in Canada, and others not, the former exclude the Crown, and then all the children inherit as if they were natural born subjects. Where an alien has a son who is also an alien, the children of the latter inherit from the grandfather to the exclusion of their father. Although an Act of the Legislature passed after judgment rendered in a Court of original jurisdiction may affect the rights of a party as they existed at the institution of a suit, this circumstance cannot be taken advantage of in the appeal from the judgment. Judgments of the Court of Appeal for Lower Canada, and of the Court of King's Bench at Montreal, affirmed. Donegani v. Donegani (1835), C. R. 1 A. C. 50.

Tenant for life — Reneval of lease—Carrying on business—Profits—Account.]—A testator devised and bequeathed all his property real and personal to his wife, "to be used and enjoyed by her for and during the term of her natural life and widowhood, and after her decease or marrying again" to named members of his family. At the time of his death he was carrying on business as a brickmaker upon premises leased by him, he having the right to take clay. The widow, with the assent and co-operation of members of the family, carried on the business and developed it, using the plant and renewing it when necessary, and when the lease fell in some years after the testator's death she took a new lease of the same premises, and at her death the business had increased very much in value:—Held, that the personal estate should have been converted into money and not used in specie by the widow, but that having been so used the increased value of the business enured to the benefit of the remaindermen, and did not form part of the widow's estate. Judgment of a Divisional Court, 32 O. R. 36, 20 C. L. T. 255, affirmed. Wakefield v. Wakefield, 21 C. L. T. 367, 2 O. L. R. 33.

Terms of codicils-Republication of will Substituted gift - Intention - Extent of rule—Incidents of legacy—Effect on residuary clause.]—General rule of construction. Where a legacy is given by codicil as a mere substitution for another, providing it is consistent with the scope of the rest of the will, the substituted gift is subject to the incidents and conditions of the original, although it is not so expressed in the testamentary instrument.

A testator died having made a will and two By the will he left certain sons specific legacies and also a proportionate part of the residue, bearing ratio to the specific legacies; by the codicil he left his sons specific legacies of greater dimensions in the place and stead of the amount bequeathed in the will. In the second codicil he revoked the sums granted to one son, but the revocation was not to apply to the residuary paragraph in the will. In all other respects the will was confirmed.—Middleton, J., held that the giving of the increased legacy by the codicil did not in any way alter or enlarge the legatees' rights under the residuary clause legatees rights under the residuary clause—Divisional Court affirmed the judgment of Middleton, J. In re Courtauld, 1882, W. N. 185, 47 L. T. R. 647, distinguished. Re Hunter (1911), 19 O. W. R. 338, 2 O. W. N.

Testator gave the sole use of a farm to his widow until his son John became 21. John then was to get the east of and half of all property on farm at that time. They might then work farm together, or if widow was tired of working the place, then John was to have the full management, but was to support his mother during widowhood, aid his four sisters until of age or married, at which time each sister was to receive £10, etc.:—Held, (1) that the claims the sisters had to legacies under the will were barred by Statute of Limitations. (2) That the three sisters had to legacies under the will were barred by the statute. (3) That the son and the sister who had remained out of possession for the statutory period were barred by the statute. (3) That the son and the sister who had remained in possession were entitled to a two-fifths interest of the farm as tenants in common and to a three-fifths interest of the estate pur autre vie of the married sisters. (4) That John was entitled to remainder in fee. Judgment of Falconbridge, C.J.K.B. (1909), 13 O. W. R. 86, varied. McKinnon v. Spence (1909), 14 O. W. R. 1144, 1 O. W. N. 240; 20 O. W. R. 51.

Testator's children to take equal stares in the residue at majority—Accumulations of income during minority of dones.]—The testator gave to each child an equal share of the income of the whole of his residuary estate subject to the provision "that until each child attains the age of twenty-five years what would have been his or her share is to accumulate and form part of my general estate:"—Held, that according to the true construction of this provision the accumulations of each share during conventional minority were in-prov to n and at p sonal posed tended to increase the general residuary estate of which each child was entitled to a share at twenty-five and not for the exclusive benefit of the sharer. Fullord & Hardy, (1909) A. C. 570.

Testator's intentions — Annuity to widow — "Shall pass unclouded"—"Condition of title."]—Testator willed lands to his son for life subject to an annuity to his widow:—Held, that after the death of said son, the widow had no charge upon the lands for her annuity on the ground that the only interest charged with the annuity was that which the son received. The charge could not extend to that which he did not receive, viz., the reversion which passed to his children, "unclouded by condition of title." See 1 O. W. R. 427. Re Padget (1900), 14 O. W. R. 1008, 1 O. W. N. 202.

Trust — Annuity — Request — Transfer of fund.]—The testantor by his will conveyed property to trustees upon trust to pay to his daughter an annuity of $1,000 during her life, and on her death to invest the securities set apart to pay the annuity and to divide such investment among his daughter's children on the youngest coming of age. The will then provided that should the daughter be alive on her youngest child coming of age, the daughter, if she should see fit, might have and receive from the trustees the fund set apart to yield the annuity, and the same should be absolutely assigned to her, free from all control of her husband. The youngest child came of age in the lifetime of the daughter, who died without making a request to have the fund transferred to her:—Held, that there was an absolute trust in favour of the children, which would not have been defeated had the request been made. In re Fisher Trusts, 3 E. L. R. 492, 3 N. B. Eq. 536.

Trust — Cheritable — Creation of bishopric — Contingency — If happens — Valid transfer to another charity — After 25 years — Rule against perpetuities — Effect of vill.]—Testator left an estate of $99,000, of which $44,000 was in real estate and Hudson Bay Co. shares. This latter sum was left in trust to supply an income for a Bishop of Cornwall, or if such a Bishop was not elected within 25 years after the testator's death, the money was to go to the University of Bishop's College, at Lennoxville, for the endowment of a Professorship of Natural Science.—Boyd, C., held, that there was an immediate gift for charitable uses delayed as to the actual conveyance till the secured debts were paid, and, therefore, vested at the death and effective in law, though the particular application of the gift might be in suspense for 25 years, or might never take effect at all, in which contingency there was a valid transfer to another charity at the end of 25 years: That the will did not offend against the rule concerning perpetuities. Re Mountain (1910), 17 O. W. R. 448, 2 O.

Trust — Conditional devise.]—A will provided as follows: "I give and bequeath to my beloved wife, Margaret McIsane, all and singular the property of which I am at present possessed, whether real or personal or wherever situated, to be by her disposed of amongst my beloved children as she may judge most beneficial for herself and them, and also order that all my just and lawful debts be paid out of the same:"

and appointed executors:—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, 38 N. S. R. 60, that the widow took the real estate in fee, with power to dispose of it and the personalty whenever she deemed it was for the benefit of herself and her children to do so. McIsaac v. Beaton, 26 C. L. T. 188, 37 S. C. R. 143.

Trust — Next of kin.]—H., by his last will, after bequeathing certain legacies, made the following bequests:—"I give and bequeath seven hundred dollars to A. of Charlottetown, in the Province of Prince Edward Island, to pay any money that I may leave an order for, and also to pay my funeral expenses, also to pay himself for his time and trouble." There was no residuary clause in the will. He appointed B. and C. executors of his will; they renounced, and administration cum testamento annece was granted to A. Testator left no order to pay any money, and A. claimed the balance of the 8700 after payment of the funeral expenses:—Held, that A. was a trustee of the sum of $700, and after payment of debts, funeral and testamentary expenses, and of a reasonable sum for his trouble in carrying out the trusts of the will, he hel arrying out the trusts of the will, he held arrying out the trusts of the will, he held arrying out the trusts of the will, he held arrying out the trusts of the rest of kin. Trainor v. Landrigen, 21 C. L. T. 515.

Trust — Obligation — Restraint against mortgaging — Trusts.] — Testator willed property to applicant "with the wish that he may keep the same free from mortgage as a summer residence for himself and children."—Middleton, J., held, that the above words created no obligation or trust upon applicant; that he was owner in fee and could sell it. The question as to the validity of the provision against mortgaging was not considered as applicant desired to sell the property. Re Williams, [18871 2 Ch. 12, specially referred to. Re Bolster (1910), 16 O. W. R. 980, 2 O. W. N. 54.

Trust — Precatory trust — Power — Execution of,] — A testator whose mother owned an estate for life in a farm in which he had the remainder in fee, by his will devised to her his interest in the farm "to be disposed of as she may deem most fit and proper for the best interest of my brothers and sisters." The mother, after his death, conveyed the farm in fee simple to one of his sisters, the expressed consideration being one dollar and natural love and affection, and the deed containing no reference whatever to the will, or anything indicating on it face that it was excited that it was not necessary to determine whether the mother took absolutely, or whether, if she had not taken absolutely, a trust was created or a power, inasmuch as, even if a trust was created in the mother, the conveyance by her operated, and was intended to operate, as an execution of the trust, although the whole of the property was granted to one daughter only. Pettypicce v. Turley, 13 O. L. R. 1, 8 O. W. K. 617.

of A. P., read in conjunction with the provisions of the will and codicile, is to declare the deed of partition between the beneficiaries thereunder final and definitive and not merely provisional; the judgment of the Court of King's Bench upon that statute has no other effect. Neither the statute to be the statute of the court of king's Bench upon that statute has no other effect. Neither the statute nor the judgment sanctions the view that the will and codicils constitute more than one substitution; there was but one substitution created thereunder in favour of all the joint legatees, and consequently accretion takes place among them, within the meaning of Art. 885, C. C., in the event of any legacy lapsing, under the terms of the will upon the death of an institute without issue prior to the opening of the substitution. In such case, the share of the institute dying without issue devolves upon the other joint legatees, as well in usufruct as in absolute ownership, and consequently, none of the institutes or substitutes have the right of disposing of any portion of the testator's estate, by will or otherwise, prior to the date of the opening of the substitution. Deferted v. Goddard, 66 L. J. P. C. 90, distinguished. Judgment in Prévost v. Prévost, 28 Que. S. C. 257, reversed. Prévost v. Lamarche, 28 S. C. R. 1.

Usufruct legacy.)—The legacy of an usufruct, made in express terms, cannot be considered as creating a substitution from the sole fact that the clause whereby the testator disposes of the ownership of his estate concludes with the words "and at the death or re-marriage of my said wife (the usufructuary), etc.," particularly when, considered as a whole, the will sufficiently constitutes a legacy of an usufruct. Douglas v. Fraser (1910), 20 Que, K. B. 14s.

Care of testator's grave — Residue to executors — Charitable trust — Object unspecified — Void for uncertainty.]—Motion by executors under C. R. 938, for construction of will of John Cronin. Clause 3 of will directed his executors to purchase a lot in St. Mary's Cemetery, Kingston, for testator's grave, and set aside a sufficient sum to provide for its perpetual care: — Held, that this direction was valid and that a sum reasonably sufficient for the purpose mentioned could be appropriated by the executors out of said estate, or if the governing body of the cemetery would undertake the perpetual care of graves within its limits, then the executors could pay to them such reasonable sum as might be required for such care of testator's grave. Clause 7 of the will gave the residue of the estate to the executors absolutely, to be used as they deemed best, trusting that they spend it upon some charitable object, but leaving their discretion absolutely unfettered as to that.—Held, that the testator did not intend to give the residue of his estate to the executors for their commission. Clause 7 should be construed so that the residue should be absolutely used upon and for some charitable object or objects. No trust being created in favour of any particular charity, the gift of residue was not a good charitable bequest, but void for uncertainty. Costs of all parties out of the estate. Re Cronin (1910), 15 O. W. R. $19.

Trusts — General intention of testator — Costa, —Testatrix by her will gave an annuity to M. so long as she remained single. M., before the date of the will, had been married and divorced a vinculo to the knowledge of the testatrix:—Held, that M. was entitled to the annuity. The testatrix also made provision for establishing a home for old ladies, B. to live at this home for her life. It turned out that the funds to establish this home were inadequate. B. was given under the special circumstances herein $300 until the home was established. Morrison v. Bishop of, Fredericton, 7 E. L. R.

Trusts — Provision for the appointment of new truste — Construction — Person to exercise powers — Time for exercising.]— A testator appointed his two brothers executors and trustees of his will, and provided that in the event of the death, liability, or refusal to act of either of them, "then my surviving brothers and sisters or a majority of them shall by an instrument in writing . . . appoint a new trustee, etc. The testator died in 1899, and probate was granted to the two brothers, one of whom died in the same year. In 1900, by an instrument in writing, a majority of the brothers and sisters of the testator then living (one other brother having also died in 1899, after the testator) appointed the plaintiff a trustee in place of the deceased executor:—Held, that the appointment was valid. The power to appoint a new trustee became operative in case either of the events provided for happened, whether in the lifetime of the testator or after his death; and it was the survivors of the brothers and sisters at the time of exercising the power, or a majority of them, who had the power to appoint. Saunders v. Bradley, 23 C. J. T. 263, 6 O. L. R. 250, 2 O. W. R. 697.

Use of property for life — Power of disposition — Intention of testator.]—Testator by his will gave to his wife C. M. the use, rents, and proceeds of all his remaining real estate, personal property, mortgages, notes, etc., for her own use during her life-time. At the death of his wife he devised the house and contents to A. M. for her own the death of A. M., he devised to his nephews and benefit during her lifetime, and at the death of A. M., he devised to his nephews used as any money or securities. A will be any money or securities and the death of A. M. He devised to his nephews wife, C. M. ""—Held, that the disposal of any property which might remain over at the death of C. M. shewed an intention to give C. M. the disposition of the property during her lifetime. A daughter died during her mother's lifetime, but after the youngest mother's lifetime, but after the youngest child had attained her majority, leaving a husband surviving her, but no issue:—Held, that the children being referred to as a class and not nominatively, as each respectively attained majority, their respective shares became vested; but that any child who died short of that age took nothing, and that the deceased daughter's share was equally divisible between her husband and next of kin. Vested estate - Trust - Condition-Intestacy.]—The testator by his will bequeathed all his property to his executors upon certain trusts. One bequest was a upon certain trusts. One bequest was a sum of $20,000, "in trust that the trustees, etc., do pay the income and interest thereof "unto his daughter, H. M., wife of E. C. M., half-yearly, "during her natural life," and it was further provided as follows:
"And from and after the decease of my said daughter, H. M. I will see $20,000. And from and after the decease of my said daughter, H. M., I will and declare that the said trustees, or the survivor of them, etc., do, and shall pay and distribute said princi-pal sum of $20,000 above mentioned to, between, and among the children of my said daughter H. M., and their legal representatives, respectively, equally, share and share alike, to their own use and uses forever." H. M.'s son, S. K. M., was living at the death of the testator, but died soon afterwards, intestate and unmarried. H. M.'s other children died before the testator: Held, that the share, or estate in remainder, vested in S. K. M. at the testator's death; that the trust existed and was declared, and the other words were a mere direction to pay from and after the life tenant's death.— The Court is always slow to construe the words of a testator as importing a condition, if a different meaning can fairly be given to them. In construing a will the Court will prevent an intestacy if the language will reasonably admit of that being done. So, the Court always favours a vesting. Caie v. Moulton, 40 N. S. R. 308.

share to each upon their respectively attaining twenty-one or marrying. The income, and if necessary part of the corpus, was to be expended upon maintenance and education, and regard was to be had to this necessity in paying over any share. If none of his children survived the testator, the estate was to go to charitable institutions:—Held, that the direction to divide could not be separated from the direction to pay, and that consequently the shares did not vest, but the share of a child who survived the testator, and died before the time for payment arrived, was divisible among the children who survived until that time. Void devise of life estate — Acceleration of remainder.]—A testartix bequeathed to her adopted daughter "the whole of my real and personal estate for her sole and only use absolutely, and in the event of her decease without heirs" she directed that "whatever may remain of my real and personal estate shall go to my nephew for his sole use and disposal." The adopted daughter was one of the witnesses to the will:—Held, following Aplin v. Stone, [1994] I Ch. 543, that the will must be construed before the effect of the devisee being a witness could be considered; that on the true construction of the will the decease of the adopted daughter before the testartix was the event contemplated; that "without heirs" meant without children lawfully begotten; and that there was no direct gift to hers or children.—Held, further, that the gift to the adopted daughter being void, the gift to the nephew took effect at once. 3. Devise Subject to Restraint on Alienation.

