SAISIE-CONSERVATOIRE.

Affavit — Grounds — Sufficiency.] — Where the plaintiff alleges in his affidavit in support of a motion for a saisie-conservatoire that the defendant is indebted to him in a certain amount for balance of salary; that he has a lien for this sum upon the price of chattels of the defendant; and that the latter is so acting as to cause him to lose his remedy thereupon—an exception to the form complaining of an irregularity in the affidavit and the declaration will be dismissed. Gladu v. Hurtubise, 10 Que. P. R. 123.

Afflavit — Insufficiency — Irregularity—Setting aside acisure — Grounds—Pleading—Prejudice — Waiver.]—An affidavit which mentions facts giving rise to an action for revocation of a gift, without indicating the nature of the action which the plaintiff intends to bring, is irregular, and a saisic-conservatiore based upon it will be annulled.—2. The Court, in order to judge of the validity of a suisic-conservatiore, may look at the allegations of the affidavit only, and may not consider whether the declaration sufficiently sets forth the remedy which the plaintiff desires to obtain, nor whether the defendant is prejudiced by the insufficiency of the affidavit, nor whether he has waived his objection to the insufficiency by pleading to the merits of the action. Cusson v. Cusson, 9 Que. P. R. 174.

C.C.L.-121.

Affidavit — Service of copy — Irregularity—Exception to form.]—It is not necessary to serve upon the defendant in a saisie-conservatoire a certified copy of the affidavit; it is sufficient to leave a copy for him at the office of the Court within 3 days of the service of the writ.—An exception to the form based upon such pretended irregularity will be struck out of the record upon motion. Zarossi v. Diodati, 8 Que. P. R.

Lex fori—Action for salary—Withdrowal of property.]—The law governing a saisic-conservatoire is the law of the place where the science is made. 2. A saisic-conservatoire cannot be granted in an action for salary even upon the allegation that the defendant has ceased to do business in the provinces of Quebec and Ontario and has withdrawn all his valuables therefrom, thereby depriving the plaintiff of his recourse. Sexton v. Violett, 6 Que. P. R. 325.

Right to—Preservation of part of claim.]
—A satistic-conservatoire may be joined with an ordinary action in order to preserve a part only of the total sum which is claimed in the action. Laporte v. Robert, 8 Que. P. R. 53.

Setting aside—Defendant in default for pleading—Creditor's remedy—Lien.]—A defendant, notwithstanding that the pleadings are noted closed against him, has a right to demand the setting aside of a sais-econservatior brought against him with the action.—A saisis-conservatior can only be issued in the three cases mentioned in Art. 955, C. P., and a creditor who has no special lien upon the goods of his debtor cannot exercise that remedy. Mélancon v. Archambault, 7 Que. P. R. 474.

Formalities — Report — Irregularities—Description of goods—Practice—Contextation — Exemptions — Privilege,1—Article 935, C. P. C., to which Art, 954 relates, applies only to the formalities of a satisfy applies only to the formalities of a satisfy applies only to the formalities of a satisfy applies only to the formalities of the satisfy applies of the goods seized, must be moved against by special motion, by virtue of Rule of Practice No. 73.—3. The contextation on the merits of the satisfy applies of procedure, seeing that there are no special provisions on this subject in the Code of Procedure.—4 Paragraph 8 of Art. 598, C. P. C., does not apply specially and only to farmers, but every debtor may invoke the privilege which it confers and ask by bis defence to the satisfy appareit that he shall be allowed to retain at his choice 1 cow, 2 pigs, etc. Peloquin v, Dunn, 10 Que. P. R. 11.

Petition to quash — Deposit — Irregularities—Prejudice.]—A petition to set aside a saisie-gagerie need not be accompanied by a deposit.—Where a person complains of irregularities in the seizure, he must not only allege but prove prejudice. 1. ACCEPTANCE OR NON-ACCEPTANCE.

Acceptance of part — Depreciation in quality. Belanger v. Leduc, 3 E. L. R. 213.

Action for price—Contract—Failure to fill requirements—Tests — Acceptance of goods by conduct—Retention—Right to reduction from price—Reference.]—Action for price of machinery supplied on conditional sale contract:—Held, that defendant's continued user of machinery was inconsistent with intention to rescind contract. There is nothing to prevent plaintiffs suing for price and retaining and using their other rights under the contract. Reference limited to substantial defects in machines, and to be in general terms, eliminating any inquiry as to making machines conform to contract. Royal Electric Co. y. Hamilton Electric Light and Cataract Power Co., 13 O. W. R. 791.

Action for price — Contract — Goods not delivered in time—Refusal to accept—Right to reject the whole because part not delivered—Trade custom—Delivery of larger quantity than ordered—Bill of lading—Retention—Man. Sales of Goods Act. s. 30.]—Action for price of goods sold. Trade custom allowing shipment of larger quantity than ordered in certain lines establish—but that in other cases as more than dered shipped, and different goods shipped than ordered in certain other instances—defendants justified under above section—rejecting the whole. Having so elect—and notified plaintiffs retention of bid—Inding creates no liability. Schucies v. Vincberg (1909), 12 W. L. R. 515.

Action for price—Deduction for inferior quality—Costs. Vair v. United Fruit and Produce Co. (Man.), 2 W. L. R. 54.

—Action for price of cars and car wheels. It was objected that on plaintiff's examination under commission he had refused to answer some questions:—Held, that the questions had been abandoned. The cars and wheels had been ordered from K., who turned the order over to the plaintiff, and so notified the defendants—Held, that defendants are

Action Shipment plaintiff from the acceptance of the goods by defendants. Allen v. Inter-Ocean, 11 W. L. R. 393.

Action for price—Failure of carriers to deliver.]—Plaintiff shipped goods to defendant at a station on the Canadian Northern, but the goods never reached there:—Held, that the buyer has the right to examine goods, that there has been no acceptance, and therefore the property in the goods remained in the seller, who is the proper party to bring an action against the railway company, which failed to deliver the goods. Action dismissed. Netwens v. Burch, 9 W. L. R. 329. Appeal dismissed, 10 W. L. R. 400.

Action for price—Machinery—Contract —Right of examination and trial—Notice of defects—Failure of vendor to remedy—Right of purchaser to reject—Loss of right by con-tinuing to use machinery—Counterclaim— Breach of warranty—Time—"This year"— Costs.]-In an action upon promissory notes given for the price of machinery sold by the plaintiffs to the defendant, it appeared that the contract of sale gave the defendant the right, not only to examine the machinery before accepting it, but to make a test or trial:—Held, that the defendant had no right to extend the trial over a whole season, and keep on working and using the machinery in the meantime; if the defendant gave the proper notices of defects discovered by him, the contract gave him no right to keep on working the machine pending the appearance of the plaintiff to make it satisfy their warranty; having given a notice of defects, it was the defendant's duty to cease using the machinery until the plaintiffs came and made their attempt to remedy the defects; and, if they did not come within a reasonable time, then it was his duty to reject the machinery entirely and send word to the plaintiffs that he did not propose to accept it .- The defendant counterclaimed for damages for breach of the express warranty given by the plaintiffs in the contract :- Held, that the defendant was absolutely met by the clause in the agreement which he signed, effect that the warranty given and all liabil-ity under it terminated and expired at the close of "this year" — the words quoted meaning the current calendar year, and not a year reckoned from the date of the con-tract; and, aside from this, the evidence of damage to the defendant was unsatisfactory.

-Held, therefore, that the plaintiffs were entitled to judgment for the amount of the notes with interest, but without costs, because they did not do what they might have done to make the machine work satisfactorily; and that the counterclaim should be dismissed, also without costs. Reeves & Co. v. Ozias (1910), 15 W. L. R. 641, Alta.

Action for price—Place of delivery— Inspection—Breakages in transit—Action for goods sold and delivered.]—Inspection should be made at place of delivery. Evidence shewed the care taken by plaintiff to prevent breakages in transit, so these must have been caused by rough treatment in cars or in unloading. Ramsay v. New York Central and Hudson River R. R. Co., 13 O. W. R. 431.

Action for price—Sale by sample — Shipments of part of goods ordered — Saskatchewan Sale of Goods Ordinance—Memorandum in veriting—Belivery—Repudiation of contract.]—Action for price of goods sold and delivered. Plaintiff's traveller took defendant's order but later did not sign it, but received a copy of it. Plaintiff shipped part of the goods, when he received a letter on defendant's behalf to ship no more. Defendants examined the goods on arrival but refused them:—Held, that defendant's letter with the order is sufficient memorandum or note under the above ordinance; that there was a sufficient acceptance and delivery to carrier. Judgment for amount claimed. Steine v. Korbin, 9 W. L. R. 670, 2 Sask. L. R. 6.

Action for price-Several articles of machinery—Separate lien notes—Entire con-tract—Sale by description—Parol evidence— Machines not corresponding with description -Saskatchewan Sale of Goods Ordinance, ss. 33 and 34-Acceptance,]-Action to recover the amount of six lien notes given for a second-hand portable engine, etc., and a quantity of belting, etc., necessary to change a horse-power threshing outfit to a steam power:—Held, that as the latter goods were useless without the former, that it was the intention of both parties that the contract was an entire one. That as the defendants had never seen the goods it was a sale by description. Parol evidence admissible to shew the engine meant by the description on the notes. — Held further, that the engine did not correspond to the description "recently rebuilt." The plaintiffs were bound to tender an engine answering the description of the one sold, so it makes no differ-ence that it could have been repaired at small cost and that plaintiff offered to repair it. Under the above section there had been no acceptance, nor a competent examination of the engine. Defendant entitled to a return of the freight paid by him. Notes to be cancelled. J. I. Case Threshing Macing Co. v. Fee (Sask.), 10 W. L. R. 70, 2 Sask. L. R. 38.

Action for 558 barrels apples—Damaged during shipment — When property passed — Reservation by seller of control until payment.]—Defendants purchased from plaintiffs apples f, o, b, cars Helleville, Ont., to be paid for when received at Regleville, Ont., to be paid for when received at Regleville, Ont., to be paid for when received at Reglan, Sask, Defendants refused to accept or pay for the apples as they had been damaged by frost during shipment:—Held, that the property in the apples did not pass as soon as they were placed upon cars at Belleville, the plaintiff having retained the power of disposal and control of the apples until payment at Regina. Action dismissed, Judgment of Britton, J. (1909), 14 O. W. R. 497, reversed, Graham v. Laird (1909), 14 O. W. R. 1058, 1 O. W. N. 204; 20 O. L. R.

Action upon promissory note given for price of horses—Place of delivery—Right of rejection—Existence of discave—Opportunity for inspection—Sale of Goods Ordinance, as. 16, 17 (Alta.)—Caveat emptor—Infectious discave communicated to other animals—Animals Contagious Discave Act (Alta.)—Plaintiff sued upon a promissory note given for price of horses. Defendants counterclaimed for damages for breach of warranty and negligence:—Held, that horses were delivered to defendants at High River, where they should have protected themselves as to the number of coits among the horses. Defendants having actually kept the horses and sold them are liable for the price, less any counterclaim for damages.—Held, further, that there was no breach of warranty. Any defect could have been discovered on delivery of horses. Defendants entitled to damages while horses in quarantine. Urch v. Strathona Horse Repository (Alta.), 10 W. L. R. 475.

Apples.]—Defendant ordered a car of apples from plaintiffs. He shortly after cancelled this order, and ordered another car from R. Plaintiffs and their Ontario purchasing agent were notified, but they sent a car to defendant, who took in the apples and stored them, believing they came from R. A few days later the car from R. came along:—Held, that defendant was a baisee for plaintiffs, and having taken the usual and proper precautions in selling at the best price, after notifying plaintiffs, they were held at their risk; the action was dismissed. Pioneer v. Litschle (1909), 12 W. L. R. 94.

Attempted repudiation after acceptance — Misrepresentation as to condition— Rescission of contract — Condition—Warranty, express or implied—Evidence—Sale of Goods Ordinance. Robertson v. Morris (Alta.), S W. L. R. 611.

Contract — Breach — Jurisdiction of Custom of trude—Danages of contract — Gustom of trude—Danages of contract — Bought and sold notes contained following clause: "Any difference arising under this contract to be settled by arbitration":— Held, Court had jurisdiction try action notwithstanding this clause. The contract was to sell two cars of the mapped of the contract was to sell two cars of the contract was to sell two cars of the contract price and in the contract price and market price and the contract price and market price at which plaintiffs purchased in New York on last day of delivery. Aspegren & Co. v. Polly and White, 13 of the contract price and market price at which plaintiffs and the contract price and market price at which plaintiffs purchased in New York on last day of delivery. Aspegren & Co. v. Polly and White, Contract — Breach — Refusal to deliver —Dispute as to quantity contracted for — Refusal of plaintiff to accept quantity defendants willing to deliver—Finding of fact —Appeal, Hehsdoerfer v. Berger, 9 W. L. R. 280.

Contract — Order given to agent of renders—Condition—Oral agreement — Acceptance of terms of order—Notice—Time—Cancellation—Delivery of goods — Evidence — Completed contract.]—To an action for the purchase-price of an engine, the defendant set up two defences: (1) that the engine was not as represented by the plaintiffs, (2) that the agreement for purchase was not to be operative until the fulfilment of certain conditions, which were not fulfilled:—Held, upon the evidence, affirming the judgment of Wetmore, C.J., 12 W. L. R. 706, that the defendant gave an order for an engine to the plaintiffs on certain conditions; this order was accepted before cancellation by the defendant; and there was, therefore, a completed contract between the parties; and, as the engine was delivered to the defendant according to the agreement, the plaintiffs were entitled to succeed. Waterous Engine Works Co. v. Wells (1910), 15 W. L. R. 717.

Contract—Receipt—Sale of Goods Ordinonce,]—In an action for the price of 43 head of horses at $23 per head, the evidence established that the plaintiff and defendant drove to the plaintiff's runch and saw the plaintiff's bunch of horses; that the defendant specified such horses as were unsuitable for his purpose, which were thereupon marked and separated from the others; that the defendant gave the plaintiff $3 with which to purchase outs to feed the horses, and also bought and gave the plaintiff some rope with which to make halters for the horses; but that the horses never left the possession of the plaintiff;—Held, that, though there may have been a sufficient acceptance, there was not such an actual receipt by the defendant of the horses as to establish a contract binding under s, 6 of the Sales of Goods Ordinance. Livingstone v. Copitts, 21 C. L. T. 102, 4 Terr. I. R. 441.

Sale of Goods Ordinance, sees, 33, 34 — Return of goods — Retention of part—Entire contract—Statement of claim—Amendment— Goods sold and delivered.]-The defendant signed an order in writing, addressed to the plaintiffs, requesting them to supply him with "one 9-horse power mounted on steel truck," one 12-inch crusher with bagger, one 24 inch saw and frame, and 30 feet of belting, for which the defendant agreed to settle by giving his note for $700. The order contained a provision that the machinery was to be delivered at the defendant's farm, and that it was to work satisfactorily before settlement was given. The plaintiffs shipped the machinery to their local agent at R., who notified the defendant that the machinery was there. The defendant pointed out that the delivery was to be at his farm, whereupon the agent agreed to pay the defendant for taking it to his farm, but would not allow it to be taken away until the defendant signed a note for $700. The defendant signed the note, but pointed out that he was not to be called upon to settle until it was shewn that the machine worked satisfac-torily. The agent said they would make it work satisfactorily. The defendant took the machine to his farm, but found that it was not what he had ordered, and that it did not work satisfactorily. and he therefore drew it back to R. and left it there:—Held, that parol evidence was admissible to shew what the parties meant by a "9-horse power mounted on steel truck;" and that, upon the evidence, the engine referred to was a 9horse power portable gasoline engine, picture of which was contained in the plaintiff's catalogue and marked by the defendant and the plaintiff's selling agent with their signatures at the time of the sale.—Held, also, upon the evidence, that the engine delivered did not correspond to the engine referred to in the order; the difference was material, and no contract arose from the delivery, unless the defendant accepted it; the signing of the note and the taking of the machine by the defendant to his farm did not, in the circumstances, constitute an acceptance; the defendant could not be deemed to have accepted it, unless he intimated to the plaintiffs that he had done so, or did some act in relation to it inconsistent with the ownership of the seller, or retained it after the lapse of a reasonable time without in-timating to the seller that he had rejected it: Sale of Goods Ordinance, secs. 33, 34. But the defendant promptly rejected the engine, and had a right to do so, as it was not what he had ordered.—The defendant did not return the crusher, the saw, or the belt, but used them .- Held, that the contract was an entire one, and the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover upon it; but were entitled, upon a permitted amendment of the statement of claim, to payment for the crusher, saw, and belt, as goods sold and delivered. Ont. Wind Engine & Pump Co. v. Malfaire (1910), 14 W. L. R. 264, 3 Sask. 315.

Entire contract — Delivery and acceptance of part of goods — Recovery of proportionate part of price—Damage for non-delivery—Set-off,]—E. agreed to sell to W. a complete bottling plant, consisting of machinery and a certain number of bottles, for $900. The machinery and a small part of the bottles were delivered and some of the machinery was affixed to W.'s building. W. paid E. $500. In an action by E. to recover the balance of the purchase-price, the trial Judge held that the contract was entire, and failure to deliver substantially the full number of bottles would prevent E. from recovering anything. He entered a verdict for W., but disallowed W.'s set-off for breach of contract:—Held, that E. was entitled to recover the value of the machinery and bottles delivered, and W. to recover damages, if any, for non-completion of the contract, and, as there were no findings on either point, there should be a new trial. Emack v. Woods, 39 N. B. R. 111.

Failure of carriers to deliver—Sale of Goods Ordinance, s. 31—Right of buyer to examine goods — Acceptance not complete. Steven Brothers v. Burch, 9 W. L. R. 329.

Five tons of hops—Good and merchantable — Paid for on delivery — Tender of amount far in excess of five tons—No complete delivery.] — By the English law, if there is a contract for sale by weight or measure, and acts are to be done in order to identify the thing to be delivered before it is in a fit state for delivery, no action for goods bargained and sold can be maintained to recover the price. The only remedy open to the vendor (if the circumstances of the case give him a right to complain of a breach of contract) is by an action for non-acceptance. There is no material difference between the old French law prevailing in Lower Canada and the English law in this respect. K. & Co., by an agreement in writing, contracted to sell and deliver to V. five tons weight of hops for the years 1855, 1856, and 1857, the hops to be good and merchantable, and of the growth of each respective year, to be paid for on delivery, at a rate year, to be paid for on derivery, at a rate specified; the hops to be delivered free in Quebec. In 1856, K, & Co, sent to B, a quantity of hops, consisting of elighty-two bales of the growth of 1856, in weight far exceeding five tons. B, inspected the hons, but after a tender by K, & Co, of the bulk, but without any specific tender of the specific out without any specific tender of the specific quantity of five tons, B, refused to accept any of the hops, when K. & Co. took them away, and deposited them in a storehouse at Quebec. K. & Co, then brought an action against B, for breach of contract in not accepting the hops, and the Court of Queen's Bench of Lower Canada, reversing the decision of the Superior Court, held that K. & Co. had done all that they were bound to do, and that as it was B.'s own fault that the specific five tons were not set apart and distinguished from the bulk, they were en-titled to the full contract price of the hops with interest and costs. Such judgment reversed by the Judicial Committee, on the ground that as the five tons of hops had never been separated from the bulk, and there was no complete delivery, K. & Co. could not sue for the price, but only to recover damages for the non-acceptance of the hops. -Held, further, that the measure of such damages would be the difference of the contract price and the market price at the time the contract was broken. Although the Judges in Lower Canada under the old French law have power to reject or modify the conclusions in the pleadings, yet even if the Court is enabled to change the nature of the action and administer relief entirely different from that which the action sought, such power cannot be exercised with propriety in the case where a plaintiff, having a choice between two remedies, has exercised his election by the forms in which the action is brought. Boswell v. Kilborn (1862), C. R. 3 A. C. 287.

Gasoline lannehes — Built for defendant—Not satisfactory — One boat put in order—Other destroyed by fire while plaintiff's agent was repairing it—Passing of property—Liability of defendant.]—Defendant ordered two gasoline launches from plaintiff company. Both were received by defendant, but neither gave satisfaction. Plaintifis put one in working order, but while their agent was working on the other, he list a match and an explosion followed, resulting in the launch being destroyed by fire. Plaintiffs brought action to recover s.1015.22, the price of the launches.—Boyd, C. keld, that the amounts defendant bad paid plaintiffs satisfied their claim for the launch retained, and that the one destroyed by fire had never been accepted by defendant. Judgment given plaintiff for $106.75 for some goods and supplies purchased by defendant. No costs allowed.—Divisional Court dismissed plaintiff's appeal with costs. Davis Co. V. Clemson (1910), 17 O. W. R. 231, 1 O. W. N. 938, 2 O. W. N. 167.

Goods imported from Spain — Shipment in instalments—Not shipped in time—Action for price of goods—Evidence as to intention of parties — Correspondence—Damages for breach of contract.]—Defendants directed plaintiff to import from Spain certain goods. Owing to delay in getting the goods delivered, defendants cancelled their contract and plaintiff brought action for price of goods:—Held, that the contract was not simply a sale of goods by a merchant to a customer. Judgment for plaintiff for $807.392 entered at trial. Affirmed by Divisional Court. Wagner v. Croft (1910), 16 O. W. R. $533, 1.0. W. N. 1016.

Goods not all shipped—Refusal before delivery.]—Action for price of goods sold. Plaintiffs shipped goods which defendant refused to accept. Plaintiffs then resold, and now sued for their loss:—Held, that plaintiffs had fully performed their contract and are entitled to recover their loss. Haffner v. Cumming, 9 W. L. R. 621.

Goods to be manufactured—Delay in delivery—Destruction of property for which goods required—Action for damages for non-acceptance.—Time—Tender—Impossibility of performance.]—In an action for non-acceptance of goods agreed to be sold, delivered, and installed, the plaintiff, to recover, must prove that the goods were delivered or tendered in condition for installation, within the time agreed, or, if no time was agreed upon, within a reasonable time, and the plaintiff is not excused from so doing by the fact that by reason of any omission on the part of the defendant it was impossible to complete the contract by installation. Lus-fer Prism Co. v. McLeod, S. W. L. R. 627, 1 Sask, L. R. 75.

Grain—Order for future delivery—Condition of—Findings of jury—Correspondence—Contract—Statute of Frauds—Refusal to accept — Breach — Time of—Damages.]— Plaintiff sued to recover damages for breach by the defendants, of two alleged contracts to purchase wheat. It was not disputed by defendants, that they had "placed" verbal "orders" with plaintiffs for the whole of the wheat at prices and on terms alleged by plaintiffs, but it was contended by defendants that it was a term of both orders that if they should not be in a position to take the wheat at times named for delivery, they should not be bound to take it but plaintiff's The jury would take it off their hands. found against this contention of defendants. Defendants also relied on the Statute of Frauds, which they were allowed to plead, though it had not been set up in their statement of defence .- Meredith, C.J.C.P., held, that as to the first order there was no note or memorandum in writing of the bargain sufficient to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, and there was no acceptance and actual receipt of any part of the wheat, and no earnest to bind the bargain or part payment, and the action, therefore, failed as to that branch of the case; that as to the second order, there was sufficient to satisfy the statute, and there was an acceptance and actual receipt of part of the wheat, and plaintiffs were, therefore, entitled to recover in respect of that order. Plaintiffs given judgment for four items claimed, amounting together to $1,495.86, with costs, and the claim in respect of the first order was disallowed. Hay v. Dominion Milling Co. (1910), 17 O. W. R. 954, 2 O. W. N. 457.

Loss by fire before delivery — Statute of Frauds — Memorandum in writing — "Usual terms." Mitchell Co. v. Simson Co., 2 E. L. R. 484.

Manufacture of machinery—Refusal to accept — Repudiation — Damages.] — A party who contracts for the manufacture of machinery, and afterwards notifies the manufacturer that he will not accept delivery of it, unless certain guarantees respecting it, not mentioned in the contract, be given him, is thereby held to repudiate the contract, and becomes liable for the price of the machinery, less whatever value it may have for the manufacture. Morgan-Smith v. Montreal Light, Heat & Power Co., 30 Que. S. C. 242, 2 E. L. R. 513.

Manufactured articles — Contract — Sale of specified lot or by sample—Evidence — Acceptance on terms—Property not passing—Freight and demurrage paid by purchaser—Return of outlay — Payment into Court—Costs. Dominion Pressed Brick Co. v. Black, 9 W. L. R. 445.

Misrepresentation of agent — Right to resoind contract — Difference between goods ordered and goods received—Counter-claim for freight paid—Foreign judgment—Jurisdiction of foreign Gourt,—Action for price of 18 butter separating machines. Defendants on receiving them tested them and found them not as represented and returned them. Plaintiffs obtained judgment in Alberta, defendants, who resided in Saskatchewan, not appearing. Action must full so far as founded on foreign judgment. As plaintiffs agent had wilfully misrepresented the machines, defendants were justified in cancelling the contract. They were not bound to return the machines. McCullough v. Defehr, 11 W. L. R. 524.

Mistake by vendox—Goods accepted by vendox—Goods accepted by vendor contract.]—Judgment of Patterson, Co. U.J., 9 E. L. R. 198, in favour of plaintiff in an action for goods sold and delivered, affirmed by Supreme Court of N. S. Ackerman v. Morrison (N.S. 1911), 9 E. L. R. 307.

Mistake of purchaser—Refusal to accept goods — Misrepresentation. Cohen v. Hanley, 3 E. L. R. 137.

Neglect by purchaser to take delivery—Loss of the thing sold by fortuious event, J—C. C. 1472, 1491, 1493—The loss by fortuitous event, of a thing sold, falls upon the purchaser when he has neglected to take delivery of it. Thibault v. Marsel, 11 Que. P. R. 224.

Onions—I4 tons—To be shipped to Manitob—Nonconform of contract—Refusal to accept.]—Judgment of Teetzel, J., 14 O. W. R. 1208, affirmed by Divisional Court. Kastner v. Mackinzie (1910), 1 O. W. N. 501.

Order for goods given in one district subject to acceptance by the principal in another district, and that the said acceptance has taken place, and the goods delivered in said last district, the action for the recovery of the price of the goods must be taken in the district where the acceptance of the principal was affected. Brock Co. v. Forget, 11 Que. P. R. 21.

Order given in one district and accepted in another—Variation in contract—C, P. 94.]— If purchaser, residing in Joliette, writes the seller, residing in Montreal, asking that the contract be varied, then the contract is completed in Montreal where the new order is received,—Purchaser's action in damages for non-execution of contract should be taken in Montreal, Courchene v, Maritime Nail Co. (1910), 12 Que. P. R. 19.

Order given to agent of vendors—Condition—Oral agreement—Acceptance of terms of order—Notice—Time—Delivery of goods—Beidence.]—Action for price of machinery:—Held, that plaintiffs having notified defendant in reasonable time that they would ship the machinery and he neglecting to refuse promptly, and plaintiffs having delivered it, they must get judgment for amount claimed. Waterous v. Wells (1909), 12 W. L. R. 706.

Parol acceptance by vendor — Delay in shipping—Refusal to accept goods.]—The - Delay defendants on the 8th April, 1910, signed and delivered to a salesman of the plaintiffs a written order for an engine and appurten-ances, to be shipped to a place named on or about the 12th April, 1910, for which the deendants agreed to pay the plaintiffs $3,700:

-Held, that an acceptance of the order in writing signed by the plaintiffs was not necessary to make a contract; that the plaintiffs' manager had authority to accept and did accept on their behalf; and that the plaintiffs were ready to ship at any time. There was here a contract with mutual obligations founded upon good consideration: and the document was signed by the party to be charged.—Held, also, that, although the machine was not shipped by the plaintiffs on or about the 12th April, it was kept ready for shipment, and the shipment was delayed at the request and for the benefit of the defendants; and, even if the provision as to the time of delivery was intended to be a condition precedent to the defendants.— Held, therefore, that the defendants had not justified their breach of the contract in refusing to accept the machinery when it arrived at the place named in the contract.— Sawyer and Massey Co. v. Robertson, 1 O. L. R. 297, applied and followed. Gaar Scott Co. v. Ottoson (1911) 16 W. L. R. 663, Man, L. R.

Parol agreement for sale of motor boat—Statute of Frauds—Change of possession—Receipt and acceptance—Evidence.]—

Plaintiff claims he sold a boat to defendant who received and accepted it. This defendant denies and pleads the above statute:— Held, that a sale was concluded. Plaintiff's evidence believed in preference to that of defendan. Wingfield v. Stewart, 7 E. L. R.

Perishable goods—Sale by sample—Refusal to accept — Contract—Correspondence—Bill of lading—Place of inspection — Injury to goods by frost—Climatic conditions—Delay in accepting—Damages—Sale at reduced price — Expenses. Molean Produce Co. v. Freedman, 12 O. W. R. 1038.

Presumption of acceptance — Steps taken by one of two contractine parties in the interest of both do not imply an admission of liability on his part for the obligation of the other. Hence, where a quarryman delivers stone of different dimensions from what the purchaser, a building contractor, ordered, he cannot presume that the stone was accepted by the purchaser from the fact that the latter tried to get the proprietor to accept it, or that he deposited it in a yard for safe-keeping, Imbault v. Crevier (1911), 39 Que. S. C. 509.

Promissory notes given for price Defects in goods-Notice-Counterclaim for breach of warranty-Failure to return goods -Continued possession-Delay-Repudiation
-Rescission of contract.] - The plaintiffs sold to the defendant an engine, separator, and other articles, for which the defendant gave promissory actes, to recover the amount of which this action was brought. The goods were sold under a warranty that they were well built, of good material, and cap-able of doing good work if properly operated, and the agreement provided that failure to give immediate notice of any defect to the seller, or continued possession of the machine, should be deemed conclusive evidence that the machine filled the warranty. evidence shewed that the separator did not work properly, and was continually breaking down, of which fact the "aintiff's agent was duly notified, and efforts were made by the plaintiffs to remedy the defect, but with-out avail. The plaintiff's agent also from time to time persuaded the defendant to keep the machine, promising to make it right, and the defendant continued to operate it during two seasons, and then he returned it, but in the meantime the engine, of which no complaint had been made, had become considerably dilapidated. The defendant pleaded a breach of warranty, and the return of the goods and rescission of the contract, and counterclaimed for damages for the breach -Held, per curiam, that, by the continued use of the machinery after discovery of the defects and of the inability of the plaintiffs to remedy such defects, the defendant ac cepted the machinery, and was not entitled to return the same and rescind the contract.

—Per Lamont and Prendergast, JJ. (Wetmore, C.J., dissenting), that continued possession and use of the machinery by the defendant could not, by reason of the promises of the plaintiffs' agent to make it work satisfactorily, be deemed conclusive evidence that the machinery answered the terms of the warranty, and, as the evidence shewed conclusively that the machinery did not answer the warranty, the defendant was entitled to damages for the breach thereof. New Hamburg Manufacturing Co. v. Weisbrod, 1 Sask. L. R. 342, 7 W. L. R. 894.

Property passing—Sale by sample — Retention—Notice of rejection—Reasonable time—Sale of Goods Act—Breach of warranty as to quality—Damages—Delivery to carrier—Appropriation.]—The purchasers of goods sold by sample, although they alleged that the goods when received were not what they had bargained for, and made a number of complaints by letter to the sellers and verbally to their agent, made sale of considerable portions of the goods, and did not expressly notify the sellers that they rejected the goods until about 6 weeks after they had received them into stock:-Held, that the purchasers had retained the goods without rejecting them within a reasonable time, and, under ss. 35 and 36 of the Sale of Goods Act, R. S. M. 1902, c. 152, had lost the right of rejection, and, therefore, were liable for the price agreed on, subject to their right, under s. 52 of the Act, to whatever deduction they could establish a claim for by reason of any breach of war-ranty as to quality or for damage by way ranty as to quanty or for damage by way of counterclaim. Conston v. Chapman, L. R. 2 H. L. Sc. 250, and Grimolby v. Wells, L. R. 10 C. P. 393, followed.—The Court held, on the evidence set out in the judgment, that the purchasers had failed to establish any such claim for damages.—Held, also, following Benjamin on Sale 5th ed., pp. 355, 639, and Badische v. Basle, [1898] A. C. 237, that, although delivery to a carrier is prima facie an appropriation of the goods, yet the seller may contract to deliver them to the buyer at their destination, in which case the property does not pass till such delivery. Whitman Fish Co. v. Winnipeg Fish Co., 8 W. L. R. 488, 17 Man. L. R. 620.

Pulp wood sold at a specific price per cord, to be delivered by vendors upon the cars at a certain railway station, and when so delivered to be measured in the cars, the sale is not perfect, under Art. 1474 C. C., by a mere approximate estimate and stamping of said wood, by the purchaser's agent on the grounds of the railway station, it being understood by the vendors that said wood be finally measured when loaded and delivered on board the cars by the vendors, in conformity with conditions of sale. Such a delivery does not affect the right and privilege of the person who has cut and drawn said wood out of the forest—C. C. 1994 c. Loiselle v. Boivin & Sturtvant, 16 R. de J. 50.

Railway ties — Sale to Government — Finding of Referee — Appeal.]—Supplicant offered certain railway ties to the Government. These were inspected and inspector ignoring his instructions, purported to accept the ties for the Government. A new selection was made and ties purchased. Supplicant submitted that in all events he should recover for three piles of ties, 145 in all, used by the Government. Cassels, J., held, that supplicant had been fairly dealt with by the Referee, and that there was no ground of appeal, it being an afterthought, and dismissed the action. Michand v. Rev (1910), S. E. L. R. 546.

Refusal to accept—Contract — Goods not all shipped—Refusal before delivery — Pleading—Amendment — Evidence — Credibility of witness — Damages. Haffner v. Cumming, 9 W. L. R. 621.

Refusal to accept - Entire contract-Failure to supply part.]—The respondent ordered, by illustrated descriptive catalogue received from the appellant, several articles of furniture, at the prices stated in the catalogue, for furnishing a cottage in the country. The order included a table styled a "monk's bench." The appellant, being unable to supply this article as described in the catalogue, substituted another table of a similar character. Some of the other articles sent also differed slightly from the description in the catalogue. The respondent, treating the order as an entire contract, refused to accept the whole or any part of the articles sent to him. Subsequently, the appellant offered to take back the article substi-tuted for the "monk's bench." The action, however, was brought for the price of all the articles sent:—Held, affirming the judgment in 21 Que. S. C. 336, that the order of the respondent being for specified articles forming a suite of furniture for a cottage, the order was an entire contract, and the respondent was entitled to get exactly what he had ordered; and in default, to refuse acceptance of articles different from those contracted for, and also to recover his dis-bursements made under the contract. Tobey Furniture Co. v. Macmaster, 12 Que. K. B.

Refusal to accept—Goods supplied not according to contract — Liability for price there no set-off or counterclaim—Warranty—Pleadings—Evidence.]—Appeal from the judgment of Laurence, J., in favour of plaintiffs, for the amount claimed with costs in an action for goods sold and delivered. Brownie & Co. v. Sydney Coment Co. (N. S. 1910), 9 E. L. R. 150.

Refusal to accept—Non-compliance with contract as to time and mode of consignment. Watterson v. McArthur, 6 O. W. R. 11.

Refusal to accept—Perishable goods— Sequestrator.]—In an action to enforce a contract of sale and to recover the price, when the object of the sale has been tendered by the vendor to the purchaser, who refuses to take delivery, and where it is perishable and its price liable to fluctuate, the Court will appoint a sequestrator with power to sell. Gordon v. Pinder, 4 Que P. R. 321.

Refusal to accept—Tender—Measurement of cordwood—Resale by vendor—Recovery of loss upon. McLennan v. Gordon. 5 O. W. R. 98.

Refusal to accept—Work and labour. Dustan v. Niagara Falls Concentrating Co., 9 O. W. R. 11, 10 O. W. R. 441.

Right of rejection — Notice.]— A purchaser of goods ordered to be sent by railway does not lose his right of rejecting the goods by unloading them from the cars on arrival and teaming them to his own premises, if he then finds them inferior to what he had ordered, and so notifies the ventre.

dor within a reasonable time. Taylor v. Smith, [1893] 2 Q. B. 65, followed Creighton v. Pacific Coast Lumber Co., 18 C. L. T. 425, 19 C. L. T. 285, 12 Man. L. R. 546.

Rights and obligations of the buyer—Quality of the thing—Acceptance and use of the thing by the buyer—Silence of the buyer as to the defects of the thing—Delivery—Delays caused by the failure of the purchaser to conform to the conditions of sale.]—A purchaser who accepts and uses the thing sold, is no longer entitled, when he is sued to recover the price, to complain of the defects in quality, dimensions, etc., which he might have known at once, but of which he made no mention in a correspondence of ten months with the vendor, subsequent to the delivery. The purchaser cannot complain about the delay in delivery of the thing caused by his own failure to fulfil the agreement made at the time of sale, of such a kind as consenting to a lien to guarantee the payment of the price. Audet v. Naud (1909), Que. S. C. 148.

Sale by correspondence—Place where it is concluded.]—The offer made of particular goods specified as to their nature and their price per pound, without mention being made as to quantity, followed by an acceptance of a certain quantity, constitutes a perfect sale, concluded, when it is by correspondence, at the place where the buyer's letter of acceptance is mailed.—It is of no importance that the offer requested a reply by telestam and it was given by post letter; nor that the buyer added to his acceptance the following words: "Ship at once." Beaudoin & Watterson (1910), 19 Que, K. B. 530.

Sale by description—Absence of inspection by purchaser—Resale — Defect in quality—Acceptance — Local customs and standards—Deduction from price for inferiority in quality—Contract. Webster v. Mc-Pherson, 11 O. W. R. 825.

Sale by sample—Bill of ladino.]—Eggs were sold by sample f.o.b., London. There was no wilful delay in shipping on plaintiffs part. Defendant, who lived in Ottawa, learning that the eggs had been frozen in transit owing to the sudden drop in the temperature, wished to inspect before accepting the draft:—Held, that inspection should have been made at London and plaintiffs must be paid their losses on the resale, expenses and commission. McLean v. Freedman, 12 O. W. R. 1038, Sale by sample—Delivery — Condition f.o.b.—Sale of Goods Act, R. S. M. 1902, c, 152—Notice of rejection—Reasonable time—Breach of Warranty—Damages.] — By contract made at Winnipeg, Man., the plaintiffs sold to the defendants, by sample, a car-load of cured fish, to be shipped during the winter from their warehouse at Canso, N.S., "f.o.b. Winnipeg." The sample was sound and satisfactory. The fish arrived in Winnipeg in a frozen state, and were received by the defendants, and kept by them in an outhouse for several weeks before being placed in the freezer, the atmospheric conditions being such that the fish could not, in the meantime, have deteriorated by thaving. Some of the fish when sold proved unsound, were returned by customers, and the whole shipment was found not up to the sample and unit for food. On inspection the health inspector condemned the whole carload, and it was destroyed. About six weeks after the fish had been received by them, the defendants notified the plaintiffs of the rejection of the carload so delivered. In an action for the price at which the fish had been sold, the defendants counterclaimed for damages for breach of warranty and consequent loss in their business:—Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal in Whitman Fish Co. v. Winnipey Fish Co. 17 Man. L. R. 620, S. W. L. R. 488, that the sale had been made subject to delivery at Winnipey; that any loss occasioned by deterioration in transit not necessarily incident to the course of transit should be borne by the sellers; that the loss in this case was not so incident; and that, in the circumstances, the purchasers had notified the sellers of the rejection within a reasonable time, as contemplated by the Sale of Goods Act, R. S. M. 1902, c. 152; that the plaintiffs could not recover; and that the defendants were entitled to damages on their counterclaim. Winnipey Fish Co. v. Whitman Fish Co., 41 S. C. R. 453.

Sale of ascertained goods by deseription - Representations constituting identification or collateral warranty - Delivery-Acceptance - Rejection - Necessity for notice-Findings of fact by trial Judge.] -Held, that on a sale of ascertained goods, described as second-hand, which the buyer has had no opportunity of inspecting, representations as to the length of time during which such goods have been used and the present condition thereof constitute part of the description, and are not merely a col-lateral warranty, and the buyer is entitled to reject the goods if they do not correspond with the description. — 2. That, following Varley v. Whipp, [1900] 1 Q. B. 513, 69 L. J. Q. B. 333, when goods are so sold, the property does not pass upon shipment, nor until the buyer has had an opportunity of inspecting the goods and signifying his acceptance.—3. That when such goods do not answer the description no notice of rejection need be given by the buyer. Bannerman v. Harlow, 1 Sask. L. R. 301; S. C. sub nom. Bannerman v. Barlow, 7 W. L. R.

Specific articles to be manufactured—Refusal of purchaser to accept—Justification for—Rescission of contract. Hyde v. Reid (Sask.), 8 W. L. R. 555.

Supply of telegraph poles — Acceptance of part—Condition—I: spection—Property passing—Claim for price—Refusal to accept remainder — Vendor terminating contract.]—Appeal and cross-appeal from 12 O. W. R. 243, 1097, dismissed. Plaunt v. Western Electric Co. (1909), 14 O. W. R. 404.

Tender - Waiver - Damages perty not passing - Possession - Judgment -Payment into Court.]-Agreement for sale of goods for $175, payable $30 on receipt of bill of lading for or tender of the goods, and the balance in instalments, for which promissory notes were to be given; the property to remain in the plaintiff until payment of the notes, but the goods to be shipped as soon as possible. On the 6th June the plainsoon as possible. On the offi June the paintiff sent the defendant an invoice of the goods. On the 14th June the defendant wrote to the plaintiff refusing to proceed with the contract upon the ground that the invoice price was not that agreed upon. the 15th June the plaintiff advised the defendant that the goods had been shipped and draft and notes forwarded. Some correspondence ensued, but the defendant adhered to his refusal to take the goods. The goods arrived at the town where the defendant lived on the 10th July, and the defendant on the 20th July again wrote that the plaintiff had concluded not to ship the goods, and again refused to take them :-Held, that the defendant having refused to perform his contract on the 15th June, at which date he did not contend that there had been default on the plaintiff's part, and his refusal remaining unretracted down to the time of the arrival of the goods in July, his right to require tender at the date fixed by the performance was waived.—Held, also, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the full price of the goods as damages for breach of the contract.—Held, further, that the defendant should be allowed to pay the amount of the judgment and costs against him into Court, to be paid out to the plaintiff upon obtain possession of the goods. Tufts v. Poness, 20 C. L. T. 330, 32 O. R. 51.

Terms of payment — Substitution of goods by consent—Alteration of figures is written contract—Effect of—Materiality,1—Plaintiff gave a written order for certain barbers' supplies. Not having one of the articles the manufacturers offered to supply a cheaper one, to which plaintiff agreed. The manufacturers then changed the order so as to make it conform to the substitution of the cheaper article:—Held, not a material alteration. Gogain v. Drackett, 11 W. L.

Winnipeg May close, your conditions, except spreads be basis say of inspection." And on the same day the plaintiffs wired back: "We accept offer 10,000 bushels basis to-day's close Fort William May shipment Al-berta points." On the same day the plain-On the same day the plaintiffs wrote to the defendants confirming their first telegram, and saying, "You will understand, of course, this shipment you would allow us the freight from Fort William to points shipped from in Alberta." This letter, of course, did not reach the defendants till after their telegram. The defendants sent no letters at all :-Held, that there was a contract between the parties.-Held, also, that the defendants understood what meant by the expression "basis on track Fort William," and specifically accepted the conditions, with one exception, namely, the date at which the "spreads" were to be fixed; and the last telegram did not alter the conditions specified in any essential par-ticular. The expression "two cents over ticular. The expression "two cents over Winnipeg close" meant that the defendants offered to sell wheat at a price two cents in excess of the price, on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, at the close of the day on which the telegram was sent, of wheat sold for May delivery. This price is always for wheat in the elevators at Fort William. The expression "basis to-day's close Fort William," in the last telegram, must be read with the two previous telegrams and interpreted in the light of them; and the plaintiffs, by using the expression, were assenting to the defendants' price, but also reviving their previous condition contained in the expression "basis on track Fort William," to wheih the defendants had already assented. expression "basis one Northern" referred solely to the basis upon which the price was to be fixed, and the second basis, "basis on track Fort William," did not refer to the price at all, but to the deduction to be made for freight saved, owing to the fact that the wheat, although sold at a price which asumed it to be in the elevators at Fort William, was really to be shipped at some point or points in Alberta westward to En-derby. The saving would be 15 cents a bushel freight and ¾ of a cent elevator charge, but the plaintiffs did not attempt to take advantage of the 34 of a cent .-Held, also, that although the plaintiffs asked the defendants to withhold shipment for a time, there was no contract varying the time for delivery, and what was done amounted to nothing more than a voluntary forbearance on the part of the defendants. The original contract was for shipment to the plaintiffs at Enderby, and the defendants had a right at any time to revert to their rights in this regard, in spite of the plaintiffs' request.—Held, also, that the contract did not mean that the wheat could be shipped to any point at all and afterwards diverted to the plaintiffs; it meant that the defendants would ship to or towards Enderby during May. Section 28 of the Sale of Goods Ordinance was applicable, in the absence of any pleading or evidence as to the law of other provinces; and there was an implied contract that the defendants should send the wheat to the plaintiffs, and that it was not incumbent on the plaintiffs to attend at the sellers' place of business to receive delivery. Section 31 of the Ordinance also applied, and shipment on the cars to the buyers would, therefore, be deemed, prima facic, to be delivery to the buyers. The wheat to be supplied must have started on its journey towards Enderby in May. date of shipment constitutes practically a date of shipment constitute plantage of description of the wheat required. Ashmore v. Cox & Co., [1899] 1 Que. B. 436, explained and followed.—Held, also, that the defendants had broken the contract, as they admitted that there was no such wheat, moving westward upon a shipment in May. would have enabled them to fulfil it .- Held, also, that the rules of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange were not binding on the plaintiffs, The contract was concluded when the plaintiffs sent their last telegram, and there were no circumstances which would make all the contents of the sale subsequently binding upon the plaintiffs.—Held, as to the measure of damages, that the closing price on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange on the 31st May for wheat of the description stip-ulated for, that is, of the grades allowed, and having been shipped from a point in Alberta westwards towards Enderby some May, and then moving towards Enderby, was the price upon which the damages should be based; but there could be no such because there was no such wheat price. available for purchase at all on the 31st May. The plaintiffs took the only possible course in endeavouring to secure wheat at Alberta points; and, as the evidence shewed that the only quotation they could secure for that class of wheat was at $1.20 for No. 2 Northern, that was the basis to be adopted; and the damages were, on a calculation, assessed at $2,078.74. Columbia culation, assessed at $2,078.44. Columbia Flour Mills Co. v. Bettingen (1910), 14 W. L. R. 669.

Accord and satisfaction - Return of article purchased-Promise to buy back if purchaser's circumstances should change.]-The presumption of an accord and satisfaction arising out of the return of an article by the purchaser, stating his inability to pay for it and the acceptance of the article by the vendor and his keeping it for nearly four years, and trying to sell it without reference to the purchaser, will not be displaced by evidence shewing, in effect, merely that the purchaser, at the time of returning the article, had stated or promised that if, in the future, his circumstances should become such as to warrant it, he would buy the article back if still in the vendor's possession. Such promise or statement should be regarded as, at most, a voluntary statement of intention, and not as a condition on which the article was taken back. Boyce v. Soames, 4 W. L. R. 215, 16 Man. L. R. 109.

Cloth for tailoring business.]-Plaintiff sold a quantity of cloth to defendant, who carried on a tailoring business, on the terms that the cloth was to be made up into suits, and paid for as it was made up. Be-fore the cloth could be manufactured into suits it was seized, and taken away under claim of title by virtue of a chattel mortgage given by defendant to a third party :- Held, that the manufacture of the cloth into suits must be done within a reasonable time, and that, even without default on the part of defendant, he became unable to carry out his agreement, that did not excuse him from making payment. Also, that defendant, by suffering the goods to be taken out of his possession, put it out of his power to insist upon time for payment according to the stipulation at the time of sale. Also, that the fact of defendant having wholly repudiated his obligation under the contract, dis-charged plaintiff from any obligation that he was under to give credit, and enabled him to sue on a quantum meruit for the value of the goods. McFarlane v. McLean, 43 N. S. R. 304.

Contract in writing-Verbal representation—Evidence.]— The plaintiffs sent to the defendants the following telegram: "Can you handle 90,000 green cod? Answer price." The defendants replied: "If cod No. 1, large, no shrinkage, $1.45." The plaintiffs brought the cod to the defendants, and while the fish were being landed the defendants signed an agreement in writing by which they agreed to buy from plaintiffs "the cargo of fish now being landed," and to pay for the same at the rate of $1.46 per 100 lbs. In an action by the plaintiffs to recover the contract price of the fish, the defendants sought to give evidence of a verbal representation at the time of delivery that they were of No. 1 quality:—Held, that the trial Judge was right in refusing to receive such evidence, as tending to vary the written contract. Where the defendants were seeking a remedy in damages, by reduction in price, for breach of condition or warranty, the remedy was a purely common law one, and the authorities which would permit such evidence to be given in an action for specific performance, or to rescind a contract, were not applicable .-Semble, that if the defendants had not taken the fish, and the parties could have restored to their original position, the evidence might Defence — Delay in delivery — Proper subject of counterclaim — Not a defence to action — Costs of action and counterclaim — Set-off — Apportionment.] — To an action for the price of goods, the defendant may set up, by way of total or part defence, damages for breach of contract resulting in a diminution of the value of the goods. This was so before the Judicature Act, and is a right existing independently of the Rules relating to set-off and counterclaim. But only damages diminishing the value of the goods can be so set up, and not any other damages arising from the breach of contract; the latter being recoverable only by way of cross-action or counterclaim; and damages for delay in delivery of the goods do not go to diminution of the price.—In an action for the price of goods the plaintiffs were held, entitled to the full amount claimed, and the defendant to damages on his counterclaim for delay; and in settling the form, it was ordered that judgment should be entered for the amount found due to the plaintiffs, less the amount awarded to the defendant upon his counterclaim, together with interest from the date of the writ of the writ of the writ of the writ of the with of the with interest from the date of the writ of the summons; the plaintiffs to have their costs and the defendant his costs, the one to be set off against the other, and the difference to be set off or added to the amount of the judgment; the costs of the trial, except the counsel fee, which was allowed to the plaintiffs, to go to the defendant. Edmonton Iron Works v. Cristall (1910), 15 W. L. R. 659, Alta. L. R.

Defence — Inferior quality — Receipt of goods — Bar — Demurrer.]—The purchaser may refuse the goods which his vendor has delivered to him. if they are not of the kind or quality agreed upon, or if, in the absence of agreement on this subject, they are not of a true and merchantable quality. 2. The fact of the receipt of the goods is not, by itself, a bur to the claim of the purchaser, if the silence of the latter is sufficiently explained, and if his conduct gives no occasion for suspicion. 3. Where the defendant, in an action for the price, alleges that the goods delivered were not of the quality agreed upon, and that he has notified the plaintiff to take them back, preuve awant fair droit will be ordered. Delivery "on approval" — Onus — Consisteing evidence — Findings of the trial Judge—Receive—New trial by jury.]—Where a question of fact, as to which the evidence is contradictory, and as to which there is no preponderance in favour of either party, has been determined by the trial Judge in favour of the plaintiff, but with doubt, and only for the reason that to send the case to a jury would probably result in a disagreement and in expense to the parties, the Court, if they consider that the interests of justice require it, will review the Judge's finding and will order a new trial, directing the issues to be settled by a jury; and where the delivery of goods, after negotiations for a sale, is as consistent with the defendant's account of the transaction (delivery on approval) as it is with plaintiff's, the trial Judge is in error in regarding the delivery as a fact which requires explanation, and throws the burden on the defendant. Johnson v. Durant, 3T N. S. R. 471.

Estoppel — Conversion — Representation by rendering account — Sale of goods.]

—The plaintiff agreed to sell 40 feet of curbing stone to one P., who had contract to place stones in the town of W. Prior to this agreement, the town, with the plaintiff's knowledge, but without any authority or permission on his part, except such as can be implied from the fact that he saw the town's servants taking the stone and made no protest or objection, had taken away and made use of 174 feet of plaintiff's curbing stone. The plaintiff sent a bill of all the stone to P., and at his request the town held back all P.'s payment so as to force a settlement of the bill, but P. refused to pay the plaintiff for more than 40 feet. The town being threatened with suit by P., paid him, and the plaintiff then sued the town in trover for conversion of 174 feet of stone:—Held, reversing the judgment of the County Court Judge, that the plaintiff's conduct did not estop him from recovering against the town, and a verdict was ordered in his favour for the value of 134 feet. Fisher v. Woodstock (1909), 39 N. B. R. 192. 7 E. L. R. 170.

O. 1898 c. 89), action may be brought, but the only license under which the firm purported to sell was one issued to one of the members of the firm in his own name:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not recover in respect of the liquors; but the action being upon a bill of exchange, and an additional open account, judgment was given for the portion of each which were not for intoxicating liquors. claims of the plaintiffs, upon certain guaranties, that he was entitled is judgment thereon against the defendants. Wilson v. Stuart (1911), 16 W. L. R. 403, Man. L. R.

Jurisdiction of magistrate—Appeal.]—Plaintiff recovered judgment in the stipendary magistrate's Court. Defendant's set-off was not allowed. Defendant appealed:—Held, that defendant is entitled to his set-off as, when defendant had formerly sued plaintiff before a justice of the peace, that official had reduced the claim without the defendant's knowledge so as to bring it within his jurisdiction. Abrams v. Refuse, 7 E. L. R. 283.

Liability of transferee to vendor.]—A person who, not being the purchaser, obtains goods which have not been paid for, does not thereby incur the obligation of paying for them. Walker v. Lamoureux, 21 Que. S. C. 402.

Lien note - Warranty-Breach-Contract-Evidence to vary-Collateral contract Receission.]—1. When a verbal agreement has been made for the sale of horses or other chattels, and the purchasers afterwards sign a lien note securing payment, with the usual provisions of such a note, evidence may be given of representations or conditions of the sale or to prove a warranty, when it appears that it was not intended to include in the lien note all the terms of the agreement between the parties. De Lassalle v. Guild-ford, [1901] 2 K. B. 215, and Erskine v. Adeane, L. R. 8 Ch. 756, followed.—2. When the purchaser of a chattel bought with a warranty keeps it for a considerable time and makes a payment on account, the contract must be treated as executed, and any representation or condition as to the quality of the goods must then be regarded only as a warranty, for the breach of which compensation must be sought in damages and not by rescission of the contract. McKenzie v. McMullen, 3 W. L. R. 460, 16 Man. L. R.

Mistake as to essential matter—
Setting aside sale.]—Mistake is a ground for setting aside a sale of goods when it concerns the substance of the goods sold or some essential quality thereof. Thus where the buyer understands that he is buying a especially for peas and oats, the seller does not fulfil his obligation by delivering a

Offer to return part not resold — Defences — Incompatibility — Exception to form.]—A purchaser of goods against whom an action for the price has been brought may, in certain circumstances, plead specially that he has sold a part of such goods, and offer at the same time to return the remainder to the plaintiff; an exception to the form alleging that such grounds of defence are incompatible will be dismissed. Payment to plaintiffs' vendor—Substituted contract—Novation—Wages—Set-off—Counterclaim—Costs, Neudorf Trading Co. v. Wanless (N.W.T.), 6 W. L. R. 377.

Privilege of returning goods — Defence.]—Where, in a contract of sale, the purchaser had the privilege of freeing himself from the obligation of paying the price upon his returning to his vendor the articles sold, an action for the recovery of the price will, nevertheless, lie, and the purchaser cannot plead, by way of defence in law, that the creditor should allow him to return the articles sold, and not claim the price until after default to return. Leduc v. Rabeau, 4 Que. P. R. 154.

Proof of sale and delivery—Justice's Court—Limit bond—Extension of time after breach.]—In a Justice's Court a judgment by default was signed in an action for goods sold and delivered, the only evidence of the sale and deliverey being that of the plaintiff, who swore that she sold the goods to the defendant's wife, as per bill put in evidence, and that she had received $5 on account. The bill contained the dates of the sales, the articles sold, and the amounts charged: — Held, sufficient to warrant the signing of the judgment. Per Barker, J. The giving of time to arrange payment by the plaintiff to the original defendant, after breach of a limit bond, is no defence to an action for such breach. Kelly v. Thompson, 35 N. B. R. 718.

Quality — Inferiority of part—Option of purchaser—Return of whole of goods — Abatement in price—Perishable goods—Sabe by purchaser—Credit for proceeds.]—When goods sold are, in part only, of Inferior quality to that contracted for, the purchaser has, nevertheless, the option of giving back the whole and having the price refunded to him, or of keeping the whole and having a part of the price returned to him.—The purchaser of such goods may, when they are perishable, and after notice to the vendor, cause them to be sold for the account of him to whom they belong, and may do so notwithstanding the above option. The credit which he gives his vendor for what they have realized stands in the place of their return. Dougall v. Chouillon, 15 Que. K. B. 300.

4. AUTHORITY OF AGENT.

Bill of sale - Goods taken in stock to replace goods sold-Agency of husband of vendor. 1-Action in detinue and trover for certain goods which plaintiffs alleged were the property of Elizabeth Nickle, and were sold and assigned by her by bill of sale to plaintiffs, who demanded them of defendant, in whose possession they were, and who refused to deliver them. Defendant pleaded that Elizabeth Nickle brought these goods into stock to replace stock sold by her belonging to defendant; and Bills of Sale Act, R. S. O. 1897, c. 148, was relied on:—Held, upon the evidence, that the goods were the property of Elizabeth Nickle when she made the bill of sale to plaintiffs, and there was no proof that she ever authorised her husband to sell or give the goods to defendant. Judgment entered for plaintiffs for the value of the goods, fixed at $130, subject to a reference, if defendant desired to take it, at her own risk as to costs. Semmens v. Harvey (1910), 16 O. W. R. 745, 1 O. W. N. 1099.

Ratification.] — In an action for the price of certain articles alleged to have been sold by the plaintiff to the defendants, for use in connection with the construction of their line of railway, it was shewn that the articles sued for were sold to II., who acted as manager for the defendants, and were used by him in connection with the building of the road. It was also shewn that the plaintiff was employed by II. to do certain work on the road, and that this act of II. was recognized and ratified by the company, who paid plaintiff for the services rendered by him:—Held, that there was sufficient evidence to support a finding that the sale of the articles sued for was made to the company, and not to II. individually. McDonald v. Broad Cove Coal Co., 32 N. S. R. 486.

5. CONDITIONAL SALES.

Agreement as to default — Resumption of possession—Implied contract—Extension of time for payment—Consideration—Novation — Interest — Damages.]—Goods were delivered to the plaintiff by the vendors on the terms of two conditional sale agreements. Until payment in full the goods were to remain the property of the vendors, and on default for one month of any of the stipulated payments, or of any extended payment, the whole balance of the purchasemoney was to become due, and the vendors, notwithstanding action or judgment, were to be at liberty to resume possession and re-sell, etc. The plaintiff got into default, although he continued in possession, and in August, 1902, an agreement was come to be-tween him and the vendors that he should pay $50 on account, and the balance of $242, made up of arrears of principal and interest, in quarterly instalments, with interest,. The plaintiff paid the $50. In October, 1902. the defendant, who had a judgment against the plaintiff, paid the vendors the whole bal-ance due and procured an assignment, and ance due and procured an assignment, and transfer of the goods to himself, subject to the plaintiff's right. In November, 1902, the defendant went to the plaintiff's house and seized the goods. The plaintiff was not then in default under the agreement for ex-tension of August, 1902:—Held, that the seizure was wrongful and the defendant liseizure was wrongen and the december able to damages, because an implied contract arose between the plaintiff and the vendor, from the delivery of the goods to the plaintiff on the terms of the receipts, that the right of resumption by the vendors should not be exercised-should not arise-while the goods remained in the plaintiff's possession until default had been made for one month of any of the payments provided for by the of any of the payments provided for by the agreements "or of any extended payment." by which was plainly intended a default after an extension of time for payment.—

Held, also, that the fact that under the agreement of August interest was to be paid upon interest then in arreas, as well as upon principal, was sufficient consideration for that new agreement .- Held, also, that the lowest measure of damages was the sum which the plaintiff had paid to the vendors on account of the price, inasmuch as this was the value of his interest in the goods which had been wrongfully taken out of his possession. Bridgman v. Robinson, 24 C. possession. Bridgman v. Robinson, 24 C. L. T. 214, 7 O. L. R. 591, 3 O. W. R. 503.

Agreement made, and goods delivered in foreign country — Removal of purchaser with goods to Aberta—Sale to defendant there—Claim by original vendor— —Alberta condition sales ordinance not applicable — "Purchaser," not including purchaser in Alberta] — Plaintiff, under an agreement in writing, sold to C. a piano, title to remain in plaintiff until payments made. The agreement was made in Washington State, where parties resided. C. removed to Alberta, bringing with him the piano, which he sold to defendant:—Held, that the above Ordinance has no application. — Held, further, that defendant can take no advantage of plaintiff's failure to comply with provisions of Washington code as to filing, the contract being a conditional one. Judgment for plaintiff. Cline v. Russell, 10 W. L. R. 668.

Bills of Sale Act — Foreign corporation—Contract made out of the jurisdic-bion.]—The plaintiff's agent sold goods to J. at North Sydney, C. B., under a contract in writing, one of the terms of which was that the title to the goods was not to pass until after payment in full of the price, and another that the order was subject to the approval of the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs were a company carrying on business at Dayton, Ohio, but the goods were shipped from a factory at Hamilton, Ont.—Held, that the contract was made out of the jurisdiction, either at Dayton, Ohio.

S. O. (1897), c. 150.1—Plainitifis, manufacturers, brought action to recover two buggies, valued at $137, which they had sold to their agent on a conditional sale agreement, and by him re-sold to defendants, the agent taking promissory notes in payment. The agent failed to pay plainitifs for the buggies, and they made a demand upon defendants for the buggies, which was not complied with. Ardagh, Co. C.J., dismissed plainitifs' action, but assessed their damages at $70, should this judgment be reversed by Divisional Court.—Divisional Court reversed by Divisional Court.—Divisional Court reversed above judgment and entered judgment for plainitifs for the $70 as above assessed, with costs of appeal. Chattel mortgage - Coercion - War-Chattel mortgage — Corcion — War-ranty — Breach — Executory contract — Return of chattel.]—A lease of store prem-ises was obtained by the plaintiffs through a guarantee of payment of the rent by the defendant. Subsequently, at the plaintiffs' request, the defendant rook out in his own name a lease of the premises for a further term of four years, upon an agreement to assign it to them in consideration of their purchase from him of an automatic elecpurchase from him of an automatic elec-tric piano. The purchase-price was $750, upon which a payment of $100 was to be made. The cash payment subsequently was waived and notes for the full amount of the purchase money given. After the purchase, the plaintiffs incurred an additional indebtedness to the defendant of about $400, This amount, together with the notes, some of which were overdue, was outstanding when the plaintiffs asked for an assignment of the lease. This the defendant demurred to giv-ing, desiring to retain the lease as security. The plaintiffs then, but against the defendant's advice, executed a chattel mortgage of the stock-in-trade to him, whereupon he made over the lease to them: - Held, that the chattel mortgage should not be set aside on the ground of having been obtained by coercion.—While the rule, that in absence of agreement the purchaser of a specific chattel cannot return it on breach of warranty, may not apply to a sale providing that the property shall not pass until payment of the purchase-price, it will apply in such case where the vendee in addition to keepcase where the vendee in addition to keep-ing the chattel a longer time than reason-able or necessary for trial, has exercised the dominion of an owner over it, as by giving a chattel mortgage of it to the ven-der. Debtor and creditor — Seizure under prior chattel mortgage — Vendor's rights against mortgage — Quantum meruit.]— Action for price of goods sold. Defendant, a tailor, arred to purchase cloths to be made into suits. Cloths were sold subject to time for payment. Before cloths were made up, they were seized under a chattel mortgage. Ordinance, c. 34,1—Defendants sold machinery to plaintiffs on conditional sale agreement, possession to be vendors' until price paid. Default having been made in payments, defendants re-possessed and re-sold. Under agreement defendants were to get 20 per cent. commission on price for which machinery was re-sold:—Held, that such seizure as took place here comes within the above Ordinance, which fixes the rate of commission and expressly forbids parties having, taking, or receiving larger commissions. Commission allowed at 3 per cent. on $1,000 and $1\psi$ per cent. on excess. Albertan Publishing Co. V. Miller & Richards (Alta.), 10 W. L. R. 528.

Default — Re-sale by vendor—Action for Deficiency — Agency — Estoppel.]—Upon a conditional sale of chattels, where the property was not to pass to the vendee until payment, the contract provided that if default were made the whole amount of the unpaid purchase-morey and all obligations given therefor were at once to become due and payable and the vendor was to be at liberty to resume possession and sell the articles towards paying the amount remaining unpaid thereon and interest. Default having been made, the vendors resumed possession and sold the goods, and sued the vendee upon promissory notes for the price, crediting the proceeds of the sale:—Held, following Sawyer v. Pringte, 18 A. R. 218, and Arnold v. Playter, 22 O. R. 608, that the vendor must fail because the contract did not expressly provide that on a re-sale the defendants were to remain liable notwith-standing the provision for sale "towards paying the amount remaining unpaid." 2. Nor did a request from the vendee "to take the engine back and sell the same and apply the proceeds, less the expenses, towards paying my indebtedness to you," put the vendor in a better position, for it was only a request to him to do what he might do under the contract; and it did not constitute the vendor the agent of the vendee to re-sell the goods, which were never the property of the vendee, and it did not estop the vendee. Abell v. Campbell, 21 C. L. T. 303.

Default-Remedy-Taking possession -Action for price-Ratification-Defence of intoxication - Onus.]-A written agreement entered into between the plaintiff and defendant for the purchase of an organ by the de-fendant from the plaintiff, provided that the property in the organ should remain in the vendor until payment in full of the price, which was payable in instalments, but that the vendee, making the payments agreed up-on when due, &c., should be entitled to the possession and use of the property. It was further provided that, if at any time before payment in full of the price, the vendee should fail in the performance of the agreements on his part to be kept, &c. the vendor should be entitled to the immediate posses-sion, and that if the rent due or to become due under the agreement was not paid within 30 days all rights of the vendee should cease, and any moneys paid by him on account of the purchase should be retained by the vendor. The vendee failed to make any of the payments as required:—Held, by two members of the Court, that the provision in the agreement enabling the vendor to retake possession in default of payment was cumulative, and that the vendor not having done any act towards making an election that he would forfeit the agreement to pay, and take possession of the instrument, was entitled to the ordinary remedy on breach of the agreement to pay; that the burden of establishing the defence of intoxication was upon the defendant, and that he had failed to make it out; and that the agreement, even if defective, had been fully ratified.—Held, by the other two members of the Court, that the agreement being one for the conditional sale of the organ, and no property passing until all instalments had been paid, and the agreement providing that, in the event of non-performance by the vended of the con-ditions of sale, the payments made by him should be forfeited and that the vendor could retake possession, the latter was the only remedy open to the vender and that he could not sue under the agreement for non-payment of the instalments. Travis v. Way, 33 N. S. R. 551.

Default—Scizure—Re-sale—Rescission of Contract — Repairs — Warranty.]—In an action for the balance of the price of machines sold by the plaintiffs to the defendants, it appeared that the sale was a conditional one, the agreement containing a warranty of the machines, and providing warranty of the machines, and providing that on default of payment the plaintiffs might resume possession and sell the machines and apply the proceeds, after paying the expenses of taking possession and selling, towards payment of the amount remaining unpaid, and sue for the balance. The purchase price was $2,875, and when the defendants had paid $1,200 the plaintiffs resumed possession, made repairs, and effected a conditional re-sale to W. for $2,-000, no part of which had been received by them: -Held, that the defendants, having failed to return the machines after trial. having used them during three seasons, and paid $1,200 on account, were barred, under that the machines were not good and that payment should not be enforced. 2. That the agreement was not rescinded by the plaintiffs re-taking possession and re-selling. Sawyer v. Pringle, 18 A. R. 218, distinguished. Watson Mfg. Co. v. Sample, 12 Man. L. R. 373, 19 C. L. T. 94, followed. 3. That the plaintiffs had a right under the circumstances, to charge the cost of the repairs and of resuming possession against the proceeds of the re-sale. 4. That the defendants were not entitled to be credited in this action with anything on account of the proceeds of the conditional sale to W., as nothing had yet been received; if the money should be paid by W., the defendants would then have their own recourse against the plaintiffs. 5. That the plaintiffs were not entitled to charge the cost of the repairs against the defendants in this action. Abell Engine and Machine Works Co. v. McGuire, 21 C. L. T. 358, 13 Man. L. R. 454.

Duclos (1910), 20 Que. K. B. 97.

Destruction of subject matter.]—
Where a mare, the subject of a conditional sale, was drowned while in the actual possession of the buyer after default in payments:—Held, that the loss fell upon the buyer and that therefore the seller was entitled to recover the balance of the price. Gilleapie v. Hamm, 4 Terr. L. R. 78.

S (4),—2. That the legal title having passed from W. to the plaintiff upon the execution of the clattel mortgage, W. & Co. were neither purchasers nor creditors within the meaning of the Act, s. 5 (3), as against whom the instrument would only take effect and have priority from the time of filing.—3. Farnace — Ont. Conditional Sales Act, s. I.|—This was an action for $165$, the price of a furnace furnished to the defendant Ewing, or, in the alternative, for an order giving plaintif liberty to remove said furnace, on the ground that it was sold subject to their lien, and that the property in it was not to pass until it was paid for. The house where the furnace was installed changed hands, and now belongs to defendant Pearey, who denied knowledge of the plaintiff's lien. At trial action was dismissed, with costs as against Pearey and the Northern Life Ins. Co.:—Held, that the statute should be construed strictly, and while the address of the vendor could be inferred, yet it was not given, and therefore there had been no compliance with s. 1 of the Act. Future-acquired goods — Assignment for benefit of creditors—Possession taken by vendor—Agreement not resistered—Bills of Saite Let — Assignment of book debts.
Licenses—Possession — Notice to debtors.]—
The plaintiff in 1808 agreed to supply M. & S., dry goods dealers, with goods under an agreement in writing that such goods should remain the plaintiffs property, and that, should the plaintiffs property, and that, should the plaintiffs of the plaintiffs of the plaintiffs at any time consider that the business of M. & S. was not being conducted in a proper way or to the plaintiffs staffaction, the plaintiff should be "at liberty to take possession of our stock, book debts, and other assets, and dispose of the same, and after payment in full of any amount then owing to you by us, whether due or to become due, the balance of the proceeds shall be handed to us." The agreement was not filled under the Bills of Saie Act, c. 142, C. S. N. B. 1903. Goods were supplied from time to time under the agreement, On the 17th February, 1905, the business not being conducted to the plaintiffs; satisfaction, and M. & S. being insolvent, the plaintiffs entered the store of M. & S. by force and took possession of all the stock and effects on the premises, and of the books of account. The stock seized was made up of goods supplied by the plaintiffs of the value of $5,000, and of goods supplied by other unpaid creditors of the value of upwards of $10,000. The account books shewed debts due M. & S. of the estimated value of $2,000. Later on the same day M. & S. made an assignment for the general benefit of their creditors:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not limited to taking possession of goods supplied by themselves; that as to goods supplied by the plaintiffs, as the property therein did not pass to M. the agreement was not within the Bills of Sale Act, and that as to goods not supplied by the plaintiffs, as the agreement was not intended to operate as a mortgage, but as a license to take possession, the Act did not apply; that, while the license in the agreement to take possession of the book debts did not amount to an assignment, and the powers given by it had not been exercised by notice to the debtors, the plaintiffs were, nevertheless, entitled to them as against M. & S.'s assignees. R. 21, that the laws in force where the property is situate and the parties reside at the time a contract for sale is made must govern; and therefore where, under the laws of Manitoba, goods were delivered to a purchaser upon terms that no property therein was to pass until such goods were fully paid for, which agreement was valid and enforceable in Manitoba without registration :- Held, that the seller might claim such goods when removed into Saskatchewan as against execution creditors and other persons claiming such goods, notwithstanding that no copy of such agreement has been registered as required by c. 44 of the Consolidated Ordinances. Saw and Massey Co. v. Boyce, 1 Sask. L. R. 230, 8 W. L. R. 834.

Hire receipt—Registration—Bills of Sale Ordinance, N.W.T.—Possession—Description of goods.]—The Ordinance respecting receipt notes, hire receipts, and order for chattels (No. 8 of 1889) requires such instruments to be registered "where the condition of the bailment is such that the possession of the chattel should pass without any ownership therein being acquired by the ballee." The instrument in question in this case provided that "the title, ownership, and right to the possession of the property for which this note is given shall remain in "the bailors:—Held, that, inasmuch as the "receipt note" in question in this case provided that the bailors might on certain contingencies take possession of the property, though the right of possession was in the bailors, the actual possession was to pass to the bailee, and therefore the instrument was one which came within the terms of the one which came within the terms of the Ordinance. Sutherland v. Mannix, 8 Man. L. R. 541, and Boyce v. McDonald, 9 Man. L. R. 297, considered. The Ordinance pro-vides (8, 2) that the provisions of the Orvides (s, 2) that the provisions of the Ordinance respecting Mortgages and Sales of Personal Property (No. 18 of 1889) and amendments thereto shall apply to such receipt notes, hire receipts, or orders for the purposes of this Ordinance, in so far as the provisions thereof may not be incompatible with or repugnant to this Ordinance.—Held. that this provision made applicable to such instruments s. S. Ord. No. 18 of 1889, which provides that mortgages, sales, assignments, or transfers of goods and chattels shall contain such sufficient and full description thereof that the same may be readily and easily known and distinguished. The receipt note in question in this case stated that it was given for one team of oxen."—Held, that, inasmuch as the instrument itself shewed further that the team of oxen was one bought by the bailee from the bailors for the price therein mentioned, that the team, immediately previous to the bailment, had been owned by the bailors, and at the time thereof was taken over by, and was in possession of, the bailee, the team of oxen was sufficiently described. S. searched twice in the office at A., but not finding the lien, authorized the defendant, his builiff, to proceed to sell, which he did:—Held, that plaintift entitled to damages. Reinhols v. [—The plaintiff had sold a mare to one B., and took from B. a lien note, the affidavit upon which was imperfect, but which was duly registered. The chattel mortgagees of other property of B. scized and sold the plaintiff's mare under their mortgage:—Held, that the fact that the plaintiff had notice of the sale did not estop him from setting up his title to the mare, and that the defendant, the purchaser at the chattel mortgage sale, was not within the protection of the Ordinance Respecting Hire Receipts and Conditional Sales of Goods. Aricinski v. Arnold, 6 Terr. L. R. 240, 4 W. L. R. 556.

Lien note — Default by purchaser in payment of price—Repossession by vendors—Action for deficiency.]—Action for balance due on a lien note, which contained amongst other provisions this, "and to apply net proceeds towards the payment of any such note or notes and interest." Plaintiffs had, after some payments made, taken possession of chattels, sold them and applied the net proceeds in reduction of their claim:—Held, that plaintiffs entitled to recover balance, as the provise contains an implied promise to pay any balance unpaid on the notes after crediting the proceeds of the resule. Lien note — Necessity for registration—Law of Saskatchevan—Law of Manitoba—Place of contract.]—M., who lived in Brandon, owned a horse which he sold to P., taking as par; payment a lien note on the horse for $300. Such a note does not need to be registered in Manitoba. J., from Saskatchewan, subsequently bought the horse, and, in Brandon, sold it to plaintiff, also from the latter province, who paid $235 cash for it, and took it home. Later, bringing it back to Brandon, M. seized under his lien. In Saskatchewan such, liens must be registered:—Held, that Manitoba law applies, and M. entitled to the horse. Ross v. Henderson, 11 W. Lien note signed after sale and delivery — Priority of chattel mortgage.]— On the 10th December, 1903, the plaintiff sold to C, three head of cattle; he swore that C. agreed at the time to give him a lien on the cattle; the reason it was not given at the date of the sale was that he had no form of lien note at the house; he procured one and had it signed by C. on the 31st December. Besides the cattle, the lien note included a gray horse; the plaintiff stated that, when he presented the note to C. for signature, the latter wanted to put in the horse, and it was He never owned the horse and did not it. On the 21st January, 1904, C., claim it. who was indebted to the defendant, gave him a chattel mortgage covering the cattle, horse, and other chattels; the chattel mortgage was duly registered. On the 29th March the plaintiff, having heard that C. had left the province, went to see the defendant and ascertained that he held the chattel mortgage, but had not yet taken possession of the cattle. They were in the stable of one P., to whom it was stated C. had sold them.

Defendant resumed possession of the team later as plaintiff failed in making the payment. Plaintiff's claim that purchase price was to be paid out of earnings cannot stand as it contradicts the lien note. Power to sell under the note does not give right to exchange. Lien notes — Conditional Sales Ordinance, s. 8—Notice of sale—Seller declaring whole price due on ground that he deem siten-note insecure—Principal and agent — Powers of agent to make declaration in place of seller—Compliance with condition,]—Each of the three methods of giving notice provided by s. 8 of the Conditional Sales Ordinance is independent of the others and not qualified by anything contained in the others. The second only is limited and not general. If the contract of conditional sale or the lien note confers the right on the seller to declare the price due and payable in advance of maturity in case he shall deem the note insecure, an agent of the seller, unless expressly so authorised, cannot exercise the judgment or discretion conferred on the seller; and quare whether the seller can delegate the function at all. In any case the conditions to the exercise of the right must be strictly complied with.—

Per Beck, J .- Section 8 of the Conditional Sales Ordinance means: (1) that the notice may be served personally; (2) only in case of absence may it be served by being left at the last place of residence; (3) whether or not the buyer, etc., is absent it may be served by registered letter.—A seller of goods exercising the right of resale is, like a mortgagee exercising a power of sale, bound to act bona fide, and to take reasonable precautions to obtain a proper price; and semble, that where the goods are sold by auction it will ordinarily be a reasonable precaution to fix reserve bid; but unless the auction sale is expressly "without reserve the seller can at any time before the goods are knocked down to a bidder by the auctioneer withdraw them from sale; and semble, that it would be his duty to do so if the highest bid did not reach a proper price for the goods. Lien notes—Dealer disposing of horses in the ordinary course of his business—Evidence—New trial.]—The plaintiff's claim was for damages for the seizure by the defendants of a team of horses which he bought from one B. The defendants had sold the horses to one F., taking a lien note for the purchase money. The plaintiff purchased without any notice or knowledge of the existence of this note and gave full value. The trial Judge found that the defendants, when they sold to F., knew that his business was that of a horse-dealer, and that he would re-sell in the ordinary course of his business, and, in all likelihod, to an innocent purchaser, and, following Brett v. Foorsen, 17 Man. L. R. 241, gave the plaintiff a verdict:—Held, on appeal, that this verdict must be set aside, because the plaintiff had failed to give any evidence of his title to the horses other than that he had purchased for value from B., and had given no evidence of the sale to F. or of the sale by F. to B. In 1907 and 1908 these machines were sold and delivered by his brother to the plaintiff. Lien notes - Resale by conditional purchaser — Title of sub-purchaser without notice of lien — Implied authority to sell — Sale of Goods Act — Breach of warranty.] -When a person makes a conditional sale of a team of horses, and delivers them to one whom he knows to be a dealer in horses and to be buying them for the purpose of reselling them at a profit, although he takes an agreement in the form usually called a lien note on the horses to secure the price, he thereby clothes the purchaser with im-plied authority to sell the horses and to transfer a good title, free from the lien, to a bona fide purchaser who has no notice or knowledge of the existence of the lien. Such sub-purchaser, therefore, is not bound to give up the horses to the holder of the lien note, though it be not paid; and, if he does, he cannot recover afterwards in an action for breach of warranty of title against one who has not been guilty of fraud.— The decisions in the cases of grantors of bills of sale and chattel mortgages who remain in possession of the goods and sell them in the ordinary course of their business, as in National Mercantile Bank v. Hampson, 5 Que. B. D. 177, Walker v. Clay, 49 L. J. Q. B. 560, and Dedrick v. Ashdown, 49 L. J. Q. B. 500, and Detroit A. Ashabata, 15 S. C. R. 227, apply also in the case of claims under lien notes. The reason for applying the doctrine of implied authority in the latter case is stronger than in the former, because lien notes are not registered, and a purchaser of horses has no means of ascertaining whether they are incumbered or not .- When the implied authority to sell exists, a good title may be transferred inexists, a good title may be transferred in-dependently of s.-s. (a) of s. 26 of the Sale of Goods Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 152; and s.-s. (b) of the same section, which only excepts goods purchased under lien notes from the operation of s.-s. (a), does not prevent the application of the principle referred to. Brett v. Foorsen, 7 W. L. R. 13, 17 Man.

Lien notes — Suspicious circumstances —Sale and re-sale—No actual delivery — Saskatchevan Bills of Sale Ordinance—Rights of subsequent purchaser.]—Defendant sold a team to A., taking a cash payment and promissory notes. Later defendant met A., who sold back the team on A.'s giving up the unpaid notes. Defendant then proposed to sell them back to A. for the same price as he had re-purchased. A. to give two lien notes therefor, There was no actual change of possession. The same day, A. sold the team to the plaintiff:—Held, that there was no immediate delivery, no actual change of possession, and that it was never intended that there should be. Machinery — Agreement for lien — De-livery.]—The company sold R. an entire out-fit of second-hand threshing machinery for $1,400, taking from him three so-called promissory notes for the entire price. days before giving the notes, R. had signed an agreement setting out the bargain, in which the following provisions appeared: "And for the purpose of further securing payment of the purpose of further securing payment of the price of the said machinery and interest . . . the purchaser agrees to deliver to the vendor, at the time of the delivery of the said machinery as herein provided, or upon demand, a mortgage on the said lands (i.e., lands described at the foot of the agreement), in the statutory form, containing also the special covenants and provisions in the mortgages usually taken by the vendors. And the purchaser hereby further agrees with the said vendors that the vendors shall have a charge and a specific lien for the amount of the purchase money and interest, or the said amount of the purchase price, less the amount realised, etc., should the vendors take and resell the said machinery . . . and any other land the purchaser now owns or shall hereafter own or be interested in, until the said purchase money and all costs, charges, damages, and expenses, and any and all notes or renewals thereof, shall have been fully paid, and the said lands are hereby charged with the payment of the said purchase money, obligations, notes, and all renewals thereof, and interest, and all costs, charges, damages, and expenses, as herein provided, and, for the purpose of securing the same, the purchaser hereby grants to the vendors the said lands. And, on default, all moneys hereby secured shall at once become due and all powers and other remedies hereby given shall be en-forceable." In an action to recover the amount of the notes past due and to have a decree for a lien and charge upon the lands therefor under the agreement :-Held, reversof the company to enforce the lien de-pended upon the interpretation of the whole contract; that the provision as to the lien only became operative in the case of a complete delivery pursuant to the contract; and that the alternative words "or upon demand" must be taken as meaning upon a demand made after such complete delivery, Rustin v. tute of Limitations - Conditional Sales Ordinance — Repossession and resale — Retention — Notice — Burden of proof.]—In an action by the vendors upon a contract for the sale of a machine to recover the balance of the price after default by the purchasers and repossession and sale by the vendors, it was admitted that, if the con-tract was not under seal, the plaintiffs could not recover owing to the Statute of Limitations. The document was called an "agree-ment" upon the face of it, and there was only one place in it where a covenant was spoken of. There was no testimonium clause There was no testimonium clause receding the signatures of the defendants. There was an attestation clause—"signed and sealed in the presence of." Opposite each of the signatures the word "seal" printed, within brackets, and upon the word "seal" there was imprinted in red ink a mark in the form of the commonly used small red seals. These were all on the docu-ment (which was a printed form) long before the signatures. One of the defendants swore, and was not contradicted, that he could not read English, that he did not know the document was a sealed document, to the country to the limit of the country to the that his brother and co-defendant told him it was a mere form, and that he did not know what the red marks meant at all. The other defendant was not called as a witness:—Held, upon the evidence and a review of the authorities, that the docu-ment was not so executed as to give it the effect of a sealed instrument:-Held, also, that the provisions of the Conditional Sales Ordinance as to retention for 20 days and notice to the purchaser before resale applied to the agreement notwithstanding a clause authorising a private sale; and the burden of proving a proper sale was upon the vendors, the plaintiffs. Sawyer & Massey v. Bouchard (1910), 13 W. L. R. 394.