Construction — Exercise of power.]—
A testator devised land to his daughter subject to the following conditions: "My said daughter shall not sell or will or dispose of this 100-acre lot to any person or persons except to one or more of my children or my grandchildren, to whom she may dispose of it if it is her will to do so." By her will, the daughter assumed to charge upon the land two legacies, and directed that her husband might occupy the land for one year after her death, and, subject to these charges and her debts and testamentary expenses, devised the land to her executors upon trust for the plaintift, one of the testator's grand-children, as beneficial owner. There were several other children and grandchildren of the testator surviving:—Held, that the restraint on alienation in the testator's will was valid, and that, inasmuch as the daughter's will must be held to have been made by her in pursuance of the power of disposition given her by him, though she intended to defeat the restraint against alienation by indirect means, the legacies in her will failed, as also her devise of the right of occupation in favour of her husband, and the plaintiff took the whole property free from any condition. Rogerson v. Campbell, 10 O. L. R. 748, 6 O. W. R. 617.

Partial restriction — "Mortgaging or selling" — Vendor and purchaser]. — A testator by his will, after directing payment of his debts, funeral and testamentary expenses, devised to his son W. M. certain lands, "subject to the following conditions, reservations, limitations therein," (directing the payment of two sums of money), "to have and to hold the same unto the said W. M., his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns forever:" and, after making four other devises of other lands to four other sons, provided as follows: "None of my sons will have the privilege of mortgaging or selling their lot or farm aforesaid described, but if one or more of these lots have to be sold on account of mismanagement, the executors will see that the same will remain in the Martin estate." W. M. was one of the executors named in the will. The sons became indebted, and neither they, nor the daughters, nor the widow, nor the executors, were in a position to purchase the land, and W. M. agreed to sell the land devised to him:—Held, that the restraint on alienation was valid, and that he could not make title.—Review of the cases here and in England.—In re Macleay, I. R. 20 Eq. 186, followed.—In re Rosher, Rosher v. Rosher, 2 Ch. D. Solt, not followed. Re Martin & Dagneau, 11 O. L. R. 349, 7 O. W. R. 191.

Partial restriction — Validity. Re Porter, 8 O. W. R. 588.

Substitution — Restraint on alication — Statute.]—A clause in a will providing for the substitution of immovables upon the condition "que mea biensfonds on immeubles, de quelque nature et qualité qu'ils soient, passent en nature à mest dis petits-enfants (the prisent et en la que consequence, its en partie vendus ou aliénés par quelqu'autorité en partie vendus ou aliénés par quelqu'autorité que private de soit, ni sous qu'elque prétecte que que partie vendus en la que partie que private que partie vendus en la que partie que prétecte que en sous celui du plus prond mantage d'ence me sous celui du plus prond mantage d'ence mes dist petits-enfant," does not take the property out of the operation of 61 V c. 44 (Q), which provides that substituted property may be definitely alienated, when such alienation is to the interest of the institute and of the substitute. The above probibition to alienate adds nothing to the substitution under which, taken alone, the property is intended to pass to the substitute, and the statute is enacted for the purpose of defeating that intention, in the case it contemplates. Prévost v. Prévost, 27 Que. S. C. 490.

4. Execution, Testamentary Capacity, and Undue Influence.

Acknowledgment — Evidence — Appeal.]—In proceedings for probate of a will the solicitor who drew it testified that it was signed by the testatrix when the subscribing witnesses were absent; that on their arrival he asked the testatrix if the signature to it was hers, and if she wished the two persons present to witness it, and she answered "yes." Each of the witnesses acknowledged his signature to the will, but swore that he had not heard such question asked and answered. The Judge of Probate held that the will was not properly executed, and his decision was affirmed by the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, 24 C. L. T. 14, 36 N. S. R. 482: — Held, affirming the judgments, that two Courts having pronounced against the validity of the will, such decision would not be reversed by a second court of appeal. In re Cullen, 25 C. L. Action to set aside — Undue influence — Senile dementia — Costs.]—The testatrix died in her 90th year, leaving no near relatives. Defendant, a neighbour, had taken care of testatrix and did much for her. The testatrix made several wills; each subsequent will defendant was given additional property until the last will gave her nearly all the estate of the testatrix. In an action to set the will aside it was held, that the evidence shewed no undue influence or fraud, but on the contrary, that the testatrix was a woman of strong will power and determination, who had viewed the defendant with ever increasing favour during a lengthy period of close intinacy. Action dismissed, but without costs owing to the fact that no independent person was called in during the preparation of the will, nor in the reading and explaning of it to testatrix. Malcolm v. Ferguson (1909), 14

Action to set aside — Undue influence.] — Where defendant had appeared on an examination for discovery, but on advice of her counsel had declined to write certain names, held that she should not be required to re-attend and write as requested. Cook v. Winegarden (1909), 14 O. W. R. 733, 1 O. W. N. 75.

Action to set aside and to establish a prior will—Ground, incapacity of testator—Fraudulent conspiracy—Undue influence.] An action to set aside a will and to estab lish a prior will on the ground that testator was not competent to make the will in ques tion and that the same was obtained by fraudulent conspiracy and under influence of his sons Allan and Albert. The testator had reached the age of 77, and was possessed of an estate of about $19,000. Of his six children, three sons survive. dren, three sons survive. The deceased children left no issue, but one of his sons made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors in 1905.—Latchford, J., held, that it was for the brothers Allan and Albert, to establish to the satisfaction of the Court that the instrument put forward as the last will of their father was executed while he was in a free and untrammelled state of mind. That, where a person gives instructions for a will where a person gives instructions for a winder which he takes a benefit that is a circumstance that ought generally to excite the suspicion of the Court, and calls upon it to be vigilant and zealous in examining the evidence in support of the instrument in favour of which it ought not to pronounce unless the suspicion is removed, and it is judicially satisfied that the paper propounded does express the true will of the deceased. That the onus lay upon the sons who gave the instructions for the new will, to shew as persons profiting by the change that the alleged will was the free and uninfluenced act of the testator and that this onus had not been discharged. The latter phase of the action was not considered. Judgment in favour of the plaintiff declaring the will in question was not ten last will of the testator. Costs of plaintiff and Official Guardian out of estate. Quickfall v. Quickfall (1911), 19 O. W. R. 113, 2 O. W. N. 1127.

Action to set aside will — Insanity of testator — Proof of — Undue influence.).

A universal legatee under a prior will, plaintiff in an action to set aside a subsequent will upon the ground of insanity of the testator, will be allowed to prove facts occurring before both wills, in order to establish the intellectual condition of the testator at the period of the will which he attacks .-2. Incapacity to make a will by reason of 2. Incapacity to make a will by reason of insanity cannot be proven from facts establishing simply failures of memory, oddity or eccentricity of ideas, momentary lapses of thought, and weakening of the mind caused by old age.—3. Influence and suggestion are not grounds for setting aside a will unless they result from fraud and deceit, corrupt practices or lying injunctions, which have practices, or lying insinuations, which have deceived the mind and imposed upon the will of the testator. An inference of such prac-tices cannot be drawn from means employed by a person benefited by the will to attract the good will of the testator as long as there is no practice which prejudices his moral liberty. St. Andrew's Church v. Brodie, 14 Que. K. B. 149.

Action to set aside will - Testamentary capacity — Drunkenness — Sober intervals, 1—A will made at a time when intercats. — A will made at a time when the testator was drunk, leaving his property to trustees with an absolute discretion to pay or not to pay the testator's wife any part of the income, was set aside, where it appeared that the testator was affectionate appeared that the testator was anectionate to his wife when sober, but the reverse when drunk. Attestation - Subscription of witnesses to affidavit, instead of to attestation clauseto appearing instead of to attestation clause— Validity.]—At the execution of the last will of the decensed in Portland, Oregon, instead of the usual attestation clause, the attorney substituted a formal affidavit of execution commencing just below the signature of the testatrix and extending over part of another page. This affidavit was then signed by the page. This allidavit was then signed by the witnesses in the presence of the testatrix and sworn to by them. Their evidence shewed that they intended to and did witness the will, and also intended to subscribe it as witnesses: — Held, that s. 5 of the Wills Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 174, had been sufficiently complied with, and that the will had been validly executed. Griffiths v. Griffiths, L. R. 2 P. & D. 300, followed. Re Harvie, 7 W. L. R. 103, 17 Man. L. R. 259.

Captation - Suggestion - Undue influence — Interdiction — Evidence—Onus —Appeal.]—The existence of circumstances which might raise suspicion that the execuwhich might ruse suspicion that the execu-tion of a will was procured by captation, improper suggestions, or undue influence on the part of those promoting it, is not a suffi-cient ground to justify an appellate Court in interfering with the concurrent findings of the Courts below as to the validity of the will. Judgment appealed from, 17 Que. K. B. 215, affirmed; Girouard and Maclennan, J.J., dissenting. Laramée v. Ferron, 41 S. C. R. 391.

Codicil - Increase of amount of legacy.] -A codicil to a will, executed shortly before the testator's death, increased the provision for a niece of his wife who had lived with him for nearly thirty years, a considerable portion of which she was his housekeeper, was attacked as having been executed on account of undue influence by the niece:

Held, reversing the judgment of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, Taschereau and Sedgewick, JJ., dissenting, that, as the testator was shewn to be capable of executing a will at the time he made the codicil, considering the relations between him and his niece, even if it had been proved that she urged him to make better provision for her than he had previously done, such would not have amounted to undue influence.—Held, also, following Perera v. Perera, [1891] A. C. 354, that, even if there was ground for saying that the testator was not at the time capable of making a will, the codicil would still have been valid. Kaulbach v. Archbold, 22 C. L. T. 9, 31 S. C. R. 387.

Codicil — Suspicious circumstances — Testimony of beneficiary — Competency of testator.]—A testator by his will among other annuities, gave one to K. of $600. By a codicil, executed in the following year, he increased the amount to $800. By a second codicil, executed some years later and shortly before his death, he increased the annuity to $1,000 and provided that, on the death of any of the annuitants, the amount should go to the survivor or survivors for life. There was evidence that K. had been actively concerned in procuring the execu-tion of the second codicil; there were some suspicious circumstances as to the time and manner of execution; there was no evidence, except that of K., to shew that the testator had even seen the codicil before he executed; there was evidence of delusions on his part as to his will and the property he had to dispose of; and the witnesses to the execution were of opinion from his demeanour, that he was not at the time in a condition to transact any important business. petition by the executors for proof in solemn form, the second codicil was rejected by the Surrogate Judge --Held, affirming his decision, that it was open to him to discredit cision, that it was open to him to discredit the testimony of K., and he having done so, the Court ought not to interfere with his finding. 2. That K. being the principal beneficiary under the codicil, and the principal witness in support of it, and having had knowledge of it, and been a party to promoting its execution, was required to reasonably satisfy the mind of the Court. Delusions — Onus — Evidence of par-ties — Interest — Corroboration.] — In March, 1897, testator made a will revoking a prior will made in 1890, materially re-ducing bequests to his wife and son, and giving away large portions of his estate to collateral relatives. The evidence shewed that, at the time of the making of the second will, the defendant was suffering from cer-tain insana delusions as to the relations extain insane delusions as to the relations existing between his wife and son, and that the isting between his wife and son, and that the disposition of his estate made by the second will was affected by such delusions:—Held, that the decree of the Judge of Probate, admitting the second will to probate, must be set aside, and the will declared inoperative and void. The existence of the delusion beset assue, and the win declared noperative and void. The existence of the delusion be-ing established, the burden rested upon the parties setting up the second will to shew that it was made during a lucid interval. that it was linde during a testimony had been given by the wife and son, who were interested parties, lost the force that it would otherwise have had, where their testimony that the state of the state would otherwise have had, where their testi-mony was corroborated in all essential par-ticulars by disinterested witnesses. Evidence - Delusions - Undue influence — Onus — Certificate of physician —Costs.]—The best evidence of testamentary capacity is that which arises from rational acts, and where the testatrix herself, without assistance, drew up and executed a rational assistance, drew up and executed a rational will, medical evidence that she was mentally incapable of so doing will be re-jected. Where one who benefits by a will jected. Where one who benents by a war procures it to be prepared without the intervention of any faithworthy witness, or any one capable of giving independent evidence as to the testator's intention and instructions, it will be regarded with suspicion, and its invalidity presumed, and the establish it. Where a physician improperly gives a certificate as to testamentary incapacity of his patient, it should not on that capacity or his patient, it sould not on that ground alone be rejected as evidence, if otherwise admissible, but the circumstances will affect the weight that should be attached thereto. Observations upon delusions and undue influence:—Held, on the facts, that the will of the testatrix was valid, but that the codicil was obtained by undue influence, and probate thereof was refused. In the unusual circumstances the Court made no order as to costs. McHugh v. Dooley, 10 B. C. R. 537.

Presumption of validity — Infant — Voidable judgment.]—In McNeil v. Cullen, 35
S. C. R. 516, the will in question was held not to have been duly executed. The appellant here, an infant, was not represented in the former proceedings by a guar-dian ad litem:—Held, that as the former judgment is voidable and must stand until reversed, the appellant cannot succeed these proceedings. In re Estate of Alicia Cullen, 6 E. L. R. 298, 43 N. S. R. 149.

Execution — Evidence — Onus — Beneficiary — Subsequent conduct of testa-tor — Residuary devise — Trust.]—In proceedings for probate by the executors of a will, opposed on the ground that it was pre-pared by one of the executors, who was also a beneficiary, there was evidence, though contradictory, that before the will was executed it was read over to the testator, who ecuted it was read over to the testator, who seemed to understand its provisions:—Held, Idington, J., dissenting, that such evidence and the fact that the testator lived for several years after it was executed, and on several occasions during that time spoke of having made his will, and never revoked nor altered it, satisfied the onus, if it existed, on the executor to satisfy the Court that the testator knew and approved of its provisions.—Held, also, that where the testator's extract —Held, also, that where the testator's estate was worth some $50,000, and he had no children, it was doubtful if a bequest to the propounder, his brother, of $1,000 was such a substantial benefit that it would give rise to the onus contended for by those opposing the will.—Judgment of the Court of Appeal, 4 O. She answered, "I am perfectly satisfied." The two witnesses then signed the will in the presence of the testatrix and of several other persons, knowing it to be the will of the testatrix.—Held, that a document written in conformity to the directions of the testator, containing his wishes for the disposition of his estate, and signed by him, and also by two witnesses, is a will.—2. The acknowledgment by the testator, in the presence of the subscribing witnesses, and in answer to a question put by one of them, that the document signed is his will, is a sufficient compliance with Art. S51 of the Civil Code, which requires an acknowledgment by the testator of the signature, "as having been subscribed by him to his will then produced" in presence of the witnesses.—3. Art. S51, C. C., which says the witnesses "attest and sign the will immediately, in presence of witnessing the will, although, when present, they were not personally requested by the testator to sign.—4. Formalities — Notarial will — Authentic form—Validity by English law—Proof of instruments — Holograph will.] — A will drawn in authentic form, as made before a notary and two witnesses, in which no mention is made that it was rea to witnesses, is have a subject of the subject

Habitual drunkenness does not create a presumption of want of capacity to make a will. Proof of periods of drunkenness approaching delirium, although frequent, cannot prevail in face of the form of an holograph will, written with a firm hand, and in a handwriting which is regular and consistent, drawn in clear and rational language, particularly when the will agrees with another, made several years before, and which the testator thought had been lost, and with which, after it had been drawn, the testator on several occasions declared herself to be satisfied. Hofman v. Baynes (1910), 39 Que. S. C. 74.