Machinery Repairs - Subsequent agreement 1 of displacing former - Failure to pay purchase price—Removal of property —Agent—Authority.] — The plaintiffs delivered to the defendant a boiler, engine, shingle machine, etc., under an agreement single machine, etc., under an agreement in writing, reserving the right of property to the plaintiffs until payment of the purchase price. Before the purchase money was all paid, the building in which the machinery was set up was destroyed by fire. The shingle machine was repaired by the plaintiffs at a cost of $200, and re-delivered to the defendant with another boiler and engine under a new agreement, which, omitting any mention of the shingle machine, conditioned the vesting of the property in the defendant upon payment of the balance due under the first agreement, as well as the further amount payable for the new ma-chinery. On non-payment of the amount payable under the second agreement, the whole of the property was replevied by the plaintiffs:—Held, that the first agreement was not cancelled by the second, and that the repairs having become an inseparable part of the machine to which they were made, the plaintiffs' claim was rightly allowed by the trial Judge .- Held, also, that a statement made by the plaintiffs' sales agent at the time of the seizure, to persons with whom he was negotiating a sale, in respect to certain small articles, that they had better be removed to a place of safety was not an authorisation to remove the defendant's property, and that if such property was removed without the plaintiffs' authorisation, and was lost in consequence, the defendant would have to look to the person by whom it was removed. Robb Engineering Co. v. Rines, 39 N. S. R. 274.

Machinery — Set-off — Notice — Contract.]—S, purchased machinery from plaintiffs. The agreement therefor contained a provision that any moneys, etc., earned by the machinery, less costs of collection, were assigned to the plaintiff. S, became indebted to the defendant, one of his employees, who, on the 15th of October, was notified by the plaintiffs that this debt had been assigned to them. Shortly after this, S, did some threshing with the machinery in question for the defendant, and accounts were stated, the amount owing by S, to defendant being set-off:—Held, that the defendant could exercise the right of set-off after the receipt of the notice of the 15th October. The final settlement between S, and defendant was in pursuance of a previous contract. American-Abel Engine & Thresher Co. v. Lentenbach, 11 W, L. R. 329.

Machinery rented to third party—
Earnings by use of machinery sold — Interpleader.] — By a lien agreement plaintiffs sold threshing machinery to A. and defendant
T. This agreement provided that moneys to be earned by the machinery were assigned to plaintiffs. A., without plaintiffs' permission, rented his interest to defendant H., who knew of the lien agreement. Defendants did threshing for C. amounting to $929.35.
Plaintiffs notified C. to pay to them. C. obtained an interpleader:—Held, assignment to plaintiffs valid, and although this sum may be owing to defendants, yet as they stand in the place of the original purchasers plaintiffs must succeed. American v. Hay,

Money to bind the bargain — Condition as to viving possession — Its effect between the parties and as to third parties — Earnest money by a dealer in hay in his born and the use of the born.—Money to bind the bargain is binding with regard to third parties by consent of parties, and the delivery provided for in Art. 1592, is only exacted to render it complete between them. This delivery takes place when the debtor gives his creditor the hay lying in his barn and with the use of the barn to keep it in. The creditor becomes owner of the hay for all purposes and has the right to replevy it against the assignee appointed at the assignment of the debtor, Provost v. Lamarre, 18 Que. K. B. 227.

Motors.]—In an action to recover possession of two motors sold by plaintiffs, or, in the alternative, the value of same, which were sold to the Cornwall Brewing Co, and installed in the brewery, at that time in their possession. Later on the company went into liquidation, when plaintiffs verified their account against the company, which account included the price of the goods in question. It did not appear that, as between plaintiffs and the Cornwall Brewing Co., there was any understanding that and therefore they had no lien on the plough.

Name of vendor — Agreement to purchase.]—Upon a piano made by a company whose corporate name was "The Mason and Risch Piano Company, Limited," and place of business Toronto, claimed by them in replevin as against a mortgagee thereof, there was painted the words "Mason & Risch, Toronto:" — Held, that if the transaction came within the Conditional Sales Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 149, this was not a compliance with the provisions of s. 1 of that Act. But held, also, that the transaction did not come within the Act, the mortgagor not being bound by the agreement under which the piano was in his possession, to purchase the piano, but having merely the option to purchase it. Obligation to give seller written notice of defects—Trial made with assistance of seller's agent — Conduct of seller amounting to tecit vosiver of the necessity for notice.]—The purchaser of a machine upon trial, who agrees to notify the seller in writing if the machine does not work properly and to particularize the nature of the defects, is freed from such obligation when, having tried the machine with the assistance of the seller's agent, the latter undertakes to give the required notice and does so by wire, and when the seller, upon receipt of the telegram, sends one of his employees to make a new trial of the machine in pursuance of the terms of the contract. Claious v. Forest (1910), 20 Que K. B. 93.

Ordinance respecting hire receipts and conditional sales of goods, s. 11 —Stamping name of manufacturer thereon —Part of name used — Non-compliance with Act — Lien-notes not registered — Bona fide purchaser for value.] — The plaintiffs claimed a lien on a plough sold to H. upon a conditional sale agreement reserving to the plaintiffs the ownership until notes given for the price were paid. The plough was sold by the sheriff under execution against H., the notes being unpaid, and the defendants became the purchasers. Stamped on the plough was the word "Cockshutt," but the plaintiffs' name was not otherwise in any way affixed thereto: -Held, that the stamping of the word upon the plough was not a compliance with s. 11 of the Ordinance respecting Hire Receipts and Conditional Sales of Goods, which requires that "the manufacturer's or vendor's name" shall be stamped thereon; and the plaintiffs could not set up the right of property or possession as against the defendants, who were bona fide purchasers for valuable consideration, without registering their lien notes, as provided by s. 2, which they had not done:

Ownership to remain in vendor until payment — Failure of condition—Revendication — Condition precedent — Tender of part of price paid.]—The condition, in a sale of a chattel for a price payable part in cash and part at a future date, that the ownership will remain in the vendor until final payment, is a suspensive one, and, failing its realismtion, the sale is not perfected, and is to be regarded as inexistent. The vendor, therefore, who revendicates the chattel from the vendee, must, as a condition precedent, tender to the latter the part of the price paid in cash, and downtaiver else may be necessary to put him in the position in which he was before the sale. Dandarand v. Cofm, 32 Que. S. C. 85.

Payment by instalments - Retention of ownership by vendor — Suspensive condi-tion — Non-fulfilment — Revendication — Repayment of instalments already paid Contract made abroad — Application of for-cign law.]—The sale of a chattel, in con-sideration of a price payable by instalments, with the stipulation that the vendor shall remain the owner of it until payment in full, is a promise of a sale or a sale sub-ject to a suspensive condition, and does not become complete until the fulfilment of the condition. Therefore, the vendor has, in the interval, the rights and remedies of an owner, and may revendicate the chattel without being obliged first to repay what has been paid on account of the price.—Per Mathieu, J., that the sale in this case, having taken place at Ottawa, was governed by the law of Ontario, which permits the vendor of a chattel, with a stipulation that he shall remain owner of it until payment in full of the price, to revendicate it without any previous reimbursement. Williams v. Nadon, 32 Que. S. C. 250.

Piano sold under representation—Written contract signed under reliance upon these oral representations—Piano not up to representation—Piano returned to plaintiff—Action brought upon contract—Admissibility of oral evidence to vary—Dismissal of action,]—Piantiff sold defendants a piano under a written contract. Defendants alleged that plaintiff made oral representations to the effect that if they were not satisfied with the piano they could return it. After having had the piano about two or three weeks, defendants returned the piano and plaintiff brought action to recover on the contract. Plaintiff contended that oral testimony could not be admitted to vary terms of a written contract—Denton, Co.C.J., held (17 O. W. Possession - Chattel mortgage - Lien Notes Act - Bills of Sale Act - Registration — Assignment for creditors — Exemptions.] - The owner of manufactured articles, which were in his possession free from any lien for the unpaid portion of the purchase money, signed a lien note in favour of the defendant, the manufacturer, containing a description of the goods and statement that the property in them was to remain in the defendant until said for in full and that on default the defendant might enter and retake them: -Held, in the absence of evidence to prove that defendant had obtained the lien note by fraud or misrepresentation, that it might be treated as a chattel mortgage on the articles for the debt secured by it as against the person who had signed it. The defendant had not put on the articles his name or any other distinguishing name so as to comply with s. 2 of the Lien Notes Act, R. S. M. c. 87: -Held, notwithstanding, that the lien note was valid as against the maker of it. The lien note was not regismaker of it. The hen note was not regis-tered under the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act, 63 & 64 V. c, 31, and the maker of it, before maturity of the debt, became insolvent and made an assignment to the plaintiff under the Assignment Act, R. S. M. c. 7, for the benefit of his creditors.—Held, that, for want of such registration, the lien note, being an instrument in-tended to operate as a mortgage of goods which remained in the debtor's possession until the assignment, was null and void as against his creditors, including the plaintiff as his assignee, by virtue of s. 2 (a) of the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act. It was doubtful upon the wording of the assignment whether the debtor had reserved any exemptions to which he would be enany exemptions to which he would be en-titled under s. 43 (f) of the Executions Act, R. M. S. c. 53.—Held, that defendant could not claim the benefit of any such exemption even if it was reserved by the debtor in the assignment. Cox v. Schack, 22 C. L. T. 188, 14 Man, L. R. 174.

Possession — Non-payment — Loss of goods.]—In an artion upon a promissory note given by the defendant for the price of a machine sold by the plaintiffs to the defendant upon a conditional sale, under which the property in the machine was not to pass until payment, it appeared that the machine had been accidentally destroyed by fire while in the defendant's possession before paymeat in full was made:—Held, that a substantial interest in the machine had passed to the purchaser, and he was liable as Promissory note — Land — Condition as to passing of title to property—Acceleration of payment—Negotiable instrument.]—A document contained a promissory note together with a memorandum similar to that used in conditional sale agreements, although the instrument was given in connection with the purchase of land.—Held, that the memorandum is surplusage. There were all the requisites of a promissory note, and the acceleration clause did not make it any the less good. Judgment for plaintiff. Canadian v. Licingston, 6 E. L. R. 459.

Promissory note - Property not to pass -Judgment in action on note-Execution.] -Under execution issued upon a judgment against the defendant, the sheriff seized a binder in the possession of the defendant. The Massey-Harris Company claimed the binder under a lien note, which provided that until the full amount of the purchase money was paid the property in the binder should remain in the company. Previous to the seizure of the binder the company had recovered judgment in a County Court against the defendant upon one of the lien notes or agreements for the balance due on the binder, and had issued execution for the amount, but in this execution there was no evidence of any action having been taken :-Held, in an interpleader issue, that, notwithstanding the judgment recovered by the company against the defendant on the note or agreement and the issuing of execution or agreement and the issuing or execution thereon, the property in the binder still remained in the company, and it was not liable to seizure by the sheriff under the execution issued by the execution creditor. Property not passing — Fixtures — Lien note — Alteration — Conversion, Whitney v. Bruce, 2 O. W. R. 625.

Property not passing — Judgment for price — Bar to saisie-recondication,]—Where a vendor has obtained judgment upon promissory notes, representing the price of machines sold, and at the time of sale it was provided by special contract that these machines should remain his property until they should be entirely paid for, he cannot, without first having desisted from his judgment, issue a saisie-recendication for the machines, or obtain a declaration that he is the owner of them, and thus have a new judgment against the defendant. Plessisville Foundry V. Levesque, 22 Que. S. C. 306.

Property not passing — Refusal to accept — Destruction by fire — Action for price.]—The plaintiffs, by agreement in writing, sold an engine and stone crusher, with some extra parts, to the defendant, on terms of the property remaining in them until the price was paid, for which notes were to be given by the defendant within ten days after the machines were started. The plaintiffs were willing to deliver the goods, but the defendant refused to take them and to give the notes, or to pay, according to the contract.

The plaintiffs then commenced this action, and, after notice to the defendant removed the goods and stored them for safe keeping at the place of delivery in their own warehouse, where the goods were destroyed by fire:—Held, that the plaintiffs were, nevertheless, entitled to recover the amount of the contract price. Sauvyer-Massey Co. v. Robertson, 21 C. L. T. 182, 1 O. L. R. 297.

Property remaining in vendors—Machinery with manufacturers' name stamped thereon—Ontario Conditional Sales Act — Machinery affixed to the freehold—Rights of mortgaces of freehold—Rights of mortgaces of freehold—Rights of mortgaces of of sale, conditional order for sale, title to remain in plaintiffs till machinery under a conditional order for sale, title to remain in plaintiffs till machinery being the machinery active of the was first prepared through which bolts passed, the machinery being bolted to the cement. Then the machinery was enclosed with brick and cement. To remove the machinery a considerable part of the wall would have to be taken down. Though ordered before, the machinery was not affixed until after the giving and registration of defendant's mortgace on the freehold:—Held, that plaintiffs are entitled to remove the machinery, it not having been paid for. Goldie & McCulloch Co, v. Ux-bridge, 13 O. W. R. 696.

Purchase and hire agreement—Necessity for filing — Bills of Sale Act — Rights of vendors against purchaser for value from vendee — Incomplete clause in agreement.] — Where the plaintiffs sold to F. a piano for the sum of $300, F. paying a portion of the purchase money in cash and giving his promissory notes for the balance, and, immediately after the sale and delivery of the piano, signing a purchase and hiring agreement, under which, upon completion of the payments to be made by him, he was to become owner of the piano, the title to which, in the meantime, remained in the vendors, and in which it was provided that in the event of F. becoming insolvent, or attempting to sell or part with the possession of the piano, all rights of F. should cease and the vendors should be at liberty to retake possession, and, while about one-half of the purchase money was still unpaid, F. sold the piano:—Held, that the agreement, having been taken by way of security, should have been filed under the provisions of the Bills of Sale Act, R. S. N. S. 1990 c. 142, s. S, in order to be valid against creditors or an innocent purchaser for value, and not having been so filed, the plaintiffs could not recover; and, the Court could not give effect to a clause in the agreement which contained a number of blanks which by inadvertence were not filed up at the time the agreement was executed, and which lacked ingredients to make it operative and must deal with the agreement as if he clause were not there at all. Miller Bros. v. Blair, 27 N. S. R. 293.

Quality, weight, etc. -- Inspection --Rejection — Conversion — Sale by Crown

short weight.]—Minister of Agriculture of Canada 'entered into contract with suppliants for supply of a quantity of pressed hay for use of British army engaged in opera-tions during the late South African war, the quality of hay and size, weight and shape of bales being specified. Shipments were to be made f.o.b. cars at various points in Quebec to the port of St. John, N.B., and were to be subject to inspection and rejection at the ship's side there by Government Some hay was refused by inspecofficials. tor, as deficient in quality, and some for short weight in bales. In weighing, at St. John, fractions of pounds were disregarded, both in respect to hay refused and accepted: there was also a shrinkage in weight and in number of bales as compared with wavbills. The hay so refused was sold by the Crown officials without notice to suppliants, for less than prices payable under contract and the amount received upon such sales was paid by government to suppliants. In making payment for hay accepted, deduc-tions were made for shortage in weights shewn on way-bills and invoices, and credit given for discarded fractions :was not Held, Chief Justice and Davies, J., dissenting, that appellants were entitled to recover for so much of amount claimed on appeal as was deducted for shrinkage or shortage in weight of hay delivered on ac-count of government weighers disregarding fractions of pounds in weight of hay actually accepted and discharged from cars at St. John.—Held, (per Girouard, Idington and Duff, JJ., Chief Justice and Davies and Anglin, JJ., dissenting), that the manner in which government officials disposed of hay so refused amounted to an acceptance thereof which would render Crown responsible for payment at contract prices :- Judgment appaylient at contract prices;—Judgment appealed from (12 Ex. C. R. 198), reversed in part, Chief Justice and Davies, J., dissenting. Boulay v. R. (1910), 30 C. L. T. 523, 43 S. C. R. 61.

Resale by vendee - Conduct of vendor -Estoppel - Implied authority - Title of bona fide purchaser - Waiver of condition.] -The plaintiffs, who were the owners of a quantity of logs, upon being asked by the defendant if they were for sale, replied in the negative, adding that they had already been sold to one M. The defendant thereupon bought a portion of said logs from M., who was in possession and had all indicia of title to the same, and paid M. in cash for them. As a matter of fact the sale to M, was subject to the condition that no property in the logs was to vest in M. until they were paid for, of which condition the defendant had no knowledge. In an action of trover brought to recover the value of the logs so purchased from M, by the defendant:

Reposs upon credi "proceeds" —Held that the plaintiffs were estopped by their declaration as to the sale to M. from setting up that the title was not in him, and that a verdict ought, therefore, to be entered for the defendant. Per McLeod, J., that the evidence shewed an intention on the part of the plaintiffs to abandon the conditional element of their contract with M., and that he was clothed by the plaintiffs with authority to sell the logs, accounting to them for the proceeds. Per Gregory, J., that the circumstances were such that the defendant could not reasonably have had any doubt as to the right of M. to sell, and, as the plaintiffs had put M. in a position to practise a fraud on the defendant, they must suffer the loss. Further, it being apparent from the evidence that the plaintiffs intended that M, should dispose of the logs in the usual course of his business, he of necessity had an implied authority to sell and pass the title. People's Bank of Halifax v. Estey, 36 N. B. R. 169.

Repossession and resale - Deficiency -Retention of promissory notes — Delay in delivery of part of goods ordered—Entired contract—Damages. |—The defendants sold to the plaintiffs one separator and one perfection weigher under one orust and price. The separator was duly delivered and price. The separator was duly delivered and accepted and used by the plaintiff, but there was delay in delivering the weigher, and the plaintiff refused to take it when it arrived. The plaintiff made default in payment of the purchase price, and the defendants, as they had the right to do under their contract, resumed possession of both machines, repaired the separator, and sold the machines for less than the amount due: -Held, that the contract was an entire one and that the plaintiff had no right to reject one article after having accepted the other; and the plaintiff was not entitled to have back his notes given for the price, or to damages for non-delivery of the weigher. Gerrard v. Gaar Scott Co. (1910), 13 W. L. R. 442.

Repossession of goods by vendor Retention — Recovery of price, less value of goods — Rescission of contract.]—Where, in an agreement for conditional sale, it is provided that upon default the seller may take possession of and hold the goods until payment, or sell the same and apply the proceeds on the purchase price, and recover the balance, and the seller takes possession and retains the goods, the contract is not thereby rescinded, but he may recover the purchase price under the contract after crediting the value of the goods. on land - Printed contract - Description on land — Princed contract — Bearington of land not filled in — "Other lands,"]—A contract made upon the sale of machinery by the plaintiffs to the defendant provided that, if the defendant did not pay the price when due, the plaintiff might retake the machinery and resell it, and the contract should not thereby be cancelled or affected, but the defendant should remain liable for the whole price and interest, and the plaintiffs might sell upon cash or credit, "crediting the net proceeds of such resale" after deducting the expenses. The defendant made default, the plaintiffs repossessed the machinery, made a resale upon credit, and brought this action for the balance due under the contract:—Held, that the defendant was not entitled to credit for the proceeds of the entitled to credit for the proceeds of the resale until the plaintiffs received the same. —The contract (on a printed form) con-tained a clause by which the defendant agreed to deliver to the plaintiffs "a mortgage of the lands hereinafter referred to," and that the plaintiffs "shall have, and they are hereby given, a charge and specific lien for the amount of the purchase-money . . . upon the said lands and upon any other lands the purchaser now owns or shall hereafter " At the end was a blank to fill in the description of the land, but it was not filled in, although the plaintiffs had a description of the land owned by the defendant, and claimed a lien upon the land so described:-Held, that where a printed form of agreement contains a space which it is necessary to fill up in order to make an effective contract, and where the parties intentionally leave this space a blank, they must be taken as meaning that the clause is not to take effect, and therefore the plaintiffs had no lien upon the defendant's land; and as to "any other lands," there were none, and that part of the clause was meaningless. Can. Port Huron Co. v. Fairchild (1910), 14 W. L. R. 525, 3 Sask. L. R. 228.

Resale by vendee before payment of price - Repossession by vendors - Contract of sale - Construction-Rights against subsequent purchasers - Judgmeni against vendee - Merger - Election - Waiver -Conditional Sales Act — Laches.]—The defendants supplied to B, certain machinery on the terms contained in a written order signed by B., among which were: that pay-ment should be made in instalments, and if default should be made the whole amount should become due; that the title to the goods should not pass until all the dues, terms, and conditions of the order should have been complied with; that B, should not sell or remove the goods from his premises without the defendants' consent in writing, and in case of default of the payments or provisions of the order, and without affecting B.'s liability for purchase money, the defendants should be at liberty, with or without process of law, to enter upon B.'s premises and remove the goods, and, without notice, to sell them at such prices as, in their judgment, were advisable, and credit B. with the same, and that B. should forth-with pay the deficiency, if any, arising after such sale. B. installed the machinery in his mill in 1905, and on the 10th October, 1906, sold the mill, including the machin-ery, to M., who, on the 19th March, 1907, sold the same to the plaintiffs. On the 18th February, 1908, the defendants took the machinery out of the plaintiffs' possession in the mill, money being then still due to the defendants under the contract. Before taking possession, the defendants recovered judgment against B, for the amount due under the contract. The plaintiffs, asserting that they were purchasers for value without notice of the defendants' rights, brought this action for wrongful removal: - Held, (1) That the original indebtedness was merged in the judgment quoad the security provided by the contract, and the defendants were entitled to retain that security until payment.—(2) That by suing for and obtaining judgment for the purchase money the defendants had not elected to treat the transaction as an absolute sale, so as to valve their security. McEntire v. Crossley 11895] A. C. 457, 464, explained and distinguished.—(3) That the defendants' rights were preserved and their title to the machinery continuously asserted by having affixed thereto a stamp bearing their name and address, in compliance with the Conditional Sales Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 49, s. 1; and there was no evidence of laches, but the contrary.—Judgment of the District Court of Muskoka affirmed. Utterson Lumber Co. v. H. W. Petric Limited, 17 O. L. R. 570, 13 O. W. R. 104.

Rescission by vendor - Principal and agent — Authority of agent — Parol evidence of agency.]—Held, that the buyer of an article under a sale, conditional upon the property not passing until full payment of the price, was entitled to treat the con-tract as rescinded where the seller took possession, used, offered for sale, and neglected to take proper care of, the article, although he made no actual use of it. Sawyer v. Pringle, 20 O. R. 111, 18 A. R. 218, followed. The evidence of the authority of a person assuming to act as agent for a dealer in agricultural implements, and the scope of his authority discussed. Where, on the trial, parol evidence was given, without objection, to establish agency, and afterwards it appeared that the agent's appointment was in writing, and, on appeal, it was contended that the parol evidence should not have been and should not be considered :- Held, that, though upon the written appointment being put in evidence, an application might, perhaps, have been properly made to strike out the parol evidence bearing on the same point, yet, as no such application had been made, nor any objection taken to its reception, the parol evidence might properly be considered. Harris v. Dustin, 1 Terr. L. R. 404.

Retaking possession — Repayment of amount paid on account by purchaser. Dandurand v. Coffin, 3 E. L. R. 297.

Re-taking possession on default—Chattel mortgages—Collateral accurities—Rescissions of contract—Failure of consideration.]—The defendant ordered from Massey & Co., Ltd., machinery, for the price of which he gave three promissory notes, which provided that "the title, ownership, and right to the possession of the property for which this note is given shall remain in Massey & Co., Ltd., until this note or any renewal thereof is fully paid with interest, and if default is made in payment of this or any other note in their favour, or should

I sell or dispose of or mortgage my landed property, or if for any good reason Massey & Co., Ltd., should consider this note insecure, they have power to declare it and all other notes made by me in their favour any other notes made by me in their rayour due and payable at any time, and to take possession of their property, and hold it until this note is paid, or sell the said property at public or private sale, the proceeds thereof to be applied upon the amount unpaid of the purchase price." The defendant gave two chattel mortgages as collected sequentic for the notes. The notes lateral security for the notes. The notes were afterwards indorsed by Massey & Co., Ltd., to the plaintiffs, who on default took possession of and sold the property men-tioned in the notes, and applied the proceeds upon the amount unpaid. The plaintiffs sued for the balance, $487.45, as due under the chattel mortgages:—Held, that, in the absence of provision in the notes that the plaintiffs could after sale recover the balance, the original agreement was rescinded by the sale .- (2) That, as the plaintiffs had no right to recover on the notes, they could not recover on the collateral security. Massey-Harris Co. v. Lowe, 6 Terr. L. R. 71, 1 W. L. R. 213.

Retaking possession on default -Chattel mortgage - Rescission of contract.] The defendant ordered from the Massey and Company, Ltd., machinery, for the price of which he gave three promissory notes, which provided "the title, ownership and right to the possession of the property for which this note is given shall remain in Massey and Company, Ltd., until this note or any renewal thereof is fully paid with interest, and if default is made in payment of this or any other note in their favour, or should I sell or dispose of or mortgage my landed property, or if for any good reason Massey and Company, Ltd., should consider this note insecure, they have power to declare it and all other notes made by me in their favour due and payable at any time, and to take possession of their property, and hold it until this note is paid, or sell the said property at public or private sale, the proceeds thereof to be applied upon the amount unpaid of the purchase price."-The defendant gave two chattel mortgages as collateral security for the notes. The notes were after-wards endorsed by Massey and Company, Ltd., to the plaintiffs, who on default took possession of and sold the property mentioned in the notes and applied the proceeds upon the amount unpaid.—The plaintiff sued for the balance $487,45 as due under the chattel mortgages.—Held, 1. That, in the absence of provision in the notes that the plaintiff could after sale recover the balance, the original agreement was rescinded by the sale:—2. That as the plaintiff had no right to recover on the notes, they could not recover on the collateral security. Massey-Harris v. Lowe (1905), 6 Terr. L. R. 71, 1 W. L. R. 213.

Retaking possession on default — When the buyer, in a contract of conditional sale, agrees that failure on his part to comply with any one of the conditions shall operate as a rescission and a forfeiture of such part of the consideration theretofore paid by him, the Court in case of such failure, is bound to give effect to the covenant at the instance of the seller. machiner ant could Revendication by vendor — Opposi-tion — Saisie-gagerie — Judgment against purchaser — Representation—Laches.]—The vendor of a chattel, in consideration of a price payable by instalments, and on condition of the vendor retaining the property in the chattel until final payment, has the right to revendicate it in the hands of a curator appointed under a saisie-gagerie which has been made (illegally according to him), even after a judgment declaring it good and valid. Such judgment cannot be set up by way of opposition; the judgment is without effect as against the vendor, having been pro-nounced in a cause in which he was not a party, and in which the defendant, his purchaser and in this case his debtor by specialty, could not be considered as representing him, and it is of no importance that the vendor knew of the saisie-gagerie so made and did not use diligence in interven-ing to contest it. Somers v. Whiteman, 31 Que. S. C. 261, 8 Que. P. R. 321.

Right of vendor to resume possession upon default — Contract — Alteration—Evidence—Company—Powers of provisional directors—Conditional Sales Act— Goods maked with name of vendor—Contract not filled with clerk of County Court. Re Kurtse and McLean Limited, Petrie v. London and Western Trusts Co., 12 O. W. R. 504, 13 O. W. R. 308.

Right to repossession on default -Hiring of goods after repossession—Rescission of contract—Action for price—Sale by vendors after action begun — Conditional Sales Ordinance, s. 7—Notice — Costs.]— The contract for the sale of machinery by the plaintiffs to the defendant contained the provisions that the property in the goods sold should remain in the vendors, who might repossess themselves of the goods on default or on other specified conditions, and might thereafter sell them on account of the purchaser, by public auction or private sale, and, after crediting the net proceeds of the sale, the purchaser should be liable for the balance remaining unpaid. The defendants had the use of the machinery for more than a year, during which time he sent numerous letters to the plaintiffs containing laudatory comments on the machinery, and made no complaints. However, he paid the plaintiffs nothing, and they took possession of the machinery. They first hired it out to D., and then, after the commencement of this action upon a mortgage given for the price, sold it:—Held, that the defence that the machinery was defective failed, upon the evidence. — 2. That the plaintiffs had no right to hire the machine out to D., and by so doing had entitled the defendant to treat the contract as rescinded. If the machinery was to be sold for the benefit and credit of the defendant, he was entitled to have it when sold in as good condition as when when sold in as good condition as when taken out of his possession. Sawyer v. Pringle, 18 A. R. 218; Harris v. Dustin, 1 Terr. L. R. 404, and Moore v. Johnston, 9 W. L. R. 642, followed.—3. On the 1st December, 1908, after the hiring to D., the plaintiff gave the defendant notice that, at the expiration of 5 days, to wit, on the 12th December, they should proceed to sell the machinery at Didsbury, and that the defendant could redeem it any time within the 20 days required by the statute after the 23rd November, on payment of a named sum—Held, that the plaintiffs properly assumed that they were bound by the provisions of a, 7 of the Conditional Sales Ordinance, C. O. 1898, c. 44; and they had not complied therwith; the 20 days fixed by the notice did the sale was to be on the 12th December; but in fact no notice of the sale which was actually made was ever given, as no attempt was made to sell at Didsbury, and no notice was given of the sale which actually took place afterwards at Brandon. In the circumstances, the action was dismissed without costs. North-West Thresher Co. v. Bates (1910), 13 W. L. R. 657.

Sale a remere to secure advance— Retention by vendor—Assignment for creditors— Recendication from assignee,]—The sale à rimère of a chattel to guarantee the repayment of advances is complete without delivery of chattel, and the purchaser has a right to revendicate it from the curator of the vendor who has made an assignment of his property. Sonne Avening Tent and Tarpaulin Co. v. McDonell, 33 Que. S. C. 481.

Suspensive condition - Term of credit — Delivery — Pledge — Shipping bills — Bills of lading — Indorsement — Notice — Fraudulent transfer — Insolvency — Resili-ation of contract — Revendication — Plead-ing.]—The absence of the indorsement on bills of lading by the consignee therein named is notice of an outstanding interest in the goods represented by the bills, and places persons proposing to make advances upon the security of those bills upon inquiry in respect to the circumstances affecting them. On failure to take proper measures in order to ascertain these facts and obtain a clear title to the bills and goods, any pledge thereof must be assumed to have been made subor must be assumed to have been made subject to all rights of such consignee. But, per Taschereau, C.J.C., dissenting, that where a sale of goods has been completed by actual tradition and delivery, the mere absence of the consignee's indorsement upon shipping bills representing the goods made in the name of the vendor, cannot have the effect of reserving any right of property in the vendor. If the goods have been sold upon terms of credit, the unpaid vendor has no right to revendicate such goods after they have passed into the possession of a third person in the ordinary course of business, and, in the present case, on failure of the conservatory seizure and in the absence of any right of the plaintiff to revendicate the goods, the alternative relief prayed for by his action should not be granted. Gosselin v. Ontario Bank, 36 S. C. R. 406.

Turret lathe — Purchased on hire receipt—Effect of sale—Winding-up of company — Right of vendors to rank as preferred creditors.]—Vendors claimed a lien on a turret lathe sold insolvent company on following agreement: "The title in said machinery and goods, and goods included in former orders, and orders which may be hereafter given by us to you, shall not pass from you until all terms and conditions of this order and such other orders shall be fully couplied with by us, and until all moneys payable and notes given under this order, and such other orders have been fully paid and satisfied." Vendors claimed a lien for $256.5; $120.56 on purchase price of lathe and $124.89 and $11.15 for further purchases. Hodgins, Master in Ordinary, held, that vendors were entitled to a lien for $120.56 only; that to allow the other claims would be to allow endors to evade the previsions of the Conditional Sales Act and the Chattel Mortgage Act. Re Can. Camera Co. Ex p. Williams Machine Co. (1901), 30 C. L. T. 341.

Unpaid vendor of goods delivered to the purchaser on condition that the property shall not pass until the price, payable by instalments, is fully paid, has the right to revendicate it, notwithstanding the acceptance by him of notes of purchaser, no novation having thereby taken place. Tremblay v. Quinn (1910), 39 Que. S. C. 215.

Waiver - Intention - Secondary evidence-Handwriting. | -On proper evidence as to non-production of the original secondary evidence of the contents of a letter, given by a witness who had seen the author write once only, was admitted. On a con-ditional sale, evidenced by writing, providing that the title should remain in the seller till cash, notes, or drafts (for the balance of purchase price) as agreed upon, should be paid :- Held, that the question whether the conditions had been waived and thus the property had vested in the buyer, was entirely a question of intention, and that the facts shewn in evidence, one of which was that the seller had accepted, for the balance of the purchase price, the promissory note of a firm of which the buyer was a member, did not shew an intention to waive the con-Marcy v. Pierce dition as to property. M (No. 2), 4 Terr. L. R. 246.

Written order — Oral agreement for return if not satisfactory after fair test —Return and acceptance by vendor.]—Action on lien notes for price of goods sold. The written order for the goods was lost; —Held, that it was part of the agreement that if after a fair test the machine did not work it could be returned. This came to pass and plaintiff resold it. Action dismissed. Brownsberger v. Harvey (1909) 12 W. L. R. 596.

Agent - Representations - Contract -Agent — Representations — Contract — Vessel — Latent defect — Inspection—Part payment — Forfeiture,] — The defendants wrote to the plaintiffs enquiring whether they knew of a vessel fulfilling certain requirements, and which they could "in every respect recommend and guarantee." The plaintiffs replied, mentioning and recommending a vessel offered for sale, but saying, "If you consider this vessel, we would ad-"If you consider this vessel, we would advise you to send a man and inspect her, as we would not care about sending you a vessel and then not to turn out satisfactory." The defendants wrote in return that they were unable to send a man to examine the vessel, but were prepared to take her on the plaintiffs' recommendation. They thereupon paintiffs recommenation. They thereupon authorized the plaintiffs to buy the vessel and draw on them for a portion of the purchase money, and agreed to pay the balance on delivery:—Held, that when the bargain was finally struck between the plaintiffs, acting for the vendor, and the vendee, the pro-perty passed, and there was no further locus panitentia after that date. Some time after delivery, the defendants discovered that the vessel was infected with dry rot, which made her practically valueless, but could not be detected by any ordinary inspection.— Held, that, in making the representations they did as to the condition of the vessel. and in the conduct of the negotiations, the plaintiffs were only bound to use ordinary diligence in the discharge of their duties, and the evidence fully warranted the conclusion that such diligence was used .- Held, further, that a reference to the part payment as "earnest money," and a provision for forfeiture of the amount paid in the event of the defendants failing to complete the purchase were not sufficient to give the defendants the option of forfeiting their de-posit and refusing to carry out their con-tract as to the balance. Breach - Conditions - Shipping payment—Construction of contract—Damages.]
—By contract in writing M. agreed to sell to P. cedar poles of specified dimensions, the contract containing the following provisions:
"All poles as they are landed at Arnprior are to be shipped from time to time as soon they are in shipping condition, poles remaining in Arnprior over one month after they are in shipping condition to be paid for on estimate in 30 days therefrom, less 2 per cent. discount. . ments cash 30 days from dates of invoices less 2 per cent. discount:"—Held, that for poles not shipped P. was not obliged to pay on the expiration of one month after they were in shipping condition, but only after 30 days from receipt of the estimate such poles. M. refused to deliver logs that had been on the ground one month with-out previous payment, and P. brought an action for specific performance and damages, contending that he could not be called upon to pay until the poles were inspected and passed by him, and also that M. should supply the cars, M. counterclaimed for the price of the poles.—Held, Sedgewick and Killam, JJ., dissenting, that each party had misconstrued his rights under the contract, misconstrued his rights under the contract, and no judgment could be rendered for either. Condition — Measurement of logs by surveyor—Action for price — Evidence. [— An agreement for the sale of logs contained a condition that the logs were to be surveyed by any surveyor the vendee might have in his employ and that such survey was to be final:—Held, that proof of such survey was, in the absence of any charge of fraud or incompetency on the part of the vendee's surveyor, a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to recover the price of the logs, and that the trial Judge was in error in rejecting the evidence of such surveyor on the ground that he was not proved to have been a duly sworn surveyor, appointed by the municipality and under bonds. On the days, delivery within 6 months." On the 5th October the defendants replied: "We will accept your offer on timothy hay as per your letter to us of the 2nd instant. Please ship as soon as possible the orders you already have in hand, and also get off the 7 cars as early as possible . . will advise you further as to shipment of the 30 cars. Should we not be able to take it 30 cars. all in before your roads break up, we pre-sume you will have no objection to allowing balance to remain over until the farmers can haul it in. Do the best you can to get some empty cars at once, as we must have three or four cars by next freight." This letter was registered, and, although it reached the plainting post office within the five days, was not received by him until the following day. The hay was not delivered, and, be-fore the expiration of the six months named for delivery, the defendants, in defence of this action (which was brought in respect of earlier transactions), counterclaimed for damages for breach of contract in the nondelivery of the 37 car loads :- Held, that the correspondence did not constitute a binding contract, as the parties were never ad idem as to all the terms proposed .- 2. That, as the six months limited for making delivery had not expired, the company had no right of action for damages, even had there been a contract, and that the filing of the counterclaim was premature. The defendants failed to make any immediate reply to this letter, and the plaintiffs wrote again, asking whether the defendants had decided to supply whether the defendants had decided to supply the cargo in the condition the plaintiffs would like to have it, as per their previous letter. The defendants thereupon wrote: "We will furnish any quantity of fish that you want, suitable for any market, at the price you offered." They added: "I will do my best in regard to removing the black skin, as you stated in your previous letter. To this letter the plaintiffs replied, stating that they would take a carge of 2,500 quintals, "according to previous arrangement as to quality and price." The defendants telegraphed, giving order at the price named, "F.O.B. mine," adding "Route it G. T. R. London." On the same day the plaintifis wrote accepting the order, and stating that they would ship as soon as railway equipment could be furnished, that an all rail rate of $2.10 to London had been quoted them, and they would ask the carriers to put same through at once. Subsequently and before any shipment had been made, it was arranged between the plaintiffs and defendants taat No. 8 l'ittsburg slack should be substituted for Pittsburg slack, at the same "delivered price," Invoices sent with the coal shewed the mine price at $1.65, but, nowithstand-

Statute of Frauds - Inability of vendor to deliver goods - Breach of contract -Sale of business as a going concern.]-The plaintiffs were executors of one John Mc-Calla, who had carried on a general grocery and hardware business in St. Catharines They caused an advertisement to be published asking for tenders for the purchase en bloc of the grocery and hardware stock, goodwill, fixtures, etc., of the business. The advertise-ment stated, inter alia, that intending purchasers were to tender at a rate of so much in the dollar for the stock and fixtures, and a specified sum for the goodwill; that the business had been continued from McCalla's death by the executors, and was a going concern; that the stock sheets might be seen on application to the executor's solicitor; on application to the executions and that further particulars and conditions and might also be seen there. Defendant came into the office of the solicitor on two occasions and looked over the stock sheets; that on 22nd September, 1902, the day before the tenders were to be opened, defendant met him in the street in the evening and said he thought he would make a tender on the stock. Defendant asked the solicitor to write it out for him and gave him the figures, 75 cents for the grocery stock and 50 cents for the hardware stock; nothing for the good-will, Solicitor then wrote the following offer: "To the Trusts and Guarantee Co. (Ltd.), Toronto. "Dear Sirs.—I offer 75 cents on the dollar for the grocery stock and 50 cents on the dollar for the hardware, but nothing for the goodwill, Yours John Ross, per A. W. Marquis." This offer was accepted by the plaintiffs, and notice thereof in writing given by the solicitor to the defendant containing a request to call and execute the agreement in accordance with conditions of sale, and to make his deposit. The defendant by letter repudiated any liability on the contract. The conditions of sale were never produced nor proved. There had been a large quantity of staple goods sold prior to time for completion of the contract:—Held, that there was no valid contract under the Statute of Frauds; and further, that, by the depletion of the stock, the plaintiffs were not in a position to carry out the alleged contract. Trusts and Guarantee Co. v. Ross, 5 O. W. R. 558, 9 O. L. R. 715.

Statute of Frauds - Order for goods -Agency - Correspondence.]-The travelling salesman of a wholesale dealer is presumably not authorised by the customer who buys from him to sign a contract for the customer as purchaser; and this presumption is not rebutted by a written memorandum of the order being made in the purchaser's presence and a duplicate given to the latter: the entry of the purchaser's name made by the salesman is not evidence per se of his agency:—Held, upon the facts of this case, that there was nothing upon which the Court could conclude that the vendor's agent was acting as the agent of the purchaser, and the subsequent letters of the purchaser did not identify the contract; and therefore the Statute of Frauds was an answer to a claim for the price of goods for which an order for the price of goods for which an order was orally given by the defendant to the plaintiffs' agent, but which the defendant refused to accept, — Judgment of District Court of Algoma reversed. Imperial Cap Co. v. Cohen, 11 O. L. R. 382, 7 O. W. R. 128.

Supplementary agreement to exchange if found unsuitable — Condition of goods—Onus of proof—Evidence. McLeod v. McCutcheon (Man.), 5 W. L. R. 159.

Unascertained future goods — Appropriation to contract — Property passing.1—
Held, that, under the circumstances of this case, there was a sale by description of unascertained future goods, viz. wood to be cut, drawn, and delivered, and T14 cords of the wood were delivered at the place at which by the contract they were to be delivered, and in the state in which by a subsequent agreement they were to be delivered, and the plantiff, by measuring, estimating, marking and stamping them with his own stamp, assented to the delivery of them in the state in which they were delivered, and unconditionally appropriated these T14 cords to the contract, and the property therein thereupon passed to the plantiff, as was the intention of the parties; and the provisions of the subsequent agreement did not prevent the property passing; and the plaintiff must bear the loss of part of the wood which was destroyed by fire. Wilson v. Shaver, 21 C. L. T. 141, 1 O. L. R. 107.

Usurious transactions — Commission of five per cent, besides interest—Customary allowance for transacting business.]—Where a merchant supplied goods, money, promissory notes, and other commercial instruments to country customers and where accounts, returns and settlements were made from time to time at their convenience with produce from the upper country, transferred by vessels and barges, the Privy Council held, that a commission of five per cent, on all advances besides interest, under the circumstances, was not an usurious transaction, but a customary allowance for the trouble and inconvenience of transacting the business. Pollock v. Bradbury (1853), C. R. 2 A. C.

Vendor's risk — Insurance clause — Interpretation — Perishable goods, | Under the "cost, freight, and insurance" clause in a contract of sale, the vendor is obliged to keep the goods fully insured against all loss, damage, or deterioration to which they may be exposed, until delivery; and, consequently, in the case of perishable goods, such clause is not compiled with by an insurance warranted free from particular average, or part loss, and which covered only a portion of the risk from ordinary perils of the sea. Canada Hardware Co. v. Suren-Hartmann Co., 21 Que. S. C. 430.

Work and labour performed—Set-off Counterclaim by loss by fire caused by plaintiffs' negligence — Contributory negligence, Stephens & Irving v. Awalt (N. S. 1910), 9 E. L. R. 262.

Writing — What amounts to—Evidence—Commencement of proof.]—It is not to essential that the writing required by clause 4 of Art, 1235, C. C., set forth the contract of sale in all its details; it is sufficient if it set forth the essential terms of the contract, or refers to another writing which does contain them. The writing may be supplemented by the admission of the party, but such admission ought to include all the conditions contained in the writing, and ought to be complete in itself; furthermore Art, 1235, forming, as it does, an exception to Art. 1235 such admission cannot be offered as the commencement of proof by writing. A writing, signed by the party's sued, which confirms the requirements of Art. 1235, C. C., but which such party contends is not binding, would, nevertheless, be sufficient to form a basis for the admission of oral testimony of the contract of sale. Molleur v. Mitchell, 14 Que, K. B. 74.

7. Delivery.

Agreement between manufacturer and customer that the latter will take delivery of goods into his warehouse, at expense of former for demurrage, storage, etc., with further covenant that invoices will be dated from time of conversion of goods by customer to his own use, is not a sale, and the customer is left to make such conversion or not, as he thinks fit, and, if not, he incurs no liability for the goods or their value. Western Stoneware Co. v. Ozo Co., (1910), 39 Que. S. C. 251.

Breach — Cause beyond control of vendor — Terms of contract.] — A vendor of construction stone who engages "to ship and deliver on cars at N. granite stone," etc., is not liable in damages for default of delivery due to the fact that there are no cars and that it is impossible to procure them. The breach of his obligation arises, in this case, from a cause which can not be imputed to him: Art. 1071, C. C. Verret v. Perron, 18 Que. K. B. 129.

Change of possession — Animals — Visible and public change — Conversion — Dispute as to ownership — Costs — Scale of —Set-off. McNichol v. Brucks (N.W.T.), 1 W. L. R, 478.

Damage for non-delivery — Contract —Correspondence — Executors of vendor— Corroboration. Upton v. Eligh, 2 O. W. R. 629.

Damages for non-delivery—Measure—Claim and counterclaim— Payment into Court— Costs. Delhi Fruit and Vegetable Canning Co. v. Poole, 2 O. W. R. 413.

Delay — Damages — Acquiescence — Payment.] — The purchaser, by written agreement of the 29th April, of goods to be shipped without delay, who on the 25th of the same month receives written notice from his vendor that the goods are to arrive in a few days and will be forwarded at once, and does not reply thereto, and who receives the goods on the 27th May following, and pays for the carriage of them without objection, is not in a position to sue to recover damages for delay in delivery. Timossi v. Moss. 16 Que. K. B., 382.

Delivery of part—Promissory note for price of whole—Balance of goods undelivered —Eemand—Action on note—Consideration. Fuller & Co. v. Holland (N. S. 1910), 9 E. L. R. 110.

Denial of delivery — Novation—Evidence of inferior quality — Admissibility — Admissibility— Admissibility— Admissibility— Admissibility— Admissibility— Admissibility— Admissibility— Admissibility and the defendant, the plen, in addition to a general denial of delivery, was to the effect that the plaintiff had accepted other persons as his debtors instead of the defendant, thereby creating novation, evidence of the inferior quality of the goods supplied is irrelevant to the issue, and inadmissible. 2. Amendment of the plen at the trial, in order to allege that the goods supplied were not in conformity to the contract, ought not to be allowed, more particularly where the evidence did not shew objection or refusal to accept on this ground at the time of delivery. Villeau V. Atlantic and Lake Superior Ric. Co., 23 Que. S. C. 217.

Denial of sale and delivery — Burden of proof — Corroboration — Appeal — Reversal of judgment].—In an action for the price of goods sold and delivered, judgment was given in favour of the defendants at the trial, on the ground that the denial of the sale and delivery threw the burden of proof upon the plaintiffs, and that they had failed to satisfy this burden, there being a conflict of evidence between the plaintiffs' traveller, E., and the defendant M. It appearing from the evidence that the ground upon which the case was determined at the trial was wrong, the evidence of E. being corroborated in a number of particulars, and there being a preponderance in favour of the plaintiffs:— Held, that the appeal should be allowed and Judgment entered for the plaintiffs for the amount of their claim, with costs of action and appeal. Acceptance by the buyer from the seller of a delivery order does not transfer ownership of the objects until they have been ascertained, and if they are destroyed by fire, the seller must bear the loss. Cream v. Kirouac (1910), 39 Que. S. C. 488

Destruction of goods before delivery—Construction of voritten agreement.]—In a sale of specific or ascertained goods under contract requiring something to be done by the seller before the buyer was bound to accept delivery, a portion of the goods was destroyed without either party's default. The buyer was nevertheless held entitled to recover as damages the amount paid for the goods so destroyed:—Held, also, that the object of the Sales of Goods Ordinance was merely to codify the existing law, not to lay down new law. McLean v. Graham (1898), 6 Terr. L. R. 438.

Kon-delivery of quantity contracted for—Measure of damages — Measurements —Specifications — Interest — Mise en demeure.]—An insolvent had agreed to deliver to V., a creditor, upon a certain dock, a quantity of wood at so much per foot, the expenses of measurement to be paid by the insolvent, who was to furnish specifications to V., the measurement to be made by the measurers of the Quebec harbour commission:—Held, that the delivery was not complete until the measurement had been made and the specifications furnished to V.; also that it was incumbent on the insolvent or on the curator representing him to prove his allegation that V, had received a larger quantity of wood than the specifications shewed or than V. admitted, and the proof of that must be clear and certain. 2. In a commercial matter interest upon money does not run unless it be alleged and shewn that it is allowed by commercial usage. 3. In a commercial matter mise en demeure arises by lapse of time alone. 4. By the default of the insolvent to deliver to V. the quantity of wood which he had contracted to deliver to him, V. had the right as damages to the difference between the price upon which he had agreed with V. and the price at which he had sold or could re-sell the wood. 5. In a commercial matter it is necessary to be faithful and to fulfil exactly a contract within the time agreed, for a disturbance may quickly be caused in the affairs of a trader by reason of one with whom he has contracted not punctually fulfilling his obligations. The tender was accepted, and the contract afterwards signed called for delivery "at the coal shed," A portion of the coal was delivered, without directions from the committee, from a vessel upon the dock, about 80 feet from the shed, and separated from it by a road:—Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal (15th November, 1901, unreported), that the coal was not delivered "at the coal shed," as provided by the contract signed by the parties, which was the binding document:—Held, also, that if the contract was to be decided by the terms of the tender, the delivery was not in accordance therewith, the place of delivery not being "at the pumping station or grounds adjacent thereto." (See also, 20 C. L. T. 303.) Holmes v. Goderich, 22 C. L. T. 222, 32 S. C. R. 211.

8. Description of Goods.

Conveyance of goods — Invalidity for veant of specification — Invoice value.]—A firm, having in its premises goods consisting of books and stationery of the invoice value of $17.000, executed a conveyance to the plaintiff of goods to the invoice value of $6,500. Such conveyance was, however, in general terms and did not specify any particular portion of the stock, nor was it followed by any selection or appropriation from the stock, or any delivery of any part of it—Held, that no property passed by such conveyance, as it was impossible to state what particular goods became the property of the plaintiff. Ross v. Cameron, 40 N. S. R. 126.

Fruit Marks Act — Acceptance — Conduct amounting to.] — In a memorandum of sale of apples, the expression number one stock! means good, sound, clean, merchantable apples, which need not meet the requirements of the Fruit Marks Act, 1901, for fruit of the first quality.—A statement in the memorandum of the prices to be paid for certain kinds of apples, e.g., "Fameuses, $2.50, St. Lawrence, $2.10," etc., does not mean that apples of kinds not mentioned are excluded from the bargain.—The acceptance by the buyer of apples is sufficient evidence that they are according to contract, and when he writes to say he will not accept them, but deals with them as owner by having them sold at auction, such conduct amounts to an acceptance. Minaker v. Cremer, 28 Que. S. C. 443.

Hay — Pressed.]—Plaintiff entered into a contract with defendant for sale to him of a quantity of pressed hay, stored in plaintiff's two barns at M. Plaintiff hauled the hay away from one of the barns, but when he commenced to haul the hay from the other barn and to deliver it to others he found that it was in bad condition. The Jury found that it was part of the bargain between plaintiff and defendant, that the hay sold was to be of first-class quality:—Held, that the expression used in the contract constituted a term of description as to the kind of hay, going to the root of the matter, rather than a subsidiary or collateral statement not of the essence of the contract, and that the hay being sold subject to the condition, and the condition not being fulfilled, the property did not pass. Also, that taking delivery of the hay which was according to contract in the one barn, was not an acceptance of the hay in the other. Mitchell v. Scanan, 43 N. S. R. 311.

Memorandum of sale — Ambiguity — Parol evidence to explain — Admissibility.]

The description in a broker's note of onts sold, in these words, "cars of 10,000 bushels No. 2 white onts at 32% cents per bushel f.o.b. basis 11½ cents freight to Montreal for export, cent less if No. 3," shews no ambiguity of language as to quality of the merchandise. Therefore, the testimony of witnesses to explain it is useless and in-admissible. — The formal repudation of a contract of sale by the buyer dispenses the seller from tendering delivery of the merchandise, before having it resold for the account of him to whom it belongs, according to the usage of commerce. Judgment in 31 Que. S. C. 1 reversed. Melady v. Michaud, 17 Que. K. B. 25.

Memorandum of sale — Description of goods — Latent ambiguity — Parol evidence to explain,] — A description of goods in a bought and sold note as follows, "Cars of 10,000 bushels No. 2 white oats at 32% ets. per bushel f.o.b. basis 11½ ets. freight to Montreal for export, eent less if No. 3," contains a latent ambiguity as to the quality of the goods meant. Parol testimony is therefore admissible to explain it. Melady v. Michaud, 31 Que, S. C. 1.

The stove was soon afterwards returned by the purchaser to the defendants, and another taken in its place:—Held, (affirming the judgment in 16 Que. S. C. 189), that there having been no misrepresentation or intention to deceive, and no damages proved, and the purchaser having been informed that the stove was of the plaintiff's manufacture, the plaintiff had no right to recover damages. Chapleau v. Laporte, 18 Que. S. C. 14.

Manufactured article — Injunction — Trade-mark.]—An action for damages lies against a person who passes off goods manufactured by him as the manufacture of another, and a writ of injunction may be granted to restrain the sale of such goods under false representations, although the plaintiff has not registered any trade-mark for the goods manufactured by him. Vice Camera Co. v. Hogg, 18 Que. S. C. 1.

Misrepresentations — Contract.] — Held, upon the evidence, that the misrepresentations alleged by the plaintiff, as the basis of an action to set aside an agreement for the sale of plant, were not proved; and the action was dismissed. Wilkerson v. Composite Brick Co. (1910), 14 W. L. R. 270.

10. Prescription.

Action en garantie — Recovery of price — Amanges. I—The plaintiff in an action in which a right of property in personal estate is claimed, to which a prescription trentenaire is pleaded, and who then brings in his vendors en garantie, cannot add to his demand en garantie a claim for damages and for recovery back of his purchase money, and this part of the action en garantie will be dismissed upon exception à la forme. Undisclosed principal — Judgment against husband and wife — Married Woman's Act, |-A husband, as agent for his wife, purchased goods from the plaintiffs, who were ignorant that she was the purchaser, but, on becoming aware of it, and the goods not having been paid for, sued both husband and wife, but, on the husband giving a pro-missory note signed by him for part of the debt, and the wife paying the balance in cash, the action was not further proceeded with. The note not having been paid at maturity, an action was brought in a County Court for the balance due on the goods, being the amount for which the note had been given, and judgment was entered against both husband and wife:—Held, on appeal, that the proper inference was that the husband's note was not taken in satisfaction of the debt, and that there was no election to look to him alone for payment; and the plaintiffs were therefore entitled to sue on the original cause of action; but that they could not have judgment against both husband and wife; and must elect as to which they desired to hold it, and that they could properly hold it against the wife, a recovery against her being now maintainable under the Married Deing now maintainable under the married Woman's Property Act, R. S. O. c. 168. Wagner v. Jefferson, 37 U. C. R. 551, dis-tinguished. Davidson v. McClelland, 21 C. L. T. 118, 32 O. R. 282.

12. PROPERTY PASSING.

Article of food — Perishable nature — Merchantable condition — Depreciation through exceptional or accidental cause — Burden of proof, 1—The defendant, by telegraph, ordered 15 barrels of oysters from the plaintiff at Buctouche, N.B., to be shipped to him at Hallifax, N.S., "first soft weather." The oysters were shipped as directed, going forward in two lots, and were delivered to the defendant at Hallifax about four days after shipment. The Judge of the County Court found, and the evidence supported his finding that the oysters were in merchantable condition at the time they were shipped, but immediately after their receipt by the defendant they were found to be bad and unfit for use. The evidence shewed that they could have only reached the condition in which they were when received through some exceptional or accidental cause, such as being frozen and allowed to thaw:—Held, that the oysters having been shipped in good condition, and injured through an exceptional or accidental cause, were at the defendant's risk:—Per Russell, J., dissenting, that the burden was upon the plaintiff of skewing that the deterioration was due to an accidental or exceptional cause, and that, in the absence of such evidence, the Court must conclude that the goods were not in such condition when shipped as to be merchantable for a reasonable time after their arrival at the place to which they were shipped. Barnes v. Waugh, 2 E. L. R. 22.1, 41 N. S. R. 38.

Ascertainment of quality -Ascertainment of quality — Cuaing — Destruction before delivery — Property not passing. — The plaintiff sold to the defendant all the apples of first and second quality on the trees in the plaintiff's orchard at a rate per barrel, the plaintiff to pick the apples and place them in piles, the defendant to supply barrels and pack the apples, and the plaintiff to take the apples when in barrels to the railway station. There was no agreement as to the time and mode of culling and packing or the time and mode of culling and packing or the time for pay-ment. The plaintiff picked the apples and placed them in piles and told the defendant that they were ready for packing. The de-fendant was not at the time able to obtain About three weeks later, however, he took delivery of twelve barrels of apples. Two weeks after this a severe frost occurred and the rest of the apples were destroyed, neither the plaintiff nor the defendant having taken any steps to protect them :-Held, that the inference from the circumstances was that the culling was to be done by the defendant with the plaintiff's concurrence: that until the culling took place there could be no ascer tainment of the apples intended to be sold; that the property had therefore not passed and that the loss must fall on the plaintiff.

210, 4 O. W. R. 41.

Bill of lading in name of vendor -Transmission to purchaser unendorsed — Pledge by purchaser — Right to rescind — Right of vendor to recover from third party -Banks.]-When the vendor of goods, to secure payment, has consigned them to himself at the ports of shipment, and taken from the carriers bills of lading in his own name, and afterwards sent these to the purchaser, without endorsing them and without completing the delivery of the goods, he alone has power to dispose of these bills of lading, and the purchaser cannot lawfully assign them to a bank to secure advances, nor pledge or otherwise give title to them. The vendor not having made delivery of the goods, since the bills of lading were made out to his the bils of lading were made out to his order and were not endorsed, Arts. 1543, 1998, and 1999, C. C., do not apply; but, by virtue of the provisions of Art. 1965, the vendor, who had preserved his possession of and property in the goods, could avoid the sale, the purchaser having been guilty of failure to carry out his obligation to pay for them; and the bank which had made advances to the purchaser as aforesaid, was bound to account to the vendor for the bills of lading which had been received from the purchaser and the goods which they represented, and in default, for the value of such goods. Judgment in 25 Que, S. C. 430 varied. Ontario Bank v. Gosselin, 14 Que. K. B. 1. Breach of warranty — Counterclaim— Pleading. Marks v. Waterous Engine Works Co., 1 O. W. R. 148.

Condition — Waiver — Detinue — De-mand and refusal.]—The plaintiff sold to the defendant his one-half interest in a heifer named Irene, registered as a thoroughbred, the defendant already being owner of the other half. The defendant subsequently charged the plaintiff with having wrongfully secured the registration of the heifer as a thoroughbred when, as he alleged, she was not. The charge was laid before the Execu-tive Committee of the Dominion Short Horn Breeders' Association at Toronto. The par-Breeders Association at 1000no. The par-ties then entered into a written agre ment, which provided: (1) that the heifer abould be resold to the plaintiff at a certain price; (2) that on payment of the price the heifer was to become the property of the plaintiff; (2) that the defendant should withdraw the charge above referred to, and upon all proceating above referred to, and upon an pro-ceedings in respect to it being dropped by the association the "foregoing part" of the agreement was to be carried out. The defendant did not withdraw the charge, nor were the proceedings dropped. The plaintiff were the proceedings dropped. The plantitum twice tendered the purchase price of the heifer to the defendant, which was refused. He then, without making a formal demand for the heifer, sued the defendant in detinue: -Held, that, as the condition contained in the third clause of the agreement was in-serted for the plaintiff's benefit, he could waive it; that he had waived it, by proffering payment; that on refusal to accept the price the defendant became ipso facto the wrongful the gerendant became the page facto the wrongful detainer of the heifer; that a demand and refusal was therefore not essential to the plaintiff's right of action; and that the plaintiff was, therefore, entitled to succeed. Wright v. Shattuck, 4 Terr. L. R. 455, 5 Terr. L. R. 264.

Future delivery — Destruction before measurement.] — Whether the property in goods contracted to be sold has or has not passed to the purchaser, depends in each case upon the intention of the parties, and the property may pass even though the goods have not been measured and the price has not been ascertained. The property in the cordwood in question in this case was held to have passed to the purchaser before measurement, although owing to the destruction of the wood by fire the price could not be ascertained with precision. Place of inspection — Acceptance of part — Rejection of residue.]—Contract for sale of butter then manufactured and also for all butter to be manufactured during the season; quality to be 'fine;' delivery to be f.o.b. cars, Birtle. Purchaser carried on business in Winnipeg. No inspection took place at time of contract. Vendor shipped car load at purchaser's request to Winnipeg. Purchaser refused to accept because of defect in quality. Vendor resold and sued for difference between contract price and amount realised:—Held, that the agreement as to quality was a condition of the contract; that the property in the butter had not passed; that the purchaser's duty to accept depended upon the quality of the butter; that the fact that the purchaser had accepted other car loads of 'fine' butter did not bind him to accept one that was not, (Dyment v. Thompson, 9 O. R. 506, 12 A. R. 658, 13 S. C. R. 303, commented on;) that the onus was on the vendor to prove the quality of the butter; that such evidence could not be given in rebuttal. Levis v. Barré. 22 C. L. T. 336, 14 Man, L. R. 32.

Specific goods - Deliverable state -Property passing — Destruction before payment or delivery.]—Unless a contrary intention appears, where there is an unconditional contract for the sale of specific goods, in a deliverable state, the property in the goods passes to the buyer at the time the contract passes to the onlyer at the time the control is made; and it is immaterial whether the time of payment or the time of delivery or both be postponed. The plaintiffs agreed to sell to the defendants a quantity of tan bark which lay in piles in the woods at a distance of 14 miles from the railway siding at which it was to be delivered. The price agreed upon was to cover the plaintiff's trouble and expenses of carrying bark to the siding and placing it on the cars there. At the time the contract was made the bark was ready for immediate delivery so far as its condition was concerned; nothing remained to be done by the plaintiffs to entitle themselves to the price but the hauling and shipping. The bark was destroyed by fire where it lay in the woods, payment not having been made by the defendants for it: — Held, that the property had nevertheless passed to the deproperty had nevertheless passed to the de-fendants, and they were liable for the price. Judgment of Meredith, J., 2 O. W. R. 985, affirmed. Craig v. Beardmore, 24 C. L. T. 308, 7 O. L. R. 674, 3 O. W. R. 547.

13. RESCISSION OF CONTRACT.

Action — Time — Defect in goods — Vice redhibitoire.]—An action to set aside a contract for the sale of goods, begun 16 days after the sale, where the parties lived 20 miles from each other, and the purchaser has, two days after the sale, asked to have it rescinded, and has not ceased since to negotiate with the vendor to obtain rescission by consent, is begun within a reasonable time. 2. A certain lameness or halting which was shewn when the horse, the subject of the sale, was at rest for a time, and which did not appear when the trial was made by the purchaser at the time of the sale, is a defect which affords ground for setting aside the sale: Art. 1522, C. C. Balcer v. Provancher, 2.4 Que. S. C. 137.

Action to set aside sale — Default in payment — Pleading — Possession.] — An allegation by the plaintiff that the defendant is still in possession of chattels bought by him from the plaintiff, is sufficient to sustain a demand for the setting aside of the sale in default of payment of the price. Pelletier v. Maranda, 7 Que. P. R. 349.

Breach — Damages. Fisher v. Carter, 4 O. W. R. 319.

Contract - Refusal to perform - Remedies.]-A refusal by the promisor to perform the contract unless the promisee will do something which he is not bound to do, may be treated as an absolute refusal to perform it, and the promisee may at once rescind the contract and sue for damages. Freeth v. Contract and sue for damages. Precent v. Burr, L. R. 9 C. P. 208, Withers v. Reynolds, 2 B. & Ad. 882, and Mersey Steel and Iron Co. v. Naylor, 9 App. Cas. 434, followed. When the promisee has thus rescinded a contract of sale of ascertained goods, and afterwards put it out of his power to perform it by otherwise disposing of some of the goods, subsequent negotiations on his the goods, part to induce the promisor to take other similar goods on the same terms or offers to settle the dispute for the sake of avoiding litigation, will not necessarily be considered as doing away with the effect of the previous McCowan v. McKay, 22 C. L. T. rescission. 100, 13 Man. L. R. 590.

Default of payment — Stipulation for right — Time for exercise — Extension — Insolvency — Demand for assignment.]—A demand for an assignment and the filing of a claim, being only a demand for payment, do not deprive the creditor of his right to rescind a sale of goods for default of payment of the price. 2. In the case of a sale of movables, this right of rescission may, in case of insolvency, he exercised after 30 days, when delay has been allowed for payment of the price, and the right of rescission has been formally stipulated for. In re Girouard, 24 Que. S. C. 396.

Defect — Diligence.]—Where communication between buyer and seller may be had easily and promptly, and, in the case of the sale of a horse, the defect complained of is one which would have been quickly discovered if a proper trial of the animal had been made promptly, but the buyer did not make any complaint until sixteen days after the sale, and even then did not tender the animal back, but allowed eight days more to elapse before bringing suit, the action for resiliation of the sale was not instituted with reasonable diligence. Brown v. Wiseman, 20
Que. S. C. 304.

Defective quality — Rescission of contract — Misrepresentation—Action for price of hay in two barns.]—Held, that the expression in the contract in this case constituted a term of description as to the kind of hay. It went to the root of the matter. It was to be nice coarse hay, whereas it turned out to be musty and otherwise defective. The purchaser had in mind hay of a particular character as well as hay in the particular barn. Appeal dismissed. Mitchell v. Seaman, 6 E. L., R. 489.

Inadequacy of price — Duress.]—A sale of chattels made by a prisoner charged with a criminal offence, in order to raise funds for his defence and to secure his liberty, cannot be set aside on the ground of the inadequacy of the price paid. Lapierre V. St. Amour, 15 Que, K. B. 466.

Insolvency of vendee — Stoppage in transitu — Termination of transitus—Carriers — Warehousemen — Railway. Re Purity Manufacturing Co., 6 O. W. R. 418.

Latent defect — Action for reacission—Biligence—Notice to wendor—Defence to action for price.]—The purchaser of a chattel which has a hidden defect must bring an action to set aside the sale with proper diligence, and it is not sufficient for him to call upon the vendor to take back the article. Therefore, one who buys a horse, and, finding out that it has a hidden defect, immediately calls upon the vendor to take it back, will not be allowed, 26 days after the sale, to set up these facts in an action to recover the price begun in the interval. Guilmette v. Langevin, 31 Que. S. C. 331.

Return of goods — Action for repayment of price — Warranty — Breach — Pleading — Amendment — New trial. Boake v. Coupland, 9 O. W. R. 560.

Sale by sample — Reasonable diligence — Acceptance — Pledging — Tender.] — Where the buyer of goods (in this case, eggs) by sample, after he had knowledge of the alleged inferior quality of the goods, instead of tendering them back immediately, completed a sale of part of them at a reduced price, a week later sold another lot, and afterwards obtained permission from the holder of the warehouse :—Held, that he had not shewn "reasonable diligence" within the meaning of Art. 1530 of the Civil Code, and was not entitled to resiliate the contract. 2. There may be a receipt of goods without an acceptance, but the buyer, in order to be entitled to bring a redilibitory action, must not, by his acts, have adopted the contract. Pledging the goods is an adoption. 3. A tender back of the goods to the vendor is ineffective where, at the time it is made, the goods are really out of the contral.

of the buyer, and in the possession of a party who has made advances thereon. Loynachan v. Armour, 25 Que. S. C. 158.

Specific article — Vendor supplying another article—Purchaser accepting after inspection — Vendor's fraud—Return of money paid. Wallace v. Garrett, 3 O. W. R. 640.

Surrender of goods — Action — Diligence.]—A purchaser who seeks the resiliation of a sale under Art. 1526, C. C., must be in a position to surrender the goods sold, and must bring suit with reasonable diligence. An action, therefore, brought a full month after the plaintiff has become aware of the grounds of resiliation, comes too late, and will further be dismissed if during its pendency a part of the goods sold has been disposed of. Raymond v. Poitras, 29 Que. S. C. 393.

Terms — Re-sale by vendor—Repudiation —Evidence — Amendment. Brown v. Dulmage, 4 O. W. R. 91.

Vendor re-taking possession—Action for balance of price — Credit given for value of goods. Hopkins v. Danroth (Sask.), 7 W. L. R. 303.

14. Specific Articles.

Breach by wender—Vender procuring article elsewhere—Action for difference in price — Mandatary—Damages—Defence.]—The seller of an article who writes to the buyer notifying him of the impossibility of delivering the article, begging him to buy elsewhere, and promising him reimbursement for the difference in price, does not constitute him in any way his mandatary. On his part there is only the acknowledgment of the obligation to pay the damages caused by the non-performance of the contract. Therefore, where the vendee, having purchased the required article elsewhere, with care and at a reasonable price, claims from the vendor the excess of such price as damages, the vendor cannot set up that the article bought by the vendee is not exactly of the quality, dimensions, etc., of that which was the subject of the contract. Chalifoux v. Beauregard, 34 Que. S. C. 376.

quality and quantity — Ascertainment of quality and quantity — Transfer of owner-ship.] — The sale of the cargo in a schooner for a price paid, subject to the ascertainment of the quality and quantity of the goods, after delivery, and consequent filling of the price or refund of excess in it, as the case may be, is a perfect contract of sale of a specific thing, and passes the ownership of the same to the buyer. Bertrand v. Blowin, 32 Que, S. C. 396.

Defect - Acceptance - Evidence-Implied warranty as to quality — Damages — New trial.]—A cash register ordered by the defendant from the plaintiff was found on delivery not to contain a device which the defendant had regarded as essential in ordering it, and to be defective and unreliable in its operation. The defendant wrote a letter to the plaintiff's agent, the day after the machine was received, informing him that the article delivered was not the one ordered and was not in a workable condition, and in a letter written some days later he requested the agent to remove the register from his shop, and notified him that he would not accept another machine in performance of the contract. The machine was not removed as requested by the defendant, but remained on the counter of his shop from the time of delivery in December, 1904, until March, 1906, during which time it was in use as a cash box or money drawer, but not as a cash register: — Held, that the defendant could not use the machine as shewn by the evidence, and at the same time claim the right to reject it as not fulfilling the contract, but that, as the plaintiff's contract was broken, he could only recover the actual value of the article sold, and that, as there were no data for assessing the value of the machine, there must be a new trial for that purpose. Thompson v. Cameron, 2 E. L. R. 192, 41 N. S. R. 29.

Duty of vendor to furnish complete—Addition of accessories at expense of vendors.]—The sale of a steam engine to be delivered from an distance, complete and in workable condition, comprises the necessary accessories. When after the delivery, it appears that it is incomplete, the seller does not fulfil his obligation by despatching the accessories to the buyer; he is bound, in addition, to fit them to the machine, and he cannot require the buyer to do the preparatory work for that purpose. Property passing — Revendication — Tender — Payment into Court.]—A sale of all the hay in certain mows or stacks, at a fixed price per ton, is a sale of a specific thing and passes the property of the hay to the purchaser.—The buyer at such a sale, however, who revendicates the hay, is bound, as a condition precedent, to tender the price and, on refusal, to bring it into Court, Brown V. Louson, 30 Que. S. C. 178.

Railway ties — "Government standard ties" — Construction of contract].—Action for price of railway ties:—Hold, that ties should have been "government standard ties." Judgment for plaintiff. Counterclaim for damages allowed. Hallisey v. Musgrave, 7 E. L. R. 527.

Raw hides - Tacit custom of trade.]-When difficulties arise between vendor and purchaser as to the quality and number of commercial objects sold, and that the testimony of the parties is contradictory, an offer on the purchaser's part to have the goods examined in the presence of both parties and the vendor's refusal to agree to such proposal, is a fact which gives rise to a presumption of good faith in favour of the purchaser, who, everything being equal, may have his version accepted in preference to the vendor's. Between merchants, a trade sale, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, is considered to be tacitly subject to the custom of trade.—By a general custom of trade, in sales affecting raw hide skins, tanners or purchasers, not present at the place of delivery, are permitted to examine the hides at their tanneries for the amine the nides at their tanneries for the purpose of ascertaining their quality and number. Duclos v. Paradis, 16 R. de J. (Confirmed in appeals. February, 1910).

Sale by description — Reliance on vendor's representations — Proof of falsity — Implied warranty — Action for price—Evidence — Contradicting witness. Bannerman v. Barlow (N.W.T.), 6 W. L. R. 557.

Sale of monument — Sample — Evidence.] — In an action for the price of a tombstone, the defence was that it was not of the design ordered. It had been ordered from photographic samples, and an order form was filled in, which, when produced at the trial, contained the words "E. M. Lewis Reporter Design," which the defendant asserted were not in it when it was signed by him, but which were there two or three hours later when handed to one of the yendors by their foreman who had taken the order and filled in the form. The evidence at the trial was conflicting, and the Chancellor, trying the case without a jury, dismissed the action. His judgment was reversed by the Court of Appeal (1 O. W. R. 602):—Held, per Taschereau, C.J., that the evidence established that the words in dispute were in the order when it was signed, and the plaintiffs were entitled to recover:—Held, per Sedgewick and Davies, J.J., Mills, J., hastiqute, that, even if these words were not originally in the order, the circumstances disclosed in evidence shewed that the design supplied was substantially that ordered; and the judgment appealed from should stand. Lexis v. Dempster, 23 C. L. T. 179, 33 S. C.

Sale of several articles together, some only being supplied — New contract subject to terms of old one — Sale of Goods Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 152, s. 16 — Implied warranty — Interest.]—Action for the price on an engine, thresher, and other articles of machinery supplied by the plaintiffs to the defendants in pursuance of a written contract.-This contract called for the furnishing at the same time of a number of parts and attachments necessary to the effective use of the machinery in addition to those actually supplied. The statement of claim was founded upon the original contract, but the evidence shewed that the defendants had made a new bargain with the plaintiffs, under which they accepted the machinery actually delivered, on the plaintiffs promising to pay the freight and allow for the articles not delivered. — The trial Judge found that the machinery accepted was reasonably fit for the purposes for which it was sold, although this had been disputed by the defendants:—Held, that the plaintiffs should be allowed to amend the statement of claim by setting up the new contract and compliance therewith, and should then have judgment for the contract price, less the freight and the cost of the articles not delivered.-The defendants contended that the written agreement was superseded by the new arrangement, and that the plaintiffs could only rely upon an implied agreement to pay what the goods received were worth, subject to the implied condition, under s.-s. (a) of s. 16 of the Sale of Goods Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 152, that they were reasonably fit for the purposes for which they were sold.—The original agreement, however, contained a proviso that "in the event of changes being made in machinery or terms mentioned in this contract . . . or any changes whatever, such changes are in no way to supersede or invalidate this contract. but it is to remain valid, binding, and in full force in all its clauses except in so far as relates to the specific changes:"—Held, that relates to the specific changes: "—Held., that full effect must be given to this proviso, and that all the provisions of the original contract, except those modified by the new bargain, remained in full force.—The original agreement made provision for the giving of promissory notes by the defendants for instalments extending over several years, and that two of such notes were to bear interest at 7 per cent. per annum until due, also that if such notes were not given the whole pur-chase price should be due and payable forthwith, but there was no provision for interest in that event.—Held, that, as the notes had not been given, the plaintiffs were only entitled to interest at the statutory rate of 5 per cent, per annum. Ross v. Moon, 5 W. L. R. 552, 17 Man. L. R. 21.

Threshing ontfit — Incapacity of engine and boiler forming part of outfit — Contract — Warranty — Implied warranty — Heduction in purchase money—Reference—Payment into Court — Promissory notes—Damages. Bell v. Goodison Thresher Co., 10 O. W R. 445.

15. STATUTE OF FRAUDS.

Actual delivery — Samples—Conduct— Carriers — Interpleader. Re Cleghorn and Asselin, 2 O. W. R. 28.

Actual receipt.]—Action for the price of forty head of horses "sold and delivered to the defendant at $23 a head." There was no agreement in writing nor part payment to bind the bargain. By s. 6 (3) of the Sales of Goods Ordinance, in order to establish a binding contract, the plaintiff had to prove an acceptance and an actual receipt by the defendant of at least a part of the goods. The plaintiff said he was to keep the horses until paid for, but he had no direct agreement not to give them till paid for. The horses which the defendant orally agreed to buy were kept on the plaintiff's head;—Held, that, even if there was an acceptance, there was no actual receipt by the defendant; and the action failed. Livingstone v. Colpitts, 21 C. L. T. 102.

Correspondence — Completed contract—Terms—Payment and inspection — Oral assent—Breach of contract—Non-delivery of goods—Damages. Upton v. Eligh, 3 O. W. R. 219.

Delivery — Acceptance — Shipment — Inspection.]—The defendants agreed to buy from the plaintiff the thousand bushels of No. 2 red wheat, at $1.12 per bushel, to be delivered f.o.b. a vessel to be provided by the defendants, who were to pay freight and insurance, and delivery was to be made to them on payment of a sight draft for the price. The captain of the vessel gave the plaintiff a bill of lading, describing him as the consignor, and in it, under the heading "consignees," was written "order of Bank of Montreal, advise Melady & McNairn (defendants)." A draft for the price, drawn by the plaintiff upon the defendants, was attached to the bill of lading and discounted, but the defendants refused to accept this draft:—Held, that there was, upon these facts, no final appropriation of the wheat or delivery thereof to the defendants, and that the property therein would not pass to them until acceptance of the draft, or payment or tender of the price.—Held, also, that neither the shipment in the vessel provided by the defendants, nor the taking by defendants of samples of the cargo for inspection, constituted an acceptance within the statue. Pay: Waiver Incomplete contract — Statute of Frauds, s. 17—Deferred payments—No time fixed—Possession.]—A contract in writing for the sale of goods is not complete, under s. 17 of the Statute of Frauds, where, although the price is stated in it, the contract shews upon its face that the time for payment is left to be settled by further negotiations, as to which there has been no agreement; and the fact that possession of the goods is taken under the terms of the agreement does not affect the rights of the parties. House v. Brown, 10 O. W. R. 396, 14 O. L. R. 500.

Letters — Oral evidence to identify subject matter of contract. Frank v. Gates, 3 O. W. R. 76.

Memorandum — Signature — Conflicting evidence. Nasmith Co. v. Alexander Brown Milling and Elevator Co., 4 O. W. R, 451.

Memorandum in writing - Omission of term — Oral evidence connecting docu-ments.]—The plaintiff's agent took an oral order for goods from the defendant, one of the terms of payment being that he should, in a certain event, have six months' credit.
The plaintiff's agent signed a memorandum containing all but this term of the contract. The defendant subsequently wrote cancelling the order. This led to further correspondence. In none of the letters was any reference made to the term allowing six months' ence made to the term anowing six months credit. The Sale of Goods Ordinance, No. 10, 1896, s. 4 (now C. O. 1898 c. 39, c. 6), (substantially a re-enactment of s. 17 of the Statute of Frauds), was pleaded:— Held, that it was open to the defendant to prove, as he had, that the term as to six credit was part of the contract. months' credit was part of the contract, and, as it did not appear in any of the documents submitted to constitute the note or memorandum in writing, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. 2. That as the statement of claim alleged the term as to six months' credit to be part of the contract sued on, it was unnecessary for the defendant to have proved it, and he might have taken the objection immediately mon the taken the objection immediately upon the written evidence of the contract being put in. 3. That a letter cancelling the contract for the purchase of goods cannot be taken to constitute an acceptance of the goods. Semble, that parol evidence is admissible to connect several writings so as to constitute them together a note or memorandum under the Ordinance, Oliver v. Hunting, 44 Ch. D. 205, referred to. That a memorandum of sale required to be in writing may be complete and binding, though silent as to price and to time and mode of payment, if no agreement in fact was made on these points, the omission being equivalent to a stipulation for a reasonable price and immediate payment in the usual mode. Valpy v. Gibson, 4 C. B. 837, referred to. Calder v. Hallett, 5 Terr. L. R. 1.

Motor boat — Statute of Frauds — Acceptance and receipt — Change of possession.]—Appeal from 7 E. L. R. 505, dismissed. Wingfield v. Stewart, 7 E. L. R. 511.

Payment on account — Garnishment— Waiver.]—The primary creditor sued the primary debtor to recover damages for refusal to accept and pay for a horse bought by the primary debtor from the primary creditor for Sô. At the time of the sale the primary debtor had deposited $5 in the hands of the garnishee, which was to have been paid over to the primary creditor when the horse was delivered. There was no delivery, no acceptance, no memorandum in writing, and nothing given by way of earnest:—Held, that there had been no compliance with s. 17 of the Statute of Frauds; the payment to the garnishee was not sufficient to satisfy the statute, the primary creditor, by his action in garnishing this amount, having elected to treat it not rs a payment under the contract (in which case it would be the primary creditor's money and not garnishable), but as the primary debtor's money. Weese v, Peak, 21 °C. L. T. 43.