Holograph — Custom of Paris — Statute of Frauds — Will disposing of lands — Wild required by laws of Canada.]—
The Quebec Act having provided, that every owner of lands, goods or credits, who has a right to alignate the said lands, goods or chattles, in his or her lifetime, may devise or bequeath the same, at his or her death, by his or her last will and testament, such will being executed, either according to the laws of Canada, or according to the forms prescribed by the laws of England:—Held, that a will, invalid according to the French law, and not executed according to the provisions of the Statute of Frauds, so as to pass freehold lands in England, will not pass lands in Canada, although it would pass copyhold or leasehold property in England. Meiklejohn v. Caldwell (1834), C. R. 1

Holograph will — Evidence — Intrinsic evidence of inanzity—Probate—Onus.]—
Where an alleged testator is shewn to have been an educated person, well versed in the English language, and accustomed to speak and write it correctly, and is moreover proved to have been a confirmed dipsomaniac for 20 years, and an inmate of an inebriate asylum for 14 years preceding the date of a supposed holograph will; incorrect, ungrammatical, and meaningless language used therein is sufficient evidence that, if written at all by the testator, it was so written at a time when he was not in sound and disposing mind.—2. Probate of a will is prima facie evidence, under the law of Quebec, of the sanity of the testator, at the time it was made. The burthen of proof of insanity is on the party who impugns the will. Doucet v. Macnider, 14 Que. K. B. 232.

Holograph will — Validity — Statutory formalities.]—A will entirely typewritten and signed by the testator satisfies the requirements of Art. 850, C. C., which prescribes that a holograph will shall be written entirely and signed with the hand of the testator. In re Aird, 28 Que. S. C. 235.

Insane delusion.]-F. in 1890 executed a will providing generally for his wife and making his son residuary legatee. In 1897 he revoked this will and executed another by which the provision for his wife was re-duced, but still leaving sufficient for her support; the son was given half the residue, and the testator's daughter the other half; his wife was appointed executrix and guardian of the children. Prior to the execu-tion of the last will F. had frequently accused his wife and son of an abominable crime, for which there was no foundation, had banished the son from his house, and treated his wife with violence. After its execution he was for a time placed in a lunatic asylum. On proceedings to set aside this will for want of testamentary capacity in F.:—Held, reversing the judgment in 33 N S. R. 261, Sedgewick, J., dissenting, that the provision made by the will for the testator's wife and son, and the appointment of the former as executrix and guardian, were inconsistent with the belief that when it was executed testator was influenced by the insane delusion that they were guilty of the crime he had imputed to them, and the will was therefore valid. Skinner v. Farquharson, 22 C. L. T. 197, 32 S. C. R. 58.

Instructions for will. Ryan v. Harrington, 3 O. W. R. 685.

Lost will - Evidence - Solicitor Privilege — Declarations — Probate.]—The doctrine of privileged communications as between solicitor and client exists for the benefit of the client and his representatives in interest, not for that of the solicitor, and in an action to establish the lost will of a testator, who was illegitimate and had died without issue, statements of the testator to his solicitor in reference to the making of and provisions in the will were held, against the objection of those who claimed under the lost will, to be admissible in evidence. Statements of a testator as to the provisions of his will are admissible in evidence in an action to establish it, and statements of this kind were in this case held to be suffi-cient corroboration of the evidence of the plaintiff, who had drawn, and was claiming large benefits under, the will in question, which, it was alleged, had been lost or stolen. The fact that the testator was aware that unless he made a will his property would go to the Crown; that he was an experienced man of business possessed of a large estate; that he had, after the will had been made, several times spoken of it as in existence, and had mentioned some of its provisions; and that during his last illness, of some days' duration, he had expressed no wish to make a will; were held sufficient to rebut the presumption of destruction of the will by the testator. Stewart v Walker, 23 C. L. T. 320, 6 O. L. R. 495, 1 O. W. R. 489, 2 O. W. R. 990.

Mental capacity of testator—Lunatice—Interdiction—Removal by judicial decree—Presumption of sanity—Rebuttal—Evidence.1—A person who, after having been interdicted for lunacy, is relieved of the interdiction and assigned a conseil judiciaire, may dispose of his property by will. When the removal of the interdiction is decreed after a contest in Court, there is a presumption of mental capacity to make a will. Consequently, those who attack, on the ground of incapacity, a will made six days after the removal of the interdiction, must rebut the presumption and prove a change in the mental condition of the testator occurring thereafter. Laramée v. Ferron, 17 Que, K. B. 215.

Onus of testamentary capacity — Undue influence. Purdy v. Purdy, 1 O. W. R. 449

Probate—Proof in solemn form — Res judicata.]—On petition in the Probate Court for proof in solemn form of the last will of C., the will was set aside as not properly proved, and a former will was admitted to probate. Appeals to the Supreme Court of this province and to the Supreme Court of Canada were dismissed and the judgment of the Probate Court affirmed.—Subsequently the petitioner applied to have the matter reopened, on the ground that, at the time of the former adjudication, he was on infant under the are of 21 years, and was not legally represented and some additional evidence was offered which, with the previous evidence, was regarded by the majority of the Court as leaving no .com for doubt that the will set aside was duly executed: — Held, notwith-standing, that as the petitioner was in a sense a party to the former proceedings, although no guardian ad litem was regularly appointed, the judgment in such proceedings was binding upon him until set aside or reversed. Re Cullen, 43 N. S. R. 149, 6 E. L. R. 298.

Probate.]—Testatrix, a widow of about $S years of age, ande her will. An action for proof of said will was removed from Surrogate Court into the High Court. Objections were taken: (1) the want of testamentary capacity, and (2) undue influence.—Riddell, $J_a$, keld, that any delusions such as were sworn to could not have influenced testatrix in making her will, and that even if testatrix had the delusions alleged, they were not capable of affecting the disposition of her property. Will declared valid and admitted to probate. McInte v. McIntee (1910), 17 O. W. R. 302, 2 O. W. N. 202. O. L. R.

Procurement by importunity — Setting aside — Construction — Life estate]—A testator had made a will on the 6th August, when he was very weak and ill. On the 9th August, when he was in the same condition, according to the medical evidence, a condition in which he would do anything and give in in anything for the sake of peace and quiet, he executed another will, upon the loud importunity of his sister, who was strong in body and will. He died on the 13th August:—Held, that the will so procured could not stand,—Semble, also, that upon the proper construction of the words of the second will, "I give . all my estate to my sister . . . for her own use with power to sell or dispose of the same as she may see fit . . . and after the death of my estate, if any, to be equally divided between." etc., the sister was entitled to a life estate only. Roman Catholic Episcopal Corporation for the Diocese of Toronto v. O'Connor, 10 O. W. R. 76, 14 O. L. R. 669.

Promoter — Evidence — Corroboration,]—Where the promoter of and a residuary legatee under a will, executed two days before the testator's death, and attacked by his widow and a residuary legatee under a former will, the devise to the latter of whom was revoked, failed to furnish evidence to corroborate his own testimony that the will was read over to the testator, who seemed to understand what he was doing, and there was a doubt under all the evidence of his testamentary capacity, the will was set aside.—Girouard, J., dissenting, held that the evidence was sufficient to establish the will as expressing the wishes of the testator.—Per Davies J.,—
The will should stand except the portion disposing of the residue of the estate, the devise of which, in the former will, should be

Proof of execution - Acknowledgment -Witnesses.]-The last will and testament of A. C. was contested on the ground that it was in the handwriting of the residuary legate, that it did not express the true will of the deceased, that deceased did not know or approve of it, and that it was not properly executed, not having been "signed or acknowledged by deceased in the presence of two or more witnesses, present at the same time," etc. The evidence shewed that, at the time the will was executed, deceased was present, but was sitting about 15 feet away from the witnesses; that the words at the end of the will were read over in a low tone so that the witnesses were unable to say whether they were heard by deceased or not Neither of the witnesses was able to say that the signature of deceased was affixed to the will when they signed, or that he saw it if it was there, and both agreed that, if the signature was there, deceased did not in their presence acknowledge it to be her signature; nor did they hear her ask the question whether it was her signature; nor was there evidence of any other act or conduct on her part which could be considered the equivalent of an acknowledgment. According to the evidence of the witnesses she said nothing, and appeared to be indifferent to what was going on. One of the witnesses was unable to say, after leaving, whether he had witnessed a will or not :-Held that, assuming it to be true, as sworn by the witness in support of the will, that deceased was asked in presence of the wit-nesses, whether this was her will, and whether she wished the witnesses to sign, the evidence did not go far enough, it being essential to shew that the witnesses heard both question and answer. In re Cullen. In re Cullen, 24 C. L. T. 141, 36 N. S. R. 482

Proof of insanity — Evidence,]—In order to avoid a deed or will on the ground of insanity, it is necessary to look first at the instrument itself and its provisions in order to see the mental condition of the maker; and if these provisions are such as a wise and just man would make in the like case, the Judge, unless there is irrefutable proof of insanity, should treat the instrument as valid. 2. The testimony of witnesses who did not see the testator for a long time before his death, and knew nothing of his mental faculties at the time when he made his will, has no significance, and cannot be a part of the chain of facts which constitute the general proof of insanity, unless it is sufficient in itself to annul the will, especially if there is medical testimony expressly contradicting it. Hotte v. Birabin, 25 Que. S. C. 275.

Revocation of probate — Evidence—Appeal on facts — Parties to proceedings.]—In 1877 the will of H, was proved in common form before the Registrar of Probate on the oath of one of the subscribing witnesses, who swore that he and the other witness signed in the presence of the testator, and in the presence of each other. The will was acted upon, and remained unquestioned for a period of twenty-four years, when, after the death of the witness on whose oath it was proved, it was set aside by the Judge of Probate, on the testimony of the remaining witness, M. H., said his brother, that M. H. did not sign his name to the will as witness, until after the testator's death :- Held, reversing the decision of the death:—Heta, reversing the decision of the Judge of Probate that, after the long large of time, it was impossible to accept the evidence of M. H., and his brother—both being interested parties-to establish the invalidity of the will, as against the oath of the deceased witness upon whose testimony it was proved. While some weight should be attached to the finding of the Judge of Probate, it was impossible for the Court, on appeal, to feel bound by such finding, when it appeared that he came to the conclusion he did simply on the evidence of the two interested parties, and without considering other facts bearing on the case. The devisee of a portion of the property under the will conveyed his title to a third party, and by several intermediate conveyances it came to M. et al, who opposed the setting the will aside .- Held, that M. et al., as "parties interested," were competent parties, and clearly entitled to be heard, even though "parties interested" were not specifically mentioned among those to be cited .- Held, that the naming specifically of heirs, devisees, legatees, and next of kin in the statute, was merely a matter of direction, leaving it open to those having an interest to intervene for the purpose of protecting their rights. In re Hill Estate, 34 N. S. R. 494.

Senile dementia — Insane delusions— Comprehension of terms of will — Attack on will by person accepting benefit — Costs, McGarrigle v. Simpson, 1 O. W. R. 685.

Senile insanity — Facts indicating symptoms generally — Particular facts establishing capacity.] — An old man of 78 years, suffering, as the result of a stroke of paralysis, from senile insanity and the symptoms whereof he shews to the time of his death, is incapable of making a will in the interval. Any sane answers he may have given on several occasions, even during a superficial medical examination, are insufficient to destroy positive evidence of his incapacity resulting from a number of facts indicating his symptoms, whether they have occurred before or after the will was made, as well as from the testimony of medical experts. Giroux v. Giroux (1910), 38 Que. S. C. 179.

Spiritual adviser — Onus of proof.]—
The influence of a person standing in a specially confidential relation to a testator (in the present case the spiritual adviser and confessor) may lawfully be exerted to obtain a will or legacy in his favour, so long as the testator thoroughly understands what he is doing and is a free agent, and the burden of proof of undue influence lies upon those who assert it; but, if the person who obtains the benefit takes part in the actual drawing of the will, the onus is cast upon him of shewing the righteousness of the transaction. Collins v. Kilroy, 21 C. L. T. 230, 1 O. L. R. 503.

-In an action based upon a testament authentique, if the defendant pleads that it is invalid as a testament authentique because certain formalities have not been observed, the plaintiff may reply that the observed, the plantil may reply that the will is valid as complying with the require-ments of a will according to the form derived from the law of England. Le Séminaire de Rimouski v. Joneas, 3 Que. P. R. 256.

Testamentary capacity - Undue in-Huence — Evidence.] — Suggestion and in-fluence are not grounds for setting aside a will unless they amount to fraudulent practices or unless the testator is prevailed upon to such a point that he may be said to be deprived of his liberty. The most urgent solicitations and the greatest pressure brought to bear upon a testator from motives of to bear upon a testator from motives or cupidity will not suffice in the absence of fraudulent and false representations as grounds for setting aside testamentary dispo-sitions.—2. It is not to be inferred from the fact alone that the testator in the space of 3 or 4 months before his death has made several wills with controdictory provisions, and has also made a universal gift of his property-followed at the expiration of 10 days by a solemn declaration that it was not the true expression of his will-that he had a disturbed and weakened mind to the point of not being able to make a valid will. Dussault v. Morin, 16 Que. K. B. 385.

Testamentary capacity — Undue influence — Fraud and artifice — Improper suggestion — Captation — Importunity — Deception by beneficiary — Nullity of donation — Concurrent findings of fact — Reversal on appeal — Practice — Revocation of former will — Onus of proof.]—The promoter of a will by which he takes a benefit is obliged to produce evidence clearly shewing that in making the will the testator acted without improper suggestion or undue influence in the revocation of a former will.—Shortly after their marriage, the testator and his wife made their wills, respectively, by which they each constituted the tively, by which they each constituent the other general residuary legatee. A short time before the death of the testator from a wasting disease, the defendant took advantage of the testator's weakness, and by artifices and improper suggestions so inartinees and improper suggestions so in-fluenced him as to secretly procure the exe-cution of another will by which the former was revoked and the defendant was given the bulk of the testator's estate:—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, that, under the circumstances, the insidious methods persistently made use of by the defend-ant amounted to captation and undue influence, and that, in the absence of clear proof that the testator was not deceived and misled thereby, the will should be annulled.—As there were concurrent findings by the Courts below against the contention that the testator was of unsound mind at the time of the execution of the second will, the Supreme Court of Canada refused to interfere on that ground. Mayrand v. Dussault, 27 C. L. T. 315, 38 S. C. R. 460.

Testamentary capacity - Undue in-Auence — Suggestion — Annulment,]—A will made by a person weakened in body and mind by illness, to the point of not being able to understand the nature and bearing of the provisions which it contains, and which are proved to be contrary to the wish of the testatrix, expressed for more than thirty years and set forth in another will made two months and some days before, the new provisions being framed in confused and sometimes unintelligible language, and suggested by the person to benefit by them, and who, as spiritual director, has great influence with the testatrix, will be declared false and not the true expression of her last wishes, and therefore will be annulled and set aside. Barbeau v. Feuiltault, 17 Que. K. B. 337.

Testator's signature - Conflict of evidence as to whether witnesses present

Lapse of time — Will drawn by person taking benefit — Onus. Connell v. Connell, 4

O. W. R. 360.

Undue influence - Evidence - Circumstances attending execution.]-The testator during his last illness made his will, leaving all his property to the defendant, who was not his wife, but had lived with him as such for many years, thus cutting off his only child, the plaintiff, with whom he was on friendly terms. It sufficiently appeared that he was of sound mind at the time, and evidence shewed the probability of his having been influenced to make the will in the way he did, by the action re-cently brought by his wife for alimony against him, and by a notion that the plain-tiff had been assisting her mother in such action. The defendant was present in the room when the instructions for the will were taken by the solicitor; but, beyond the fact that she had untruly stated to the deceased during his last illness that the plaintiff did not want to yisit him, there was no direct evidence of any improper influence brought to bear upon him by the defendant, and the plaintiff was compelled to rely on the general suspicion to be drawn from the surrounding circumstances :- Held, that the evidence was insufficient to warrant a finding that the will had been obtained by the exercise of undue influence.