Writing - Possession - Conversion -Title—Pleading.] — N. purchased from A. certain goods under hiring agreements, by the terms of which the property in the goods purchased was to remain in A. until payment in full of the price agreed upon. N. died intestate without having made payment as agreed, and the goods were verbally sold by his administrator to the plaintiff. There was no note or memorandum in writing made at the time, and no change of possession. At the time of the sale the goods were in the custody of C., with whom they had been left by N. The defendant, as agent of A., made a demand upon C. for the possession of the goods under the hiring agreements, and they were delivered to him:—
Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain an action for conversion, there having been no note or memorandum in writing or change of possession, or other compliance with the Statute of Frauds.-2. That, on the issue whether the goods were the goods of plaintiff or of A., whose agent defendant was, the defendant could avail himself of the defence that no title passed to the plaintiff. on account of non-compliance with the provisions of the Statute of Frauds, without pleading the statute.—Held, also, that if it became necessary for the plaintiff to alter in any way his statement of claim, or new assign, he could only do so by amending his statement of claim and not by way of replication.—Held, also, that the cause having been tried with relation to the effect of the Statute of Frauds, as if the pleadings were sufficient, the Court, on appeal, could make any amendment that was necessary .- Held, also, that even if the omission on the part of the defendant to plead the statute were of the decendant to plead the statute were material, the plaintiff should not be allowed to take advantage of it, the whole difficulty, if any, having arisen from irregular and improper pleading commenced by him. Kent v. Ellis, 32 N. S. R. 549.

action for damages and for an injunction to restrain the breach of two contracts entered into between themselves and the defendants, in one of which the defendants covenanted not to sell wholesale any of the plaintiffs' preparations below the price therein mentioned, and in the other not to sell the same to any retailer except at the prices therein mentioned, and then only when such retailer had signed an agreement with the plaintiffs. The agreement was in the form adopted by the committees representing a large part of the wholesale and retail trade, and the evidence shewed that the commodities in question could not be purchased by the defendants or any one else unless and until they had signed the agreements in question:—Held, that the agreements were a breach of ss. 516 and 520 of the Criminal Code, inasmuch as they unduly prevented, and in fact entirely destroyed, competition in the articles referred to, and affected the entire trade in such articles. Wampole & Co. v. Karn Co., 11 O. L. R. 619, 7 O. W. R. 810.

Assignment—Conditions — Commission on goods rejected.]—The assignee of a contract for the supply of goods who undertakes to carry it out and to pay a commission to the assignor, is liable for commission on goods rejected as not being of the quality required by the contract. Ashdoven Hardware Co, v. Dillon, 30 Que. S. C. 440.

Cash or credit — Evidence — Admissibility.] — A manufacturer who engages by agreement under seal to furnish his products to an agent for sale, in consideration of certain conditions, but without mention of the mode of payment, is not obliged to fill orders otherwise than for cash; and evidence of witnesses is admissible to explain how a first order providing for payment of the price on terms of credit came to be executed, without making it an acknowledgment applicable to the subsequent orders. Columbia Phonograph Co. V. Superior, 16 Que. K. B. 264.

Contract — Inspection of lumber:—Acontract for the sale of lumber was made wholly by correspondence, and the letter which completed the bargain contained the following provision: "The inspection of this lumber to be made after the same is landed here" (at Windsor), "by a competent inspector to be agreed upon between buyer and seller, and his inspection to be final:"—Held, that it was not essential for the parties to agree upon an inspector before the inspection was begun; and a person chosen by the buyer having inspected the lumber, and before his work was completed the seller having agreed to accept him as inspector, the contract was satisfied and the inspection final and binding on both parties. Matheson v. Thomson, 20 C. L. T. 293, 30 S. C. R. 357.

Contract — Written order — Parol variation—Evidence.] — Action by a Montreal firm for price of engine ordered by the defendants—"for which we agree to pay you $350 delivered in Halifax; shipment to be made as soon as possible." The defendants set up that they gave the order to an agent of the defendants, believing that they were dealing with a Toronto company, who had in their possession a crusher of the defendant of the defend ants worth $780, for which they were to get credit on machinery to be ordered. As a matter of fact the Montreal firm and the Toronto company were distinct:—Edd, by McDonald, C.J., and Ritchie, J., upon the evidence, that the acceptance of the crusher in payment for the engine ordered was a term of the contract between the parties, and evidence of the agreement with the agent was properly received. But per Weatherbe and Meagher, J.J., that the order delivered by the defendants to the agent being on its face a complete agreement, parol evidence was indmissible to vary its terms either as to the mode of payment or as to the persons with whom it was made. Wilson V. Window Foundry (O., 33 N. S. R. 21.

Contract — Written order — Parol variation — Evidence.]—Judgment in 33 N. S. R. 21, affirming by a division of opinion the judgment of the defendants, affirmed on appeal, Wilson v. Windsor Foundry Co., 31 S. C. R. 381.

Demand for security — Breach of contract—Acquiescence.]—1. Where goods are sold without condition as to security, a demand by the vendor, before shipment, for security (naming a surety selected by himself) that there will be no trouble about the sight draft attached to the bill of lading, is a breach of contract, and gives rise to a right of action by the purchaser for damages caused by the refusal to deliver.—2. The fact that the purchaser offered sureties amply sufficient, but who were not accepted by the vendor, cannot be interpreted as an acquiescence in the condition sought to be imposed by the vendor. Durocher v. McLaren, 16 Que, S. C. 257.

Goods to be manufactured—Breach—Construction of contract—Implied condition — Expectancy — Consideration — Property passing—Destruction by fire—Appropriation of goods to contract. Delaplante v. Tennant, 4 O. W. R. 76, 5 O. W. R. S1, 6 O. W. R. 217.

Lowest wholesale price—Special discount.]—By contract in writing whereby the defendants agreed, for 3 years from the date thereof, to purchase for their business surgical instruments manufactured by the plaintiffs only, the latter contracted to supply their products at "lowest wholesale prices," and for all goods furnished from New York to allow a special discount of 5 per cent. from the prices marked in a catalogue handed over with the contract—Held, that under this agreement the plaintiffs could allow to purchasers of their goods in large quantities a greater discount from the wholesale prices than 5 per cent. without being obliged to give the same reduction to the defendants. Judgment of the Court of Appeal, 4 O. W. R. 187, affirmed. Chandler-Massey v. Kny-Scheerer Co., 36 S. C. R. 130, 25 C. L. T. 106.

Payment — Condition — Change — Refusal to deliver.]—Where goods were sold to be delivered at a railway station, and the condition of payment was acceptance by the purchaser of sight draft accompanied by bill of lading, the purchaser was not justified in asking to be allowed to retain $50, and, if all was correct, to pay the balance later. Such a demand was a material change of the conditions of the contract, and the seller was entitled to refuse delivery. Clement v. Durocher, 16 Que, S. C. 479.

Sale of specified cargo—Sale "on arrival"—Duty to ship—Quantity mentioned.] —The sale of a cargo of coal, not then loaded, evidenced by two writings, the first being an agreement to accept "a cargo . . . consisting of from 1.000 to 1.100 tons to arrive at this port (Levis) later from Swansea during this fall from Mr. Francis Gunn of Quebec," and the second providing that "the cargo of Welsh anthracite which is now declared to arrive per S.S. 'Avon' in September, for Mesars, P. Robitaille & Fils of Levis," is not a sale of a cargo "on arrival," and so conditional upon arrival, but made it the duty of the vendor to ship the quantity mentioned by the ship designated, and the contract was not satisfied by the delivery of 465 tons carried by the vessel named. Robitaille v. Gunn, 13 Que. K. B. 552.

Sale on credit—Representation by purchaser—To whom credit given—Contradictory evidence—Liquor License Ordinance—Licensee—Restaurant business — Estoppel. North American Transportation and Trading Co. v. Olsen (Y.T.), 1 W. L. R, 518.

Time of shipment-Fulfilment of provision—Time of loading on cars — Receipt of shipping bill—Place of weighing—Costs.]— A contract for the sale of a car load of wheat to be shipped in the first half of Octo-ber is fulfilled if the grain is loaded on a car on or before the 15th of that month, although the bill of lading is not signed until the 17th and is not received by the purchaser until the 19th. Shipment means simply putting on board. Boices v. Shand, 2 App. Cas. 455, followed.—The car of wheat in question was shipped from a station of the C. N. R., and was, in the regular course of the traffic over that railway, sent to Port Arthur, and the wheat was weighed there and not at Fort William, where wheat sent over the C. P. R is generally weighed; and it appeared that the insertion in contract of words "Fort William weight," was inadvertently made by defendants' manager who had prepared it, and that it really made no difference to defendants whether wheat was weighed at one place rather than the other: - Held, that plaintiff was entitled to recover, although weighing had not been at Fort William.— When defendants' manager received shipping when detendants manager received simpling bill, he objected to delay, as price of wheat had declined, but offered to pay him $5 of amount demanded by plaintiff:—Held, that plaintiff should not have incurred risk of litigation for so small a sum, and should be deprived of costs on that account. Perry v. Manitoba Milling Co. (1906), 15 M. L. R. 523, 1 W. L. R. 541.

Unascertained goods—Appropriation— Passing — Acceptance — Part payment. Southampton Lumber Co. v. Austin, 1 O. W. R. 578, 2 O. W. R. 638.

Unascertained goods — Assignment of vendor for benefit of creditors—Delivery — Right to specific goods — Bills of Sale Act —Agreement that purchaser should bear loss by fire.]—B. agreed to deliver to defendant at Carman 195 cords of wood to be taken out of two piles of wood containing 200 cords lying at another railway station, and received the consideration therefor. Before anything was done towards delivery of the wood or setting apart the 195 cords from the rest of the wood, B. assigned to the plaintiff for the benefit of his creditors:—Held, that the defendant had acquired no title to the wood as against the plaintiff, as s. 3 of the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act, R. S. M. 1902, c. 11, had not been complied with.—Held, also, that the defendant's agreement to bear the loss if the wood should be burned, was not sufficient to vest the title in him in the face of the other facts. Haverson v. Smith, 4 W. L. R. 249, 16 Man. L. R. 204.

17. TITLE TO GOODS.

Chattel mortgage — Bill of sale — Description—Evidence—Trover. Fuller v. Hunker Mercantile Co. (Y.T.), 7 W. L. R. 80.

Damages.]—The purchaser of a chattel is entitled to recover from the vendor upon failure of title, the value of the chattel, and not merely the amount paid by him to the vendor. Confederation Life Association v. Labatt, 20 C. L. T. 299, 27 A. R. 321.

Failure of title to goods — Implied warranty of title — Executor — Will — Provision for maintenance of testator's children in hotel — Sale of furniture in hotel — Right of child to object — Powers of executor — Conduct — Estoppel — Contract — Lease — Offer to purchase. Clark v. Mott, 11 O. W. R. 580.

Ownership — Conversion — Seizure — Delivery — Acceptance, Union Bank of Canada v. Backwood (Man.), 2 W. L. R. 574.

Revendication by true owner—Stolen property—Purchase from dealer—Art. 1829, C. C.—Recovery of price paid.]—The "commerciant trafiquant en semblables matières" of Art. 1489, C. C. means one who publicly and habitually carries on his business in the locality where he is known. Therefore, one who buys a horse from a distributor of newspapers, who occasionally buys, sells, and exchanges horses, cannot exact repayment of the price which he has paid from the owner from whom the horse has been stolen, and who revendicates it, Parent v. Belanger, 31 Que. S. C. 383.

Right of unpaid vendor — Conservatory attachment — Insolvency — Time for scieure.]—When a conservatory attachment is issued and the property of a person who is not shewn to be a trader is seized by the unpaid vendor thereof, the attachment will not be quashed upon petition on the ground that the seizure was not made within thirty days of the delivery of the goods. Sweeschnikoff v. Breitman, 6 Que. P. R. 30.

Rights of the real owner are in no way affected by the exception to the rule that the sale of a thing not the property of the seller is null, as contained in Art. 1488 C. C. respecting commercial matters. The exception only applies to the parties to the contract. Tremblay v. Mercier & Lachaine (1909), 38 Que. S. C. 57.

Sale of stolen chattel — Art. 1489. C. C.—"Dealer trading in similar articles."]— The words "a dealer trading in similar articles" in Art. 1489. C. C., mean a trader whose ostensible business is to deal in similar articles. Hence a pedlar of fruits and vegetables, although he may occasionally buy and sell horses, is not a dealer trading in norses within the meaning of the article. Vezina v. Brosseau, 30 Que. S. C. 493.

Trover — Bills of Sale Act — Estoppel — Ownership — Evid.nce. Mitchell v. Weese, 4 O. W. R. 346.

Undertaking by seller to deliver successively to two persons Conditions of preference—Actual possession—Constructive possession—Bill of lading—Good jatih—Knowledge of previous sale.]—Constructive possession of merchandise by delivery of a bill of lading therefor does not amount to the "actual" possession which is the ground of preference under Art. 1027, C. C.—2. A party who is aware of a previous sale to another, of merchandise in the hands of a carrier, and obtains the bill of lading for the same, does not become a possessor in good faith, so as to be entitled to the above preference. Sapery v. Simon, 34 Que. S. C. 329, 5 E. L. R. 143.

18. WARRANTY.

Absence of — Waiver of inspection — Damages for inferior quality.—Cheese was sold without special warranty as to quality, but subject to inspection at the factory before shipment. The purchaser's agent did not avail himself of the opportunity to make an inspection at the factory. The purchaser complained after delivery that the quality of the cheese was inferior, and that some damage had been done by nails in packing it, and he tendered the price, less half a cent per pound, deduction for damage. The Court below allowed a deduction for the damage by packing, but maintained the action for the balance. The defendant inscribed in review:—Held, that there being no special warranty as to quality, and the buyer, by his agent, having waived inspection at factory by asking that the cheese be forwarded before it had been inspected, could not afterwards claim damages for inferior quality, which, if it existed, would have been disclosed by the inspection. Lebrecque v. Duckett, 22 Que. S. C. 135.

Absence of express warranty — Implied warranty—Quality of hay — Opportunity for inspection—Acceptance—Estoppel — Division Court judgment — Evidence as to opinion of quality. Bouck v. Clark, 10 O. W. R. 653.

Action for contract price — Defence and set-off — Counterclaim for damages — Substitution of inferior material — Condition precedent - Resale - Measure of damages — Delay.]—In an action for the con-tract price of goods sold and delivered, in which it was shewn that the goods delivered were not manufactured as agreed upon, the vendors having substituted castings for forgrings:—Held, that the defendants were entitled to have their damages applied in reduction of the plaintiffs' claim.—Held, also, that as soon as the vendee discovers the defect he may bring an action on the warranty and recover the value of the article he should have received, and that the right of action is complete without a resale, and that the measure of damages is the same whether the goods are in his warehouse or in the hands of persons to whom he may afterwards have pledged or sold them.—Held, also, that where credit is given or where the goods have been paid for, the vendee may sue at once, or in case of credit, if the vendee so elects, he may await an action for the price and set off or counterclaim for his damages by reason of the defective material or other breach of warranty.—Held, also, that where there had been delay in the delivery of the samples, as well as the bulk of the goods ordered for a particular season, which arrived late for the season, and in consequence were sold at a loss, the measure of the damages was the difference between the value of the goods at the time at which they were to have been delivered according to the contract and their value for cording to the contract and their value for the purpose of resale. Wilson v. Lancachine and Yorksnire Rv. Co., 9 C. B. N. S. 632, and Schultz v. Great Eastern Rv. Co., 19 Q. B. D. 30, followed. Centaur Cycle Co. v. Hill, 22 C. L. T. 253, 24 C. L. T. 121, 209, 1 O. Action for price — Defence — Reliance on statements and warranties—Correspondence—Defects in goods supplied.]—Plaintiffs sued for price of wooden piping sold to defendants for their waterworks system. The purchase was made from catalogues and correspondence. Plping was laid under supervision of plaintiffs expert. The defect was in the coupling:—Held, total failure of consideration. Action dismissed with reference to ascertain damages. By consent, engineer appointed to inspect and report. Pacific Coast Pipe Co. v. City of Fort William, Pacific Coast Pipe Co. v. Newman, 13 O. W. R. 427.

Apparent defects — Opportunity for examination — Inferiority of quality.]—A vendor is not held liable for apparent defects in the article sold of which the purchaser could have known the existence. Therefore, a man who buys an article of merchandise through the medium of an agent who sees it and examines it before signing the contract of sale, will not be allowed, after delivery, to set up that the quality is inferior to that agreed upon. hand engine, sold to the defendant. The engine had been warranted to be in firstclass repair and in good running order. class repair and in good running order. The trial Judge found as a fact that it was not in first-class repair when delivered to the defendant, but that he nevertheless accepted it. The chief question to be decided, there-fore, was the amount of damage to be al-lowed for the breach of warranty. The defendant discovered nearly all of the defects complained of before he started using the machine, and the others almost at once after starting; but, instead of proceeding at once to have the missing parts supplied, he continued to operate the machine in its defective condition without complaining to the plaintiff of anything but the friction :- Held, following Crompton and Knowles Loon Works v. Hoffman, 5 O. L. R. 554, 2 O. W R. 273, that there could be no recovery for damage which might have been prevented by reasonable efforts on the defendant's part. The defendant was bound, as soon as he discovered the defects complained of, to take the necessary steps to remedy them, and could not recover anything for damages be yond what he would have sustained had he pursued that course. The measure of the defendant's damage is the amount that it would have cost to put the engine in the condition it was warranted to be in, plus his loss of profits or from delays during the time that would necessarily elapse before these repairs could be made had he acted promptly after discovering them. On the defendant's after discovering them. On the defendant's default in payment the plaintiff had repossessed and resold the outfit, and sought to deduct from the proceeds of the sale the sum of $250, which he said he had had to pay by way of commission on the resale. There was no evidence that the sale had been made through an agent, or, if it was, what the proper commission should be.—Held, that the plaintiff had not sufficiently established his right to charge such commission against the defendant, and that it should not be allowed to him. Mawhinney v. Porteous, 6 W. L. R. 633, 17 Man. L. R. 184.

Breach — Contract for delivery of grain according to sample—Grain in bad condition when received by purchaser—Grain injured in course of carriage while at risk of vendor.]—Defendant sold plaintiff, by sample, a car load of wheat to be shipped from R. to Q. When the car was opened a portion of the wheat was found not equal to sample and was refused by plaintiff:—Held, that defendants were liable for wheat until bill of lading endorsed to plaintiff, and that injury to wheat had risen prior to delivery of bill of lading. The plaintiff had right to inspect at Q. The damaged wheat had been sold with permission of defendants agent. Judgment for plaintiff. Moore Milling Co. v. Laird, 1 Sask. L. R. 471, 9 W. L. C.C.L.-124, Breach — Damages — Rescission of contract.]—At the time of the sale to the plaintiff of a gasoline engine, and as a a gasoline engine, and as a part thereof, the defendants' agent guarpart thereof, the defendance agent some anteed that it was a 20 h.p. engine, and would do the work of a 20 h.p. engine, and that he would repair it and make it like a new engine. The plaintiff, relying on this guaranty, gave promissory notes for $1,500, the purchase-price, and gave security for the payment thereof. He afterwards paid the purchase-price, and gave security for the payment thereof. He afterwards paid $159. The plaintiff kept the machine and used it for a year to operate a separator capable of operation by an 8 h.p. engine, and also used it for chopping; but in 1909 and anso used it for cooping; but in 1969 purchased a new separator, the operation of which required a 20 h.p. engine. The en-gine sold to the plaintiff, though built for a 20 h.p. engine, was not in reality so, and the evidence shewed that it would not develop more than 13 h.p. :-Held, that the plaintiff had no right to rescind the contract, return the engine and recover back his notes, securities, and moneys paid; but he was en-titled to damages for breach of the warranty; and the measure of damages was the difference between the value of the goods at the time of delivery to the buyer and the value they would have had if they had answered to the warranty, together with any other loss directly and naturally resulting in the ordinary course of events from the breach: Sales of Goods Ordinance, sec. 51, sub-secs. 2 and 3. Upon this footing the damages were assessed at $800, plus $16.95 for disbursements in endeavouring to make the engine answer the warranty; and the defendants were allowed the option of a rescission if they chose to consent. Decker v. Sylvester Mfg. Co. (1910), 14 W. L. R. 500, 3 Sask. L. R. 173.

Breach — Damages. Robinson v. Boyd (N.W.T.), 2 W. L. R. 425.

Breach — Implied condition as to reasonably good usage.]—In an action to recover the amount of a promisory note given by the defendant for the price of a bicycle purchased by him from the plaintiff's agent, the defendant pleaded an undertaking on the part of the agent that the bicycle delivered would carry the defendant or bear his weight but that the bicycle delivered would not carry defendant or bear his weight, and broke down. The evidence shewed that the agent by whom the bicycle was sold was to have come the following morning to instruct the defendant in the use of it, but that the defendant who was a heavy and clumsy man, and who had never ridden a bicycle before, undertook to try it in the absence of the agent. The County Court Judge found that a warranty that the bicycle would bear the defendant's weight implied the condition of reasonably good usage, and that, under the defendant's weight implied the condition of reasonably good usage, and that, under the circumstances in proof, the defendant assumed the risk of injuring the bicycle, and even if there was a warranty as allered, there was not sufficient proof of breach:— Held, that the Judge was right, Johnson v. Moore, 34 N. S. R. 85.

Breach — Measure of damages — Sale of Goods Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 152, s. 52 (4).]—Action for damages for breach of a warranty on the sale of a second-hand engine, that the engine was in a good state of repair and in good working order:—Held, that, under s.-s. (d) of s. 52 of the Sale of Goods Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 152, the proper measure of damages to be allowed is the amount which at the time of the sale it would have been necessary to expend in order to remove defects which constituted the breach of the warranty, but not including cost of repairs necessitated by wear and tear or accidents after the plaintiff began to use the engine. Cook v. Thomas, 6 Man. L. R. 286, followed. Sumner v. Dobbin, 3 W. L. R. 382, 16 Man. L. R. 491.

Breach — Remedy — Contribution. Ferguson v. Arkell, 1 O. W. R. 190.

Breach — Rescission of contract—Fraudulent representations—Finding of jury—Appeal — Value of goods.]—Where a chattel sold with a warranty is delivered as agreed upon and is not up to the warranty, that fact, in the absence of fraud, affords mo ground for rescinding the contract, but the remedy is for a breach of warranty. A Court of Appeal will not disturb the finding of a jury on a question of fraudulent representations, where there is any evidence upon which the verdict may reasonably be supported. Evidence of the value of the chattel (a horse) at the time of the trial, a year after the sale, was properly rejected when offered to prove the value at the time of the sale. Fin N. Broton, 35 N. B. R. 335.

Ganned salmon — Non-conform of contract—Express varranty—Implied warranty—85 per cent. fit for human food—Inspection and acceptance—Condition of food not exhibited on inspection—third parties—Sale by, to defendant—Iteleif over by defendant against third parties—Damages allowed—Reference to Master in Ordinary —F. D. and costs reserved.—Pilantiffs purchased 573 cases of salmon from defendant. These were "do-overs" and sold as such by defendant, who had purchased them from the Canadian Canning Co., Ltd., under an agreement whereby they agreed to protect him from all legitimate claims for blown, swell, dry and leaks. The goods were received by plaintiffs and inspected, but the inspection did not exhibit the true condition of the spection, paid for, and sent out to customers, who immediately began to return them as they were unfit for human food. The plaintiffs brought action to recover $1,750 damages for breach of contract. Defendants claimed relief over against the original vendors on their agreement with him:—Riddell, J., held, that plaintiffs were entitled to (1) damages on the implied warranty, that 85 per cent. of the goods were fit for human food, and (3) to costs up to and including judgment. Keference to Masterio Ordinary to fix damages. That defendant was entitled to relief over against original vendors, under head (1), and to one-half the costs paid by defendant to plaintiffs, one-half the costs of third party proceedings and one-half the costs paid by defendant to his solicitor—all these up to and including judgment. Third parties may attend and take part in the reference. Further directions and costs of reference reserved. Grocers' Wholesale Co. v. Bostok (1910), 17 O. W. R. 129, 2 O. W. N. 144, 22 C. L. T. 130.

Condition of machinery - Damages-Wages—Anticipated profits—Counterclaim— Costs.]—On the 22nd October, 1905, the defendant purchased from the plaintiffs a portable saw mill, intended to be used for the purpose of manufacturing laths. The plain-tiffs were aware of the purpose for which the mill was to be used, and guaranteed the engine to be in running order. It was found by the defendant that the engine was not working properly, and the plaintiffs underworrang property, and the planticus under-tools to put it in repair, but failed to do so until 12th January, 1906. In an action for the contract price of the mill, the defendant counterclaimed damages for breach of con-tract, and was awarded by the trial Judge a sum in excess of the purchase price, in-cluding not only damages for the loss of the use of the mill, but an amount paid for wages and board of the men:—Held, that the amount awarded for damages for loss of the use of the mill was rightly allowed, but that the Judge exceeded the proper measure of damages when he added wages and board of men,-Held, also, that the case was not one in which damages could properly be allowed for loss of anticipated gain, the business being a new one, and the profits being too uncertain.—Held, also, the plaintiffs having notified the defendant of their willingnaving notined the defendant of their willing-ness to allow damages for loss of use of the mill, when they delivered their reply to the counterclaim, and the amount being suffi-cient, that there should be no costs of the counterclaim. Thompson v. Corbin, 2 E. L. R. S4, 3 E. L. R. 111, 41 N. S. R. 386.

Conditional contract - Performance-Jury — Waiver — Pleading — Amendment after trial — New trial—Costs.] — During negotiations for the sale of two standard stokers for use in the defendant's brewery, warranted to give certain results in the saving of fuel, etc., a contract was submitted to the defendants in which a particular test called the evaporation test was specified to be applied to determine whether the stokers would produce the guaranteed results. defendant refused to be bound by the specified test, and the proviso was struck out and the contract signed, making a proviso for the test as follows: "To determine that these guarantees are lived up to and the same quality of coal is used and same load is being carried, tests are to be made under ordinary running conditions on hand and stoker fired The stokers were installed, and the defendant refused to pay for them, alleging that they did not fulfil the guarantee. The plaintiffs brought this action, declaring on the common counts for goods sold and allow the plaintiffs to make the evaporation test, asserting that that test was excluded from the contract. In answer to questions, the jury found that the defendant's tests were not fair and proper under the contract, and that the tests that the plaintiffs apply were better tests than the defendant's, and that no proper tests were ever made. In answer to other questions they said that they were unable to answer whether the test spoken of in the contract was to be by evaporation, as contended by the plaintiffs, or by weighas contended by the plantulis, or by weigning the coal, as contended by the defendant.

On these answers a verdict was entered for the defendant: — Held, per Tuck, C.J., Landry and Barker, J.J., that the verdict was improperly entered: that, while all the findings were in favour of the plaintiffs, no verdict could be entered for them on the pleadings, as there was no allegation of waiver, or proof that the conditions precedent to payment had been performed; and there must be a new trial.-Per Hanington, J., that under the contract as executed it was open to the parties to apply executed it was open to the parties to apply any efficient test, and the proper question for the jury was, "Was the test which the plain-tiffs intended to apply an efficient test to determine the results guaranteed?" and, as this question was not left, the case was not fully tried, and it should be sent down for another trial .- Per McLeod, J., that the conditions precedent were not shewn to have been per-formed, and, no waiver of performance having been alleged, the plaintiffs could not recover on the pleadings, and the verdict should stand. If the plaintiffs were allowed to amend and add a count for waiver, a new trial should only be granted on payment of costs.-An application to amend ought to be acceded to as a matter of course, even after the trial, when the question really in dispute has been fully tried out. Contract — Waiver — Sale of Goods Act—Implied condition of sale.]—When a contract for the sale of an engine contains a printed form of warrant as to the fitness of the engine, with the provision that the agent of the vendors may not "add to, abridge, or change" that warranty in any manner, the purchaser is not precluded from insisting on the fulfilment of any other warranty specially given in writing by the agent.—2. If the vendors accept and fill an order for an engine with a provision specially written by their agent in it that the engine is to be satisfactory to the purchasers, they thereby satisfactory to the purchasers, they thereby waive any limitations of the authority of their agent as to giving warranties that may be embodied in the printed part of the order.—3. As the plaintiffs' agent knew that the engine was required by the defendants to drive a particular separator, and that the defendants relied on his skill and judgment as to its fitness for that purpose, and as the engine was an article of a description which it was in the course of the plaintiffs' business to supply, there was, apart from any representations of the agent, an implied condition (under s.-s. (a) of s. 16 of the Sale of Goods Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 152) that it would be reasonably fit to drive the separator. Chanter v. Hopkins, 4 M. & W. 399, distinguished. New Hamburg Manufactur-ing Co. v. Shields, 4 W. L. R. 307, 16 Man. L. R. 212.

Correspondence — Construction — Breach — Damages.]—The plaintiff, a private banker, wrote to the defendants, safe-makers, for an estimate of a burglar proof door. The defendants, in answer, described No. 67, as 11/8 inches thick, the entire surface protected with hardened drill proof plate, and enclosed a cut of No. 67, called fire proof vault door with chilled steel lin-The plaintiff, in reply, asked whether No. 67 would furnish a fair protection against burglars, and the defendants answered, "No. 67 door gives both fire and burglar proof protection." The plaintiff purchased a No. 67 door, which was blown open by burglars. It appeared that the handle to the spindle by which the lock was turned had been knocked off and dynamite introduced between the spindle and the door plates; the explosion of the dynamite then stripped the nuts which held the door plates together, and gave entrance to further explosives by which the door was wrecked. The door having been taken to pieces, it was found that the centre layer of the three was found that the centre layer of the three layers making up the door, represented to be hardened drill, proof plate, was not so, and was easily perforated by a hand drill:—Held, that the correspondence could not be construed as containing an absolute warranty on the part of the defendants that the door was proof against the efforts of burglars, without qualification as to time and place. The warranty which was given was that which would have been created by an answer simply in the affirmative to the plaintiff's question whether the door would furnish "a fair protection against burglars;" and the fair protection against burglars;" and the further warranty, a former part of the cor-respondence, that the entire surface of the door was protected by hardened drill proof plate composed of chilled steel. The former warranty meant that, so far as the thickness of the plates used would admit, the securities against burglary were as complete as the experience of safemakers could make them. Both warranties had been broken.—Held, as to damages, that the loss of the money contained in the vault was not a natural consequence of the defects in the vault door, because the presence of these defects was not the reason why the burglars were enabled to break it open; but the plaintiff, having sustained a total loss by reason of the article supplied being valueless, was entitled to recover as damages the price, $250. Culvert pipe for use of railway-Defects in pipe-Action for price-Counter-claim for defects in pipe.] -Action to recover $774.26 for vitrified salt glazed culvert pipe supplied to defendants to be used in construction of railway culverts by defend-ants on the Walkerton and Lucknow branch of the C. P. Railway.—Defendants alleged that the pipe supplied was defective; that the sewer pipe supplied was neither vitrified nor salt glazed as agreed; that nearly 1.000 linear feet thereof broke, whereby they were put to damage, and they counterclaimed for 51,141.14.—Falconbridge, C.J.K.B., held (15 O. W. R. 820, 1 O. W. When, at the request of the purchaser, a man is sent to operate the above machinery, and the same is found to have been carelessly or ignorantly handled, to its injury in doing good work, the expense incurred by the (defendants) in putting the same in good working order again shall be paid forthwith by the purchaser to shan be paid rorthwith by the purchaser to the (defendants). No other remedy than the return of the said machinery, in the man-ner herein provided for, shall be had for any breach of warranties on this purchase. It is also agreed that no act or conduct on the part of any local . . . agent or of any mechanical expert, whether in rendering assistance to operate the said machinery, attempting to remedy defects therein, shall be or constitute a waiver of any of the provisions hereof, or operate to extend the period of trial, and that no modification of this contract or waiver of its requirements on behalf of the (defendants) can be made by any person other than a member of the said firm (defendants), and then only in - The plaintiffs alleged, as a writing." breach of the warranty contained in the first sentence of the above quotation, that the engine was so defective and of such poor materials and workmanship that the plaintiffs could not operate the same.—The engine was delivered and the plaintiffs com-menced to use it on the 16th May, 1907, in the morning, and during the course of that morning, one McL., the defendant's expert, came out to assist in operating it and to see that it operated properly, and he left in the afternoon. According to the testimony of the plaintiffs, it did not work satisfactorily on that occasion, and was not working satisfactorily when McL. worked it, and never worked satisfactorily. The plaintiffs continued to work it both at ploughing and threshing during the seasons of 1907 and 1908, down to December, 1908, when, on account of a breakage, they discontinued doing so, and never worked it afterwards. The objection to the engine was that it did not develope enough power. Written notice was not given in the manner provided by the contracts to the defendants or their agents from whom the machine was purchased, and no notice at all was given until chased, and no notice at all was given that the 3rd November, 1907, when a complaint was made in a letter from the plaintiffs to the defendants:—Held, that if the letter was a notice under the above quoted clause, it was too late; and, although it was unreasonable to give a buyer of such a machine only one day's trial, the plaintiffs were only one days that, the planting were bound by the contract which they had made, —Taylor v. Caldwell, 3 B. & S. 826, and Levis v. Great Western Rvv. Co., 3 Q. B. D. 195, followed.—Held, also, on the evidence, that the defendants had not waived the omission to give the notice. An agent could not waive it, under the above provisions, and that clause was a reasonable one. Sending McL. out in November, 1907, to overhaul the engine and ascertain what was the matter with it and repair it if necessary, was not a waiver considering that 6 months had elapsed since the time for giving the notice had expired, that in the meantime nothing had been said or written to the defendants about rescinding the contract or returning the engine, that the plaintiffs had been continually working it, and that the plaintiffs paid for McL.'s services in going out and doing the work.—The plaintiffs alleged also that they made known to the defendants the particular purpose for which the engine was required, that it was defendants' business to supply engines for that purpose, and that the engine was sold subject to an implied condition that it should be reasonably fit for such purpose, but it was not so fit: s. 16, clause 1 of the Sale of Goods Ordinance, C. O. c. 39. Clause 4 of the section provides that "an express warranty of condition does not negative a warranty or condition does not regative a warranty or condition implied by this Ordinance, unless inconsistent therewith." — Held, following Cockshutt Plow Co. v. Mills, 2 W. L. R. 355, that the plaintiffs could not set up an implied warranty or condition for the purpose of getting rid of an express warranty to the same effect contained in the contract, If the plaintiffs were satisfied to accept such a warranty as that contained in the contract, they must have been satisfied that, if the machine would do as good work as any of the same class in Canada, it would do the work for which they had purchased it, and, therefore, the warranty amply protected them.—Held, also, that the contract was one for the sale of a specified article under its trade name, and under the proviso to clause 1 of s. 16, which had not been repealed at the time the contract was made, there was no implied condition as to its fitwood Co. v. Ebert, 3 W. L. R. 69, followed.

—It was further alleged that the contract was a contract for the sale of an engine by description, and that the engine did not come up to the description.—Held, that a printed catalogue of the Hart-Parr Co. given by the defendants' agent to the plaintiffs, which contained a description of the engine did not affect the contract, having regard to its provisions and the terms of clause 4 of s, 16 of the Ordinance, and of clause 51; and in any case, the plaintiffs' only remedy for such a breach would be to return the Held, also, that effect must be given to the provision of the contract that "continued possession shall be evidence of satisfaction."—New Hamburg Manufacturing Co. v. Weisbrod, 7 W. L. R. 895, distinguished .- Held, also that as a matter of the plaintiffs accepted the engine as satisfactory without any intention of setting up that it was defective in the matter of description, and they only conceived the idea of raising that after the disaster in December, 1908, which was not occasioned by reason of any alleged defect in the matters of description relied upon, nor by any inherent defect in the machine or negligence on the part of the defendants in repairing it. Reference to clause 2 of s. 16 of the Ordinance.—Held, also, that the defendants were not liable for the repairs rendered necessary to the engine by virtue of breakages, either under the contract or by virtue of a collateral agreement set up. Defective condition — Damages caused to purchaser by—Contract—Absence of express warranty—Limplied warranty—Conditional sale—Property not passing. Warder v. Bell, 3 O. W. R. 682.

Defects - Damages - Findings of jury. -The contract for the sale by the defendants to the plaintiff of a steam tractionengine, a separator, and certain attachments. provided that, if, at the end of two days after starting the machine, the plaintiff should be unable to make the same operate well, he should, within 24 hours, give notice by letter to the defendants; that, if the plaintiff desired a competitive trial, he should give a similar notice within 3 days; that all the warranties, except as to free repairs, should be considered as fully satisfied, unless the plaintiff gave such notices within the pre scribed times; that failure to give such notices should be conclusive evidence of the due fulfilment of all warranties; and that more than two days' use of the machines, or any of them, should also be conclusive evi-dence of such fulfilment. The outfit was delivered to the plaintiff on the 15th September, and he immediately moved it by the traction-engine to his farm. On the 18th the defendants wrote from Winnipeg to their agent at Calgary and to the plaintiff, stating that the blower attachment was not prong that the power accument was not pro-perly equipped, and that certain necessary pulleys would be shipped to the plaintiff on that day or the following. On the 21st, the plaintiff wrote to the Calgary agent that he had tried the "rig," and it was all right ne had tried the Fig. and it was all right except the blower:—Held, in an action for breach of warranties that the reference in the plaintiff's letter to the trial must be assumed to refer to a trial of the outfit as originally supplied to him; and the defendants' letter constituted an admission that that outfit would not work properly; and the plaintiff, having entered upon, if not completed, the two days' trial before receiving the pulleys mentioned therein, was not bound to give notice of defects or of the improper working of the outfit.—The plaintiff did not return the outfit to the defend-ants, and it was still in his possession at the time of the trial. The action was tried with a jury, and questions (among others) were put to them as to damages, Q. 7: "If it (the outfit) was not reasonably fit for the purpose, and by reason thereof it was worth less than the contract-price, what was it worth at the time of the purchase?" A.: worth at the time of the purchase?" A.:

"It was worth nothing to the plaintiff for the purpose for which it was intended:"— Held. that, as the plaintiff. Held, that, as the plaintiff retained the machines, the defendants were entitled to a deduction from the damages to which the plaintiff might otherwise be found entitled, of the actual value of the outfit for any purpose; and the answer of the jury was not sufficient to enable the Court to determine the actual value.—Q. 8: "If the outfit was not reasonably fit for the purpose for which it was intended what damage (if any) did the plaintiff sustain by reason of its unfitness; (a) reason of loss of custom; (b) by reason of loss of time and expenses during such lost time; (c) for repairs?" In answer to this, the jury found that the plaintiff was en-titled to $2,400 damages under (a) and (b) jointly, and did not distinguish as to the damages under each :- Quare, whether the plaintiff was entitled to recover any dainages in respect of loss of custom. That queshowever, need not be determined, as, in view of the answer to question 7, the amount which the plaintiff should recover could not be ascertained.—The defendants' motion for a nonsuit and the plaintiff's motion for judgment on the findings were both dismissed. Exclusion of other warranties — Implied condition as to fitness—sale of Goods Ordinance, s. 16 (1)—Breach—Action for price of machine—Counterclaim—Damages—Admissions—Promises to pay,1—The plaintiffs sold machinery to the defendant, who signed a written contract containing a special clause stating that the machinery was sold "upon and subject to the following mutual and independent conditions." One "condition" was: "It is warranted to be made of good material and durable with good care and with proper usage to do as good work as any of the same size sola in Canada." Then followed a provision, in case the machinery could not be made to satisfy the warranty, for written notice by the defendant to the plaintiffs. There was also this provision: "There are no other warranties or guarantees, promise or other ments, than those contained herein ":-Held, that this last stipulation was not sufficient to exclude the implied condition as to reasonable fitness for the purpose for which the sonable intress for the purpose for which the article was bought which it attached to such a sale as this by the Sale of Goods Ordinance, C. O. 1905, c. 39, s. 16, s.-s. 1. and which is something higher than a warranty, and not inconsistent with the express war-ranty first set out in the clause.—In an action for the balance of the price of the machinery, with a counterclaim for damages for breach of warranty, the trial Judge found as facts that the machinery did not fulfil the condition as to fitness, and that the defendant had suffered damage to the amount of the plaintiff's claim for the balance of the price of the machinery-or, in other words, that the machine was worth no more than the cash payment made: -Held, that the Court should not, on appeal, reverse these findings .- Held, also, that promises to pay made by the defendant in letters, without mentioning the defects which he alleged to exist, did not destroy his right to claim damages for a breach of warranty. Judg-ment of Beck, J., 10 W. L. R. 457, affirmed. Sawyer-Massey Co. v. Ritchie (1910), 13 W. L. R. 89.

Express and implied warranties.] -By an agreement in writing dated the 21st August, 1909, between the plaintiffs and the defendant, the defendant agreed to buy from defendant, the defendant agreed to buy from the plaintiffs certain machinery for $1,065. Shortly after the date of the contract, machinery was delivered by the plaintiffs to the defendant, in presumed compliance with the contract. After trial of the machinery and complaints made by the defendant and some correspondence between the parties, the defendant paid the plaintiffs. "35 and interest thereon, and gave a promissory note for $530, both under protest, as the defendant said, because the machinery was not satisfactory. The agreement contained, among other provisions, the following: "The said machinery is warranted to be made of good . . . Is warranted to be made of good material, and durable with good care, and with proper usage, and skilful management to do as good work as any of the same size sold in Canada. If the purchasers, after trial, cannot make it satisfy the above warranty, written notice shall, within 10 days after starting, be given both to the company and the calling security. and the selling agent . . . stating wherein it fails to satisfy the warranty, and reasonable time shall be given the company to sonable time small be given the company remedy the difficulty . . the company reserving the right to replace any defective part or parts; and if then the machine part or parts; and if then the machine cannot be made to satisfy the warranty, it is to be returned by the purchasers and another substituted therefor that shall satisfy the warranty, or the money and notes immediately returned and this contract cancelled ; and if both such lotices cancelled . . . ; and if both such otices are not given within such time, that hall be conclusive evidence that the said m chinery conclusive evidence that the said machinery is as warranted under this agreement, and that the machinery is satisfactory to the purchasers. There are no other warranties or guarantees, promises or agreements, than those contained herein:" — Held, following Sawyer-Massey Co. v. Ritchie, 43 S. C. R. 614, that the words of the contract excluding other warranties excluded the provisions of the Sales of Goods Act as to implied conditions; and that the provision requiring written notice of breach to be given to the company within 10 days after starting applies only to the warranty as to the machinery doing as good work as any in Canada.—The defendant complained of the machinery to the plaintiffs' agent, who sent a telegram to the plaintiffs' agent, who sent a telegram to the plaintiffs' and the sent as a sent and the plaintiff's and the sent at the complaint of the agent was in fact made within 10 days (which, on the evidence, was doubtful), the terms of the contract as to notice were not observed.—John Abell Co. v. Long, 1 W. L. R. 24, and American-Abell Engine and Threshing Co. v. Scott, 6 W. L. Even where the seller of a horse sells it without warranty, and the purchaser buys it at his own risk, the seller will be held to have warranted it if at the time of sale he knew that the horse had such a defect; for, in stipulating that there shall be no warranty in these circumstances, he has been guilty of fraud as against the purchaser.—3. When the seller has refused to cancel the sale of a horse having, to his knowledge, such a defect, and persists in his refusal in his defence to an action, he cannot object that the buyer has not offered the horse back to him before action; the fraud practised leaving the purchaser always in a position to rescind the fraudulent sale. the machinery is satisfactory to the purchasers. If the company shall at purchaser's request render assistance of any kind in operating said machinery or any part there-of or in remedying any defects such assist-ance shall in no case be deemed a waiver of any term or provision of this agreement or excuse for any failure of the purchasers to fully keep and perform the conditions of this warranty. When at the request of the purchasers a man is sent to operate the above machinery which is found to have been carelessly or improperly handled, said company putting same in working order again, the expenses incurred by the company shall be paid by said purchasers. This warranty does not apply to second-hand machinery. It is also agreed that the purchasers will employ competent men to operate said machinery. There are no other warranties or guarantees, promises or agreements than those contained here-All warranties are to be inoperative and void in case the machinery is not settled for when delivered or if the printed language of the above warranty is changed whether by the above warranty is changed and the purchasers shall in any respect have failed to comply herewith."—Some defects in the machinery had given rise to complaints, during the previous threshing season, and had been rectified by the company before the execution of the second agreement; they also made further repairs during the Autumn of 1907 and then notified R. that future repairs must be at his own expense, R. paid the first instalment of the price of the machinery. but, when subsequently sued on his other notes, contested the claim, pleaded breach of an implied warranty of fitness and counter-claimed for damages for this breach.—Held, that all claims for damages for breaches of any kind prior to the second agreement had been waived by that agreement and that the provision that there were no other warranties, guarantees, promises or agreements than those contained in the agreement excluded all implied warranties.—Held, further, that the condition requiring written notice of breach of warranty applied only to the warranty that "with proper usage and skilful management" the machinery would "do as good work as any of the same size sold in Canada," and that it had no application to the warranties that the machinery was "made of good materials" and would be "durable with good care."—The consideration for the release of N., and the acceptance of the sole liability of R. for the price of the machinery was the execution of the new notes and agreement which involved the relinquishment by both parties of all their reinfulsament by both parties of all their rights under the first agreement.—Judgment in 13 W. L. R. 89, Alta L. R. , re-versed. Sawyer-Massey Co. v. Ritchie (1910), 43 S. C. R. 614, 31 C. L. T. 196.

Hidden defects — Cancellation of sale— Oral evidence—Admissibility—Contract between trader and non-trader.—Myosis or intermittent lameness in a horse is a defect which is ground for an action to set aside the sale. It is sufficient that the disease exists or that it is there in germ at the time of the sale, although its development may be afterwards.—2. The sale of a horse by a horse dealer to a non-trader is a commercial contract as to the former, and oral evidence of a warranty is admissible against him. Les Ecclesiastiques du Seminaire de St. Sulpice de Montreal v. Jacobs, 33 Que. S. C. 68, 4 E. L. R. 340. Affirmed by the Court of King's Bench. Jacobs v. Gentlemen of the Seminary, 5 E. L. R. 567.

Restlessness — Rescission—Change in the condition of a thing sold.]—The vendor of a horse who warrants it "good in his hands" warrants as good for the purpose of the purchaser. Hence, the latter has a recourse to a suit to set aside the sale, resulting from this guarantee at the time of sale, on account of restlessness in the animal. A change in the condition of the thing sold caused by the legitimate treatment of it by the buyer before being able to prove that it is not such as warranted, is no barrier to his right to move to set aside the sale.
Hence a person who buys a mare guaranteed kind may after having her mounted by a trainer, move to set aside the sale on account of restlessness which he only discovered afterwards. Tremblay v. Bergeron (1909), 36 Que. S. C. 202.

Horses infected with disease - Animal Contagious Diseases Act, R. S. C. 1906 c. 75. s. 38 — Absence of evidence to shew knowledge of vendor — Illegal contract — Knowledge of vendor — Regal Contract Lien-notes — Action on — Compensation-money — Amendment — Money had and, received — Damages — Costs — Warranty.] The Animal Contagious Diseases Act, R. S. C. 1906 c. 75, was passed for the protection of the public; and by sec. 38 Parliament intended to prohibit the sale of an animal infected with disease, whether the vendor knows it to be so infected or not.—And where lien-notes were given by the defendant for the purchase-price of two horses which were, at the time of sale, infected with glanders, and which, after they came into the defendant's possession, were killed by the government veterinary surgeon: — Held, that the contract of sale was illegal, although there was no evidence that the plaintiff knew of the disease, and the lien-notes were void; and an action upon the notes was dismissed: but the plaintiff was allowed to amend and to claim and recover the sum of $200 received by the defendant for compensation-money from the government, as money had and re-ceived by the defendant for the plaintiff's use.—There being no contract, the defendant was not entitled to damages, but was entitled to the costs of the action, to be set off pro tanto against the $200.—Held, also, upon the evidence, that the defendant failed to prove a warranty. Nickle v. Harris (1910), 14 W. L. R. 515, 3 Sask. L. R. 200.

Implied condition — Express limitation of varranty — Onerous and unusual provision not expressly brought to purchaser's attention — Representations of vendor's agent.]—Action for balance of price of machine. Defendant, an educated man, signed plaintiffs' usual written contract, which provided that if machine not satisfactory written notice had to be given plaintiffs within ten days after starting the machine, and on failure to give this notice, machine was to be considered satisfactory:—Held, that the special provision not having been brought directly to defendant's attention, plaintiffs' express warranty stands with this provision eliminated. The agent's representations caused the defendant not to read terms of contract. Machine also held to be defective in material and in construction. Judgment for plaintiffs for amount claimed. Counterclaim for damages allowed to same amount with set-off. Sawyer-Massey v. Ritchie, 10 W. L. R. 457.

Implied condition - Right of purchaser to inspect and reject—Duties of seller and purchaser respectively—Sale of Goods Ordinance, s. 16, s.-s. 1-"Patent or other name"—Interpretation — Agricultural machinery - Discussion of special clauses in agreement — Authorities—Decisions of the Courts of the North-West Territories.] — An express warranty in a contract for sale of goods does not necessarily negative the or goods does not necessarily negative the implied condition under the Sale of Goods Ordinance, s. 16, s.-s. 1. The words "specified article under its patent or other name," in the proviso to this sub-section, refer to (a) a specified article sold under a patent name, (b) a specified article sold under a name ejusdem generis with "patent name," .e., a specific name known to the trade, and indicating a claim by the manufacturer or seller of some special advantage in the particular kind of article so named over other articles of the same general description.

Frost & Wood Co. v. Ebert, 3 W. L. R. 69,
distinguished. The Supreme Court of Alberta is not bound by decisions of the Su-preme Court of the North-West Territories, which are only entitled to the like respect accorded to decisions of the Courts of other provinces. The effect of the special war-ranties and implied conditions on the sale of a steam plough and engine, in this case the right of the purchaser to inspect and re-ject, his duties to the seller, and the effect of a special clause providing that in case a cancellation of the order, or rejection of the goods by the purchaser, he agrees to pay freight and ten per cent. of the price, discussed. Recves v. Chase, 8 W. L. R. 313, 1 Alta. L. R. 274.

Implied statutory conditions—Breach—Defence — Absence of notice—Action on kien-notes — Misrepresentation by vendors' agents—Inducement to sign notes—Defence—Dismissal of action.] — The defendants ordered an engine from the plaintiffs, and agreed to pay for it by promissory notes, and to receive the engine on arrival, subject to the warranty mentioned in the order, and to give the notes upon delivery or tender of the engine. The warranty was with respect to several specific matters. The defendants took possession of the engine when it arrived at the place agreed upon, but refused to give the notes until they saw how the engine ran. They ran it for 6 days, and, finding it did not work satisfactorily, refused to give the notes. They were subsequently induced by the plaintiffs' agent to give, not the notes agreed to, but "liennotes" for the price of the machine, although they were still not satisfied with it:—Held, that the evidence did not shew any breach of the express warranty; but did shew that the plaintiffs knew the particular purpose for which the defendants required the engine; that the defendants relied on the plaintiffs' judgment; that the engine was of a description which it was in the course of the plaintiff's business to supply; course of the plaintiff's business to supply; and that the engine was not reasonably fit for the purpose intended; and therefore the provisions of clause (1) of s. 16 of the Sales of Goods Ordinance applied; the implied statutory condition under that clause not being inconsistent with the express warranty; the defendants did not keep the engine an unreasonable time before they ceased using it for the purpose of trying and test-ing its fitness; but there was no counter-claim, and the defendants had given the plaintiffs no proper notice that they rejected the engine, and so were unable to set up the breach of the condition as a defence. agreement contained a clause that the use of the engine after the expiration of the 6 days mentioned in the warranty should be con-clusive evidence of the fulfilment of the warranty: -Quare, whether the defendants were not estopped, under that clause, by using the engine after the expiration of 6 days, from making a defence based either on the war-ranty or the statutory condition. — Held, ranty or the statutory condition. — Held, however, that the defendants were induced to sign the lien-notes sued on by the mis-representations of the plaintiffs' agent, made with the object of inducing the defendants to sign the notes; and it made no difference that the misrepresentations were as to a matter of law, viz., as to the construction to be put on the agreement of sale; this was a good defence, and the defendants were entitled to have the action brought upon the lien-notes dismissed. Implied warranty — Contract—Breach—Seed wheat—Purchase of spring wheat — Fall wheat mixed with spring wheat—Damages.]—Action for damages for breach of contract in supplying plaintiff with a mixture of fall wheat and spring wheat, for seed instead of spring wheat, which plaintiff ordered and defendants say they supplied. Plaintiff succeeds, the evidence shewing that there was a mixture. Wetenhall v. Brackmanker Milling Co. (B.C.), 10 W. L. B. 100.

Implied warranty — Contract — Evidence — Principal and agent—Identity — New trial. Windson v. Simmons, 5 E. L. R. 139.

Implied warranty — Latent defect — Inspection—Caveat emptor.]—The plaintiffs sought to recover from the defendants a sum of money paid on account of the purchase of a boiler and engine purchased by the plaintiffs from the defendants for the purpose of operating a grist mill, claiming that the engine and boiler were not reasonably fit for the purpose for which they were sold: — Held, that the case came within the first class of cases mentioned in Jones v, Just, 2 Que. L. R. 202, and that the goods being in esse, and in a position to be inspected by the buyers, and there being no fraud on the part of the sellers, the maxim caveat emptor applied, even though the defect was latent, and could not be discovered on examination. Higgins v, Clish, 24 N. S. R. 135.

Implied warranty of title — Breach — Evidence.]—The defendant sold to the plaintiff a mare, then, as was assumed in the absence of evidence to the contrary, in the defendant's possession: — Held. following Raphael v. Burt, 1 t.ab. & El. 325, and Brown v. Cockburn. 37 U. C. R. 592, and distinguishing Morley v. Attenborough, 3 Ex. 500, that the sale being one of a specific article, and there being no evidence that the vendor did not intend to assert ownership, but only to transfer such interest as he might have, there was an implied warranty of title. The defendant having arranged with the plaintiff that a third party should hold the mare pending settlement of the dispute about the title, and having upon inspecting the adverse claimant's alleged title, authorized the custodian to give her up to the claimant.—Held, sufficient evidence, by way of admission, on which the trial Judge could reasonably find a breach of the warranty. Dickie v. Dunn, 1 Terr. L. R. 83.

Implied warranty of title — Knowledge of defect.] — If, where a specific article is sold, there is knowledge on the purchaser's part of a defect in the vendor's title, there is no implied warranty of title as against such defect. Dickie v. Dunn, 1 Terr. L. R. 83, distinguished. Turriff v. Mc-Hugh, 1 Terr. L. R. 186.

Intention of vendor — Inspection by purchaser—Implied condition of fitness — Reliance on skill or judgment of vendor—Sale of Goods Ordinance, sec. 16 (1).] — The defendant bought from the plaintiff and his partner a second-hand separator, which had been the property of H., upon whose premises it still was, and was there inspected by the defendant before he bought. The defendant alleged an express warranty by the plaintiff's partner that "the machine had been doing better work than the new machine" which H. had purchased. The defendant asked for a trial or a guarantee, but the plaintiff refused to give either:—Held, that a representation made at the time of a sale of personal chattels is not a warranty unless it appears to have been so intended; and the words used by the plaintiff's partner were not intended by him to be a warranty pur were they received by the defendant as such.—Held, also, upon the evidence, that the defendant did not rely upon the skill or judgment of the plaintiff's partner, and, therefore, there was no implied condition, under sec, 16 (1) of the Sale of Goods Ordinance, that the goods should be reasonably fit for the particular purpose for which they were required. Thompson v. Bell (1910), 14 W. L. R. 272, 3 Sask. L. R. 170.

Interest of warrantors — Sale to intermediate purchaser — Agent—Scope of authority—Trading corporation—Power to warrant goods sold—Findings of jury—Evidence—Damages. Laramie v. Galt Art Metal Co., 12 O. W. R. S60.

Latent defect — Estoppel — Acceptance—Misdirection — Undue weight to evidence of one party.]—Where a Judge undertakes to put the evidence before the jury, he is not at liberty to present in a strong light all the facts and circumstances that make for the contentions of one of the parties, and entirely, or practically, ignore the evidence that makes for his opponent. A charge constructed on such lines is tainted with misdirection, and the verdict resultant thereupon in favour of the one party, will not stand unless the case is so clear that a verdict for the opposite party, on the evidence before the Court, would be set aside as one that no reasonable jury could give. The purchaser of goods subject to a latent defect, sold with a warranty, is not estopped from claiming for breach of the warranty, when sued for the price, by having received the goods without objection made at the time. Smith v. Archibald, 2 E. L. R. 397, 41 N. S. R. 211.

Latent defects — Rescission — Sale of a horse—Blind staggers — Proof—Implied guarantee in selling—Proof by witnesses — Sale by a dealer to a non-dealer,1—That blind staggers or intermittent lameness in a horse is a recurrent vice which gives rise to an action to rescind the sale. It is sufficient that the disease exists in germ at the time of sale although the development of it may only be later. The sale of a horse by a horse dealer to a non-dealer is subject to the law commercial so far as the seller is concerned, and the oral testimony that it was made with the seller's guarantee is admitted against him. St. Sulpice v. Jacobs, 18 Que. K. B. 195.

Latent defects — Rights of purchaser — Action quanti minoris—Damages—Diligence in exercising redhibitory recourse — Amendment.)—The buyer of a chattel impaired by a latent defect has the option of surrendering it and recovering the price, or keeping it and recovering a part of the price in proportion to the defect. He is also entitled to damages when the seller knew, or is presumed to have known, of the defect at the time of the sale; but he has no action to compel the seller to remedy the defect. He must use reasonable diligence in resorting to his remedy; and, when he allows ten months to elapse between the detection of the defect and the institution of the action, the latter is brought too late. 2. An amendment of a declaration will not be allowed if it changes the nature of the action. Phelan v. Montreal Investment and Freehold Co., 35 Que. S. C. 72.

Machine not as ordered.]—Action to recover amount of a lien note. Judgment for plaintiffs, on appeal, was dismissed:—
Held, there was no express warranty as to the fanning mill sold, nor an implied warranty under s. 16. Imperial Bank v. Kievell (1909), 12 W. L. R. 308.

Machinery — Breach — Damages — Loss of profits — Wages paid while waiting for machinery. Thompson v. Corbin, 2 E. L. R. 84.

Machinery — Breach — Defective working of machine—Damages—Counterclaim—Costs. Sumner v. Doobin (Man.), 3 W. L. R. 382.

Machinery — Breach — Payment of price.]—A warranty by the vendor of a machine that it will work in a satisfactory manner must be applied having regard to the usage it receives in ordinary circumstances of place, work, and employment. Breach of the obligation arising from such warranty frees the purchaser from payment of the price. Frost and Wood Co. v. Themblay, 28 Que. S. C. 46.

Machinery — Defect — Notice — Con-tract — Condition — Fulfilment,]—The condition in a written sale of a threshing machine expressed in French, as follows: "L'acheteur aura une journée pour essayer le moulin dans les dix jours qui suivront l'envoi, et si la machine ne fonctionne pas bien, il devra en donner avis par écrit (ex-pliquant en quoi elle fait défaut), à l'agent qui a pris la commande ainsi qu'aux vendeurs et donner le temps raisonnable à ces derniers de remédier aux défauts, s'il y en a; l'acheteur lui donnant toute l'assistance possible, et, d'une manière amicale, fournissant une paire de chevaux ainsi que le conducteur,"is sufficiently fulfilled by the buyer who, finding the machine defective, notifies the sellers' agent, and, through him, the sellers themselves, and provides a team, a driver, and the necessary quantity of grain for a trial of the machine, which takes place four days after the notice. The sellers are not entitled to a the notice. The selects are not entitled to a further trial with use of the buyer's horses, driver, and grain, under pretext of failure by the latter to specify, in his notice, the defect he found in the machine. Chalifoux v. Forest, 34 Que. S. C. 226.

Machinery — Defects — Implied warranty—Damages — Costa,]—1. Under s.s. (d) of s. 16 of the Sale of Goods Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 152, an express warranty in a contract for the sale of goods by description does not exclude the implied warranty provided for by s. 15 of the Act that the goods shall correspond with the description, and on the sale of a threshing engine by description there is an implied warranty that it shall be reasonably fit for the work that the vendor knew the buyer wanted it for, which is not inconsistent with any of the express warranties usually inserted in such a contract. 2. Where a contract for the sale of a threshing engine contains the usual warranties and also a provision that in case the engine is not satisfactory the company may supply another engine, and, if it does, "the terms of the warranty shall be held to be fulfilled, and the company shall be wibect to no further liability," this should not be construed to mean that the company would be exonerated after supplying another engine matter whether it was as defective as the first one or not. 3. The defendant should be allowed interest on the amount allowed him as damages, as he had to pay interest on the promissory notes used on. North-teest Threaher Co. v. Darrell, 15 Man. L. R. 552, 2 W. L. R. 262.

Machinery — Written contract — Illiterate purchaser—Contract not read to or by—Purchaser bound only by terms understood by him.]—Action on a mortgage to recover price of machinery. Defendant was illiterate:—Held, that he was not bound by written order, but hy express terms made with agent, and legal implications arising therefrom. Mortgage held valid, as when executed, defendant had been recommended for his homestead patent though not so when he signed the agreement. Mortgage effective so far as it conforms to the agreement as found. Canadian v. Peck, 11 W. L. R. 605.

Tender. —The defences to an action for the price of a horse were: (1) that the plaintiff, at the sale, warranted the animal to be no more than 10 years old, whereas in fact he was older: (2) that the plaintiff instructed the defendant to sell the horse, and said that he (the plaintiff) would accept the amount realised as payment in full; that the defendant sold the horse for $50. and tendered that amount to the plaintiff, who refused to accept it:—Held, that the measure of damages for a breach of warranty of a chattel when the article has not been returned (as here) is the difference between its value with the defect warranted against and the value which it would have borne without that defect. The onus was on the defendant to prove that, and he did not do it; it was not sufficient to shew that the horse was sold for $50; he must shew that the sale was for a fair price, the sale not being at auction.—Held, also, that a substituted agreement was not proved, and there was no evidence of a tender. Beck v. Graham (1911), 16 W. L. R. 291. Sask L. R.

Obligations of the vendor — Warranties of hidden defects — Guarantee when selling—Action to set aside the sale—Diligence.]—A declaration by a vendor before a sale that the thing has not a certain specific defect, constitutes a special warranty when selling with regard to this point, and receives its effect notwithstanding the subsequent conclusion of the sale without a warranty is not subject to the rule of Art, 1530 C. C. regarding the diligence with which an action for rescission must be brought. Gallant v. Bélanger, 36 Que. S. C. 5.

Onions, 14 tons of — To be shipped to Manitoba — Nonconform, of contract.] — Plaintiff brought action to recover price of 14 tons of Dutch sets (onions). According to agreement they were to be small, hard, dry and unsprouted, and were to be shipped from county of Perth, Ont., to Brandon, Man., and to be inspected and approved of before shipment. Upon inspection defendant refused to accept delivery—Held, upon the evidence, that the goods tendered were nonconform, of contract. Action dismissed with costs. Kastner v. Mackenzie (1909), 14 O. W. R. 1268, 1 O. W. N. 288.

Quality — Deduction for inferiority — Notice of breach, Meech v. Ferguson, 5 O. W. R. 773, Quality of goods — Remedy—Laches—Estoppel.]—A buyer is bound to use diligence in availing himself of the remedies he has against the seller as warrantor of the quality of the thing sold; more particularly when he has to shew that he was not himself to blame in respect of its not suiting the purpose for which it was bought. Hence a builder of a bridge who buys cennent which he finds unfit for his work, and allows 6 months to elapse thereafter, is estopped from claiming damages from the seller, when it can no longer be assertained whether he had mixed it properly, or whether he had not allowed it to deteriorate through exposure to moisture. Trudeau v. Lafleur, 32 Que. S. C. 223.

Parol evidence.]-A written contract was entered into for the sale by description of a specific article, namely, a gasoline engine with a pump standard. It was not engine with a pump standard. It was not pretended that the article did not answer the description :- Held, that the contract must be taken to cover, as it purported to do, the whole contract between the parties, and parol evidence was not admissible to shew a warranty made prior to tla entering into of the contract which was inconsistent with the written warranty, as it would be allowing the admission of parol evidence to control, vary, add to, or subtract from, the written contract; and the statements alleged to have been made by the vendors, and acted on by the purchaser, were not such as to constitute a separate and independent collateral agreement, and admissible as such. Northey Mfg. Co. v. Saunders, 20 C. L. T. 171, 31 O. R.

Rebuilt engine is a second-hand engine and the representation that an engine was rebuilt is not a condition of sale but a warranty, for the breach of which the vendors are liable in damages. New Hamburg Mfg. Co. V. Webb (1911), 18 O. W. R. 216, 2 O. W. N. 588, 23 O. L. R. 44.

Remedy — Return of article.]—Where in a contract for the sale of a gasoline engine and tank there was a warranty that if the engine would not work well, notice thereof was to be given to the defendants, stating wherein it failed, and giving a reasonable time to get to it and remedy the defect, and, if such defect could not be remedied, the engine was to be returned to the defendants and a new engine given in its place: — Held, that the plaintiff's remedy under such warranty was for the return of the engine and its replacement by another engine, and not for damages for breach of warranty. Hencheliffe v. Banvick, 5 Ex. D. 177, followed. Hamilton v. Northey Mfg. Co., 20 C. L. T. 178, 31 O. R. 468.

Removal of goods—Estoppel from setting up defective quality.]—The purchaser who accepts the goods sold at the place agreed upon for delivery and removes them elsewhere, is estopped from setting up their defective quality as a ground for claiming a reduction of the price or a rescission of the sale. Bessette v. Lyall (1910), 38 Que. S. C. 474.

Representation — Intention—Reliance on—Evidence.]—Every affirmation as to the character of goods at the time of the sale is a warranty, but it must appear that the representation was intended as a warranty, and was relied upon by the purchaser, and formed a part of the contract. Taylor v. Poirier, 8 W. L. R. 949, 1 Sask, L. R. 204.

Representation — Juvy — New trial.]
—The general rule is that whatever the vendor represents at the time of the sale of a horse is a warranty, but often there must be discrimination between language merely of expectation, estimate, or praise, and that which constitutes a representation or warranty, and the attention of the jury should be called to this distinction, in pointed language.—Principles which should govern the Court in limiting the inquiry upon a new trial, Irvine v, Parker, 40 N. S. R. 392.

Representation as to quality — Delivery and acceptance—Part not as vacranted — Deduction of damages.]—The purchaser of a specific lot of eggs at fixed price cannot, after delivery and acceptance, reject and return them because of a representation, made in good faith by the vendor, that the proportion of good eggs in the lot was greater than it turned out to be, but is entitled to a deduction from the vendor's claim by reason of getting a smaller quantity of good eggs than he was led to expect, such deduction being allowed by way of damages for breach of warranty. Prout v. Rogers Fruit Co., 18 Man. L. R. 240. 9 W. L. R. 554.

Representations as to quality—War-ranty—Breach—Measure of damages—Sale of Goods Ordinance, sec. 51, sub-sec. 2 and 3—Loss of profits.]—The plaintiffs purchased from the defendant a second hand threshing outfit for $1,000. The defendant represented that the engine and separator were in a firstclass state of repair, and were ready to go into the field and do good work and thresh in competition with any other machine; that the engine had been reflued the year before with new flues; that the separator had been all overhauled and put in good shape; and that the belts were in good repair:—Held, upon the evidence, that these representations were not true; that they were relied upon by the plaintiffs; that the defendant knew the machine was being purchased to do public threshing; that the representations were material; and that the plaintiffs would not have purchased had the representations not been made.—Held, therefore, that the statements made to the plaintiffs were warranties, and there had been a breach of them .- The measure of damages for breach of warranty is set out in the Saie of Goods Ordinance, s. 51, s. ss. 2 and 3, and is the difference between the value of the goods at the time of delivery to the buyer and the value they would have had if they had answered to the warranty. And held, upon the evidence, that the machine, when sold to the plaintiffs, was worth $500; the plaintiffs' damages were therefore, $500.—But held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to damages for the loss of profits which they would have made if the machine had been as warranted; the reason why they did not continue threshing was on account of an accident to the engine, which might have happened if the machine had been as represented. Scramlin & Smith v. Phalen (1910), 14 W. L. R. 250, 3 Sask. L. R. 194.

Representations of agent — Warranty—Breach—"Condition" and "quality" of fruit trees—Remedy in damages for breach of contract—Remedy given by contract—Remedy given by contract—Repealed to that remedy.]—Action to recover price of nursery stock. Counterclaim for damages, it being claimed goods not up to quality contracted for. The trial Judge in the County Court gave judgment for $253.25 and for $200 damages on counterclaim: — Held, that he could have given judgment on counterclaim for an amount to counterbalance plaintiff's judgment. An express warranty in the contract was that trees were to be in "good condition."—Held, on an appeal, that "condition" here means "quality." The contract contained a proviso that stock failing to live could be replaced at half price if plaintiffs were notified by a fixed date—Held, that this does not prevent defendant from claiming damages by an action. Appeals dismissed. Wellington v. Fraser (1909), 14 O. W. R. 201, 19 O. L. R. 88.

Sale by sample — Endorsement of bill of lading.]—The defendant wrote plaintiffs that he had a car of wheat "on the track" for sale and sent samples, which plaintiffs agreed to buy. Instead of being on the track, the wheat was in defendant's elevator, and was shipped on 30th August, but billed to his own order. On the first September plaintiffs gave defendant a cheque for the full amount and bill of lading was endorsed to them. When the car reached plaintiffs part of the wheat was damaged, getting wet in transit on 30th or 31st August. Having sold the damaged wheat at a loss plaintiffs now sued for damages:—Held, that they must succeed as the defendant was the owner of the wheat until the bill of lading was endorsed to the plaintiffs on the first of September, the wheat thaving been damaged before the latter date. Moore v. Latird, 9 W. L. R. 199.

Sale of Goods Ordinance, ss. 13 (b), 15 (1) — Condition or warranty—Implied warranty of fitness— "Course of the seller's business" — Second-hand article.]— Where goods are sold on a representation, amounting to a condition of the contract, if the buyer accepts the goods, the effect of s. 13 (b) of the Sale of Goods Ordinance, is that the condition sinks to the position of a warranty, unless there is an express or implied term in the contract giving a right of rejecunder such circumstances.-Mere expressions of commendation by the seller are not representations or warranties; and, semble, where a buyer says he will buy a specific article at a given price, if the seller will guarantee it to be in perfect condition, and the sale afterwards takes place at such price, in the absence of evidence of an express assent on the part of the seller to such representation or warranty, it will not be deemed either a condition or a warranty.-The implied warranty of fitness under s. 16,

Sale of horse — Subsequent development of vice. 1—A horse sold by the defendant to the plaintiff was guaranteed sound and without vice, fault, or tricks. The evidence shewed that for a period of eight years prior to the sale the horse was without faults or tricks, but that, immediately afterwards, in the hands of the plaintiff, it baulked and kicked when in harness, and was useless for the purpose for which it was purchased. Judgment having been given, on these facts, in favour of the defendant:—Held, McDonald, C.J., dubitante, that the appeal must be dismissed. McGill v. Harris, 36 N. S. R. 414.

Second-hand goods - Provision excluding other warranties - Application to implied warranty under Sales of Goods .1ct.] -The plaintiffs sold to the defendant an outfit of threshing machinery, consisting of a second-hand separator, an engine, and seva second-annu separator, all engine, and several other articles. The plaintiff alleged an express warranty that the machinery was to be delivered in good working order and condition ready to be operated. The agreement of sale was in writing and contained an express warranty that the machinery would "do good work if properly operated by competent persons." The agreement provided that the express warranty was not to apply to second-hand machinery; and also provided that "there are no other warran-ties, guarantees, or agreements whatsoever other than those contained herein." The only part of the machinery complained of by the plaintiff was the separator, to which, as it was second-hand, the express warranty did not apply:—Held, that the express warranty was not essentially different from that alleged by the plaintiff; and as, by the terms of the agreement, the express warranty did not apply to the separator, the plaintiff could not set up a warranty equivalent in effect, though couched in slightly different language.—The plaintiff did not allege the implied warranty of reasonable fitness under the Sales of Goods Act; but the case was treated at the trial as if it had been alleged:—Held, that that implied warranty was excluded by virtue of the provision in the agreement that there should be no other warranties, etc., which provision applied to second-hand goods, which were not covered by the express warranty. Sawyer-Massey Co. v. Ritchie, 43 S. C. R. 614, 15 W. L. R. 444, followed. Clark v. Waterloo Mfg. Co. (1910), 16 W. L. R. 53, Man. L. R.

Skill and judgment of sellers.]— In a loosely constructed contract for the sale of specific goods the question arose whether there was attached to the sale an implied condition or warranty that the goods would answer the particular purposes for which they were procured. Court of Appeal held that taking into consideration what was present in the minds of the parties and the surrounding circumstances as developed by the direct testimony that the defendants intended to rely upon the skill and judgment of the company. That the company understood what was expected. That their obligation had not been discharged, and that the writing did not prevent, in this case, a scrutiny into the facts. Appeal dismissed with costs. Can. Gas Power & Launchez & Mackay V. Orr Bros. (1911), 19 O. W. R. 235, 2 O. W. N. 1070.

Specific article — Implied warranty — Knowledge of purpose — Inspection.]—In a sale of a specific ascertained article, by one who is not a producer or manufacturer, for a particular purpose, known to the vendor at the time of sale, there is no implied warranty on the part of the vendor that the article is reasonably fit for the purpose for which it is intended, if the vendee has inspected, or has had the opportunity of inspecting it, before purchasing. Specific articles - Express and implied warranties - Specified articles under trade name - Combination - Fitness for particular purpose.] — The defendant bought from the plaintiffs an Eclipse thresher, a threehorse power tread, Pitts pattern, and an Eclipse bagger, for the purpose of threshing grain for hire, and signed a contract in which the goods were expressly warranted to be of good material, durable with good care, and, with proper usage and skilful manage-ment, to do as good work as any of the same size sold in Canada." It was provided that there should be no other warranties or guarantees than those contained in the agreement. The articles individually were good of their kind, but were not adapted to work in combination, and it was impossible to thresh profitably for hire with the apparatus: — Held, that the implied warranty that the goods should be reasonably fit for the purpose for which they were, to the knowledge of the vendors, bought, was not inconsistent with the express warranty.—2. That the exclusion by the terms of the agreement of other warranties and guarantees did not exclude this implied warranty .- 3. That the contract, being a single contract for the sale of the combination of articles, the implied warranty was not excluded, although each of the parts of the apparatus was a specified article under a trade name .- 4. That in deciding whether the purchaser had relied upon the skill and judgment of the vendor, the essential thing was not whether he had exercised his private judgment, but what had led him to exercise it as he did. Sawyer-Massey Co. v. Thibart, 5 W. L. R. 241, 6 Terr. L. R. 409. Traction engine—Note given in payment—Action on — Counterclaim for breach of varranty — Evidence — Findings of jury—Damages allowed purchaser.] — Plaintiffs brought action on a promissory note for $260 given in payment for a traction engine. The defendant counterclaimed for $600 damages on the allegation that plaintiff falsely represented to defendant that the traction engine purchased by him was a comparatively new engine, while the fact was that it was an old wormout and worthless engine. At the trial judgment was awarded plaintiff on the note for $297.33 and to defendant on their counterclaim for $600, upon the findings of the jury—Divisional Court held, that the jury were wholly justified in adding $50 to the sum of $541 proved, to make up the $600 at which they assessed defendant's damages; that there was nothing to indicate that the jury had not faithfully done their duty, therefore the appeal should be dismissed with costs. Warranty against disturbance — Goods taken by third person from possession of unresisting purchaser — Recourse against vendor.]—The buyer of goods in possession of the articles sold who allows himself to be despoiled of them without resistance by a third person has no locus standi to exercise, against the seller, the remedy arising from a warranty against eviction. 19. WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

Agreement — Objection not raised at trial — Payments on account.]—When a defendant seeks to avoid payment of an account for lime furnished to him on the ground that it was sold to him by measure and that the measure used was not stamped as required by the Weights and Measures Act, R. S. C. c. 104, the onus is on him to prove that the measure was not properly stamped. Hanbury V. Chambers, 10 Man. L. R. 167, followed. Section 21 of that Act does not render it illegal for parties to agree upon a sale by some authorised measure, and then that the quantities should be ascertained by authorised weights, and, when lime is ordered by the bushel and supplied by weight, the sale would not be illegal or void if the purchaser knew that such was being done, and the on the first of the same and the on the such was being done, and the on the same and the other was the world on the being done, and the on the first of the same and the other was the way the same and the other was the same and the other was the same and the same and the other was the same and the same and the other was the same and the same and the other was the same and the same and the other was the same and the same and the other was the same and the same a is on him to prove that he did not know of it. After the passing of 61 V. c. 30, s. 2 (D.), a bushel of lime was to be determined by weighing, unless a bushel by measure should have been specially agreed upon:—Held, that, as to certain lime furnished by measure after the passing of the Act of 1898, the plaintiff was entitled to recover for it, on the ground that the defendant had not raised at the trial the objection that there had been no agreement for a determination by measure. The defendant had voluntarily made certain payments on account of certain other sales of lime which were admitted to have been illegal, but he gave no evidence to shew that, when he made the payments, he was ignorant of the illegality.—Held, that he could not recover back the amount of such payments. Hughes y. Chambers, 22 C. L. T. 333, 14 Man, L. R. 163.

City by-law — Infringement — Ultra vires — Constitutional law.]—Order nisi to quash a conviction under a by-law for having bread for sale without having weight and baker's initials stamped thereon discharged: —Held, that local legislature had power to give authority to city council to pass such a by-law, and in so doing was not contravening s.-8. 2, s. 91, B. N. A. Act, and council had power to act under that authority. Whether or not it was fancy bread is solely for the magistrate. Rex v. Kay, 7 E. L. R. 209.

Sale by measure — Place and manner of measurement — Uustom of trade—When binding—Culling or refusal by purchaser of unmerchantable goods.] — When goods are sold by measure, and without agreement as to place and manner of measurement, neither party can validly make it without notice to, and in absence of, other. In case of dispute, between parties as to quantity delivered, it must be determined by the Court according to evidence, in usual way. — A custom of trade, to be binding, must be one of universal application and not a mere temporary, or local, or particular custom of individuals.— Culling of goods sold, or rejection of those not according to contract, must be made by purchaser at, or previously to, delivery, Champaux Co. v. Brompton, etc., Co. (1913), 58 Que. S. C. 261.

Sale by weight — Determination of visible—Completion of salo—Revendication.]
—The sale of movables by weight, count, or measure, is not complete until they have been weighed, counted, or measured.—"The hay now found in a barn and two stacks, less so much as the vendor has need of for his own use," is an indeterminate quantity, and the purchaser of it at so much a ton does not become the owner and cannot revendicate it so long as the weighing and determination of it have not been made. Broten v. Lauzon, 28 Que. S. C. 10.

provided that he might cut timber from O'B.'s pre-emption, and apply the proceeds in satisfaction of the judgment, and which restrained O'B, for six months from cutting or selling timber. M. registered his judgment in 1899. In January, 1900, O'B. agreed to sell to McK, the timber for $1,050, payable at various times, part of the consideration being the fees payable to the Crown for Crown grant; and, on these being advanced by McK., the Crown grant was delivered to him as security for such advance. The plaintiff moved for liberty to sell the land under his judgment, and Drake, J., made an order for sale, holding that McK., being an equitable mortgagee, was excluded by the statute:—Held, reversing the decision, that the sale should be subject to McK.'s interest. Per Martin, J., that, as the plaintiff at the trial induced the Court to grant him a judgment recognising the defendant's right to timber, he was cstopped from afterwards contending that, by virtue of certain sections of the Land Act, the defendant had no right to dispose of timber, Manley V. Action by commissioners against secretary-treasurer — Revendication of books — Necessity for resolution authorising action—Failure to produce — Exception to form.]—An action brought by school commissioners to compel their secretary-treasurer to give up the books of the commission must be accompanied by a resolution adopted by them authorising the action. Section 474 of the School Code, which provides that every action shall be begun by a resolution to that effect, is imperative and obligatory, and if such a resolution is neither alleged nor filed, an exception to the form based upon such default will be maintained. St. Croix School Commissioners v. Lemay, 33 Que. S. C. 257.

Action to restrain conveyance of land and to recover property — School trustees had brought an action to recover certain property and had obtained an interim injunction preventing its disposition. One trustee retiring a new one was appointed. The legality of the latter's appointment has since been attacked. A majority of the trustees and a majority of the ratepares now wish the action discontinued:—Held, that an amendment may be made making a ratepayer plaintiff; the Attorney-General should also be made a plaintiff on obtaining his consent, and the trustees made defendants, and struck out as plaintiffs. Agreement with teacher - Dismissal —Seal—Validity.]—Semble, that where public school trustees had entered into an agreement for securing the services of a teacher. and had directed the officer who had custody of the seal to affix it, and both parties had for two years acted on it as a binding agreement, the fact that the seal had not been actually affixed did not invalidate the agreement. Where such an agreement is entered into with the intention that it shall supersede a previous agreement of a like character entered into between the trustees and the same teacher, if the second never becomes opera-tive, the first agreement will remain in force and govern the relations between the teacher and the trustees. Where such an agreement and the trustees. Where such an agreement is valid on its face, and has been acted upon for several years, the onus of proving invalidity by reason of the requirements of s. 19 of the Public Schools Act, R. S. O. c. 202, enacting that no proceeding of a rural school corporation shall be valid or binding unless adopted at a meeting at which at least the trustees. Present overall as least two trustees are present, except as stated in that section, not having been complied with rests upon the trustees; and semble, that the absence of a formal minute of the proceedings of the meeting at which the first agreement was signed would not be fatal to its validity. A teacher acting under an agreement, who has been wrongfully dismissed, may treat his discharge as a rescinding of the contract by the trustees, and, adopting the rescission, is entitled to his salary pro rata up to the time of his dissalary pro rata up to the time of his dissalary pro rata. charge, and thence to the time of bringing his action. deliberately abandoned the policy of making it obligatory upon the county council to appoint arbitrators, and plainly vested in the county council the discretion of appointing them or not, as it might in the exercise of that discretion deem proper. Alteration of boundaries — Division of sections — Appeal — Maintenance of school — Refusal — Demand—Particulars.]

— There is no appeal from resolutions of school commissioners changing the boundaries of school sections, if such resolutions have not been read and published according to law, even when they have been partly acted upon. When a notice of appeal in the matter of a school complision of the refusal of the school commissioners, the appeal will not be dismissed, upon motion, for default in shewing a demand. — But the appellant will, upon motion of the school commissioners for particulars of the demand, be obliged to declare where, when, how, and by whom the school commissioners received a demand to maintain a school in a particular section, Rozon v. 8t. Lazare School Commissioners, 3 Que, P. R. 249.

Alteration of boundaries school section.] - There was no proof school section.] — There was no proof of the formation of the union school section in question, but it was shewn that for many years a lot in one township had been marked in the assessment roll as in a school section of the adjacent township, to which the taxes received in respect of that lot were paid; that in various reports and returns made by the school inspector the owner of the lot was treated as a ratepayer in respect of the school section of the ad-jacent township; that his children went to the school established there; and that in the township school map, prepared by the township clerk under the provisions of s.-s. 4 of s. 11 of the Public Schools Act, R. S. O. c. 292, the lot was marked as in the school section of the adjacent township:—Held, that the evidence was sufficient to shew that the union school section existed in fact, and that s, 42 of the Act applied to it, so that it must be deemed to have been legally formed. History and object of that legislation discussed. Proper corporate description of the trustees of a union school section pointed out. A municipality in which there is any territory forming part of the union school section in question, is concerned, within the meaning of s, 43 of the Act, in any proceedings for the alteration of the section, and these proceedings must be based upon a petition of five ratepayers of this municipality, though not necessarily of ratepayers in the territory itself. Annexation of part of township to city — Sale of school site.]—By proclamation part of the township of B. was added to Hamilton. Within the added part was an entire school section in which was the school house and grounds used for school purposes. The Hamilton Board of Education took possession of said school grounds for school purposes, but subsequently not requiring them offered them for sale:—Held, that the Board could make a good title. Re Hamilton and McNicol, 12 O. W. R. 1015.