—It is not sufficient for that purpose to shew that the circumstances attending the execution of the will are consistent with the hypothesis of undue influence, but it must be clearly shewn that they are inconsistent with a contrary hypothesis; and it was impossible in this case to say that the circumstances surrounding the making of the will were consistent only with the hypothesis of undue influence. L. R. 314, 11 O. W. R. 345, directing a new trial, upon the ground, among others, of the unsatisfactory position in which the case was left by reason of the failure of the appellants to call the attesting witnesses, affirmed. Undue influence is a reason for setting aside a will only when it is the result of fraudulent practices. Services rendered, alacrity and assiduity shewn, care of every kind and advice given, to the testator, are not by themselves and in the absence of other reasons, unlawful acts, and, where there is no fraud, they are not sufficient to set aside the will. Ademption of legacy — Advancement.]—A legacy is not revoked by a subsequent writing of the testator other than a will, unless the change of intention is thereby expressly stated. Thus, where a testator made his two sons his universal legatees, and made their legacies chargeable with the payment of certain sums to their sisters, and afterwards in the marriage contract of one of these sons he gave him the same property very nearly which he would have had as his half of the universal legacy, subject to the charge of paying to his sisters a sum equal to about half of the sums which he had designated for them by his will, the unversal legacy, as regards the half of the charges which it involved, was not revoked nor satisfied by the marriage contract. The legacy was to lapse if the additional amount was not procured. The sum of $6,000 was raised by private subscription. The government of the province supplemented the amount by a grant of $14,000. It was contended on behalf of the residuary legatee that the grant from the government was not a compliance with the terms of the will:—Held, affirming the decision of Graham, E.J., 23 C. L. T. 216, that the words "or otherwise" in the will meant "from any source," and that the testator did not intend to place any restriction upon the executors as to the source from which the additional $20,000 should come. If the words had been "charitable or philanthropic," the conclusion might have been different, as "or" would imply a discretion to select either "charitable" or "philanthropic" purposes. Williams v. By 50 V. c. 91 (O.) these societies were auth-50 V. c. 91 (O.) these societies were authorized to receive gifts and devises of real and personal property, provided that no gift or devise of any real estate shall be valid unless made by deed or will executed at least 6 months before the death of the testator. There is a similar provision in s. 24 of the Religious Institutions Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 307. Teetzel, J., held that the 6 months' limitation contained in these two Acts must be regarded as having been re-Acts must be regarded as having been re-pealed by the later Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 112, passed on the 14th April, 1892, which removes every fetter upon testamentary power in favour of any charity, subject only to conditions therein mentioned. He was also of opinion that the gift was not of land, as interpreted by s. 3 of c. 112, but of personal estate arising from or connected with land "within the meaning of s. 8. It was argued, how-ever, that, notwithstanding the provisions of c. 112, the power of a testator by will to give lands or personal estate was restricted by the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act of 1902 to wills made at least 6 months before the testator's death by virtue of s. 7, s.-8. 6, of that Act. The statute which is now R. S. O. c. 112 was based upon the English Act of 1891, and our later Act of 1902 upon the earlier English Act of 1898, but by s. 1 of the Act of 1902 it was provided fetter upon testamentary power in favour of 1902 upon the earlier English Act of 1888, but by s. 1 of the Act of 1902 it was provided that the Act should be read as part of R. S. O. c. 112. The result of this is, as construed by Teetzel, J., to put our two Acts practically in the same position as the two English Acts, as determined by In re Hume, [1850] I Ch. 422, and therefore s. 7 of the

Mortmain and charitable uses — Perebyterian Church in Canada — Validity of devise — Testamentary capacity — Attesting ucitnesses — Evidence — Undue influence — New trial.]—A residuary devise of realty to the Foreign Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church in Canada is valid under the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 112, s. 4, not-withstanding ibid., c. 333, s. 7, s.-8. 6, which requires "assurances" of land for charitable uses to be made six months before the donor's death, "assurances" in that section not including gifts by will; and also not-withstanding that the special Act relating to devises to the said church, 38 V. c. 75 (O.), requires wills of realty and impure personalty in favour cf that church to be made six months before the testator's death.—In an action to impeach a will on the ground of undue influence it should not be upheld on the evidence of one witness, whose credibility is attacked, when the attesting witnesses may also be examined; and a new trial was ordered in this case because this had not been done.—As a general thing, witnesses may also be of the constraint of the testator's sanity before they attest. -A testator directed that $40,000, part of his estate secured on mortgages, should, when his youngest son attained 21, be divided between his wife and his three child-dren; and that his executors should manage this estate till his youngest son should at-tain 21, and out of the interest, and out of the proceeds of his real estate, maintain his wife and children. The testator died in 1904, and in 1908, when the eldest child was only 16, the widow married again, but continued to reside in the same house as before, it being her property:-Held, that the widow did not, by reason of her second marriage, forfeit her right to maintenance down to the time when she would become ento the one when she would become en-titled to a share of the principal secured by the mortgages, Cook v, Noble (1886), 12 O. R. 81, distinguished, Carr v, Living (1860), 28 Beav, 644, and Bowden v, Laing (1844), 14 Sim. 113, doubted. 6. VALIDITY OF CONDITIONS.

Bequest — Condition — Restraint of religious liberty — Public policy.]—It, died in 1878, leaving a will by which the usufruct of his estate was given to his widow for life, and afterwards to his children for their lives, and the estate then to be divided amongst his grandchildren, whom he instituted his universal legatees. A clause in the will provided that if any of his sons should marry otherwise than according to the rites of the Roman Catholic church, the issue of such marriage should be excluded from the succession, as should also any grandchildren who were not brought up and instructed in that faith. See Art. 769, C. C.—Held. following Kimpton v. Kimpton, 16 Rev. Leg. 361, that the condition was void, being in restraint of religious liberty, and therefore contrary to public policy. Hodgson v. Halford, 11 Ch. D. 359, being a case under the English law on the subject, not applicable in the Province of Quebec. Renaud v. Lamothe, 29 C. L. T. 443.

Charitable bequest — Validity — Application of executors for direction of Court—Question covered by authority. Re Rosc, 6 O. W. R. 987.

Conditional gift — Charitable bequest —Fulfilment of condition — Procuring like sum.]—Testator left a legacy of $20,000 to the corporation of the town of Windsor to assist in building and maintaining a hospital for the sick, on condition that the town should "procure a like sum by a tax on the citizens, or from private donations or otherwise, to be added to this bequest." There was a gift over to another legatee, if the town, within seven years after the decease of testator, "fails to raise" the said additional sum. The sum of $6,000 was raised from private donations, and the balance of $14,000 was procured by grant from the Provincial Government: — Held, that the condition in the will was complied with, and the town corporation were entitled to be paid the legacy. In re Payzant, 23 C. L. T. 246.

Devise — Restraint upon alienation — Validity—Summary application to determine—Rule 938—Scope of.)—A testator devised lands to his sons, subject to a restraint upon alienation. The sons, desiring to mortgage the lands devised, applied under Rule 938 for a determination of the question whether the restraint was valid:—Held, that Rule 938 gives no authority to determine such a question. In re Martin, 25 C. L. T. 18, 8 O. L. R. 638, 4 O. W. R. 429.

Legacy — Religious liberty — Public policy—Restrictions as to marriage—Education—Exclusion from succession.]—In the Province of Quebec the English law governs on the subject of testamentary dispositions; and, therefore, in that province, a store may validly impose as a condition of a legney to his children and grandchildren, that marriages of the children should be celebrated according to the rites of any clurch recognised by the laws of the province, and that the grandchildren should be educated according to the teachings of such church, and may also exclude from benefit under his will any of his children marrying contrary to its provisions and grandchildren born of the forbidden marriages, or who may not have been educated as directed. Judgment noted in 21 C. L. T. 392, affirmed. Renaud v. Lamothe, 22 C. L. T. 357, 32 S. C. R. 357.

Personal property - Restraint on alienation - Invalidity.]-A testator directed that his estate should be invested and the income paid to his two sons equally until they reached the age of thirty-five. when they were to receive the principal, and he further declared that "none of my children shall have power to anticipate or alienate, either voluntarily or otherwise, any portion of my estate to which they may be entitled previous to the time at which the same may become payable to them as herein declared." Notwithstanding the above, one of the sons assigned his interest under the will to various creditors :- Held, that the assignments were valid, and the restriction on alienation which the testator had sought to impose invalid.—The reasons for the rule of equity which enables a restraint against alienation and anticipation to be imposed on the separate estate of a married woman do not apply to such a case. McFarlane v. Henderson, 16 O. L. R. 172, 11 O. W. R.

Restraint on alienation — Precatory condition — Substitution — Heirs, 1—There may be a restraint upon alienation in a testamentary disposition, even where the testator has not used prohibitive terms, and has only expressed a simple wish, as long as there is no doubt as to his intention.—2. A restraint upon alienation constitutes a substitution, if it appears that the testator has made it in the interest of a person for whom he designs the property of which he forbids the alienation.—3. The restraint upon alienation, unless in favour of some of the presumptive heirs of the testator, constitutes a substitution, not only in favour of the heirs to whom the restraint does not apply, but in favour of all the presumptive heirs. Létang v. Latour, 24 Que. S. C. 15.

Restraint on alienation — Time limitation.]—A devisee of real estate under a will was restrained from selling or incumbering it for a period of twenty-five years after the testator's death:—Held, that, as the restraint, if general, would have been void, the limitation as to the time did not make it valid. Blackburn v. McCallum, 23 C. L. T. 133, 33 S. C. R. 65.

7. Widow's Election.

Annuity — Separation deed.]—A husband in a separation deed covenanted to pay his wife an annuity of $200 in half-yearly payments, and charged it on certain land; the wife accepting it in full satisfaction for support, maintenance, and alimony during coverture, and of all dower in his lands then or thereafter possessed. The husband, by his will, subsequently executed, directed his executors to pay to his wife $400 annually, $200 on the last June and December in each year during his life, and added: "which provision in favour of my said wife is made in lieu of dower:"—Held, that the wife was not put to her election between the benefits under the deed and the will, but was entitled to both. Carscallen v. Wallbridge, 20 C. L. T. 383, 32 O. R. 114.

Evidence of election — Ignorantia juris.]—A testator left to his wife all his personal estate absolutely, and his real estate for life or so long as she remained his widow, subject to which he devised his lands in specific parcels to his sons, and died in 1889. After his death his widow remained in possession of the land and supported the children and build an addition to the house, and will be supported to the property of the property of the property from the executors, to expire when the eldest son came of age. On this latter event happening in 1899, his parcel of land was conveyed to him by the executors, who then granted a new lease of the rest of the land to the second husband which was now current:—Held, that the widow was put by the will to her election.—Held, also, that, though there was no positive evidence that the widow knew she had a right to elect between the will and her dower, yet on the principle ignorantia juris neminem excusat, she must be held to have made her election in favour of the will. Reynolds v. Palmer, 21 C. L. T. 78, 32 O. R. 431.

Specific bequest — Dower.]—An estate consisting of realty and personalty amounting to over $10,000 was, after a direction to pay debts and funeral and testamentary expenses, and after a specific devise of certain land, devised by the testator to his executors in trust to sell and convert into money, and out of the proceeds to pay to his widow $3,000 for her own use absolutely, and to divide the remainder among certain nephews and nieces:—Held, that the widow was not put to her election, but was entitled to her dower in addition to the bequest. Amsden v. Kyle, 9 O. R. 439, distinguished. In re Schunk, 19 C. L. T. 361, 31 O. R. 175.

L. was by mistake inserted instead of that of the plaintiff. The plaintiff signed judgment by default for want of an appearance and plea, issued a writ of inquiry, and gave notice of the execution thereof, when the defendants took out a summons calling upon him to shew cause why the writ of inquiry, interlocutory judgment, and the writ and the service thereof, should not be set aside. At the return of the summons the plaintiff applied for leave to amend the writ of summons by inserting the plaintiff's name instead of that of B. L. and for leave to reserve the same, when amended. This application the Judge of the County Court refused, although the Statute of Limitations would be a bar to the issuing of a new writ, and allowed that of the defendants. On appeal:—Held, that the amendment should have been allowed and an order made for the re-service of the writ as amended. Semble, that an appeal will lie from the decision of a County Court Judge on a point of law, even though the same does not arise at or out of the trial of an action. Steveart v. Can. Pac. Rev. Co., 20 C. L. T.

forme on this ground will not lie when the company fails to prove that it suffers a prejudice by being so described. 2. A motion to amend the writ by striking out the words objected to, will be granted. 3. No costs will be allowed on either proceeding. Perrault v. Liverpool & London & Globe Ins. Co., 4 Que. P. R. 395.

Misnomer—Terms.]—The writ was in the Form "A" in schedule to 60 V.c. 28 (N.B.), except that the name "R. L." instead of that of the plaintiff was inserted in the clause, "and take notice that in default of your so doing the said R. L. may proceed thereon to judgment and execution." The defendant did not appear. After the issue of a writ of inquiry, the defendant moved to set aside the writ and all subsequent proceedings on account of this error. The Judge acceded to the motion, refusing leave to amend, applied for under the provisions of s. 66 of the Act, holding that the writ was a nullity:—Heid, that the error was an irregularity, and leave to amend should have been granted. Stewart v. Cas. Pac. Rev. Co., 20 C. L. T. S8.

Motion to set aside—Exception as to form — Time.]—A motion to set aside an amendment made by the plaintiff to his writ of summons and declaration, as not having been authorised by the Court where authorisation was necessary, is an exception to the form, and is subject to the formalities of Art. 164, C. P., as to the time for giving notice, etc. Pizeuto v. Can. Pac. Rw. Co., 3 Que. P. R. 471.

Non-conformity of writ with statement of claim—A mendment — Re-service —Practice.]—The indorsement on the writ of summons asked for the delivery up and cancellation of a certain document, dated the 24th April. 1906. The statement of claim, when delivered, shewed in effect that the document sought to be declared void was dated the 20th September. 1906, and was of a different purport:—Held, that the indorsement was defective and erroneous, but that it might be amended and reserved, on payment of costs. Chang Shee Ho Chong v. Culley, 13 B. C. R. 18.

Service.]—If the plaintiff obtains leave to have his writ regularly signed by the prothonotary, and such signature is not affixed in open Court, he cannot foreclose the defendant from pleading without having first served such amendment upon him. Beauchamp v. Gourre, 4 Que. P. R. 201.

Stamps — Insufficiency — Amendment after declaration.]—A plaintiff who has not sufficiently stamped his writ of summons may, after service thereof, when the declaration shews exactly the extent of his claim, apply to the prothonotary for leave to change the fiat, by inserting the correct amount demanded in the action, and adding the required stamps.—Quere, how must such application be made? Sherwood v. Shepard, 8 Que. P. R. 116.

Style of cause — Irregularity or nullity.]—J. S., trading under the name of the British Columbia Furniture Company, comc.c.t.—151 menced an action in such name in respect of a promissory note. A summons under Order XIV, having been dismissed on the ground that one person cannot sue in a firm name, the plaintiff obtained an order amending the style of cause:—Held, that the writ was not a nullity and that the irregularity was properly amended. British Columbia Furniture Co. v. Tuguell, 7 B. C. R. 361.

Substitution of defendants.]—Where the plaintiff has sued the defendants as a corporation, he cannot, after the filing of an exception to the form, move to amend his writ by substituting for his designation of the defendants, the names of the members of the so-called corporation, which is in reality a partnership. Lambe v. Thompson S. S. Line, 4 Que. P. R. 161.

2. Copy of Writ.

Uncertified copy — Appearance.]—The fact that the copy of a writ of summons has not been certified as true by the prothonotary or the attorney of the plaintiff is not a ground for an exception a la forme, if the defendant has appeared in the time allowed and has not suffered any prejudice in consequence. Bélanger v. Brais, 2 Que. P. R. 425.

Variance — Name of attorney.]—An action will not be dismissed upon exception to the form because it appears by indorsement on the writ that it was issued on the praceipe of one advocate while the copy of it is certified by another advocate, who is the true attorney for the plaintiff. Boulet v. Cantin, 3 Que. P. R. 252.

3. Endorsement.

Action on bond — Special endorsement Necessity for — Unliquidated damages — Costs.]—The defendants appealed to a Su-preme Court Judge in Chambers from the order of an examiner under the Collection Act, committing him to gaol, and gave a bond in the sum of $61.42 required by s. 32 of the Act, conditioned personally to appear before the Judge on the hearing of the appeal, and to surrender himself to prison in case of an adjudication of imprisonment. The appeal was heard and dismissed, and the adjudication below confirmed, and for an alleged breach of the condition of the bond by the defendant in not surrendering himself to prison, an action was commenced on the bond against the defendant and his sure-ties for the penalty of $61.42, by the issue of a general writ of summons. The defendants, before appearing, moved to set the writ and service aside, on the grounds (a) that being for a debt or liquidated demand the writ should have been specially endorsed under Order 3, Rule 5, and (b) that the writ in any event should have been endorsed with the usual claim for costs under Order 3, Rule 6: — Held, dismissing the motion with costs, that the claim was not a debt or liquidated demand for money, but was one in respect to which damages must be assessed. Hennigar v. Brinc (No. 2), 24 C. L. T. 144.

Address of plaintiffs—Amendment.]—Where the plaintiffs sue as trustees for a corporation, it is not necessary to endorse on the writ the addresses of the individual plaintiffs. The plaintiffs sued as trustees of the Standard Life Assurance Company, and their address was endorsed on the writ as "Edinburgh, Scotland:"—Held, insufficient address, but, as there was nothing misleading in their address, leave was given to amend by stating the place of business of the company. Dundas v. McKenzie, 10 B. C. R. 174.

4. IRREGULARITIES - EXCEPTION TO FORM.

Gempany defendant — Statement of form — Time — Service of verial.—It is act necessary in a suit against an incorporated company to mention in the writ of summons the place where the business of the company is principally carried on; it is sufficient to indicate that the company have an office in the district in which the action is brought.—An exception to the form filed on the 19th September is late, when the report of service of the writ was made upon the 30th August previous, Havkett v. Quebec Transport Co., 3 Que. P. R. 118.

Description of defendant — Irregularity — Exception to form — Service — Replevin — Affalovit — Practice, 1 — The defendant was described in the writ of summons as "Marie Godon, wife (commune en biens) of Arthur Gordon, labourer, of the city and district of Montreal, and the latter for the purpose of authorising his wife," whereas she should have been described as "Victoria Lacroix, boarding-house keeper, of Montreal, widow of the late Addlard Godon, in his lifetime labourer, of the same place:" — Held, that this designation was erroneous and irregular, and an exception to the form based upon such irregulariy should be allowed.—2. That the omission to serve a copy of the affidavit upon the defendant or to leave it at the record office for her within three days of the service of the writ of replevin, was fatal. Bartlett v. Godon, 7 Que. P. R. 372.

Description of defendant—Mistake—Irregularity — Exception to the form.]—A defendant described in the writ of summons served upon her as "May Ardagh, widow of S. Ardagh," when her name is May Jones, and the name of her deceased husband was Thomas William Ardagh, is not in a position to know with certainty whether it is really she who is intended to be sued, and there is an irregularity which she has the right to invoke by way of exception to the form. Kent v. Ardagh, 8 Que. P. R. 31.

Intituling municipal election—Contestation of — Quo varranto.] — The fact that a writ of summons, to which is annexed a petition to set aside a municipal election, pursuant to the charter of the city of Montreal, is intituled "writ of quo warranto," does not invalidate the petition. Charbonneau v. Roy, 3 Que, P. R. 363.

Issue from wrong division—Irregularity — Appearance — Waiver — Rule 546 — Transfer to proper division—Venue — Change of — Preponderance of convenience and expense — Postponement of trial. Doody v. Bigelow (X.T.), 8 W. L. R., 978.

Issue in name of deceased sovereign —Amendment — Costs. Biggar v. Kemp, 12 O. W. R. 863.

Omission of name of district — Irregularity — Absence of prejudice — Exception to form.]—The omission of the name of the district in the writ of summons after the printed words "to the bailiffs of the district of . . ." is not fatal and causes no prejudice; an exception to the form based upon such irregularity will be dismissed with costs. Villeneuve v. Leblane, 9 Que. P. R. 80.

Residence of defendant wrongly stated — Exception to form.]—An exception to the form, founded upon the allegation that the residence of the defendant is not given or is not correctly given in the writ of summons served upon the defendant, must clearly indicate the real residence of the party; if not it will be dismissed. Beth v. Backman, 8 Que. P. R. 108.

Revocation of probate—Practice—Affidavis verifying endorsement — Citation—Stay of proceedings.]—Where, in an action brought for the purpose of revoking a probate, the Rule requiring the filing of an affidavit verifying the endorsement on the writ of summons has not been complied with, the proceeding should not be invalidated, but the curative provisions of Order LXX., r. 1, ought to be applied.—Where the Rule requiring the issue of a citation calling on the defendant to produce the probate has not been compiled with, proceedings will be stayed until this has been done. McLagan V. McLagan, 11 B. C. R. 325, 2 W. L. R. 12.

Setting aside — Failure to name place of trial not fatal. Churchill v. Shand, 1 E. L. R 225.

Stamps — Insufficiency — Motion to dismiss a action — Deposit.] — A motion to dismiss an action for the insufficiency of the stamps affixed to the writ of summons is in the nature of an exception to the form, and must be accompanied by the deposit required by law. Durand v. Lecours, 8 Que. P. R. 418.

Style of Court — Judicial district — Amendment — Mechanics' Lien Act — Procedure — Originating summons. Cushing Brothers Co. v. Groos (N.W.T.), 4 W. L. R, 551.

Style of Court — Judicial district — Amendment. Theriault v. Evans (N.W.T.), 4 W. L. R. 550.

Writ signed by clerk of Court instead of local regristrar—Motion to set aside service of writ — Grounds. Crown Lumber Co. v. Fitzsimmons (Sask.), S W. L, R. 544.

5. RENEWAL.

Ex parte order — Withholding material evidence—Statute of Limitations. Langley v. Costigan, 5 O. W. R. 147.

Grands for — Sufficiency of—Statute of Limitations.]—An exparte order for the renewal of a writ of summons on the ground of inability to discover the defendant's place of residence having been made, it was shewn on a motion to set aside such order that the defendant had never changed his place of residence, and that it could readily be ascertained from the directory: — Held, that the order should not be set aside, the local Master who made the exparte order having been satisfied as to the efforts made to effect such service, and nothing having been withheld from him; despite the fact that, but for the existence of the writ, the ordinary period of limitation would have expired. Houland v. Dominion Bank, 15 P. R. 55, and Mair v. Cameron, 18 P. R. 484, distinguished. Canadian Bank of Commerce v. Tenant, 23 C. L. T. 202, 5 O. L. R. 524, 2 O. W. R. 277, 393.

Service — Rule 132.]—The time allowed for renewal of a writ of summons is, upon the proper construction of Rule 132, to be reckoned inclusive of the date of issue or of a former renewal. Black v. Green, 15 C. B. 262, 3 C. L. R. 38, and Anon., 11 W. R. 293, 32 L. J. N. S. Ex. SS, 7 L. T. N. S. 718, followed. Where the original writ of summons was issued on the 5th November, 1898, and was renewed on the 4th November, 1899, the renewal ran out on the 3rd November, 1909, and service thereafter was of no effect. Latird v. King, 21 C. L. T. 34, 162; 19 P. R. 307; 1 O. L. R. 51.

Statute of Limitations — Ex parte order—Master in Chambers—Local Judge.] —The Master in Chambers has jurisdiction to rescind an order made on the ex parte application of the plaintiff by a local Judge for the renewal of a writ of summons, if material evidence has, even unintentionally, been withheld. Such an order was rescinded where on the ex parte application the facts that the writ had expired and that the Statute of Limitations had run against the claim, were not brought to the notice of the local Judge. Williams v. Harrison, 24 C. L. T. 24, 6 O. L. R. 685, 2 O. W. R. 1061.

6. RETURN OF WRIT.

Dismissal for default of notice— Deposit of copy—Time.]—When a writ has not been returned, the defendant, in order to have the action dismissed for default, must not only give the plaintiff notice within three days from the expiration of the time allowed for appearance, but must also deposit in the record office his copy of the process within the same three days. Coté v. Corporation d'Irlande, 4 Q. P. R. 123.

Motion for leave to make return— Motion to dismiss—Costs—Leave to sue in forma pauperis.]—A motion to authorize a plaintiff to return a writ after the time has expired will be granted with costs of motion against the plaintiff.—2. In such case, a motion for compéd-fjeut, made after a motion for leave to return after time expired, should be dismissed without costs.—3. Leave to sue in formā pauperis will not be granted by the Superior Court when the action is more properly one for the Circuit Court (e.g., alimony.) Boiteau v. Boiteau, 5 Q. P. R. 301.

Motion to compel—Rights of defendant —Offer to discontinue—Costs.] — Where a plaintiff offers to discontinue his action without costs, after the launching of a motion to compel the return of the writ of summons, which return had been postponed sine die by consent of the parties, the Court will order the return of the writ, the defendant having acquired rights. Brown v. Tanguay, 9 Que.
P. R. 374.

Return—Time—Application to extend. | —An application to a Judge to be allowed to make a return as to service of original process in an action after the expiry of the delays, must be made in writing and not orally.
Hémant v. Hamel, 9 Que, P. R. 243.

Vacation—Extension of time—Consent —Security for costs.]—Writs of summons issued and served between 30th June and 1st September (the long vacation) must be returned within the same delay as at other times. The provision of Art. 13, C. C. P., that, in reckoning delays, the 1st September is deemed to be the next day after the 30th June, applies only to pleading and trial.—A writ of summons may be returned after the delay fixed by law, with the consent of the defendant, and such consent may be express or implied. And when a writ is returned after the expiration of the delay, and the defendant afterwards moves for security for costs, he will be held to have impliedly consented to the return so made, and a motion by him in the nature of an exception to the form, on the ground that it is too late, will be rejected. Morris v. International Portland Cement Co., 31 Que. S. C. 460, S Que. P. R.
240

Without bailiff's report of service
—Irregularity — Amendment.] — An action will not be dismissed upon exception to the form because the report of service does not appear upon the writ, if this irregularity is afterwards remedied; no prejudice having been caused, the exception to the form will be dismissed with costs against the plaintiff.
Soucy v. Forget. 5 Que. P. R. 154.

Account accompanying writ.]— An exception to the form based upon the fact that no copy of the account sued upon was served upon the defendant at the same time as process in the action, will be dismissed, if it appears that a copy of the account was served upon the defendant between the service and the return of the writ. Murphy v. Simpson, 2 Que. P. R. 556.

Addresses by defendants — Omission — Defendant residing out of Ontario—Setting aside writ — Nullity. State Savings Bank v. Columbia Iron Works, 6 O. L. R. 358, 2 O. W. R. 733.

Affidavit—Order.]—An affidavit leading to an order for an ex juris writ should shew the grounds on which the deponent believes that the plaintiff has a good cause of action. Northern Counties Investment Trust (Ltd.) v. Nathan, 7 B. C. R. 136.

Agent of defendant company—Proof of agency—Notice to company. Baird v. McLean Co., 8 O. W. R. 345.

Agent of defendant company resident out of Ontario—Service on alleged agent in Ontario—Cesser of business formerly carried on in Ontario. Mackensie v. Fleming H. Revell Co., 7 O. W. R. 414.

Bailiff—Wrong district—Amendment.]—A writ of summons addressed to the bailiffs of a certain district, and executed by a bailiff of another district, may, even after the lodging of an exception to the form founded upon such irregularity, be amended by addressing it to the bailiffs of the district in which it is desired to serve it. Houle v. Paquet, 20 Que. S. C. 207, 4 Que. P. R. 329.

Cause of action—Agreement—Place of performance.]—An expiris with having been issued to enforce an agreement between residents of British Columbia and England for transfer of shares in a provincial company, not in terms providing for its performance within the jurisdiction:—Held, that the writ should be set aside. Oppenheimer v. Sperling, 7 B. C. R. 96.

Company — Head office removed from province — Substituted service, Gold Run (Klondike) Mining Co. v. Canadian Gold Mining Co., 5 O. W. R. 411.

Company—Officer—Director. McDonald v. Consolidated Gold Lake Co., 40 N. S. R. 623.

Company — Regularity — Rules 146, 150—Service on clerk at company's office— Service brought to knowledge of company. Eastwood v. Harlan, 10 O. W. R. 460.

Deceased defendant — Appearance.]— The defendant having been sued by the plaintiff, there was filed in the defendant's name an appearance and an exception of the form, allering that the defendant died before the service of process, and that the service was irregular:—Held, that the plaintiff could not have served the defendant, who was dead, and for the same reason an appearance and defence could not be filed in the defendant's name. The parties were dismissed out of Court without costs. Madore v. Graham, 18 One, S. C. 129.

Declaration — Certified copy.] — The copy of the writ and declaration is one and the same document, which, therefore, requires only one and the same attestation. Thus, the service is not void by reason of the fact that the copy of the writ left with the defendant is not certified to be a true copy, if the declaration is so certified. United Counties Ru. Co. v. Sisters of the Precious Blood, 8 Que. Q. B. 406.

Defect in copy served—tregularity— Exception to the form—Amendment.]—The service upon the defendant of a copy of the writ of summons, which is a piece of black paper, in the sense that it indicates neither the names of the parties nor their occupations and domiclies nor the time for appearance, is void; such irregularities prejudice the defendant by depriving him of information which he has a right to have at the time of the service of process in the action; an exception to the form based upon such irregularities will be maintained, if the plaintiff does not ask to amend. Tranchemontagne v. Bellerose, 9 Que. P. R. 46.

Defect in copy served—Not addressed to defendants—Order validating service— Costs. Ames-Holden Co. v. Cochrane, 9 O. W. R. 825.

Delay—Insufficient time for appearance— Exception to form.]—A defendant has a right to complain, by way of exception to the form, of having been allowed, by reason of delay in service of the writ of summons served, an insufficient time for appearance, in view of the distance from the place of service to the place where the appearance is to be entered. Grondin v. Lagueux, 9 Que. P. R. 41.

Delay—Reasonableness.]—A delay of ten days between the issuance and service of a writ of summons is not unreasonable, and a petition for an order commanding the plaintiff to serve it, made five days after its issuance, will be dismissed. Savaria v. Maguire, 9 Que. P. R. 304.

Delay in—Death of sovereign—Nullity.]
—A writ of summon issued in the lifetime of her late Majesty and in her name, but served and reported after her death, is not on that account a nullity, and if a second action for the same cause is begun in the name of the King, a plea that the first action is still pending is a good plea. Ryan v. Fortier. 3 Que. P. R. 526.

Domicil — Service on attorney—Certificate — Deposit — Exception—Affidavits.]—The service of a writ of summons and declaration upon a defendant at his last known domicil and place of residence is regular, although the same is no longer his ordinary residence.—2. 4. Rule 47 of the Rules of Practice of the Superior Court, regarding affidavits, applies only to special demands, and not to pleadings. Higginson v. Reid, 5 Qu. P. R. 394.

Evasion.]—Where it appears by the return of the bailiff that the doors of the defendant's domicil are locked and barred, and that no reply is made to calls to open, the Judge may, under Art. 146, C. C. P., permit service to be effected by depositing copies at the door of defendant's domicil, after first ringing the bell and calling upon the occupant to permit him to enter and make service in the usual manner. Marlatt v. Lynn, 17 Ouc. S. C. 128.

Foreign company—Agent.]—A person who sells goods on commission for a foreign company, and who keeps samples in his office or carries them to customers whose orders he takes, these orders being filled by the company sending the goods directly to the customers, is not the agent of such company, within the meaning of Arts. 140-142, C. C. P., so as to authorize the service upon him of process in an action against the company. Macdougalt v. Schofteld Woollen Co., 16 Que. S. C. 411.

Foreign company—President served in jurisdiction — Prejudice.]—A foreign company suffers no prejudice if process in an action is served on its president personally, in the province of Quebec. Campbell v. Campbell, 8 Que. P. R. 193.

Foreign company—Service on ordinary agent in iurisdiction — Validity where attorney appointed under Foreign Companies Ordinance — Rules of Court — Repugnancy, Jones v. Central Canada Insurance Co. (Sask.), S.W. L. R. 614.