Board of commissioners — Trustee — Legality of appointment — Public Instruction Act (N.S.), s. 37.1—Quo varranto proceedings to determine the validity of the election of school trustees. The information was dismissed. An appeal also dismissed: — Held, that there was a meeting but no election, so that the District Board was entitled to nominate the trustees. R, v. Buchanan, 7 E. L. R. 465.

Board of Education - 15 V. c. 15 -Order locating schoolhouse within three miles of another - School rate - Appeal.]-Appeal from a conviction for a school rate. The 15 V. c. 15, s. 25, enacted that a school-house could not be legally located within three miles of one already established under the Act. In this case the school was located within the limit and it was contended that the Board of Education had no power to establish it and the rate was therefore void, in answer to which respondent's counsel contended that the decision of the Board establishing the school (until reversed on certio-rari) was conclusive and that no evidence could be heard to contradict it .- Section 15 of the Act also provided that when a settlement desired the erection of a new school district, five of the inhabitants should make a request therefor in writing to the Board which was then to "proceed as pointed out by the Act." The requisition was dated in January, 1853, but the Act did not come into force until April, and it was urged that the requisition must have been to the former Board, which had not the powers of the present one:—Held (Peters, J.), that the decision of the Board (until quashed) was conclusive and that in collateral proceedings no evidence could be heard to contradict it .-2. That the requisition was not such as the Act required, and that all proceedings founded on it were void. Robinson v. Mc-Quaid (1854), 1 P. E. I. R. 103.

Board of trustees — Power to accept bills of exchange — Evidence of authority of secretary-treasurer and chairman — Seal. — One Broley was erecting a school building for the defendants, and, being indebted to the plaintiff, gave him an order on the defendants for the amount of his indebtedness. presentation of the order, which was held to be an inland bill of exchange, a memoran-dum was endorsed thereon as follows: "This order is accepted and to be paid when contract for school is completed and money be-comes due;" which was signed by the secretary-treasurer and chairman of and the corporate seal affixed. There was no evidence that the acceptance of this bill of exchange or order had been authorised by the board: — Held, that a corporation has no power to make or accept bills of exchange unless such power is expressly given by the Act by which the corporation is created, or the power attaches inferentially where the nature of the business is of such a character as to render such making or acceptance necessary in the course of its business; and as no such power is given by the School Ordinance, and as it is not an incident to Ordinance, and as it is not an incident to or necessary for the purpose for which the board is created, the board had no power to accept the order, and the plaintiff could not recover thereon.—2. That, as there was no evidence that the board had authorised the acceptance of the order, the plaintiff could not recov r. Stephens v. North Battleford School District, 1 Sask. L. R. 506, 9 W. L.

Board of trustees — Powers—Building school house — Employing architect to prepare plans — Rejection of by-law authorising appenditure — Quantum meruit.]— It is within the power of trustees of public schools to employ an architect for hire to prepare plans, etc., for a proposed school house, and an architect who has prepared such plans is entitled to be remunerated on a quantum meruit, even though a by-law authorising the necessary expenditure for the building is rejected by the municipal council or the electors; Boyd, C, dissenting on the ground that the plaintiff was not entitled to be paid, in the special circumstances. — Judgment of MacMahon, J., 12 O, W. W. R. 210, 2 O. W. N. 152). dismissed a motion to quash a by-law for the erection and maintaining a continuation school, based on a by-law of the county setting aside and establishing the township as a continuation school district. The same township had been previously constituted a high school district by by-law, but no trustees were ever appointed, no site purchased or anything done under that by-law. By the High School Act, 9 Edw. VIII. c. 91, s. 4, wherever a high school district has existed in fact for 3 months, it shall continue to exist and shall be deemed in fact to be a high school district under the same Act, no matter whether originally regularly passed or not.—Divisional Court held that the above section did not apply as the limits of the high school district had never been defined and was not in existence at the time of the passing of above Act. Another later by-law for the erection and maintenance of a continuation school was valid. Order of Middleton, J., confirmed.—Riddell, J., dissenting, held, that the by-law of the county was invalid, therefore it followed that the township by-law was also invalid and should be quashed. Therefore, an irregularity of this kind (if it is one) can only be invoked in a demand of rectification, or rather as a preliminary ground; it cannot be set up as a defence to the merits against a demand for recovery of the rates.-A judgment which dismisses an action for default to observe the preliminary formalities cannot be set up as res judicata against a second action begun after the formalities have been observed .-The payment of the costs of a first action dismissed with costs is not required as a condition precedent to the institution of a second. ting in all that is done. In case of a election of commissioners in municipality, whilst it may be said that this election ought to be presided over by a justice of the peace or three electors, if the resitice of the peace or inree electors, it the resident justice of the peace is not in fact known as such, the three electors may call the first meeting. The irregularity in case of such meeting will not nullify the election if such justice of the peace is present and allows nominations to be made without protest, and only calls in question the legality of the meeting after the proclamation of the election of commissioners by the president of the meeting. The lack of status, supposing it existed in certain persons who moved and seconded the nomination of candidates, would not render the election void. The fact of candidates being indebted for school taxes to the neighbouring school municipalities or to municipalities out of which the new municipality has been formed, does not render such candidates incligible as school commissioners under the terms of Art. 148 of the School Code. Nadon v. Labelle, 7 Que. P. R. 45.

Commissioners — Liability to valuators — Valuation roll—Errors in—Correction.]—
The valuators named by the superintendent of public instruction are entitled to be paid for their services by the school commission. 2. The commissioners of schools cannot declare void the valuation roll prepared by their valuators, because lands belonging to dissidents are entered thereon, or because the description of lands therein is erroneous, but they ought, according to the provisions of Art. 353 of the statute respecting public instruction, to examine and correct the errors in the roll. Robert v. Commissioners of Schools of St. Hermengilde, 20 Que. S. C. 540.

Contract — Salary — Evidence — Parol agreement — School returns — School regulations.]—In an action in a County Court brought by a public school teacher for a balance of salary, evidence of a parol agreement of January, 1902, and the school returns, were admitted to explain a written contract signed by the parties on the 4th February, providing that the plaintiff should teach for the unexpired portion of the term ending the 30th June, 1902, for 875. The term contained 121 days, of which the plaintiff's contract covered 100. The plaintiff's contract covered 100, The plaintiff taught for the unexpired portion of the term, and was paid the agreed salary, and continued teaching the next term, which begun on the 1st July and ended on the 31st December following, but which, in consequence of holidays under the regulations of the board of education, contained only 02 teaching days. The returns sent to the chief superintendent by the teacher and trustees, as required by the school law, stated the salary to be $180 per year. These returns were sworn to by two of the trustees. The trustees refused to pay the plaintiff for the short term more than $69, asserting that she was entitled only to the same rate per day as the first term, viz. 75c, per day. Clause 4 provided "that for a term or any part of a school year the teacher is to receive such proportion of the salary stated in the contract as the number of days actually taught bears to the whole number of teaching days in the unexpired portion of the term," in prescribed by the regulations, clause 5 of which provides that "in default of written notice the contract shall continue in force from school year to school year." The County Court Judge, reading the written agreement and the parol evidence together, found that the plaintiff was entitled to $90 for the short term:—Held, that the finding was right. Dismissal of teachers — School boards cannot dismiss teachers without specifying their reasons therefor. Such dismissals can only be decided upon at a special meeting called for that purpose. The School Act gives a ratepayer no special remedy, therefore he may take advantage of C. P. 50. In present case, the Court granted petitioner, a ratepayer, an injunction to prevent the Catholic School Commission of Montreal from carrying into effect a resolution whereby it dismissed a number of its employees, without giving any reasons for so doing, and at same time paying them the amount of their salaries for the whole period of their contracts. A ratepayer cannot prevent the commissioners from committing an Illegal or arbitrary act, but he may always prevent the doing of something which is ultra vires. St. Denis v. Engagement of teacher — Oral contract—Resolution of scnool commissioners—Dismissal—Status of teacher to aue for rescission — Notice of school meeting—Oral notice.] — A teacher engaged by word of mouth only, but by virtue of a resolution of the school commissioners in which she was indicated by name, and who filled the place of teacher for a scholastic year, is in a position to bring an action to set aside a second resolution of the commissioners putting an end to her engagement. The commissioners cannot in such a case plead by way of exception the fact that the engagement was not in writing. Resolutions adopted by school commissioners at a meeting called by oral notice given to each commissioner are not on that account void. Written notice is not prescribed by Art, 206 of the Schools Act on pain of nullity, and may be replaced by an oral notice, if no prejudice results therefrom. Monfette v. School Commissioners of Ste. Anastasie de Nelson, 29 Que. S. C. 487.

Exection of school district — Consent of ratepayers—" Actual Resident"—Person "Affected"—Residence—Domicil.] — The expression "all the resident ratepayers affected by such permission," as used in s. 12 of the School Ordinance, c. 5, C. 0. 1898, means, not "all the resident ratepayers," but only those who are affected by the district being more than five miles long, and when the district purported to be erected is in fact over five miles long, the residents in each of the tiers of sections which lie at the extremities of the district must be considered as affected, since it is impossible to say which tier should be regarded as the excess in length. Where a ratepayer owned real property in the district, and had a house with furniture in it locked up on this property, but rented a house out of this district for the use of his wife and family, while he was prospecting in the mountains and for some time also working in a coal mine, both out of the district:—Held, that he was not an "actual resident" whose consent in writing could be required under s. 12. The right and duty of the council is to examine the estimate so far as to ascertain that it is for purposes infra virce of the school board. If an item or class of items is not authorized by law to expend moner, it is the right and duty of the council to reject it. But beyond this the council cannot go. The council has no voice in the control or management of the affairs which are committed by law to the achool boats. It can to be an expected on the council of the council pass a by-law for the issue of debentures for plass a prime for the issue of dependings for $12,500 for the purchase of a school site and the erection of a school house. This was presented on the same day to the council, who repealed their by-law and passed a new one as requested. The plaintiff then brought this action to have the new by-law declared invalid, alleging that notice was not given to the members of the board of the object of the meeting, and that the council meeting was an adjourned one and no notice of this by-law had been given:—Held, that, in the absence of some rule requiring the object of the meeting to be stated in the notice calling it, it was unnecessary to specify the business to be transacted. It was the duty of every member of the council to be present at the adjourned meeting, and it was competent to the members present to transact any business that might have been transacted at the original might have been transacted at the original meeting. As the later by-law was passed only to overcome certain defects in the earlier one, it might well have been passed without any new requisition. The by-law sufficiently recited the amount of the debt intended to be created, as it recited that application had been made by the school board to the council to raise $12,500 by debentures, and it authorized an issue to that amount:— Held, also, that s.-s. 1 of s. 386 of the Muni-cipal Act, 1903, authorized the issue of debentures providing for the payment of principal and interest together by equal instalments spread over the whole period for which the debentures are to run, and is alternative to the provisions of s.-s. 5 of s. 584 of that Act. Municipal corporations - Estimate of expenses—Taxes.]—Under v. C2. s.s. 9, of the Public Schools Act, R. S. O. c. 292, it is the duty of a board of education, formed under s. 10, to submit to the municipal council at certain times "an estimate" of the expenses of the schools under their charge for the twelve months next following: -Held, that such estimate should furnish the council with the like details upon which the board base their own calculation, and not merely state a certain sum as required. If, as in this case, the sum in question is for repairs and improvements, there ought to be information given as to the schools to be repaired and improved, and the amounts required in respect of each, as well as some indication of the nature and extent of the repairs and improvements. The municipal repairs and improvements. Payment to city high school for county pupils — Dispute as to — Reference to County Court Judge — Absence of jurisdiction — Res judicata—High Schools Act—Payment for particular year.]—The town of Windsor separated from the county town of Windsor separated from the county of Essex on 1st January, 1834, and remained separated until it became a city on 14th April, 1892. The High Schools Act was passed on 4th May, 1891. Until then the county was under no legal obligation to contribute towards the support of a high school situated in a town separated from the county, or in a city, but by s. 31, s.-s. 2, a change was introduced, and a county became liable thereafter to pay its proportionate share, upon the trustees of the high schools notifying the county clerk that such high school was open to county pupils. Acting under this provision the trustees of the Windsor High School, on 11th June, 1891, notified the county clerk of the county of Essex, and the next day a meeting was held between the warden of the county and the Windsor high school board, for the purpose of settling the amount which the county should pay, and a proposition was made by the warden to pay $500 as a fixed sum per annum, but not accepted by the board. Then on 30th December, 1891, this cheque was issued to and received by the plaintiff: "$500, Treasurer of the county of Essex, pay to the order of Alex'r Bartlet five hundred dollars due from the county of the county dred dollars due from the county to him for amount granted to Windsor high school for 1891. F. B. Bouteiller, warden of the county of Essex. Office of the County Council, Sandwick, Decr. 30th, 1891." The defendants had previously made grants in each year for several years prior to 1891, but these were wholly voluntary, and not in any way based upon allowance or expenditure, as became the case under the Act of 1891, and as made in each year plainly for that year and not for a previous year, and were usually so expressed in the cheques. The next previous one, the only one which could bear upon the question in this action, bears date 23rd January, 1891, and is for $500 "for amount granted to Windsor high school for 1890." Then following upon the cheques before set out are yearly cheques for 1892, 1893, 1894, 1895, 1896, and 1897, all paid at or near the end of each of these years, all expressing on their face for what year they were given, and all in like manner accepted and received by plaintiffs without objection. In 1898 the cheque expresses on its face that it was for the year 1897, and the same with the cheque issued in 1899, which on its face says that it is for the year 1898. But the cheque issued in 1900 again follows the course of the first seven, and says it is for the year 1900 and the same in 1901 and 1902. Certain statements submitted from time to time by plaintiffs to defendants were produced and much relied on by plaintiffs. They shewed that the amounts payable from year to year were calculated upon the previous year's attendance, which was what the statute intended, but this circumstance did not alter the fact really in question that the amount to be paid in 1903, however aramount to be paid in 1903, however arrived at, was in fact the payment for that, and not for the previous year, and therefore one to which the reduction authorized by the statute 3 Edw. VII. c. 33 would apply. The defendants' contention is correct, and the appeal should be allowed and the action dismissed, both with costs. Windsor Board of Education v. Essex, 5 O. W. R. 726, 10 O. L. R. 60.

for such session, upon one of them, is not a regular session, within the terms of s. 223.— A resolution of school commissioners "that instructor X. and all the instructresses of this municipality, with the exception of Y., who has resigned, be notified that the school commissioners do not intend to continue their commissioners do not intend to continue the engagement as instructor and instructress for the next year (1903-1904)," is void because it involves the violation of s. 226 of the Public Instruction Act, which prohibits every notice of dismissal given collectively or simul taneously to the teachers.—The engagement of teachers cannot be cancelled by the comof teachers cannot be cancelled by the com-missioners upon any of the grounds men-tioned in clause 2 of s. 215 of the Act, ex-cept after mature deliberation at a session called for that purpose.—The breach by the school commissioners of obligations arising from the engagement of a teacher is ground for an action by the latter to recover the entire salary stipulated for. From this entire salary stipulated for. amount, however, the Court will deduct sums earned by the teacher, and expenses saved to him by the closing of the school, during the period of the engagement, Lacavalier v Philomène School Commissioners, 27 Que. Quebec public schools — Election of commissioner — Contestation — Procedure — Quo varranto.]—The election of a school commissioner can be contested on the ground of incapacity from not knowing how to read or write, only in the manner prescribed by Arts. 178 and 179 of the school code. The remedy of quo varranto is not open in such a case, even after the expiration of the time fixed for the contestation in the articles mentioned. Duval v. Marchand, 28 Que. S. C. 184.

Quebec public schools — Sale of school property — Officer of school board to sell at auction — Formalities — Entries in books.] —Section 232 of the Public Instruction Act, 62 V. c. 28 (Q.), creates an exception to Art. 1565 C. C., in prescribing that the sale of school properties shall be made at auction by the screetary-treasurer of the school board; and the latter sufficiently complies with Art, 1566, C. C., when he enters in the minute books of the school board the name of the purchase money. Edgar v. North British and Mercantile Ins. Co., 27 Que. S. C. 299.

Religious instructions given by teacher after school hours — Privilege of other demominations.]—Teetzel, J., dismissed action to restrain public school board from continuing to have Roman Catholic religious instruction in their school after school hours. Clergy of other denominations may apply for same privilege. Shaver v. Cambridge & Russell Union S. S. (1911), 18 O. W. R. 501, 2 O. W. N. 689.

Right to attend elementary schools—Ape limit — Mandamus — Implied remunciation of recourse — Attendance.]—Children of from five to sixteen years only have the right to attend the elementary schools of the province, and the trustees cannot be forced by mandamus to admit those who are not within these limits as to age. A person who has compiled for nearly three years with a resolution of the trustees of the school with regard to his child's attended.

ance at the school is no longer entitled to a mandamus to compel these functionaries to rescind their decision. Residence is a condition precedent essential to the right of securing a mandamus to compel a functionary or a public body to perform a duty. Charirand v. The Trustees of St. Anastasic (1909), 36 Que. S. C. 193.

Salary of teacher — Contract—Schools Ordinance, s. 155 — Period of hiring.]—The plaintiff had a written agreement with the defendants for payment of salary for teaching their school at 850 a month for six months, the agreement setting out the provisions of s. 155 of the Schools Ordinance. He taught for six months, and received $300. In an action for $48.55, balance payable under the provisions of the section referred to: Held, that the section applied, although the agreement did not call for a yearly salary.—Semble, that the parties could not have contracted themselves out of the operation of the section. Porter v. Fleming School District, 3 W. L. R. 186, 6 Terr. L. R. 348.

Salary of teacher — Contract—Validity
-Meeting of board of trustees—Minutes — Period of service under agreement — Public Schools Act, 1901, s. 81, s.-ss. 4, 6 — Expiration of agreement — Notice — Resignation - Penalty for non-payment - "Until paid."]-An agreement between the plaintiff, a teacher, and the defendants, was signed by all the trustees and the plaintiff, and the defendants' seal affixed, at one time, at the house of the secretary-treasurer of the defendants, but no minute thereof appeared in the minute book:—Held, that the agreement was valid and binding upon the defendants .-Under the agreement the plaintiff served as teacher for the year 1907 and during the months of January and February, 1908. The fourth paragraph of the agreement provided that it might be terminated by a month's notice, and the 5th, that until so terminated the agreement was to continue from year to The defendants gave the plaintiff a month's notice to terminate the agreement at the end of February, 1908, and the plaintiff also sent in his resignation to take effect at that date:—Held, that s.-s. 4 of s. 81 of the Public Schools Act, 1901, applied to the agreement, and the plaintiff was entitled to be paid, for the time which he served, a sum bearing the same proportion to the amount of the yearly salary as the number of days served bore to the whole number of teaching days in the year in which the service was rendered .- Held, also, that the agreement expired, within the meaning of s.-s. 6, either as the result of the giving of the notice or by the resignation; and, having so expired, it immediately became the duty of the defendants to pay the amount due; having failed to pay the full amount, they became liable to the penalty imposed by s.-s.

6, viz., that "the salary shall continue to run at the rate mentioned in the agreement until paid:" and that did not mean merely until action brought, but until actual payment, or, in this case, until judgment in the Division Court as there ordered, the plaintiff not having appealed. Gliddon v. Yarmouth Public School (Section I7) Trustees, 12 O. W. R. 1001, 17 O. L. R. 343.

Salary of teacher.]—The plaintiff, a public school teacher, entered into an agreement with defendants to teach for $500 during the year 1907, the agreement to run from year to year until terminated by one month's notice on the last day of a calendar month. Notice was given on the 28th February, 1908. The defendants paid to the teacher one-sixth of $500, that is $83.33, but under s.-s. 4, s. 81, Ontario Public Schools Act, the teacher claimed $11.45. The plaintiff now claimed that under s.-s. 6 of said section that in addition he was entitled to be paid at the rate of $500 per annum until the defendants paid this balance of $11.45. The plaintiff's computation was held to be correct and that the salary does not stop with the institution of the action, but continued until the actual payment of the balance was made. Gliddon v. Yarmouth, 12 O. W. R. 1001.

Sale of school lands by trustees— To railway company—Resolution approving sale at $400—Dom. Railway Act, R. S. C. (1906), c. 37, s. 184. Re Walkerton & Lecknow Rw. Co. & P. S. Sec. No. 9 Gleneig (1910), 17 O. W. R. 885, 2 O. W. N. 430.

School board - Notice of meeting-Terminating contract with school master — Salary — Division Court.]—The plaintiff was the master of a public school. The contract between him and the school board gave either party the right to terminate it on one month's notice. There were eight members of the school board, and at a meeting on the 19th February a resolution was passed instructing the secretary to notify the plaintiff that the contract between him and the board should cease on the 31st March, which he accordingly did. The notice of the meeting given to the members of the board did not state that the matter of determining the plaintiff's contract was to be considered, and some of the members had no knowledge of this fact, nor had the plaintiff any know-ledge or notice of the meeting. Only six members of the board attended the meeting, of whom four voted in favour of the resolution, and two against it: - Held, that the above resolution and notice to the plaintiff in pursuance of it was not a fair or proper exercise of the power and option to determine the plaintiff's contract contained in it, and the agreement with the plaintiff was not terminated thereby. The plaintiff brought this action under the above circumstances, claiming a balance of salary, and had re-covered judgment for $132.03.—Held, that the matters of difference between the parties fell within R. S. O. c. 292, s. 77, s.-s. 7, and a Division Court had jurisdiction. Greenlees v. Picton Public School Board, 21 C. L. T. 520, 2 O. L. R. 387.

School commissioner — Appointment by commissioners — Illiterate commissioner

—Quo warranto — Interest of applicant.]—
The remedy given by Art. 987, C. P. (quo warranto), is open to a person interested in having the appointment of a school commissioner who does not know how to read or write, made by the commissioners by virtue of 62 V. c. 28, s. 198 (Q.), declared void. Thibault v, Lévesque, 34 Que. S. C. 476.

School commissioner — Inability to read and write — Quo warranto to remove—Lapse of time — Neplect to context election — Estoppel. — The inability of a school commissioner elect to read and write is not a ground for declaring the office vacant as of public right or at common law; the fact that the election is not contested in the usual way under the statute, at the proper time and before a competent tribunal, is an estoppel as against those interested, and they cannot later succeed by way of quo vacranto, in vacating the office for want of legal capacity. Bonin v, Pagé, 9 Que. P. R. 177.

School commissioners — Action against —Notice of action.]—The preliminary notice provided by Article SS, C. P. C., is not required in respect of an action for damages against a corporation called "The Commissioners of Schools for the Municipality of Inucion. Lecaralier v. Commissioners of Schools 27 Que. S. C. 521, referred to. Gregoire v. St. Charles de Bellechasse School Commissioners, 29 Que. S. C. 216

School commissioners — Borrowing powers — Promissory notes — Repayment of loan — Instalments — Annual tax — Interest — Annuities — Resolution — Presumption — Time.]—School commissioners have the power, with the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor in council, to borrow money for purposes which they are by law authorised to carry out. They may do so by means of promissory notes to the lender, and are under no obligation to issue hypothecary debentures or mortgage bonds .- 2. They can contract for repayment of loans by instalments covering a period of years, provided an annual tax is imposed to meet a sinking fund and interest. It is only when the entire loan and interest is made payable by annuities that the 4 Edw. VII. c. 19, s. 7, requires that they shall not exceed five in number.—3. When a resolution to borrow a sum for a lawful purpose has been passed by school commissioners, in the manner and with the formalities prescribed by law, a second resolution to borrow an additional sum for the same purpose, the first having been found insufficient, will not be set aside because it does not specify the time for which the loan is made nor the rate of interest. There is a presumption that it is an amendment of the first resolution, and that the same delay and rate of interest apply to it. Cloutier v. Chateau Richer School Commissioners, 33 Que. S. C. 349.

School rates — Parinership—Co-oners of mine — Assessment,]—The Act to amend and consolidate the Acts relating to public instruction, Acts 1898, c. 1, in relation to the assessment of property for school purposes, provides that all ratable property belonging to any assessed in the name of the firm, association or corporation; or firm shall be assessed in the name of the firm, association or corporation:—Held, that the defendants were properly assessed as a firm, in respect of a mining property owned by them in the plaintiff's section, the property having been purchased by the defendants with a view to working or sale, and having been worked by them jointly for upwards of two years, the proceeds, after paying expenses, being equally divided. The evidence shewed a community of interest in the profits and losses and capital employed:—Held, that the defendants were partners in the business of carrying on the mine, and that their liability, as such, could not be affected by evidence on their part denying the existence of a partnership or authority on the part of either to bind the other. Montagu School Trustees v. Oland, 35 N. S. R. 499.

"The municipal council of every township (except where township boards have been established) shall subdivide the township into school sections, so that every part of the township may be included in some section, and shall distinguish each section by a number; provided that no section formed hereafter shall include any territory distant more than three miles in a direct line from the school house." The applicants asked for an order of mandamus commanding the respondents to subdivide the township into school sections:—Held, that there must be some discretion left to a township council as to when the township shall be subdivided; and, that even where the majority of the council may be mistaken as to what would be best, which did not appear to be the case here, the Court will be slow to interfere if the duly constituted governing body have honestly attempted to do their duty; and upon the facts, as proved in the evidence here, this did not appear a case in which it would be just or convenient that an order of mandamus should be made. In re Ellis & Widdifeld, 24 C. L. T. 298, 3 O. W. R. 802.

Selection of school site - Trustees Ratepayers — Difference — Award — Invalidity — Mandamus — Estoppel.]—It is only in case of a difference between the trustees, on the one hand, and a majority of the ratepayers at a special meeting, on the other, as to a school site selected by the trustees, that an arbitration is to be had, under s. 31 of the Public Schools Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 292. And where a majority of the ratepayers at a special meeting voted in favour of a change of school site, without any selec-tion of site having been first made by the trustees:—Held, that there was no founda-tion for an arbitration, and that an award made by arbitrators appointed in the manmade by arbitrators appointed in the man-ner prescribed by s.-s. 2, whether such award was or was not valid on its face, was an absolutely void proceeding, and no answer to a motion by the trustees for a mandamus to the corporation requiring them to pass a bylaw for the issue of debatwas to receive by-law for the issue of debentures to provide funds for the purchase of a school site and the erection of a school house in pursuance of the vote of the ratepayers. — Quære, whether the award was valid on its face, inasmuch as it did not shew a difference between the trustees and the ratepayers. Held, also, that there could be no estoppel against the applicants, or waiver of the public against the applicants, or waiver of the public right. Judgment of a Divisional Court, 22 C. L. Ainslie, 25 Que. S. C. 348.

Trustee - Bond given by secretary of trustees — Liability on — Not affected by regulation of council inconsistent with Public Instruction Act — R. S. N. S. c. 52, s. 59.]
—Defendant was first elected to office in June, 1900, and was re-elected and continued in office for five years subsequently :- Held, that the bond given by defendant, on being first appointed, covered only the period of one year from its date, and default committed within that time, and that liability upon the bond was not affected by the regulation of the Council of Public Instruction providing that where a secretary of trustees is continued in office from one year to another it shall not be necessary for him to give a new bond, providing the existing one is drawn in a sufficient sum and the sureties are satisfactory, such regulation being inconsistent with the provision of the Act in reference to bonds and security to be given by secretaries of school trustees. R. S. 1900, c, 52, s. 59. Atty.-Gen. for N. S. v. Cameron (1908), 43 N. S. R. 49.

Trustee — Election — Irregularity — Voters' qualification — Unpaid taxes—Quo ucarranto.]—Motion to test validity of a school election:—Held, that two voters who were refused permission to vote for non-payment of school rates had paid same, and that he who had deposited one dollar should have been allowed to vote. As the vote apparently shewed the wishes of the school section, motion was refused. R. v. Landry, 7 E. L. R. 490.

Trustee — Election of — Equality of votes — Casting vote — Complaint — Jurisdiction of County Gourt Judge.]—Upon the complaint of S. of the election of I. as a public school trustee for the year 1902 for a ward in a city: — Heid, that the Public Schools Act, 1 Edw. VII. c. 39 s. 63, presupposes an election, and that, inasmuch as in the election in question there was a tie, and the proper officer had not yet given the casting vote, there was not an election within the meaning of the section, and the Judge of the County Court had no jurisdiction to hear the complaint. In re Ireland, 22 C. L. T. 151.

Trustee - Forfeiture of office by reason of contract with board of trustees - Quo warranto - Qualification of relator-Relator put forward by real prosecutor. |-An application for leave to exhibit an information by way of quo warranto to unseat a person as school trustee should be dismissed if the relator is a person not really interested in the matter complained of, but merely put forward as a nominal relator by the real prosecutor because of the latter's want of qualification necause of the latter's want of quantitations to be such relator, R. v. Daws (1707), Burr. 2120; R. v. Parry (1837), 6 A. & E. 810, and R. cx rel. Stewart v. Standish (1884), G. O., R. 408, followed. A member of the board who voted for payment of the account of a brother member for wood supplies for the school would not be qualified to be relator in proceedings to unseat the latter by reason of such payment. Quo warranto proceedings to test the right of a person to hold a seat as school trustee are purely civil proceedings and an application for leave to file an information by way of quo warranto for such a purpose is properly made by notice of motion and not by rule nisi. The Crown side of the Court of King's Bench referred to in rule 1, and s. 52 of the King's Bench Act, is only that part of the business of the Court which it gets by virtue of the Dominion legislation in the Criminal Code. Tuttle v. Quesnel (1909), 19 Man. R. 20, 23, 10 W. L. R. 722. See 11 W. L. R. 96.

Trustee - Right to office - Residence Quo warranto - Discretion - Costs.] - The defendant, a life tenant of a farm in the township of Albion, lived on it from 1888 until 1894, when he rented it to his son, and went to live with his wife and family on a farm owned by his wife in the township of Caledon, where he con-tinued to live until 1898, when the son having given up possession of the Albion farm, he took possession of it, to enable him to work it, sleeping in the house, and occa-sionally visiting his wife and family and remaining there over night, while the wife occasionally visited him, staying a couple of weeks, when there was cooking or mending to be done :-Held, that the defendant's place of residence was where his wife and family lived, and he was therefore not a resident within the township of Albion, so as to qualify him as a trustee for a school section within that township, to which office he had been elected. As, however, the granting of the order for a quo warranto was in the dis-cretion of the Court, and the term of the defendant's office would expire before the issue could be tried, the motion was dismissed, but without costs. The relator was not debarred by R. S. O. c. 292, s. 14, s.-s. 8, from making the application. Regima ex rel. Horan v. Evans, 20 C. L. T. 172, 31 O. R. 448.

Trustees - Declaration of office inspector -Enquiry - Replevin - Parties - Use of name of school corporation.]-An inspector appointed under the Public Schools Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 143, is not authorised by s. 32 of the Act or otherwise to enquire whether a trustee duly elected has forfeited his office under s. 243 of the Act by refusing or neglecting to take the declaration of office required by s. 31. Where an inspector undertook such inquiry and declared the seats of two trustees vacant, and two new trustees were subsequently elected at a meeting of the ratepayers called by direction of the inspector, the proceedings were declared null and void, and the plaintiff corporation held entitled to succeed in an action of replevin commenced by direction of the old board against the two new trustees and others who had broken into the school building and taken away the furniture. Chaplin y. Woodstock Public School Board, 16 O. R. 728, followed. Quare, whether the defendants could resist the action which was brought in the name of the school corporation, the acknowledged owner of the goods, whether the defendants in any case could do more than apply to the Court to stay the use of the name of the corporation in the action, on the ground that its use was not authorised by those who were lawfully the trustees. Trustees - Election - Disqualification of nominating elector — School Ordinance, 1896, s. 28 — "Resident ratepayer"—School trustee - Quo warranto.]-At a meeting for the election of school trustees, two candidates were put in nomination. After the close of the nominations one of the electors asked the returning officer to declare one of the candidates elected, on the ground that one of the two electors by whom the other was nominated was not a resident elector. The chairman refused the request, and at the election which followed, the candidate objected to received a majority, and was declared elected. It appeared that the nominating elector objected to owned a half section within the school district, but that his residence and farm buildings were on other property separated from the half section by a road allowance, the whole, however, being worked as one farm:—Held, by Richardson and Wetmore, JJ., that leave to file an information in the nature of a quo warrento should be granted.—Held, by Rouleau and Scott, JJ., that, in view of the action of the applicant in not calling attention to the disqualification of one of the nominating electors until too late to remedy the irregularity, and in view of the fact that no injustice or inconvenience had been caused, or any result followed different from what would have followed the fullest compliance with the law, the leave should not be granted.—Scemble, by the Court, that the nominating elector objected to was not a resident of the district. Regina ex rel. Thompson v. Dinnin, 3 Terr. L. R. 112.

Crustees — Power to horrow — Ordinary capenditure.]—The plaintiff, one of the trustees of a school section, at the instance of his co-trustees, lent to the trustees a sum of money required for payment of the teacher's salary:—Held, that, as the amount borrowed was to be applied to ordinary expenditure, and did not increase the liabilities of the corporation, no special authority to borrow was necessary. McVeil v. Victoria School Trustees, 34 N. S. R. 546.

Trustees — Qualification — Contract with board — Termination.]—The lack of qualification of a school trustee which results from his having a contract with the school board, ends with such contract, and after he has been paid the amount owing in respect of it, he is no longer liable to be unseated on this ground. A school trustee who, at the order of the board, causes certain work to be done on account of the board, and pays for it himself, and afterwards is paid what he has expended and for his time in overseeing the work, is not a contractor with the board within the meaning of Art, 147 of the School Code, and does not by thus acting forfeit his seat. Larochelle v. Roi, 27 Que. S. C. 55.

Trustees - Secretary-treasurer of board Security - Validity. |-The security furnished by the secretary-treasurer of a board of school commissioners and accepted by the chairman, is not void because it is not made by notarial act nor by act sous seing prive signed and acknowledged before a justice of the peace, in accordance with Art. 2088, R. S. Q.; but such formality being only accidental and not essential to the validity of the security, a security sous seing privé not signed and acknowledged before a justice is a valid engagement on the part of the surety, 2. Although Art. 2089, R. S. Q., says that the security should be given jointly and severally by two solvent sureties, a security given by a single surety is not less valid. 3. The neglect to transmit the security to the superintendent of public instruction is without effect upon the validity of the security. St. Norbert School Commissioners v. Paquette, 18 Que. S. C. 289.

Trustees — Successors — Judgment — Leave to issue execution — Continuation of corporate body — Ratepagers.]—A dispute arose between two rival bodies about the proper situation for a school house. A judgment was obtained by the corporation in 1879 against certain defendants for injury done to the school house. In a judgment in another action in 1884 it was held that no legal trustees had existed in the section for years. After this, a meeting of the rate-payers of the section was held, at which a new board of 3 trustees was elected. Application was then made (in 1886) on behalf of the board so elected for leave to issue execution on the judgment obtained in 1879. The defendants contended that the corporation in existence at the date when the judgment was obtained had gone completely out of existence:-Held, that the real corporation was the body of ratepayers of the section of whom the trustees were only the representatives, and that the title to the judgment remained in the ratepayers in the same way as the title to a school house; that only the legal machinery for making it effective was in abeyance for want of trustees, and revived as soon as these were legally elected; and the application was granted Colchester v. Scaber, 3 Burr, 1870, referred to, Pictou (No. 16) School Trustees v. Cameron, 40 N. S. R. 156n, Trustees - Teacher - Power of dis-Trustees — Teacher — Power of all-missal — Inquiry.]—Under s. 16 (7) of the Public Schools Act, 1 Edw. VII. c. 40 (0.), which enables the board of education of a municipality "to appoint and remove such teachers, officers, and servants, as they may deem expedient," members of the board are the sole judges of what they may deem expedient in each particular case in the matter of the removal or dismissal of a teacher on the ground of unsuitability for the position. They may institute a private inquiry into such a matter without allowing the usual safeguards of representation by counsel to the person affected, or they may dispense with such investigation and proceed on their own conviction of what is right from a general knowledge of the situation; they may also act on the report of an inspector, although irregularly obtained, or may remit the matter to a committee and act on its report, and they should not be interfered with by injunction in any action they may be advised to take. Although honorary trus-tees of the property held for the purposes of public education, their relation is not in any sense fiduciary. Cases of charitable endowments, in which property is clothed with a trust, considered. Dunn v. Toronto Board of Education. 24 C. L. T. 223, 7 O. L. R. 451, 3 O. W. R. 393.

Trustees — Verbal contract with teacher—Wrongful dismissal — Action for damages—Public Schools Act, 1 Edw. VII. c. 39, 8. St. s. s. 1.]—Plaintiff, a teacher, sued the defendant trustees, on an alleged verbal contract for the year 1998, for wrongful dismissal and for $199 damages and costs. At the trial judgment was given plaintiff for $50 damages and Division Court costs. Divisional Court held, that the plaintiff scontract not being in writing, the Ontario Public Schools Act, 1 Edw. VII. c. 39, 8. St. s.-s. 1, was a bar to plaintiff's claim. Appeal allowed and judgment set aside and action dismissed without costs. Birmingham v. Hungerford (1869), 19 U. C. C. P. 411, followed. Union of school sections - Powers of arbitrators — Appeal to county council— 1 Edw. VII. c. 39, s. 42.]—An application was made to a township council to alter the boundaries of school sections 12, 13, and 14, by taking about 1,200 acres from 13 and adding them to 12, and by taking about 2,000 acres from 14 and adding them to 13. The township council refused the application; an appeal was taken to the county council against such refusal; and arbitrators were appointed by the latter council under the authority of s. 42 (3) of the Public Schools Act 1 Edw. VII. c. 39. The arbitrators made no alteration in the boundaries of any of the sections, but by their award assumed to unite sections 12 and 13, and recommended the building of a new school house in a central position in the thus united sections:—Held, that it was not within the power of the arbitrators to unite the two school sections upon an appeal against a refusal to comply with an application to alter boundaries only. The arbitrators are given power "to form, divide, unite, or alter the boundaries," but that means to form, divide, unite, or alter in accordance with the subject matter of the appeal. Award set aside without costs. In re Southwold Public School Sections, 22 C. L. T. 62, 3 O. L. R. 81, 1 O. W. R. 32.

Duties of school commissioners — Schools under their control — Schools in which teaching is done by religious orders—Duty to use uniform school books.]—School commissioners cannot escape the duties imposed upon them by law requiring control of the schools by entering into a contract whereby teaching is done by religious orders. Such schools nevertheless remain under the control of the commissioners within the meaning of s. 215 of 62 Vic., c. 28, and, it follows, that as respects such schools as well as other schools, they should insist upon the use of uniform books recognised by authority. They may be obliged to do so by mandamus and they cannot plead to the writ the contracts which they may have entered into in face of the provisions of the law. Establishment of — Debts of public school district — Liability of separate school supporters for — Construction of statutes.]

-On the 24th February, 1899, the Grattan Roman Catholic Separate School District was established in the town of Regina by the Roman Catholic ratepayers, the limits of the school district being those of the municipality of the town, as also the limits of the previously organised public school district of Regina. At the time of the es-tablishment of the separate school district, the public school district was liable for debts. to secure the repayment of which by yearly instalments (one falling due in 1899) the public school corporation had issued debentures, and the trustees included the amount of the 1899 instalment in the amount which they required the municipal council of the town to levy for the year. In making the levy the town council exacted payment from the plaintiff of $1.95, which was his assessed proportion of the amount necessary to pay the debenture instalment, and which he paid under protest and now sought to recover back from the municipality, upon the ground that the council had no power to assess him, he being a separate school supporter :- Held, that the plaintiff was not liable for the rate in question. O. 1897 c. 294, s. 36, those members of the appellant communities who became such after the passing of the British North America Act, 1867, are not eligible for employment as teachers in the Roman Catholic schools in the province of Ontario, unless they have received certificates of qualification to teach in the public schools. The exemption from examination recognised by that section is limited to those who were members at the date of the Act of 1867—Judgment in Re Qualification of Teachers in Roman Catholic Separate Schools in Ontario, 7 O. Protestant school — Pupil of another faith — Scholarship — Withholding—Mandamus — School regulations.]—The petitioner, a British subject, resident in Montreal, but not the owner of real estate, was by religion a Jew. His son was admitted to a Protestant school under the control of the respondents, and by his success in his classes and in the examinations would, in ordinary course have been entitled to a commissioners scholarship, which gives a right to a high school course free of tuition fees. The commissioners having under their regulations, withheld the scholarship, the petitioner applied for a writ of mandamus to compel the respondents to grant his son such scholarship :-Held, that the remedy by mandamus was the proper one under the circumstances, the petitioner alleging the refusal on the part of the respondents to perform a duty in-cumbent on them by law. 2. The petitioner not being a Protestant, and not being the owner of real estate inscribed on the Protestant panel, his son was not entitled, as of right, to admission to the Protestant schools. 3. His admission to a Protestant school by grace of the Protestant school commissioners did not amount to a warranty that the existing school regulations were to be permanent and unchanged throughout the entire scholastic course. 4. The respondents had within the limits of their corporate authority, power to change the school regulations from year to year, and particularly in regard to prizes and other competitive rewards; and, consequently, they had power to provide by regulation that the child of a Jew, not the owner of real estate, should be ineligible to compete for a commissioners's scholarship. Pinsler v. Protestant Board of School Commissioners, 23 Que, S. C. 365.

Qualification of teachers - Construction of statute — Religious community — Status.] — The general policy declared by later statutory enactments is to require teachers of separate schools to undergo the same examinations and receive the same certificates as common school teachers, but some persons are exempted from its immediate operation, and the word "persons" in s. 36 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 294, is to be read as "individuals;" and where, as in that enactment, there is found in unambiguous language a general declaration as to the qualification required, any restriction upon that declaration should not be extended beyond what the language, construed in the ordinary and nalanguage, construed in the ordinary and natural meaning of the words, and in the light of the context, clearly requires. Supporters of — Assessment for public shoots debts.]—A ratepayer rated as a supporter of a separate school where a separate school district has been formed is not liable to be assessed for a debenture indebtedness of the public school incurred prior to the establishment of the separate school district. McCarthy v. Regina, 21 C. L. T. 321, 5 Terr. L. R. 71.

Teachers — Religious community—Residence — Contract.]—The Ottawa separate school trustees entered into an agreement to secure the services of Christian Brothers as teachers in a proposed separate school for boys, the agreement among other things providing for the erection by the trustees of a house or residence with chapel, etc., for the Brothers, and the advance of $100 for each of the Brothers for furniture, this furniture to become the property of the Brothers at the rate of one-fifth for each year, the contract to be in force for ten years unless previously put an end to by notice in a prescribed way:—Held, that the agreement was invalid because (1) Christian Brothers as such are not qualified to teach in separate schools in Ontario; (2) School trustees have no authority to expend money in erecting a house for teachers; or (3) To enter into a contract with a teacher extending beyond a year. Grattan v. Ottava Separate School Trustees, 24 C. L. T. 319, 8 O. L. R. 135, 4 O. W. R. 58, 389.

Withdrawal of supporter — Continuance of liability, I — Property which was owned by a separate school supporter and so assessed for rates imposed under by-laws passed before the time when the supporter has withdrawn, does not remain liable for such rates in the future unless the property is still owned by him at the time of each assessment, and he resides in the section. But the ratepayer who was such when the loam was effected remains liable for future assessments to the extent of the ratable property he possesses, so long as he is resident within the school district. In re Education Department Act and Separate Schools Act, 21 C. L. T. 288, 1 O. L. R. 584.

SEDUCTION.

Action by master of girl seduced -Cause of action arising in another province

Right at common law irrespective of statute action of seduction, see 3.]—In an action brought by the plaintiff, as master or as standing in loco percuts of an adopted child, for her seduction by the defendant, it appears peared that the cause of action arose in the province of Manitoba, where the plaintiff resided, but the action was brought in Sas-katchewan because the defendant resided therein. The jurisdiction of the Court to entertain the action was not disputed. The action was commenced more than six months after the girl was delivered of a child, and there was no evidence of any other action for the seduction having been brought by any other person. The parents of the girl were unknown. No evidence was given as to the law in Manitoba :- Held, that it should be assumed that the common law governed in Manitoba in respect of such actions; at common law the plaintiff had a good cause of action, because the relation of master and servant existed between him and the girl .- Nickolls v. Goulding, 21 U. C. R. 366, and Ford v. Gourlay, 42 U. C. R. 522, approved and followed.—It was not necessary to consider the effect of sec. 3 of the Ordinance respecting the Action of Seduction; sed quære, whether that section was intended to embrace such an action as the presentwhether it was not confined to a cause of action arising within the jurisdiction.-And held, upon the evidence, that the defendant had seduced the plaintiff's servant and was the father of her child. Bolton v. Hodgins (1910), 14 W. L. R. 210, 3 Sask. L. R. 149.

Claim for payment in advance of expenses of confinement.]-In an action by the father of a girl under age for breach promise of marriage and seduction, the plaintiff made a claim for payment provisionally and in advance of $100 for the expense of the girl's expected confinement: - Held, that this claim could not be sustained, and preuve avant de faire droit was ordered. Bolduc v. Corbeil, 7 Que. P. R. 412.

Daughter's evidence - Rape.]-Held, affirming the judgment of a Divisional Court. 10 O. L. R. 489, that the case was one to be submitted to the jury, to say whether upon the whole evidence they could find that the defendant seduced the plaintiff's daughter .-Per Moss, C.J.O., Maclaren, J.A., and Clute, J.—If the evidence should establish a case of rape and disprove a connection yielded to in the end though commenced with violence and resisted for some time, in fine a case of seduction, the plaintiff's right of action could only rest upon his daughter being his servant, which was not this case, and the provisions of R. S. O. 1897 c. 69, ss. 1, 2, would not apply.—Per Garrow, J.A.—The action would lie although trespass vi et armis might have been sustained, and it would be no defence that the offence was rape and not seduction. Evidence of plaintiff's daughter—
Rape—Nonsuit—No reasonable evidence of seduction—Disagreement of jury—Rule 789 —Scope of.]—Father brought action for seduction of his daughter and the jury disagreed three times. Motion was made by the defendant, under Rule 780, for judgment dismissing the action. The plaintiff's daughter swore that the defendant was the father of her child, but that the connection effected with her by the defendant was the effected with her by the defendant was by force and without her consent. The daughter was not in the plaintiff's service or liv-ing at home at the time of the seduction:— Held, that it was for the jury to say, on the evidence of the daughter, whether or not they accepted her statement on the whole, as they might be satisfied as to the paternity they might be satisfied as to the paternity but still discredit the evidence of force. Vincent v. Sprague, 3 U. C. R. 283, and Brown v. Dalby, 7 U. C. R. 160, considered. Gambell v. H. ggie, 2 O. W. R. 1174, 5 O. W. R. 746, 6 O. W. R. 184. S. C., sub nom. E. v. F., 10 O. L. R. 489.

Circumstances which justify it—Sale—Titles—C. C. 1823.1—The sequestration of an immovable whose ownership is in dispute before the Courts is an extreme measure which should not be ordered except for any serious circumstances which may expose one or other of the parties to irreparable prejudice, Dubois v. SESSIONS.

Appeal — Order for costs — Distress tearrant.]—On an appeal to the General Sessions of the Peace from a conviction of a police magistrate, the chairman gave judgment, signing the following minute: "Appeal in this case disminsed with costs to b taxed by the clerk of the peace within five days." No formal order was ever drawn up in pursuance of this minute; but the clerk of the peace afterwards taxed the costs, and on his certificate, at a subsequent sittings of the Court of General Sessions, an order was applied for and obtained for the issue of a distress warrant for the amount of such costs:

—Held, that under ss. 880 (e) and 897 of the Crimial Code, it was necessary for a formal order to be drawn up in pursuance of the above mentioned minute, and that, therefore, there was no warrant or authority for the certificate of the clerk of the peace, or for the order of the Court of General Sessions directing the distress warrant; and the same must be quashed. Appeals from summary convictions and the costs payable in respect thereof are founded upon the statute law, and the provisions of the law regarding them in England and in this country, in view of s. 880 (e) and (f) of the Criminal Code, the necessary formal order in pursuance of the above minute might be drawn up at a future sittings of the Court of General Sessions, which is a continuing Court, and the costs included therein nane pro tune if necessary; and the power to grant costs and determine what costs are just and reasonable is not with us, as it is in England, confined to the justices at the same General Sessions at which the appeal is heard. In re Bothwell and Burnside, 20 C. L. T. 226, 31 O. R. 695.

The defend-ant was adjudged to pay a fine of $20 and the costs of the prosecution, and he paid both:—Held, on appeal, that the conviction should be quashed, and repayment of the fine and costs ordered. Paymentof the fine does not bar the right of appeal, when the payment is made contemporaneously with the expression of intention to appeal, and under expression of intention to appeal, and under pain of distress. SET-OFF.

Account — Disputed items — Absence of liquidation.] — Set-off will not be allowed when the amount of the account which the defendant assumes to set off cannot be determined without a long discussion and contestation of the majority of the items. 2. A defendant in such a case cannot complain of a judgment which allows him a set-off in part, to which he had no right, and properly rejects the remainder of his account. Pharand v. Deslandes, 24 Que. Bank — Winding-up — Transfer of assets to debtor within 30 days—Moneys deposited by third parties to sabsify debt.] — After a bank have suspended payment, and their insolvency is notorious, compensation of a debt due to the bank cannot be effected by a transfer to the debtor of debts due by the bank to third parties, where such transfer has been made to the debtor after the suspension and within 30 days prior to winding-up proceedings under the Winding-up Act. This rule is not affected by the circumstance that the amounts offered in compensation consisted of moneys deposited with the bank by such third parties, for the special purpose of aiding the debtor to meet his indebtedness to the bank, but not transferred to the debtor until after the suspension of payment. Communated &cs Scurs de la Charté de la Providence v. Kent, 13 Que. K. B. 483.

The maker of the note having paid liquidators $2,518,48, the note and $6,000 of debentures held as collateral security were ordered to be delivered up to maker. Re Central Bank; Ex p. Reid (1888), 30 C. L. T. 208.

Bank in Hquidation — Deposit—Note discounted and not yet due — Renunciation of term—Indorser — Intervention—Costa.]
—A deposit made in a bank is a loan to such bank, and Art. 1190, which says that a debt arising from a deposit shall not be the subject of a set-off, does not prevent the same deposit being set off by a debt due to the bank by the depositor. 2. The set-off of a debt due to a bank by the claim resulting from a deposit in such bank, may be effectuated up to the time of service of a petition for the winding-up of the bank, provided that both debts are equally liquidated and exigible. 3. Nevertheless, the term of the currency of a bill of exchange or promissory note is to be regarded as a stipulation in favour both of the creditor and of the debtor, and, therefore, the maker or indorser of a note discounted in a bank cannot, by renouncing the benefit of the time which the note has to run, set off the debt arising upon such note by the sum which he has on deposit in the bank. 4. The indorser of a note discounted in a bank does not become the debtor of such bank until the note has been protested for non-payment and notice of protest given to him. 5. Although a creditor of a bank in liquidation has a right to intervene in a suit pending between the liquidators and a debtor of the bank, who alleges that his debt has been extinguished by set-off, in order to watch the proceedings and take measures necessary for the protection of his rights, such creditor will be ordered to pay the costs incurred by the debtor of the bank if he produces, in opposition of the demand of the latter, a useless contestation founded upon grounds which have already been set up by the liquidators. Claims of third persons — Personal debt — Alimentary allowance.]—A defendant cannot set off against the plaintiff's debt rights belonging to third persons, especially when an alimentary allowance is in question, which is a debt exclusively personal. Ross v. McIntosh, T Que, P. R. 392.

S. ss. 6, 26—Right of action for damages—Solicitors' lien for costs — Kind's Bench Act, s. 39 (e), Rule 293.]—Plaintiff sued for damages for deceit upon the sale by defendant to him of a business fraudulently represented to be of much greater value than it was. Defendant coun-terclaimed for the balance of the purchase money. After the trial, but before judgment, plaintiff made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors under the Assignments Act, R. S. M. 1902, c. S, and the assignee was added as a co-plaintiff. In giving judgment the trial Judge awarded $750 damages to the plaintiff with the costs of the action, but he found also that the defendant was entitled to recover a much larger sum on his counterclaim which was not disputed. Judge also ordered a set-off, and that judgment be entered for defendant for the balance and refused to allow the plaintiff's solicitor any lien for costs:—Held, on appeal, Howell C.J.A., dissenting. (1) The plaintif's claim against the defendant did not pass to the assignee by virtue of The not pass to the assignee by virtue of the Assignments Act, not being covered by any of the expressions "real and personal estate, rights, property, credits, and effects," used in s. 6 of the Act, and being something which could not be reached by creditors. under ordinary legal proceedings. (3) Even if the plaintiff's claim had been validly transferred to the assignee the defendant would be entitled to maintain his counterclaim and to have plaintiff's damages paid by deducting them from it, as both claim and counterclaim arose out of the same transaction, and Rule 293 of the King's Bench Act expressly provides that the Judge may order such set off to be made. Shrapnel v. Laing (1888), 20 Que, B. D. 334; Lowe v. Holme, 10 Que, B. D. 286, and Newfoundland v. Newfoundland Rw. Co. (1887), 13 A. C. 199, followed. Counterelaim.]—Having regard to the provisions of Arts. 1031 and 1187, C. C. P. Q., creditors were allowed by the referee to set off claims of certain debtors, officers of a company, for salaries taken by them without proper authority, and for expenditures made by them out of the company's funds for a purpose ultra vires of the company. No objection was taken to this ruling before the referee, and the Court on appeal from his report confirmed such ruling, but expressed some doubt as to jurisdiction of referee to set off such claims. to the plaintiff, may plead the same grounds in a defence of set-off to the principal action. —Set-off only takes place between debts which are or can be easily and promptly liquidated. A claim for innumerable steps, services, journeys, etc., in connection with negotiations for the sale of a railway is not a debt of this nature, and, consequently, set-off does not exist.—The above-mentioned services come within the category of those referred to in paragraph 6 of Art. 2260 C. C., and the suit to recover the value thereof is prescribed by five years.—The short prescriptions of articles 2250, 2260, 2261, and 2502 C. C. extinguish the right of action and may be pleaded by inscription in law. Bank of St. Hyacinthe v. Bernier (1909), 37 Que. S. C. 481.

Cross-demand.]—A plea that sets up by way of set-off or compensation, matter that is properly the subject of a cross-demand, will be allowed to avail as such, on an application at the hearing on the merits, if no special wrong is thereby caused the plaintiff, subject to payment of additional stamp duty, if any, and of such costs as the Court may see fit to order. Bracer v. Elkin & Co., 37 Que. S. C. R. 154.

Damages — Liquidated amount — Refactal to discharge mortgages.]—A claim for damages resulting from the refusal of the plaintiff to cancel the registry of extinguished mortgages upon a property acquired by the defendant is not clear and liquidated, and cannot be pleaded by way of set-off to the plaintiff's claim in an action. King v. Leptire, 3 Qu. P. R. 216.

Debt due by mandatory — Domages for non-performance.]—Where the claim is for ascertained sums of money due by virtue of bills or notes or of the receipt of money as mandatory, the defendant cannot set off damages accruing by reason of the plaintiff having failed to discharge the obligations which he assumed by the contract of mandate. London Guarantee and Accident Co. v. Groilt, 18 Que. S. C. 398.

Debt purchased by defendant—Signification — Costs — Firm of advocates — Partnership — Debts of members.]—A defendant in a sult may set up in compensation of the demand, a debt due by the plaintiff bought by him, though signification of the act of sale has not been made; but he bears the costs incurred up to the production of the sale in the case, which avails as a signification.—A firm of advocates in Quebec is a juridical person (personne morale), distinct from the several members who compose it. Hence, debts due to it cannot be set up in compensation of debts due by its members. Sale v. Crépcau, 28 Que, S. C. 423.

Debt which is liquidated and demandable — Contract — Damages—C. C. 1188.]—A debt not liquidated and demandable may, nevertheless, be pleaded as set-off to another debt of the same nature, provided they both arise from the same contract.—2. Applying this principle, an action to recover under a contract for work done may be legally met by a plea alleging direct damages suffered by the defendant as a result of the execution of the contract. Harvey v. Veins (1910), 16 R. L. n. s. 500.

Defamation action — Counterclaim for bills of exchange — Motion to strike out counterclaim.]—Plaintiff brought action for defamation. Defendant counterclaimed for amount of certain bills of exchange. Master in Chambers struck out the counterclaim without prejudice to a fresh action being brought, there being no connection between the claim and the counterclaim. Central Bank v. Osborne, 12 P. R. 160, approved. Still v. Alexander (1910), 16 O. W. R. 930, 2 O. W. N. 23.

Disputed indebtedness — Demurrer—C. P. 191, C. C. 1188.] — Set-off may be pleaded even when the proffered indebtedness is not absolutely clear and determined, provided it can be easily proved. In the present case the indebtedness pleaded as set-off is not clear and determined inasmuch as plaintiff not only denies the amount of it but even its very existence. A plea of set-off of this character will be dismissed upon inscription in law. Dore v. Charron (1911), 12 Que. P. R. 380.

Goods sold — Damages for short delivery — Cross-demand — Pleadins, 1—In an action for goods sold and delivered, the defendant cannot plead set-off of damages alleged to have been suffered by him in consequence of the plaintiff's default to complete delivery of the whole quantity of goods stipulated in the contract. Such claim should be urged by cross-demand. Walshaw v. Rosenfield, 24 Que, S. C. 80.

Liquidated demand — Stipulation for liquidated damages — Cross-demand—Pleading—Irregularity — Inscription in law.]—A debt arising out of the stipulation in a contract for the performance of work on default of completing it by a fixed date, the contractor shall pay 850 as liquidated damages for every day of delay, is not a liquidated debt which may be set off according to the terms of Art. 1188, C. C.—2. Blanchet, J., dissenting, that the creditor may make such a debt available by recourse to the cross-demand mentioned in Art. 217, C. R. C.—Semble, that when a debt, not the subject of set-off, is set up in a defence of set-off, and the opposite party joins issue without raising any objection to the regularity of the procedure, the Court may decree a set-off.—3. The party against whom an unliquidated debt is set up in a plea of set-off may attack such irregularity without being obliged to inscribe in law. Ottawa Northern and Western Ru. Co. V. Dominion Bridge Co., 14 Que. K. B. 197.

Money advanced by another — Liquidated amount — Costs. — One who has paid money for the benefit of a third person, who has contracted to repay it, may claim such sum from the third person or set it off, although it is asserted that the money was furnished by another, to whom it must be repaid. 2. In order to have a set-off it is sufficient that the debt which the debtor asserts as a set-off shall be liquidated; it is not necessary that the debt against which the set-off is asserted shall be liquidated. 3.

Costs due to a party upon a verdict of acquittal, where the complainant has been ordered to pay the costs, may be the subject of set-off, for such costs may be easily ascertained. Bérard v. Doré, 24 Que, S. C.

Operation de plein droit - Necessity for giving credit - Scale of costs.] creditor whose claim is in part set off by what he owes his debtor, can bring an action against the latter only for the difference, and costs appropriate to a judgment for such an amount. The creditor's contention that, never having been called upon to pay, he was not obliged to take the set-off into account, and could institute his action for the original amount of his claim, is answered by the fact that set-off operates de plein droit. Turgeon v. Dubeau, 35 Que, S. C. 211.

Plea — Objection to — Practice.]—The objection to a plea of set-off, as being a matter for an incidental demand and not a de-fence to the action, should be raised by means of exception to the form, not of in-scription in law. Levinson v. Renaud, 6 Que. P. R. 114.

Pleading - Acknowledgment - Trial-Counterclaim — Tender.]—A plea of compensation, setting forth a contra-account, followed by an allegation of acknowledgment and promise to pay by the plaintiff, will not be rejected on a reply in law. 2. The Judge presiding at the trial has however, power to order that the settlement of account and acknowledgment by the plaintiff, alleged by the defendant, be proved by him before he is allowed to prove his counterclaim. 3. The validity of a tender, especially in commercial matters, may be a question of fact, and allegations relating to a tender will not be rejected on answer in law, although the tender may appear not to have been made in the manner prescribed by law for legal Laurentide Pulp Co. v. Curtis, 4 Que. P. R. 109.

Pleading — Damages — Construction of contract—Penal clause—Waiver,]—A debt which is not clearly liquidated and exigible cannot be set off in compensation of a claim upon a promissory note except by means of a cross-demand made under Art. 217, C. P. Q., of the province of Quebec; Nesbitt and Idington, JJ., diesenting. By a clause in a contract for the construction of works the completion thereof was to be made within a specified time, in default of which it was agreed that the contractor should pay "as liquidated damages and not as a penalty the sum of $50 for every subsequent day until the completion." The works were not com-pleted within the time limited, and both parties joined in a petition to the municipal corporation for an extension of the time, during which subsidies it had granted towards the cost of the works should be earned-The petition was granted, and the works were completed within the extension of time so allowed: — Held, Nesbitt and Idington, JJ., dissenting, that damages accruing under the clause in question did not, upon mere default, become sufficiently liquidated and ascertained to be set off in compensation against a claim upon a promissory note.— Held, per Girouard and Davies, JJ. (Nesbitt and Idington, JJ., contra), that by joining in the petition for extension of time the party in whose favour the penal clause might take effect had waived the right to claim damages thereunder during the period of the extension so obtained in the interest of both parties to the contract. Ottawa Northern and Western Rw. Co. v. Dominion Bridge Co., 25 C. L. T. 123, 36 S. C. R. 347

Pleading — Damages for tort — Liquidated debt.]—A claim for damage caused by "keeping back a large quantity of logs and pulp wood at a boom, thus preventing the sale and manufacture of them during the season of 1906," is not a liquidated debt senson of 1300, is not a inquiated debt (claire et liquide), and cannot therefore be set up by a plea in compensation. Lecours v. Price, 33 Que. S. C. 181.

Principal action and cross-demand arose from same cause and compensation was demanded; held that the cross-demand should be treated for the purpose of compensation as a defence to the action and the peremption of the cross-demand could not be demanded independently of a demand for peremption of the principal action. Carrier v. Easton (1910), 12 Que. P. R. 277.

Promissory notes — Account for board.]—There is no right to plead to an - Account for action upon a covenant and promissory notes by asking to set off against it an account for board for several years. Naud v. Mar-cotte, 3 Que, P. R. 326.

Right of customer to set-off dam-Right of customer to set-ou damages for breach of contract made with company against claim for goods manusigned to bank — Action by bank for price.]—Defendants ordered goods from a manufacturing company. Later a receiver was appointed for the company and their business was carried on under the order of business was carried on under the order of the Court. The receiver assigned and hypothecated their manufactured goods to plaintiff bank as security for advances. Later plaintiffs brought action to recover $15,028 for goods supplied defendants. Defendants pleaded a set-off for damages for breach of contract to supply goods, made with original company.—Britton, J., held, that the set-off could not be allowed. SETTLED ESTATES.

Leave to mortgage — Express declarations in settlement.]—This was an application by the trustees of a settled estate, under R. S. O. 1897 c. 71, for leave to mortgage the estate for the purpose of building, the existing buildings having been destroyed by fire. The settlement contained a clause that the trustees might "sell, but not mortgage, the trust property or any part thereof:" — Held, that this clause of the settlement was not an express declaration that the lands should not be mortgaged within the menning of s, 37 of the Settled Estates Act; and merely meant that the power of sale given to the trustee was not to be construed as including a power to mortgage. In re Curry and Watson's Settlement, 24 C. L. T. 291, 7 O. L. R. 701, 3 O. W. R. 776.

Leave to sell land — Trust for sale at named period — Acceleration with sauction of adult children—Advantage to beneficiaries—Death of one adult — Sale without sanction of survivor.]—Lands were devised in trust for sale, but not till the youngest child should become of age, unless with the sanction of the two adult children. One of the adult children died and the youngest child had not yet become of age. Upon petition under the Settled Estates Act, R. S. O. 1897

c. 71, s. 2 (1), Chancellor Boyd held with some hestitation that the case came within the scope of the Act. In re Cornell, 5 O. W. R. 60, 9 O. L. R. 128.

Life tenant - Lease by - Registration of lease - Death of life tenant before registration - Invalid lease.]-A testator devised lands upon trust "to allow my wife so long as she remains my widow and no longer the use and occupation and the rents, issues, and profits for her own use absolutely." And he directed that upon re-marriage or death of his wife the land should be sold and the ans whe the land should be sold and the proceeds divided among his children. He died in 1897, and in January, 1906, his widow leased the land for five years with right of renewal, and died in April, 1906. The lease was registered in December, 1906. The executors of the testator received the rent monthly after the death of the widow till February, 1907, when they sold the land:

—Held, that the land was a settled estate —Prior, that the man was a settled estate within the meaning of the Settled Estates Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 71, and the estate during widowhood was an estate for life within s. 42 of that Act, and that the lease when sectioned to the Contract of the settled of th when registered took effect, notwithstanding the payment of rent in the meantime to the executors, the rights of a bona fide purchaser for value without notice not having inter-vened.—Held, also, that, if this were not so, the lease at any rate must be considered in equity as a contract for a valid lease, by virtue of R. S. O. 1897 c. 330, s. 24. National Trust Co. v. Shore, 16 O. L. R. 177, 11 O. W. R. 228.

SETTLEMENT.

Contingent or vested estate—Children.]—Held, affirming the judgment in 30 O. R. 517. 19 C. L. T. 171, that under the settlement in question the child who died before the period for conveying took a vested interest. Lazier v. Robertson, 20 C. L. T. 59, 27 A. R. 114.

Deed — Substitution — Donatio mortis causa.] — An acte by which the children assign to their mother the enjoyment of immovables devised by their father, and stipulate that after her death they shall enjoy them in the same fashion, and that the property will go to their children, does not effect a substitution but a donatio mortis causa, which is void. Kannon v. Kannon, 6 Que. P. R. 455.

Gift — Stipulation in favour of third party — Revocation before acceptance—Relinquishment by grantee.] — A stipulation made by a donor for the benefit of a third party, as a condition of the gift, can be revoked without the assent of the third party, so long as he has not given notice of his intention to take advantage of it. A relinquishment by the donee of the charge in her favour is deemed a revocation of the stipulation made for the benefit of the third party. Guérette v. Ouellet, 27 Oue. S. C. 45.

Life interest in land - Gift over to children - Death of grantee without children-Testamentary disposition by grantee-Breaking of entail - Gift - Trust.1-By Breaking of entait — Gift — Trust.]—By deed of gift inter vivos the granter granted to the grantee, pour lui et les siens de son côté, estoc et ligne, certain lands for the benefit of the grantee during his life, without power to dispose of the same in the meanpower to dispose of the same in the mean-time; and directed that the property upon his death should go to the children born of his marriage. On these conditions the grantor transferred to the grantee all his rights in the property given "to vest it in the grantee et ses héritiers de son côté, estoc et ligne:"—Held, that the deed of gift created an entail; and, in case of the death of the grantee in tail without children, this entail became broken, and a testamentary disposition of the property made by the grantee in tail was valid. (2) That this grant in tail did not extend to relations of the grantee other than children; and that the phrase "pour lui et les siens de son côté, estoc et ligne," did not constitute a fidéicommis, even under the law in force at the time the gift was made (1844), the only effect of this clause being to constitute an appointment in favour of the heirs who would have taken in succession to the grantee in case he should not have legally disposed of the pro-perty otherwise. (3) That the restraint on alienation in the deed applied only to the enjoyment of the property by the grantee in tail, and did not affect the entail created in favour of the children of the grantee nor the power of the grantee to dispose of the subject matter of the gift, in case of the failure of the entail. Crevier v. Cloutier, 26 Que. S. C. 373.

Solicitor's advice - Absence of fraud or mistake — Right to revoke — Reforma-tion — Will — Trust deed.]—In pursuance of an ante-nuptial agreement entered into by the testator and his intended wife, he, after his marriage in 1895, made his will, whereby he devised the interest he had in certain property to his executors and trustees, upon trust to pay the income thereof to his wife during her life, and after her death, to a son O.; and upon the death of O., or his, testator's wife, if she survived O., in trust for conversion, the proceeds to be divided amongst the children or the issue of any deceased children of his said son, and if there were no such children or issue, then amongst the children and the issue of any deceased children of another son W. In 1897 he assumed to revoke this will, but, after consultation with and on the advice of his solicitor, he executed another will, reviving and confirming the previous will; and subsequently on his solicitor's advice and after due consideration, he executed a deed of settlement, without any power of revocation, substantially carrying out the terms of the will. In 1901 he made another will whereby he assumed to revoke the settlement except in so far as regarded the provision made in favour of his wife:—Held, that, in the absence of anything to shew that the settlement was unreasonable or improvident, or that it was executed through fraud or misrepresentation, it was not revocable, nor, under the circumstances, was there anything to justify its being reformed. Houldend v. Macdonald, 9 O. W. R. 337, 14 O. L. R. 110.

—Costs of acte of tutorship.]—If a discontinuance is filed in a suit without notice thereof being given to plaintiff's attorneys, and evident collusion is shewn against the latter by the plaintiff and defendant, the plaintiff's attorneys will be entitled to take judgment against the defendant for their costs. 2. Such costs do not comprise the costs of appointment of the plaintiff as tutrix to minors, there being no lien de droit, in respect thereof, between the defendant and the plaintiff's attorneys. Skelly v. Thibault, 5 Que. P. R. 75.

Fraud — Costs.]—As a general rule, a settlement of the suit by the parties there to is valid, unless it be made in fraud of the rights of the plaintiff's attorney, in which case it will be carried out subject to the obligation to pay the plaintiff's attorney his costs. 2. The mere fact that the settlement was made by the defendant without paying the plaintiff's attorney his costs, although aware that the plaintiff was unable to pay them, does not constitute fraud, more particularly where it appears that the plaintiff's action was unfounded, and that he defendant was induced by her knowledge of the plaintiff's inability to pay costs, and her reluctance to continue the contestation under such circumstances, to make a settlement by which the plaintiff profited to some extent. Action against sheriff for trespass.]—Action for damages for trespass. The defendant bailiff in making a seizure under an execution broke open a store door, the plaintiff residing over the store, both being under one roof:—Held, that breaking open the door was unlawful, and small damages allowed. Some of the property seized was the plaintiff's, the remainder was liable to the execution. The plaintiff gave the sheriff a written statement of what he claimed. As plaintiff put in no claim to the remainder to the sheriff he cannot now claim damages for the unlawful seizure of it:—Held, further, that there was no unreasonable delay in selling and that a fair price was obtained. P. is not exclusive of the right to proceed by direct action, even if it cause more costs.— A judicial demand by a direct action is made by the issue of the writ of summons and the service thereof.—No affidavit is necessary in an action for the resolution of a sheriff's sale. Thibaudeau v. La Banque Nationale (1909), 11 Que. P. R. 310.

Bond — Condition on appointment to office — Resignation of office — Re-appoint-ment — Subsequent breaches — Liability— Res judicata.] - The plaintiff resigned his office of sheriff, and the defendant was ap-pointed in his place under a commission containing a condit on that he should pay the plaintiff "out of the revenues of the said office" a certain sum for his life; and he gave a bond to the plaintiff for the due fulfillment of the condition. Finding that the revenues were not sufficient to pay the amount, the defendant resigned his office. and soon afterwards was re-appointed under a commission without any such condition. In an action on the bond, the plaintiff obtained judgment for the amount of the penal sum, and damages were assessed for breaches up to the time of the defendant's resignation. A petition was subsequently presented by the plaintiff, asking for assess-ment of damages for alleged breaches since the re-appointment and for execution. the trial of an issue as to whether the plaintiff was not to be imputed to the Crown, who had the right to permit, and did permit, the defendant's resignation, and by accepting it made it effectual and thereby discharged the condition and all further liability on the bond; that the condition was attached to the first commission, and the annuity was payable only during the occupancy of the office thereunder, and when that commission was gone there ceased to be any contract to pay it.— Semble, that there was no implied obligation on the defendant's part to refrain from invoking the consideration of the Crown to relieve him from the obligation it had imposed upon him:—Held, also, that the question was to be a consideration of the consideration was to be a consideration. tion was not res judicata by the principal judgment, and that the judgment upon the Jugment, and that the jugment upon the issue was appealable as a final judgment as to matters set up as a defence to further liability in respect of alleged breaches subsequent to the new appointment. Capias — Gaol — Mileage.]—A sheriff is required to safely keep a person arrested on a capias, and, as there is no common gaol in Vancouver, the sheriff of Vancouver is entitled to lodge a person arrested in his bailiwick in New Westminster gaol and charge mileage therefor. Carson v. Carson, 10 B. C. R. S3.

Certificates of satisfaction of executions against lands are required to be forwarded to Registrar of Land Titles, by the sheriff. His fees must be paid by execution creditor, unless some other party specially request sheriff to forward same. In ro Brown (1904), 3 Sask. L. R. 94.

Deed under 11 Vict. c. 7 — Want of notice cured by sec. 22—Void, if land not described at sale by metes and bounds.]—

The 11 V. c. 7, s. 7, enacts that before proceeding to sell land taken in execution under that Act, the sheriff shall at the sale publicly declare the metes and bounds. Section 22 enacts that no omissions of any direction relative to notice or forms shall render the sale invalid. The bocus was sold by the sheriff and bought by Y. for a trifling sum. Notice of sale had not been duly given by the sheriff, and at the sale the iand had not been described by metes and bounds. Y. brought ejectment and obtained a verdict:—Held, on motion to set the verdict aside, that the want of notice being in a proceeding previous to the sale, was cured by s. 22, but that the want of description by metes and bounds was a defect not cured by s. 22, and rendered the sale invalid. Yeo v. Betts (1856). 1 P. E. I. R. 116.

Deputy of a sheriff is not bound to account to his principal for monies received by him in his capacity. Perry v. Gugs (1840), C. R. 3 A. C. S, 2 R. de L. 327, 2 R. J. R. Que. 245.

Execution — Wrongful act — Indemnity—Solicitor — Directions — Overcharges — Error — Knowledge — Recovery.]—Where a sheriff had been mulet in the costs of an action brought against him for wrongfully charging certain lands with an execution, he was held entitled to recover in an action brought by him against the solicitor who gave him directions to charge the lands, for indemnity against such costs, although in giving such directions the solicitor acted merely as agent for his client. 2. Upon a counterclaim of the solicitor against the sherifi for alleged overcharges:—Held, assuming that there was an error in the charges, that, as there was no evidence that the solicitor was not aware of such error when he paid the charges, he could not recover. Robertson v. Taylor, 21 C. L. T. 270.

Executing writ — Public officer — Notice of action.]—The sheriff is not, when executing a fi, fa. at the suit of a private individual, a public officer entitled to notice and other protection under s. 468 of the Judicature Ordinance, R. O. 1888 c. 8. Mc-Whirter v. Corbett, 4 C. P. 203, followed. MacDonnell v. Robertson, 1 Terr. L. R. 438.

Fees — Fi. fa. lands — Certificate forwarded to Registrar of Land Titles without a special request — Land Titles Act (Sask.), ss. 92, 93—Judicature Ordinance, Rule 368—Registrar's fees — Lability of advocate of execution creditor.]—The sheriff is entitled to be paid his fees by the execution creditor whether he acts by request or takes steps which he is required to do by statute. Re Solicitors (1909), 12 W. L. R. 687.

Fees — Lands taken in execution but not sold — Poundage.]—Plaintiff was deputy sheriff of Prince county, and had extended an execution at Hunt's suit on lands of a judgment debtor of the latter. The debt was settled and the land was not sold. The plaintiff then brought his action in the Commissioners Court against Hunt for his expenses and poundage, and that Court gave judgment for the expenses but refused to allow the poundage, and from that judgment the plaintime and from that judgment the plaintime.

tiff appealed:—Held (Peters, J.), that plaintiff was not entitled to poundage. Creswell v. Hunt (1862), 1 P. E. I. R. 191.

Fees — Payment in advance — Fi. fa. — Mileage — Seizure — Conduct of solicitor.]
—The meaning and effect of the Judicature Ordinance, R. O. (1888) c. 58. s. 461, providing for the payment to officers, in advance, of the fees and allowances fixed by tariff, discussed:—Semble, a sheriff is not under that section entitled to demand in advance his charges for mileage or seizure before executing a ft. fa. goods:—Held, that the finding of the trial Judge that the conduct of the first execution creditor's advocate did not have such effect that the ft. fa, was not originally placed, or had ceased to be, in the sheriff's hands for execution, was justified by the evidence. Parsons v. Hutchings, 1 Terr. L. R. 317.

Fees — Re-sale on false bidding.]—When a property is resold upon false bidding, the sheriff is only entitled to one commission and tax, as if there had been but one sale, Nicutenhuyse v, Farnham, 5 Que, P. R. 160.

Fees — Scizure of land under execution—Division into lots.]—An immovable, within the meaning of Art, 706, G. P. C., does not necessarily mean a cadastral lot, but an exploitation; and an immovable composed of reference constitutes, notwithstanding, only one immovable if it constitutes only a single exploitation. 2. Article 7 of the tariff of fees for sheriffs, allowing an additional fee for every additional lot seized, must be interpreted as referring to Art, 6 of the same tariff and as meaning every additional instances and the same tariff and as meaning every additional insmovable; so, if the bailiff has grouped several lots according to their respective situations to constitute different immovables, the sheriff can charge an additional fee only for each group or additional immovable. Gault v. Dufort, 24 Que. S. C. 77, 5 Que. P. R. 353.

Insufficiency or nullity of security given by a purchaser of immovable property at sheriff's sale should be raised by direct action and not by petition for re-sale for false bidding. Ross v. Johnson (1911), 12 Que P. R. 378.

Interpleader — Writ of possession—Interference with execution—Claim to land—Costs.]—Upon an attempt to execute a writ of possession under a judgment against G., who was in actual possession, he was served with a notice by B. claiming the land mentioned in the writ, and informing the sheriff that the house standing thereon was locked and that he (B.) had the key. B.'s claim was as mortgagee upon default in payment of interest. Semble, that the sheriff's duty, as soon as he received the writ, was to break open the door and give the plaintiff possession. But, held, that, as the sheriff was not bound to consider the legality of the claim put forward, he was entitled to an interpleader order. Costs of sheriff ordered to be paid in the first instance by the party putting him in motion. Hall v. Bowerman, 20 C. L. T. 441, 19 P. R. 268.

Liability of sheriff for bailiff appointed under County Court Acts, 1873 and 1874.]—The County Court Acts, 36 Vic., s. 3, and 37 Vic., c. 1, enact that the sheriffs shall appoint bailiffs or deputies for each circuit of the County Court to whom all processes issued at that circuit should be delivered, and who might execute them without their being first placed in the hands of the sheriffs. Larkin had issued several executions from the County Court addressed to the sheriff of Prince County (defendant.) The breach of duty charged against the defendant was neglect in the execution of some of these writs and not accounting for the levies in others. At the trial plaintiff was non-suited. On motion to set aside the non-suit: — Held, (Peters and Hensley, JJ., Palmer, C.J., dissenting) that the sheriff was not lable and that the non-suit was right. Larkin v. Mc-Nut (1880), 2 P. E. I. R. 300.

Limit bond — Action for escape — Demurrer. I — Prisoner was arrested by the sheriff (defendant) under an execution, and gave a limit bond under 12 Vict. c. 1, s. 1, was set at liberty before justification and continued at large. The sureties never justified, and an action of debt was brought against the sheriff for an escape. Defendant on demurrer, contended that the prisoner was lawfully at large under the authority of the Act. and that the only remedy against the sheriff was for breach of the bond before justification as pointed out by the Act. — Held, (Peters, J.) that an action for escape could not be maintained, and the only remedy was that given by the Act. Bank of P. B. Island v. McGowan (1870), 1 P. E.

Mandamus — Sale of lands.]—A motion by the curator to force the creditor, requiring the issue of an order upon the sheriff to seize and sell the lands of the insolvent, to give him a description of the lands of such insolvent, will be dismissed, the law itself indicating to the sheriff what he ought to do. Re Castonguay and Savoic, 17 Que. S. C. 175.

Poundage — Moncy paid before sale — Possession money.]—Where a sheriff made a seizure under writs of fieri facias of property of the judgment debtor, and a few hours before the sale the judgment debtor came to the sheriff and paid the full amount of the judgment debtor.—Held, that the sheriff was entitled to poundage on the full amount of the judgment debt, and not merely on the value of the property seized.—Held, also, that under the circumstances of this case $2.25 per day was not too much to allow for possession money. In re Black Eagle Mining Co., 23 C. L. T. 331, 6 O. L. R. 512, 2 O. W. R. 797.

Poundage.] — Under the P. E. Island statute, 16 Geo, III. c. 1, the sheriff is allowed poundage "for levying, paying and receiving" moneys under executions. Under this provision he must not only levy, but actually sell, receive and pay over the purchase money before he is entitled to poundage. Con v. Murphy, Cox v. Rice (1872), 1 P. E. I. R. 412.

Right to interplead — Scizure of mortgage—Registration of notice—Assignment of mortgage—Execution creditor.]—The right of a sheriff to an interpleader order depends upon his—either having the subject matter of the interpleader in his possession or having the right under an execution accompanied with an intention to take possession. And where an execution debtor who was a mortgage of lands had assigned the mortgage, although the assignment was not registered until after registration of a notice of seizure:—Held, that the mortgage could not be seized under the provisions of the Execution Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 77, s. 23 et seq. and that the sheriff could not proceed until the execution creditors had in an action obtained a declaration of the Court that the assignment was void; and that he could not interplead. Keenan v. Osborne, 24 C. I. T. 132, 7 O. L. R. 134, 3 O. W. R. 143.