Foreign company - Waiver-Appearance.]—Service of process must be, if possible, personal, or in the case of a corporaupon the duly constituted agent; the substitutional method is to be followed only when prompt personal service appears by affidavit to be unavailable. Rule 146 regul-lates substituted service of process. Rule 167 covers miscellaneous proceedings in the progress of litigation, but is not to be used so as to nullify the special Rule applicable to writs of summons. And where the plain-tiff shewed that he knew where the head office of the defendants, a foreign corporation, was, and that they had no office or definite place of business within Ontario, and there was nothing to shew that they could not be easily served at the head office, an order for substituted service was vacated. The Court declined to consider the question whether the defendants had waived proper service by entering a conditional appearance, there having been no evidence before the Chancellor that an appearance had been entered, and he having refused to consider it. Young v. Dominion Construction Co., 20 C. L. T. 169, 19 P. R. 139.

Foreign company doing business in Nova Scotia—Order XLVII. — Dominion company — Service on agent. Manley v. Temperance, etc., Society, 40 N. S. R. 615.

Foreign corporation — Officer temporative in province — Setting aside service—Status of applicant.]—A writ of summons describing the defendant company as "doing business in the province of British Columbia" was served upon J. G. McLaren, the manager of the defendant company, who was passing through British Columbia en route to Dawson. The company were incorporated in England, and not registered or licensed in British Columbia:—Held, that the service was irregular. Also that it is not necessary that a person who has been served with a writ should be a real defendant to entitle him to apply to set it aside. Fall v. Klondyke Bonana Limited, 9 B. C. R. 493.

Foreign corporation — Rule 159 — "Carrying on business in Ontario"—Service on general manager in Ontario. Burnett v. General Accident Assurance Corporation. 6 O. W. R. 144.

Foreign defendants — Service on traveller — Sale of goods — Contract — Completion — Goods delivered and refused — Property of defendant in jurisdiction.] — In a suit against a foreign commercial partnership, service of the writ of summons made upon a travelling salesman of the partnership, whose powers are limited to taking orders at prices furnished to him by his employers, is not sufficient to give jurisdiction to the Courts of the province of Quebec. 2. A contract for the purchase of goods is complete at the place where the order is accepted by the vendor. 3. The presence in the province of Quebec of a package of goods bought by the plaintiff from the defendants, and refused by him, which package the defendants' traveller is charged to take back if it is untouched and uninjured, and which he alleges is not so untouched, does not constitute property in the jurisdiction sufficient to give to the Courts of the province of Quebec jurisdiction over the defendants. Malouf v. Zech, 5 Que. P. R. 153.

Foreign insurance company—Agent—Power of attorney—Gause of action.]—An English insurance company, who bad carried on business in Canada, and whose head office was at Toronto, by two powers of attorney had appointed its general agent at Toronto attorney to receive process under both R. S. O. 1897 c. 203, s. 66, and R. S. C. c. 124, s. 13, transferred its Canadian business to another company, and closed its Canadian offices, but the deposit under the Dominion Act had not been released, and neither of the powers of attorney had been cancelled. On a motion to set aside the service of a writ of summons, which was accepted by solicitors as if served on the Tcronto agent of the company, subject to the fight to move against it, on the ground that the company was not within the jurisdiction:—Held, that a writ of summons upon a policy issued in Quebec in respect of a loss upon property in Quebec was properly served upon the agent named as attorney at Toronto under Rule 159, and that the Court in Ontario, therefore, had jurisdiction to entertain the action.—Semble, that the power of attorney required to be filed under R. S. C. c. 124, s. 13, is to receive service of process in any suit instituted in any province of Canada in respect of any liability incurred in such province, and not in respect of any liability incurred in Canada. Armstrong v. Lancashire Fire Ins. Co., 22 C. L. T. 146, 2 O. L. R. 395.

Foreign unincorporated voluntary association - Parties - Incapacity Proper time to raise question.] - The right to maintain an action or the liability to be used can only be by or against persons as individuals, or as a corporation, or a part-nership, or where individuals are carrying on business in a name other than their own, or where they have been given the capacity to own property and to act by agents. local union of workmen, a purely voluntary association, occupying none of such capacities, are not liable to be sued; and a writ served upon them was therefore set aside. Taff Vale Rv. Co. v. Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, [1901] A. C. 429, dis-tinguished. Where it clearly appears that the association sued is not an entity, which may be sued by the name it bears, it is more convenient to set aside the service of the writ on a motion made therefor, than to allow the case to proceed to trial with a certainty of its ultimate dismissal, Metallic Roofing Co. of Canada v. Local Union No. 30, Analgamated Sheet Metal Workers' International Association, 23 C. L. T. 152, 5 O. L. R. 424, 2 O. W. R. 183, 266, 819, 844.

Frand — Foreigner — Judgment — Sale of lands — Title — Leave to defend.]—In an action by judgment creditors of a company for a declaration that the individual defendants were trustees of certain lands for the company and for a sale of such lands and payment of the plaintiffs' claim out of the proceeds, an order was made for substituted service by mail of the writ of summons upon H., one of the defendants, upon an affidavit of the plaintiffs' solicitor shewing that the writ had been sent to a certain person for service in Alaska, and exhibiting a letter from that person giving the name of H.'s employer and certain information about him, but not stating definitely where he was. Proof of service in the way directed by the order having been given, and none of the defendants appearing, judgment was entered for the plaintiffs, and the lands sold thereunder:-Held, that the order for substituted service had been granted on suffi-cient material. 2. That no fraud on the part of the plaintiffs had been shewn. 3. Following Moore v. Martin, 1 N. W. T. R., part 2, p. 48, that service of the writ itself upon H., though a foreigner out of the jurisdicwas neither a nullity nor irregular, 4. That, although H. had no actual notice of the proceedings, the Court had jurisdiction to deal with his interest in the property, and the title of the purchaser should not be interfered with. 5. But, as H, had disclosed a defence on the merits, he should be let in to defend upon terms. Conrad v. Alberta Mining Co., 20 C. L. T. 108.

Heirs of deceased—Infants—Curator— Renunciation — Vacant succession.]—The general provision of Art. 135, C. C. P., authorising service upon the heirs of a person deceased within the previous six months, without mentioning their names or residences, by leaving the document for them at the former domicil of the deceased, does not apply to heirs who are not capable of pleading, e.g., minors, and who, moreover, at the time of the service were not actually interested, their tutrix having renounced the succession of the deceased in their behalf. 2. The fact that the curator to the vacant succession may have had knowledge of the service of the writ and made no objection, cannot be taken as equivalent to a service nor avail to support an exparte judgment obtained without legal service. Turcotte v. Dansercau, 27 S. C. R. 583, followed. Marion v. Brien dit Desrochers 23 Que. S. C. 45, 52.

In Ontario on defendant resident abroad—Appearance—Plea of jurisdiction —Dismissal of action — Frivolous or vexatious action — Master in Chambers—Rule 261. Delap v, Codd, 2 O. W. R. 790, 849.

Individual defendant — Partnership
—Name — Place of business — Review.]—
Held, Taschereau, J., dissenting, that an individual carrying on business alone under a partnership name may be served at the place where he carries on such business by leaving copies of the writ of summons and declaration with a grown-up person left in charge of his office, and such individual, if he is not prejudiced thereby, cannot by inscription in review, demand the setting aside of a judgment entered for default by alleging that the service is void. Bourdon v. Bradshave. 18 Que. S. C. 388.

Insufficient delay for return — Service a nullity — Exception to form — Prejudice.] — The insufficiency of the time allowed for return of the writ of summons served upon the defendant absolutely nullifies the service, and the defendant is entitled to succeed upon an exception to the form without being obliged to allege or establish prejudice. Larue v. Poulin, 17 Que. K. B. 188, 9 Que. P. R. 157.

Irregularities — Jurisdiction—Foreign lands — Confirming proceedings — Conditional appearance. Saskatchevan Land and Homestead Co. v. Leadley, 2 O. W. R. 745, 850, 917, 944, 1075, 1112.

Irregularity — Dismissal of action.]—An action will not be dismissed upon exception to the form because the writ, addressed to the balliffs of the district of Beauharnois, has been served upon the defendant at Montreal by a balliff of the district of Montreal, no prejudice being aieged or proven. Bromwell v. O'Farrell, 5 Que. P. R. S5.

Irregularity—Re-service—Exception to form—Costs.]—A writ of summons and the declaration annexed thereto irregularly served upon the defendant, may be regularly served again upon him after the filing of an exception to the form complaining of the illegality of the first service, provided that the second service is made within six months of the date of the writ, and in that case the plaintiff will be ordered to pay the costs of an exception to the form. Pattle v. Renaud. S Que. P. R. 389.

Nullity—Leave to reserve.]—The service of the writ of summons and declaration being void by reason of the disqualification of the person effecting it, permission to reserve—the writ being still in force—will be granted on conditions imposed by the Court. Marsolate V. Grenier, 3 Que. P. R. 142.

Mullity—Re-service.]—Service of a writ of summons if made otherwise than upon the defendant personally, or at his place of domicil, or at the place of his ordinary residence, or at his place of business, is absolutely a nullity, and the Judge cannot allow the plaintiff to re-serve, because the service is not only irregular, but non-existent. Hudon v, Joneas, 3 Que. P. R. 524.

On foreign corporation — Service in jurisdiction — Agent.]—A wirt of summons for service within the jurisdiction was, with the service thereof, set aside, where it appeared that the defendant was a foreign corporation, having no agent within the jurisdiction who could be served. Ehman v. New Hamburg Mfg. Co., 4 Terr. L. R. 363.

On insurance company — Power of attorney — Removal of office from province. Armstrong v. Lancashire Fire Ins. Co., 3 O, L. R. 395, 2 O. W. R. 599.

Order allowing—Jurisdiction of local Judge — Affidavit — Setting aside order.]—A local Judge of the Supreme Court has jurisdiction to make an order for an exjuris writ. The affidavit leading to the writ should be reasonably precise as to the essential facts alleged to constitute the cause of action, and if there are omissions of substance, the order should not be made. A Supreme Court Judge has power on motion to set aside an ultra vires order made by a Judge of limited jurisdiction. Tate v. Hennessey, 20 C. L. T. 343, 7 Brit. Col. L. R. 262.

Original service—Return of copy.— The Court will allow copies of the writ of summons and the declaration to be substituted for the originals, where the originals have by mistake been served on the defendant. Laricière v. Gauthier, 9 Que. P. R. 287.

Partnership — Action against, as corporate body — Amendment.]—When members of a partnership are described in the writ of summons as a corporate body, and are sued as such, the service of the writ made upon them is radically bad, and an amendment to the writ and declaration will not be granted. Gas Electricity, and Power Co. v. Syracuse Smelting Works, S Que. P. R. 301.

Person described as defendant — Namesake of person intended — Attempt of latter to plead want of proper service — Amendment — Exception to form.]—If the person described in the writ of summons and regularly served therewith is merely a name-sake of the person with whom the plaintiff had dealt, the latter cannot appear and plead, in the name of the defendant, that the writ was not served upon him personally, or at his domicil.—2. A plaintiff cannot by amendment change the Christian name of the defendant, and serve his debtor with a copy of the writ and declaration originally served upon a namesake of the defendant; an exception to the form made by the party served in the second place will be maintained, and a motion by the plaintiff to amend his writ and declaration by changing the Christian name of the original defendant dismissed. Craig v. Bourgeois, 9 Que. P. R. 417.

Place of — Business office — Domicil—Married woman — Bailiff's return — Declinatory acception.]—If a woman carries on business in the cities of Montreal and Quebec, in the name under which she is impleaded, the service of the writ of summons at her office and place of business in the city of Montreal is valid, although she has her residence at Quebec, and especially when her husband has been served at his domicil at the said last city.—Quare, how far a bailiff's return is debatable under a declinatory exception. Reid v. Audet, 9 Que P. R. 228.

Place of—Company — Dominion incorporation — No branch office in province — Provisions of charter — Service on agent.]
—A federal company having its head office in the province of Ontario, and having no branch office in the province of Quebec, cannot be considered a foreign company, and the service of process in an action upon it must be made in the manner provided by its charter.—2. The service upon a company's agent who does business for it on commission, in Quebec, at his own office, leased and paid for by himself, is irregular and illegal. North Shore Doec Railway and Navigation Co, v. Ontario Accident Insurance Co., 9 Que, P. R. 236.

Place of — Office of firm—Prejudice — Costs.]—The office of a commercial firm in which the defendant is a partner, is not that of the defendant, within the meaning of Art. 128, C. P. Nevertheless, the service in this case not having caused prejudice, an exception to the form was dismissed with costs. Patterson v. Levy, 4 Que. P. R. 196.

Place of business — Domicil—Judge's order.]—It is only in default of a regular domicil or of an ordinary residence, that a defendant may be served with process at his place of business. 2. In spite of an order of a Judge permitting service at the place of business, upon a report of a bailiff to the effect that the domicil of the defendant is closed and unoccupied, an action in which process had been served in accordance with such order will be dismissed upon exception to the form. Soucy v. Electric Printing Co., 5 Que. P. R. 107.

Place of service—Bailiff—Informality—Exception to form.]— The service of a writ of summons, addressed to a bailiff of the district of Saint Francis, upon a defendant in the district of Arthabaska, by a bailiff of the latter district, is not a nullity per se; and an exception to the form will not lie where no prejudice is suffered. Hackett v. Courchene, 19 Que. S. C. 215.

President of trade union—Effect of registration of union under Ontario Insurance Act — Body corporate — Party to action. Pepper v. Ottawa Typographical Union No. 102, 8 O. W. R. 409, 445.

Proces-verbal—Irregularity — Exception to form — Fresh service — Costs.]—
Where process in an action is served by a literate person, in the absence of the balliff, the proces-verbal of the service must be regularly sworn to; that is an essential formality. The plaintiff, however, will be permitted, where this has not been done, to serve a new copy of the demand, upon payment of the costs of an exception to the form. Morand v. Markson, 9 Que. P. R. 40.

Proof of—Oath—Person administering— Default judgment.]—A judgment cannot be obtained by default against a defendant served in another province, if the oath of the person who has signed the report of service has been taken before a notary, instead of before one of the persons designated by Art. 137, C. P. Lydon v. Moore, 4 Que. P. R. 169.

Regularity — Order — Amendment — English forms.]—A writ of summons was issued in the form of a writ for service within the jurisdiction, in which the time for appearance was that fixed in such cases, and in which the defendant was stated to be a resident of the judicial district wherein the write was issued. It appeared that the defendant was not in fact at the time within the Territories, but that, for portions of each of several years previous, he had resided within the said judicial district :- Held, following Fry v. Moors, 23 Que. B. D. 395, that the writ was not irregular. Subsequently an order was made giving the plaintiff leave to serve the said writ on the defendant out of the jurisdiction and extending the time therein fixed for appearance; but the order did not expressly amend or authorise the amendment of the writ .-Held, as to the objection that a concurrent writ for service ex juris should have been issued, or that the original writ should have been amended, that the Judge's order should be looked upon as involving an exercise of the powers given by E. M. R. 1037, and also as a constructive amendment of the writ. None of the British forms of writs of summons are introduced into the Territorial practice.—Semble, that the one form provided by the Judicature Ordinance is adaptable even to the case of foreign defendants ex juris, inasmuch as it is in effect a notice, not a command. On an application for leave to serve a writ out of the jurisdiction the plaintiff need shew only a prima facic case within the provisions of the Ordinance. Moore v. Martin, 1 Terr. L. R. 236. See also S. C., 18 S. C. R. 634.

Service on stranger — Dismissal of action.]—If the copy of the writ of summons is left with a person who is a complete stranger to the defendant and has no authority to receive the writ for him and this in a house which is neither the residence of the defendant, nor his domicil, nor his office, nor the place where he boards, the action will be dismissed upon exception to the form. Lapointe v. St. Onge. 3 Que. P. R. 68.

Time—Dismissal of action.]—Service of a writ effected more than six months after issue, the writ not having been renewed, is void, and the action will be dismissed upon exception to the form. Langeois v. Grand Trunk Riv. Co., 4 Que. P. R. 162.

Validity—Bailiff.)—The service of process in an action made by a bailiff of the district where the writ issued, is valid, although the writ is addressed to a bailiff of another district. Lapierre v. Brunet, 6 Que, P. R. 384.4

Validity—Election of domicil.]—Where a party has elected domicil at the office of the prothonotary for all the purposes of a certain obligation, the service of process in an action at that office will be valid. Forest v. Robert, 8 Que. P. R. 440.