Sale of land under writ of fi. fa. -Authority of sheriff—Change in territory of judicial districts — Execution of writ—Inception—Filing in land titles office—Successor of sheriff—Application to confirm sale.] —An application to confirm a sale of land made by the sheriff of Edmonton under a writ of execution against lands was opposed by a mortgagee of the land, upon the ground, among others, that the sheriff of Edmonton had no authority, because the land was in had no authority, because the land was in the judicial district of Wetaskiwin. The writ was issued before the creation of the judicial district of Edmonton and Wetaski-win, the action in which the judgment on which the writ was issued was obtained hav-ing been brought in the judicial district of Northern Alberta. By Ordinance c. 6 of 1002 Only ages it was provided that the Northern Alberta. By Ordinance c. 6 of 1903, 2nd sess., it was provided that the Lieutenant-Governor might alter the bound-aries of judicial districts, and make such provision as he might deem necessary to protect the interests affected thereby. Under tect the interests affected thereby. tect the interests affected thereby. Under the authority of this Ordinance, by order in council of the 1st September, 1906, the judicial district of Northern Alberta was wiped out, and the area comprised therein divided into three districts, Calgary, Wetaskiwin, and Edmonton. The order in council provided that "all writs., pending in the old judicial districts shall have effect was constructed to the council provided that "all writs. and continue according to their tenor in the new judicial districts respectively within whose limits suit was first entered or proceedings begun." This suit was first entered ceedings begun." This suit was first entered in the sub-district of the Northern Alberta judicial district of the deputy clerk at Edmonton, which comprised the area of the two new districts of Edmonton and Wetaskiwin: — Held, that, as there was nothing in the order in council authorizing a sheriff of one district to exercise any of his powers outside of his own district, the saie made by the sheriff of the Edmonton judicial district could have no local authority in the Wetasskiwi judicial district, unless he possessed such authority as the former deputy sheriff of the Northern Alberta judicial district. Nothing was done by the deputy sheriff of Northern Alberta scept to receive the writ. He could not make a scizure for the debtor had no interest in the lands till long after the Northern Alberta statistic than decased to effect. They therefore the statistic than decased to effect. They there were the statistic than decased to effect. They there were the statistic than decased to effect. They there were the statistic than the statistic than the statistic than the films, even if the debtor owned the land at the time, would not constitute a seizure or inception of execution of the writ.—Held, therefore, that the sheriff of the Edmonton judicial district, either as such or as former deputy sheriff of the Northern Alberta judicial district, to whom the writ was directed and delivered, had no authority to sell these lands, which were in the district of another sheriff, who was the successor of the deputy sheriff of Northern Alberta, in so far as the lands in his district were concerned; and, in consequence, the sale was void, and the application to confirm it should be refused. Reliance Loan & Ravings Co. v. Goldsmith (1910), 15 W. L. R. 53.

Sale of lands — Unless for exceptional reasons, the sheriff of the district is the older ordinarily charged with the duty of selling immovable property. Fortier v. Michaud (1911), 12 Que. P. R. 259.

Sale under execution — Proceeds stolen from sheriff's baliff—Responsibility — Satisfaction of judgment—Advertisement of sale —Chattel mortgage.] — 1. Notwithstanding the provisions of s. 21 of the Executions Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 5S, a sale of goods by a sheriff's baliff under f., fa. was, in the peculiar circumstances set forth in the statement below, held to have been good, although made immediately after seizure and without the notice required by that section. 2. A sheriff is responsible for all money realized by his bailiff by a sale under a f., fa., though the money be stolen from the balilif as a result of his carelessness and never comes to the sheriff's hands. 3. A seizure by a sheriff of sufficient goods to satisfy a judgment in part will be a discharge to the debtor as to such part. 4. When the goods seized are subject to a chattel mortgage, the sale of the goods themselves, instead of only the equity of redemption, will be good unless objected to by the mortgage. 5. It is not an absolute rule that a sheriff sale under execution must be for ready money; but, if the sheriff does not comply with such rule, he will be responsible for the money the fails to collect it. 6. The fact that the sheriff failed to comply with such rule, he will be responsible for the money to be distributed ratalby, is no answer to the defendant's claim to have such amount credited upon the execution against him, when nearly three years have elapsed, and there is no evidence that any other execution against the defendant has been placed in the sheriff's hands. Massey-Harris Co. v. Molland, 15 Man. L. R. 364, 1 W. L. R. 424.

Seizure of company's property under execution — Interruption by winding-up order — Right to fees and poundage—Rule 1190. Re Palmerston Packing Co., Allan's Claim, 4 O. W. R. 339.

Seizure under execution — Levy Sale after commencement of action against sheriff—Damages—Value of goods sold.]— Goods seized by the sheriff under an execution at the suit of B, v, R., were claimed by E. R., the wife of R., as her property. After a formal levy it was arranged between the sheriff and E. R. that she should hold the goods for the sheriff until they were required for sale under the execution. After the seizure and before sale, a suit was commenced by E. R. against the sheriff, and a declaration was filed containing two counts; 1st, for seizing, taking away, and converting the plaintiff's goods; 2nd, for detention. Part of the goods seized were sold, and part released:—Held, that a verdiet for the full value of the goods sold was proper, though the sale did not take place until after the commencement of the action; that, as far as the sheriff was concerned, the levy was effectual and complete. Ridcout v. Tibbits, 36 N. B. R. 281.

Theft of money received by bailiff under fi. fa. — Entry of satisfaction — Liability of sheriif for acts of bailif.]—In January, 1900, the plaintiff recovered judgment against the defendant for $430.98, and issued to a sheriff fi. fa. against the defendant's goods. The same sheriff received a fi. fa. against the defendant's goods at the suit of H. & Co. The sheriff issued to one A. as his bailiff his warrants to realize under the writs. The defendant died, and his executors decided to sell his chattels by auction, and employed A., as auctioneer, to conduct the sale. He advertised the sale as being by order of the executors to be held on the 5th April, 1901. Some of the chattels were under mortgages from the defendant to a trustee for the Union Bank of Canada. A sold the goods and placed the moneys received in a cash box which was stolen:—Held, that the judgment was discharged by the seizure and sale to the extent of the amount realized and applicable to the fi. fa. and that it has since been discharged in full by the payment made directly to the sheriff. Order made to dispense with the signature of the satisfaction piece and for satisfaction to be entered. The executors' costs of the motion and of entering satisfaction to be paid by the plaintiffs and the sheriff. A sheriff is liable not merely for moneys received by his bailiffs, but also for those received by the bailiffs clerk: Gregory v. Cotterell, 5 E. & B. 571. A. sold the goods under the f. fa. and received the proceeds for the sheriff, and his receipt was, in law, that of the sheriff. All the time he held the money he held it for the sheriff. The loss was the result of A.'s carelessness, and that must be held to be in law the carelessness of the sheriff himself, so far as his-billy to others was concerned. Massey-Harris Co, v. Molland, 24 C. L. T. 377.

Writs fl. fa. against railway—C. R. R. 1190 (2).]—In 1893 writs fl. fa. were placed in sheriffs hands to recover interest due on Cent. Ont. Rw. bonds. He advertised for sale the equity of redemption in the Rw. Co.'s lands, and the sale was adjourned 33

In 1906 all the bonds were sold at 70 cents in the dollar and in 1907 the writs were withdrawn from the sheriff. In 1909 the money was paid over and the judgments and executions were satisfied. Then the sheriff moved for an order for payment of fees and poundage:—Held, that he could not recover as the first charge upon the road turned out to be more than it was worth, therefore there was no basis on which to say that any sum should be given as representing poundage. Motion dismissed without costs. Re Hope and Central Ont. Ru. Co. (1910), 15 O. W. R. 347.

1. Arrest of Ship.

Action in rem — Jurisdiction of Exchequer Court of Canada—Arrest—Account — Co-owners.]—The Exchequer Court of Canada has, in Admiralty, as large a jurisdiction as the High Court of Admiralty, and therefore in an action between the co-owners of a ship for an account, the ship may be arrested. Cope v. The "Raven," 9 Ex. C. R. 404.

Arrest of ship.]—In certain cases proceedings in Admiralty actions in rem and in personam may be united in same suit for purposes of more complete justice, and the procedure recognizes no distinction between such actions. Under earlier practice in Admiralty the distinction between actions in rem and actions in personam depended upon whether the person (owner) or the property (ship) of defendant was arrested. If the person of defendant was arrested and he appeared, the procedure and effect of the action in rem squainst the ship to which the owner of ship was made defendant and appeared, the action proceeded as an action in rem against the ship to which the owner of ship was made defendant and appeared, the action proceeded as an action in rem and in personam. Where there is no consular officer in the district within which a foreign ship is arrested, the rule as to notice of action to a foreign consular officer of the damiralty Court are not required by practice. Where forms of notice are presented, slight deviations do not invalidate them. Irregularities in service of a writ of summons and in its non-attachment to the ship as required by the rules, was held to be waived by an agreement to put on a bond as security for the ship. Gilmore v. "Marjorie" (1908), 12 O. W. R. 749, 15 O. W. R. 52.

Co-owners — Account — Jurisdiction of Exchequer Court.] — The Exchequer Court of Canada, on the Admiralty side, has as large a jurisdiction as the High Court of Admiralty, and therefore in an action by one co-owner against another for an account, the ship may be arrested. Cope v. The "Raren" and Mayhew, 11 B. C. R. 486.

Release — Bond—Jurisdiction—Waiver.]
—The giving of a bond to release a vessel under arrest constitutes a waiver of any objection that might be taken to the jurisdiction of the Court. The "D. C. Whitney." 38 S. C. R. 303, distinguished. Dunbar and Sullivan Dredging Co. v. The "Milwaukee," 11 Ex. C. R. 179.

Release — Motion for pleadings—Bond.]
—No ship after being arrested can be released except by order of a Judge or by a release issued by the registrar. Where a slip escaped from the custody of the marshal, and no bond was given, an order for pleadings was in the meantime withheld. Rev. V. The "H. B. Tuttle," 11 Ex. C. R. 174, 5 O. W. R. 384.

Seigure and condemnation — Behring Sea Aveard Act, ISSI—Illegal scaling — Vessel arrested within prohibited zone with fresh skins on board — Log—Evidence — Irrepularities connected with the seizure — Effect of proceedings — Practice.] — The Behring Sea Award Act, IS94, forbids subjects of Great Britain from pursuing, killing, or capturing seals during the close season (beginning on the 1st May and extending to the 31st July) on the high seas north of the 189th degree of N. latitude and E. of the IS9th degree of longitude. On the 29th May, 1907, a British sealing schooner was boarded, searched, and arrested by the United States revenue cutter "Rush" in the North Pacific Ocean off Yakutat Bay, in latitude 39° 10° N. and longitude 142° 19° W. There were found on board 77 fur-seal skins, 6 of them being green with fresh blood on them. The schooner's log was not written up at the time of search, but the master said he had a note-book with pencil entries containing the particulars of seals killed from which he was able to make entries in the log as required by Art, 5 of the first schedule of the said Act, The master afterwards did enter in the log that the last killing of seals had taken place on the 27th April. While not engaged in scalling at the time of being boarded, the schooner was admittedly within the prohibited zone, and was fully manned and equipped for scaling; and fur-seals had been seen by the "Rush" in the vicinity for several days before. The master did not give evidence at the trial, nor was any excuse given for his failure to do so. Expert evidence was given on behalf of the Crown that the seals from which the six skins were taken had been killed within four days before the 29th May, and possibly some of them not longer than 24 hours:—Held, that, upon the facts, the schooner was employed in the uniawful killing of seals as charged. 2. Where the offending vessel is properly before the Court and in the cus tody of its marshal, and antecedent irregularities in the manner in which she was or-iginally seized or in the means whereby she was ultimately brought within the jurisdiction of the Court, will not vitiate the proceedings. Rex v. The "Carlotta G. Cox," 11 Ex. C. R. 312, 8 W. L. R. 124, 13 B. C.

2. BILLS OF LADING.

Custom of port.]-A trade custom, in order to be binding upon the public generally, must be shewn to be known to all persons in whose interests it would be to have a knowledge of its existence, and, in any case, the terms of a bill of lading, inconsistent with and repugnant to the custom of a port, must prevail against the custom. Parsons v. Hart, 20 C. L. T. 372, 30 S. C. R. 473.

Delivery—Shortage in goods—Carrier — Custom of trade.]—Where the ship-owners and their agents never notified or requested the consignee to take delivery of the goods from the ship's side, after arrival at the port the sup's suc, after arrival at the port of destination, as they had a right to do by the terms of the bills of lading, but, on the contrary, retained possession of the goods, and proceeded, after they were landed, to sort the boxes and arrange them in separate lots, partly in their own shed, and partly up-on the wharf itself, and caused the goods to be watched by their employees, without any interference or participation by the signee, and where, in the opinion of the Court, the only delivery which took place was made by the ship-owners upon orders given by the consignee to the parties who had purchased the goods at an auction sale held five days after the arrival of the ship, the shipowners are responsible for any shortage in the quantity mentioned in the bills lading as compared with the quantity delivered, notwithstanding the payment of freight made under reserve and before delivery. Judgment in 15 Que. S. C. 515, reversed. Hart v. Parsons, 19 Que. K. B. 555. (Reversed 20 C. L. T. 372, 39 S. C. R. 473.)

Exception in — Voyage — Obligation to provide fit ship — Clause limiting liability of ship-owners.] — The plaintiff shipped six cases of dry goods on board the defendants ship for carriage from Vancouver to Skagway and thence to Dawson, under a bill of lading which provided that all claims for damage to or loss of any of the merchandise must be presented within one month. The grating on the outside of the hull of the ship and at the mouth of the pipe in which the seacock was placed was defective and rendered the ship unseaworthy, the result being that salt water entered the after-hold and damaged the plaintiff's goods. The plaintiff did not present his claim within a month, but subsequently sued for damages:

—Held, that the stipulation in the bill of lading to the effect that no claim for loss should be valid unless presented to the company within a month, did not apply to damage occasioned by the defendants not providing a seaworthy ship. Drysdale v. Union Steamship Co., 22 C. L. T. 74, 8 B. C. R.

Limitation of time to sue — Damage from unseaworthiness.]—On a shipment of goods by steamer the bill of lading provided that all claims for damage to or loss of the that all claims for damage to or loss of the same must be presented within one month from its date, after which the same should be completely barred: — Held, reversing the judgment in 8 B. C. R. 228, 22 C. L. T. 74, Mills, J., dissenting, that this limitation applied to a claim for damages caused by unseaworthines, of the steamer. Union Steamsahip Co. v. Drysdale, 22 C. L. T. 278, 32 S. C. R. 379.

3. Charterparty.

Action for freight - Delay by master -Loss of cargo-Findings of trial Judge - Reversal by appellate Court - Commission evidence.] - A vessel owned by the plaintiff was chartered at a fixed rate per month, the time to commence on 2nd December, 1902, to proceed to Bonne Bay, New-foundland, there to load a cago of herring, and thence with all possible dispatch to Hall-fax, etc. To an action to recover the freight agreed upon, the defence was set up that the master, although not prevented by dangers of the seas, wilfully and without reasonable cause or excuse, neglected and refused to leave the port of Bonne Bay, or to proceed with reasonable dispatch, although he knew the harbour was liable to freeze up, and, in to consequence, the schooner was frozen in for the winter, and the cargo not delivered un-til the 27th April following, when it was worthless. The evidence shewed that the vessel arrived at Bonne Bay, and had completed loading and cleared on the 9th January, 1903, and could have got away on that day or any one of a number of days afterwards when the condition of wind and weather were favourable, and other vessels, either at Bonne Bay or at places in the immediate neighbourhood where similar conditions prevailed, put to sea: — Held, reversing the judgment of the trial Judge on the question of fact, that, under the circumstances stated, the plaintiffs could not re-cover. Where a large part of the evidence has been taken under commission, the Court on appeal is, to that extent, in as favourable a position to decide as to its effect as the Judge who tried the cause.—Per, Russell, J.—If the question were as to any one day on which it was a superstant of the superstant which it was contended the master might have sailed and did not, it might be difficult to say with certainty that his conduct was not consistent with the exercise of a bona fide judgment, but this difficulty is re-moved when it is found that there are at least seven different occasions as to which there is a strong body of testimony to the effect that the voyage might with safety have been undertaken. har, 38 N. S. R. 183. Spindler v. Farqu-

Affreightment — Discharge of cargo — Obligations of owner—Custom of trade.]— A ship that carries a cargo of fruit to the port of Montreal, under a charterparty with a clause "that the cargo is to be brought to and taken from alongside at the shipper's expense, and to be stowed and discharged according to the custom of the fruit trade of the ports," etc., is not bound, as a part of its obligations when discharging, to provide (a) shed accommodation in which to store the fruit, (b) men to sort and check the same according to marks, numbers, and Construction — Implied obligation to unload with diligence—Jury—Misdirection.—Where a charterparty provides that a steamer is to be loaded with the greatest possible dispatch day and night, but there is no provision as to the time and manner of unloading, the law implies an obligation to discharge with all reasonable diligence, having regard to the situation and circumstances existing and the appliances in use at the time, at the port of discharge; and, where a jury were instructed that the provision in the contract that the steamer was to be unloaded with all possible dispatch night and day was an element to be taken into consideration in determining what should constitute reasonable diligence:—Held, that there had been misdirection. Rule as to non-direction discussed. Van Buskirk v. North River Lumber Co., 40 N. S. R. 532.

Contract—Charter of steamer for certain voyage — Action claiming damages for injuries to plaintiffs' steamer resulting from a deviation from her voyage made at defendants' instance—Damage to ship—Liability of charterer. Reid & Archibald v. Tobin & Co. (N. S. 1910), 9 E. L. R. 180.

Contract - Letters and telegrams.] plaintiffs, through their agent H., and defendants negotiated for the chartering by the plaintiffs to the defendants of the steamer T., then at Chatham, N.B. The defendant desired to have the steamer delivered to them at North Sydney, but, after some negotia-tion, on the 9th October offered to take de-livery at Chatham and use the vessel for three months if navigation remained open. The plaintiffs declined to take the risk of navigation remaining open, and on the 15th October the plaintiffs offered to close at three months and take the risk of navigation remaining open. On the same day the plaintiffs' agent replied: "Have closed in accordance your telegram to-day and ar-ranged delivery North Sydney." On the ranged delivery North Sydney." On the following day the defendants replied: "Telegram received closing T. Try to get her de-livered North Sydney end October":-Held. that the defendants, by their telegram of the 15th October, in view of previous correspondence, disclosed an intention to authorize a contract according to what had already been embodied in writing, and that the reply to that telegram conveyed all that was required to embody the terms of the charter; and that the defendants, whose position was changed on the 22nd, could not, by continuing the correspondence and raising other questions, escape the effect of the mutual terms previously agreed upon. Heckla v. Cunard, 37 N. S. R. 97.

Covenant — Negligent stowage—Exemption of owner—Law of England—Application of J.—A stipulation or covenant in a contract that it shall be governed by the laws of a foreign country is valid and binding. Under the law of England, a stipulation in a charterparty that the owner or charterer of the vessel shall not be liable for damages to the goods carried, caused by improper and even negligent stowage, is valid and binding.

Canada Sugar Refining Co. v. Furness-Withy Co., Tellier v. Furness-Withy Co., Dobell v. Furness-Withy Co., 27 Que. S. C. 502.

Customary despatch — Notice — Lay days—Demurrage.] — By charterparty the defendant's ship was to proceed to the port of St. John for lumber for Buenos Ayres, to haul once to loading berth as might be required by the charterer, with the privilege required by the charterer, with the privilege to the charterer of moving the vessel afterwards at his own expense. It was provided that the cargo was to be furnished at the customary despatch; that lay days should commence from the time the vessel was ready to receive the cargo and written notice thereof given to the charterer, and that for each day's detention by the charterer's default he should forfeit $60. On arrival of the vessel the master was notified by the charterer to proceed to the government railway wharf to load. On the 28th August the master mailed a notice to the charterer that the vessel was then at loading berth and ready to re-ceive cargo on the 29th. At the time no-tice was sent, the vessel was not at loading berth: — Held, that the vessel should have been at loading berth ready to receive cargo at the time notice was sent, and that the rotice was insufficient. The words the rotice was insufficient. The words "customary despatch" in the above charter have not a recognized meaning at the port of St. John with reference to the loading of dry lumber for shipment to South American They mean that the vessel shall be loaded at the usual rate or despatch of persons having a cargo ready for loading. Up-on the evidence the Court found the rate to be 35M, per weather working day; sub stantial work, though not amounting to half a day, to count as half a day. Cushing v. McLeod, 20 C. L. T. 107, 2 N. B. Eq. R.

Damages — Detention — Place of loading—Weather conditions—Pleading—Amendment—Evidence—Burden of proof. Sarnia Transportation Co. v. Piggott, 12 O. W. R. 121.

Foreign vessel — Necessaries—Authority of Master—Liability of Owners. — Action against a foreign vessel and owners for necessaries supplied at a Canadian port to the vessel, which was under charter, the possession and control of the vessel being by the charterparty transferred to the charters, who appointed the master, and he for them the crew, and who paid their wages and the running and other expenses of the vessel. The plaintiff knew that the vessel was under charter, but not the terms of the charterparty. The trial Judge found, on conflicting testimony, that the necessaries were supplied on the order of the master and the credit of the vessel and owners, and he held the vessel limble therefor—Held, that the plaintiff ought to have the benefit of the finding in his favour, but, as the master was the servant of the charterers and nor of the owner, he had no authority to pleige the latter's credit, and, as the owner was not liable, the vessel was not. The "David Wallace" v. Bain, 23 C. L. T. 103, 8 Ex. C. R. 205.

Goods supplied on eredit of charterers — Lien — Necessaries.]—Goods, in the nature of ship's supplies, were furnished by the appellants to the charterers of certain ships while in the possession of the charterers. It was shewn that the goods were not supplied on the credit of the ships, but were charged to the charterers in the appellants' books, and accounts therefor were, in the first instance, made out to the charterers:—Held, that the appellants could not assert a lien for necessaries against the ships. Judgment in 10 Ex. C. R. 176, affirmed.

Upson-Walton Co. v. The 'Brian Born', '27 C. L. T. 341, 11 Ex. C. R. 139.

"Last voyage" - Participation in pro-"Last voyage" — Participation in pro-fits Partnership—Liability for debts of ship— Lien—Scizure of ship—Privileged debt — Supplies—Charterer—Agents — Ouner.]— A steamship lying at the port of Liverpool was chartered by the owners to P. for 6 months, for voyages between certain European ports and Canada, the hirer to bear all expenses of navigation and upkeep until she was returned to the owners. The ship was was returned to the owners. The ship was delivered to the hirer at Rotterdam, where she took on cargo, and sailed for Montreal. On arriving at Montreal she unloaded and re-loaded for a voyage to Rotterdam, with the intention of returning to Montreal, and obtained a supply of coal from the plaintiffs, which was furnished on the order of the hirer's agent at Montreal. The ship sailed to Rotterdam and returned to Montreal in about one month, touching at Havre and Quebec, discharged her cargo, and proceeded to re-load, obtaining another supply of coal from the plaintiffs in the same manner as the from the plaintins in the same manner as the first supply had been furnished. Within a few days, the price of these supplies of coal being still owing and unpaid, the hirer became insolvent, and the plaintiffs arrested the ship at Montreal, claiming special privilege upon her as derniers equipeurs in furnishing the first supply of coal on her last round voyage, the right of attachment here judgment in respect of both supplies and seizing her under the provisions of Art. 2391 seizing her under the provisions of Ah 2301 of the Civil Code and 931 of the Code of Civil Procedure: — Held, per Franklich C.J., and Davies, Maclennan, and aff, JJ., that the voyage from Montreal softerdam and return was not the ship's "naxt voyage" within the meaning of Art. 2383 (5) of the Civil Code; that the voyage out from Montreal and that returning from Rotterdam did not constitute one round voyage, but were separate and complete voyages; that, consequently, there was no privilege upon the ship for the supply of coal furnished for her voyage from Montreal to Rotterdam ; and also, that the provisions of Art. 2391 of the Civil Code did not render the ship liaor the Civil Code did not render the ship liable to seizure for personal debts of the hirer, and, consequently, that she could not be attached therefor by saisie-arret. Judgment appealed from. Jones v. Inverness Rw. and Coal Co., 16 Que. K. B. 16, affirmed, Girouard, J., dissenting. Per Davies, J.:—The "last voyage" mentioned in Art. 2383, C. C., refere oult to a voyage anding in the previous refers only to a voyage ending in the province of Quebec. Per Idington, J.: - As the terms of the charterparty expressly excluded authority in the hirer to bind the ship for any expenses of supply, and as nothing arose later that could by any implication of law confer any such authority on any one, and conter any such attractive of any one, and especially so in a port where the owners had their own agents, any possible rights that might in a proper case arise under Art. 2383 of the Civil Code, did not so arise here; and, therefore, though agreeing to the result, he expressed no opinion on the meaning of the term "last voyage" therein. Lloyd v. Gilbert, 1 Que, L. R. 115, should govern this case. Inverness Rv. and Coal Co. v. Jones, 40 S. C. R. 45, 5 E. L. R. 1.

Maritime Hen — Right to pledge credit of ship.]—The orders of a foreman of the charterers, not being the captain of a vessel, cannot create a maritime lien against such vessel.—Where a ship is chartered and supplies are furnished to the charterer with a knowledge of his position with regard to the ship, no maritime lien attaches to the ship. Upson-Walton Co. v. The "Brian Boru," The "Shaughraun," The "Monroe Doctrine," The "Reciprocity," 10 Ex. C. R. 176, 7 O. W. R. 310.

Participation in profits — Partnership — Liability for debts of ship — Lien—Privileged debt — Supplies — Charterer — Agents—Owner.] — A stipulation in a charter-party that the owner will participate in the profits with the charterer does not establish a partnership between them so as to render them jointly liable for the debts of the ship. Cf. Reid v, McFarlane, 2 Que. Q. B. 130.—Furnishing coal to a ship for its next voyage does not create a privileged debt.—The words "last voyage" in clause 5 of Art, 2383, C. C., touching the furnishing of provisions and coal to a ship, have reference to the voyage as far as the port of destination, and the lien to which they apply, ceases to exist in regard to a subsequent voyage. — The lien of the last furnisher mentioned in Arts, 331 and 333, C. P. C., not being defined in the Civil Code, cannot be reconciled with the provisions of Art. 2383, C. C.; from which it must be concluded that it does not exist.—The charterer and his agents cannot contract debts involving a lien upon the ship in the ports where the owner has his domicile or business office. Jones v, Inverness Railleay & Coal Co., 16 Que. K. B. 16.

Renewal — Option — Notice — Agents—Burden of proof — Jury,!—A charter-party made between the plaintiff and defendant companies provided that the plaintiffs should have the right of renewal, upon giving notice on or before a specified date. On the date specified the plaintiffs gave notice of renewal to M. K. & Co., who had acted as agents of defendants in connection with the negotiation of the charterparty, and the receipt and remittance of the hire of the vessel. The defendants refused to renew, on the ground that the notice required had not been given:—Held, that the authority given by the defendants to M. K. & Co. was a special authority, and that the duty devolved upon the plaintiffs of shewing that, by usage or otherwise, they had authority to receive notice in connection with the extension of the time, such notice not being incidental or necessary to their original authority. The trial Judge having refused to submit to the jury a question tendered on behalf of plaintiffs as to the authority of M. K. & Co:—Held, Graham, E.J., dissenting, that he was right in doing so.—Held, that the Judge was justified in deciding, as matter of law, that there was no proof of agency, and that there was

Time Himit for loading — Loading at port — Custom — Obligation of charterer.] — A ship, by the terms of the charter, was to land grain at Fort William before noon of the 5th December:—Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 6 O. L. R. 432, 23 C. L. T. 319, Girouard and Neabitt. J.J., dissenting, that to load at Fort William meant to load at the elevator there; that the obligation of the shipowner was to have the vessel pinced under the elevator in time to be loaded before the expiration of the time limit; and where, finding several vessels ahead of him, the captain saw that he could not be loaded by the time fixed, and left to save insurance, the obligation was not fulfilled, and the owner could not recover damages. 4. Collision.

Action for damages — Insolvency of owners — Winding-up order — Independent jurisdiction of the Admiralty Court.]—Plaintiff contended that defendants' ship being improperly navigated, coilided with theirs, thereby damaging and disabling her. The defendant company was being wound up under the Dominion Act. The Quebec Superior Court gave plaintiffs leave to take an action in rem in Admiralty against defendants' ship. Plaintiffs demurred to a paragraph in the defence filed in Admiralty which alleged that the lien should have been enforced in the Supreme Court:—Held, that plaintiff's lien existed by law and should have been enforced before the winding-up Court, that is, the Superior Court. That Court has no power to delegate its authority to the Admiralty Court. It is not res judicata, Richelieu v. Steamship "Imperial," 5 E. L. R. 64, 6

Action for damages — Preliminary Act — English rules — Non-observance of sailing rules.] — Action for damages sustained by the plaintiffs' steamer, "The Canadian," in a collision with the defendants' steamer, "The Merwin." The plaintiffs did not file a preliminary act, as required by Order XIX., r. 28, of the English Rules, which Dugas, J., held to be in force in the absence of a local rule:—Held, by Dugas, J., and by the full Court, that no evidence could be given in support of the plaintiffs' claim. "The Canadian." navigated by an American pilot, was making a landing against a current of about six miles an hour: "The Merwin," also navigated by an American pilot, was coming down stream. Both vessels before collision gave blasts which were interpreted by each ship according to American regulations. — Held, by Dugas, J., that under the circumstances C.C.L.—127.

"The Canadian" was alone to blame, — Held, in appeal, by Walkem and Drake, JJ., that both vessels were to blame, and the appeal should be allowed without costs. Per Irving, J., that both vessels were to blame, and that there should be a reference back to assess the damages to "The Canadian," and then the damages should be apportioned according to the Admiralty rule. Per Martin, J., that the appeal should be dismissed. Admiralty law - Narrow channel -Risks — Rule of the road — Right of way— Blast signals.]—The rule of the road on our rivers and lakes applicable to "narrow channels" is set out in Art. 21, R. S. C. c. 79, which applies to foreign as well as to British and Canadian ships, and is as fol-lows: "In narrow channels every steamship shall, when it is safe and practicable, keep to that side of the fairway or midchannel which lies on the starboard side of such ship::"—Held, that a channel 800 feet wide comes within the designation of "narrow channels" as mentioned above, and that a ship violated said rule when she steered towards the westward and crossed towards the channel on her port side, instead of keeping in the channel on her starboard side.—2. When two steamers are meeting on the Detroit river the descending steamer shall have the right of way; and it is no defence to an action for collision to prove that at the moment of collision it was too late to take a precaution which ought to have been taken earlier to avoid the risk of a collision, the rule being that every steamship, when approaching another ship, so as to avoid the approaching another ship, so as to avoid the risk of collision, shall slacken her speed, or stop and reverse if necessary. The more imminent the risk of collision, the more imperative is the necessity for implicit obedience to the rule.—3. Where a steamer some distance from another has indicated by the course she is steering that she cannot be considered as a steamer "meeting another end on," the state of things does not arise which renders it incumbent on her to give blast whistles indicating which side she proposes to take on passing :- Held, on appeal, affirming the above, that when the master of a ship, in danger of collision with another ship, instead of porting his helm, puts it to starboard, and so makes the collision in-evitable, the absence of a signal required by a local regulation to be given by the other ship in such circumstances, does not relieve the ship primarily responsible for the colli-sion from full liability, if the omission to give such signal did not contribute in any way to the accident. Tucker v. The "Tecum-seh," 6 O. W. R. 131, 10 Ex. C. R. 44, 149.

anchor, and a steamship, the L. O., proceeding in charge of a pilot to her dock, within the harbour of Halifax, N.S., at night in the month of January. The weather was the month of January. The weather was blustering, and intermittently clear and cloudy. On arriving at the quarantine grounds the L. O. had signalled, by guns and whistles, for the medical officer of on the east side of George's Island. After passing the northern line of George's Island the L. O. changed her course westerly to-ward her berth, and in proceeding thereon passed between the lights of two vessels anchored on the northern side of the island. While doing so she suddenly came upon the A. L. T. lying at anchor, collided with and sank her. The only person on board of the A. L. T. was a caretaker, and while admitting that he was not on deck at the time, he swore that a proper anchor-light was burning on his ship. His statement as to the anchor-light was corroborated by the captain of a fishing schooner lying close by, and that of some boatmen and labourers on the wharves. On the other hand the pilot of the L. O., the captain and the first and third officers, boatswain and boatswain's mate, and four of the seamen, all swore positively that there was no light on the A. L. T. while they were approaching her, and that she was not seen by any one until their lookout called that there was some-thing ahead. The evidence further shewed that both the officers and crew were alert at the time of the accident, and anxiously working the ship through anchored vessels in the darkness and blustering weather:— Held, that the state of facts as substantiated by the evidence for the owners of the L. O. must be accepted as correct, and that being so, the collision and subsequent loss were wholly attributable to the A. L. T. in not keeping a proper light and lookout. Dominion Coal Co. v. The Lake Ontario, 7 Ex. C. R. 403.

In an action claiming compensation for loss of the fishing schooner "Carrie E. Sayward" by being run into and sunk while at anchor by the "Reliance," the decision mainly depended on whether or not the lights of the lost schooner were burning, as the Admiralty rules required, at the time of the accident. The local Judge gave judgment against the "Reliance;" — Held, that though the evidence given was contradictory, it was amply sufficient to justify the judgment, which should not, therefore, be disturbed on appeal. Santanderino v. Vanvert, 23 S. C. R. 145. and Granby v. Menard, 21 C. L. T. 7, 31 S. C. R. 14, followed, The "Reliance" v. Conwell, 22 C. L. T. 77, 31 S. C. R. 653.

Approaching vessels — Change of course — Negligence — Nautical assessor in Appeal Court — Opinion not accepted by Court.] — Where two steamships were approaching each other at night, green light to green light, so that if each ship had kept her course they would have passed each other safely, and one at a distance between one-fourth and one-half mile away from the other changed her course, shewing first her three lights, and then her red and masthead lights only, and then, when the other ship had put her helm hard to port, changed her course again, exhibiting her three lights, she was held solely responsible for a resulting collision.—2. In this case the Court on appeal availed itself of the services of a nautical assessor, but the Court declined to adopt his opinion as to the vessel at fault, Joint Stock S. S. Co. v. The "Euphemia," The "Tordenskjold" v. Horn Joint Stock Co., of Shipoucners, II Ex. C. R. 234.

Barges in canal — Negligence — Undue speed of tug — Liability, i—While plaintiff's tug was going down Lachine Canal defendant's tug was coming up; there was a collision. As the latter obeyed all signals given by former no fault can be imputed to it. Montreal Sand and Gravel Co. v. Sincennes-McNaughton Line Co. (Que.), 6 E. L. R. 183.

Barque approached by steamer — Menauures.]—Where a steamer is proceeding on a course north seventy-two degrees west, and a barque is sailing on the starboard tack within about seven points of the wind, whose direction is east north-east, the barque is not an overtaken ship within the meaning of the regulations. Smith v. The "Empress," 21 C. L. T. 430, 8 B. C. R. 122, 7 Ex. C. R. 430.

Between foreign vessels — Jurisdiction of Canadian Court — Arrest in Canadian waters — Inevitable accident — Lookout. St. Clair Navigation Co. v. The "D. C. Whitney," 6 O. W. R. 302.

Boom — Interference with navigation—Nuisance.]—Nothing short of legislative sanction can take from anything which hinders navigation the character of a nuisance.—2. Where an interference with navigation is established, it is a public nuisance which any one specially injured or damnified by it has a right to remove.—3. While no person has the right to continuously appropriate to himself any portion of the water, or bank or shore of navigable waters, for the purpose of making up a boom of logs, the use therefor in a reasonable manner and for a reasonable period, having regard to local conditions, will not amount to an interference with navigation. Kennedy v. The "Surrey," 10 Ex. C. R. 29, 2 W. L. R. 550, 11 B. C. R. 499.

Breach of regulations—Minor breach not contributing—Lights—Negligence.]—If a collision upon the high seas has been brought about by a ship neglecting to follow her course as prescribed by the regulations for preventing collisions at sea, the other ship will not be held equally at fault because of a contravention of a statutory regulation, where such contravention could not by any possibility have contributed to the collision. 2. A vessel "hoveto" with her helm lashed is not obliged to carry the lights mentioned in article 4 of such regulations, as she is not "a vessel which from any accident is not under command. fendant steamer was using the waters of the Soulanges canal at night. On approaching the plaintiffs' bridge over the canal at or near Coteau Landing, and when about one mile distant, the steamer gave the proper signal that she intended to pass through the When she came within view of the bridge, a green light was displayed on the northern abutment, which, according to established custom and usage, indicated that the bridge was open for the passage of ships. Then the steamer repeated the signal that she intended to pass through the bridge; but before she reached the bridge those on board discovered that the bridge was not open. Everything was done by those on board to avert a collision as soon as they became aware that the bridge was not open. but such measures failed to wholly prevent collision, although largely mitigating the force of the impact. It was proved that the bridge-keeper was asleep when the defendant steamer was approaching the bridge:
—Held, that, upon the facts, the defendant steamer had not infringed rule 5 of the Dominion Canals Regulations or any rule of law, and was in no way at fault for the collision. Canada Atlantic Rvc. Co. v. The "Nicaragua," 11 Ex. C. R. 67, 3 E. L. R. 305, 32 Que. S. C. 134.

Canal regulations 1st May (1895), s. 19 (d) — Construction of — Passage into Lachine Canal — Several vessels waiting to enter. — By the Canal Regulations of 1st May (1895), s. 19 (d), it is provided that "when several boats or vessels are lying by or are waiting to enter any lock or canal, they shall lie in single tier and at a distance of not less than 300 feet from such lock or entrance, except where local condi-tions may otherwise require, and each boat or vessel for the purpose of passing through shall advance in the order in which it may be lying in such tier, except in the case of vessels of the first class to which priority of passage is granted as above."—The steamof physical is granted as above.—In scaling ship "Havana" was about to enter the south lock (No. 1) of the Lachine Canal, when the lockmaster ordered her to keep back and let the "Prescott" enter first, the latter vessel being first-class and entitled to latter vessel being first-class and entired to priority of passage under above regulation. At the time the "Havana" advanced to enter the lock, there was but one boat, a lumber barge, at the canal entrance, and she had waived her right of entrance, not desiring to propose a support of the contract of desiring to go forward at that time. The "Havana" backed out just as the "Prescott" crushed into the lock entering with such speed that she crashed through the upper gates, bringing down the contents of the upper basin. The rush of water drove the "Prescott" out of the lock and dashed her against the "Havana:"—Held, that the "Prescott" was solely to blave for the "Prescott" was solely to blame for the accident; the conduct of the "Hayana" being proper in every respect.—Judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada, 6 E. L. R. 100, and of the Exchequer Court of Canada, 19 Que. K. B. 245, affirmed. "Prescott" v. "Havana"; Taylor v. Richelieu & Ont. Nav. Co., C. R. [1910] A. C. 90; 7 E. L.

Changing course.]—When a collision is inevitable, the vessel not in fault is justified in changing her proper course, with the object of avoiding or lessening the effect of the collision. Rudolph v. The "Arranmore," 11 Ex. C. R. 21.

Contributory negligence.] — Facts of the case required that damages should be divided between the charterers of the tug and the owners of the barge in sums proportionate to the negligence of the persons in charge, and that, inasmuch as the sum to be charged against the tug was equal to amount of towage claim, the latter would be declared compensated as at the date of the judgment, the defendant to pay the costs of the principal demand and the principal plaintiff to pay the costs of the cross-demand. Crossing ships — Regulations—Vessels crossing so as to involve risk of collision— (Collision off the entrance to harbour.)—
Where two vessels were approaching each other in Canadian waters on courses which converged at a point outside a harbour where ench vessel expected to pick up a pilot:—Held, that, as they were so doing on courses and at speeds which would probably bring them to that point so as to present a danger of collision when they renched it, they were vessels crossing so as to involve risk of collision within the meaning of Arts. 19, 22, and 23 of the Regulations of 1897, which had been substituted for those contained in Canadian R. S. c. 79; and that consequently it was the duty, negligently disregarded, of the respondents' vessel, which had the appellants' vessel on her own starboard side, to keep out of her way, there being no special circumstances within the meaning of Art. 27 to authorise a departure from that rule.—Held, also, that the appellants' vessel was not to blame under Art. 21. It was not shewn that with reasonable care she ought to have taken action thereunder earlier than she did. Judgment in 37 S. C. R. 284, reversed, "Al-bano" v. Parisian, C. R. [1907] A. C. 193.

not be heard when Court assisted by nautical assessors. —On 21st July, 1906, about 2.13 p.m. the steamer "Princess Victoria" (length 300 ft., speed 19 to 20 knots) collided with and sank the steamer "Chehalis" (length 59.3 ft., speed about 9 knots) both vessels being on their way westward out of Vancouver Harbour. The day was fine and clear. The "Princess Victoria" was headed clear. The "Princess Victoria" was neaded straight down and through the Narrows, the intention being to pass between the "Chehalis" and a launch, which at that time where some 250 yards apart. The "Princess Victoria" sounded two whistles to indicate to the "Chehalis" that she would pass her on the port side. At the moment the signal was given the "Chehalis" changed her course from west to southward, bringing her across the bow of the "Princess Vic-toria." The engines of the latter were at once reversed at full speed but the two vessels collided and the "Chehalis" was swept under the "Princess Victoria" and sank. Six actions were brought to recover damages for loss of life and personal injuries and loss of effects on the alleged ground that the collision was caused by the negligent navigation of the "Princess Victoria." At trial, Martin, J., held, that the master of the "Princess Victoria" gave the signal indicating his course at the earliest time consistent with the position of the vessels, and that he did not neglect to take any proper precautions which a prudent and skilful navigator should have taken under the circumstances, and dismissed all the actions with costs. When the Court is assisted by nautical assessors, whose duty it is to advise on matters of nautical skill and knowledge, the evidence of witnesses, tendered for expert testimony purely, will not be received. The Supreme Court of British Columbia (Irving, J., dissenting) decided that the "Princess Victoria" was to blame and awarded damages and costs to all the plaintiffs except the master of the "Che-halis." The Judicial Committee reversed the judgment of Supreme Court of British Columbia and restored the judgment of Martin, J., at trial. Bryce v. Can. Pac. Rw. Co., C. R. [1909] A. C. 490.

Tishing vessels — Sufficiency of anchor light — Carcless navigation — Costs—Witness fees — Parties.]—The C. E. S., a fishing schooner, while lying at anchor on Bank Quero, was run into and sumk by another fishing vessel, the R., which was changing her berth in the night time. The weather was fine and the sea smooth. The C. E. S. was displaying a light in order to comply with the regulations; but it was claimed by the crew of the R. that they did not see the light until it was too late to avoid a collision. It was shewn that the R. had been fishing in a berth four or five miles distant from the C. E. S., that her crew knew that there were a number of vessels fishing in their vicinity, and that the master of the R. took no extra precautions in sailing at night over the closely crowded fishing grounds, but on the contrary went below himself, leaving the ship under full sail to the charge of those on deck :-Held, that the R. was solely to blame for the collision. The crew of the ship of the plaintiffs, twelve in number, were landed in Nova Scotia, and were maintained at Halifax until they gave their evidence on the trial, a period of about one week. Before the trial was commenced, they were added as plaintiffs in the cause. Judgment was given in favour of the plaintiffs, condemning the defendant ship in damages and costs to be taxed. Upon the taxation the plaintiffs sought to tax the amount expended in maintaining the crew while they waited for the trial, and also their ordinary witness fees during the trial, it having been shewn that they were kept for the sole pur-pose of giving evidence. Counsel for the defendant objected on the ground that the crew, having been made parties to the action, were not entitled to any fees as witnesses, and that it was unreasonable that they should receive any sustenance fees. The District Registrar referred the matter to the local Judge, who:-Held, that the parties to an action are entitled to the usual witness fees, when they attend the trial to give evidence. — Held, also, that the plaintiffs were entitled to tax a reasonable sum as sustenance fees for the crew while they awaited the trial. Convell v. The "Reliance," 21 C. L. T. 429, 7 Ex. C. R. 181.

Fog — Sailing rules.]—The defendant steamer bound for St. John, while steering in a dense fog, a N.-W. by N. course, heard three blasts of a fog horn from the plaintiff's vessel, a little before the beam on the port side. The steamer was then going at a speed of from 4 to 6 knots an hour, and kept on her course. The plaintiff's vessel continued sounding her horn at regular intervals, and was proceeding on a northerly course before a light wind barely sufficient to enable her to keep steerage way. About 10 minutes after the horn was heard by the steamer, she struck the vessel on her starboard side, and sunk her:—Held, that the steamer was solely to blame, as she had infringed Art, 16 of the regulations by not stopping after the horn was heard. Roberts V. The "Paunce," 7 Ex. C. R. 390, The "Paunce," 22 C. L. T. 129.

Fog — Speed — Damages.]—In an action for collision, where the Court found both vessels in fault for moving at an immoderate rate of speed in foggy weather, and that such immoderate speed was the chief, if not the sole, cause of the collision, the owner of the damaged ship was allowed to recover only half his loss. Wineman v. The "Hiacatha," 7 Ex. C. R. 448.

Foreign waters — Admiralty law — Foreign bottoms—Jurisdiction.]—A foreign vessel passing through a river dividing Canada from the United States, under a treaty allowing free passage to ships of both nations, is not, even when on the Canadian side, within Canadian control so as to be subject to arrest on a warrant from the Court of Admiralty. The warrant to arrest a foreign vessel cannot be issued until she is within the jurisdiction of the Court.—Quære, have the Courts of Admiralty in Canada the same jurisdiction as those in England to try an action in rem by one foreign ship against another for damages incurred by a collision in foreign waters? Judgment of the Exchequer Court, Toronto Admiralty District, 6 O. W. R. 302, 10 Ex. C. R. 1, reversed; Idington, J., dissenting. The "D. C. Whitney" v. St. Clair Novigation Co., 27 C. L. T. 224, 38 S. C. R. 200

Foreign waters - Application of foreign rules — "Safe and practicable" — "Narrow channel" — Harbour.] — Where a collision occurs in American inland waters and action is brought in the Exchequer Court of Canada for damages, the Court will apply the rule of the road as it obtains under the American Sailing Rules for the purpose of determining the question of liability for the collision. Article 25 of the American Rules provides that "in narrow channels every steam vessel shall, when it is safe and practicable, keep to that side of the fare-way or mid-channel which lies on the starboard side of such vessel:"—Held, that the words "safe and practicable" must be taken to imply that the vessel is only obliged to take this course when she can do so without danger of collision. The inner harbour of danger of collision. The inner harbour of Boston, Mass., containing wharves and an-chorage for ships on either side, where ships and steam-ings are continually plying back and forth, is not a "narrow channel" with-in the meaning of Article 25 of the above Rules, and the provisions of that Article do not apply to cases of collision there. Improper navigation — Manawere in agony of collision not proximate cause.]—in cross actions arising out of a collision of two steamers:—Held. defendant's steamer was in fault. Reference to ascertain damages. "Ocland" v. "Regulus," 6 E. L. R. 587.

Interlocutory application for consolidation of two actions - Appeal from order of local Judge - Costs.] action for damages against the defendant ship for collision was brought in the Nova Scotia Admiralty District by the owner of the injured ship on the 15th September, The following day a similar action was begun by the charterer and owner of the cargo of such injured ship. On the 28th September an application was made by the defendant to the local Judge for an order to consolidate the two actions, or in the alternative for an order that the defendant ship be released upon tendering bail to the amount of her appraised value, and that a commission of appraisement be issued, to ascertain her value in her then condition. On the 3rd October the local Judge made an order that a commission of appraisement issue, and that upon bail being given for the amount of such appraised value in each of the actions, the ship be discharged from arrest, and that the two actions be tried together. An appeal from such order was taken to the Exchequer Court. Upon the appeal no objection was taken to the order, so far as it directed an appraisement, or to the direction that the two actions be tried together, except so far as that direction might be held to affect the question of the amount of bail to be given-it only being necessary to give bail to the amount of her appraised value to secure the release of the ship if the actions were consolidated. It was, however, urged that the local Judge should have ordered the consolidation of the two actions, and that the ship should be released in respect of both upon giving bail to the amount of her appraised value: — Held, that it was a matter within the discretion of the local Judge to grant or refuse an order for consolidation, and as such ought not to be interfered with on appeal .-2. That the order should be varied to allow in the alternative the ship to be released in respect of both actions and claims made, upon payment into Court of her appraised value and the amount of her freight, if any, -3. This relief not having been asked before the local Judge, the Court on appeal declined to allow the costs of appeal to either party. Acticselskabet Borgestad v.

King's ship — Negligence—Public work—(Irouen.] — Where a collision occurs between a ship belonging to a subject and one belonging to the King, the King's ship is not liable to arrest for damages; and, in the absence of statutory provision therefor, no action will lie against the King for the negligence of his officers or servants on board of the ship. 2. In this case the steamship "Prefontaine," belonging to the suppliant, was damaged in a collision with a loaded scow which was fastened to the starboard side of the steam tug "Champlain," and which the latter was towing, from the dredge "Lady Minto," then working in the Controcour channel of the river St. Lawrence. The dredge, steam-tug, and scow were the property of His Majesty:—Held, that the facts did not disclose a case of negligence by the officers or servants of the Crown on a public work for which the Crown would be liable under clause (c) of s. 16 of the Exchequer Court Act, 50 & 51 V. c. 16, Paul v. The King, 24 C. L. T. 389, 9 Ex. C. R. 245.

Liability — Imperial regulations.]—In a collision in Canadian waters between the steamship W. and the schooner M. A., the W. was found to be at fault in a matter that occasioned the collision. It was also found that the M. A. had contravened the regulations for preventing collisions in Canadian waters; but that such contravention did not contribute to the accident. In an action against the W. by the widow and universal legatee of the owner of the M. A.: —Held, that the W. alone was to blame, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. 2. Where a collision occurs on the high seas, and the nrovisions of s. 419 of the Merchants Shipping Act, 1894, and the Imperial regulations for preventing collisions at sea, are in force, the obligation is imposed on a vessel that has infringed a regulation which is prima facie applicable to the case to prove, not only that such infringement did not, but that it could not, by any possibility, have contributed to the accident; but when the collision occurs in Canadian waters, and the Act respecting the navigation of Canadian waters, R. S. C. c. 79, and the regulations for the prevention of collisions made by the Governor-General in council, are in force, the vessel which contravenes one of them will be held to be in fault unless such contravention has contributed to the collision. Liability in damages — Breach of regulations — Presumption of fault—Vessel at anchor — Reasonable care and skill.]—

Contrary to the rule applied in England, a breach of the regulations of navigation creates no presumption, in Canada, that a collision following the same was due to it, and the party charging fault must establish it in the ordinary way.—2. Where a steamer collides with a dredge at anchor, it is no defence to an action for damages, that the dredge was brought up in an improper place and did not exhibit proper lights, if it be shewn that the collision could have been avoided by the exercise of reasonable skill and care on the part of the moving vessel. Montreal Harbour Commissioners v. The "Albert M. Marshall," 34 Que. S. C. 209.

Lien for damages by collision of a vessel owned by a company in liquidation under Winding-up Court, and no action in rem will lie against the vessel in Admiralty. Nor will leave granted by the Winding-up Court to proceed in rem before the Admiralty Division of Exchequer Court confer jurisdiction on the latter to deal with the case. Richelieu & Ont. Nav. Co. v. "Imperial," 35 Que. S. C. 312, 10 Que. P. R. 164.

Narrow channel - Rule of the road -Look-out - Meeting ships - Harbour-Lights and signals - Negligence-Evidence —Damages.]—A pilot in charge of a ship, or a man at the wheel, is not a sufficient look-out within the rules of navigation for preventing collisions in narrow channels. Judgment of the Exchequer Court of Canada Jugment of the Exenequer Court of Canada in Richelieu and Ontario Navigation Co. v. The "Cape Breton," 25 C. L. T. 57, 9 Ex. C. R. 67, affirmed. Where meeting ships are in collision, and one of them has n.g. lected to observe the regulations, there must be evidence of gross dereliction of duty or want of skill in navigation in order to make out a case for apportionment of damages against the other ship. Where a ship navi-gating a narrow channel has no proper look-out, and neglects to signal her course, at a reasonable distance, thus perplexing and misleading a meeting ship, the former is alone responsible for all damages caused by collision, even if, in the agony of collision, a different manœuvre on the part of the other ship might have avoided the accident. Judgment below reversed, Girouard, J., dissenting. The Richelieu & Ontario Navigation Co. v. "Cape Breton," C. R. [1907] A. C.

Nautical assessors — Evidence of experts.]—Where the Court at the trial of a collision action has the assistance of a nautical assessor to advise on all matters requiring nautical or other professional knowledge, the evidence of experts as to the management of the ships shortly previous to the collision is inadmissible. Montreal Harbour Commissioners v. The "Universe," 10 Ex. C. R. 305.

Navigation-Narrow channels-"White Law," Rule 24 — Right of way.]—Rule 24 of the "White Law" governing navigation in United States waters provides "that in all narrow channels where there is a current, and in the rivers St. Mary, St. Clair, Detroit, Niagara, and St. Lawrence, when two steamers are meeting, the descending steamer shall have the right of way, and shall, before the vessels shall have arrived within the distance of one-half mile of each other, give the signal necessary to indicate which side she elects to take:"—Held, that this rule has no reference to the general course of vessels navigating the waters mentioned, but applies only to meeting vessels. Therefore a steamer descending the St. Clair with a tow was not in fault when she followed the custom of up-going vessels to hug the United States shore. The "Shenandoah" with a tow was ascending the St. Clair river in a fog and hugging the United States shore; the "Carmona" was coming down the river; and they sighted each other when a few hundred yards apart. They simultaneously gave the port signal, which was repeated by the "Carmona." The "Shen-andoah" then gave the starboard signal, and steered accordingly. The "Carmona," thinking there was no room to pass between the other vessel and one lying at the elevator other vessel and one lying at the elevator dock, reversed her engines. She passed the "Shenandoah," but on going ahead again collided with the vessel in tow.—Held, reversing the judgment of a local Judge, 8 Ex. C. R. 1. that the "Shenandoah" was not in fault; but that, as the local Judge had found the "Carmona" not to blame, and as her carrier's ever it. and as her captain's error in judgment, if it was such, in thinking he had not room to pass between the two vessels, was committed while in the agonies of collision, the judgment as to her should be affirmed. Davidson v. Georgian Bay Navigation Co., 23 C. L. T. 79, 33 S. C. R. 1.

Navigation—Obstruction—Action claiming damages for injuries done to plaintiff's wharf as the result of defendant's ferry steamer "Chebucto" colliding with it in a fog, and carrying away part of the wharf—Nuisance—Abatement—Constitutional law. Hunt v. Dartmouth Ferry Commission (N.S. 1910), 9 E. L. R. 249.

Negligence.] — In a dangerous and crowded channel the captain of a vessel, especially going down stream, must slacken speed, and, if overtaking another vessel, is bound to pass at such a distance that no harm will result to the other vessel from suction or displacement waves.—The look-out man must devote himself solely to that duty, and if engaged at other work so that his attention is divided, it is not a proper compliance with the rule as to a proper look-out, Caducell v. The "C. F. Bielman," 10 Ex. C. R. 155, 7 O. W. R. 393.

Negligence—Change of course—Appeal—New grounds — Assexsors — Supreme Court of Canada,]—A court of appeal should not consider a ground not previously relied on, unless satisfied that it has all the evidence bearing upon it that could have been produced at the trial, and that the party against whom it is urged could not have satisfactorily explained it under examination, — In this case damages were claimed from the owners of the "Euphemia" for collision with the plaintiff's ship, and the latter in their preliminary act charged that the "Euphemia" was in fault for not reversing her encines. The Exchequer Court judgment held the plaintiffs' ship alone in fault, and on appeal the majority of the Euphemia, when she saw the other ship attempting to cross her bow, held too long on her course instead of reversing.—Fitzpatrick, C.J., and Davies, J., were of opiniten that under the circumstances this point was open to the plaintiffs.—Remarks upon the necessity for expert nautical advice in collision cases before the Supreme Court of Canada.—Judgment in Joint Stock S. S. Oo. v. The "Euphemia." The "Tordenskjold" v. Horn Joint Stock Co. of Shipoweners, II Ex. C. R. 234, affirmed. The "Tordenskjold" v. The "Euphemia." 41 S. C. R. 154, 6 E. L. R. 20.

Negligence — Failure to hear signal—Evidence.]—The S.S. "Senlac" was coming out of Hallifax harbour, taking he eastern side of the channel. There was a dense fog at the time and the fog signals were sounded at regular intervals. She was making about six knots, and having passed George's Island heard the whistle of an incoming steamer. Fog signals were given in reply, and when the incoming vessel, the "Rosalind", was estimated to be about half a mile off, the "Senlac" gave a single short blast and directed her course to starboard. The "Rosalind" replied to this signal and stopped her engines. Within a few seconds the "Senlac" was seen about a ship's length away on the port bow and almost at the same moment the latter gave two short blasts on her whistle and swung to port threatening to cross the "Rosalind's" bow. The "Rosalind's" engines were immediately put "full speed astern" but too late to avoid a collision in which the "Senlac" was seriously damaged. At the trial of an action by the latter reliance was placed on the failure of the "Rosalind" to respond to her signals but the first signal admitted to have been heard on the "Rosalind" was the one short blast when the "Senlac" was in fault in continuing on her course when the vessels were quite near together instead of stopping and reversing and was alone to blame for the collision, and that the failure to hear her signals was not negligence on the part of the "Rosalind," and did not contribute in any material degree to the accident. Judgment of Supreme Court of Canada, 41 S. C. R. 54, 6 E. L. R. 77, affirmed, Judgment of the Nova Scotia Admiralty District est saide, Sendac Co. v. "Rosalind," C. R. [1909] A. C. 441,

Negligence — Harbour—Regulations.]
—Articles 11 and 15 (d) of the Collision Regulations of the 9th February, 1897, do not apply to the case of a ship made fast to a lawful wharf in a harbour.—Held, on the facts, that a vessel which ran into another so moored was guilty of negligence. Rank Shipping Co. v. The "City of Scattle," 24 C. L. T. 363, 10 B. C. R. 513.

Negligence—Improper change of course
—New view of facts presented to Court.]— Appeal to Supreme Court of Canada; dismissed as a view of the facts was presented which had not been suggested either before the Local Admiralty Judge or the Exchequer Court. The "Tordenskjold" v. The "Euphemia," 6 E. L. R. 90.

Negligence — Ship at scharf — Regulations.]—Articles 11 and 15 (d) of the Imperial Collisions Regulations of 1897 do not apply to the case of a ship made fast to a lawful wharf in a harbour. On the evidence, a vessel which ran into another so moored was held not guilty of negligence. Bank Shipping Co. v. The "City of Seattle," 9 Ex. C. R. 146.

Negligence — Sinking of vessel by swell of steamer — Proof of fault — Cargo — Insurance — Bar to action — Amendment of preliminary acts after trial.]—In order to support an action for damages in a case where a vessel is sunk by the swell caused by a passing steamer, it is necessary distinctly to prove that the sinking was due to the fault of the persons on board the steamer charged as the wrongdoer, or from the fault of those persons and of those on board the vessel that was sunk.—2. The payment of insurance to the owner of the cargo is no bar to an action brought by him to recover its value from the steamer that caused the loss.—3. The Court will not allow the preliminary acts to be amended after trial. Northern Elevator Co. v. Richelieu & Ontario Navigation Co., 32 Que. S. C. 52.

Negligence in collision cases discussed — Undue speed — Manœuvres in agony of collision—Rule of road. The "Rosalind" v. The "Senlac." 6 E. L. R. 77.

Overtaking vessel — Cause of collision — Signals — Onus — Opinion of assessors — Damages — Judgment — Antedating, — In a collision action, there is, in order to establish contributory neeligence, an onus on the overtaking vessel to shew that the overtaken one also violated the regulations and thereby contributed to the disaster—Held, on the facts in this case, that such onus had not been discharged.—Per Hunter, C.J.:—Article 24 of the regulations is meant to assure those on the overtaken vessel that they need not concern themselves with the movements of the overtaking ship, provided the former keeps its course and speed.—The sole question being whether either or both vessels committed a breach of the regulations, the Court alone must decide, regardless of the opinion of the assessors.—Rule for assessment of damages in Admiralty cases—The judgment was antedated where one of the parties died after the argument, but

Pleading — Preliminary act — Amendment. Northern Elevator Co. v. Richelieu & Ontario Navigation Co., 3 E. L. R. 311.

Reasonable care and skill — Admiralty law — Damages. The "Havana" v. The "Prescott," 5 E. L. R. 219.

Reference to the registrar—Inspection of ship and cargo.] — On reference to a registrar, liability of damage caused by defendant ship having been admitted, it is not necessary to insert in the order a direction for the registrar to inspect the vessels concerned. Stockham v. "Spray." 10 W. L. R 448.

Responsibility for damages — Reference — Advice of assessors.]—In an action by a steamship against a tug for damages arising out of a collision at the entrance to Vancouver harbour, it was held, upon the evidence, that the steamship was solely responsible for the collision, and a reference was directed to assess damages to the tug upon its counterclaim.—The case appearing to be eminently one to be decided by practical seamanship, the local Judge in Admiralty adopted the advice of nautical assessors who sat with him. "Charmer" v. "Bermuda" (1910), 15 W. L. R. 132.

Right of way.]—In the case of a river traversed annually by thousands of vessels and used by two nations, a custom which in effect supersedes a statutory rule ought to be established by the most conclusive and cogent proof; and when it is sought to make it binding on foreign as well as domestic vessels, the proof should include some convincing evidence that a knowledge of the alleged custom existed among mariners generally, and extended to mariners sailing on vessels carrying a foreign flag and habitually traversing a busy river. Rule of road — Evidence — Preliminary act — Amendment — Pleadings — Admiralty practice.]—In an action in Admiralty claiming damages for injury to the plaintiffs' ship, the "Neepawah," through collision with the "Westmount," belonging to the defendants, the preliminary act and statement of claim alleged that the port quarter of the latter struck the stern of the "Neepawah." The local Judge, in his judgment, held that the evidence shewed a collision between the two ships stern to stern, and, against objection by the defendants' counsel, of his own motion allowed the statement of claim to be amended to conform to such evidence, stating that its admission had not been objected to, and that the defendants were not misled :—Held, that such amended to remain the statement of claim to be amended to conform to such evidence, stating that its admission had not been objected to, and that the defendants were not misled :—Held, that such amended.

ment should not have been made; that it set up a new case and one entirely different from that presented by the preliminary act and statement of claim, and greatly prejudiced the defence; and that the local Judge was wrong in stating that the evidence was admitted without objection, as it was protested against at the trial.—Held, also, that errors in the preliminary act may be corrected by the pleadings, but, if not, the parties will be held most strongly to what is contained in their act.—Held, per Davies, Maclennan, and Juff, JJ,, that the plaintiffs had not satisfactorily established that the collision, even that charged under the amendment, had actually occurred. — Per Fitzpatrick, CJ., that the evidence proved that no collision between the vessels took place.—Hington, J., concurred in the judgment allowing the appeal. — Judgment in New Ontario S. S. Co. v. Montreal Transportation Co., 11 Ex. C. R. 113, reversed. Montreal Transportation Co., 40 S. C. R. 160.

Rules of navigation — Determination as to vessels in fault — Precautions—Special circumstances — Loss of profits.] — Just after plaintiff's steamer, the "Caspian", had backed out of her slip and was starting on her voyage, the defendant's yacht backed out from her slip and a collision took place: the special circumstances of the case, to observe the dictates of the highest prudence by moving ahead. The damages given included the loss of profits which plaintiff's steamer would have earned on Saturday following and the estimated profits lost by the cancellation of the proposed voyage then just begun. Steamer and sailing ship — Action by owner, master and crew of a schooner sunk in a collision with defendant steamer: —Held, that the cause of the collision was the schooner's going about without being compelled to and without any good reason for so doing, thereby embarrassing defendant ship which would otherwise have cleared her. Watt v. "John Irvein," 7 E. L. R. 7; affirmed. Hb. 281.

M. the latter was on a course of W.S.W., standing across the harbour, towards, and to the northward and eastward of Rocky Point black buoy. that time until a collision occurred between the two vessels, they were in full view of each other. While the J. M. was under way on the starboard tack and going about three knots an hour, the T. was coming straight up the harbour at nearly full speed. The latter did not change her course, nor execute any manœuvre, nor make any attempt by slackening speed or stopping or reversing to keep out of the way of the J. M. The bow of the T. struck the J. M. on the starboard side aft of the fore-rigging and nearly amidships, cutting her almost through from her hatches to her keel, causing her to become a total wreck: -Held, that the T. had infringed the provisions of Arts. 20, 22, 23, and 25 of the rules for preventing collisions at sea, and was responsible for the collision. Brine v. The "Tiber," 6 Ex. C. R. 402.

Steamer approaching tug and tow—Extra care. I—Held, a tug with barges in tow not having full facility of movement, it is the duty of a steamer approaching them to allow for their encumbered and comparatively disabled state and to take additional care. 2. When a steamer going up the river is at the foot of a narrow and winding channel and has warning of a desceading tug and tow, her proper course is to stop and wait till they have passed clear. If she undertakes to proceed up the channel and meet them in it, she does so at her own risk. 3. When a steamer collides with a tow, it is no defence to an action of damages that the tug and tow were not initially on their proper course, if it be shewn that the collision could have been avoided by the exercise of reasonable skill and care on the part of the unencumbered vessel. Montreal Transportation Co. v. Steamer "Norcalk," 37 Que. S. C. 97, 7 E. L. R. 365, affirmed, 7 E. L. R. 389.

Strict observance of rules of road -Look-out.]-In a case of collision, one vessel cannot justify a departure from the rules of navigation by the fact that the other vessel was also disregarding the rules. On the contrary, a primary disregard of the rules by one vessel imposes on the other vessel the duty of special care, prompt action, and maritime skill, as well as the duty of acting in strict conformity to the rules applicable to the latter in the circumstances. — Collision regulations have been framed for the protection of lives and property in navigation and are so strictly enforced that even where a vessel commits a comparatively venial error it cannot be absolved from the consequences.—The rules of the road must be strictly observed, and when they are violated by both vessels the Court will hold them equally liable. Canadian Lake & Ocean Navigation Co. v. The "Dorothy," 10 Ex. C. R. 163, 7 O. W. R.

Taxation of costs — Commission on bail. —Held, that a party putting in bail in a collision action in the form of a guarantee company's bond was entitled to a commission fee thereon not exceeding 10% of total amount of bond. (See English Admiralty Orders, 21a.) Richelieu & Ont. Nav. Co. v. "Cape Breton," 11 Ex. C. R. 297

Taxation of costs — Commission on bail.] — Held, that defendant was entitled to have costs of band of a guarantee company, given as bail in a collision action, taxed in the bill of costs against the plaintiff at the rate of 1% on total amount of security given in said bond. Montreal Harbour Commissioners v. "Universe, 11 Ex. C. R. 229.

Towboat — Negligence — Injury to tow — Inevitable accident.]—In an action against the owners of a tug for damages for negligence in towing the plaintiff's schooner, whereby she was injured, it appeared from the evidence that the schooner in tow, going up the Tusket river, arrived at a narrow part of the river, and, having to make a sudden turn at a critical point in the river, was struck by a sudden squall of wind and forced on shore:—Held, that the injury was due to inevitable accident, the tug being sufficiently powerful, and having been properly managed by those on board of it. The action was, therefore, dismissed. Atvocod v. Cann, 40 N. S. R. 136.

Tug and tow - Damage by overtaking ship - Displacement wave - Right of action - Pleadings - Amendment.] - Actions arising out of the sinking of the barge "Huron" in the Soulanges canal on the night of the 8th May, 1905, the occurrence being charged by the plaintiffs to be due to the negligence of the defendants, owners of the steamer "Hamilton," which overtook and passed the "Huron" while being towed through the canal laden with wheat. The plaintiffs alleged that the "Hamilton" passed the tug and tow at such an excessive rate of speed that owing to the suction produced by the passage of the "Hamilton" through the water, and to her displacement wave, the "Huron" was driven against the bank of the canal and subsequently sank :-Held, that, as the plaintiffs had failed to shew that the accident to the "Huron" was the result of negligence of those on board the "Hamilton," and as the evidence supported the allegation of the defendants that the accident was due to the improper and unskilful navigation of the "Fluron" the actions must be dismissed. Northern Elevator Co. v. Richelieu & Ontario Navigation

Co., 11 Ex. C. R. 25.
On appeal, held, that, as the essential question involved in the case was purely one of fact, there being no presumption one way or the other as to how the accident occurred, there was no reason to disturb the finding of the trial Judge, Oglivie Flour Mills Co. v. Richelieu & Ontario Navigation Co., Northern Elevator Co. v. Richelieu & Ontario Navigation Rve. Co. v. Richelieu & Ontario Navigation Co., 12 Rx. C. R. 231.

Tug and tow — Damage to tow by stranding — Negligence of tug — Inevitable accident — Damages — Limitation of liability.]—The doctrine of "inevitable accident" as appearing in St. Clair v. The "D. C. Whitney," 10 Ex. C. R. 1, is binding in this case. On the evidence defendants, tug owners, held liable for damages to tow and cargo, having had no look-out, and improperly navigating the tug, thereby stranding plaintiff's barge:—Held, further, following Sewell v, British, 9 S. C. R. 530, that limitation clause 12 in The Canadian Shipping Act, applied only to cases of damages caused by colliding vessels, and that it cannot be invoked to limit defendants' liability in such a case as this, Fullum v, Waldie Brothers, 13 O. W, R. 236.

Tug and tow — Lights — Look-out — Course of navigation.] — The rule that where a vessel is beling towed "the tug is servant of the tow" does not apply to the case of a steam-barge towing two other barges, the whole under the control of those on board the steam-barge towing two barges, not exhibiting her regulation lights before sunrise, having no proper look-out, too great a length of tow-line. no additional tug to assist, and proceeding on an improper course in view of obstacles ahead, is liable in damages for a collision that takes place in consequence. Montreal Harbour Commissioners v. Tho "Bay State," 31 Que. S. C. 10.

Tug and tow — Look-out — Absence of proper signals. |—Held, under the circumstances of this case, that the Bay State and tow were in fault upon the following grounds: (1st) because the barge Bath had no pilot, and no proper look-out was kept on the Bay State or her tow; (2nd) those in charge of the Bay State and her tow neglected to take the precautions required under the special circumstances of the case, the tow ropes being too long, and no attempt having been made to shorten them; the Bay State had no look-out, and she made no signals to the tow or to the S.S. Universe, which she appeared to have sighted before the Universe saw her; (3rd) there was no additional tug to control the tow, more particularly the last barge, the Bath; (4th) neither the steam barge Bay State nor the barges in tow exhibited proper regulation lights, though they had got under way and the collision occurred before sunrise; (5th) the steam barge Bay State and tow should not have taken the St. Mary's current, as they did, with the tow in such condition as it was proved to be, more particularly in view of the position of the dredges of the Harbour Commissioners, and the place where they were moored, of which the pilots on board the Bay State and Berk-shire were well aware; (6th) after the collision occurred the steam barge Bay State and her tow continued down to Quebec without stopping to inquire what damage had been done. — Held, further that the screw steamer Universe and the dredges of the Harbour Commissioners were not at fault, and that the Bontell Steel Barge Company, the owners of the steam barge Bay State. and of the barges Berkshire and Bath, and the said steam barges Bay State and Bath, were liable for all the damages resulting from the collision. Montreal Harbour Commissioners v. The "Universe," 10 Ex. C. R.

Tug and tow — Ship at anchor—Negligence of tow.]—A tug with the ship "Wandrian" in tow left a wharf at Parrsboro', N.S., to proceed down the river to sea. The schooner "Helen M." was at anchor in the channel, and the tug directed its course so as to pass her on the port side, when another vessel was seen coming out from a slip on that side. The tug then, when near the "Heien M," changed her course without giving any signal, and tried to cross her bow to pass down on the starboard side, and in doing so the "Wandrian" struck her, inflicting serious injury. In an action against the "Wandrian" by the owners of the "Helen " the captain of the former insisted that the schooner was in the middle of the channel, which was about 400 feet wide, but the local Judge found as a fact that she was on the eastern side :-Held, affirming the judgment of the local Judge, 11 Ex. C R. 1, that the navigation of the tug was faulty and shewed negligence; that if the "Helen M." was on the eastern side of the channel, as found by the Judge, there was plenty of room to pass on her port side, and if, as contended, she was in the middle of the channed, she could easily have been passed to starboard; and that in attempting to cross over and pass to starboard, when she was so near the "Helen M." as to render a collision almost inevitable, was negligence on the tug's part, and that the "Helen M." exercised proper vigilance and was not negligent in failing to lengthen her anchor chains, as the "Wandrian" was too close and had not signalled .- Held, also, that the tow was liable for such negligence in the navigation of the tug. The "Wandrian" v. Hatfield, 27 C. L. T. 312, 38 S. C. R. 431.

Vessel at anchor — Proximate cause of injury to person—Negligence.]—A tug attached to a scow loaded with coal approached a bridge, the piers of which were being repaired by a railway contractor. The fairway was partly obstructed by a scow connected with the work, but the captain of the tug, after viewing the situation, was of opinion that he could get through. In doing so, he brushed slightly against the scow, at the further end of which, on a boom stick in the water, was the plaintiff, engaged in an endeavour to swing or push the scow further around and out of the way of the tug. The plaintiff was crushed against a pile by the scow and severely injured:—
Held, reversing the decision of Morrison, J., that the master of the tug was negligent in not stopping, and then making certain that it was safe to proceed. Paduleroga V. Canadian Canning Co., 5 W. L. R. 196, 12 B. C. R. 468.

Vessel "hove-to" — Look-out—Manwuvre to avoid collision — Pleading—Preliminary act — Evidence — Salvage.]—A schooner "hove-to," with her wheel made fast by a becket which could be removed instantly, her look-out and wheelsman properly stationed and maintaining a steady course, is not, with reference to such circumstances, open to the charge of being negligently navigated.—2. Wharf moored in a sufficient look-out has the burden cast upon her of proving that such fact did not contribute to the collision.—3. Apart from the regulations, in a case of impending collision it is negligence for a steamship to fail to slacken speed, or to stop, or reverse, if such manouvre is necessary to avoid collision.—4. Where the defendant's preliminary act alleged that at a certain point the bearing of the ship at fault was "a little abaft the starboard beam" of the injured ship, evidence was admitted to shew that the line of approach was not more than two points abaft, or was forward of the beam of the injured vessel.—5. The wrongdoer cannot recover salvage remuneration for serveles rendered to the ship with which he has been in collision. Magdalen Islands 8. 8. 0o. v. The "Diana," 11 Ex. C. R. 40, 3 E. L. R. 158.

Wessel moored to another — Negligence—Extraordinary storm—Act of God.]—While the plaintiff's tug-boat the "Vigilant' was tied to a wharf in Vancouver harbour, the defendant brought his tug-boat the "Lois" alongside and tied her to the "Vigilant." The next night a violent storm arose—a storm of which there were no indications and which was the severest ever experienced in the harbour—and the "Lois," whose crew were absent, bumped against the "Vigilant," and damaged her:—Held, in an action for damages for negligence, that it had not been shewn that the defendant's act of so mooring his tug was negligent, and that on the evidence the accident was due to the act of God. Bailey v. Cates, 24 C. L. T. 412, 11 B. C. R. 62.

Vessel moored to dock — Negligence—Inevitable accident, Manley v. Rogers, 2 O. W. R. 704.

Violation of rules not affecting accident — Steering wrong course,]—The Supreme Court will not set aside the finding of a nautical assessor on questions of navigation adopted by the local Judge, unless the appellant can point out his mistake and the appellant can point out his mistage and shew conclusively that the judgment is en-tirely erroneous. The "Picton." 4 S. C. R. 648, followed.—A steamer coming up Hali-fax harbour ran into a schooner, striking her stern on the port side. No sound signals were given. The green light of the schooner was seen on the steamer's port bow, and the latter starboarded her helm to pass asternand then ported. He then was so close that he stopped the engines, but too late to prewent the collision :- Held, that the steamer alone was to blame for the collision .- Held, also, that though under the rules the schooner also, that though under the rules the schoolner should have kept her course, and also was to blame for not having a proper look-out, neither fault contributed to the collision. The "Arranmore" v. Rudolph, 27 C. L. T. 150 6. 152, 38 S. C. R. 176, Wharf — Hidden danger — Liability.]—The owner of a wharf level with the water or projecting 5 or 6 inches above it is not liable for damage done to a vessel which runs foul of it. Montreal Harbour Commissioners v. Montreal Grain Elevating Co., 17 Que, K. B. 385, 4 E. L. R. 78.

Wharf - Negligence.] - A ship was moored in her dock with her bow to the east. Her stern, being at the inner end of the dock, was partly protected by the wharf and stores to the south, while the bow and fore-part of the ship, extending easterly beyond any such protection, was exposed to the full force of a south-easterly gale. There was an anchor out, with 25 fathoms of chair, on the starboard bow of the ship; but it was not in a position to keep the ship from swinging against the wharf in the event of such a gale. A gale from that direction having sprung up, the master ran out a wire rope from the starboard side of the ship's stern to a wharf on the south of her berth; but evidence shewed that this rope had no effect in preventing the collision of the port bow of the ship with the wharf which was damaged by the pounding of the ship against it m the force of the wind and waves: -Held, that the master had failed to exercise seamanlike care, forethought, and skill, in omitting so to place his anchor as to protect his ship from the force of the gale and prevent her colliding with the wharf, and that the damage was attributable to his negligence and not to inevitable accident. Book v. The "Baden," 8 Ex. C. R. 343.

5. JUDICIAL SALE.

Mortgage — Judicial sale — Rights of mortgagee—dequiseence.]—Although a hypothee upon a ship does not make the hypotheeary creditor owner of the ship, he can, nevertheless, dispose of it absolutely. 2. The sale of such a ship, even when effected judicially and with the authorisation of the Court, upon an assignment of the property of the owner of the ship, but without the consent of the hypotheeary creditor, and the purchaser may refuse to pay the purchase price so long as the hypothee is undischarged. 3. The fact that such creditor has been present at the sale and has even been a bidder does not constitute acquiescence, the proceeds of the sale being insufficient to indemnify him. In re Robert and Lamarche, 18 Que. S. C. 101.

Purchaser refusing to complete Resale — Liability of purchaser for difference in price—Statute of Frauda,1—A ship was sold at auction by the marshal under an order of Court in an action for seamen's wages. The ship was knocked down to J. for $2,000. J. refusing to complete the purchase, the ship was resold by the marshal for $1,500:—Held, that J. was liable for the difference in price and the costs occasioned by his default. 2. Judicial sales are not within the Statute of Frauda, and therefore no memorandum in writing of the sale to J. was necessary. Attorney-General v. Day, 1 Ves. Sr. 218. referred to. 3. For the purpose of establishing J's liability, an order for resale was not necessary. Hackett v. The "Blakeley," In re Jones, 8 Ex. C. R. 327, 9 B. C. R. 430.

Seizure by ordinary creditor—Rights of hypothecary creditors—Sale subject to hypotheca—Consent—Order.]—An hypothecated vessel cannot, to the prejudice of the hypothecated creditor and without his consent or the order of a competent Court, be seized at the suit of an ordinary creditor of the owner of the vessel. 2. The fact that an ordinary creditor has advertised the sale of such a vessel subject to all registered hypothees is not sufficient to relieve him from obtaining such consent or such order. Daigneault v. Brulé, 22 Que. S. C. 20.

6. PILOTAGE DUES.

Barges towed by tugs — Exemption from pilotage dues — Motive powers — R. S. C. (1886), c. 80, s. 2 (b), ss. 58 and 59 — "Ship"—"Navigation."]— The defendants' vessels of about 440 tons, described as schooners, provided with masts, steering gear and anchors, which were built to run before the wind, but not to be safely navigated in the ordinary way of sailing vessels, were usually towed by a steam tug, in and out of the port of St. John:—Held, that these vessels were liable to pay pilotage dues, as they did not come within the exemption provided in s. 59 (c) of the Pilotage Act, R. S. C. (1886). The idea of traction or towage is not included in the words "propelled by steam."—Judgments of Supreme Court of Canada, 38 S. C. R. 169, 27 C. L. T. 239, Supreme Court of New Brunswick, 37 N. B. R. 406, 1 E. L. R. 397, and Hon. Mr. Justice McLeod at trial, set aside. Cumberland Rev. v. St. John Pilot Com., C. R., [1910] A. C. 31, 7 E. L. R. 340.

Exemption — Statute. — Under the terms of the Pilotage Act, R. S. C. c. S., s. 59, as amended by the Acts of 1900, c. 36, s. 59, as amended by the Acts of 1900, c. 36, s. 14, the following ships, called "exempted ships," are exempted from the compulsory payment of pilotage dues: (c) Ships employed in trading... between any one or more of the provinces of Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, or Prince Edward Island, and any other or others of them, or employed on voyages between ... any port in Newfoundland, est.—Held, that a ship employed on a sealing voyage from Halifax to the Newfoundland seal fisheries and back, calling on her outward voyage at Louisburg for coal, and at a port in Newfoundland, control in Newfoundland, or her return, to dispose of her catch, was not an exempted ship within the terms of the Act, Semble, that what was contemplated by the Act, in providing for exemptions, was lines of steamers, or even one steamer, making regular periodical voyages, with termin as indicated in the Act, either throughout the year or during a certain season of the year, Farquhar v. Mc-Alpine, 35 N. S. R. 478.

Liability of barge—"Every ship which navigates." —Held, allirming the judgment of the local Judge for the Quebec Admiralty District, that the expression "every ship which navigates." found in a. 58 of the Pilotage Act, R. S. C. c. 80, means a ship that has in itself some power or means of moving through the waters it navigates, and not a ship that has no such power or means and which must be moved or propelled or navigated by another vessel. Corp. of Pilots for the Harbour of Quebec v. The "Grandee," 22 C. L. T. 428, 8 Ex. C. R. 54, 79.

7. SALVAGE.

Arrest — Payment into Court — Release — Appeal — Security—Foreion owner —Extravagant claim.] — An application by the defendant for payment out of Court of money paid in by him to obtain the release of his ship arrested to answer a claim for salvage, will, if the defendant be a foreign resident, be stayed wholly or in part, pending an appeal to the Exchequer Court to increase the salvage award. Observations upon the scope of bail bonds and the retention of security pending appeal. It is an improper practice, and one which the Court will discourage, to arrest property to answer extravagant claims. Vermont 8.
S. Co, v. The "Abby Palmer," S Ex. C. R.
402, 10 B. C. R. 385.

Assessors — Trial — Time.]—Assessors will be appointed in salvage cases where necessary. The proper time to apply for assessors is on the application to fix the date of trial. Vermont S. S. Co. The "Abby Palmer," S Ex. C. R. 469, 10 B. C. R. 380.

Basis of valuation.]—Where, in a case of salvage, there is no market value for the ship in the port where it is brought by the salvors, the rea should be valued not on the basis of a forced sale, but as a "going concern" in the hands of a solvent owner, using it for the particular purposes of his trade at the sum for which the owner, as a reasonable man, would be willing to sell it. Vermont S. S. Co. v. The "Abby Palmer," S Ex. C. R. 446.

Danger and imminent loss.]—Salvage is an obligation of an exceptional nature, to indemnify those by whose assistance a ship, her cargo, or the lives of those on board are saved from imminent loss. The element of danger and imminent loss to the ship, etc., is essential, and, without it, no claim to salvage can arise. Montreal Lighterage Co. v. Gordon, 28 Que, S. C. 198.

Delivery of salved goods to receiver of wrecks — Penalty. —Under the provisions of s. 27 of the Wrecks and Salvage Act, R. S. C. 1886 c. S1 (now R. S. C. 1906 c. 13, s. 814), a salvor who has delayed the delivery of salved goods to the receiver of wrecks for a short time, not with the intention of retaining the goods, but merely for the purpose of having the amount payable to him for salvage determined before giving up possession, does not thereby forfeit his right to salvage, or incur the penalties mentioned in such section. The "Manhattan" v. Sullivan, 11 Ex. C. R. 151.

Injury to salving ship — Necessities of service — Seamanship — Appeal on nautical questions — Findings of fact — Damages — Reduction — Assessors.]—In an Admiralty case the Supreme Court of Canada must weigh the evidence for itself, unassisted by expert advice, and will, if the evidence warrants it, reverse the judgment appealed against on a question of seamanship or navigation.—The ship "M." brought an action for the value of salvage services rendered to the "N," part of the damages claimed being for injury to the

"M." in performing such services:—Held, Gironard and Maclenana, JJ., dissenting, that the evidence established that injury was not caused by necessities of the service, but by unskilful seamanship and improper navigation; the judgment appealed against should, consequently, be varied by a substantial reduction of the damages allowed by the local Judge.—The dissenting Judges were of opinion that sufficient ground was not shewn for disturbing the findings of the trial Judge. The "Nana" v. The "Mystic," 41 S. C. R. 108, 6 E. L. R. 303.

Maritime Hen — Agreement — Rights of salvor — Possession of salved goods — Removal — Purchaser for value — Conversion — Replevin — Costs, Pearce v. Letherby, 6 O. W. R. 77, 606.

Nature of — Evidence — Remuneration — Assessment — Value of ship — Registrar's report.]—Claim for value of slavage services:—Held, that plaintil's tug properly saved defendant ship, which was in a dangerous position and would have sunk. In assessing value of ship, besides annual depreciation, original construction and subsequent care, as well as type of vessel, must be considered. Settlements made with other parties not considered, Dunsmuir v. The "Otter," (Ex. C. of Can.), 10 W. L. R. 380.

Quantum of remuneration - Mail steamer — Sailing ship.]—Salvage services were rendered a distressed sailing ship on the high seas by a mail steamer. At the time the latter performed the salvage services, she was valued at $100,000, and, besides passengers and mails, she carried a cargo estimated to be worth $7,000. The time occupied in the performance of such services was about two and one-half days, the weather being fine and no risk or danger threatening the steamer except some a narrow channel of some thirteen miles in length. On account of the delay occasioned by the services, the steamer was obliged to consume additional coal to the value of $360 in making up her schedule time on the voyage. The sailing ship was in a position age. The saming ship was in a position of peril when sighted by the steamer, hav-ing been dismasted and at the time drift-ing broadside at the mercy of the seas. Her cargo was worth $13.727.23, and her Her cargo was worth $13,727.23, and her freight, as per bill of lading, $1.332.26. The value of the salved ship when taken into nort in her described to the salved ship when taken into port in her damaged condition was placed at $2,290. The amount of salvage in reat $2,290. The amount of salvage in respect of cargo and freight was settled before action brought:—Held, that the sum of $400 was a fair salvage award in respect of the ship alone. Pickford & Black S. S. Co, v. The "Foster Rice," 9 Ex. C. R. 6.

Towage — Sufficiency of tender—Costs.]
—A steam-tug was prosecuting her voyage in the lower St. Lawrence, when a slight accident happened to her boiler, in consequence of which her fires had to be extinguished in order that the boiler might cool to allow the engineer to make the necessary repairs. At that time the vessel was in the ordinary channel of navigation, and the weather was fine and the sea calm. The accident happened at S p.m. Three hours afterwards, and before repairs could be made.

a steamship F., of heavier burthen, approached the tug, and, at the request of her captain, took the tug in tow. The towage covered a distance of 230 miles, and continued for a period of thirty hours, during which neither ship was in a position of danger, nor were the crew of the F. at any time in peril by reason of the services rendered to the disabled tug:—Held, that, as the services to the disabled tug were rendered under the easiest conditions, without increase of labour or delay to the F., it was clearly a towage and not a salvage service. 2. It not being a case of salvage, the officers and crew of the F. were not entitled to participate in the amount awarded for the towage, but it belonged to the owners of the ship. 3. The defendants having paid into Court an amount sufficient to compensate the plaintiff liberally for the services rendered, they were given their proper costs against the plaintiff. Hine v. The "Thomas J. Scully," 20 C. L. T. 54, 6 Ex. C. R. 318.

8. SEAMEN'S WAGES,

Action by seaman for wages—Arrest of vessel.]—Proceedings in admiralty—Irregularity—Dominion Winding-up Act, s. 22. Re Br. Col. Tie & Timber Co., Colan v. "Rustler" (B. C. 1999), 10 W. L. R. 370.

Actions in rem - Equality - Priority -Costs-Pro rata payment of subsequent claims.]-Held, following The "Saracen," 6 C. 56, that when claimants against Moo. P. a fund in the registry are of equal degree, the Court will give priority to the diligent creditor. 2. Where the parties are not of equal degree, and one claiming subsequently has a legal priority over another, such priorwill be protected if he make his claim before a decree has passed for distributing the fund, but not afterwards. 3. Where two claims for seamen's wages were prosecuted to judgment before two similar claims were allowed by the Court, the costs of the prosecution of the first two claims were ordered to be paid out of the fund in the registry in full in preference to the last In respect of the latter it was two claims, directed that they should be paid in full if the balance of the fund permitted it, if not they were to be paid pro rata. Munsen v. The "Comrade," Saunders v. The "Com-rade," Dickson v. The "Comrade," 7 Ex. C. R. 331.

Amount — Jurisdiction of Supreme Court, N. S.] — An action for seaman's wages, where the amount claimed is under £50, cannot be brought in a Supreme Court except where the owner or master, neither is, nor resides, within twenty miles of the place where the seaman is discharged, or put on shore, Watson v. Leukten, 24 C. L. T. 26, 36 N. S. R. 412.

Arrest on telegram — Rescue — Contempt of Court — Ignorance of law.]—It is competent for a deputy-marshal to a rest a ship, in an action for wages, upon a telegram from the marshal of the Admiralty district, having jurisdiction of the action, informing him that a writ of summons and a warrant had been issued and sent to him by mail. 2. The master of the ship, although ignorant of the legal consequences of his act, was held guilty of contempt of Gourt in permitting the ship to be moved after the deputy-marshal had gone on board, read to the master a copy of the writ of summons, and of the marshal's telegram, informed him that the ship was under arrest, and tacked up a copy of the writ in the ship. Engagement for return voyage

(Imp.), ss. 37, 38 — Merchant Shipping
Act, 1894 (Imp.), ss. 158, 166 — Certificate of discharge - Mistake in computing wages of alse arge — Mistake in computing leagues — Action — Costs.]—Section 166 (1) of Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (Imp.), provides that where a seaman is engaged for a voyage which he is to terminate in the United Kingdom, he shall not be entitled to sue in any Court abroad for wages unless he is discharged with such sanction as is required by the Act, and with the written consent of the master, etc. By the Mer-chant Shipping Act, 1906 (Imp.), ss. 37 and 38, it is provided that where a master leaves a seaman behind on shore in any place out of the United Kingdom on the ground of his unfitness or inability to proceed to sea, he shall deliver to the person signing the required certificate of the pro-per authority, a full and true account of the wages due to the seaman. The master shall pay the amount of wages due to a seaman left behind on the ground of his unis left in a British possession to the seaman himself, and if he is left elsewhere to man numself, and if he is left elsewhere to the British consular officer,—The plaintiff shipped for a voyage from Shields, Eng-land, to Victoria, B.C., and return. Before the termination of the voyage he was left at an American port by reason of illness, and remained in the heavilet has for a few and remained in the hospital there for fifteen days, beginning on the 18th July, 1907. On the 18th July the master of the ship left a certificate of discharge with the Brit-ish Vice-Counsul at such port, as required by s. 31 of the Act of 1906, but such certificate was not dated by the master, and the date of the 22nd August was inserted in the certificate by the Vice-Consul when the plaintiff called upon him after leaving the hospital. The master made an error in computing the amount of the plaintiff's wages due on the 18th July, and deposited less than the full amount due in the hands of the Vice-Consul. In an action for the recovery of wages by the plaintif: — Held, that the requirements of the statute respecting the certificate of discharge was sufficiently complied with: that the plaintiff was properly discharged on the 18th July; and that he was entitled, under s. 158 of the Act of 1894, to the full amount of his wages up to that date.—2. That, as the master made an error, though unintentionally, in computing the wages, and the plaintiff had been obliged to bring action, he was entitled to his costs. Cable v. The "Socotra." 11 Ex. C. R. 301, 7 W. L. R. 25, 13 B. C. R. 309.

Jurisdiction — Action — Parties — Joinder of claims—Limitation of actions.] —A numbeer of seamen forming part of the crew of a ship, to whom separate and varying sums are alleged to be due for wazes, may combine in one action to recover the same. The limitation of actions to amounts over $200 discussed. Beaton v. The "Christine," 11 Ex. C. R. 167.

Jurisdiction—Action in rem.]—Wages of seamen—Joinder of several claims in one action—Rule 29—Origin and history of Rule. Beaton v. "Christine," 12 O. W. R. 1229.

Jurisdiction of Exchequer Court to entertain claim for wages under $200 — Admirally Act — Foreign ship—Costs.]—When the exceptions in s. 56 of the Seamen's Act, R. S. C. c. 74, do not apply, the Exchequer Court, on its Admiralty side, has no jurisdiction to entertain a claim for seamen's wages under the amount of $200, earned on a ship registered in Canada. The W. J. Aikens, 7 Ex. C. R. 7, decided under similar provisions in s. 34 of R. S. C. c. 75, criticized and not followed. 2. The Admiralty Act, 1891, being a general law, and enacting general provisions as to jurisdiction, does not repeal by implications the special provisions of s. 56 of R. S. C. c. 74, limiting the jurisdiction of this Court in proceedings for seamen's wages. 3. This Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a claim for seamen's wages under an amount of $200 earned on a ship registered in England, and to which the provisions of s. 165 of the Merchants Shipping Act, 1894, apply. 4. Costs in these actions were not allowed to the defendants because exception to the jurisdiction to entertain the claim sued for was not taken in limine litis. Gagnon v. The "Saovy." Dion v. The "Polino," 25 C. L. T. 87, 9 Ex. C. R. 238.

Master — Custom of port as to discrept of master without notice—Set-off — Passenger fare.]—It is not the custom of the Port of Vancouver that masters of tur-boats and small coasting vessels may, on the one hand, be discharged without notice, and, on the other hand, leave their employers service in the same manner, in either case receiving their wages up to the date of the termination of the service. 2. An item of set-off asserted by the owners against the master's claim for wages, consisting of an amount of $50.75 charged for the fare and board of a friend of the master who had been taken with him on one of his trips on the owner's tug-boat, was not allowed, because it was a general practice in the port Wrongful dismissal-Justifi-Master -Master — Wrongful dismissal—Justifi-cation.]—On the 27th January, 1905, the respondent entered into an agreement in writing with the appellants to proceed to Glasgow, Scotland, and take command of the steamer "Lady Elleen" and bring her to the port of Sydney, C.B. Thereafter he was, in the language of the agreement, "sub-iet and obdient is the orders of the sear ject and obedient to the orders of the manject and obedient to the orders of the man-agers of said company to continue in com-mand of the said steamship until the first day of January, A.D. 1906, or until such earlier time as may be ordered by the said managers." By another clause of the agree-ment it was provided that, "notwithstanding anything herein contained, it is the clear intention and meaning of these presents that for his services during the season of A.D. 1905, he, the said L. J. P., shall be paid at least the sum of $1,050, irrespective of the length of the season, unless for neglect or breach of duty he be sooner dismissed, or the company have a proper right of set-off against the same." The respondent brought the "Lady Eileen" to Canada, and the appellants placed her on the route between Campbellton, N.B., and Gaspé, P.Q., under the command of the respondent as master. A subsidy was obtined for carrying His Majesty's mails between the said ports twice a week, and the ship made her first regular a week, and the ship made her hist regular trip on the 13th May, 1905. On the 29th June the ship left Gaspé for Campbellton, reaching Dalbousie about 9 p.m. After landing his freight at that place, the respondent thought it was not safe to proceed to Campbellton on account of the darkness and certain obstacles then in the channel. His view of the danger of proceeding in the dark-ness was shared by the pilot. At about 10.30 o'clock he received the following telegram from the appellant's manager: " Dalhousie at once. Do not lay in Dalhousie. See that you follow these orders." To which he replied: "Will leave Dalhousie daylight to-morrow, or whenever I think proper. The ship arrived at Campbellton early the next morning, but too late to deliver the mails to the morning train. The respondent was then immediately dismissed from their service by the appellants :-Held, that the respondent's disobedience of the order given to him was, under the circumstances of the case, justified, and that his dismissal was wrongful. The "Lady Eileen" v. Pouliot, wrongful. The 11 Ex. C. R. 87.

Otter-hunting — Claim of seaman to above in proceeds of skins.]—The plaintiff claimed an interest in the proceeds of certain sea-otter skins obtained during a voyage of a schooner. He shipped as A. B. at monthly wages and so much "per skin," which meant sea skin. He founded his claim to an interest in the sea-otter skins upon an alleged oral agreement made by the captain with the plaintiff and the other A. B. seamen, by which they agreed to engage (and did engage) in sea-otter hunting upon the same terms as an Indian crew who were engaged for the purpose. The captain absolutely denied any such arrangement, and his evidence was in some degree corroborated by the mate. At the end of the voyage, the plaintiff, after receiving his wages, signed a release of "the ship and the master and owners thereof from all claims for wages or otherwise in respect of the voyage." The plaintiff's story was correborated by other witnesses, but all of them, except one, were biassed:—Held, that the plaintiff had not advanced his case beyond the doubtful stage; and, the writings being relied on, the action should be dismissed:—Quare, whether, under ss. 152 and 157 of the Canada Shipping Act, such an agreement as that alleged by the plaintiff could be enforced. Hansen v. The "Thomas F Bayard" (1911), 16 W. L. R. 527, Ex. C. R. B. C. R.

Refusal to pay - Conviction - Jurisdiction—Criminal offence — Scamen's Act (D.)—Shipping Act (Imp.)—Rescission of Contract.]—J. M., the master of the S. S. "Wobun," a British ship of Canadian register, was convicted before a stipendiar magistrate, for that he wrongfully and unlawmaistrate, for that he wrongruny and unhawfully refused to pay R., a seaman serving on board said ship, a sum of money claimed to be due him for wages, and, further, for refusing to discharge said M., he being then entitled to his discharge:—Held, quashing the conviction with costs, that the refusal to pay M. his wages, or to give him his discharge, was not a criminal offence, and that the proceedings taken were not warranted by the That the Seamen's Act of Canada, c. 74. ship being, at the time the proceedings were instituted, within the jurisdiction of the government of the British possession in which she was registered, the case was within the exception mentioned in s. 26 (d), and part 2 of the Imperial Shipping Act was not applicable. Semble, that if the magistrate had power to rescind the contract, and had undertaken to do so, the judgment would require to be in a different form. Rex v. Meikle, Ex p. Ramsey, 36 N. S. R. 297.

Seaman left in port en route—Law-ful discharge—Action—Mistake—Costs.]—The plaintiff, who shipped for a voyage from Shields, England, to Victoria, B.C., and return, was left at Los Angeles for medical treatment, and remained in hospital there for 50 days. The master left with the British Vice-Consul at Los Angeles, on the 18th July, a certificate of discharge under s. 31, but this was not filled out until the 22nd August, when the plaintiff called at the consulate. The master also made an error in computing the amount of wages due. In an action for recovery of wages:—Held, that, in the circumstances, the leaving of the certificate with the "proper authority" was a sufficient "giving" thereof to satisfy s. 31, but, as there had been an error, though unintentional, in computing the wages, thus necessitating the plaintiff bringing the action therefor, he was entitled to his costs. Seamen's Act — Fisherman — Refusal to join ship—Conviction—Right to look at depositions—Costs. Rex v. Wilneff, 1 E. L. R. 168, 267.

Seizure for wages of sailors—Internal navigation.]—Save in the case provided for by cl. 2 of Art. 955, C. P., a saisie conservatoire does not lie for the wages of sailors in respect of services rendered on ships employed in internal navigation. Bertrand v. Anderson, 4 Que. P. R. 387. Stipendiary magistrate — Jurisdiction—Complaint.]—A seamen sued the master of a vessel for wages in the Court of a stipendiary magistrate. The magistrate made an order that the master should pay the sum of $42.20 for wages, besides costs. The magistrate's order having been brought up on certiorari, a motion was made to quash it, on the ground that the complaint made before the magistrate did not shew that the vessel was registered in any Province of Canada. It was proved at the trial before the magistrate that the vessel was registered at the port of Dorchester, in the county of Westmoreland and province of New Brunswick:—Held, that the subsequent evidence did not cure the defect in the complaint, and the rule to quash must be made absolute. In re Gamble v, Ward, 20 C. L. T., 462.

Term of hiring — Accrual of wages de die in diem — Desertion—Forfeiture of wages — Jurisdiction of County Court — Amount involved.] — A County Court Judge has jurisdiction, in an ordinary action for wages of a seaman, to try a claim for more than $200, where the plaintiff has a good demand at common law; that is, where his cause of action is complete without the aid of the statute. Section 52 of the Seamen's Act merely creates a concurrent tribunal for securing a speedy settlement of claims for wages. The plaintiff shipped for a voyage of three months. The period expired before the voyage was completed, and, while the ship was calling at a port, he went ashore, without leave, to seek legal advice. While thus absent the ship sailed:—Held, that he could not be classed as a deserter. Cairns v. British Columbia Salvage Co., 6 W. L. R. 47, 458; 13 B. C. R. 83.

9. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Account — Co-owners — Jurisdiction of Court of Equity. —The jurisdiction of the Court of Equity in a suit for account between co-owners of a ship has not been taken away by 54 & 55 V. c. 29 (D.), which confers a like jurisdiction upon the Exchequer Court in Admiralty; any discretion the Court of Equity may have as to the exercise of its jurisdiction must depend upon the circumstances of each suit. Perry V. Hanson, 21 C. L. T. 358, 2 N. B. Eq. R. 253.

Action for price — Set-off — Counterclaim—Repairs — Plazer of trial—Balance of convenience.]—In an action in the Exchaquer Court of Canada (Admiralty jurisdiction) for the price of a ship, where the circumstances entitle the defendant to a reduction of the amount claimed, if such claim can be substantiated, the Court will not exclude the proposed set-off. Where the ship was built in Scotland, and certain repairs were effected on her way out to the British Columbia coast, the balance of convenience is in favour of trying out any disputes concerning those repairs at the place where she was built. Bove, McLachlen & Co. v. The "Camosun" (No. 2), 12 B. C. R. 398.

Action in rem—Counterclaim—Appeal from order striking out—Exchequer Court— Jurisdiction.]—The jurisdiction which the Exchequer Court of Canada may exercise under the Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act, 1890, and the Admiralty Act, 1891, is the admiralty jurisdiction and not the general or common law jurisdiction of the High Court in England. The Cheapside, 1994; P. 339, referred to. 2. In an action in rem for a claim arising upon a mortgage of a ship, the Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a counterclaim for breach of contract to build the ship in accordance with certain specifications. Union S. S. Co. of British Columbia v. Bore, McLachlan & Co., Limited, The "Camosun," 26 C. L. T. 780, 10 Ex. C. R. 348.

Action in rem — Foreign fishing boat — Hlegal fishing — Customs and Fisheries Protection Act—duriadiction of High Court.] — Section 18 of the Customs and Fisheries Protection Act, R. S. C. 1996 c. 47, provides that every forfeiture under the Act may be enforced "in any Superior Court in the province in which the cause of prosecution arose." A writ of summons was issued azainst a boat, and service of the writeffected "by posting the same up on the defendant." On a motion being made for judgment in default of defence—Held, that, as there are no provisions in the High Court of Justice for proceedings in rem, any declaration of forfeiture or judgment for the sale of the boat would be a nutlity, and no order could therefore be made. Rex v. American Gusoline Fishing Boat, 15 O. L. R. 314, 11 O. W. R. 135.

Action in rem — Mortgage — sct-off—Practice.)—In an action in rem to enforce the payment of money due upon a mortgage given to the builders to secure the purchase price of a ship, defendants were allowed to plead a set-off for the amount of moneys expended by them to replace defective work and materials in order to bring the ship up to the requirements of Lloyds A1 Class and Board of Trade. Box, McLachdan & Co., Limited v. Union S. S. Co. of British Columbia, 10 Ex. C. R. 403.

Action in rem for wrongful delivery of goods—Owners domiciled in Canada—Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act 1890 (Imp.) s. 2 (2) — Admiralty Act 1891 (Imp.) s. 6 — The Admiralty Act 1891 (Canada)—"British possession"—Construction. McGregor v. Skip "Strathlorne" (P.E.I. 1910), 9 E. L. R. 110.

Advances — Equitable lien.]—A master of a ship with the representative of the owners borrowed from W. $2,000, giving as security an agreement which provided among other terms that if the master received any money from the owners or otherwise on account of the sale of vessel or cargo the same or a sufficient part thereof should be applied first in repayment of said loan. Subsequently when the ship had to be sold the master and representative gave W. an order on the adjuster for the above amount, who accepted same payable when in funds: — Held, that the agreement and order were good equitable assignments, and plaintiff was entitled to be paid in full. Hailgas v. Magliulo, 5 E. I. R. 553, allirmed sub nom., Halifax v. Williams, 6 E. L. R. 353.

The pled ing ship nece of the by thou try,

lant, on the 12th July, 1897, embarked on the S. S. "Baltimore City," which was owned and controlled by the respondents, certain sheep and cattle, for shipment from the port of Montreal to the port of Man-chester, England, under two bills of lading, which were issued and signed by the agents of the company respondent, and were received and accepted by a shipping broker of Montreal, the agent of the appellants. One of the conditions of the bills of lading reads as follows: "That the freight, whether payable by shipper or by consignee, is to be paid, ship lost or not lost, upon the total number of animals embarked, without regard to and irrespective of the number or condition of those landed, and in cash or demand, without deduction or abatement of any kind." The ship was wrecked in the Straits of Belle Isle on 17th July, 1897, and became a total loss. Part of the sheep and cattle were jettisoned, and the remainder were salved and accounted for in general average. The company respondent sued to recover payment of freight for the whole consignment :-Held, that a bill of lading is, consignment:—Hea, that a bit of taking is, at first, a written acknowledgment, by the owners of a ship of their agents, of the receipt of certain goods intrusted to them, and of their undertaking to transport and deliver them to the consignee or his assigns; but it becomes a binding contract, if it be accepted by the shipper, or his representative, without any objection, as he is then presumed to have agreed to its terms, and, in the absence of fraud or mistake, he cannot plead that he did not read it and did not know its contents. 2. That the pro-visions of Arts. 2442 and 2451, C. C., that freight is not due upon goods lost by shipwreck, nor until their carriage has completely performed, are to be applied only in the absence of an agreement to the con-3. That a clause in a bill of lading, stipulating that the freight is to be paid at all events, "ship lost or not lost," upon the total number of animals embarked irrespective of the number landed, and in cash on demand, without deduction or abatement of any kind, is a valid and binding condition. Glengoil Steamship Co. v. Pilkington, 28 S. C. R. 146, followed. Dean v. Furness, 9 Que. Q. B. 81.

Blockade — Breaking.] — Blockade of Martinique. The vessel contended to have committed a breach of the blockade, restored; the blockading squadron having gone on an expedition to Surinam, and left no adequate force behind to maintain the blockade. The Nancy (1809), C. R. 3, A. C. 306.

Bottomry bond — Authority of master to pledge ship for necessaries of ship.] — The authority of the master of a ship to pledge by bottomry for the purpose of raising money for the absolute necessaries of the ship, only arises when he cannot obtain the necessary advances upon the personal credit of the owner; and such power to raise money by bottomry is vested in the master, although the owner resides in the same country, provided there is no means of com-C.C.L.—128.

munication with the owner, and the exigency of the case requires it. A bottomy bond was granted in New York by the master of a ship, to obtain money for necessary repairs; the owner whereof was residing at St. John, New Brunswick. A communication by electric telegraph existed hetween the two cities. The bondholder had previously acted as the general agent of the owner, and no intimation of the transaction was made by the master to the owner until after the execution of the bond:—Held, upon appeal (reversing the sentence of the Admiralty Court) that the master having the means of communication with the owner, no such absolute necessity existed as to authorize him to pledge the ship without communication with the owner, and the bond declared void.—Semble, the agent of the owner may take a bottomry bond as a security for advances made by him. Wallace v. Fielden (1851), C. R. 2 A. C. 33.

Gareless mooring of vessels — Negligence—Extraordinary storm—Vis major.]—The plaintiff's tug "Vigilant" was moored at a wharf in Vancouver harbour, with another tug, the "Lois," belonging to the defendant, lying outside and moored there by a line attached to the "Vigilant." The "Lois" was left in that position all night, with no one in charge, and no fenders out on the side next the "Vigilant." During the night a heavy gale came up, and the "Lois" pounded the "Vigilant," causing her considerable damage:—Held, affirming the judgment of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, 11 B. C. R. 62, 24 C. L. T. 412, that, as the defendant was not a trespasser, he was not guilty of negligence, in the circumstances, in leaving his tug as he did, and that he was not obliged to observe extreme and unusual precautions to avoid injury by a storm of exceptional violence. Bailey v. Cates, 25 C. L. T. 28, 35 S. C. R. 203.

Carrying passengers without a certificate — Con. Stat. c. 115.1—The respondents, who are the owners of the steamship "Regulus." were charged before the magistrate at St. John's with carrying passengers coastwise without having the certificate required by Con. Statutes c. 115, s. 4. Those on board were men who had been engaged in dismantling a whale factory at St. Lawrence, and who had induced the captain to take them to St. John's without charge. The magistrate dismissed the complaint, and at the request of the complainant stated a case for the opinion of the Court:—Held, that the "Regulus" was not a passenger ship, that those on board were not passengers, and that the magistrate was right in dismissing the complaint. Bynne V. Regulus S. S. Co., Royal Gazette, Nfd., 22 Feb., 1910.

"Cash before delivery" — Possession taken by vendee—Attachments by unpaid vendor and judgment creditor of vendee — Irregularity in process.] — Appeal to Supreme Court of Canada from a judgment of the Court of King's Bench, Montreal, confirming a judgment of the Superior Court by which the sale of a steamer's hull, purporting to have been made under judicial process, was set aside. Appeal dismissed. Brook v, Booker, 6 E. L. R. 435.

Certiorari - Public wharf -- Construction of statute abridging a public right — Licut.-Governor in council has not power under 15 Vict. c. 34, s. 12, to impose rates on boats or keed money on passengers using charf—Term "vessel" does not compre-hend "boat."]—The 15 Vic. c. 34, s. 12, gives the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council gives the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council control of Minchin's Point wharf, with power to establish rates of wharfage for vessels, and to make such rules and regula-tions as he may think fit. By an order under this section it was provided that any boat or vessel used by any one but the li-censed ferrymen in ferrying passengers or landing or taking off the same from the wharf should pay is, for each pas-senger landed or taken off; also 2s, 6d, for each time such boat or vessel should touch at or land passengers on the wharf, to be paid by the persons owning or working such boat or vessel. A boat of the defendant's, used in ferrying without hire, on 16th May, touched several times at the wharf and sixty passengers embarked in the boat from the wharf. Judgment had been given for plaintiff in the Mayor's Court, and it was now removed by certiorari to the Supreme Court. The defendant's counsel contended that under the Act the Governor-in-Council had power to impose rates on vessels only, that a boat was not a vessel and the order was therefore void as to boats; that the Act gave no power to impose a charge of headmoney in respect of persons embarking from the wharf in such a boat:—Held, Peters, J., Hodgson, C.J., concurring, that the Act is one abridging a public right and must be strictly construed and it did not give power to impose such rates, and that the judg-ment in the Mayor's Court must be quashed. Bourke v. Murphy (1856), 1 P. E. I. R. 126.

Claim against tug.]—A party who has inscribed his case before Court of Review does not acquiesce in the judgment of Superior Court rejecting his claim by filing in Exchequer Court of Canada the same claim against owners of a tug which is advertised to be sold, said tug being the cause of damages sued for. Webster v. International Paper Co. (1909), 10 Que. P. R. 374, 17 R. de J. 266.

Contract by master — Effect of — Secure of vessel — Action against Master alone—Particulars—Cortificate.]—A captain contracting in his own name for the needs of his vessel and its navigation, at a place where neither the owner nor the agent of the vessel lives, binds himself, the vessel, and its owner. 2. The vessel may be seized for a debt contracted for the purpose of a voyage, or for the fees of a consul, in an action begun against a captain in his capacity as such, and without making the owners parties. 3. Among the principal provisions of the certificate of ownership which the process-verbal of the seizure must contain, when production of the certificate is refused, are the number of the vessel and its tonnage engraved upon the main beam; and the bailiff may cause the hatchway to be opened in order to find out these particulars; and upon refusal an order for its opening may be made. Fréchette v. Martin, 21 Que. S. C. 417.

Contract of affreightment - Con-Payment of freight—Lien on cargo—Saisic-conservatoire.]—"I agree to engage you at $15.50 per day for the season of navigation of 1906, and I guarantee you 6 months' of 1996, and I guarantee you we months work. After 6 months, from day to day, I reserve to myself the privilege of restoring your barge either at Afontreal or at Quebec at the end of the season." This agreement was signed "St. Lawrence S. S. Co., W. G. McConell." There had been a previous contract have which one of the signers of the tract by which one of the signers of the document alone had loaded the barge of the owner, who was to navigate it himself at $15.50 per day during the season of 1906:-Held, that the agreement did not operate as a novation; the effect was only to add a new debtor engaging himself, jointly and severally with the charterer, to the owner.

2. A contract in the above terms does not 2. A contract in the above terms does not take away from the owner the control of the vessel, because the charterer has not the exclusive control of the vessel; the only obligation which arises from it is that the owner of the vessel is obliged to make the voyage indicated, receive the cargoes consigned to the charterer or unload them, as the case may be, according to the orders and directions of the latter. 3. Hence it follows that the owner preserving the possession of his vessel has the right of retention of the cargo for the payment of his freight, and may accompany the remedy which he exmay accompany the relief which he ex-ercises against the charterer for such pay-ment by a conservatory seizure. Daneau v. St. Lawrence S. S. Co., 33 Que. S. C. 9.

Contract to build a ship — Principal and agent — Right of lien for money advanced.] — A mercantile house at Newry directs a house at Quebec to contract for the building of a ship, for which they (the Newry House) would send out the rigging. The Quebec House enter into a contract with some ship-builders accordingly. The Newry House then direct their correspondent at Liverpool to send out the rigging; he does so; and it having been actually delivered to the Quebec House;—Held, that the property in it was vested in the Newry House, and Don Stoker duty a gineer's supplia that the Quebec House had a right to retain it against the Liverpool correspondent, on account of their lien on it for advances made to the builders, and payment of custom-house expenses, althougt, previously to the delivery they had obtained an assignment of the ship to themselves from the builder and had registered it in the name of one of the partners in their house. Judgments of the Court of Appeal and of the Court of King's Bench at Quebec, set aside. Reid v. Rogerson (183)), C. R. 1 A. C. S.

Contract to sell—Co-owners—Partnership—Authority of one to bind the other — Ratification — Specific performance — Contract under seal—Co-owner not named — Principal and agent—Evidence of agency — Bill of sale—Possession. Bentley v. Murphy, 1 O. W. R. 273, 726, 845, 2 O. W. R. 1014.

Contract to serve as fisherman on shares — Desertion — Forfeiture of share —"Season"—"Voyage" — Assault — Provocation.]-The plaintiff shipped as a fisherman for the "present fishing season a schooner of which the defendant was master and part owner. The term "fishing season" was defined to mean, from the date when the vessel set out on her first trip until the 20th October of the same year, but with power in the master to terminate the season at an earlier date. The schooner season at an earlier date. The schooner left port early in May, 1904, and returned and landed her catch on the 5th July, and then refitted for another trip. On the second trip the plaintiff left the vessel, and payment of his share of the proceeds of the first trip was refused, under a clause in the articles providing that if any of the crew refused duty, or absented themselves from the vessel when required, they should forfeit the whole of their share of the proceeds of that fishing voyage in the vessel: — Held, that the words "fishing season" and "voyage were not to be taken in the same sense, but that it was contemplated that there might be more than one fishing voyage in a season, and that the plaintiff, by leaving the vessel before the end of the season, did not vessel before the end of the season, and not forfiel his share of the proceeds of the voyage then terminated:— $Held_i$ also, that insulting or profane language used by the plaintiff towards the defendant was not a justification for an assault committed by the latter upon the former. Wentzelt v. Winzelt, 3 E. L. R. 94, 41 N. S. R. 406.

Contract with owners — Master's powers.]—The master of a ship has no express or implied power to alter or vary a contract made directly with the owners. Perry v. P. E. I. Steam Nav. Co. (1874), 1 P. E. I R. 476.

Dominion steamer — Negligence — Stoker undertaking to perform an engineer's duty at his request but contrary to chief engineer's instructions — Liability.] — The suppliant was employed as a stoker on board the Dominion steamer "Montcalm." Instructions had been given by the chief engineer of the ship, and communicated to the suppliant, that "no employee on board, including stoker or "graiseur," was to touch the machinery without a special order from the chief engineer. On the evening before the accident to the suppliant, one of the engineers, who was ill, asked him if he was competent to start the machinery. The suppliant replied that he was, and the said engineer asked him to start the machinery for him early the following morning. To oblige the latter, the suppliant undertook to do this. The machinery was in perfect order, but owing to the negligence or unskiffulness of the suppliant in handling a steam pump an accident happened by which he lost three fingers of his left hand: —Held, upon the facts, that the Crown was not liable under c. (20) of c. 140, R. S. C. 1906. Lamontagne v. The King (1909), 12 E. C. R. 284, 29 L. T. 714.

In an action in rem brought to enforce payment of money due upon a mortgage given to builders to secure contract price of a ship:—Held, that owners of ship are not entitled by way of defence to set-off a claim for unliquidated damages against mortgagees for alleged breach of contract relating to building of the ship. Mondet v. Steel, 8 M. & W. 858, 10 L. J. Ex. 426, explained and distinguished. Judgments of Supreme Court of Can., 40 S. C. R. 418; Exchequer Court of Can., 11 Ex. C. R. 403, set aside. Foreign vessel - Foreign judgment-Comity of Courts-Account between co-own ers.1-The ship was registered in an American port and owned by American citizens resident in the United States. The defendant S. advanced to the then captain of the ant S. advanced to the then captain of the ship at Brava, Cape de Verde Islands, the sum of $1,400 for necessaries, and took from the captain and V., a part-owner, what pur-ported to be a bottomry bond, and a further instrument, purporting to be a charterparty as security for such advance. By the last mentioned instrument, the control and posmentioned instrument, the control and pos-session of the ship were handed over to S. until the profits of the employment of the ship repaid the loan. S. thereupon took over the ship and brought her to a United States port, where she was arrested at the suit of R. for an amount due him for necessaries By the judgment of a competent Court in the United States the rights of S., under the instruments mentioned, were held to give him priority over the claim of R., and he was confirmed in possession of the ship. The plaintiff herein was the owner of 1,764 shares of the ship and had notice of the American suit between S. and R., and subsequently took part in some negotiations for the settlement of the claims of both. By instituting proceedings on the Admiralty side of the Exchequer Court the plaintiff sought to obtain possession of the vessel while in a Canadian port, together with certain relief against the defendant V .: - Held, that as by the proceedings taken in the Exchequer Court the plaintiff sought to derogate from rights obtained by one of the parties under the judgment of a competent Court in the United States, the action should be dismissed.

Castrique v. Imric. L. R. 4 H. L. 414, referred to. Nemble, that in so far as the plaintiff sought to obtain an account between the parties who were co-owners the Court would have directed an account if it had been shewn that S. had received from the earnings of the vessel sufficient to repay him the amount of his loan. Michado v. The "Hattie and Lottic," 9 Ex. C. R. 11.

Foreign vessel-Illegal fishing-Seizure of vessel — Evidence of vessel's position.]— The American vessel "Kitty D." was seized by the government cruiser "Petrel" for fishing on the Canadian side of Lake Erie. In proceedings by the Crown for forfeiture, the evidence was conflicting as to the position of both vessels at the time of seizure, and a local Judge in Admiralty held (2 O. W. R. 1065) that the vessel seized was not in Canadian waters at the time. On appeal by the Crown:—Held, that, as the "Petrel" was furnished with the most reliable log known to mariners for registering distances, and her compass had been carefully tested and corrected for deviation on the morning of the seizure; as the "Kitty D." and two tugs in her vicinity at the time, whose captains gave evidence to shew that she was on the American side, carried no log or chart and kept no log book; and as the local Judge had mis-apprehended the facts as to the course sailed by the "Petrel" and the rules of navigation; the evidence of the officers of the "Petrel" must be accepted; and it established that the "Kitty D." had been fishing in Canadian waters, and her seizure was lawful. Res v. The "Kitty D.," 24 C. L. T. 261, 34 S. C. R. 673. P. C. reversed above judgment and restored judgment of Hodgins, Loc. J., in Adm., 2 O. W. R. 1065. See 26 C. L. T. 75.

Foreign vessel—Illegal fishing—Three-mile limit—Capture outside limit — Conmite timit—capture outside timit—Continuous pursuit—Jurisdiction—Governments of Dominion and province.]—The American schooner "North" was discovered by the Dominion government steamer "Kestrel" hove-to engaged in halibut fishing in Quatnove-to engaged in namout issuing in Quat-sino Sound, Vancouver Island, and within the three-mile limit. She had at the time all her fishing boats out, but, on observing the approach of the "Kestrel" some four or five miles off, but also within the threemile limit, the schooner picked up two of her dories and stood out to sea. The "Kesher dories and stood out to sea. trel" made pursuit, deviating slightly from her course in such pursuit to pick up one of the schooner's fishing boats with its crew, and overhauled and seized the schooner about one and three-quarter miles outside the At the time of seizure three-mile limit. there were freshly caught halibut lying about on the schooner's decks :-Held, that the pursuit having been begun within the threemile limit, and having been continuous, the seizure was lawful. The stopping to pick seizure was lawful. The stopping to pick up the fishing boat and its crew, as evi-dence of the offence committed by the schooner, was not a break in the continuity of the pursuit. Observations as to the jurisdiction of Canada and the province, respectively, over fisheries, Rcw v. The "North," 11 B. C. R. 473, 2 W. L. R. 74.

Accident — Vis major—Seaworthiness Responsibility of owner to croe—Warranty—Inspection—R. S. C. c. 113, s. 342 — Criminal consequences—Master and scream t—Liability of owner for fault of captain,]—When a ship founders at sea without any one knowing the cause, there is a presumption that the disaster is the result of its unseaworthy state. Where the owner sets up accident or vis major, he is bound to prove it. 2. The owner of a ship warrants its navigability to the crew, and is not released from the responsibility which proceeds from this warranty by an inspection of the ship, made according to the terms of s. 587 et seq. of R. S. C. 1906 c. 113. Statutes affecting civil responsibility being beyond the competence of the Federal Parliament, the reservation in s. 342 of the same chapter touching the sending of ships to sea "reasonable and justifiable," applies only to the criminal consequences of the sending ships to sea in an unseaworthy state. 3. The owner of the ship is responsible for the fault of their master as employers are for that of their employees, according to the terms of Art. 1054, C. C. Grenier v. Connolly, 34 Que. S. C.

Freight — Tackle — Freight.] — The sentence of a Vice-Admiralty Court having condemned the ship with her tackle, freight, etc., and the vessel being afterwards restored upon appeal, a lien for freight upon the cargo accrues to the master or owners. The Jennet (1810), C. R. 3, A. C. 332.

Hlegal fishing — Foreign vessel—Evidence—Condemnation.] — The method of catcling fish has no bearing upon a violation of the provisions of R. S. C. c. 94. The fact of taking fish without a license in the territorial waters of Canada constitutes the offence. Semble, that coming into the territorial waters of Canada to cure fish caught outside the limits of such waters, will subject the offending vessel to forfeiture. Rea v. The "Samoset," 25 C. L. T. 128, 9 Ex. C. R. 348.

Joint capture.] — Joint capture, conjunct expedition pleaded in an allegation not proved by the evidence actual and constructive, assistance not proved. La Furicuse (1811), C. R. 3. A. C. 379.

Joint property — Proof.]—Proof of a joint property with enemy in a shipment subjects such to condemnation. If the shipment be innocent it does not necessarily affect the ship. The Zulema (1810), C. R. 3, A. C. 320.

Jurisdiction of Exchequer Court of Canada — Claim under mortpage on ship —Action in rem—Pleading—Abetment of contract price—Defects in construction —Damages.] —In an action in rem by the builders of a ship to enforce a mortgage thereon, given to them on account of the contract price for its construction, the owners, for whom the ship was built, may plead as a defence pro tento that the ship was not constructed according to specifications, and claim an abatement of the price in consequence of such default, and that the loss in value of the ship, at the time of delivery, attributable to such default, should be deducted from the claim under the mortgage. Box, McLachlam & Co. v. The "Camosum," 40 S. C. R. 438. See 10 Ex. C. R. 433, 11 Ex. C. R. 214, 26 C. J. T. 780.

License to trade.] — Trade to Vera Cruz.—License not produced, and proof of property not satisfactory, on further proof. —Condemned. The Fly (1809), C. R. 3, A. C. 357.

Loading of eargo — Superintendent — Injury to vorkman—Defective cable — Liability of master of ship.] — When a hold-stower is specially employed to see to the loading and unloading of the cargo of a vessel, the captain of the vessel is not responsible for an accident happening in consequence of defects in a cable belonging to the ship, of which the hold-stower had the use at the time of the accident. $B\grave{e}dard$ v. Perry, 9 Que. P. R. S1.

Local Judge in Admiralty has jurisdiction under the Admiralty Act. R. S. C., c. 141, s. 19, s.-s. 2, to order the transfer of an action from the registry in his district to the registry of another Admiralty district in Canada. Montreal Transportation Co. v. "Norveals," 11 Ex. C. R. 321.

Maritime Hen — Goods supplied without knowledge of owners — Attachment of ship—Parties—Costs.]—There is a privilege under Art. 2383 (5), C. C., upon a steamer for coal supplied to her on her last voyage by the order of the master and of the charterers, through their agent, without the knowledge or participation of the owners, who incur no personal liability therefor. Such a privilege may be enforced by attachment of the vessel before judgment, and the owners may be made parties to the suit pour voir dire, but they will be liable for costs in case of contestation. Inverness Ruc. and Coal Co. v. Canadinn Lines Limited, 29 Que. S. C. 151.

Materials used in construction and repair — Lien — Continuance of.]—One who furnishes materials which are used in the construction and repair of a vessel intended for inland navigation has a right to the "privelége de dernier equipeur." The right is not limited to the last voyage, nor confined to the person who last furnishes such materials, but continues during the period that elapses between two sensons of navigation. Cantin v. Brulé, 26 Que. S. C. 40.

Medical attendance — Duty of shipowner,] — A ship-owner is under no duty either at common law or under s. 207 of the Merchants Shipping Act, 1894, to provide surgical or medical attendance for the ship's company, Morgan v, British Yukon Navigation Co., 24 C. L. T. 38, 10 B. C. R. 112.

Merchant Shipping Aet, 1854—United States ship—Sailing under certificate illegally granted liable to forfeiture.]— E. Marshall. a citizen of the United States, in 1867, built the "S. G. Marshall and, knowing he could not get a British register in his own name, took his son, a boy of eight years, to the registrar's office, where he had the builder's certificate filled up, stating E. Marshall, junior (the son), to be the owner, he himself signing as builder. The declaration of ownership was also filled up with the name of E. Marshall, junior, and signed by the boy making his mark. The boy's real name was E. H. Marshall, and he was a British subject. The vessel was always navigated under the register so obtained, E. Marshall, the father, commanding her. In 1870 she was seized while fishing about eight hundred yards from the shore, by Captain Hardinge of the "Valorous," one of H. M. ships engaged in protecting the fisheries. The questions raised were, (1) whether the vessel was a British ship, and (2) whether she was not liable to forfeiture for sailing under a register illegally issued, flying the British flag and falsely assuming the British national character:—Held (Peters, J.), that she was liable to forfeiture on the latter charge. R. v. "S. G. Marshall" (1870), 1 P. E. I. R. 316.

Merchant Shipping Act, 1854—Vessel, "her tackle, apparel and furniture" includes her equipments necessary for the purposes of her voyage and adventure—Forfeture.]—Under the general order of the Court of Vice-Admiralty for the sale of the "S. G. Marshall," "her tackle, apparel and furniture," the defendant, who was marshal of that Court, sold a seine, a lot of harrels, salt, bait, bait, bait, nets and a seine boat, which she had on board, though they were not mentioned before the Vice-Admiralty Court nor any Judgment given against them specifically. The plaintiffs, who were joint owners of these articles, and of all other outfits on board, brought an action of trespass against the defendant. At the trial a verdict was found for plaintiffs, and leave given defendant to move to set it aside and to enter a verdict in his favour. The question then was whether these articles, being the vessel's outfit for her voyage and adventure, were included in her "tackle," apparel and furniture: "— Held, (Peters, J., Hodgson, C.J., concurring; Hensley, J., dissenting), that the articles were part of the ship's tackle, etc., and that the verdict must be entered for the defendant. Hall & Marshall v. Yates (1871), 1 P. E. I. R. 331.

Mortgage — Registration — Priority — Right of execution reditors against holder of unregistered mortgage—Bills of Sale Act—Exemption of ships from provisions of — Merchants Shipping Act.] — In an interpleader issue held, that there is nothing in the Imperial Act which requires a mortgage of a ship to be registered on penalty of being postponed to an execution creditor. The Bills of Sale Act above does not apply to ships:—Held, that the defendants under their mortgage are entitled to the ship as against the plaintiffs, execution creditors. Imperial Timber and Trading Co. v. Henderson (B.C.), 10 W. L. R. 595.

Mortgage — Security for "account current"—Construction — Advances.] — The plaintifi, being indebted to B. on a current account, gave B. a mortgage of a vessel of which he was owner. The mortgage contained a recital that B. had advanced and was advancing certain sums of money to the plaintiff for purposes connected with shipping and trade, the amount of which was to be ascertained and the account current balanced on the 31st December, yearly. B., in addition to supplying the plaintiff with cash and goods, procured goods from other persons to a considerable amount, paying for them in cash and delivering them to the plaintiff:—Held, that the trial Judge was right in declining to restrict the terms of the mortgage to cash advanced for purposes connected with shipping and trade, and that in interpreting the document, the nature and course of dealing between the parties must be taken into consideration, and that the words "account current" did not mean money advanced only, but clearly included money used in advances and such articles as had been charged in accounts current from year to year. Cleveland v. Boak, 39 N. S. R. 39, 1 E. L. R. 64.

Motions to consolidate and transfer actions from one registry to another — Quebec Admiralty District—Jurisdiction of Local Judge and Deputy Judge to remove causes.]-There is at present only one regcauses.]—Here is at present only one registry in admiralty district of Quebec, and the provisions of the Admiralty Act, 1891, as amended by s. 3 of the Act, 63 & 64 V. c. 45 (now R. S. C. 1906, c. 141, s. 18 (2), which enact that when a suit has been instituted in any registry no further suit shall be instituted in respect of same matter in any other registry of the Court, do not prevent a further proceeding being instituted in the office of the deputy registrar at Montreal, in respect of the same matter as to which in respect of the same matter as to which prior proceedings have been instituted in the registry at Quebec.—2. The deputy Judge has jurisdiction equally with the local Judge in Admiralty, in cases instituted within Que. admiralty district, to order consolidation of such cases for purposes of trial. Bouchard v. Montreal Grain Elevator Co., Montreal Grain Elevating Co. v. "Gaspesien," 11 Ex. C. R. 220.

Necessaries —"Quener" — "Domiciled"—I-ien.]—An action in rem for necessaries will not lie against a ship if supplied to a charter who also regrages the triber who also regrates the triber who are triber who Mecessaries — Owner domiciled in Canada—Jurisdiction.]—No action will lie on the Admiralty side of the Exchequer Court against a ship for necessaries when the owner of the ship at the time of the institution of the action is domiciled in Canada. Rochester and Pittsburg Coal and Iron Co. v. The "Garden City," 21 C. L. T. 283, 7 Ex. C. R. 94.

"Owner" — Action against — Expenses of seamen — Evidence — Board of trade— Certificate — Merchant Shipping Act.]—In an action brought before the police magistrate for the city of St. John to recover hospital fees, board, and cost of conveying from Hong Kong to London a seaman of the ship "Troop," a certificate of the payment of the said expenses by the board of trade, signed by the assistant secretary of the board, was put in evidence. The present ownership of the ship was proved by a copy of the registry certified under the hand of the Registrar-General at London, the ship being registered at Liverpool. The expenses for which the action was brought were incurred in 1891, and the defendants did not Personal injury done by — Jurisdiction of Admiralty Court — Negligence — Sufficiency of machinery—Fellow-workmen—Evidence — Hospital Expenses—Particulars—Summons.]—An engineer while working on a steamer was injured by the breaking of a stop valve: — Held, that the Admiralty Court has jurisdiction to try a suit for damages done by a ship to a person. 2. Adequacy of construction is to be determined by the generally approved use at the time of manufacture; and the absence of the best possible construction is not of itself conclusive evidence of negligence. 3. The officers of the ship as well as the men are fellow-workmen and for the negligence of the one the steamer is not liable to the other. A. Improving machinery after an accident is not evidence of insufficiency of its former state. 5. A seaman shipped in Canada and injured in Canada has no claim for hospital expenses under the Merchants Shipping Act, 1894. 6. A plaintiff's claim is confined to the particulars indorsed on the summons. Wyman v. The "Duart Castle," 6 Ex. C. R. 387.

Sale of a ship — Mode of putting in default to sign deed—Can judgment serve as a bill of sale?]-In an action demanding the carrying out of an agreement for the sale of vessel registered as a ship, it appeared that by the contract, it was agreed that part of the price would be paid cash on execu-tion of the bill of sale and the balance as specified future dates with interest. It further appeared that the purchaser (plain-tiff) had tendered (notarially) the cash portiff) had tendered (notarially) the cash portion of the price and called upon the seller (defendant) to sign a bill of sale by the terms of which it was declared that the entire price had been paid. It was, however, also proved that a deed of "mortgage" for the balance of price had been drawn up and that the plaintiff had offered to sign in defendant's presence upon the latter signing the bill of sale and procuring registry, which offer was renewed by the action. That there had been a sufficient putting in default of the defendant notwithstanding the terms of the draft bill of sale whereby payment of the entire price purported to have been acknowledged, the seller's claim for the balance in such case heing properly established by separate deed by way of "mortgage." That though it would not be adjudged in such a cause, that, in default of the defendant duly executing the bill of sale, the judgment shall avail as such bill of title (Fox v. Beaton, 10 L. N. 387), the defendant would nevertheless be adjudged to sign and execute the bill of sale and in case of his default so to do, leave and in case of his default so to do, leave would be granted to the plaintiff to have an officer of the Court directed to make a declaration of transfer of the ship pursuant to the Imperial Act, 57-58 Vict. s. 60, s. 29 (printed in Statutes of Canada of 1895) R. S. Q., Arts. 6257 and 6258. Noel v. Gagnon (1909), 16 Que. R. de J. 267.

Sale of vessel—Statute of Frauds, R. S. (1909) c. 141, s. 11—Sufficiency of memorandum.]—A statement in a letter written to a third person by one of the defendants, that he had an offer from plantiff for the purchase of a schooner, but not stating in the letter than the had accepted it, is not a sufficient memorandum in writing within The Statute of Frauds, R. S. N. S., 1900, c. 141, s. II., to enable the party making the offer to recover damages for breach of contract against the writer for failure to deliver the schooner, the trial Judge having found that the contract had been orally made, by an offer and its acceptance, or contradictory but insufficient evidence.—Per Graham, E.J.—The contents of the letter could not be used as proved, unless loss of the original letter was accounted for. Allen v. Graves, 43 N. S. R. 249, 6 E. L. R. 347.

Shares in ship — Receiver — Writ of summons — Service out of jurisdiction.] — Action by execution creditors against a mortgagee of a British ship to recover the surplus of sale proceeds under power of sale: — Held, that the creditors not having got a receiver appointed of the shares, they had passed to the purchaser. 2. That an order for service out of the jurisdiction on the mortgagee could not be made. Wilson v. Donald, 7 B, C. L. R. 33.

Towage — Contract — Negligence — Inevitable accident — Damages.]—Where a towage contract is made, it implies an undertaking that each party will duly perform his share of it; that proper skill and dlilgence will be used on board both tug and tow; and that neither party by neglect or mismanagement will create unnecessary risks to the other, or increase any risk which might be incidental to the service undertaken.—2. If, in the course of the performance of the contract, any inevitable accident happens to the one, without any default on the part of the other, no cause of action will arise. The "Julia," 14 Moo. P. C. 210, at p. 230, followed. Read v. The "Lillie," 11 Ex. C. R. 274

Towage - Injury to tow - Liability towage — Injury to tote — Laboutey of owners — Evidence — New trial,]—Appeal (pursuant to 62 & 63 V. c. 11, s. 7) from a judgment of Dugas, J., in the Territorial Court of the Yukon. The defendants' steamer, which previously had been employed steamer, which previously had been employed carrying freight and passengers between White Horse and Dawson, had gone out of commission on the 23rd September, 1898, and on that day, and while on her way down Lake Lebarge to winter quarters, she took in tow the plaintiffs' scow loaded with goods. After proceeding some way the weather became bad, and in endeavouring to get into shelter the scow foundered, and the whole cargo was lost. In an action for damages against the owners of the steamer, evidence was tendered by the owners that those charge of the steamer had been particularly warned not to do any towing but this evidence (being objected to by the plaintiffs) was ruled out. Dugas, J., held that the defendants were common carriers and there-fore liable. An appeal from the judgment was allowed with costs, but the plaintiffs were granted the option of a new trial upon payment of the costs of the first trial. Courtnay v. Canadian Development Co., 21 C. L. T. 319, 8 B. C. R. 53.

Transport — "Foreign-going ships" — Imperial Merchant Shipping Act — Sailors—Certificate of discharge — Penalty — Conviction — Right of appeal. — A ship engaged in maritime transport service between Quebea and Anticosti does not come under the designation "foreign-going ship" in the Imperial Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, s. 127.—The captain of such a ship is not obliged to deliver to his crew, at the end of their engagement, the certificate of discharge provided for by s. 128 of that Act, and is not, on that ground, liable to the penalty imposed upon persons for disobedience thereto.—An appeal lies to the Court of King's Bench, criminal side, from a decision of a police magistrate condemning a captain to pay the penalty provided by s. 128. Bélanger v. Gagmon, 14 Que K. B. 340.

Vessel in distress — Borrowing money to defray expense of discharging cargo — General average — Equitable assignment — Authority of master — Notice — "Future properties, possibilities, or expectations."]— Appeal from Halifax v. Vessel in distress in foreign port— Authority of master to borrow money—Agreement in writing, charging funds—Sufficiency of—Trust — Notice.]—The Italian barque "Affezione," with a cargo of lumber, bound from a port in Nova Scotia to Buenos Ayres, put into H. in distress, leaking badly, after having cut away her sails and jettisoned her deck load at sea. It was necessary to dis-charge the cargo immediately and to make repairs, and the master, being without funds for that purpose, borrowed a sum of money from plaintiff under an agreement in writing whereby it was provided that any money re-ceived by the master while in Halifax from the owners, on account of advanced freight, general average or other charges, or upon general average or other charges, or upon bottomry bonds or other security, &c., should be applied, first, in payment of the sum of money borrowed from plaintiff, with interest, or any unpaid balance thereof.—Subsequently F., representing the insurance upon cargo, upon giving the usual bond, obtained possession of the cargo and sold it, realizing a considerable sum of money, and the master gave plaintiff an order upon the adjuster S., for the amount due him, which S. accepted. for the amount due him, which S. accepted, payable when in funds.—As between plaintiff payanie when in tunds—as between plantin and other persons who sought to attach the money in the hands of F., in proceedings against the owners as absent or absconding debtors:— Held, that, under the circum-stances, the master, being in a foreign port, had a right to borrow the money and to give the documents which he did, and that express authority from the owners might be inferred. -Also, that the contribution from the cargo to the ship was sufficiently described and could be easily identified, and the fact that other possible funds were mentioned, all being on account of the barque or her cargo, did not render the description too wide.—Also, that the agreement given by the master met all the requirements of law, and that F., who an the requirements of law, and that F., who had notice of the trust created in respect to the fund, and particularly of the order which it was contemplated would reach it when collected by S., could not pay it over to anyone ected by S., could not pay it over to anyone else, and would be discharged by paying it over to him.—Drysdale, J., dissented on the ground that there must be an intention to deal with or charge a particular fund, and that no such intention was shewn. be sued under the small debt procedure. The plaintiff, in his statement of claim under the small debt procedure, alleged that the defendant had wrongfully taken possession of a horse and converted it to his own use, and expressly waived the tort, and sued for goods sold and delivered, claiming $75, he value of the horse. An application to set aside the writ and service, upon the ground that the claim was not for one debt within the meaning of Rule 092, which brings "all claims and demands for debt whether payable in money or otherwise where the amount claimed does not exceed $100, within the small debt procedure, was refused. The word "debt" is not restricted to "a sum certain or capable of being reduced to a certainty by calculation," but includes claim for value of goods sold where no price is mentioned. Henry v. Mageau, 5 Terr. L. R. 512.

Judicature Ordinance — Counterclaim — Costs.] — In an action under the small debt procedure, the defendant may under Rule 612 set up a counterclaim, the amount of which exceeds the small debt jurisdiction. Nature of claims — "Debt"—Claim for value of goods—Rent payable in kind —Damages for non-delivery—Two claims—One within small dobt jurisdiction.]—In an action for $80$, being the value of twelve loads of straw at $5$ a load, the unpaid balance of rent for a farm leased by the plaintiff to the defendant at a rental of a two-thirds share of the whole crop, and also to recover $15$ for money had and received:—Held, that the claim for the value of the straw was not properly brought under the Small Debt Procedure. The words "all claims and demands for debt, whether payable in money or otherwise," do not extend beyond cases where there is a debt created in the proper sense of the word, clearly recognised as such, and there is an agreement that such debt is to be paid in something other than money—Held, also, that, although a claim clearly within the Small Debt Procedure was joined with such claim, the process was nevertheless bad and must be set aside. Paradia v. Horton, 3 W. L. R. 317, 6 Terr. L. R. 319.

Application of Law Society to strike off roll or sympend — Improper retention of client's moneys — Restitution — Release — Deception of client — False statements on oath — Weight of oath of solicitor—Punish-ment — Suspension — Conditions of re-moval.]—Under sec. 52 of the Alberta Legal Profession Act, it is specifically a ground for a punishment of a solicitor that he has made default in payment of a client's money, in addition to what would be a ground in England; and the solicitor, by making payment of the payment of the solicitor, by making payment of the solicitor, by making payment of the solicitor before the solicitor. ment after default, cannot escape the consequence of his breach of trust in neglecting to pay at the time when he should have done so. Upon an application against the done so. solicitor, the Court will not accept as consolution, the court win not accept as con-clusive a statement on oath made by him if in conflict with the sworn statement of others. The solicitor is entitled to require that the case against him shall be proved, and, all other things being equal, his statement will be accepted in preference to a statement by some one else to the contrary. Upon an application by the Law Society of Alberta to strike off the roll or suspend a solicitor charged with neglecting and refusing to pay over moneys in his hands collected for a client, where the solicitor, before the final hearing, had paid over a large part of it and obtained a release in full from the client, the Court found that the client had been deceived as to the amount received for the client, and that the statements sworn to by the solicitor about his communications to his client regarding the amount received were not true. It was ordered that the solicitor should be sus-pended until a subsequent sittings of the Court, at which such further disposition of the application should be made as should seem proper, leave being reserved to either party to apply at such sittings, and it being a condition to any order terminating the suspension that it should be shewn that the solicitor had paid to the client the balance still in his hands, and to the Law Society their costs of the application. Re Harris (1910), 13 W. L. R. 131.

Conviction for usurping functions of -Resolution of Bar Council - Person assuming to act as advocate - Accountant.] -The defendant, a chartered accountant, sent out a notice, at the head of which were printed his name and description as chartered accountant, requesting payment of a sum of money due to an estate, and con-cluding in these words, "If I do not hear from you within three days, action will be taken for recovery without notice." foot of the letter, there was an entry "Charges, $1.50." He was adjudged to pay "Charges, $1.50." He was adjudged to pay a fine of $25 under s. 3562a of R. S. Q. as amended by 61 V. c. 27, s. 5:—Held, re-versing that judgment, that a resolution of the council of the Bar of the section, authorising the syndic to institute a prose-cution, under s.-s. b of s. 5, 61 V. c. 27, for usurping the functions of the profession, was insufficient to support a condemnation (apparently based on s.-s. f of the same (apparently nased on s.-s, r of the same section), for acting in such manner as to lead to the belief that he (the defendant) was authorised to fulfil the office of or to act as an advocate. 2. Even if the resolution were sufficient, the defendant, in the circumstances stated above, was not guilty functions. of practising as an advocate or of usurping the functions of the profession, nor was he guilty of acting in such manner as to lead to the belief that he was authorised to act as an advocate. Chartered accountants are authorised by law to collect debts, and, although the demand of $1.50 for charges was illegal, it was not sufficient to shew an in-tention to lead the recipient of the letter to the belief that the writer was authorised to act as an advocate, his true description as a chartered accountant being printed at the head. Montreal Bar v. Duff. 24 Que. S. C. 478.

Legal Profession Ordinance - Advocate undertaking to repay — Failure to repay — Application to suspend — Attachment.]—Where costs have been paid to an advocate upon his undertaking to repay them in the event of the ultimate success of the party by whom the payment is made, no order can be made against him under the summary punitive jurisdiction of the Court until after the advocate has made default in complying with a special order to repay by which a time is set for repayment. In re Harris (No. 2), 3 Terr. L. R. 105.

Legal Profession Ordinance - Disqualification of advocate for non-payment of annual fee.]-Held, that an advocate who neglects to pay his annual fee to the Law Society becomes disqualified from practising only after the expiry of the time limited in the notice required by the Rules to be given. Maxfield v. Inskip, 6 Terr. L. R. 81.

Legal Profession Ordinance - Solicitor's agent - Misconduct of agent-Privity between client and agent - Practice as to striking advocates off the rolls — Partner of agent.]—The client has a locus standi to apply to strike off the roll agents of his advocates by whom moneys have been collected and who fail to pay them over, and the affidavit of the principal is sufficient evidence of non-payment without any affidavit from the client.—The partner of an advocate who has failed to remit moneys will not be struck off where he has not him-self been guilty of misconduct.—Statement of the practice to be followed in case of applications to strike advocates off the rolls for non-payment of moneys, Re Harris & Burne, 3 Terr. L. R. 70.

Legal Professions Ordinance-Striking off roll — Suspension.]—Under the provisions of the Legal Professions Ordinance, No. 9 of 1895, s. 16, which enacts that "the Supreme Court may strike the name of any advocate off the roll of advocates for default by him in payment of moneys received by him as an advocate," the Court has no power merely to suspend an advocate temporarily from practice. In re Forbes (No. 1), 2 Terr. L. R. 410. Reinstatement — Grounds for refusal. In re

The Legal Professions Ordinance, 1895, confers no jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the N. W. T. to reinstate an advocate who has been struck off the rolls—Semble, that in this case had there been jurisdiction the application must have been refused on the grounds: (1) that the applicant was in default in not paying the costs which by the order striking him off he had been ordered to pay; (2) that there was no evidence that the advocate was not liable to an application to strike off in respect of moneys other than those in respect of which he had been struck off; and (3) that the lapse of time since the misconduct charged was unusually short. In re Forbes (No. 2), 2 Terr. L. R. 423. Rescission of order —

Jurisdiction. 1-Reseassion of order — surface of the court, having no jurisdiction to reinstate an advocate struck off the rolls, cannot effect the same result by rescinding the order. In re Forbes (No. 3), 2 Terr. L.

Misconduct - Failure to pay over moneys placed in his hands by client -Application of Law Society to strike name of roll — Leniency—Special circumstances —Order for payment of costs.]—The solicitor received from his client the amount necessary to pay the defendants' costs of an action brought by the client, which had been dismissed, and gave a receipt therefor, but did not pay over the money to the defend-ants. Execution for these costs was issued by the defendants, but the sheriff, when he learned that the client had paid the amount to the solicitor, did not levy upon the writ, and drew a bill upon the solicitor, which was accepted, but not paid. The solicitor said that he kept the money until his own costs of the action were paid by the client. The client did not complain of this, but the defendants in the action reported the matter to the Law Society, who moved to strike the solicitor off the roll. When the applithe solicitor on the roll. When the application was heard the solicitor had paid the money:—Held, that the application need not be made by the client, but could be made by the Law Society or any one interested;

Strikin the contras that the solicitor had been guilty of misconduct; but that sufficient had not been shewn to justify his suspension. He was ordered to pay the costs of the application, the costs of the execution, and the costs of another application against him, which was also dismissed. Leave was reserved to the Law Society to mention and rely upon the facts arising in these two cases if any future complaint should be made. Re a Solicitor, 63 L. J. Q. B. 397, followed, Re Solicitor (1910), 15 W. L. R. 727.

Order anspending from practice— Irregularity — Order rescinded by Privy Council,—A solicitor having been arrested for debt claimed his privilege as a practising attorney and was discharged. The Chief Justice of P. E. I. at the same time by an exparte judgment suspended him from practice. The Privy Council rescinded the order on the ground that if he were not entitled to his privilege as a bona fide practising attorney, he ought not to have been protected if on the other hand, he had such right, he cught not to have been suspended. Order of Supreme Court of Prince Edward Island set aside. In re Monekton (1837), C. R. 1 A. C. 113.

"Practising" — Law Society—Annual fees.]—A solicitor who has not obtained his annual certificate from the Law Society cannot, without rendering himself liable to suspension, etc., under the provisions of ss. 22. 23, and 24 of R. S. O. c. 174, practise as such, even in an isolated instance, and he is not relieved by the fact that he is interested in the subject-matter of the litigation. In re Clarke, 32 O. R. 237.

"Practising" — Law Society—Annual fees.]—Having regard to the provisions of the Law Society Act, R. S. O. c. 172, and the Solicitors Act, R. S. O. c. 173, the taking out of the annual certificate entitling a solicitor to practise is voluntary and not compulsory, and practising without it only subjects the solicitor to the penalties and consequences imposed by statute; if he practises without taking out the certificate, he does not make himself liable for payment of the fees for such certificate. Law Society of Upper Canada v. Clarke, 20 C. L. T. 245.

Readmission to practice.]—A solicitor who had abandoned practice for more than five years was readmitted by the Court upon passing an examination to the satisfaction of the council of the barristers' society of New Brunswick. In re Deacon, 36 N. B. R. 3.

Right to practise — Non-payment of fees — Suspension — Law society,]—A solicitor cannot, without paying his annual fees and taking out the certificate of the Law Society, practise as such, even in an isolated instance, or even where he is joined as plaintiff himself with another who holds his claim in the interest of and for the solicitor, without making himself liable to the provisions as to suspension of R. S. O. c. 174. In re Clarke, a Solicitor, 21 C. L. T. 30, 32 O. R. 237.

Striking name from rolls - Cause to the contrary to be shewn in four days -

Enlargement to prepare defence refused— Order reversed.]—An order nisi for striking an attorney and practitioner of the Court of Newfoundland off the Rolls of that Court, unless cause to the contrary should be shewn in four days, made absolute upon no cause being shewn, notwithstanding an application made by him for enlargement of time to enable him to prepare his defence, reversed by the Judicial Committee as being irregularly and improperly made by the Court. Emerson v. Justice of Nfld. (1854), C. R. 2 A. C. S1.

Uncertificated attorney — Void proceedings — Waiver,]—Proceedings by an attorney who has not paid the fee required by C. S. N. B. c. 34 s. 4, are void, and the right to set aside the proceedings is not waived by the opposite party contesting the suit to judgment. Rex v. Sisk, Sisk v. Foley, 35 N. B. R. 560.

Uncertificated solicitor—Right of client to party and party costs.]—The plantiff was deprived of costs on the ground that her solicitor had failed to take out a certificate, as required by the Nova Scotia Barristers and Solicitors Act, 1899. s. 27:—Held, that the procedure to enforce compliance with the provisions of the Barristers and Solicitors Act being by fine and suspension, under ss, 31 and 32 of the Act, and there being no provision enacting in express terms that attorneys who failed to take out certificates as required should be debarred from recovering their costs, or that parties employing such attorneys should be debarred from recovering there was nothing to prevent the plaintiff from recovering her attorney's costs from the opposite party to the suit. Wallace v. Harrington, 34 N. S. R. 1.

Usurping professional functions—Mercantile agency — Collecting letter.]—A mercantile agency firm who sent a letter to a debtor demanding payment from him of a certain sum due by him to a third person, and intimating that legal proceedings would be immediately taken to recover the amount in default of payment, should be regarded as having exercised the profession of an advocate in violation of 61 V. c. 27 (Q.) Montreal Bar Association v. Sprague's Mercantile Agency, 25 Que. S. C. 383.

2. AUTHORITY TO ACT.

Acting without instructions—Release of moneys — Prejudice of client — Damages.]—In the circumstances set out in the judgment of Galliher J.A., a solicitor was held liable to his client for negligence in releasing certain moneys which were to be held for his client pending his obtaining possession of property which he had purchased, with a right to deduct therefrom expenses incurred in getting possession. The solicitor acted honestly, but under the mistaken view that he could release the moneys without instructions from his client; instructions were necessary, and he acted without them; and the client, having been prejudiced by the release of the moneys, was entitled to recover damages from the solicit tor. Judgment of Hunter, C.J., reversed. Parsons v. Wootton (1910), 13 W. L. R.

Action in name of company — Determination of question—Stay or dismissal of action — Adding shareholders as parties: Saskatchewan Land & Homestead Co. v. Leadlay, Saskatchewan Land & Homestead Co. v. Moore, 2 O. W. R. 916, 944, 1075, 1112, 3 O. W. R. 133, 191, 4 O. W. R. 39, 378.

Action in name of municipality Resolution of council — Substantial compliance with.]—A municipal council having resolved to join in an action already launched by an individual against the defendant; the reeve, after consultation with the solicitor, gave instructions to commence an independent action on behalf of the municipality:
—Held, that, as the municipal council had shewn an intention to sue the defendant, the action of the reeve was a substantial,
if not a strict, compliance with that intention. South Vancouver v. Rae, 12 B. C. R.
64, 3 W. L. R. 346.

a Attorney cannot cease to represent a party and a party cannot revoke the powers of his attorney without leave of the Court or of a Judge. Superior Court Rules 43 and 45, which require this condition, are not incompatible with provisions of Civil Code respecting mandate nor with Code of Civil Procedure as to change of attorneys.—The permission will be refused if it appears to the Court or to the Judge that the reasons given for the revocation or renunciation are insufficient and, particularly, if the object is to delay or complicate the suit. Tranchemontagne v. Legare (1910), 38 Que. S. C. 406.

Attorneys are considered as authorised to act for a party so long as he has not been disavowed, and an opposition cannot be contested on the ground that it has been made without the knowledge of the opposant. Drainville v. Sevole & Drainville (1910), 11 Que. P. R. 437.

Authority of an attorney ad litem cannot be cancelled by the opposite party through a single denial of his authority, but proceedings in disavowal by the attorney's client, according to the provisions of the Code of Procedure, are the only means of contestation recognised by law. Drainville v. Savoie (1910), 17 R. de J. 108.

Mandate — Rule of Practice, No. 43— Repudiation of mandate — Judge's permission.—C. C. 1732, 1733, 1759, 1796; C. P. 73, 260, 264; R. P. 43, 45.]—I. Rule of Practice No. 43 of the Superior Court which declares "In addition to the notice prescribed by the code of procedure, the permission of the Judge must be obtained by an attorney before he ceases to represent a party," is valid.—2. An attorney ad litem cannot cease to represent a party in a case and give notice of his intention to the adverse party without having obtained permission from a Judge of the Court having jurisdiction over the case. Tranchemontagne v. Legare (1910), 16 B. L. n.s., 460.

Mandate ad litem — Challenge — Disavocal.]—The authority of attorneys and advocates, who have acted for and represented a party in judicial proceedings, cannot be challenged otherwise than by disavowal. In re Great Northern Construction Co., 34 Que. S. C. 432.

Mortgage — Collection.]—In the absence of legal proceedings to enforce a mortgage security, there is nothing in the mere relation of solicitor and client from which an authority may be implied to the solicitor to receive interest or principal due the client on the mortgage, even though the solicitor arranged the mortgage loan. The solicitor must have either express authority for the purpose, or the course of dealing between the parties must have been such as to necessarily imply such an authority; and the onus of establishing that is upon the mortgagor. An authority to receive interest confers no authority to receive interest confers no authority to receive interest confers no authority to receive principal, and the possession of the mortgage securities is no evidence of authority to receive money due on them. Foreman v. Secly, 22 C. L. T. 67, 2 N. B. Eq. R. 341.

Nominal plaintiff — Parties,]—An action begun in the name of the attorney of the real creditor will be dismissed upon exception to the form, the plaintiff, being without interest in the cause, not being permitted to plead in the name of another. Meunier v. Drolet, 7 Que. P. R. 426.

Power of attorney in favour of another.]—The power of attorney or procuration of a plaintiff not residing in the province, need not necessarily be made in favour of the advocate of the plaintiff; it is sufficient if it is given to a person resident at the place where the action is begun, Spencer v. Strathcome Rubber Co., 24 Que. S. C. 323.

Ratification — Right to recover costs.] —A piano belonging to the defendant having been seized in the possession of one H., the plaintiffs, advocates, upon instructions received from H., who alleged that he was authorised by the defendant, made, in the name of the latter, an opposition demanding the withdrawal of the piano from the seizure which had been made. The defendant's agent, having learnt that the opposition had been filed, went to the office of the plaintiffs and told them that he would not pay the costs of it, but did not order them to discontinue the proceedings, and, the opposition having been maintained, he re-took his piano:—Held, that, in these circumstances, the defendant was liable to pay the plaintiffs the costs of the opposition. Semble, that the defendant, if he wished to avoid the payment of the costs, should have disavowed the proceedings taken in his name. Deliste v. Lindang, 23 Que, S. C. 313.

Retainer — Settlement for professional services rendered — Further proceedings in respect of matter, which was the subject of original retainer—Estoppel—Lack of instructions or new retainer—Effect of no solicitor's rights to costs.]—Appeal from a judgment of Russell, J., in favour of plaintiff in an action for services rendered as a solicitor in opposing a second application for the discharge of seamen convicted and imprisoned for desertion.—Supreme Court of N. S. held that the defendant was not liable for plaintiff's services on the second application, and that the appeal should be allowed with costs, and judgment entered for defendant with costs of trial. Lane v. Duff (1911), 9 E. L. R. 484, N. S. R.

Retainer - Termination of - Costs subsequent to judgment — Limitation of ac-tions. 1—The employment of a solicitor to bring or defend an action, subject possibly to his right to claim payment of his costs on judgment being given, does not terminate on the giving of judgment, so long as any-thing remains to be done which it is the solicitor's duty under his retainer to do for his client's protection; and even, in the ab-sence of such duty, where he does not elect to treat the contract as then at an end, but under his client's instructions acts for him thereafter in subsequent proceedings conse-quent upon the judgment, there is a con-tinuation of such original contract. Where, therefore, after the giving of judgment in an interpleader issue, the solicitor for the de-fendant, against whom judgment had been given, continued, with the client's know-ledge, to act for him in the taxation of the plaintiff's costs, and in the preparation and taxation of certain bills which the defend-ant was entitled to set off, his appointment continued until the completion of those proceedings, so that as against a claim for the amount of his bill of costs, the Statute of Limitations began to run only from the date of such completion. Millar v. Kanady, 5 O. L. R. 412.

Retainer in action - Termination - Authority - Judgment - Extension of time for payment — Disavoual — Ratification — Estoppel.] — The retainer of an attorney ad litem is terminated after proceedings for execution of the judgment; and in a case where there still remains a balance due upon the judgment, he has no right to extend the time for payment of such balance.—The party who wishes to set aside an act of his attorney done without authority, can only do so by an action in disavowal, and not by a simple denial made in the course of the proceedings.— However, a party will be held to have ratified such an act of his attorney ad litem when he has, for example, accepted the amount received on account by his attorney, when the latter has assumed to grant the delay, and in such case he will not be allowed to exercise the right of disavowal. Courchaine v, Courchaine, 9 Que. P. R. 5.4

Retainer in Hitigation — Functions—Consent binding on client — Entry of action.]—The office of the advocate being to protect his client, and for that purpose to take all necessary measures to safeguard his interests, the advocate may validly give a consent to the opposite party that the action shall not be entered as of the day of the return.—Semble, that the advocate who so acts does not go beyond the mandate of an attorney ad litem. Gilbert v. Moore, 9 Que. P. R. 316.

3. CHANGING SOLICITORS.

Action in forma pauperis — Security for costs.] — Even in an action in forma pauperis. a motion by the plaintiff to allow a change of attorneys will be granted only upon the plaintiff giving, previously, sufficient security, to the amount at which the costs of his present attorney are then payable, that said costs will be paid if the plaintiff settles the case, or if judgment is rendered in his favour. Bellemare v. Dominion Park Co., 9 Que. P. R. 159.

Action pending — Payment of costs — Agreement not to charge client,]—A party to an action cannot change his attorney or solicitor in the course of the action without paying the attorney who is superseded his fees and disbursements taxed adversely or on notice, even where there is a written agreement between the two by which the attorney is not to claim costs from his client, but is to collect them from the opposite party. Riopelle v. Montreal, 10 Que. P. R. 179.

Costs — Instruction of new solicitor.]— An advocate substituted in a cause after inscription for trial on the merits has a right to a reasonable renuneration for examining and studying the record, instructions, preparation for trial, etc. Lafortune v. Marchand, 9 Que. P. R. 33.

Informality — Exception.]—An exception à la forme signed by an attorney other than the one who has appeared, without disavowal or substitution, will be dismissed as irregular. Moreau v. Lamarche, 3 Que. P. R. 121.

Leave of Court — Personal appearance of party.]—An attorney ad litem cannot be replaced without leave of the Court; if he is still of record, the party cannot appear personally to continue the proceedings in the cause. Giraud v. Chamy, 9 Que. P. R.

Motion for substitution of attorneys made on behalf of plaintiff when the firm of lawyers representing him has been changed, is a useful proceeding which interrupts preemption. Gorcy v. Can. Pac. Rw. Co. (1911), 12 Que. P. R. 230.

Order — Costs — Forum — Judge in Chambers. —If a party asks for a substitution of attorneys, not necessitated by the death or by the appointment of any member of the firm to any public office, or any other analogous reason, he has no right to demand costs on said motion. If he does so, the adverse party who appears to oppose such condemnation will himself be entitled to his costs.—2, A Judge in Chambers has the power to hear and adjudicate on a motion for substitution of attorneys. Sicily Asphaltum Co. v. Grenier, 10 Que. P. R. 61.

Payment of costs of solicitor reserved — Insolvent extate — Curator.]—
When the curator to the plaintiff's extate proposes to relieve the plaintiff's attorney ad litem of his mandate as such, he must first pay to the latter his expenses and fees for services incurred and rendered which have accrued to the benefit of the estate in direct relation to said cause. McGee v. McCop, 9 Que, P. R. 63.

Practipe order issued by one of two plantiffs — Setting aside. Port Hope Brewing and Malting Co. v. Cavanagh, 9 O. W. R. 994.

4. Costs.

i. Agreements as to.

Agreement to pay double costs.]—An agreement between a lawyer and his client, in a suit wherein the latter claims an inheritance, whereby the client obliges himself to pay to the lawyer, in addition to the fees fixed by the tarift, a further amount, if the case is successful, and after the client has been placed in possession of his inheritance, with a stipulation that the additional sum will be doubled if the mandate is withdrawn, is legal and valid, It follows that the double amount may be claimed from the client who revoked the mandate, although the revocation resulted from the death of the defendant, one of whose heirs the client was, and from family considerations which induced the client to discontinue the case. Riou v. Fraser & Buckley, 37 Que. S. C. 1. (An appeal to the C. K. B. is still pending.)

Agreement with client as to costs of Htigation — Bill of costs — Taxation — Claim against solicitors — Set-off — Statutory provisions affecting solicitors — English Solicitors Act—North-West Territories Ordinance — Jurisdiction of Court over solicities.

Champerty.] — A solicitor agreed with his client to get $2,000 and taxed costs if the action were successful, if not he was to get $500. Agreement held champertous, but he has his lien for costs. Williams v. McDougall (1909), 12 W. L. R. 381.

Confession of judgment — Agreement with counsel — Overcharge. —A solicitor may take security from a client for costs incurred, though the relationship between them has not been terminated and the costs not taxed, but the amount charged against the client must be made up of nothing but a reasonable remuneration for services and necessary disbursements. A country solicitor had an agreement with a barrister at Halifax for a division of counsel fees earned by the latter on business given him by the solicitor. The solicitor took a confession of judgment from a client for a sum which included the whole amount charged by the Halifax counsel, only part of which was paid to him:—Held, that, though the arrangement was improper, it did not vitiate the judgment entered on the confession, but the amount not paid to counsel should be deducted therefrom. Knock v. Owen, 24 C. L. T. 287, 35 S. C. R. 168.

Contract with client - Share in fruits of litigation — Illegal bargain — Champerty —Appeal.] — The confidential relationship existing between a solicitor and his client forbids any bargain between them whereby he is to draw a larger return out of the litigation than is sanctioned by the tariff and the practice of the Courts, and especially any agreement whereby the solicitor is to share in the proceeds of a litigated claim as compensation for his services, as being in contravention of the statute relating to champerty, and a violation of the oath of a barrister on his being called to the bar; nor is it open to a solicitor, during the progress of a case, to call upon his client to pay a round sum, or any sum (other than the costs), before he will go on with the action.—A barrister and solicitor was, therefore, held, disentitled to enforce a bargain made with the client whereby he was to be paid 25 per cent, of the amount recovered in the action, as also payment of a sum of $200, which the client had agreed to pay him in case the solicitor succeeded in up-holding the judgment on an appeal. Re Solicitor, 10 O. W. R. 226, 14 O. L. R.