Action on money covenant — Plac of payment — Breach within jurisdiction — Performance of contract - Breach of same contract without jurisdiction — Action for both causes.] — In determining whether a cause of action is founded on a breach within the jurisdiction of a contract which ought to be performed within the jurisdiction, the Courts must look at the contract and at the facts which eixsted at the time when the contract was made, and then determine whether, having regard to the terms, the contract was one which ought to be performed within the jurisdiction .- 2. Where in an action on a covenant to pay money there is no place specified in the contract for the payment, the debtor must follow his creditor, and pay where his creditor is; and if the creditor is within the jurisdiction, and the contract was made without, and the parties under obligation and residing without the jurisdiction make default in payment, the cause of action arises within the jurisdiction .- 3. Action on promissory note made and payable abroad — Indorser resident in Quebec,]—Article 103, C. P., does not authorise the holder of a promissory note made out of the province of Quebec, by a non-resident, and payable out of the province, to sue the maker thereof before the Courts of the province of Quebec, because a subsequent indorser of the note, co-defendant, is domiciled therein. Hackett v. Ryan, 8 Que. P. R. 380.

Action to rescind purchase of shares.]—An action to rescind the purchase from the defendant of shares in an incorporated company on the ground of misrepresentation, is not an action within Order XI., so as to enable the plaintiff to obtain an explicit with against the defendant. Davies v. Dunn, 21 C. L. T. 364, 8 B. C. R. 68.

Affidavit—Grounds of belief—Cause of action — Order XI., Rule 2. Kennedy v. O'Brien, 40 N. S. R. 609.

Appearance—Motion to withdraw—Attornment to juriadiction.]—An application by a defendant resident in Montreal who had been served there with the writ of summons in an action brought in Ontario on two promissory notes payable, if at all, in Montreal, for leave to withdraw his appearance and enter a conditional appearance, was refused, it having been shewn that the defendant had not only appeared but had also successfully resisted a motion for immediate judgment on material alleging his intention to counterclaim to have a partnership between the plaintiff and himself in Ontario wound up. Croit v. McCullough, 11 O. L. R. 282, 7 O. W. R. 152.

Bill of exchange—General acceptance—Lew loci—Place of payment.]—A bill of exchange dated and drawn at Halifax by the Dominion Antimony Co., Ltd., and addressed to the St. Helens Smelting Co., Manchester, England, was accepted at Manchester, payable at the office of the Manchester and Liverpool District Banking Co., London. An order having been made for service out of the jurisdiction, and judgment given refusing to set the same aside:—Held, affirming that judgment, that, under the Bills of Exchange Act, 1890, s. 71 (1) b, the interpretation of the acceptance was to be determined by the law of the place where the bill was accepted, and that as so interpreted the acceptance was not qualified but general, and the acceptor must seek ais creditor. The action was thus founded on the breach within the jurisdiction: O. XI., r. 1 c. Sanders v. St. Helens Smelting Co., 1 E. L. R. 56, 39 N. S. R. 370.

Cause of action — Conversion — Rule 162 (e).]—The plaintiff sued two defendants, one of whom, O., lived in the Province of Quebec, for conversion of a picture. The other defendant, W., as the plaintiff stated, in breach of an agreement with the plaintiff in Ontario, delivered the picture to O. in Quebec, and O. wrongfully held it there. O, stated on affidavit that W. pledged the picture to him in Quebec, lawfully and in good faitia, for money lent, and denied having any other dealings as to the picture, or any dealings whatever in Ontario:—Held, that the cause of action, if any, against O. did not come within the terms of Rule 162 (e). and therefore service of the writ of summons upon him out of the jurisdiction should not be permitted. Rowrk V. Wiedenbach, 21 C. L. T. 292, 1 O. L. R. 581.

Cause of action, when arising—Contract—Conditional appearance.]—The contract was not in writing, and a writ had been issued in the Province of Ontario and served in Manitoba, on affidavits setting forth that the contract was to be performed by payment in Ontario:—Held, that this satisfied what is required by Rule 1246, and, although defendants by affidavit disputed and said that the contract was made and to be performed in Manitoba, yet the issue could not and should not be determined in a summary way on affidavits, but the proper course for the defendant was under the Ontario Rule 173, providing for conditional appearance, favouring the former equitable practice, which was to enter such appearance and raise the want of jurisdiction by plea or demurrer. Canadian Radiator Co. v. Cuthbertson, 5 O. W. R. 66, 9

Contract—Breach—Place where contract broken — Sale of goods—Place of payment,] —The plaintiffs sued for breach of contract and for goods sold and delivered. Defendants carried on business and had their head office in Montreal, and the plaintiffs carried on business in Toronto. The defendants at on usiness in Toronto. The defendants at Montreal gave to a travelling agent of the plaintiffs an order for goods to be delivered f, o. b. at Toronto:—Held, that the acceptance of the order by post was within the contemplation of the parties, and the con-tract must be taken to have been made when the plaintiff's letter of acceptance was posted at Toronto; and that the property in the goods passed to the defendants upon a de-livery being made at Toronto, and a breach of the contract by non-acceptance was a breach within Ontario of an obligation to be performed within Ontario. The Chief Justice of the Common Pleas (delivering the judgment of the Divisional Court). expressed the view that the omission from the Ontario Rule 162 of the words "according to its terms," which are in the corresponding English Rule, leaves it open, in construing the contract in order to determine whether it is to be performed within Ontario, to apply the rule of law that the debtor must seek out his creditor to pay him, unless the sees out its circular to pay lim, unless the application of it is inconsistent with the terms of the contract. Phillip v. Malone, 3 O. L. R. 47, 492, 1 O. W. R. 200, followed. Blackley v. Elite Costumes Co., 4 O. W. R. 417. Affirmed, 5 O. W. R. 57, 25 C. L. T. 92, 9 O. L. R. 57.

Contract — Money had and received — Place of payment.]—The defendants, a foreign company, contracted with the plaintiffs, a Victoria firm, to carry coal from Seattle to Alaska, and were paid the amount of the contract price. When the coal arrived at Dyea, the defendants demanded and collected from the plaintiffs' agent an additional sum for taking the coal in lighters from Skagway to Dyea. The defendants' agent promised to repay the amount in Victoria: — Held, esting aside an ex juris writ, that the claim for this amount really arose out of the contract, and therefore the Court had no jurisdiction. Shallcross v. Alaska S. S. Co., 8 B. C. R. 203.

Contract — Place of performance — Quebec law—Discretion. — An agreement between the plaintiff and defendants provided for the purchase by the defendants, who resided and carried on business in Montreal, in the Province of Quebec, from the plaintiff, of certain plant and machinery and stock in trade of a business carried on by him at Montreal. The agreement was signed by the plaintiff in Toronto, in the Province of Ontario, and afterwards by the defendants in Montreal. The plaintiff sued for the price of the goods referred to in the latter part of the agreement, alleging that he had elected to sell the goods to the defendants, and had notified them of his willingness to do so, whereupon they became liable to pay him the price:—Held, that the contract was made in Montreal, and the obligations arising out of it were to be governed by the law of Quebec, according to which the domicil of the debtor is the place of payment, and therefore the action was not founded on a breach within Ontario of a contract to be performed within Ontario of a contract to the domicil of summons out of Ontario should not be allowed: Rule 162 (c). The obligation to pay did not arise directly from provisions of the agreement, but in order to make it complete there must have been an election to sell, and notice thereof to the defendants, and notice of the election was given by letter received by the defendants in Montreal. A proper discretion was exercised in setting saide an order allowing service of the writ out of Ontario. Comber v. Leyland, [1888] A. C. 524, referred to. Phillips v. Malone, 22 C. L. T. 32, 3 O. L. R. 47.

An appeal from above judgment was dismissed with costs by D. C: — Held, per Falconbridge, C.J., that if the agreement of the 1st May, 1899, was complete, the contract was made in Quebec: but, if it was to be completed by the subsequent acts of the parties, there was no authority to the plaintiff to use the post office as a means of communication. Per Street, J.—The plaintiff might have notified the defendants that he desired them to become the purchasers of the goods, but he had no right to prescribe the dates at which the defendants should pay for them. Their letter was only a proposal to take the goods upon the terms proposed therein, requiring an acceptance by the defendants to make it a complete contract, the onus of shewing which was on the plaintiffs, and was not satisfied. Phillips v. Malone, 22 C. L. T. 159, 3 O. L. R. 492, 1 O. W. R. 200.

Where from the terms of a contract it did not appear that its performance should be within the jurisdiction, and a motion was made to set aside an order for service of a summons out of the jurisdiction, considering that the circumstances disclosed in the affidavits made it appear that the contract was to be performed within the jurisdiction. An appeal from this decision was dismissed with costs. Pickford v. Hambury-American Packet Co., 40 N. S. R. 152.

Contract for sale of land—Place of making and performance — Completed contract.]—A contract made by correspondence between a resident purchaser and a non-resident vendor for sale of land in the Territories—the acceptance of the vendor's offer to sell having been mailed in the Territories—is one which, according to the terms thereof, ought to be performed within the Territories.—In an action for damages for breach of such a contract:—Held, that service out of the jurisdiction was properly allowed.—The question, where it is doubtful, whether there was a completed contract should not be determined on an application to set aside the order for service ex juris. Bishop v. Scott, 6 Terr. L. R. 54.

Columbia and return, his duties on such return requiring him to call at a number of places in Ontario, to make his report to the plaintiffs, and return his samples. After entering on the performance of the contract, and while in British Columbia, he wrote resigning his position. The plaintiffs refused to accept his resignation, and, after allowing a sufficient time to elapse for the performance of the contract, they brought an action in Ontario for breach thereof:—Held, by the Master in Chambers, dismissing an application to set aside an order for service of the writ of summons out of Ontario, that there was a breach of the contract within Ontario for which the plaintiffs were entitled to sue. On appeal to a Judge in Chambers, this order was varied by limiting the action to breaches in Ontario; but reserving to the plaintiffs the right to bring actions for breaches which occurred out of Ontario. Foreign company—Transfer of assets in Ontario to Ontario company—Defence.]
—On a motion to set aside a writ of summons, the order permitting service out of the jurisdiction, and the service thereunder, in an action brought in the Province of Ontario, by shareholders resident in the Province of Nova Scotia of a loan company incorporated in and with its head office and assets (real estate mortgages), except $1,200 in mortgages on land in Ontario, in the Province of Quebec, and as loan company and its liquidators, resident in the Province of Quebec, and a loan company incorporated in and with its head office in the Province of Ontario, to set aside an agreement transferring the assets of the Quebec company to the Ontario company, and making the shareholders of the Quebec company shareholders in the Ontario company, and for distribution of the proceeds of the assets, etc., on the ground that the Courts in Ontario had no jurisdiction and that the case did not fall within any of the clauses of Rule 162—Held, that the action was not brought with reference to real estate in the same sense as Henderson v. Bank of Hamilton, 23 S. C. R. 716, and similar cases were; and that the case fell within Con. Rule 162, clauses (g) and (h). Motion dismissed without prejudice to defendants setting up want of jurisdiction as a defence. Mackey v. Colonial Investment and Loan Co., 22 C. L. T. 389, 4 O. L. R. 571, 1 O. W. R. 569, 592, 646.

Foreigner — Notice.]—The question in what circumstances and to what extent provisions in the Rules under the English Judicature Act are to be held incorporated with the Judicature Ordinance discussed. English Order XI. (Marginal Rules 64-70) is not in force in the Territories. The Judicature Ordinance, 1893, s. 32, authorizes an order for the service of a writ of summons ex juris, though the party to be served is not a British subject, and the other should provide for service of the writ of summons, not of a notice thereof. Notice—Company defendant.)—The defendant company were incorporated by Act of the Parliament of Canada, and had their head office at Winnipeg. The plaintiffs obtained exparte an order giving them leave to issue a writ of summons against the defendant company and to serve a notice of the same upon the company in Winnipeg. The notice having been served, the defendant company moved to set aside the service as irregular:—Held, that Order XI., Rule 4, did not apply. The defendant company were not a foreign company, and therefore the writ and not a notice thereof should have been served. The service of the notice was set aside with costs. Manley v. Great West Life Assurance Co., 23 C. L. T. 205.

Order before action—Parties—Causes of action—Joinder, 1—The proper practice under the Rules as they stand (Rules of 1897, Nos. 120, 128, 164) is to obtain, before the issue of the writ of summons, an order fixing the time for appearance to be inserted in the writ proposed to be issued, and allowing it to be served out of the jurisdiction. Where the affidavit filed on an application for such an order shewed that the cause of action alleged against three of the defendants, one of whom lived in Ontario, was the causing an information to be laid against the plaintiff in Quebec, and the plaintiff to be arrested upon a warrant in Ontario by the fourth defendant and taken to Quebec and prosecuted there upon a criminal charge of which he was acquited, and that against the fourth defendant, the unnecessary and unjustifiable handenfing of the plaintiff was not entitled to join the fourth defendant with the other three, the causes of action being separate and having mothing to do with each other.—Held, also, that, as ene of the three remaining defendants lived in the laying of the information, he was a proper party to the action, within the meaning of Rule 192 (g), and an order should be made for the issue and service of the writ upon the other thore resolute outer of the sum of the sum of the lasses and service of the the reference of the sum of the su

Order permitting—Motion to set aside—Waiver. Chambre v. Gundy, 2 O. W. R. 243, 244.

Parties—Injunction—Con. Rule 162.]—An order allowing service of a writ of summons out of the jurisdiction cannot be supported under clause (e) of Con. Rule 162, unless the injunction can properly be asked as against the defendant out of the jurisdiction sought to be served. In proceeding under clause (g) of Con. Rule 162 the defendant within the jurisdiction should be served with the writ and then an order applied for leave to serve the defendant resident out of the jurisdiction with a concurrent writ, and failure to proceed in this way is not such an irregularity merely as can be condoned. Collins v. North British and Mercantile Ins. Co., [1894] 3 Ch. 228, followed. Livingstone v. Sibbald, 15 P. R. 315, Mackay v. Colonial Investment and Loan Co., 4 O. L. R. 571, 22 C. L. Powers of territorial legislature— Jaidicature Ordinance—Small Debt Procedure.]—A colony having authority to establish courts of civil jurisdiction and to provide for procedure therein has also the power necessarily incident thereto of providing for service of process upon defendants residing out of its jurisdiction. The legislature of the Territories has authority under the powers conferred by the N. W. T. Act to make such provisions. Section 32 of Ordinance 5 of 1894 (amending J. O. 1898), relating to small debt procedure, provides; "The summons shall be returnable: (c) Where the defendant resides in any place in Canada outside the Territories, or in the United States of America, at the expiration of 20 days from the service thereof; (d) Where the defendant resides in any part of the United Kingdom, at the expiration of 30 days from the service thereof; (e) In any of the above cases it shall not be necessary to obtain an order for service out of the jurisdiction:"—Held, that neither an order for leave to issue a writ for service out of the jurisdiction, nor an order for leave to serve such a writ, is necessary under this procedure. Nor is it necessary that a proper case for service out of the jurisdiction can shew affirmatively that the action is not one in which service out of the jurisdiction would be allowed under the ordinary practice of the Court, he would be entitled to an order setting aside the service. McCarthy v. Brener, 2 Terr. L. R. 230.

Rule 162—Cause of action where arising—Contract—Place of payment—Conditional appearance. Davis v. Morrison, 11 O. W. R. 423.

Rule 162 (e)—Tort committed within Ontario.)—It is only where the tort for which the plaintiff brings action has been "committed" within Ontario, that Con. Rule 162 (c) entitles him to ask the Court to entertain an action against a non-resident defendant who is to be served with process abroad.—An order permitting service upon the defendants abroad was set aside where the cause of action alleged against the defendants, a company engaged in the manufacture of explosives in Scotland, was that they were negligent in allowing a fuse, which had been purchased by the plaintiff's employers, and which injured the plaintiff at a place in Ontario, to be manufactured and sold in a defective condition, the maner in which the fuse reached the plaintiff's employers not being alleged or suggested. The manufacture and sale must be deemed to have taken place in Scotland, and, although the invasion of the plaintiff's right of personal security occurred in Ontario, the tort comprises also the wrongful act or omission of the alleged tor-feasor. Order of the Master in Chambers and Mabee, J., affirmed. Anderson v. Nobels Explosive Co., 12 O. L. R. 644, 8 O. W. R. 439, 558, 644.

goods shipped in the same way. Before this order was filled the defendants were sued in England for infringement of copyright in respect of a part of the goods, and in consequence returned the goods covered by the second order, and refused to pay for what they so returned:—Held, that the property in the goods passed to the purchasers on the delivery on board the vess.l at Boston, and an action would thereupon lie in Ontario, which was the place for payment, for goods sold and delivered. The purchasers were entitled to inspect before accepting, but, even in a case of a sale by sample, prima facie the place of delivery is the place for inspection, and there was nothing in the contract to rebut the presumption; and therefore the action came within Ontario of a contract to be performed within Ontario; and service of the writ of summons on the defendants out of Ontario was properly allowed. 2. That it was not necessary for the plaintiffs, in obtaining an experim order allowing them to serve that the defendants out of Ontario was properly allowed. 2. That it was not necessary for the plaintiffs, in obtaining an experim order allowing them to serve that the defendants out the plaintiffs, and that they will be a summon them to the plaintiffs, and that they could be a summon them to the plaintiffs, and that they could be a summon of an Ontario at the time of the application, or that the defendants had paid for all the goods which they retained. 3. That a proper discretion had been exercised in favour of an Ontario action; it was not a case in which the plaintiffs, should be compelled to sue the defendants in England. Unifecensed foreign corporation — Method of services—Publication — Time for appearance.]—Section 146 the companies Act, R. S. B. C. 1897 c. 44, the companies company. Section 147 provides that a provide company. Section 147 provides that a gainst the company by delivering the same at Victoria to the registrar of the Supreme Court. Section 148 enacts that it shall be the duty of such registrar to cause to be inserted in four regular issues of the British Columbia Gazette, consecutively following the delivery of such writ of summons to him, a notice of such writ of summons to him, a memorandum of the date of delivery, stating generally the nature of the relief sought, the time limited, and the place mentioned for entering an appearance. Section 149 enacts that after such four issues the delivery of such writ or summons: — Held, in the case of an issue of an ordinary eight-day writ under part VII., that it is the duty of the registrar to notify the defendant in the publication.—Per Iriving, J.—As the writ is a writ for service on a foreign corporation, without the jurisquiction, application to a Judge for leave to issue the writ and proceed under the Act is necessary before any writ is issued. The Judge in giving leave would limit the time within which appearance should be entered. Youddl V. Toronto and British Columbia Lumber Co., 12 B. C. R. 72.

(c) Substitutional Service.

Extra-provincial company—Affidavit—New material on application to discharge order—Discretion.]—An affidavit leading to a discharge order or Discretion.]—An affidavit leading to an order for substituted service is a jurisdictional affidavit. An affidavit leading to an order for substituted service, under s. 130 of the Companies Act, on an extra-provincial company licensed to do business in British Columbia, should shew clearly that the company is an extra-provincial one licensed to do business in the province. On an application to set aside an order for substituted service it is discretional with the Judge to allow the plaintiff to read further affidavit setting out facts omitted in the affidavit on which the order was made, and where in the exercise of his discretion he refused leave, the Court on appeal declined to interfere. Centre Ster Minney Co. v. Rossland Great Western Minney, Limited, 24 C. L. T. 100, 10 B. C. R. 262.

Frand—Foreigner—Judgment—Sale of leads—Title—Leave to defend.]—In an action by judgment creditors of a company for a declaration that the individual defendants were also as the sum of the property and too a sale of such lands and payment and too a sale of such lands and payment and for a substitute of the plaintiffs claim out of the proceeds, an order the med for substitute of the plaintiffs solicity of the med for substitute of the plaintiffs solicity of the plaintiffs solicity of the plaintiffs and exhibiting a letter from that person, giving the name of H: 8 employer and certain information about him, but not stating definitely where he was. Proof of service in the way directed by the order having been given, and none of the defendants appearing, judgment was entered for the plaintiffs, and the lands sold thereunder:—Held, that the order for substituted service had been granted on sufficient material. 2. That no fraud on the part of the plaintiffs had been shewn. 3. Following Moore v. Martin, 1 N. W. T. Reps., part 2, p. 48, that service of the writ itself upon H., though a foreigner out of the jurisdiction, was neither a nullity nor irregular. 4. That, although H. had no actual notice of the proceedings, the Court had jurisdiction to deal with his interest in the property, and the title of the purchaser should not be interfered with. 5. But, as H. had disclosed a defence on the merits, he should be let in to defend upon terms. Corrad v. Alberta Mining Co., 20 C. L. T. 108, 20 C. L. T. 102, 4 Terr. L. R. 322.

Mandate—Return of service—Contestation—Form—Nullity of service—Projudice |
—The service of the writ of summons in an action against a defendant residing outside the province, but who has a place of business in the city of Montreal, cannot be made upon a third party who manages his busines during his absence, without proof that the defendant has given him a mandate, which could authorise creditors to summon him at the domicil of such third party.—Z. A defendant may be allowed to contest the process-crebal of the writ of summons in a motion of the nature of an exception to the form.—3. The nullity of the summons in-volves of itself and by its nature a prejudice towards the person who invokes it and of which the Court is bound to take cognisance. Fairbanks v. Howley, 10 Que. F. R. 72.

Motion by person served to set aside —Practice — Costs. Bound v. Bell, 9 O. W. R. 541.

Motion by person served to set aside order and service—Status of applicant—Knowledge of defendant's abode — Defendant out of the jurisdiction—Dismissal of motion — Costs. Curran v. Curran, 12 O. W. R. 718.

Motion to set aside—Status of applicant — Solicitor!—Where a solicitor who was served with the write of summon for the defendant, under an order an exterior and stational service, applied in his own name, but on the defendant she healf, to set aside the service:—Held, that he had no locus standi. The Court will not set aside substitutional service if it appears or can fairly be inferred that the defendant has notice of the proceedings.—Semble, that if the solicitor were not acting for or in communication with the defendant, he might have sent back the copy of the writ served, or might, as an officer of the Court, have advised the Court that an error had been committed in ordering service upon him; and even a person who is not an officer of the Court may move to set aside the service if he is not an agent. Decision of Master in Chambers, 23 C. L. T. 135, 6 O. L. R. 356, 2 O. W. R. 921, affirmed on different grounds. Taylor v. Taylor. 24 C. L. T. 19, 6 O. L. R. 545, 2 O. W. R. 921, 953.

8. SMALL DEBT PROCEDURE, N. W. T.

Failure to serve—Alias writ—Limitation of actions.]—A writ of summons (under the small debt procedure) had been issued in an action on a debt before the period after which it would become barred by the Limitations Ordinance had expired; it was, however, never served; but after the expiry of the period fixed by the Ordinance an alias writ of summons was issued:—Held, in view of the provisions of Rule 542 of the Judicature Ordinance (C. O. 1898 c. 21), the issue of the alias writ of summons prevented the operation of the Limitations Ordinance, and that therefore, the Ordinance afforded no defence to the action. Curry v. Brotman, 4 Terr. L. R. 369.

Meaning of "debt"—Claim for wrongful dismissal.]—A claim by a servant hired by the month against his master for wrongful dismissal in the middle of the month, does not fall within the meaning of the words "all claims and demands for debt" in Rule 602 of the Judicature Ordinance, 1898, and proceedings to recover the same cannot be taken under the small debt procedure, and it appears that the defendant has not been in any way prejudiced, the Court or a Judge will, under the power given by Rule 538, direct that the writ of summons and the service thereof shall stand, but that the action shall continue as an action under the ordinary procedure. McNeilly v. Beattie, 20 C. L. T. 292, 4 Terr. L. R. 360.

Place of entering suit.]—In a small debt action where the cause of action arises within the district of a deputy clerk, and the defendant resides within the said district, the writ must be issued out of the office of the deputy clerk of the district, and a writ issued by the clerk of the district from his own office will be set aside as irregular. Sharples v. Powell, 20 C. L. T. 201, 4 Terr. L. R. 94.

Place of issue.]—In a small debt action, in the N. W. T., where the cause of action arises within the district of the deputy clerk, and the defendant resides within the district, the writ of summons must be issued out of the office of the deputy clerk of the district, and a writ issued by the chief clerk of the judicial district from his own office will be set aside as irregular. Sharples v. Powell, 20 C. L. T. 291.

9. SPECIAL INDORSEMENT.

Claims for work and labour and goods sold—Absence of express contract.]—A claim for reasonable remuneration for work and labour, even in the absence of an express contract as to the rate of remuneration, comes within the description of a "debt or liquidated demand," and may be the subject of a special indorsement; and claims for so many days labour at so much per day and for goods sold and delivered at a contract of the special indorsement; and contract of the special contract of t

Company plaintiffs — Incorporation—Bill of exchange — Notarial fees, 1—Action to recover the amount of a bill of exchange accepted by the defendant as "Dean & Co." The action was begun by a specially endorsed writ of summons. The defendant applied to set aside the writ on the grounds that the plaintiffs being a foreign corporation, the writ should have disclosed how and where the company were incorporated, and that the plaintiffs, claiming notarial fees, must proceed in the ordinary way by declaring:—Held, that the writ was good in form. (2) That under s. 57 of the Bills of Exchange Act, the plaintiffs had a right to interest, bank charges, and notarial fees as part of the bill of exchange. Cowan Co. v. Dean, 21 C. L. T. 574.

Company plaintiffs — Incorporation— Particulars.]—A specially endorsed writ of summons issued under 60 V. c. 24 by a foreign company need not aver the incorporation of the company. Particulars of claim under a specially endorsed writ may be attached to the writ. North Packing and Provision Co. v. Merrit, 21 C. I. T. 573.

Covenant.]—An indorsement upon a writ of summons of a claim for principal and interest under a covenant in a mortgage in order to be a good special endorsement within the menning of Order III., Rule 6, and Order XIV., Rule 1, must allege that the moneys are due under the covenant. British Columbia Land and Investment Agency Limited V. Cum You, 8 B. C. R. 2.

Foreign judgment—Interest till judgment—Liquidated demand.]—A claim for interest "until payment or judgment" is not a claim for a liquidated demand within the meaning of Order II., r. 6, except where the cause of action is 1 respect to negatiable instruments, in which case the interest is, by s. 57 of the Bills of Exchange Act, deemed to be liquidated damages. Interest claimed under a statute cannot be the subject of special endorsement, unless it as stated in the endorsement under what is the interest is claimed. A specially endorsed writ should state. A specially endorsed writ should state. A specially endorsed writ should state a claim is made for the taxed costs of a foreign judgmed, the date of the taxation should be stated. Decision in 9 B. C. R. 27, 22 C. L. T. 154, 154, 277, 9 B. C. R. 136.

Foreign judgment — Summary judgment.]—In an action on a foreign judgment the statement of claim endorsed on the writ did not allege specifically against whom the judgment was recovered: — Held, that the writ was not specially endorsed; and a motion for summary judgment was refused. Boyle v. Victoria Yukon Trading Co., 8 B. C. R. 352.

Interest — Summary judgment—Amendment of endorsement — Reservice.]—Summons for judgment under Order XIV., in an action for principal and interest due under a covenant in a mortgage. The statement of claim indorsed on the writ, in addition to the claim for principal and interest computed to a certain date previous to issue of writ, contained a claim for interest on the principal until payment or judgment: — Held, such claim for interest was not a subject of special indorsement under Order III., r. 6.—Held, also, that where, on an application for judgment under Order XIV., it appears that part of the claim is not the subject of special indorsement, it is not open to the plaintiff to obtain an amendment and proceed, but a new summons must be taken out. Where the indorsement of a writ has been out.

amended, re-delivery but not re-service is necessary. Pike v. Cop!ey, 22 C. L. T. 218, 9 B. C. R. 52.

Omission of formal words — Motion for summary judgment.]—A motion for summary judgment under Order XIV. was refused on the ground that the writ of summons was not specially indorsed, the indorsement not being headed with the words "statement of claim." Vancouver Agency v. Quigley, S. B. C. R. 142.

Promissory note—"Duly presented"—Summary judgment.]—Appeal from an order giving the plaintiffs leave to sign final judgment under Order XIV. The statement of claim indorsed on the writ stated plaintiffs' claim as being on a note dated . . payable four months after its date to the order of M. L. Wurzburg & Company, at their office, Hallfax, N. S., indorsed . . and which said note was duly presented for payment and was dishonored:—Held, a good special indorsement. Cunard v. Symon-Kaye Syndicate, 27 N. S. R. 340, distinguished. Union Bank of Halifax v. Wurzburg & Co., Ltd., 22 C. L. T. 402, 9 B. C. R. 160.

Signature of plaintiff's solicitor Order XIV.]—Summons for judgment under Order XIV. Preliminary objection that the writ was not specially indorsed, in that it was not signed by the plamtiff's solicitor:—Held, that it was not a good special indorsement. Oppenheimer v. Oppenheimer, 21 C. L. T. 576, 8 B. C. R. 145.

10. MISCELLANEOUS.

Action for money demand—Service of verit viithout copy of account — Previous receipt—Prejudice.]—A defendant who has received, before the action, a duplicate of the account sued upon, suffers no prejudice from the non-service of a copy thereof with the writ and declaration, and cannot make such want of service the basis of an exception to the form. Lidstone v. Hamming, 7 Que, P. R. 431.

Action for revocation of letters probate — Practice—Affidavit verifying indersement — Citation to custodian of letters — Stay of proceedings. McLagan v. McLagan, (B.C.), 2 W. L. R. 12.

Address of defendant — Foreign defendant.]—The address of the defendant is a necessary part of the writ of summons, and in a proper case the writ may be amended by inserting it. But where the address of a foreign defendant was omitted, no explanation of the omission being given, and no cause of action in Ontario against the foreign defendant being shewn, the writ was, on his application, set aside with costs. State Savings Bank v. Columbia Iron Works, 23 C, L. T. 306, 6 O. L. R. 358, 2 O. W. R. 733.

Application to set aside—Irregularity— Intituling of affidavits. Toronto and British Columbia Lumber Co. v. Moore (B.C.), 2 W. L. R. 239.

Irregularities — Prejudice — Qui tam action — Reference to Sovereign — Name of plaintiff. —In an action qui tam, the defendant cannot set up grounds resulting from irregularities of the plaintiff as long as they do not cause prejudice. 2. The word "us" in the words "suing as well as in his own name as for us" contained in form 3 of the Rules of Practice of the Superior Court is sufficient to designate his hajesty the King. 3. It is not necessary to give all the plaintiff's names, provided he is sufficiently designated in the writ. Ridgeway v, Collier, 5 Que. P. R. 308.

Irregularity—Action in name of pext friend — Consent not filed — Application of English Rule — Death of plaintiff—Revivor — Effect on irregularities. Hourston v. Spence (N.W.T.), 2 W. L. R. 343.

Saisie-revendication — Declaration—Filing — Time — Record.]—A writ of summons or of saisie-revendication filed without the original declaration is an absolutely void proceeding, and a defendant, who has appeared in the cause, but who has not pleaded, may take advantage of the nullity at any stage of the cause without having recourse to an exception to the form, and have the action dismissed upon motion to that effect even on the day fixed for hearing; for in such case there is really no action before the Court. 2. A declaration placed upon the record outside of the time allowed to the plaintiff for a return of his action and a long time after the return of the writ, without the consent of the opposite party or the permission of a Judge, is irregularly upon the record and will be considered as if it were no declaration at all. Bouchard v. Boivin, 6 Que. P. R. 41.

Solicitor — Firm — Practice.]—It is permissible to issue a writ of summons in the name of a firm of solicitors. English practice followed. Protestant Orphans' Home V. Daykin, 12 B. C. R. 128.

Summary matter—Heading of writ.]— The provisions of the Code of Procedure relating to summary matters do not apply unless the words "summary procedure" are written or printed at the head of each original and copy of the writ of summons. Hernard v. Carbonneau, 6 Que. P. R. 348.