Misrepresentation — Pressure — Manitoba Law Society Act — Interest — Consideration.]—Section 68 of the Law Society Act, R, S. M, c. 83, making it legal for a solicitor to bargain with his client, does not preclude the Court from determining the validity of any such agreement upon equitable principles, although it contains no express provision. In the course of negotiations leading up to such an agreement, the solicitor overstated the amount of his disbursements, and threatened to dispose of a judgment which had been assigned to him:—Held, that the mis-statement and threat were such as to render the clients incapable of Forbearance to sue may be a sufficient consideration for an agreement by a client to pay interest to his solicitor upon an amount agreed on as due for costs, although there is no legal liability for such interest, and although the client acted without independent advice. Preston v. Nugent, 21 C. L. T. 543, 13 Man. L. R. 511.

ii. Recovery of.

Acquiescence — Revision.] — A party who pays under protest a bill of costs, after having discussed it and obtained several reductions, will be held to have acquiesced in it, and cannot afterwards demand the revision of it, Beaudoin v. Lamothe, 5 Que. P. R. 338.

Action for costs — Lump charge for professional services — Champerty — Agreement.] — The plaintiffs, advocates in the Yukon, swed the defendant for a lump sum for professional services in obtaining a judgment for the defendants against one H., it being alleged by the plaintiffs that they were to charge 8000 if the amount was collected, and by the defendant that they were to get ten per cent. If collected by them:—Held, in appeal, per Drake, J., that by Yukon law an advocate cannot legally obtain a lump sum for professional services under R. 524 of the North-West Territories Judicature Ordinance of 1893. Per Martin, J., that the plaintiffs failed to prove any agreement. Robertson v. Bossuyt, 8 B. C. R. 301.

Action for costs-Prescription-" Final judgment" - Costs of action - Plea offering judgment.]—The words "final judgment," in Art. 2200, C. C., which enacts that the action "for professional services and disbursements of advocates and attorneys is prescribed by five years, reckoning from the date of the final judgment in each case," mean final as opposed to interlocutory, and not final in the sense of being the judgment in the Court of last resort; and consequently prescription of an attorney's claim against his own client for the taxed costs in a cause commences to run from the rendering of the final judgment in the Court in which such costs are taxed, notwithstanding the fact that the case may have been taken to review and conducted by the same attorney in that Court. 2. Where the defendant, by his plea, offers judgment for part of the sum claimed, and the plaintiff does not accept such offer, but proceeds to proof and is unsuccessful in establishing any greater sum than that admitted, he is entitled only to costs up to plea filed, and will be condemned to pay the defendant's costs of contestation after plea filed. Poulin v. Prevost, summarised in Bertrand v. Hinerth, 25 L. C. J. 168, followed. Gilman v. Cockshutt, 18 Que. S. C. 552.

Action to recover fees.]—The defendant's wife having sued him for alimony, they met by arrangement in the office of the wife's solicitor, and in his presence agreed to become reconciled and to resume cohabitation and to settle the suit, and the defendant, as a part of the settlement, agreed to pay directly to the wife's solicitor her costs of the action, which were then fixed at $50. This action was brought by the solicitor in a County Court to enforce payment of that sum. The particulars of the claim were stated thus: "The plaintiffs claim from the end of the costs of suit of defendant's wife defendant the sum of $50. being the amount of the costs of suit of defendant's wife against the defendant, which the defendant agreed to pay as one of the terms of settlement between the said parties!"—Held, that the plaintif could not recover in an action in that from as the plaintiffs sue as cessuis que trust claiming a beneficial interest under the agreement, for the evidence did not shew that the $50 was to be paid to the defendant's wife as trustee for the plaintiff; but that there was, under the circumstances, an equitable assignment of the wife's claim for costs to the solicitors, which was assented to by the three parties all present together, and which enabled the plaintiffs, by an amendment of their particulars of claim, to maintain an action in their own name for the costs in question, Andrews v. Moodie, 5 W. L. R. 185, 17 Man. L. R. 1.

Against opposite party in litigation. —In the absence of any special provision of law, the advocate is not a party in the cause, but merely the agent of the party whom he represents. 2. There being no provision of law by which an advocate appearing in a cause before the Recorder's Court of Montreal, is granted distraction of costs awarded to his client, there is no lien de droit between him and the city of Montreal, the other party to the cause, and he, therefore, has no action in his own name against the city for the costs of a cause in which costs were awarded in favour of his client. Counsel fees — Action for — Liability of solicitor or client — Supreme Court of Canada — Quantum meruit.]—An advocate of the Territories (in whom are combined the functions of both barrister and solicitor) retained a member of the plaintiff firm (Ontario barristers and solicitors) as counsel, and the firm as solicitors, on an appeal for certain clients to the Supreme Court of Canada from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the North-West Territories:— Held, per Curiam, that the contract was to be spelled out of the correspondence which took place up to the time the services sued for were performed, and that for the pur-pose of ascertaining the terms of that con-tract, the subsequent letters should not be looked at. 2. That if the clients were liable by virtue of the original contract, the plaintiffs charging the advocate in mistake of their legal rights would not release the clients. 3. That the advocate's letters were merely of such character as an advocate engaging counsel in the ordinary course would naturally write, and were not such as, under Armour v. Kilmer, 28 O. R. 618, would ren der the advocate personally liable; but, held. McGuire, J., dissenting, and the majority of the Court declining to follow Armour v. Kil-mer, that on the retainer of counsel by an advocate, the advocate, and not the client, is prima facie liable:—Held, also, per Curiam, that an action lies for counsel fees. Mc-Dougall v. Campbell, 41 U. C. R. 332, and Armour v. Kilmer (on this point) followed. 2. That, inasmuch as the tariff of the Su-preme Court of Canada does not apply as between solicitor and client, the plaintiffs were entitled to recover on a quantum mer-uit. O'Connor v. Gemmill, 29 O. R. 47, 26 A. R. 27, followed. Armour v. Dinner, 4 Terr. L. R. 30.

Distraction of costs — Foreign law — Code of Civil Procedure in Quebec — Recovery of costs — Interest.]—"Distraction of costs," as provided for in s. 533 of the Code of Civil Procedure in the Province of Quebec, is the diverting of costs from the Clent or party who in the ordinary course would be entitled to them and their ascription to his attorney or other person equitably entitled. The plaintiffs were the attorneys on the record for one R., against whom an action was brought in the Province of Quebec by the defendant, and an interlocutory motion therein had been dismissed with costs, taxed at $238.20, and judgment entered therefor in the Superior Court at Montreal:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover such costs from the defendant in their own names in Ontario, without the intervention of their client.—Quarc, as to interest on the account. Hutchinson v. McCurry, 23 °C. L. T. 111, 5 °O. L. R. 261.

—An advocate has no direct recourse against a debtor to whom he has written a letter demanding a payment of a sum due to his client, and that in spite of the fact that the debtor admits owing the money and pays it. The right to obtain payment from the debtor of the advocate's charges for the letter must be exercised by the client himself, in view of the fact that the advocate has not obtained distraction for his costs, and that the statute 3 Edw. VII. c. 34 does not authorise him to bring the action in his own name. Demers v. Gendreau, 9 Que. P. R. 426.

A lis pendens registered by the solicitor against land, the subject matter of a redemption action, wherein costs were incurred by the solicitor, will not be discharged on a motion therefor in Chambers, but will be left for the decision of the trial Judge after the hearing of the evidence. Upon application by M. for payment out of Court, the solicitor of H. asserted a prior lien against the fund for his costs of preserving it for H.:—Held, upon the evidence, that it was by the solicitor's efforts that the fund was preserved for H.; that his lien could not be defeated by the charge in favour of M., which was in the same position as if it had been made by H.; and that H. was entitled to a lien for his remuneration for work done as a solicitor (but not as a barrister) in recovering or preserving the fund. On defendant's refusal to make any further payments, plaintiffs brought action to recover the balance due, $400. The only defence suggested in this action which required consideration was that no bill was rendered before suit. Section 34 of the Solicitors' Act requires the delivery of a bill of fees, charges and disbursements for business done by a solicitor as such as a condition precedent therefor. The trial sudge found the agreement proved, and, under the circumstances of the case, that it was fair.—Divisional Court held, that above finding could not, upon the evidence, be successfully attacked. The question of what constituted payment to preclude taxation under s. 49 was not considered, but merely the question arising under s. 34. Append dismissed with costs. Belcourt v. Crain (1910), 17 O. Remuneration for services out of Court — Quantum meruit — Percentage.]—

Sale of mining property—Solicitor—Professional services.]—Plaintiff, a solicitor, claimed 7-125ths of 600,000 shares of Peterson stock, the profit made by defendants in connection with the sale of a mining property. According to the statement of claim this was for his interest in the property, but according to his evidence at the trial 2-125ths was for professional services, the balance being for his interest in the property. The trial Judge gave judgment for 2-125ths, and held there was no consideration for the 5-125ths. On appeal action dismissed, no bill of costs having been delivered and no contract in writing as to plaintiff's services, but without prejudice to any action he might bring. Curry v. MacLaren, 12 O. W. R. 1108.

Solicitor-trustee — Profit costs — Lien.] — Held, that, notwithstanding the provision in s. 40 of the Manitoba Trustee Act, R. S. M. c. 146, the rule of English law that a sole trustee who is a solicitor cannot charge against the trust estate profit costs for acting as solicitor for the estate, still prevails to the extent that he is not entitled as of right to have such costs taxed to him as a solicitor. Meighen v. Buell, 24 Gr. 503, followed. Cradock v. Piper, 1 Macn. & G. 664, distinguished.—Held, also, that neither the Imperial Act 23 & 24 V. c. 127, nor the Ontario Rule 1129 founded upon it, gives a solicitor an absolute right to a lien for his costs upon property recovered or preserved through litigation, but only a discretionary power in the Court to charge the property. Turriff v. McDonald, 21 C. L. T. 545, 13 Man. L. R. 577.

the right to retain possession of money and other objects placed in his care and belonging to his client until he is paid in full for his fees and disbursement.—An advocate is obliged to account to his client for his acts, but until the rendering of such account he owes him nothing and he is not subject to an attachment after judgment at the suit of one of his client's creditors.—When there is an open account between two persons, neither the one nor the other is debtor or creditor so long as the account remains open; that such account cannot be the subject of an attachment after judgment.—An attachment after judgment cannot issue to seize a balance of account when it is only problematical and for the future and when it has not been definitely settled, and the defendant, or the creditor exercising his rights, should first of all account so that the balance due may be agreed upon. Beaumar v. Carbonneau & Bernard (1910), 16 R. L. n. S. 431.

Taxed costs — Additional charges.]
The solicitor can recover from the client only the amount of the bill of costs taxed, unless under agreements to the contrary or for extraordinary services rendered necessary in a cause. Surveyor v. Drainville, 18 Que. S. C. 527.

Agent — Principal solicitor — Payment.]
—A solicitor rendered his bill to a company for $763.59. of which there was $414.25 charged as fees, and $335.34 as disbursements. H. had been employed by the company through the company's Toronto solicitors. As to the Toronto solicitors, can be seen to the company and the was acting on agency terms, and that he was to renit them one-half his fees. Pursuant to that understanding, on rendering his bill of costs he sent to the Toronto solicitors $207.15, half of $414.25, charged as fees, leaving a balance of $562.44, which he claimed from the company, with, however, an infunction to the solicitors that, as between the company and himself, the bill was rendered for $769.59, though he only claimed $502.44. The bill was taken before the taxing Master, as a whole, for $765.59; he taxed off $221.40, leaving a balance of $548.19. On the ground that more than one-sixth of the whole bill was taxen before the taxing Master, as a whole, for $765.59; he taxed off $221.40, leaving a balance of $548.19. On the ground that more than one-sixth of the whole bill was taxed off, the Muster allowed the costs of the reference to the company and taxed the costs to the company against the solicitor:—Held, reversing the decision in 19 C. L. T. 290, that there was not sufficient evidence that the Toronto solicitors were authorised to bind the company involved no such authority of itself. A portion of the cheque was paid to the Toronto solicitors for their own use. The intention was to allow them half the fees charged by the Winnipeg solicitor, and that was what was paid by that portion of the cheque, It might be that the Toronto solicitors were not entitled, as between themselves and the company, to derive a profit from the transaction, or that such an allowance to them was a breach of the Law Society Act, but since the Winnipeg solicitor chose to make them the payment for themselves, he could not subsequently insist that it was received by them for the company. In re H., a Solicitor, 20 C. L. T. 140.

Allowance of lump sum - Work done out of Court — Power of Taxing Officer.]—A solicitor employed by the assignee of a number of life insurance policies to collect $$2,000 from eleven different insurance companies, of which payment was resisted on balles, of which payment was resisted to the ground that they were gambling policies, while the widow of the insured set up a trust for herself and her family, subject only to a lien for premiums paid and interest, after long negotiations, collected from nine of the companies, in all, $70,000, without suit, and also compromised the widow's claim, leaving $60,000 to his client, who by another solicitor then sued unsuccessfully upon the remaining policies. The former solicitor rendered a bill shewing in detail the negotiations and charging disbursements and ordinary costs in connection with an action by the widow and for drawing claim sum to cover the negotiations out of Court. sum to cover the negotiations out of Court.
On trivation of the bill the taxing officer allowed $3,200 in respect of the lump sum charged, having first, with the acquiescence of the parties, conferred with various referees, officers of the Court, and solicitors, are testing as to the Court, and solicitors, as to charges usually made in such matters, and then determined the amount to be allowed in the light of his own general knowledge and experience:—Held, that the ruling of the taxing officer should be affirmed; and that, after himself issuing the order for taxation, the client could not claim to have the solicitor's remuneration assessed in an action. Collection of moneys — Commission.]

—A bill of costs was rendered by the solicitor to the appellant in respect of services of the solicitor in collecting $70,000 of insurance moneys. The principal item was a commission amounting to $3,200 upon the amount collected, and this was allowed on taxation: — Held, having regard to In re Richardson, 3 Ch. Ch. 144, and the line of practice founded thereon as manifested in the certificate of the taxing officer appended to In re Attorneys, 26 C. P. 495, that the conclusion of the taxing officer should not be disturbed. The circumstances surrounding the professional employment in this case were very exceptional, and justified the somewhat liberal allowance ascertained upon the reference. In re Solicitor, 21 C. L. Counsel fees — Allocatur — Tariff — Notice.]—The Judicature Ordinance (R. O.

1888 c. 58), a 462, enacted: "In all causes and matters in which duly enrolled advocates holding certificates as such and resident in the Territories are employed, they shall be entitled to charge and be allowed the fees in the 'Advocates' Tariff' appended to this Ordinance, or as the same may be from time to time varied by the Judges of the Supreme Court in banc." In view of this provision, on a taxantion of a bill of costs by an advocate against his client it was held: — 1. That counsei fees are on the same footing as other fees allowed by the tariff, and an advocate can recover them from a client by action. 2. That an allocatur can be granted for such fees only as are prescribed by the tariff. 3. That any Judge of the Court may grant an allocatur counsel fees before the Court in banc, and the giving of notice to the client of application for an allocatur for fees is discretionary. Hamilton v. Delivery of unsigned bill—Amended bill after order.]—Solicitors having delivered an unsigned bill of costs, the clients applied for and obtained an order that the solicitors should deliver a bill and for taxation of the same when delivered. Under this order the solicitors delivered a bill in which certain charges were made larger than they had been in the previous unsigned bill, and some new items were charged. Objection was taken on the part of the clients that nothing more should be allowed on taxation in respect to any item appearing in the new bill than was charged in respect of it in the first bill, nor should new items be allowed:
—Held, that by applying for an order for delivery of a bill the clients must be considered to have consented to the old bill being withdrawn; and the objection could not prevail. Order for taxation — Effect of client obtaining — Judgment — Certificate of taxa-tion—Review—Time—Extension.]—Where a client has obtained an order in the usual form for the taxation of an advocate's bill of costs upon which he has been sued, and for a stay of the action pending the taxation, although he has made no submission to pay the amount found due, the advocate, after the taxation is ended and the clerk's certificate signed, is entitled to an order giving him leave to sign judgment against the client for the amount found due. The certificate of the clerk is final and conclusive as to the amount due to the advocate unless an application be made for a review of the taxation under s. 529 of the Judicature Ordinance, under s. 529 of the Judicature Ordinance, 1893. That section applies to taxations between solicitor and client, as well as besity for an application on behalf of the advocate to confirm the certificate of the clerk as a report. The clerk's certificate is not a report and need not first be set aside before the application for a review, and the intention of s. 529 is, that a review thereunder should be had after the clerk's certificate has been signed. Since the repeal of s.-s 7 of s. 491 of the Judicature Ordinance, 1893, there is no provision in our Rules as to the time within which a review of taxation can be made, and therefore the provisions of English Order 65, Rule 27 (41), so far as they relate to the time within which an application to a Judge for a review shall be made, are now in force in the Territories by virtue of a. 556 of the Judicature Ordinance, 1893. Where the time for review has expired, the Judge has power under s. 555, in a proper case, to extend the time for making the application for review. In re McCarthy — McCarthy v. Payment - Connected charges - Agreement—Unsigned bills—Delay—Overcharges.]
—A firm of solicitors for about eight years acted for an estate in the collection of moneys and realization of securities relating to a block of land sold by the testator. During this period the solicitors from time to time rendered statements of account to the executors and paid them cheques for balances in their hands as shewn by such statements, and also rendered detailed bills of their costs for their services, in respect of different actions and proceedings taken, though not in all cases, such bills being paid though not in all cases, such bills being pald by the retention by the solicitors, without objection on the part of the executors, of part of the money collected. Two or three of the larger bills were moderated by a tax-ing officer shortly after they were rendered. Upon an application by the executors for taxation of all the bills after the eight years: -Held, that this could not be regarded as one continuous dealing, keeping the right to tax in suspense till the collection or exhaustion of all the securities.—Held, also, upon the evidence, that there was no agreement between the solicitors that the right to tax generally should remain open to the execu-tors. As to certain of the oills of costs said not to have been actually signed by the solicitors. - Held, that they were substantially sufficient, and, after being paid out of the funds collected, with the knowledge and sanction of the executors, they could not be sanction of the executors, they could not be treated as open to taxation after years of delay, and no specific overcharges being in-dicated. Where proceedings for the sale of property in question in mortgage actions were postponed from time to time upon the solicitation of the mortgagor, and without instructions or consent of the plaintiff, the mortgagee, for the purpose of enabling the mortgagor to raise the necessary money to pay off the mortgage debt, and where successive postponements re-sulted in securing for the mortgagee a larger sum than could have been realized by a forced sale, and the mortgagee accepted the benefit thus secured for her, she was held liable to pay to her advocate the costs and expenses incurred in connection with the various postponements. Where the order for taxation of an advocate's bill of costs, obtained at the instance of the client, did not reserve to the client the right to dispute retainer: Held, that the retainer must be taken to be admitted; and where in such a case the advocate had stated in writing that he did not vocate had stated in writing that continue to the charge anything for certain proceedings taken without special instructions, but it appeared that the statement was made without consideration, the advocate was allowed his costs of such proceedings. the taxation of an advocate's bills of costs no counsel fee should be allowed in respect to an application made by a clerk of the advocate, and evidence should be given on the taxation that the applications for which a counsel fee is asked were in fact made by an advocate. An application to postpone a sale is a common application for which $2 only should be allowed. Upon the taxation of his bill, the advocate will not be allowed a lump sum as commission upon a collection made for his client, unless such evidence is produced before the taxing officer as will enable him to ascertain that the commission represents reasonable and proper charges for services actually rendered. 5. NEGLIGENCE.

Advice — Established jurisprudence — Terrilorics Real Property Act—Charge on land—Execution—Sheriff — Tort—Pleading — Interpleader — Counterclaim — Bill of costs.]—Where a sheriff and an execution creditor are sued together in respect of an alleged irregular levy, the sheriff is not obliged to interplead, but may defend with the execution creditor.—2. A solicitor who advises his client according to the established jurisprudence is not guilty of actionable negligence if the decision upon which he relies is overruled.—3. Neither a solicitor nor a sheriff becomes a tort-feasor, as against a transferee whose transfer is unregistered, by registering, in the discharge of his duty, an execution of a judgment against lands of the judgment debtor.—4. The delivery of an execution with a requisition to the sheriff to charge and levy upon lands apparently belonging to the execution debtor does not give rise to any implied or express obligation on the part of the solicitor or corroct to indemnify the sheriff against loss or damage in consequence of irregular levy.—5. In an action by the sheriff against loss or damage in consequence of irregular levy.—5. In an action by the sheriff against a solicitor for office fees and charges, the solicitor cannot counterclaim for overcharges in former bills paid to the sheriff by him in respect of matters in which the solicitor may have acted for the parties interested, because such overcharges, if recoverable, do not belong to the solicitor, but to his clients. action, however, the solicitor may counterclaim for costs in a former suit in which he acted for the sheriff, notwithstanding his omission to render a signed bill of the costs prior to the filing of the counterclaim. Judgment in 21 C. L. T. 270, 4 Terr. L. R. 474, reversed. Taylor v. Robertson, 22 C. L. T. 80, 31 S. C. R. 615.

Conduct of cause — Illegal arrest by attorney, at instance of client — Responsibility.]—The Court refused to disturb a verdict for the defendant in an action by a client against his attorney for negligence and want of skill in the conduct of a suit in which the attorney had caused an illegal arrest, in consequence of which the client was mulct in damages at the suit of the party arrested; the client having insisted that the arrest be made after being advised by the attorney that it would be irregular and illegal. Kenen v. Hill, 38 N. B. R. 342, 4 E. L. R. 180.

Construction of statute — Disagreement of jury—Payment of second jury fee—Practice.]—Action by a client against his solicitor for damages for negligence. Defendant in an action in which this plaintiff was defendant, as instructed, had served a jury notice and paid the jury fee. At the first trial the jury disagreed. For the second trial this defendant gave a new jury notice, but did not pay a jury fee again, believing it was unnecessary. The Court held it was. The case was placed on the non-jury list and defendant consented to judgment: — Held, that action should be dismissed as no gross negligence or gross carclessness. Farquharson v. Wecks, 7 E. L. R. 547.

Instructions to proceed under Work-men's Compensation Act — Failure to observe requirements of Act—Action against solicitor—Non-suit because no damage shewn—Plaintiff injured in mine not owned by his employers—"Undertakers"—No remedy available — "Owners"—Burden of proof. Scott v. McCarter (B.C.), 8 W. L. R. 228.

6. PARTNERSHIP.

Change in firm — Service of demand — Peremption.]—Where a party plaintiff or defendant is represented by a firm of attorneys, one of whom is appointed to a judicial position incompatible with the exercise of the profession of an advocate, a peremption of the suit may, nevertheless, be demanded against such party by serving the demand upon those of his attorneys who are still practising. Bremner v. Hibbard, 3 Que. P. R. 89.

Death of partner — Motion for percention.]—Where one member of a firm of advocates had died, and there has been no substitution of attorney, the remaining members of the firm continue to represent the party for whom the firm was acting, and are entitled to make a motion for percention of sum are a motion signed of the said firm," is illegal and will be rejected. (Gill, J., diss.) Wright v. Can. Pac. Ru. Co., 19 Que. S. C.

Death of partner — Signature of firm—Peremption.] — Although the surviving members of a firm of solicitors dissolved by the death of one of its members have a right to make and sign a motion for peremption of the suit, they cannot add to their signatures that of the deceased partner, and if they do it will amount to an absolute nullity, Judgment in 3 Que. P. R. 161, reversed. Wright v. Canadian Pacific Ric. Co., 20 C. L. T. 442, 3 Que. P. R. 316.

Departure of partner from province
—Notice of peremption—Service on remaining partner,]—Where a member of a firm of solicitors and advocates has notoriously ceased to be a member of the Bar or profession in the province, the service of a motion for peremption made on the remaining partner in the firm is valid service, the firm being the plaintiff's solicitors of record. Chouinard v. Thompson, 3 Que. P. R. 476.

Dissolution of firm — Effect on subsequent proceedings—Peremption.]—When one member of a firm of solicitors dies or ceases practice, in consequence of a public appointment incompatible with the exercise of his profession, a party to an action represented by the firm is sufficiently represented by the remaining member or members of the firm. 2. If two solicitors have dissolved partnership, but have both continued to practise their profession, the client's mandate is held by both of them, and not by either of them acting alone, and therefore, a motion for peremption served on one only of the then partners is irregular and illegal. Glass v. Eveleigh, 21 C. L. T. 51, 3 Que. P. R. 357, 18 Que. S. C. 531.

Dissolution of firm - New partner -Mandate — Pending suit — Notice of mo-tion—Peremption.]—The defendant was represented in this case when it was first instituted, by a firm of three solicitors, one of whom was subsequently raised to the Bench. Another solicitor then became a partner in the firm. The defendants presented a motion for peremption of the suit signed by the new firm. The plaintiff opposed the motion. on the ground that it was not shewn that the new firm, although containing two members of the former firm, had any mandate from the defendant to act for him in the case, in so far at least as the new member of the firm was concerned:—Held, dismissing motion for peremption with costs, that a member of a firm of solicitors who joins the firm after the institution of an action must shew that he is authorised to act therein. that he is autorised to not therein. 2. The does not do so, the subsequent proceedings must be signed by the remaining members of the firm alone. Landry v. Pacaud, 19 Que. S. C. 171.

7. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Action — Necessity for separate solicitors for opposite parties.] — The same attorney cannot act for both plaintiff and defendant, even if the latter submits his rights to the Court; such a joinder of functions is irregular and incompatible with the interests of the parties. Lefebvre-Desocteaux v. Lefebvre-Desocteaux, 8 Que. P. R. 319.

Action against, by client for an account — Taxation of costs — Special agreement as to costs—Stay of proceedings pending taxation—Trial — Provision for payment.]—In an action against a firm of solicitors for the recovery of money collected by them for the plaintiff, the solicitors claimed the right to retain the money for extra costs between solicitor and client in proceedings which they had conducted for the plaintiff. The plaintiff, however, alleged that there had been a special agreement precluding any such claim —Held, that an order for taxation of the defendants' bill of costs should not have contained a stay of proceedings in the plaintiff's action, as he was entitled to have the question of the existence of the alleged agreement determined by a trual in the soft-say way.—Held, also, that under Rules 96-80° (I. I. I. 1998). Stay of the contained a clause directing the client to pay the amount, if any, found due.—Re Debenham and Walker, 18851 2 Ch. 430, followed.—Quare, whether there should have been any order for taxation of the defendants, bill before the other questions raised had been decided at the trial. Myers v. Munroe, 4 W. L. R. 221, 16 Man. L. R. 112.

Action against client for costs—Proceedings in name of client for beneft of others—Proof of guaranty of third persons — Consent of solicitor—Forner—Forner of solicitor—Forfeiture of costs.]—The remedy of an action is open to an advocate for the recovery of his costs, against a client for whom he has acted and in whose name proceedings have been taken. The defendant in such an action will not be heard to allege that the proceedings were taken nominally for him, but really for the benefit of third persons, unless he can prove that the third persons guaranteed the costs with the consent of the advocate claiming them. The defence that the taking of a proceeding, the success of which depends upon the admission of the opposite party, is the fault of the advocate which involves the forfeiture of his right to costs, is equally inadmissible. Mount v. Provencher, 34 Que. S. C. 144.

Action against solicitor — False imprisonment — Enforcement of invalid conviction — Trespass — Absence of malice — Privilege. — The plaintiff was convicted for unlawfully selling liquor to an Indian in violation of the Indian Act, before the defendant as a stipendiary magistrate, who sentenced him to fine and imprisonment absolute. He appealed to a County Court, where both penalties were reduced, in his absence, as he was confined in gaol on a conviction under another penal statute. On the hearing of the appeal the defendant acted as counsel for the prosecutor, prepared the conviction and warrant, and by appointment handed them to the sheriff, who executed them. The plaintiff had been discharged by the Court in banco, under a writ of habeus corpus, on notice to the defendant, the order reciting an adjudication that the conviction was lilegal and without jurisdiction (Rex v. Johnston, 41 N. S. R. 105), and on that application the defendant filed an affidavit against the motion. In a action by the plaintiff against the defendant in his capacity as solicitor, for false imprisonment, the trial Judge withdrew it from the jury at the close of the plaintiff's case. on the ground that there was no evidence of on the ground that there was no evidence or malice, and that the defendant's privilege as a solicitor protected him:—Held, dismissing the plaintiff's appeal and motion for a new trial, that the plaintiff could be legally sentenced to imprisonment absolute, in his absence, by the County Court Judge on the appeal, but, assuming that he could not, that the action of the County Court Judge in so sentencing him was a mere error, which did not invalidate the conviction, and, as the defendant was not shewn to have acted maliciously or officiously, he was not liable in trespass. — Per Townsend, C.J., dissenting, that the conviction having been adjudged illegal, and without jurisdiction, by the Court on the return to the habeas corpus, and the defendant being shewn to have been the instrument in procuring, enforcing, and holding the invalid conviction, he was liable in damages, and the case should be remitted for a new trial, Johnston v. Robertson, 42 N. S. R. 84.

Action by, for compensation for services — Prosecution of claim against Dominion Government—Quantum meruit—Nature of service — Commission. Murphy v. Corry, 7 O. W. R. 363.

Action in damages against a lawyer for the use of unprivileged words during the hearing of a ease — Costs allowed by the Superior Court reduced by the Court of Review—Costs in review.]—An action in damages will lie against a lawyer for using irrelevant and unprivileged words at the hearing of a case, although such words may have been used without malice and apparently in answer to unfounded observation made by the opposite party. It results from the evidence in the present case that, under the circumstances, the judgment under review should be varied as to costs in so far as it condemns the defendant to pay the costs of an action for $100, and confirmed to the extent of $20 only, but with costs of an action against the defendant and the costs of an action against the defendant and review against the plaintiff. Dorien v. Paquin, 16 R. de J. 226.

Advocate acting as agent for sale of land — Right to commission. Cruikshank v. Prudhomme, 3 E. L. R. 23.

Affidavit — Scandal — Confidential communication by client — Privilege, I — The plaintiff's claim was for payment of $6,000 which she alleged the defendant had received for her as the purchase-money of certain real estate belonging to her, which she had employed the defendant to sell for her. She alleged that he had only paid over $500 of the money. The defendant, who was a solicitor, applied for an order for security for costs, on the ground that the plaintiff was permanently resident out of Manitoba, and, in support of the application, filed his own affidavit in which he set forth certain communications alleged to have been made by the plaintiff to him as her solicitor, and which, if true, shewed that she was not legally married to her alleged husband, and stated in effect that the plaintiff had returned to and was living with such alleged husband, who was a non-resident. plication to have the affidavit taken off the files of the Court, it was argued on behalf of the defendant that the facts thus sworn to were relevant to the question whether the plaintiff was permanently resident out of the jurisdiction or not, as tending to shew that jurisdiction or not, as tending to shew that she was greatly under the influence of the alleged husband, and therefore, likely to re-main permanently with him:—Held, that the affidavit should be ordered off the files as containing matter which the plaintiff was entitled to have treated as privileged from disclosure and which was scandalous and ir-relevant to the application. A. v. B., 24 C. L. T. 249, 14 Man. L. R. 249.

Attorney ad litem - His renunciation Attorney ad Item — His renunciation of his mandate — Reasons which justify it — Permission of the Court—C. P. 73, 260; C. C. 7759; R. P., Nos. 43, 45.]—Rule of Practice No. 43, which declares that, in addition to the notice prescribed by the code of procedure, the permission of the Judge must be obtained by an attorney before he must be obtained by an attorney before he ceases to represent a party, is legal, and does not conflict with Art. 260 C. P. and Art. 1739 C. C. (Hildes v. Croizard, 3 Que. P. R. 225, discussed).—In the absence of some special good reason, permission to an attorney to cease from representing a party in a case will not be granted by the Court. Trachemontagne v. Legare (1910), 11 Que. P. R. 374.

Attorney's fees upon contestation of abandonments.]-Article 76 of the tariff of fees of attorneys does not determine such fees as regards the contestation of the statement abandonment of insolvent debtors. Nor does the general tariff provide for such case. Under such circumstances, Art. 6 of the tar-iff confers upon the Judge the power of determining what such fees shall be. Attorneys' fees in second-class actions seem to offer a reasonable compensation in such cases of contestation of statement, and in this case it is ordered that the fees of the contestants' attorneys be taxed as those of an action of the second-class in said Super-ior Court, including the costs of petition for taxation of said costs. McManamy v. Glas-cott, 16 R. de J. 42; 11 Que. P. R. 162.

Bar council — Appeal from rulings of— Excess of jurisdiction — Prohibition.]—Al-though the law (61 Vict. c. 27, s. 2), forbids all appeals from rulings of sectional Bar councils pronounced against their members on complaints lodged against them, the Su-perior Court has, by virtue of Art. 50, C. P., a right of control and surveillance over the tribunals formed by these sectional counthe tribunals formed by these sectional councils in such cases. This right and control cils in such cases. This right and control will be exercised by a writ of prohibition, but only when the council dealing with the complaint exceeds its jurisdiction and not otherwise. Semble, that informalities so grave that they amount to an excess of jurisdiction would justify the issue of a writ of prohibition, in spite of the wording of Art, 1003, C. P., which seems to deny this right. Thus a writ of prohibition would not right. Thus a writ of prohibition would not be granted when its object was an indirect be granted when its object was an indirect appeal from the ruling of the council act-ing within the limits of its powers in enquir-ing into a complaint. In the case in hand the advocate against whom the complaint was lodged could not prevent the council hearing the complaint because there is an action for damages pending between the same action for damages pending between the same parties based on the same facts before the Superior Court, the jurisdiction of the two tribunals being absolutely distinct; and, therefore, the Bar tribunal, in investigating such complaint, is not guilty of contempt of Court; and, besides, it is not for the member against whom a complaint is made to raise this objection. Vidal v. The Bar of Quebec, 27 Que. S. C. 115.

Charge on property recovered or preserved, for costs of proceedings—23 & 24 V. (Imp.) c. 127, s. 28—Attachment—Parties.]—Notwithstanding the wording of Rule 852 of the King's Bench Act, thick residently in control of the control of ing of Rule 852 of the King's Bench Act, which provides that, in case of attachment, "the proceeds of the property and effects attached in the sheriff's hands shall be ratably distributed among such plaintiffs as in due course obtain judgment and execution... in proportion to the sum actually due upon such executions," an order may be made under s. 28, of the Solicitors' Act, 23 & 24 Vict. (Imp.) c. 127, giving the solicitor for the plaintiff in whose action the order for attachment was made a charge order for attachment was made, a charge upon the net proceeds of the attached prop erty in the sheriff's hands for the amount of his taxed costs, charges, and expenses in the action, including the costs of interpleader proceedings in which claims to the goods are successfully resisted, in priority to the claims of other execution creditors, when it apor other execution creditors, when it appears that such proceeds have been "preserved" by the labour, time, and money expended by the solicitor, within the meaning of that section. Darling v. Smith, 10 P. R. 360, followed. Richards, J., dissented—It is quite immaterial that some of the parties is quite immaterial that some of the parties for whose benefit the property has been re-covered or preserved are not parties to the action. Greer v. Young, 24 Ch. D., at p. 549, Emden v. Carte, 16 Ch. D. 311, and Leacock v. McLaren, 9 Man. L. R. 599, followed. Valentinuszi v. Lenarduzzi, 16 Man. L. R. 121.

Client acting for himself - Discontinuance—Settlement of action by parties— Rights of solicitor, in absence of fraud.]— The parties to a suit have a right to settle the same as they see fit, without the presence or assistance of their attorneys, provided such settlement be not made in fraud of their attorneys' rights. 2. Where an action was settled by the parties themselves without fraudulent intent, and in the settlement no mention was made of costs, a general inno mention was made of costs, a general in-scription by the defendant on the whole of the issue as joined was held to be irregular; but the Court reserved the right of the de-fendant's attorney to proceed for his costs, and also the plaintiff's right to file a dis-continuance of the action upon such terms as he might be advised. Delaney v. Lionais, 19 Que. S. C. 288.

Client acting for himself - Discontinuance.]—The solicitor being merely the agent of the party to the action whom he represents, and the principal being at liberty to act without the concurrence of the agent, the former may personally file a discontinuance of the action, without the knowledge or consent of his solicitor. Levasseur v. Levis, 19 Que. S. C. 212.

Client's money retained — Bill of costs ordered to be delivered—Disobedience of order—Attackment — Settlement and receipt given in full—Agreement with cliest— Extenser—Costs.]—Client moved to sommit a solicitor for contempt for not bringing in his bill of costs and disbursements for taxation pursuant to an order so to do.—Middleton, J., held. 16 O. W. R. 237, 21 O. L. R. 255, 1 O. W. N. 837, that the order should go for attachment. The attachment not to issue for two weeks, and if in the meantime the solicitor delivered a bill, or a statement in writing that he makes no claim against the client for costs or disbursements, it shall not then issue. The solicitor to pay costs of these proceedings in any event of the reference under the order already made and the amount of such costs to be taken into account in ascertaining the balance upon the reference.—Divisional Court dismissed solicitor's appeal with costs. Re Solicitor (1910), 17 O. W. R. 2, 2 O. W. N. 67, 22 O. L. R. 30.

Expert advice — Fee for — Account of one solicitor against another—Assigned to book-keeper—Action to recover — Solicitor personally liable—Judgment entered. Goodwin v. Dancey (1910), 17 O. W. R. 361.

Intervention — Withdraval—Service—Filing,]—An attorney who has agreed to make an intervention on behalf of a person who has interests opposed to those of the defendant whom he represents, may and ought to cease to represent him. — 2. The fact that the intervention is regarded as dismissed because it has not been served, as provided by Art. 223, C. P., does not alter the attorney's position, if the record shews that he has accepted instructions to make the intervention, and that it is opposed to the claims of the defendant.—Semble, that, in spite of Rule of Practice 43, an attorney ad litem may renounce his instructions without the permission of a Judge, such Rule being incompatible with Art. 200, C. P., and Arts, 1732 and 1759, C. C., and consequently illegal and void.—Semble, also, that the intervention should be served on all the parties to the cause and filed at the record office within the three days following its reception by the Judge. Hillock v. Croizard, 3 Que. P.

Investment of money — Liability to client—Guaranty. Lewis v. Ellis, 1 O. W. R. 356.

Maintenance and champerty—Action on bill of costs — Defence — Agreement of solicitor to conduct action without remmeration — Cross-action — Consolidation.)—
The bill of costs sued upon was incurred in respect of an action brought by plaintiff as solicitor for defendant. At the cod of the litigation plaintiff rendered a hill of $1,755.89. He gave credit for $1,473.23. This left a balance of $282.66. For this, as well as for an $82.50 note, which was not paid, an action was brought. The bill was rendered more than a year previous, and no order for taxation was taken out, because negotiations were pending for settlement, it was said. On motion for summary judgment, defendant also denied that he ever consciously signed a retainer; and further alleged that plaintiff "took up the case on condition that he was to get his costs out of defendants; that if they failed all he would be supported to the summary in the s have to pay was the defendants' costs:"— Held, the agreement alleged was not champertous, nor in any way within the prohibition against maintenance. "It was never doubted that a solicitor might lay out his own moneys, as disbursements on his client's account, and a solicitor can conduct a case gratuitously out of charity or friendship towards his client." In re Solicitor, Clark v.

Misconduct - Accepting transfer of client's property after judgment—Defeating anticipated execution—Fraud on plaintiffs— Summary jurisdiction.]—Before the trial of action for damages for tort the defendant's solicitor wrote to one of the defendants warning him of a possible judgment against him and advising him to make disposition of his property in anticipation of it. After verdict against the defendants, and pending argument on the motion for judgment, council (who was also one of the solicitors) the defendants, obtained a transfer to himself of certain property belonging to the defendant union, which he credited with $500 on account of costs; subsequently judgment was entered for the plaintiffs for $12,500 and costs, and the plaintiff obtained the appointcosts, and the plantil obtained the appointment of a receiver and issued executions, but nothing was realized:—Held, reversing the decision of Irving, J., Martin, J., dissenting, that the solicitor in obtaining the transfer to himself of the property was guilty of a fraud on the plaintiffs; and upon a summary application in the original aca summary application in the original ac-tion he was ordered to restore it or pay its value into Court, under penalty of attach-ment. Centre Star Mining Co. v. Rossland Miners' Cnion, No. 38 Western Federation of Miners, 11 B. C. R. 194, 1 W. L. R. 244.

Moneys collected compensated by professional services — C. P. 191, 217; C. C. 1188.]—If an action for the recovery of moneys collected by the defendant for the plaintif, the former, by a cross-demand, alleges compensation by professional services, commission, etc., an inscription in law asking the rejection of this cross-demand, will not be granted on the ground that the debts are equally clear and liquidated, and that the defendant should merely have pleaded to the principal action; but preuve avant faire droit will be then ordered. Drouin v. Patry (1910), 11 Que. P. R. 268.

Moneys in hands of solicitor — Payment over — Summary application — Contract — Dispute.1—The Court will not, on a summary application compel an attorney to pay over money the right to which is dependent on the existence of an agreement between the attorney and the client, which let latter disputes. Payment of bill — Bailiff's fees — Action for.]—A bailiff has no recourse against a client who has paid his solicitor the amount of a bill of costs taxed, including the fees of such bailiff. Becelles v. Pauette, 18 Que. S. C. 124.

Purchase of property through solicitor having option for purchase—Breach of duty of solicitor—Non-disclosure of existence of option—Want of independent advice—Secret profit retained by solicitor—Recovery by client,1—The two defendants were in partnership as solicitors. One of them, having secured an option for the purchase of a property at $55,000, negotiated with the plaintiff or the sale of it to him at $65,000, concealing from the plaintiff the fact that he had the option, and, upon the plaintiff agreeing to purchase at $65,000, the transaction was carried out as one between the owners of the property and the plaintiff, the plaintiff netering into an agreement with the owners to purchase at $65,000, and the defendant B. receiving $10,000 from the owners:—Held, upon the evidence, that the defendants here acting as the solicitors for the plaintiff, and it was their duty to disclose to the plaintiff then that the plaintiff, and it was their duty to disclose to the plaintiff the fact that B. had an option on the property, and to insist that the plaintiff is bould consult another solicitor, and refuse to complete the purchase until he had obtained independent advice: and, this not having been done, the plaintiff was entitled to recover from B. the $10,000 from the property of the plaintiff value of the plaintiff was entitled to recover from B. the $10,000 net profit received. Amphlett v. Blaylock (1910), 13 W. L. R. 515, Alta. L. R.

Retaining fee — Assignment to solicitor of fruits of litigation as security for sale of litigious rights—Champerty.]—A transfer made by a plaintiff to his advocate of the amount in question in the action as collateral security for a sum of money, which he has engaged to pay him by way of retainer in the cause, is not tainted with the nullity which proceeds from Art. 1485, C., touching the acquisition of litigious rights by the officers who are named in that article. Lamothe v. Montreal Street Rw. Co., 16 Que. K. B. 1.

Right of retention — Moneys deposited in bank instead of in Court—Remuneration for services—Action—Quantum meruit—Ascertainment — Elements — Tariffs — Opinion evidence.] — An attorney who has received from his client a sum of money to deposit in the office of the Court, and who, by arrangement with the attorney of the opposite party, makes a joint deposit with him of this sum in a bank, has parted with the money and is not the holder of it. He cannot, therefore, assume to exercise a right of retention in respect of it.—2. The value of the services of an advocate is recoverable by action. The value depends upon (a) the age, the experience, and the reputation of the advocate; (b) the importance of the matter in which the services are rendered; (c) the work and research which it requires; (d) the amount which is ordinarily paid for services of the same nature. The means of the client have nothing to do with the matter.—3. The Court has the power absolutely to estimate and determine the value without being obliged to follow tariffs or opinions expressed by witnesses at the hearing. Prattle v. Hott, 52 Que. S. C. 323.

Right to commission on sale — Disclosure of agency. McCullough v. Hull, 1 O. W. R. 451.

Service on defendant's solicitor — Dismissal of action—Default of plaintiff—Application by plaintiff for relief—Duration of retainer—Absent defendant.]—Owing to a change in the plaintiff's firm of solicitors an order for security for costs was not complied with and an order was made under Rule 1203, dismissing the action with costs, but no judgment was entered or costs taxed. When the order came to the knowledge of the plaintiff's solicitors they at once moved under Rule 358 to be allowed to put in security and proceed with the action. Notice of this motion was served on the defendant's solicitors who, however, did not consider himself any longer entitled to act as his client had left the province when the action was dismissed and had left no address. The Master in Chambers held that so long as Rule 358 can be invoked, the action is still solicitor. Muir v. Guinane, 5 O. W. R. 324, 9 O. L. R. 324.

Settlement of action by parties — Lien for costs — Notice—Collusion.]—Apart from any question as to there being fruits of the action and the absence of collusion, the lien of a solicitor for his costs of the action is dependent upon notice, which must be clear and explicit to the opposite party, that his costs are unpaid, and that he looks to the proceeds of the action for the payment thereof. Agreement for lease — Rent to be fixed by percentage on cost of building to be erected — Amount of rent — Consent of lessees to extra cost of building — Construction of agreement — Dependent or independent covenants. Joseph v. Anderson & Macbeth Co., 9 O. W. R. 482

Contract — Option — Purchase of land—Time — Ejectment — Injunction to restrain.]—Time is of the essence of unilateral agreement, such as an option to purchase land. On an application for an injunction order, in a suit for the specific performance of an agreement for the sale of land, to restrain an action of ejectment by the vendor to recover possession of the land, the Court ordered that, on the defendant confessing the action of ejectment, the plaintiff should be restrained until further order from taking possession; otherwise the application should be dismissed. Semble, that relief by specific performance cannot be obtained under s. 283 of 60 V. c. 24. Freeman v. Stevart, 2 N. B. Eq. R. 365; Stewart v. Freeman, 22 C. L. T. 211.

Contract for sale and purchase of land — Agent of purchaser — Action by agent — Delay of purchaser — Resale —

Right of sub-purchaser to join vendor as party.]—Where an agent makes a contract for the purchase of land in his own name, the vendor knowing that the agent is acting for another person, whose name is not disclosed, the agent cannot maintain an action in his own name against the vendor for specific performance of the contract, Where the value of land is uncertain and speculative, the purchaser thereof must act upon his rights with reasonable diligence and promptitude, upon pain of losing them. The owner of land of that character on the 1st May, 1900, contracted to sell it to H., was never paid anything upon the purchase money, although $50 was to be paid down, and $200 in six months, to be secured by H.'s note, which never was given. On the 29th August, 1900, H. contracted to sell the land to the plaintiff acting for an unnamed principal, and the owner was willing to carry out the resale:—Held, that the whole course of proceedings on the part of the plaintiff's principal (set out in the case) shewed that he had been endeavouring to keep alive his claim to the land as long as possible in order that he might take it if it increased in value, without committing himself actually to buy it, in case it should depreciate, and the action should be dismissed as against both defendants .- Held, that the owner was properly joined as a defendant; the foundation of the right against him being that the plaintiff or his against him being that the plantin of his principal was the equitable owner under the contract with H. of H.'s rights against the contract with It. of It.'s rights against the owner of the land, and might join the latter upon offering to perform It.'s contract. Smith v. Hughes, 23 C. L. T. 108, 5 O. L. R. 238, 2 O. W. R. 19.

Contract for sale and purchase of land — Bill of complaint — Allegation of tender — Demurrer — Evidence.]—Where in a suit for specific performance of an agreement for the sale of and, the question whether the plaintiff had made a tender of the purchase money within the time limited by the agreement was one of evidence, a demurrer to the bill on the ground that it did not allege a tender in time was overruled. A few days after the expiry of the time limited by the judgment, the defendant tendered the purchase money, less $500, which the plaintiffs refused to accept:—Held, that the above provision was in the nature of a forfeiture, and not of liquidated damages, and the purchaser was entitled to be relieved from the terms of the judgment and to have a conveyance of the property upon paying the balance due after credit given for the $500. Empire Loan & Savings Co. V. McRae, 23 C. L. T. 229, 5 O. L. R. 710, 2 O. W. R. 325, 405.

Contract for sale and purchase of land.—Oral contract.—Statute of Frauds.—Part performance.—Possession.—Note or memorandum.—Delivery of deed in escrow.]—Specific performance of an oral contract for the sale and purchase of land was adjudged at the suit of the vendee, who had gone into possession of the land on the faith of the contract and openly and continuously for some time remained in visible possession by his tennats, to the knowledge of the vendors and without objection on their part. It was considered that, under the circumstances, possession should be assumed to have been taken with the assent of the vendors, and the possession was of such a character as to exclude the operation of the Statute of Frauds. Quarre, whether a conveyance of land defectively executed and delivered in escrow and retained in the vendor's own possession, to be handed to the vendee on payment of the purchase money, can be regarded as a note or memorandum in writing of a previous parol contract between the parties for a sale of the land on the terms mentioned in the deed. Contract for sale and purchase of land — Taking possession — Acts constituting part performance.] — Possession is part performance of a contract for the sale and purchase of land both by and against a stranger and the owner. On negotiations for the purchase of land the agent of the plaintiff, vendor, told the defendant, purchaser, that the lot was his. The defendant went on and set in the ground a number of stakes to mark out the foundation of a proposed house, and then changed his mind and refused to carry out the purchase:— Held, that what he had done constituted such a taking of possession as to constitute part performance, and that the plaintiff was entitled to the usual judgment for specific performance. Contract for sale of land — Fraudulent scheme—Costs.]—The plaintiff brought his action against P., R., and H., for specific performance of an agreement for sale of land by H. to the plaintiff, and alleged that both P. and R. had notice of his claim as a bona fide purchaser from H., and that they had dealt with the land in pursuance of a fraudulent scheme and device to deprive him of his interest. P, set up that he was a bona fide purchaser for value, without notice. R. set up that the plaintiff was in default under the covenants in the agreement, and that as assignee he had cancelled the same and declared it void:-Held, that the circumstances shewed a dishonest and fraudulent design, devised and carried out by R., to get the land of the plaintiff: to have the benefit of the $200 the latter had paid to H, and all the improvements, including a good house, without any compensacluding a good noise, without any compensa-tion, all in violation of the promise made and in fraud of the undertaking given in his (R.'s) name, so that the plaintiff was entitled to relief against R. The plaintiff having omitted to register his agreement, was not shewn to have had knowledge of his interest in the land; there was not against him any proof of actual notice, and the evidence of constructive notice through one Haney was far from being conclusive. As to R. he was guilty of fraud in dis-possessing the plaintiff of his land, after promising and undertaking to protect him. The plaintiff should recover by way of damages what he paid to H. as purchase money, with interest. Verdict for the plaintiff for with interest. Verdict for the plaintiff for $200 with interest from the 1st December. 1902. R. to pay all costs of suit, those in-curred by his co-defendants as well as those of the plaintiff. Czuack v. Contract for sale of land by one executor without authority—Personal liability of executor for misrepresentation—Statute of Frauds.]—An offer in writing was made on behalf of the plaintif to R. one of three executors of S., for the purchase of land belonging to the estate. This offer was accepted by R., and a formal agreement of sale by the executors to the plaintiff was drawn up in R.'s office on the form used by the executors which embodied the full terms and conditions of the sale. This agreement was forwarded to be executed by the plaintiff, the letter accompanying it being signed by R. The plaintiff executed the agreement and returned it to R. with a cheque for $250, being the cash payment on the sale. The agreement and cheque were received by R., but were almost immediately returned by him, upon the ground that he had previously offered the property to another person: — Held, that there was an agreement for the sale of the land in question sufficient to satisfy the requirements of the Statute of Frauds, entered into between the executors and the plaintiff, but R. had on the evidence no power to bind his co-executors, R. was liable for the misrepresentation of authority: where a man pretends to act on behalf of others, he impliedly promises that he is what he represents himself to be, and he must answer for any damage which directly results from confidence being given to his representation: Halbot v. Contract for sale of land by trustees — Evdence of concurrence by all — Statute of Frauds — Correspondence — Authority of trustees to bind co-trustee.]—A trustee in Toronto wrote to a co-trustee in St. Mary's stating that an offer had been made to purchase a portion of the trust estate for $12,000, and giving reasons why it should be accepted. The co-trustee re-plied concurring in those reasons and consenting to the proposed sale. The Toronto trustee afterwards had negotiations with the solicitors of G., and at their suggestion offered to sell the same property to G. for $13,000, but without further notice to his co-trustee. The offer was accepted by the solicitors, whereupon the person who had offered $12,000 raised his offer to $14,000, and the trustee notified the solicitors of G. that the sale to him was cancelled. In a suit by G. for specific performance:-Held, suit by G. for specine performance:—Hom, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 9 O. L. R. 522, 5 O. W. R. 554, that the letter written by the co-trustee in St. Mary's contained a consent to the particular sale mentioned therein only, and could not be construed as a general consent to a sale to any person even for a higher price. Even if it could, there were circumstances which occurred between the time it was written and the signing of the contract with G, which should have been communicated to the contrastee before he could be bound by the contract, Gibb v. Contract to convey land — Description — Quantity of land — Measurements — Occupation—Abstement of price.]—In an action for specific performance of a contract to convey lands, it appeared that the lands were described in the contract as "the house and premises on P. street, now occupied by Mrs. I., 32 feet more or less frontage on P. street and 67 more or less in depth," and that such lands did not possess a uniform depth of 67 feet, a piece 13 feet by 14 having been taken out of one side at the rear:—Held, that the implication as to the uniform depth of the lot, which would arise from the measurements given ought not to prevail, there being a certain description expressed in the agreement, viz., the occupation by L.; also, assuming that the distance to the rear line, from the measurements given, must be assumed to be equal, that the case was one in which the maxim falsa demonstratio non nocet applied, it being absolutely necessary to take the occupancy of L. in order to obtain the base line; and also, that the description answering to the holding ought to prevail over the implied description, or subsequent addition, which would be false. MacEchen v. MacDonald, 37 N. S. R. 50.

Contract to divide land to be acquired — Acquisition of part — Right to less than half with abatement in price — Railway — Board of commissioners — Evidence—Reference—Validity of agreement not to bid.]-In 1901 the province of Ontario offered for sale by tender a triangular piece of land, comprising 19 acres, lying between the tracks of the plaintiffs' and defendants' railways, which were to the north and south thereof respectively. Both railway companies were desirous of acquiring the land, and it was arranged, instead of both putting in bids, that the defendants should put in a bid bids, that the defendants should put in a put for the whole, and, if they procured it, the plaintiffs were to have the right, within 5 years, to a conveyance of half the land, stated in their proposal to be "surrounded green on the enclosed blue print," on paying half the purchase money and interest. The half the purchase money and interest. The plaintiffs thereupon refrained from bidding, and the defendants put in their bid. however, actually acquired only 17 acres, the province having withdrawn two acres at the north-west angle of the land, being on that half which would have come to the plaintiffs under the original contemplated purchase : under the original contemplated purease.— Held, that the agreement was for an equal division of whatever land should be procured, which the plaintiffs were entitled to enforce, and to have a conveyance of the half. -Held, also, that the fact of certain proceed-ings having been taken by the defendants before the Railway Commission, under which an order was obtained by the defendants for a crossing over the land, did not constitute any answer to the plaintiffs' claim, for, even if admissible in evidence, it could not affect the plaintiffs except as to the mode of division, no declaration of right against the plaintiffs lands having been claimed before the Commission, nor were the plaintiffs notified therof; nor could the defendants, under the circumstances, set up that the whole parcel was necessary for the purposes of the railway; the evidence, moreover, shewing that such was not the fact .- Held, also, that an agreement such as this, not to bid against each other, was not an illegal one, and was enforceable. A declaratory order and was enforcement. A declaratory of the was made directing a conveyance by the defendants to the plaintiffs of half the land, and in case the parties could not agree on the mode of division, the matter was referred to the Master to settle the same, and the form of the conveyance. dated 29th January, 1901, a father leased a farm to his son for five years from the 1st March, 1901, at a yearly rental of $200 payable in October of each year, and undertook to build on the farm, during the first year of the term, a house of certain expressed dimensions. There was a provision in the instrument for the determination of the lease at the end of any year by notice to that effect given in October previous. The father died on the 19th June, 1902, after the expiry of the first year of the term, but had not built nor dome anything towards building the house. By his will, dated the 7th February, 1901, he devised the farm to his son, but made no reference to the lease:—Held, that (the father having died after breach of the undertaking) the son was not entitled to have the house built at the expense of the father's personal estate, but at most was entitled to damages for non-performance of the able on the 15th October in each year. Contemporaneously with the lease an agreement of purchase of the property was entered into between the plaintiff and C., by which the latter agreed to accept as part payment of the purchase money all sums of money which should be paid by the plaintiff as rent under should be paid by the plainfulf as reft under the lease, and the plainfulf covenanted, at the expiration of eight years from the date of the instrument, to pay the balance of the purchase money with interest. There was also the covenant of C, to convey upon pay-ment, an option to the plaintiff to pay off the full amount and receive a conveyance at any time, and finally the following proviso; "It is expressly understood and agreed that time is to be considered the essence of this agreement, and unless the payments are punctually made the said party of the first part shall at his option declare this agreement shall at his option declare this agreement null and void, all payments made thereunder shall be forfeited, and the said party of the first part shall be at liberty to resell the said land, the said party of the second part hereby agreeing to convey to the said party of the first part his interest in the same when and as soon as such default occurs." The lease contained a proviso for re-entry, the statutory short form, for non-payment of rent. C. afterwards conveyed the land in fee to the defendant Palmatier subject to the lease and agreement. Default having occurlease and agreement. Default having occur-red in payment of the rent due on 15th Octo-ber, 1897, the defendant Palmatier leased the ber, 1897, the defendant Palmatter leased the property to the defendant Mills with an option of purchase before the end of the first year of the term, and Mills at once entered into possession:—Held, that the lease and agreement between C. and the piantiff should not be considered as independent contracts, and that C. or his assignee might rescind the agreement of sale for default in payment of our root called for by the lease.—2 That a agreement of sale for default in payment of any rent called for by the lease.—2. Amending Act — Retroaction — Sale of land—Judgments and orders — County Courts. — Until 1897 it was the practice in Manitoba for the Court of Queen's Bench to grant orders for the also of lands on judgments of the County Court under Rules 803 et seq. of the Queen's Bench & 1895. In that year the Court of Queen's Bench decided that this practice was irregular, and in the following year the Legislature passed an Act providing that 'in case of a County Court judgment an application may be made under Rule 803 or Rule 804, as the case may be. This amendment shall apply to orders and judgments heretofore made or entered, except in cases where such orders or judgments have been attacked before the passing of this amendment:"—Held, Sedgewick, J., dissenting, that the words "orders and judgments" in said clause refer only to orders and judgments of the Queen's Bench, 13 Man, L. Civil Code, Art. 710 — Derogation from common law—Strict construction — Assignment by co-heir of share in part of succession—Retrait successoral.] — Article 710 of the Civil Code, permitting retrait successoral where a co-heir has assigned his right to the inheritance, derogates from the common law, and ought to be strictly interpret d. Therefore, the assignment by a co-heir of his share in land belonging to the succession, which does not form the whole of it, does not afford ground for the exercise of this right. Bélanger v. Gauxin, 35 Que. S. C. 118.

Code of Civil Procedure: its Interpretation — Affidavit — Can a notary receive itf — Motion to dismiss on opposition—C. P. 23, 651; 62 Vict. c. 13.]—The Code of Civil Procedure is a statute, and it must be interpreted in such a way as to harmonize with other statutes, and it cannot be considered as being a special law of itself and without relationship with the other laws of the province. An affidavit to an opposition to withdraw or annul received before a notary is valid. Massey-Harris Co. V. Thompson, 11 Que. P. R. 140.

Colonial Acts — Imperial Acts — Ship—Deserters from—Conviction.]—Under the provisions of the Colonial Laws Validity Act, 28 & 29 Vict. c. 63 (Imp.) any colonial law repugnant to the provisions of an Imperial statute having force in Canada is inoperative to the extent only of such repugnancy, and not otherwise. The only repugnancy between s. 194 of the Seamen's Act, Canada, R. S. C. c. 74, and s. 236 of the Imperial Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, is where the ship from which the desertion takes place is a British ship. Hence, cases which relate to deserters from ships which are not alleged and proved to have been registered as British ships, alone fall under the operation of the Canadian Act.—2. A case of harbouring seamen deserting from a ship not alleged and proved to be a British ship, and which at the time of the alleged desertion was lying in the port of Montreal, was rightly brought under the Seamen's Act, Canada. Construction — British Columbia Dentity Act, 1908, s. 39—Retroactivity—Professional misconduct before registration—Jurisdiction of council.]—Section 39 of the Dentistry Act, empowering the council of the College of Dental Surgeons to erase the name of a practitioner guilty of infamous or unprofessional conduct, applies to acts committed by a member before registration under the Act. G.— v. College of Dental Surgeons of British Columbia, 14 B. C. R. 129, 9 W. L. R. 650.

Construction — Customs Act — Non-payment of duty.)—The rule that a penal statute shall be construed strictly does not imply that the narrowest meaning of which they are susceptible, must be given to its words. The rule of interpretation and construction really is, that such statutes are to be taken as not including anything which is not within their letter and spirit, which is most earlier in their words, and which is manifestly not intended by the legislature. Applying this principle to s. 197 of the Customs Amendment Act of 1888, the punishment imposed by the section applies not only to the case where the goods are not found in the possession and keeping of the offender, but also to the case where the preson liable to punishment who illegally imported goods without paying the duties lawfully payable, whether the goods were found or were not found in his possession or keeping. O'Grady v. Wiseman, 9 Que. Q. B. 169.

Construction — Expropriation of private property.]—Statutes which encroach upon the rights of the subject in respect of his private property, or which enable public corporations to take his property without his consent, must be construed with the greatest strictness. Smith v. Public Parks Board of Portage La Prairie, 15 Man. L. R. 249, 1 W. L. R. 237.

Construction — Limitation of monopoly—Bridge.] — Every limitation imposed by the legislature in creating a privilege, in this case a monoply in favour of the owner of a bridge, must be interpreted as having for its object the diminishing as far as possible of the public inconvenience or the burden imposed by such monopoly. Rouleau v. Pouliot, 25 Que. S. C. S.S.

Construction — Toll-bridge — Franchise — Exclusive limits—Measurement of distance — Exercoachment—58 Geo. III., c. 20 (L. C.).]—The Act 58 Geo. III., c. 20 (L. C.), authorized the erection of a toll-bridge across the river Etchemin, in the parish of Stc. Claire, "opposite the road leading to Stc. Chierese, or as near thereto as may be in the county of Dorchester," and by s. 6 it was provided that no other bridge should be erected or any ferry used "for hire across the said river Etchemin, within half a league above the said bridge and below the said bridge:"—Held, Nesbitt and Idington, JJ., dissenting, that the statute should be constructed. Per Nesbitt and Idington, JJ., that there was not any expression in the statute should be measured up-stream and downstream from the site of the bridge as constructed. Per Nesbitt and Idington, JJ., that there was not any expression in the statute should be measured from a straight line on the horizontal plane. But, per Idington, J.: In this case, as the location of the bridge was to be "opposite the road leading to Stc. Thèrese," and there was no proof that the new bridge complained of was within half a league of that road, the plaintiffs action should be maintained. Rouleau v. Pouliot, 25 C. L. T. 122, 36 S. C. Construction of 7 Edw. VII. c. 19, ss. 8, 9 — 9 Edw. VII. c. 18, s. 10—Power of Hydro-Electric Power Commission to enter private lands against well of owner.]—Plaintiff brought action for trespass to her land. Defendants pleaded justification and relled on the legislation respecting the Hydro-Electric Com., 7 Edw. VII., c. 18, and 9 Edw. VII., c. 18, s. 10. The whole question of whether the above statutes or either of them, authorised an entry under the direction of the Commission, upon private property, against the will of the owner before payment of compensation.—At trial Falconbridge, C.J.K.B., held, that the statutes were a good defence, and dismissed the action.—Court of Appeal dismissed plaintiff's appeal therefrom. Error in printing — Effect of amending statute — Retroactivity — Assessment and taxes—"Exempted."]—The Assessment Act, R. S. N. S. 1900 c. 73, s. 4, s.-s. (p), by the accidental insertion of the word "exempted," rendered liable to assessment property of the plaintiff's previously exempted. It was admitted that the word imposing the liability was not contained in the manuscript revision of the statutes, but was inserted, by error, in the printed cory, deposited in the office of the Provincial Secretary, which, it was declared by the Act respecting the Revised Statutes, Acts of 1800, c. 44. s. 5, should be held to be the original. By an Act of the following year (Acts of 1902, z. 25), the error was corrected, by striking out of s. 4 (p) the word "exempted."—Held, that, by this amendment, the Court was precluded from coming to the conclusion that the insertion of the word "exempted," in the chapter of the Revised Statutes amended, was a mistake, and inserted and printed accidentally, it being assumed, in the amending Act, that the section amended was in full force and effect from the time it came into operation, the amendment being one that would be out of place if the legislature had intended from the first that the word should not be there; that, in the absence of words giving the amendment a retroactive effect, it could not be so read, and that the Act, as amended, would only apply to future assessments; and that the liability of the plain: tiffs having been fixed by c. 73, and there having been no appeal, the amendment would not have the effect of preventing the collection of the rate complained of. Dominion Iron & Steel Co. v. McDonald, 37 N. S. R. 1.

English and French texts.]—The charter of the town of Lévis, in its French version, enacts that the qualification of councillors shall be $1,000; in its English version $5,000 is the sum mentioned. Both texts are clear and precise. The section of the general Act respecting town corporations which fixed the qualification for councillors was by a special enactment declared not to apply to the town of Lévis:—Held, that the two texts, being contradictory, were mutually destructive, and therefore no property qualification was necessary. Implied repeal — Municipal corporations — Local improvements.]—A provision in a city charter that one-half of the cost of certain improvements shall be levied upon a class of taxpayers by 10 annual instalments is not impliedly repealed, as to the division of the assessment into instalments, by a subsequent statute which alters the proportion of the amount to be levied from one-half to three-eighths, without mention of the mode of payment. City of Montreal v.
Milligan, 30 Que. S. C. 394.

Inadvertent use of word — Intention of legislature — Way — Municipal corporations — Property fronting on street.] — 1. Where it is clear on the face of a statute that it was intended to govern and provide for a particular state of facts, the Court will modify the ordinary meaning of words so as to permit such intention to have effect. Therefore, in 57 V. (Q.) c. 57, s. 1, the word "widening." in reference to Milton street, being used evidently by inadvertence for "opening," the statute should be read in connection with other statutes relating to the same subject, and should be interpreted so as to give effect to the intention of the legislature. Joseph v. City of Montreal, 10 Que. S. C. 531, referred to.—2. The clause "properties fronting" on the line of a street includes properties adjoining or contiguous to the line of the street on any side, although the buildings thereon front on a street intersecting the other, and the properties are only bounded on the side line by the street first mentioned. Judgment in 15 Que. S. C. 268, affirmed. Watson v. Maze, 17 Que S. C. 579.

Inspection of Metalliferous Mines Act — Amending Act — Construction — Penal statute — "Machinery hereinafter mentioned.")—Rule 21a of s. 25 of the Inspection of Metalliferous Mines Act, as enacted by s. 12 of c. 37 of 1901, provides that "every person . . employed in or about a metalliferous mine, in which the machinery hereinafter mentioned shall be operated for more than twenty hours in any twenty-four, (1) operates any direct-acting, geared, or indirect-acting hoisting machine exceeding fifty horse-power, or (2) operates any stationary engine or electric motor exceeding fifty horse-power, and shall perform any such duties for more than eight hours in any twenty-four, shall be guilty of an offence under this Act:"—Held, that the phrase "machinery hereinafter mentioned.—Held, also, that the words "preceding section," in rule 21b, refer to the preceding section," in rule 21b, refer to the preceding rule. Decision of Duff, J., 12 B. C. R. 116, affirmed. McGregor v. Canadian Consolidated Mines Limited (No. 2), 12

C.C.L.-130.

Inspection of Metalliferous Mines Act — Penal statute — Construction — "Machinery hereinafter mentioned."] — In construing a penal statute, the rule to be followed is that by which that sense of the words is to be adopted which best harmonises with the context and promotes in the fullest manner the policy and object of the legislature.—The paramount object in construing penal as well as other statutes, is to ascertain the legislature intent; and the rule of strict construction is not violated by permitting the words to have their full meaning, or the more extensive of two meanings, when best effectuating the intention.—Semble, the phrase "machinery hereinafter mentioned" in r. 21a of s. 25 of the Inspection of Metalliferous Mines Act, as enacted by c. 37 of 1901, means "any of the machinery hereinafter mentioned." Interpretation — Dual language — Different versions.]—Where the text of one version of a statute appears to be in conformity with the intention of the legislature, such version may be followed in the interpretation of the statute, notwithstanding that an ambiguity exists in the text of the other version. Coaticook v. People's Telephone Co., 19 Que. S. C. 555.

Interpretation — Reference to prior statute — Amendments — Incorporation—Declaratory Act — Expropriation of land—Charter of Montreal.]—Where a statute declares that proceedings for expropriation shall be taken in conformity to a previous statute, it is the latter, with all its subsequent modifications, and notably that allowing an appeal from an award fixing the compensation to be paid for the lands expropriated, which regulates the proceedings for expropriation, and that in spite of the fact that the legislature has only indicated that statute, without mentioning the amendments which have been made to it. 2. A statute in its nature declaratory, adopted at the session following the passing of the statute in question, adding to the mention of the previous statute that of the statute which had amended it so as to allow an appeal from an award, applies to expropriations commenced during the time allowed for such purpose. Montreal v. Poulin, 25 Que. S. C. 364, 6 Que. P. R. 457.

Jurisdiction of Court — County Court judgment — Judicial sale of land.]—Rule 807 (a), added to the King's Bench Act by 60 V. c. 4, is retrospective, and was intended to apply not only to orders which had been previously made and which had not been attacked, but also to the proceedings which had been taken under them, so as to validate judicial sales of land that had been made under orders to realise County Court judgments without the bringing of a separate action, which it had been held in Proctor v. Parker, 11 Man. L. R. 485, 18 C. L. T. 128,

Parliamentary elections — Controverted election — Petition — Trial—Time — Amendment — Retroaction — Public Act.]
—The Quebec statute respecting controverted elections, 1 Edw. VII. c. 7, enacting that "the trial of every election petition now pending, or which shall be pending in the future, must be commenced within the three months which follow the publication, pursuant to Art. 213 of the Quebec Elections Act, 1895, in the Quebec Official Gazette, of the notice of the election of the member, given by the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, and in default the petition shall be absolutely extinguished, perempted, void and of no effect," extinguishes and nullifies an election petition pending at the time of its coming into force, where the trial has not been commenced within the three months; and this although the petitioner has proceeded with all diligence required by the previous statute. 2. If a party may derogate from and renounce certain statutes having the character of public order, which conference of the controverse of the controverse of the controverse of the certons, being a law politic, has a retroactive effect. Sweeney v. Lovell, 19 Que. S. C. 558.

Performance of public duty.]—The respondents were municipal councillors of Verdun, where the petitioners owned property. On the 23rd August the secretary of the council gave notice that, in accordance with Art. 746A of the Municipal Code, a session would be held on the 4th September for the purpose of revising the valuation roll. On the latter day an adjournment was made for two weeks. The petitioners obtained an interlocutory injunction restraining the respondents from proceeding with the proposed revision:—Held, that the words of Art. 746A did not make it imperative that the revision should take place in June or July: Endlich on Construction of Statutes s. 295.—Held, further, that, even if the words were imperative, the Court had power to compel the performance of a public duty by public officers, though the statutory time for performing the duty had passed: Dechene v. Private Act — Rights of persons not named — Public Act for purposes of proof—Private Act in other respects.]—Declarations in a private Act of the legislature do not affect the rights of third parties not specially named therein.—An Act is not the less a private Act because it has been declared public in order to facilitate the proof thereof. For all other purposes, it is public or private according as it has a general application in view of the public welfare or affects only private and personal interests. Price v. Chicoutimi Pulp Co., 30 Que. S. C. 293.

Procedure — Peremption.]—A suit begun under the old Code of Procedure can be perempted where no useful proceding has been taken during two years since the coming into force of the new Code; Art. 279 can be invoked in such a case without giving it a retroactive effect. Coulture v. Duclos, 2 Que. P. R. 433.

Quebec Pharmacy Act - Retrospective legislation — Suit for joint penalties — Second offences — Unlicensed sale of drugs.] The amendment of the Quebec Pharmacy Act by 62 V, c, 35, s, 2 (Q.), adding Art. 4039 (b), R. S. Q., has no retroactive effect upon proceedings instituted for penalties under the Act before the amendment came into force. Penalties for several offences under the Act may be joined in one action, when the aggregate amount is sufficiently large, the action may be brought in the Superior Court as a Court of competent jurisdiction under the statute. Such action may properly be taken in the name of the Pharmaceutical Association of the province of Quebec. It is improper in such an action to describe subsequently charged offences as second offences under the statute, as a second offence cannot arise until there has been a offence cannot arise until there has been a condemnation for a penalty upon a first of-fence charged. The sale in the province of Quebec by an unlicensed person of drugs by retail, whether or not such drugs be poisonous, or partly composed of poison, or absolutely free from poison, is a violation of the prohibition contained in Art. 4035, R. S. Q., and whether or not the articles sold be enumerated in the Quebec Pharmacy Act as poisons or as containing an enumerated as poisons or as containing at chumetain poison. Judgment in 2 Que. Q. B. 243 reversed; Taschereau and Gwynne, JJ., dissenting. Pharmaccutical Association of Quebec v. Livernois, 21 C. L. T. 8, 31 N. S. R. 43.

Re-enactment — Change in wording — Interpretation.] — Where a statute is reenacted in different words, and thereby becomes susceptible of more than one interpretation, it will not be construed as altering the previous statute unless such alteration is clearly expressed. Laird v. McChuire, 40 N. S. R. 129.

Registry Act, R. S. O. 1897, c. 136. McVity v. Tranouth, C. R. [1908] A. C. 1, digested under Limitation of Actions.

Repeal by implication — Municipalities — School corporations — Extinction]—A legislative enactment is not to be held to be repealed by implication unless such an interpretation be inevitable. When, therefore, it was enacted in a statute that each municipality existing at the time, or which might be established thereafter, should be a municipality for school purposes, etc., an enactment, in a subsequent statute, that the municipalities adjoining a city might be annexed thereto for municipal purposes and thereafter case to exist, did not mean by implication that such annexation should extinguish the corporate bodies formed for school purposes under the previous statute, but the latter continued to exist notwithstanding. Montreal Protestant School Commissioners v. Montreal, 32 Que. S. C. 90.

Repeal by implication.] — The Rule that repeal by implication of an existing enactment will not be inferred from a subsequent one, unless both are incompatible, applies in the case of a statute "to revise and consolidate" those on a given subject, v.g., a city charter. Hence, if, in an existing Act, a right to redeem property sold for taxes by a city is given with a proviso that privileged and hypothecary claims shall thereby revive, a subsequent Act "to revise and consolidate the different Acts of the legislature relating to that city," that embodies for the sale of property for taxes and its redemption, but omits the proviso for the revival of privileged and hypothecary claims, will not be deemed to repeal the latter by implication and it continues in force and vigour, Kennedy v. Godmaire (1910), 38 Que. S. C. 527.

Appealed to Court of Review.

Repeal of statute — Effect on municipal by-law passed under statute—Recovery of money paid — Tax — Re-enactment of statute.]—The repeal of a statute which permits a city corporation to impose a tax by a by-law involves the repeal of every by-law passed by virtue of such statute. Therefore, a ratepayer who has paid a tax imposed by a by-law after repeal of the statute under which it was passed, has a right to recover back the money paid; and the city corporation will not be permitted to plead that since the payment, and before the institution of the action, the statute has been re-enacted. Montreal v. Royal Insurance Co., 15 Que. K. B. 574.

Sidback v. Field (Y.T.), 6 W. L. R. 309.

Retroactivity — Ultra Vires Act — Validating Act of Dominion Parliament — Construction — Execution — Exemption—Homestead.]—The Exemption Ordinance, c. 45, R. O. 1888, s. 1, s.-8, 9, exempted from seizure under execution the homestead, to the extent of 160 acres, of the execution debtor. This sub-section having been declared ultra vires of the Legislative Assembly in In re Claston, 1 Terr. L. R. 282, the Dominion Parliament, by 57 & 58 V. c. 29, declared that the territorial legislation on this subject "shall hereafter be deemed to be valid, and shall have force and effect as law;" — Heid, that an execution filed against the homestead of the defendant prior to the passing of the validating statute constituted—but that an execution against the lands of the defendant filed subsequently to the passing of the said Act, did not constitute—a charge upon the homestead. Rules for construction of statutes considered. Massey v. McClelland, Baker v. McClelland, 2 Terr. L. R. 179.

Retroactivity — 6 Edw. VII. c. 19, s. 22 (O.) — Procedure — Division Courts—Contract — Provision for determination of forum for possible actions — Prohibition. Re Sylvester Manufacturing Co. v. Brown, S. O. W. R. 894, 9 O. W. R. 89.

Retrospective.—In an action to recover a commission on sale of land, Rose J., held that a County Court had no jurisdiction. D. C. held that the Act 54 Vic. c. 14 (O.), passed after above decision, was retrospective, and enabled the action to be transferred to the High Court. Re McKey v. Martin (1890), 21 O. R. 104.

Right of appeal.]—A new statute giving a right of appeal which the previous statute denied is not applicable to an action begun under the operation of the old statute, even when such action is adjudicated upon after the coming into force of the new statute, which cannot be invoked in a cause begun while the previous statute was in force unless it merely changes the form of an already existing appeal. Reneault v. Gagnon, 18 Que. S. C. 127.

Solicitor — Action for costs — Delivery of bill.]—By the Acts of 1890 c. 27, s. 69, to amend and consolidate the Acts relating to barristers and solicitors, passed 30th March, 1899, it was enacted that 'no actionshall be brought for the recovery of fees, costs, charges, etc., by a barrister or solicitor, as such, until one month after the bill therefor, signed by such barrister or solicitor, has been delivered to the party to be charged," etc. By s. 81 it was provided that the Act should not come into force until the 1st July, 1899. On 4th May, 1899, plaintiffs caused a writ to be issued for the recovery of an amount claimed to be due them from defendants for professional services, and for moneys expended by plaintiffs as solicitors of defendants, upon their retainer and at their request. The statute was pleaded, and it was admitted on the part of the plaintiffs that no bill had been delivered as therein provided:—Held, that the delivery of a signed bill, in accordance with the provisions of s. 69, and proof thereof upon the trial, involved a matter of procedure only, or, at most, a mere alteration in the matter of proof necessary to sustain the action, and, therefore, was within the rule stated by Blackburn, J., in Gardner v. Lucas, 3 App. Cas 603, that alterations in the form of procedure are always retrospective unless there is some good reason or other why they should not be—Held, also, that the enactment, being a remedial one, should receive a liberal construction. Harrington v. Peiers, 32 N. S. 464.

Special Act - Repeal by implication-Repugnancy to subsequent general Act -Rule of construction - Assessment and Exemptions - Railway-By-law of municipality — Commutation — School rates.]—A city council in 1897 passed a by-law providing that a certain annual sum should be accepted from a railway company for 15 years "by way of commutation and in lieu of all and every municipal rate or rates and assessment," in respect of certain lands owned by the railway company. This by-law was passed under the authority of a special Act respecting the railway company, 48 V. c. 65 (O.), s. 3 of which provided that it should be lawful for the corporation of any municipality through which any line of the railway had been constructed to exempt the company and its property within such municipality, in whole or in part, from municipal assessment or taxation, or to agree to a certain sum per annum or otherwise in gross or by way of commutation or composition for payment of all municipal rates. By a subsequent general enactment, 55 V. c. 60, s. 4 (O.), it was declared that no municipal by-law thereafter passed for exempting any portion of the ratable property of a municipality from taxation, in whole or in part, should be held or construed to exempt such property from school rates. The general Act did not by express words repeal the special Act .—Held, that it did not effect a repeal by necessary implication—generalia specialibus non derogant .- Held, also, that there was nothing to shew that the sum which the railway company were to pay was not more than the school taxes which they would be liable to pay if they were not entitled to any exemption. Way v. St. Thomas, 12 O. L. R. 240, 7 O. W. R. 194, 731.

Timber Manufacture Act, B.C., 1906

tion as to export - Retroactivity-Powers of chief commissioner - Crown.]-Section 2 of the Timber Manufacture Act, 1906, provides that all timber cut on ungranted lands of the Crown, or on lands thereafter granted, shall be used or manufactured in the province. Section 4 gives to the chief commissioner of lands and works, his officers, servants, and agents, power to do all thing necessary to prevent a breach of s. 2, thing necessary to prevent a breach of s. 2, including seizure and detention of all timber so cut until security shall be given to His Majesty that such timber will be used and manufactured as provided by s. 2. The plaintiff had in his possession, and was about to export, a quantity of logs, cut before the passing of the Act, which were seized by the provincial timber inspector:— Held, that the rule requiring the Courts not to construe Acts of the legislature to the prejudice of existing proprietary rights, if the language bears another sensible meaning, excludes from the operation of this statute all timber cut before the passing of it.—The authority to seize, under s. 4, is not conferred upon the Crown. The chief commissioner acts thereunder, not as the organ of the Crown, but as the grantee of legislative authority, and does not purport to act other than as a statutory officer. The timber in question, consequently, not being in the possession of the Crown, there was no seizure by the Chown.—The maxim the "King can do no wrong" considered. Emerson v. Skinner, 12 B. C. R. 154, 3 W. L. R. 558, 4 W. L. R. 255.

Transfer of cause — Jury trial — Security for costs.]—Upon a motion under the Nova Scotia Act of 1899 c. 39, to transfer an action upon a promissory note from a County Court to the Supreme Court for the purpose of a jury trial, where the only question to be tried was whether a proper tender was made before action, involving only a question of costs, and the transfer would cause delay in trial:—Held, nevertheless, that the defendant having made the affidavit required by the statute, there was no discretion to refuse the order, the statute being in its terms imperative; but as a term of the order the defendant was required to deposit in Court $80 as security for costs. Foreyth v. Shipley, 20 C. L. T.

Transfer of property from one institution to another — Future tense — Present transfer — Bornage — Action — Costs.]—The following terms in an Act of the legislature, "All the movable and immovable property given to the Institut du Bon Conseil by Mgr. Guay or other persons . . . shall be transferred to the corporation of the Hospital Guay de St. Joseph de Lévis, to be by it enjoyed and disposed of, etc., according to the intentions of the donors and testators," import a declaration that the property given to the defendants is presently transferred to the hospital and actually made over, without formality, the statute imposing none. The future tense used in the statute is equivalent to the present tense.—2. Action for partition — Appeal to Privy Council in previous action.] — The plaintiff having had the will of hr Lusband, which revoked a previous will in her favour, set aside by the Supreme Court of Canada, brought an action for partition of the property of a partnership of which her husband was a member:—Held, that the defendant in the action for partition was not entitled to Lave it stayed until a petition for leave to appeal from the judgment of the Supreme Court should be presented and decided by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. Maynard v. Dusseau'i, 8 Que. P. R. 285.

Action for text — Concurrent criminal prosecution — Criminal Code, s. 866. Action in foreign Court —Reasons for bringing—Judicature Act, s. 5, 7 (10).]—
Where there are substantial reasons for the double litigation, the Court will not stay proceedings in an action in Ontario until after the determination of another action for the same cause pending in a foreign Court. The power to stay proceedings under s. 57, cl. 10, of the Judicature Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 51, is a discretionary one, and the English cases are authorities as to the exercise of the discretion, although there is no similar statutory provision in England. Where the defendant, resident in Ontario, was sued there upon a promissory note, the Court refused to stay the action until after the determination of an attaching proceeding in a foreign Court, the effect of which, if successful, would be to make available towards payment of the note certain stock in a company domiciled in a foreign country. First Natches Bank v. Coleman, 21 C. L. T. 437, 2 O. L. R. 159.

P., does not require payment of costs as a condition precedent to the institution of a new proceeding except where the first proceeding upon which the party owes costs is identical with that which he proposes to take, and where he has discontinued the first proceeding. And therefore a motion to stay

Gounty Gourt action — Injunction against — Declaratory judgment — Jurisdiction—Practice.]—Where no consequential relief is claimed, the Court's jurisdiction to make a declaratory order will be exercised with great caution. A declaration that the defendant is not entitled to proceed on a judgment recovered by him in another action against the plaintiff, will not be granted if, on a proper case being made out, the proceedings could have been stayed in the original action, except in special circumstances. A County Court Judge has jurisdiction to stay proceedings on a judgment in his Court, on a proper case for a stay beeing made out, such, for instance, as that the judgment has in effect been satisfied. In such a case an action in the Supreme Court to restrain the defendant from proceeding with his action in the County Court will be dismissed. Williams v. Jackson, 11 B, C. R. 133.

Ejectment — Action en bornage—Consolidation.]—The defendant in an action en bornage canot answer by a dilatory exception asking that the action be stayed until judgment in an action of ejectment brought by him against the plaintiff. In a previous action against the same defendants, the plaintiffs therein, who were landowners in the defendants' township and assessed for a portion of the sum now sued for, sought a declaration that the defendants' by-laws purporting to impose this assessment upon the plaintiffs therein, and all the proceedings upon which they were founded, were void, and an injunction to restrain any proceedings for the collection of the amount for which the plaintiffs therein were assessed. In that action judgment had been given in the defendants' favour, but the plaintiffs had an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada pending when the present action was brought:—Held, that the present action was brought:—Held, that the present action was brought:—Held, that the present action should not be stayed until after the determination of the appeal in the other. Succession — Action against heirs — Statutory delays—Inventory—Deliberation—Liability—Service of verit of summons — Motion.] — Defendants sued as heirs may ask suspension of proceedings until the expiry of the delays to make an inventory and deliberate as to their acceptance or renunciation of the succession. A defendant, sued as having himself personally contracted the debt, cannot stay proceedings even by alleging that he is jointly and severally liable with the other defendants. Service of a writ of summons upon heirs of a deceased person collectively, and without mentioning their names or residence, does not deprive them of their right to the delays: Art. 135, C. P. Defendants are entitled to all delays granted to them by Art. 8 C. P., amended by 4 Edw. VII. c. 45, respecting the service and presentation of motion. Chevalier v. Trépanier, 7 Que. P. R. 446.

Surety — Appeal by principal debtor ——Garnishment.]—A surety, against whom suit has been brought, after the plaintiffs have obtained judgment against the principal debtor, from which the latter is appealing, and after attachment of the amount recovered by a creditor of the plaintiffs, is entitled, upon a dilatory exception, to have the proceedings stayed while the appeal and 'be garnishment proceedings are pending, tfoulet v. —A special assignment for the benefit of creditors had been made by the plaintiff and his then partner to the defendant, who realized the assets and wound up the estate. The defendant's accounts were, after notice to the plaintiff, passed by a Surrogate Judge. The plaintiff then brought this action asking for an account and complaining of certain items of expenditure and compensation:—Held, on the evidence, that there were grave doubts as to the bona fides of the action; that an order to stay proceedings would be justified; but that in the exercise of discretion the action might be proceeded with upon security for costs being given. STIPENDIARY MAGISTRATE

Jurisdiction — Appointment — Proof——Towns Incorporation Act — Effect of appointment of police magistrate of town — Canada Temperance Act.]—T. was convicted of an offence against the Canada Temperance Act by C., who, in making the conviction, professed to be acting as stipendiary magistrate for the county of W. No record of his appointment to this office could be found either in the minutes of the executive council or in the office of the provincial secretary; but there was a record of his appointment to the office of stipendiary magistrate for the parish of S.; C. swore (and berein he was corroborated) that upon it being discovered that his commission as stipendiary magistrate for the parish of S. was illegal, a new commission appointing him as stipendiary magistrate for the parish of S. was stipendiary magistrate for the county of W. was issued to him, which commission had been lost, but under which he had been acting without objection for many years. Afterwards, when the town of S. was carved out of the parish of S. and incorporated under the Towns Incorporation Act, C. was appointed police magistrate for the town. Sub-section (2) of s. 131 of the Towns Incorporation Act provides, inter alia, that on an appointment of a police magistrate for a town incorporated thereunder, the appointment and commission of a police or stipendiary magistrate theretofore acting in such town shall thereupon ipso facto be cancelled, and he shall cease to hold office as such police or stipendiary magistrate: — Held, that there was sufficient proof of C. having been duly commissioned to act as stipendiary magistrate for the county of W., and that under the above sub-section he did not vacate such office upon being appointed police magistrate for the town of S. Act of incorporation — Construction of, by Ont. Rev. and Mun. Board — Other Acts considered—General Rev. Act—St. Rev. Act 1888—Town's By-law granting franchise to company—Occupation of streets unconditional—"Railway" or "Street Railway"]—The Ontario Rev. and Mun. Board made an order declaring that defendants had a mere license to occupy the streets of the town of Sandwich under a by-law of said town passed 22nd February, 1873, and that the town did not grant the railway company a perpetual franchise, and had not the power so to do, at the time the by-law was passed; also, that the railway was a street railway and that the agreement between the parties, dated 27th May, 1891, was subject to the provisions of the Street Railway Act, and, further, that the right of the railway company to use and occupy the streets of the town expires on 15th December, 1912.—Court of Appeal held, that the appeal should be allowed with costs, and the matter be remitted to the board for further hearing upon the matters reserved to itself when disposing of the question of construction. Held, upon the proper construction of the defendants' Act of incorporation, 36 V. c. 100 (O.), the amending Act, 56 V. c. 90, and the contract and by-law contained in the and the contract and by-naw contained in testing schedule to the latter Act, that the defendants were bound to sell the tickets called "workmen's tickets" upon their cars to the public and to receive them in payment of fares at the hours mentioned in the by-law, fares at the hours mentioned in the by-law, not from workingmen only, but from the public generally; and that the provision of the by-law in that behalf was not ultra vires of the plaintiffs. 2. The aforementioned contract was modified, in accordance with a subsequent by-law of the plaintiffs, by requiring the defendants, in addition to the other limited tickets, to "give to any children between 5 and 14 years of age, when going to exheal a ticket to go and return on the date school, a ticket to go and return on the date of issue, for five cents."—Held, that there was nothing in this amendment to prevent children, when going to school, from paying their fares by using workmen's tickets, within the prescribed hours. 3. That the plaintiffs could maintain an action for mandamus or mandatory injunction to compel the defendants to continue to sell workmen's tickets, without adding the Attorney-General as a party representing the public. 4. The defendants, having refused to sell certain classes of tickets upon their cars, or to accrasses of tickets upon their cars, or to ac-cept them from persons from whom they were bound to accept them in payment of fares, were restrained from running cars upon which these tickets were not kept for sale, and this restraint was coupled with a declaration that they were bound to sell them on their cars to all persons desiring them on their cars to all persons desiring to by them, and to receive them from all persons in payment of fares during the hours mentioned in the by-law. Construction of contract — Operation of railway—Right of municipality to direct—Service—New lines—Extension of municipal boundaries—City engineer—Specife performance—Special case.]—Under the agreement between the corporation of the city of Toronto and the Toronto Railway Company, which is set out in 53 V. c. 99 (O.), the right to determine what new lines shall be established and laid down, is vested in the city, and applies as well to the streets within the city, as it existed at the time of the making of the agreement, as to the streets in the territory from time to time brought within it, and for the company's failure to establish and lay down such new lines, the city is not limited merely to the right provided for in the agreement of granting such privilege to others. The right, under such agreement, to settle the time tables, and to fix the routes of the cars, to determine when open cars should be taken off in the autumn or resumed in the spring, and as to when and how cars should be heated, is for the city engineer, subject to the approval of the city council; but the city have no power to compel the company to continue to run, after midnight, any car which, having started before midnight, cannot in due course finish its route by that time. On a special case stated in an action only such question will be answered as must necessarily arise in the action. The Court, therefore, in view of 63 V. c. 10/2, ss. 1 and 5 (O.), being made applicable to the city, declined to answer a question raised in a special case sa to the right of the city to have specifically performed those provisions of the agreement found in its favour; and an expression of opinion previously given against granting such specific performance, following Kingston v. Kingston Electric Rue. Co., 25 A. R. 462, was withdrawn. Toronto v. Toronto Rue. Co., 25 A. L. R. 637. C. U. R. 333, 446, 6 O. W. R. 677, 10 O.

Construction of contract — Snow and ice.]—The city council of Montreal being bound as the road authority to remove the ice and snow on the street from curb to curb, including the snow thrown or falling thereon from the roofs of houses and removed thereto from the sidewalks:—Held, that the respondent street railway company, having contracted with the city to keep their track free from snow and ice, did not, having regard to the surrounding circumstances, and in the absence of words expressly forbidding it, commit a nuisance by sweeping their snow into the street. Ogston v. Aberdeen District Transways Co., [1897] A. C. 111, distinguished.—Held, also, that the city having granted to the company all rights and privileges necessary for the proper and efficient use of electric power to operate cars in the streets in the manner successfully in use elsewhere, the latter could not be prevented from using the electric sweepers. Judgment in 11 Que. K. B. 458, affirmed. Montreal v. Montreal Street Rev. Co., [1903] A. C. 482.

Decision of Judicial Committee — 55 V. c. 99 (O.)—8 Edu. VII., c. 112 (O.).] — Upon appeal from a decision or order of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Roard upon the hearing of an application to it involving the same question as that dealt with by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Toronto v. Toronto Rvc. Co., [1907] A. C. 315:—Held, that inasmuch as it could be said that it manifestly appeared that the decision of the Judicial Committee was founded solely upon the effect of the provisions of the Act, 55 V. c. 99 (O.), and not, to some extent at least, upon the language of the agreement validated and confirmed by that Act, the only course open was to affirm the order of the Railway and Municipal Board, notwithstanding s. 1 of the Act, 8 Edw. VII., c. 112 (O.) Re Toronto Ruc. Co. and Toronto (1959), 14 O. W. R. 578, 1 O. W. N. 5, 19 O. L. R. 396.

Duty as to highways.]—By R. S. O. 1897, c. 208, s. 23, defendants had to keep clean and in repair between their tracks and 18 inches on either side thereof. Their charter was subject to that Act:—Held, that the repeal of this Act did not affect their rights and obligations, at any rate so far as not inconsistent with the repealing Act or its intent or object. Fox v. Cornwall, 12 O. W. R. 942.

Duty of railway to repair highway next to rails — Order of Ontario Railway and Municipal Board.]—The Ontario Railway and Municipal Board.]—The Ontario Railway and Municipal Board ordered the Hamilton Street Rw. Co. to forthwith put in good repair, that portion of the pavement, in the city of Hamilton, on King street from James street to Bay street, for two feet outside of the outer rails of the company's tracks according to the provisions of by-law No. 624. Extension of limits — Operation of cars — Action — Ratepayer.]—The promoters of a street railway company entered into an agreement with a city corporation in 1888, and agreed to run cars along Douglas street to the northern boundary of the city limits. They became incorporated as a joint stock company, and in 1890 obtained a charter authorizing the construction of tramways connecting the country districts with the city system, and in pursuance of the new powers continued the Douglas street tramway northerly along the Saanich road. Traffic on this extension was discontinued in 1898, because it did not pay. In 1892 the city limits were extended so as to include a portion of the Saanich road on which the tramway had been built. In 1894 the company obtained a private Act for the consolidation and confirmation of their rights, powers, and privileges, and ratifying the agreement of 1888, between the city and the original promoters:—Held, in an action for a declaration that the company were bound to operate their tram system along Douglas street to the extended city limits, that the company were not bound to do so. Extension of lines — Municipal by-laws—Changes in lines—Validity — Man-datory order — Injunction — Estoppel — Resolution.]—The city of London council passed certain resolutions authorising the ex-tension of the lines and changing the routes of the Maintiffs, rallways. The admiring the plaintiffs' railways. of the plaintiffs' railways. The plaintiffs relied upon a by-law being passed later to affirm the resolution and went on with certain work and incurred expense. The by-law No. 2083 was afterwards passed, read a first. second and third time, at one meeting of the council, signed by the clerk, sealed with the municipal seal, but the mayor refused to sign it. An action was brought to compel the mayor to sign the by-law and to compel the defendants to accept the agreement Held, that the company took the risk of the by-laws being carried, and that they were not misled; and it was incomplete and invalid without the mayor's signature.-Held. also, that two by-laws as to the routes and speed of the plaintiffs' cars were under the circumstances valid as being within the defendants' power and authority under 59 V. c. 105 (O.), which validated a by-law of the defendants and an agreement between plaintiffs and defendants under which the plaintiffs and defendants under which the plaintiffs built and operated their railway. By the original by-law, under which the road was authorized to be built and operated, as set out in the judgment of McMahon, J., 2 0. W. R. 44, the defendants were bound to establish new lines, as might be directed by by-laws of defendants, in the proportion of one mile of track to every 2,000 inhabitants of the city then existing or thereafter extended, the population to be ascertained as mentioned in the by-law, and that in the event of any local municipality being annexed, the railways of the company within the annexed municipality, and the company, in relation thereto, should have all the rights and be subject to the terms of the by-law. A local municipality. London West, was an-nexed to the defendants' municipality in 1898, and at the time of annexation had a ASSIS, and at the time of annexation had a street railway trackage of 5,900 feet. The population of the city in 1901 was 39,183, being an increase of 4,183, and the propor-tion of additional trackage to population was 11,043 feet. By a subsequent by law defendants were directed to construct 7,380 feet of additional track: — Held, Maclennan, J.A., dissenting, that under the original by-law when the population was raised by the absorption of the municipality of West London, the track mileage in that municipality could not be treated for the purposes of by-law 916, as extension quoud the increased population of the city, no matter how its borders were extended, which gave the council the right under the prescribed conditions to require the extension of the existing track mileage, whatever that might be. Extension of lines of tracks-Rights Extension of lines of tracks—tights of city as to — Time tables — Open cars—Night cars — 55 V. c. 99 (O.) — 63 V. c. 102, ss. 1 and 5 (O.) — Construction.—

The Toronto Rw. Co., under an agreement with Toronto, confirmed by 55 V. c. 99 (O.), acquired for a term of years the property in and the right to operate the street railways of the city. The agreement provided that the company should be required to lay down such extensions and new lines as might be recommended by the city engineer and approved by the city council, and that on the company's failure so to do the privilege of laying down such new lines and extensions might be granted by the city council to any other person or company, and that the company in such case should have no right to compensation against the Privy Council held that neither the city. Privy Council neta that neither the city nor the company had any street rail-way powers over new territorial additions to the city made during the term created. That the only remedy open to the city for failure of the company to lay down such new lines was the right to grant the privilege to another person or company. That it was for the company not for the city engineer, nor council, to determine what new lines should be laid, what routes should be adopted, and the places for stopping the cars on the streets within the city as existing at the date of the agreement, Judgments of the date of the agreement. Grading street — Liability for loss of support.]—A street railway company in grading a street in Vancouver, in accordance with an agreement entered into with the corporation, pursuant to the Vancouver Incorporation Act and amendment of 1895, are not liable for damages for loss of support caused to lands adjoining the street. Injunction — By-law or resolution — Approval of plans—Conditional approval — Winnipey charter, s. 472.] — 1. Notwithstanding the provision of s. 472 of the Winnipey charter that "the powers of the council shall be exercised by by-law when not otherwise authorized or provided for," the approval by the city council of the construction by the defendants of a loop line on certain named streets of the city may be given by resolution. Toronto v. Toronto Rv. Co., 12 O. L. R. 534, followed. 2. It is not a valid objection to such a resolution that it was one approving a report of the board of control, even if such board had no power to deal with such a matter. 3. The council had power to give an approval coupled with a condition that the company should also construct another loop line on certain other streets, although the council might be unable afterwards to enforce the condition. 4. Under the law governing such construction the approval of the detailed plans by the city council is not required, so that the making of a change in the plans by the city engineer which had not been approved by the council, was no ground for an injunction. O. 1897 c. 51, s. 113 enacts that "interest shall be payable in all cases in which it is now payable by law or in which it has been usual for a jury to allow it:"—Held, that under the true construction of this section it is incumbent upon the Court to allow interest for such time and at such rate as it may think right in all cases where a just payment has been improperly withheld, and compensation therefor seems fair and equitable.—An order by the Court below, Toronto v. Toronto Rv. Co., 5 O. W. R. 130, that the appellant company should pay arrears of track rentals within the limits of the respondent city, over and above their periodical payments already made, and should pay interest thereon, was affirmed. Municipality assuming ownership—

Award of arbitrators — Principle of valuation—Allowance for value of franchise —
Allowance for compulsory taking — Street
Rve. Act, s. 41.] — Arbitrators were appointed under the Street Railway Act, R.
S. O. 1897, c. 208, to determine the value of the appellants' railway and all real and personal property in connection with the working thereof, the ownership of which had been assumed, under the provisions of s.
41 (1) of the Act, by a town corporation, part of the railway being laid within the town. The arbitrators in their award fixed on a certain sum as "the actual present value of the railway and of the real and personal property in connection with the working thereof," and stated that in arriving at that value they had "valued the railway as being a railway in use and capable of being used and operated as a street railway," and that they had "not allowed anything for the value of any privilege or franchise whatsoever," in either of the municipalities in which the railway was laid. They further stated that they had not been able to assent to the contention of the company that the proper mode of valuation should be to capitalize the amount of the permanent net earning power of the railway, and that they had not reached their valuation in any way on that basis, but had "considered only the actual present value:"—Held, Moss, C.J.O., dissenting, that the arbitrators had erred in their method of valuation, and that in the case of a railway producing, as the appellants railway did, a considerable permanent profit, the proper method of valuation was to take in the permanent revenue and capitaliation. Successionally, and the supposition of the value, its considerable permanent allows the considerable permanent fallows and the capitalians. All the considerable permanent for compulsory taking discussed, Judgment of Britton, J., reversed, and award remitted to the arbitrators for reconsideration. Re Berlin & Waterloo Street Rev. Co. and Berlin (1908), 19 O. L. R. 57, 13 O. W. R. 157.

Municipal by-law — Highway — Removal of snove—Indemnity.]—By the provisions of a municipal by-law, to which a street railway company were bound to conform, the company were obliged to remove snow from their tracks in such a manner as not to obstruct or render unsafe the free passage of sleighs or other vehicles along or across the street. After a heavy snow-fall the company removed the snow from their tracks, the result being that there was a bank of several inches at each side of the tracks to the level of the snow-covered portions of the street: —Held, that the company had not discharged their obligation, and that they were liable to indemnify the city against damages recovered against the city by a person who had, in consequence of the bank, been upset while driving along the street. Mitchell v. Hamilton, 2t C. L. T. 372, 2 O. L. R. 58.

New Hines of track—Right to lay—55 Vict. c. 99 (0.)—8 Edve VII. c. 113 (0.).1—Privy Council in 1907, held, that subject to certain conditions contained in an agreement between the parties validated and confirmed by 55 Vict. c. 99 (0.), it was for the company and not the city—to determine which new lines of tracks should be laid down on streets of Toronto—Ont. Rw. and Mun. Board in 1909 ordered the company to construct between 10 and 15 miles of new tracks. The company selected certain streets for that purpose—Court of Appeal for Ont., held, that the order of the Board should be affirmed, and the city engineer from doing any act to prevent the company from constructing the lines of rail-way upon said streets, notwithstanding S Edw. VII., c. 112 (0).—Privy Council held, that their decision in 1907 was perfectly clear and not affected by S Edw. VIII., c. 112 (0).—Judgments from the Court of Appeal for Ontario and the Ontario Railway Board and Municipal Board affirmed. Toronto V. Toronto Rv. Co., C. R., [1910] A. C. 137.

Operation — Municipal franchise — Construction of contract—" Whole operation of its railteay"—Suburban lines — Percentage upon carnings outside city limits.]—By Art. 1918 of the Civil Code of Lower Canada, "all the clauses of a contract are interpreted the one by the other, giving to each the meaning derived from the entire Act." The appellants having contracted with the respondents to pay annually certain specific precentages on the total amount of their gross earnings arising from the whole operation of their raines arising from the whole operation of their raines arising from the whole operation of their raines are not included within the scope of the municipalities were not included within the scope of the municipality, and that they could only deal with the streets within their jurisdiction, and that the appellants had to make separate arrangements with outside municipalities in respect of the operation of the railway within their limits:—Held, that by the true construction of the contract the respondents were only entitled to percentages on the gross earnings arising from the whole operation of the lines within their own limits.—Judgment in Montreal v. Montreal Street Rue. Co., 34 S. C. R. 459, 24 C. L. T. 165, reversed. Montreal Street Rue. Co. v. Montreal, [1906] A. C. 100, 15 Que. K. B. 174.

Operation - Powers of municipal corporation—Legislative authority — Use of streets — By-law — Conditions — Penalty for breach of conditions—Repeal of by-law— Contractual obligation — Offence against by-law-Jurisdiction of Recorder's Court -Prohibition.]-A city corporation enacted a by-law granting a company permission to use its streets for the construction and operation of a tramway, and, in conformity with the provisions and conditions of the bylaw, the city corporation and the company executed a deed of agreement respecting the same. A provision of the by-law was that "the cars shall follow each other at intervals of not more than five minutes ex-cept from eight o'clock at night to midnight, during which space of time they shall follow each other at intervals of not more than ten minutes. The council may, by resolution, alter the time fixed for the circulation of the cars in the different sections." For neglect cars in the different sections." For neglect or contravention of any condition or obligation imposed by the by-law, a penalty of $40 was imposed, to be paid by the company for each day on which such default occurred, recoverable before the Recorder's Court, "like other fines and penalties." An amendment to the by-law, by a subsequent by-law, provided that "the present disposition shall be applicable only in such portion of the city where such increased giventions is recity where such increased circulation is required by the demands of the public:"-Held, that default to conform to the condi-tions and obligations so imposed on the company was an offence against the provisions of the by-law, and that, under the statute 29 & 30 V. c. 57, s. 50 (A.), the exclusive jurisdiction to hear and decide in the matter of such offence was in the Recorder's Court of the city of Quebec, B. 256, affirmed. Operating car without proper vestibules — Persons operating car.]—Conviction of a street railway company for that they did run and operate a street car which was not provided with proper and sufficient vestibules to protect the motormen and persons in charge of such car from exposure to cold, snow, rain, and sleet, while engaged in operating such car, contrary to the bylaw of the municipality passed on the 24th September, 1894, numbered 3290, and initialed "A bylaw to provide for the construction of vestibules for the shelter of motormen and others upon the cars of electric railway companies:"—Held, on motion to quash, that the conviction was valid upon its face, being in the terms of the bylaw, and that the offence was sufficiently stated; also that the bylaw was warranted by the statute. Semble, per Armour, C.J.O., that the conductor, unless he is acting instead of the motorman, is not a person engaged in operating the car; but that point would only arise upon the evidence, which the Courts.

would not look at where the conviction was valid on its face and the magistrate had jurisdiction. Regina v. Toronto Rw. Co., 21 C. L. T. 120.

Operation - Municipal franchise-Construction of contract — Suburban lines — Percentages upon earnings outside city limits.]—The corporation of the city of Montreal called for tenders for establishing and operating an electric passenger railway within its limits in accordance with specifications, and subsequently entered into a contract with a company then operating a system of horse tramways in the city, which tem or norse trainways in the city, which extended into adjoining municipalities. The contract, dated the Sth March, 1893, granted the franchise to the company for the period of 30 years from the 1st August, 1892. A clause in the contract provided that the comcause in the contract province that the com-pany should pay to the city, annually during the term of the franchise, "from the 1st September, 1892, upon the total amount of its gross earnings arising from the whole operation of its said railway, either with ears propelled by electricity or with cars drawn by horses," certain percentages specified according to the gross amounts of such earnings from year to year. Upon the first annual settlement, on the 1st September, 1893, the company paid the percentages without any district of the percentages. out any distinction being made between their earnings arising beyond the city limits, and those arising within the city, but subsequently they refused to pay the percentages except upon the estimated amount centages except upon the estimated amount of the gross earnings arising within the limits of the city. In an action by the city to recover percentages upon the gross earnings of the lines of tramways both inside and outside of the city limits—Held, reversing the judgment below, Taschereau, C.J.C., and Killam, J., dissenting, that the city corporation were entitled to the specified percentages upon the gross earnings of the company arising from the operation of the tramway both within and without the city limits. Payment of proportion of "gross receipts" — Intra vives.]—A covenant by the defendants to pay to the plaintiffs a certain proportion of the defendants' gross receipts was held to be not beyond the powers of the plaintiffs, a city corporation, and the defendants, a street railway company. Upon the proper construction of the covenant, the term "gross receipts" was held to include fares paid by passengers without the corporate territorial limits of the plaintiffs, where the passengers began their journey upon the defendants' railway beyond such limits; and also to include traffic receipts not yet earned, such as receipts from the sale of passengers' tickets still outstanding. Hamilton v. Hamilton Street Rw. Co., 24 C. L. T. 372, 8 O. L. R. 455, 4 O. W. R. 47, affirmed. 6 O. W. R. 206, 10 O. L. R. 575.

Percentage on enraines.]—The parties contracted that the company defendant should establish and operate lines of railway for the conveyance of passengers in the city, and should pay to the city annually a certain percentage of its gross earnings. The company also operated lines of railway outside of the city, which connected with those within the city, and passengers were carried over both for one fare; but the outside lines were operated under concessions from outside municipalities in which they were situate:—Held, that the revenue derived by the company from the operation of the outside lines was not subject to the payment of the percentages set forth in the contract, Montreal V. Montreal Street Railway Co., 17 Que S. C. 439.

Privileges and hypothecs — Sale of transcay by sheriff as "going concern.]—A company operating an electric transcay, by permission of the municipal corporation on rails laid on public streets vested in the municipality, to secure the principal and interest of an issue of its debenture bonds, hypothecated its real property, tramway, cars, etc., used in connection therewith, to trustees for debenture-holders and transferred the movable property of company, and its present and future revenues to the trustees. By 3 Edw. VII., c. 91, s. 1 (Que.), the deed was validated and ratified. On the sale, in execution of the tramway as a going concern:—Held, that whether, at the time of such sale, the cars in question were movable or immovable in character, the effect of the deed and ratifying statute was to subordinate the rights of other creditors to those of the trustees, and, consequently, that unpaid vendors thereof were not entitled, under article 2,000 of the Civil Code, to priority of payment by privilege upon distribution of moneys realised on sale in execution. After the cars in question had been delivered to company, and used in the operation of their tramway, they became immovable by destination, Ahearn & Soper v. N. Y. Trust Co. (1909), 42 S. C. R. 267, affirming 18 Que.

Removal of snowfalls — Electric succept — Construction of agreement — Deposit of snow — Removal of.] — The agreement with the plaintiffs under which the defendants' railway is operated provides that the track allowances shall be kept free from snow at the expense of the defendants, so that the cars may be in use continuously; and that if the fall of snow is less than six inches at any one time, the defendants must remove the same from the tracks, and shall, if the city engineer so directs, evenly spread it on the adjoining portions of the roadway, but should the quantity of snow at any time exceed six inches in depth, the whole space occupied as track allowances shall be at once cleared of snow, and the snow removed and deposited at such points on or off the street as may be ordered by the city engineer, 55 V. c. 99, s. 25 (U.), passed to construe the above, enacts that the defendants shall not deposit snow on any street, square, highway, or other public place in the city of Toronto, without first having obtained the permission of the city engineer:—Held, that there was nothing in the above to prevent the defendants from sweeping the small snowfalls or the large to the sides of the road by means of an electric sweeper, and (Meredith, J.A., dissenting), the purpose of the application being to prevent the use of the application being to prevent the use of the sweeper altogether, the appeal should be dismissed.—Per Osler, J.A.: When the snowfall was less than six inches at a time, the company might leave it at the side of the road unless that would create a nuisance.

—Per Garrow and Meredith, JJ.A.: In all cases the company were bound to remove the snow and ice after sweeping it aside, unless the city engineer directed that it be spread there. Re Toronto and Toronto Rw. Co., 16 O. L. R. 205, 11 O. W. R. 275.

Removal of snow tracks—Levelling snow on side of tracks to depth prescribed by city engineer—8t. John's Street Railway Act, 1896, s. 42.1 — The plaintiffs were granted a special Act to remove snow and ice from their tracks so as to enable them to operate their cars subject to the condition that they should, within 48 hours, level the said snow and ice on each side of their tracks to a uniform depth, to be determined by the city engineer so as not to impede the ordinary traffic of the streets:—Held, that the plaintiffs were bound to remove, at their own expense, such snow or ice from off the streets, as should be necessary to comply with the order of the city engineer. Service — Parts of outside municipalities.]—A covenant in a contract between a city and a street railway company, that the latter, in case of annexation by the former "of any of the outside municipalities, shall extend its system" thereto, is binding only as to the outside municipalities that were, at the time of the contract, contiguous to and adjoining the city. A company cannot be compelled to execute a covenant into which it has no power to enter under its charter. When a contract between a city and a street railway company to build and operate a railway, designates the street in which this is to be done, and a covenant is added that in case of the annexation of neighbouring territory, the company shall extend its railway to it, when ordered to do so, the order to be effective, must designate the streets in the new territory to which it is meant to apply. A covenant to extend a railway into "outside municipalities" thereafter to be annexed, does not apply to "parts of outside municipalities" thereafter to be annexed, does not apply to "parts of outside

Specific performance - Damages Impossibility—Railway committee of Privy Council — Bond — Substituted agreement, -Specific performance of an agreement by a street railway company with a municipal corporation to construct, equip, and operate a line of rails along certain streets in the municipality, cannot be enforced, nor can damages be awarded for non-performance of the contract, if the construction of the street railway has been rendered impossible, through the action of the Railway Com-mittee of the Privy Council in refusing to sanction a crossing, or by reason of the oc-cupation of the street by another railway company, whether with or without lawful authority, the duty of the municipality in the case of unlawful occupation being to restore the street to a condition to permit of the construction. When the obligor in a bond agrees, if required by the obligee, to perform certain work, and subsequently, by agreement between the successors in law of the obligor and the obligee, an absolute obligation to do the work is substituted, the effect of the latter agreement is to discharge the obligation created by the bond. —Injunction.] — Section 14 of the agreement entered into between the plaintiffs and defendants, set out in 55 V. c. 99 (O.) whereby the defendants were required to establish and lay down new lines and to extend the tracks and street car service on such streets as might be, from time to time, recommended by the city engineer and approved by the city council, does not apply to territory which was not within the limits of the city at the date of the the limits of the city at the date of the agreement, but has subsequently been annexed to and become part thereof, Toronto Rw. Co. v. Toronto, 37 S. C. R. 430 (reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 10 O. L. R. 657), followed.—By s. 26 of the agreement the "speed and service" necessary on each main line, part of same, or branch, is to be determined by the city engineer and approved by the city council and by s. 39 the cars shall only be stopped clear of cross streets and midway between streets, where the distance exceeds 600 feet;
—Held, subject to the limitations of clause 39, that the regulating of the places at which cars shall be stopped came within condition 26, relating to the speed and service, and was therefore to be determined by the city engineer and approved of by the council.—The engineer made a report to the council recommending that cars should be required to stop at certain specified points, be required to stop at certain specimed points, which was adopted by resolution of the council:—Held, that the engineer did not occupy a judicial or quast-judicial position between the parties to the agreement, and was not bound to consult with the defendants before determining what service should be supplied, and that such report, though somewhat informally expressed, was a sufficient determination on the part of the engineer, and that the adoption by resolution was sufficient, it not being essential that such adoption should be by by-law.—Held, also, that the plaintiffs were entitled to an order restraining the defendants from running the cars upon their railway, except in accordance with the determination of the engineer as to the stopping places.—Judgment in 11 O. Use of streets — By-law — Operation of cars — Penalty — Contract—Franchise.] — A municipal corporation authorised by its charter to grant street railway companies permission to use the streets and to determine the conditions on which such use may be had, has the power to ordain, in the by-law passed for the purpose, that the cars shall follow each other at stated intervals of time, under pain of a fixed penalty recoverable in the usual way. The fact that the charter makes provision for a contract between the corporation and company, as a means of acceptance, by the latter, of the franchise granted and of the conditions imposed by the by-law, does not alter the nature of the obligations flowing therefrom, so as to make them merely contractual and not penal.—Judgment in 32 Que. S. C. 489, affirmed. Quebec Railway Light and Power Co. V. Recorder's Court of Quebec, 17 Que. V. B. 250.

Use of streets — Payment for — Percentage of receipts — Traffic beyond city — Validity of agreement. 1 — By agreement between the city of Hamilton and the Hamilton Street Railway Co. the latter were authorised to construct their railway on certain named streets, and agreed to pay to the city, inter alia, certain percentages on their gross receipts: —Held, following Montreal Street Rv. Co. v. Montreal [1906] A. C. 100, that such payment applied in respect to all traffic in the city, including that originating or terminating in the adjoining township of Barton, — Held, also, that, as when the railway was extended into Barton the company agreed with that township to carry passengers from there into the city at city rates, the percentage was payable on the whole of such traffic, and not on the portion within the city only.—Held, further, that the power of the company to construct their railway was not derived wholly from their charter, but was subject to the permission of the city corporation; the city had therefore a right to stipulate for payment of such percentages, and the agreement therefor was infra vires.—Judgment of the Court of Appeal in Hamilton V. Hamilton Street Rw. Co., 10 O. L. R. 575, affirmed. Hamilton Street Rw. Co. V. Hamilton, 27 C. L. T. 154, 38 S. C. R. 106.

Alighting from ear — Negligence — Contributory negligence — Regulations — "Crossing" — Case for jury — Costs — Contributory negligence — Regulations — "Crossing" — Case for jury — Costs — Discretion — Appeal.]—The plaintiff was a passenger on a car of the defendants, and stepped from it while it was in motion, as it reached a street crossing; the motor-man had been signalled to stop, but failed man had been signatice to stop, but land to do so. The plaintiff alighted safely, but found himself in front of a horse and cab driven swiftly toward him. In order to found himself in front of a horse and cab driven swiftly toward him. In order to avoid a collision with the horse, and also in order to cross to the west side of the street, the plaintiff turned behind the car he had just left and passed on towards the other track; as he reached it, he became aware of a car coming towards him at a aware or a car coming towards min at a rapid rate, and to avoid being run down he flung himself on the fender, thus saving his life, but he was seriously injured. In an action to recover damages for his inan action to recover damages for his in-juries he was a witness at the trial, and said that it was impossible to get out of the way of the car; he did not hear the gong sound, although if it had been rung he would have heard it. By one of the regulations forming part of the agreement between the city corporation and the defendants validated by 57 V. c. 76 (O.), under which the defendants operated their cars on the city's highways, it was pro-vided that each car was to be supplied with a gong, to be sounded by the driver when the car approached to within 50 feet of each crossing. This was not brought to the attention of the Judge at the trial. The plaintiff, however, was aware that it was the usual practice to sound the gong at crossings, and he expected it to be done when a car was approaching a crossing:— Held, that, even if the regulation had not the force of a statutory requirement, the proof of failure to comply with a precaution which the defendants had recognised as important for the safety of persons using the crossing on streets occupied by the railway, was evidence for the jury of negligence in the conduct of the car; and the question whether the gong was sounded was for the interest of the conductor of the car. whether the going was sounded was for the jury.—Kemble, per Moss, CJ.O., that the term "crossing" in the agreement, is intended to indicate any place on or along the streets occupied by the railway where there is a walk laid for the purpose of enabling foot passengers to cross from one side of the street to another, and where the cars would stop to take up or let down cars would stop to take up or let down passengers; and is not confined to the cross-ing of an intersecting street.—The Court declined to interfere with the discretion of the Court below in withholding costs from the plaintiff, in setting aside a nonsuit and granting a new trial. Child on track - Negligence - Failure of motorman to stop car — Absence of fender.]—In an action brought in the name of an infant to recover damages for injuries occasioned through the alleged negligence of occasioned through the alleged negagence of the defendant company in the operation of their electric tramway, the evidence shewed that the infant, a child aged one year and eleven months, was seen approaching the track upon which one of the defendants' cars was moving slowly. The whistle was sounded, and the child stopped for a moment and then moved quickly towards the car and was struck, and received injuries for which the action was brought. Upon seeing the child stop when the whistle was blown, the motorman immediately applied speed without waiting to see whether the child was going to retreat or making any effort to remove it from its dangerous posi tion :- Held, that this was a clear case of reckless conduct, for which the defendants were responsible: that the failure to take proper precautions to avert injury to the child was not to be excused by the alleged necessity of complying with the time table and preventing delay to passengers; and that the failure of the defendants to provide the car with a fender was clear evidence of negligence. Lott v. Sydney and Glace Bay Rw. Co., 2 E. L. R. 309, 41 N. S. R. 153, 8 Can. Ry. Cas. 276.

Collision — Contributory negligence.]—
The plaintiff, who was driving a horse and waggon very slowly along a street on the left side of a car track, turned to the right to cross the track, and the waggon was struck by a car which was coming behind, at what was held to have been a reasonable rate of speed. The plaintiff said that one hundred feet from the point at which he had tried to cross he looked back and that no car was to be seen, and he did not look again before trying to cross:—Held, that it was his duty to have looked, and that his not having done so constituted contributory negligence on his part, which disentitled him to recover damages. Comments of Judge.]—There can be no valid objection to a Judge cautioning a jury against deciding from an enumeration of witnesses. An inference to alight can be drawn: by the jury from the conduct and actions of the conductor. The Judge's summing up is not to be rigourously scrutinised. The damages claimed were $2,500, but the jury gave $3,000, and an amendment of the claim was allowed. A new trial will not be ordered where the appellate Court cannot say the damages are excessive, Tidy v. Toronfo, 12 O. W. R. 994.

Contributory negligence.]—The plaintiff with his coachman was driving east along W. street, Toronto, and on approaching C. street he saw a street car of defendants coming south. Both he and his coachman thought that they could safely cross C. street, it being usual for defendants' cars to stop at the north intersection of the latter street. The car did not stop and ran into the plaintiff's carriage, the plaintiff being seriously injured. The jury found in plaintiff's favour. An appeal was dismissed, the Court being unable to say that plaintiff had acted so recklessly that all question of the exercise of reasonable care on his part should have been withdrawn from the consideration of the jury, Reasonable care is a matter of fact, and if there is any evidence must be for the jury. It cannot be said that there was no evidence at all upon the subject proper for the jury, Miligan v. Toronto, 12 O. W. R. 967.

- Improper evidence - Mis-Damages direction — New trial — Foreign commis-sion, 1—On the trial of an action against a street railway company to recover damages for personal injuries, the vice-president of the company, called on the plain-tiff's behalf, was asked on direct examination the amount of bonds issued by the company, the counsel on opening to the jury having stated that the company were mak-ing large sums of money out of the road. On cross-examination the witness was questioned as to the disposition of the proceeds of debentures, and on re-examination the plaintiff's counsel interrogated him at length as to the selling price of the shares on the Montreal exchange, and proved that they sold at about 50 per cent, premium. The Judge in charging the jury directed them to assess the damages "upon the extent of the injury plaintiff received, independent of what these people may be, or whether they are rich or poor." The plaintiff obtained a verdict with heavy damages :- Held, that on the cross-examination of the witness by defendants' counsel the door was not opened for re-examination as to the selling price of the stock; that in view of the amount of the verdict it was quite likely that the general observation of the Judge in his charge did not remove its effect on the jury as to the financial ability of the company to respond well in damages. injury of which the plaintiff complained was the crushing of his foot and on the day of the accident the medical staff of the hospital where he had been taken held a consultation and were divided as to the consultation and were divided as to the necessity for amoutation. Dr. W., who thought the limb might be saved, was, four days later, appointed by the company, at the suggestion of the plaintiff's attorney, to co-operate with the plaintiff's physician. Eventually the foot was amputated, and the plaintiff made a good recovery. On the trial plantiff made a good recovery. On the that the plaintiff's physician swore to a conversation with Dr. W., four days after the first consultation and three days before the amoutation, when Dr. W. stated that if he could induce the plaintiff's attorney to view it from a surgeon's standpoint and not use it to work on the sympathies of the jury, he might consider more fully the question of amputation. The Judge in his charge re-ferred to this conversation, and told the jury that it seemed to him very important if Dr. W. was using his position as one of the hospital staff to keep the limb on when it should have been taken off, and that he thought it very reprehensible:—Held, Strong, C.J., and Gwynne, J., dissenting, that, as Dr. W. did not represent the company at the first consultation, when he opposed amputation; as others of the staff took the same view; and there was no proof that amputation was delayed through his instrumentality; and as the jury would certainly consider the Judge's remarks as bearing on the contention made on the plaintiff's behalf that amputation should have taken place on the very day of the accident, it must have affected the amount of the verdict. To tell a jury to ask themselves, "If I were plaintiff, how much ought I to be paid if the company did me an injury?" is not a proper direction. A party to an action who procures a commission for taking evidence abroad has no right to prevent its return. Hesse v. St. John Rue. Uo., 20 C. L. T. 113, 30 S. C. R. 218.

Danger to public — Avoidance of — Notice of action.] — An electric tramway company ought to avoid everything which, without being absolutely necessary for its service, constitutes a danger to the public, and if the company does not do so it is guilty of actionable negligence. 2. The fact that a cause of danger can be suppressed only by means of an increase of labour or expense, is not an excuse for allowing it to subsist. 3. A provision of the charter of the Montreal Street Railway Company which obliges those who wish to sue it for damages to give a thirty days' notice, does not make of such notice a condition of the right of action against the company; it is but one of those prejudicial obligations the non-observance of which must be invoked by a dilatory exception. Mattice v. Montreal Street Ruc Co., 20 Que. S. C. 222.

Evidence — Misdirection — Foreign Commission — New trial.]—The Supreme Court of New Brunswick, in bane, granted a new trial for misdirection, but this decision was reversed by the Supreme Court of Canada, Hesse v. St. John Rw. Co., 35 N. B. R. 1, 20 C. L. T. 113, 30 S. C. R. 218.

Excessive speed — Contributory negligence.]—A cabedriver was ender evouring to drive his cab across the track of an electric railway when it was struck by a car and damaged. In an action against the tramway company for damages, it appeared that the accident occurred on part of a down grade several hundred feet long, and that the motorman after seeing the cab tried to stop the car with the brakes, and, that proving ineffectual, reversed the power, being then about a car length from the cab. The jury found that the car was running at too high a rate of speed, and that there was also negligence in the failure to reverse the current in time to avert the accident; that the driver was negligent in not looking more sharply for the car; and that, notwithstanding such negligence on the part of the driver, the accident could have been averted by the exercise of reasonable care:—Held, affirming the judgment in 32 N. S. R. 117, that the last finding neutralised the effect of that of contributory negligence; that, as the car was on a down grade and going at an excessive rate of speed, it was incumbent on the servants of the company to exercise a very high degree of skill and care in order to control it if danger was threatened to anyone on the highway; and that from the evidence given it was impossible to say that everything was done that reasonably should have been done to prevent damage from the excessive speed at which the car was being run. Inglie v. Halifax Electric Tramway Co., 20 C. L. T. 195, 30 S. C. R. 256.

Frightening horses.]— The plaintiff, who was driving a carriage with a pair of horses, stopped near a railway crossing to allow a train to pess. An electric car of the defendants coming in the opposite direction stopped on the other side of the railway crossing for the same reason. The plaintiff's horses were frightened by the train and became restive, and after the train passed the plaintiff waved his hand to the motorman of the electric car as a signal, as he contended, not to start the car. The horses were apparently under control, and the motorman started the car, when the horses became frightened again and ran away:—Held, reversing the judgment in 20 C. L. T. 35, 31 O. R. 309, that, as the plaintiff's signal was ambiguous, and as there was apparently no danger, the motorman could not be said to have been guilty of negligence. Myera v. Brantford Street Rev. an electric car of the defendants which was running backward in a southerly direction on the easterly track in a street, which track, according to the usual custom of the defendants, should have been used only by cars running in a northerly direction. The motorman was at the northerly end of the car, and no special precautions were being observed. The jury were asked, by fhe Judge presiding at the trial, to say, in the event of their returning a verdict for the plaintiff, what negligence they pointed to. The jury found that the defendants were responsible for the accident, for the reasons that the car was on the wrong track and the motorman at the rear end, and judgment was entered in the plaintiff's favour for the damages assessed: — Held, that this was a general verdict, which there was evidence to support, in the plaintiff's favour, with a statement of reasons which might be disregarded, and was not merely a specific finding in answer to a question. Per Armour, C.J.O.: Questions to the jury must be in writing. Per Osler, J.A.: While it is more convenient that questions to the jury should be in writing, the Judge is not bound to adopt that course. Balfour v. Toronto Rv. Co., 23 C. L. T. 241, 5 O. L. R. 735, 2 O. W. R. 671.

Injury to passenger — Conductor attempting to pull passenger on moving cer — Scope of authority—Question for jury — New trial.—The plaintiff came to a platform station of the defendants and signalled an approaching car to stop. The car slowed down. but did not stop, and, as it was passing, the conductor seized the plaintiff's hand, and, while attempting to help her on board, signalled the car to go on again, which it did, and she was injured. The jury found that the plaintiff was injured by the conductor seizing her hand and trying to pull her on the car, and that he acted negligently:—Held, that it was the duty of the conductor to assist people in getting on and off the car, and that it might be within the line of his duty to assist those apparently about to get on a car while it is slowing up; that the question as to the scope of the conductor's authority is one of evidence; that there was evidence to go to the jury, and the effect of it was for them to consider; and that it should have been left to them to pass upon the circumstances of the case as to the scope of the conductor's authority. Descdy v. Hamilton, Grimeby, and Beemswille Rve. Co., 23 C. L. T. 44, 5 O. L. R. 92, 1 O. W. R. 364, 781, 2 O. W. R. 789.

Injury to passenger — Contributory Negligence—Onus.] — The plaintiff alighted from a car of the defendants in which he was a passenger, and attempted to cross the street, when he was, while the car from which he had alighted was standing still, struck by another car going in the opposite direction, and injured. A rule of the defendants required that a motorman when passing another car should slacken speed and ring his gong continuously until car passed:—Held, upon the evidence that the gong was not rung when the east-bound car was approaching and passing the standing car; that the car was running past the standing car at a rate of speed which was, under the circumstants.

stances, excessive and dangerous to the passeneers alighting from the other car; and neglizence was thus established. The onus of proving contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff rested on the defendants in the first instance, and, in the absence of evidence tending to that conclusion, the plaintiff was not bound to prove the negative in order to entitle him to a verdict: Wakelin v. London and South-Western Rw. Co., 12 App. Cas. 41. To prove contributory negligence it is necessary for the defendant to shew that the plaintiff could, by the exercise of such care and skill as he was bound to exercise, nave avoided the consequence of the defendant's negligence: Dublin and Wicklow Rw. Co. v. Slatery, 3 App. Cas. 1207. Upon the whole circumstances as detailed in the evidence, there was no proof of contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff to disentile him to recover. There was not a want of due care on the plaintiff's part as a proximate cause of the injury, which could alone constitute negligence sufficient to deprive him of his remedy against the defendants for their negligence. Injury to passenger — Dangerous condition of steps of car—Climatic conditions— Necessity for care.]—The steps of an electric car, owned and operated by the defendants, were in a slippery condition in consequence of exposure, while in use, to snow followed by rain, sleet, and cold. The evidence shewed that the car had been thoroughly cleaned in the morning, before being sent out, and that it would not have been practicable to operate it in such weather as that which prevailed at the time and to send it back constantly to the barn to have the snow and ice removed:—Held, that passengers boarding and leaving the car at such a time were bound to exercise more than ordinary caution, and that it would not be reasonable to hold the defendants accountable for injuries sustained by the plaintiff, a passenger on one of their cars, who, in getting off the car, slipped and fell. Collins v. London Street Rw. Co., 3 O. W.

Injury to passenger — Negligence—Contributory negligence—Passenger alighting from car run over by another.]—The plaintiff, a passenger on a crowded car of the defendants going westwards, being near the front of the car when it stopped at the street where he wished to alight, made his way past a number of persons in the passage and in the front vestibule to the steps at that end, on which another man was standing, and stepped off the car in the direction of the parallel track of the railway. Almost instantaneously upon alighting, he was struck by another car of the defendants (of whose approach he was not aware) proceeding-eastwards on the other track, knocked down, and very seriously injured. The distance between the sides of two cars, when passing one another on the two tracks, was 44 inches, and the height of the lowest step of the car from the ground was 15½ inches. It was the custom of the company to permit passengers to alight at the front entrance, and they had no rule against it. It was, however, a rule of the company that motormen, when approaching another car, should slacken speed and ring the gong continuously until the car bad been passed, which, however, was not done in this case:—Held, that the motorman on the car by which the plaintiff was struck was guilty of negligence, rendering the defendants liable in damages for the injury done to plaintiff, and that the plaintiff had not been guilty of contributory negligence. There is no binding authority for the proposition that from the moment a passenger's foot touches the ground, a street railway company's liability for injuries to him by their other cars ceases. Injury to pedestrian — Negligence — Excessive speed—Means of escape—Burden of proof.]—The plaintift, proceeding along the track of the defendants, on a public street in the city of Sydney, was overtaken, struck, and severely injured by an electric car, driven at an excessive and dangerous rate of speed. At the time of the accident the plaintiff was prevented from escaping by a car of another line, which was obstructing the crossing in front of him, and by banks of snow, which had been thrown up by the defendants plough at the side of the track upon which he was standing:—Held, that the burden of shewing that the plaintiff had means of escape, was upon the defendants; and that the plaintiff having the right to be where he was, and the whole event, from the moment he discovered his danger to the time he was struck, having happened in the course of a tew seconds, he was not to be held to the obligation of selecting the best possible means of escape. Ricketts v. Sydney and Glace Bay Ru Co., 37 N. S. R. 270.

Injury to person -- Collision with vehicle—Contributory negligence—Proximate cause—Jury. Cohen v. Hamilton Street Rw. Co., 4 O. W. R. 19.

Injury to person — Failure to pive carning.] — The plaintiff, travelling by electric railway along a country road on a dark night, got off at a regular stopping place. He then turned back along the road, and, after walking for some distance, the car by which he had travelled, backing up, struck and injured him. There was a light at both ends of the car, but the current was very weak at the time, and the light given very slight, and the motorman came within four or five feet of the plaintiff before seeing him. The car was going along at the rate of only three or four miles an hour. The motorman did not sound the gong nor give any other warning of his approach:—Held, that the case could not properly have been withdrawn from the jury; that the accident was fairly and properly attributable to the defendants' negligence; and that there had been no misdirection, but that the sum awarded by the jury cs damages, $1,800, was largely in excess of what had been given in cases of much more serious injury, although it cannot be said that there is a standard of damages in such cases. New trial directed unless the plaintiff would consent to the reduction of his verdict to $900. Ford v. Metropolitan Rw. Co., 22 C. L. T. 227, 4 O. L. R. 29, 1 O. W. R. 287.

Injury to person crossing track—Collision—Rate of speed—Neoligence—Contributory negligence—Proximate cause—Appeal—Neve point.]—The plaintiff's wagon was struck and plaintiff injured by an electric tram car of the defendants, while attempting to cross the defendants' track, at a place known as Grand Lake Crossing, near which there was a down grade for a distance of about 3,000 feet, and then an upgrade for 1,000 feet, terminating at a siding near which the crossing was situated. On the down grade it was usual to run cars at a speed of from 20 to 25 miles an hour, but when half way down the power was shut off and the speed on reaching the siding was 10 miles an hour. When the plaintiff's team was first seen it was at a distance of from 35 to 40 feet from the crossing, and the car was distant from 50 to 75 feet. The motorman promptly applied the brakes and reversed the current, but was unable to avert the collision. The whistle had been blown when 300 yards distant from the crossing, and the car was provided with suitable appliances for stopping it within a reasonable time. The rate of speed at which the car was proceeding was reasonable considering the time and place. The plaintiff heard a whistle blown, which he supposed to be that of a Sydney and Louisburg train, but did not see the car until his horse's head was distant about 20 feet from the crossing. There was also evidence to shew that he failed to exercise proper care in approaching the crossing, as the reins were lying loose, and one witness called for the Injury to person crossing track—Negligence—Contributory negligence—Nonsuit.]—The plaintiff, in returning home at two o'clock in the morning, alighted from a west-bound car of the defendants on the north track of a street in a city, and proceeded to cross the north and south tracks on the street, in front of an approaching east-bound car on the south track, then about one hundred feet awaw. He was struck by the car and injured. There was a bright electric light near by; that the plaintiff, if careful could have seen the approaching car; but that the motorman did not apply the brakes or sound the gong before the plaintiff was struck:—Held, that a nonsuit was properly directed in an action brought against the defendants for negligence. Injury to vehicle by collision — Negligence — Use of tracks—Nuisance—Pling snow at sides of tracks—Contributory negligence.]—A car of the defendants, driven at an excessive rate of speed, ran into the plaintiffs' wagon, which was proceeding along the track, from which the defendants had removed the snow accumulated there during a heavy snow storm, and deposited it on the highway in such a way as to make it impossible for wagons, which, to the knowledge of the defendants, were forced, in consequence, to make use of the defendants' tracks. The driver of the wagon made repeated efforts to attract the attention of the motorman, but failed though there was sufficient light and an unobstructed view for 400 yards:—Held, in an action for damages for negligence, that the blocking of the highway by the defendants constituted in fact as well as in law a nuisance, and, the common law having been infringed, there was no burden cast upon the plaintiff to shew a requirement by the local authorities to level the snow to a certain depth over a certain area, and that such requirement had not been complied with; that if contributory negligence was relied on, the case was one in which the defendant must not only prove such negligence, but also that it was of such a character that they could not by the exercise of ordinary care and diligence have averted the mischief which happened; and that the restrictions in the company's charter in relation to the levelling of snow placed upon the highway, amounted to a condition. Bell v. Cape Breton Electric Co., 37 N. S. R. 298.

Man killed crossing street — Negligence of motornan — Contributory negligence of deceased — Evidence properly submitted to jury — Verdict upheld — Order granting neu trial set aside — Practice — Special leave to cross appeal,] — David King, while driving a delivery wagon along Adelaide Street, was killed by a Yonge Street car, the property of the defendant company. The published rules of the company required their mortormen to reduce the speed and keep their cars carefully under control when crossing a street. The widow and daughter of the deceased brought action to recover damages, alleging nealigence of defendant company. The jury found that the motorman was negligent in causing the accident, in failing to observe the published rules of the company, and that the deceased had a right to assume that these rules would be followed, and therefore was not guilty of contributory negligence. Judgment was entered for plaintiffs on the finding of the jury. The Court of Appeal for Ontario set aside this judgment and ordered a new trial:—Held, but should enter judgment for one party or the other. Where the defendants had appealed, praying that this action should be followed, and the plaintiffs had not presented a cross-petition, special leave was granted at the hearing nune pro tunc to cross appeal against the order for a new trial. Passenger projecting body beyond car — Negligence — Contributory negli-gence — Evidence — Injury from striking gence — Evidence — thinry from striking post.]—The plaintiff, as a passenger, was about midnight, standing on the back plat-form of one of the defendants' cars, smoking a cigar and leaning upon the railway gate or grating at the side, over which he leaned, from time to time, a distance from five to seven inches, and expectorated. Apparently, while doing so, he was struck by something and received the injuries complained of. The plaintiff alleged, in his statement of claim, that he was struck by a post belonging to the defendants and used by them for their tending wine but search. them for their trolley wire, but gave no by them for their troney wire but gave no evidence as to this. As a matter of fact, there were trolley poles along the line of the railway on the side where the plaintiff was struck, but there was no evidence given was struck, but there was no evidence given by the plaintiff of their position, and the evidence for the defendants placed them about two feet from the overhang of the car:—Held, (reversing the judgment of Divisional Court, 10 O. W. R. 33), that the action should be dismissed, as there was no evidence of what caused the injury. Meredith, J.A., dissenting, Per Riddell, Meredith, J.A., dissenting. Per Riddell, J. (in the Divisional Court): While it is impossible to lay down any specific rule for the guidance of railway or street railway companies generally, a railway company operating in a country in which tobacco chewing, or gum chewing, is not uncom-mon, must expect its patrons, or some of them, to be tobacco and gun chewers, and if it be the custom of such passengers to put their heads past the lines of the car to expectorate, the railway company should be held to know of such custom, and should be held to know of such custom, and should either remove all obstructions from the side of the track a sufficient distance to avoid the probability of an accident, or prevent the passengers from projecting their heads over the side, or at least give proper warn-ing as to the danger. And in every case the railway company must take all reasonable precautions against an accident happening to one who is acting as in the or-dinary course of affairs "in the vicinage" it may be expected that some will act. The Massachusetts rule that it is necessarily negligence for one riding in a railway car to project any portion of his person out of the window not followed by the Divisional Court. Simpson v. The plaintiff, not being aware of this order, attempted to get on a car so equipped at the front, and while so doing, the car started and she was thrown to the ground and injured. She asserted that the motorman saw her standing on the step, and not with her standing on the step, and not with-standing started the car. There was no no-tice on the door notifying the public of the non-admission by that door. On a charge tice on the door notifying the public of the non-admission by that door. On a charge to the jury that they might find on one or all of the following grounds of negligence, namely, (1) the omission of a non-admittance notice, (2) starting the car while the plaintiff was on the step, and (3) in not opening the door and letting the plaintiff in, they found that the defendants' negligence consisted in the onission to have a non-admittance notice on the door, and did not make any finding as to the other alleged grounds of negligence. Snow and ice piled on highway — Negligence — Nuisance — Powers of city engineer — Directions.] — The defendants, operating a tramway line in H., were empowered by their Act of incorporation and the rules made thereunder to remove snow and ice from their tracks, to enable them to operate their cars, "provided" that, in case of such removal, it should be the duty of the company to level the snow and ice so removed to a uniform depth, to be deterso removed to a uniform depth, to be determined by the city engineer, and to such distance on either side of the track as the engineer should direct, or to remove from the street all snow and ice disturbed, ploughed, or thrown out, etc., within 48 hours of the fall or disturbance, etc., if the city engineer should so direct. In exercise city engineer should so direct. In exercise of the power conferred upon them, the defendants swept snow from their track and piled it up on either side of the road in such a way as to form a ridge or bank, which caused a sleigh driven by the plaintiff to slew, throwing him out and severely injuring him:—Held, that the removal by the defendants, under the powers conferred upon them, of snow and ice, and placing it upon other portions of the street, was not to be treated as a nuisance for which the company would be responsible in damages. - Semble, that, irrespective of any directions given by the engineer, it was the duty of the defend-ants in removing snow and ice from their track and throwing it upon adjacent parts of the street, to do so in a reasonably careful manner, and with a just regard to the rights and interests of the public, and that, if the question had been left to the jury in this way, a verdict for the plaintiff based upon sufficient evidence could not have been disturbed.—Semble, also, that the defendants would be responsible for the consequences of failure on their part to carry out the directions and determination of the city engineer, but, in the absence of such directions and determination, they were only bound to act in a reasonable careful man-ner, and the adequacy of their performance of the duty cast upon them was to be determined by the circumstances of the case.

3. ONTARIO RAILWAY AND MUNICIPAL BOARD.

Jurisdiction — Control and management by commissioners — Agreement between unincipalities — Enforcement—Possession of railicay — Statutes.]—Under an agreement made between two municipalities and confirmed by the statute 6 Edw. VII... c. 80 (O.), one of the nunicipalities was, on payment of the amount of an award, to become the owner of a part of an electric rail-way, which theretofore had been owned by the other, although operated in both municipalities, and the whole road was to be operated and managed by a board of commissioners constituted in the manner provided for in the statute and agreement. The amount awarded having been paid, and the appellants, a board of commissioners who had been operating the railway for the municipality which owned it, retaining control, management, and possession of the railway, and refusing to permit compliance with the provisions of the agreement and enactment in regard to its operation and management, the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board was applied to, and such compliance was enforced by its order:—Held, that the board did not thereby exceed the powers conferred upon it by the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board Act, 1906.—Construction and effect of s. 16 of that statute, and of 56 V. c. 78, the Ontario Railway Act, 1906, and 8 Edw. To do so would be, in effect, to give the company a different franchise than that which had been granted by the municipality. Waddington v. Toronto & York Radial Rw. Co. (1911), 18 O. W. R. 621.

4. MISCELLANEOUS CASES

Construction of statute — General Railway Act — Charter of company — Repugnancy — 6 Edw. VII., c. 39, ss. 5 and 116. |—The Ontario Railway Act of 1006 (6 Edw. VII., c. 30) is by s. 5 made applicable to a street railway company incorporated by the legislature, but where there are inconsistent provisions those of the special shall override those of the general Act. By s. 116 of the said Railway Act a passenger on a railway train or car may be expelled for refusal to pay fare. By s. 17 of the special Act a passenger in such case is subjected to a fine:—Held, that these two provisions are not inconsistent and a conductor on a street railway car may lawfully eject a passenger who refuses to pay his fare. In this case the company was held liable for damager, the passenger having been ejected from a car with unnecessary violence. Appeal dismissed with costs. Toronto Railway Co. v. Paget (1909), 42 S. The point at which the special cars were ned was passed at stated intervals by other cars carrying on a regular service to and from Quinpool road. The plaintiff, who had been attending the regatta, en-tered a car known as a "trailer," attached to another car, which bore a sign at each end with the words "Quinpool road," expecting to be carried to a point on the line near his residence, but was informed on reaching the residence, but was informed on reaching the central point that the car in which he was went no further, and that he would have to transfer. There was evidence that an agent of the company stationed at the point of departure announced, as passengers entered, that the car in question was for the city, but this was not heard by the plaintiff: -Held, that, outside of the cars performing the regular service, there was no obligaing the regular service, there was no obliga-tion on the part of the defendants to carry the plaintiff through to his destination in any one particular car; that the only con-tract was to carry passengers in accordance with the usual modes and methods of run-ning the defendants' cars; and that, under the circumstances existing at the time, it was the plaintiff's duty to have protected himself by making inquiry as to the destina-self by making inquiry as to the destina-tion of the car he entered. O'Connor v. Halifaz Electric Tramway Co., 38 N. S. R. 212. Affirmed by the Supreme Court of Canada, 37 S. C. R. 523.

Contract for construction, etc. — Necessity for sanction of contract by shareholders — Contract incomplete — Birectors — Liability of — Electric Ru. Act. R. S. O. (1887), c. 209—Special Act.]—Action for damages for breach of contract for construction of electric rallway. Plaintiff proved execution of the contract under corporate scal signed by president and sceretary. The contract was never carried out:—Held, that R. S. O. (1897), c. 209, s. 17, had enacted that no such contract should be of any force or validity until sanctionei by a resolution passed by the votes of the shareholders, in person or by proxy, representing two-thirds in value of the paid-up stock, at a general meeting specially called, and not having been complied with, action should be dismissed, but under the circumstances without costs. Franchise — Assumption by municipality — Valuation — Operation in two municipalities — Compulsory taking — R. S. O. (1887), c. 208, s. 41.]—By s. 41 of R. S. O. (1887), c. 208, a municipal corporation which has given a franchise to a street railway company may, at the expiration thereof, on giving six months' previous notice, assume the ownership of the railway and all its real and personal property on payment of the value thereof to be determined by arbitration.—The town of Berlin assumed the ownership of the Berlin & Waterloo Street Railway Co., and the latter appealed from the award of arbitrators fixing the value of their railway:—Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal (19 O. L. R. 57), that the proper mode of determining the value of the "railway and all real and personal property in connection therewith," was not by capitalizing its net permanent revenue, but by estimating its value as a railway in use and capable of being operated, excluding compensation for loss of its franchise.—Held, also, that the company was not entitled to compensation for loss of its privilege of operating the railway in the municipality of Waterloo,—On the expiration of the franchise the company executed an agreement extending for two months, the time for assumption by the municipality, time for assumption by the municipality, but did not relinquish possession until six months more had expired. Shortly before it was taken over by the municipality, an Act of the legislature was passed reciting all the circumstances, ratifying and confirming the agreement for extension of time, and authorizing the municipality to take possession on payment of the award subject to variation in the amount by the Courts. —Held, that though this Act did not expressly provide for taking possession on the same footing as if it had been done immediately on the expiration of the franchise, its effect was not to confer upon the town of Berlin a new right of expropriation in respect of an extended franchise, but merely to extend the time for assumption of ownership under the original conditions.—Quære, did the Act just mentioned, by its terms, preclude the company from claiming com-pensation for loss of franchise?—The rights of the company to compensation are defined by statute, and there is no provision for an allowance of ten per cent, above the actual value of the property. Berlin v. Berlin & Waterloo Street Rw. Co. (1910), 30 C. L. T. 336.

Mortgage -- Future property-Fixtures Mortgage — Future property—Fixtures —Rolling stock—Execution — Company,—
An electric street railway company, incorporated under the Ontario Joint Stock Companies Letters Patent Act, R. S. O. 1887, c. 157, and subject to the provisions of the Street Railway Act, R. S. O. 1887, c. 171, gave to trustees for holders of debentures of the company a mortgage upon the real estate of the company, together with all buildings, machinery, appliances, works, and fixtures, etc., and also all rolling stock and all other machinery, appliances, works, and fixtures, etc., to be thereafter used in connection with the said works. The by-laws of the directors and shareholders (who were the same persons, and only five in number) authorizing the giving of the mortgage, directed it to be given upon all the real estate, plant, franchises, and income of the company, and the debentures stated that they were secured by mortgage of the real estate, franchises, rolling stock, plant, etc., acquired or to be acquired:—Held, that s. 38 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 157, does not restrict the power of mortc. 101, does not restrict the power of morgaging to the existing property of the company, and that a company is invested with as large powers to mortgage its ordinary after-acquired property as belong to a natural person; that the mortgage in terms covered future property; and, even if not authorized in this respect upon a strict reading of the by-laws, had been acquiesced in constant of the control of the c ing of the by-flaws, and been acquiesced in and ratified, and was binding.—Held, also, that the rolling stock, poles, wires, etc., formed an essential part of the corpus of what must be regarded as an entire machine, and were, therefore, fixtures and not seizable under execution to the prejudice of the mortgagees. Kirkpatrick v. Cornwall Electric Street Rv. Co., Bank of Montreal v. Kirkpatrick, 21 C. L. T. 368, 2 O. L. R. 113.

Promotion of railway - Power of provisional directors—Contract with promo-ters of rival railway—1 Edw. VII., c. 92, s. 9—R. S. O. c. 209, s. 44—Costs.]—The Essex and Kent Rw. Co. was incorporated to build an electric railway. Plaintiffs were to build an electric railway. Plaintiffs were the two persons most active in promoting the railway and in opposing its rival the defendant company. The promoters of de-fendant company found themselves checked at many points by plaintiffs, and the pro-visional directors gave defendants, their president and secretary, power to bargain with the plaintiffs. They did so, and their agreement was ratified by their board. By the contract plaintiffs agreed to cease all operations in support of any other railway. operations in support or any other in operation to defendant railway and to in operation to defendant railway and to in operation to defendant railway and to assist latter in securing franchises, etc., for which they were to receive $1,000.—Riddell, J., held (15 O. W. R. 87, 20 O. L. R. 290, 1 O. W. N. 355), that there were no mis-representations by plaintiffs, and they had acted for themselves and not for the Essex and Kent Rw. Co.; that they were not guilty of breach of trust in making the contract, and they had carried out their part thereof. That the defordent company had not been That the defendant company had not been organized at the time of the contract, though Newman and Nelles believed that the company had power to make the contract, and they were not guilty of fraud in represent-ing their power, as they believed that what had taken place justified them in making the contract. Action dismissed against the the contract. Acton dismissed against the railway company and judgment entered against Newman and Nelles for $1,000 with costs.—Divisional Court (16 0. W. R. 1, 21 O. L. R. 109, 1 0. W. N. 731), set aside the judgment as against the two individual defendants and entered judgment against this defendants and entered judgment against the company for amount of the bond, $\frac{2}{3}$,000, and interest and costs, except costs brown away in appeal by the failure to bring the company before the Divisional Court, Judgment of Riddell, J., reversed on the ground that 1 Edw. VII., c. 92, s. 9 (to which his attention was not directed), authorized the above contract.—Court of Appeal affirmed judgment of Divisional Court. Selkirk v. Windsor, Essex & Lake Shore Rapid Ru. Co. (1910), 17 O. W. R. 317; 2 O. W. N. 193, O. L. R.

Unifruct — Tacit renunciation — Sepropriation by a railway — Change from steam railway to an electric railway—Additional damages suffered by adjacent proprietors — Extent of their remedy.]—The renunciation to a usufruct is not subjected to any particular form. It may be tacitly effected and may result from circumstances, such as the conduct of the usufructurry, his failure to exercise his right, etc., the appreciation of which is left to the Courta—Expropriation for the purpose of an electric railway (Art. 5164 et seq. R. S. Q.), in the construction of the change made from an electric railway to the change made from an electric railway to a steam road. Hence, such right is independent of any increased value which might have been given to the remainder of his land by the construction of the railway, and the award of the arbitrators fixing the amount of indemnity to be paid for the part of his land by the has been expropriated does not extinguish his right to recover any claim he may have arising therefrom.—In any event, such claim in no wise depends upon the special provisions above referred to, but is based upon the common law responsibility contained in Art. 1053 C. C. Consequently, it only applies to damages actually suffered, under reserve to recover future damages, if any there be, and cannot include in one and the same action both present and future damages. Lapointe v. Chateauguay & Northern Rw. C. (1910), 38 Que. S. C. 139. (An appeal is pending before the Court of King's Bench.)

Essentials of — Creditor — Volunteer.]
—The doctrine of subrogation is part of the law of the province of Nova Scotia. 2. Subrogation arises either upon convention or by law, but in the province of Nova Scotia the creditor must be a party to the convention. It is not sufficient that it be convention. It is not sufficient that it be with the debtor only. 3. Subrogation by operation of law is recognized not only by the civil law, but it has been adopted and followed by Courts administering the law of England. 4. It is an incident of the doctrine of subrogation that an obligation extinguished by a payment made by a third party is treated as still subsisting for his benefit. 5. Where one is entitled to be subrogated to the rights of a judgment creditor, he is to be subrogated to all and not to part only of the latter's rights in such judgment. Semble.

that a mere stranger or volunteer, who pays the debt of another, without an assignment or agreement for subrogation, without being under any legal obligation to make the payment, and without being compelled to do so for the preservation of any rights or property of his own, cannot invoke the benefit of the doctrine of subrogation. Regina V. O'Bryen, 21 C. L. T. 278, 7 Ex. C, R. 19.

Hypothes — Payment — Tiers-de-tenteur — Registration — Mietakes of Registrar.]—F. on the 13th May, 1893, hypothecated to O. lots 87, 119, 130, and 132. Subsequently A. became tiers-de-tenteur of 87 and half of 132. Later J. became tiers-de-tenteur of 119 and 130 and other half of 132. Neither A. nor J. was bound to pay the claim of O. On 22nd April, 1899, and 12th February 1900, J. borrowed $500 from E. and hypothecated to him the lands of which he was tiers-de-tenteur. On the from E. and hypothecated to him the lands of which he was tiers-de-tenteur. On the 9th November, 1901, in order to obtain legal subrogation, E. paid the claim of O., who gave him a quittance and granted him conventional subrogation. On 23rd November, 1901, A. sold the lands of which he was tiers-de-tenteur to M., and charged upon the purchase-price the payment of O's claim, to which E. was subrogated. On 25th November, 1901, to comply with this obligation, M. paid to E. the O. claim and obtained a quittance, which stated that the payment quittance, which stated that the payment was made out of the purchase-money due to was made out of the purchase-money due to A., and in accordance with the terms of the sale, and that it was a general and final quittance and for radiation of the hypothec. The lands of which J. was the tiers-detentuer were sold by the sheriff, and the proceeds were to be distributed:—Held, that the right and interest of A. (or of M.) to obtain legal subrogation was superior to those right and interest of A. (or of M.) to obtain legal subrogation was superior to those of E., for A. was interested in paying off the debt to free his land from the hypothec.

2. That A., by this payment made by his purchaser out of the purchaser money to E., had obtained legal subrogation in the O. claim, in spite of the terms of the quittance signed by E. 3. But that the lands of A. (sold to M.), being equally affected by the claim of O., A. could claim out of the proceeds of the sale of J.'s lands only a deduction of that portion of the O. claim which these lands should bear in proportion to their value; and such was the extent of the legal subrogation obtained by A. 4. That E., not being an assignee nor a subsequent subrogate, could not complain of the want of registration of the legal subrogation obtained by A. 5. That the registrar's mistakes or irregularities or erroneous interpretation of documents regularly produced beating the produced between the contract of the legal subrogation obtained by A. 5. That the registrar's mistakes or irregularities or erroneous interpretation of documents regularly produced beating the produced between the produced beating the produced between the produced beating the produced beating the produced between the produced beating the takes or irregularities of erroneous interpre-tation of documents regularly produced be-fore him could not injuriously affect the rights of A. 6. That to obtain registration of the quittance granted by E., it was suffi-cient to produce a copy of it to the registrar, which had been done, and the quittance shewed the legal subrogation. tion; and therefore the alienation of land which is the subject of the substitution in execution of a judgment which orders the greet to pay such a legacy is definitive, and the appelés cannot contend that they have rights therein.—The handing over of the property which is the subject of the substitution, made by anticipation on the part of the greet to the appelés is equivalent as regards the latter to the opening of the substitution. It gives them the right to revendicate lands which are part of it and which have been alienated; and there is no ground for them to have recourse to simple conservatory measures. Filion v. Filion, 31 Que. S. C. 24.

Restraint on alienation — Substituted property — Right to alienate — Creditors' rights.]—A restraint upon alienation provided for in a substitution pure and simple, being confirmative of the substitution, does not hinder the alienation of the property substituted subject to the rights of those in remainder if the substitution is opened. Therefore, the creditors of the tenant for life may, in spite of the restraint upon alienation, procure a seizure and sale of the immovable substituted, subject to the openings of the substitution. Turcot v. Charters, 18 Que. S. C. 24.

Sale of land under execution — Judgment — Universal legatee — Specific legatee — Payment of debts — Land discharged.]—A sheriff's sale of an immovable devised by a specific title with substitution, the sale being made pursuant to a judgment recovered by a universal legatee against a specific legatee in respect of a sum which he was obliged by virtue of his legacy to contribute to the payment of the debts of the testator, which had been paid by the universal legatee, has the effect of freeing the land from the substitution. it is of advantage to both classes.—Whe the heirs have made a partition among the of the immovables as if each lot had bee, devised to each co-parcener, by irtue of the substitution, and this partition has been ratified by the legislature, the interest of each one is restricted to his own portion, and one has no status nor interest to intervene in respect of the alienation of the property falling by the partition to the others. Hamren v. Mott, 5 Terr. L. R. 400.

Lord's Day Act — Druggist — Selling "ice cream soda"—Medicines — Evidence—Finding—Certiorari.] — The evidence before the magistrate shewed that on a Sunday two policemen bought "ice cream soda" at the defendant's drug shop and paid 20 cents therefor. One of the policemen swore that he was not ill, and did not get the stuff for medicine, but he also said that nothing was said at the time as to whether he or the other policeman was ill or not. Evidence was given by physicians to skew that both ice cream and soda water were used as medicines. The magistrate found upon the evidence that soda water and ice cream were sometimes sold as medicines, and stated that, in his opinion, the sale of these articles mentioned in the evidence was not made as a sale of medicines, although nothing was said by either party on the subject. Upon a motion to quash the conviction, based upon this evidence, for an offence against the Lord's Day Act, it was contended that there was no evidence that the articles were not sold as medicines:—Held, that the finding of the magistrate upon a question of fact within his jurisdiction would not be reviewed upon certiorari, but the defendant's remedy, if any, was an appeal. SURVEY.

Plan of block — Excess — Distribution—Buildings and fences — Encroachment—Dispute as to division line — Remedy — Damages — Injunction — Mandamus — Compensation.]—The plaintiff and defendant owned adjoining lands in block 21 in a city, and the plaintiff alleged that the defendant so constructed a certain building on his own land that the eaves and eavestroughs projected over the plaintiff's land, and so constructed a fence that it encroached upon the plaintiff's land beyond the dividing line. The issue was as to the proper location of the dividing line between the southerly 10 feet of 10 15, owned by the plaintiff, and the northerly 15 feet of the same lot, owned by the defendant. The plaintiff based his claim on an excess in length of 3.3 feet shewn on the plan of a survey of the block made in 1894. He contended that this excess should be distributed over the whole length of the block; and that, by doing this along the northern boundary of the block, one lnch would be added to the width of each 25-foot lot, with the result that the line in dispute, instead of being just 360 feet from the southern boundary of the block, on the basis of allowing 25 feet for each lot, would be moved 1.4 feet to the north:—Held, that the main scheme, based on predetermined and fixed dimensions, was the staking out of the bulk of the block in 25-foot lots; and the rest of the block was treated as a remnant of yet undefined quantity, to be dealt with as further consideration would suggest; and the discrepancy should be thrown on the north end of the block, which would not affect lots 1 to 28.—Held, also, that the plaintiff would not, in any event, be entitled to damages, an injunction or a mandamus, but only to compensation for the land encroached upon. Thordarson v. Akin (1910), 15 W. L. R. 115.

Village lots —Authorisation — Statutory requirements — Order in council — Resolutions of municipal council—By-law—Cost of survey — Assessment for — Proprietors interested.]—After a resolution of the council of an incorporated village in favour of a survey of certain streets and lots, and correspondence with the Crown Lands Department, an order in council was passed, by which C. was instructed to survey the village lots of the Balley estate and to plant durable monuments at the front angles of each of these lots, on Joseph street, Balley street, and a street south of Balley street, and a street south of Balley street, unnamed in the original survey, and he did as he was instructed. The village council then passed a by-law directing that the sum of $299.77 should be levied on the proprietors of the lands surveyed, being the village lots of the Balley estate:—Held, that the survey directed was not authorised and was illegal, the requirements of the statute (R. S. O. 1887 c. 152. s. 39) not having been complied with so far as to give the Lieutenant-Governor in council jurisdiction to authorise the survey. 2. That the survey being illegal, the municipal council had no power to pass a by-law to levy the cost of it. 3. That if there was jurisdiction to authorise the survey, it could only be at the cost of the proprietors of the lands in each range or block interested, and not of all the proprietors, whether interested or not. Mortgage by husband in lifetime of wife — Effect on catale of husband—Life catale — Right of mortgage to possession —Tenants in common.]—T. was the owner of two undivided sixths parts of land, the remaining parts being owned by his wife. T. mortgaged the whole property, but his wife did not join in the mortgage. The equity of redemption was foreclosed after the death of the wife, and the lands sold to the plaintiff. In an action of ejectment the defendants, the sons of T., pleaded that they as heirs of their mother were remains in common with the plaintiff. "Held, that at the time of making the mortgage T, was a "tenant by the currens initiate," and upon the death of the wife his estate for life became vested; that this life estate passed under the mortgage; and that plaintiff was entitled to possession. property during her life. It was conceded that she was entitled to the enjoyment in specie of the personal estate. The testator owned a brick-field on leasehold land, which was a going concern at the time of his death. This and the plant in connection therewith the tenant for life took possession of, and went on with the working of it. She put other assets of the estate into this business and extended it, and when she died it was still a going concern. At the expiration of the term of her husband's lease, she ob-tained a new one, covering a larger area of land: — Held, that the widow, having elected to carry on the business on these premises, did so for the ultimate benefit of the estate. She was entitled to all the income, earnings, and profits derivable there-from each year, in so far as she applied them to the maintenance of the family, or in the acquisition of other property, or in the paying off of mortgages; but whatever profits went into the business to increase it, and whatever plant, stock, and belongings of the business remained on the premless or classifiers remained on the premises or classwhere at her death, beame the property of the husband's estate. TENANTS IN COMMON.

Account — 4 Anne c. 16 — Infant — Statute of Limitations.]—Section 27 of the statute 4 Anne c. 18, providing for an action of account by one tenant in common against another, is in force in Nova Scotia, being a provision in amelioration of or auxiliary to the common law.—Where one receives the profits of an infant's estate, and more than six years after the infant comes of age he brings a suit for an accounting, the Statute of Limitations is a bar to such suit. This rule also applies to actions of account between tenants in common. Crane v. Blackadar, 40 N. S. R. 100.

Exection of wharf by one — Ouster—Trespass — Burden of proof.]—The defendants erected a wharf on a portion of a water lot in the town of L., of which they were tensits in common with the plaintiff:—Held, that the wharf was a permanent structure, and that the defendants by erecting it ousted the plaintiff, their co-tenant, from the portion of the lot which it covered; that a claim by the plaintiff for damages for cutting logs, and a counterclaim by the defendants for the erection of the logs so cut, must both be dismissed, neither party having satisfied the burden of proof by shewing ownership of the land upon which the trespasses complained of were committed. Zwicker v. Morath, 34 N. S. R. 555.

One tenant in possession — Bona fides — Acquisition from reputed owner of whole property — Cessation of bona fides — Account — Rents and profits — Outley, 1—The possessor of an immovable in virtue of a title the defects of which are unknown to him (e.g., a sale from one who, though only a joint part-owner, is the reputed owner of the whole), is a possessor in good faith and acquires the fruits.—2. Such good faith does not cease merely upon his being informed of the claims of the co-owners, but only upon becoming aware o. proceedings at law to enforce such claims.—3. An undivided joint owner, who is in possession of an immovable, has the right to credit himself with the cost of necessary outlay, in accounting to his co-owners for the fruits produced. Burns v. Brown, 34 Que, S. C. 272.

Possession of one — Statute of Limitations — Fiduciary capacity—Acquiescence — Partition.]—An action for partition of land was resisted by the heirs, etc., of D., on the ground that she had acquired title by exclusive possession against the other tenants in common. The trial Judge found, and the evidence supported such finding, that D. acted throughout in a fiduciary capacity, as administratrix for the benefit of her father's estate, and those interested in it:—Held, that it was not open to a person in the position of D. to avail herself of the Statute of Limitations. As the plaintiffs believed that D. was acting within her rights as administratrix, there was nothing in their conduct that would operate as a bar to the relief sought on the ground of acquiescence. The acts of D., leasing the property, collecting rents, etc., which were relied upon as giving her an exclusive title, were perfectly consistent with the rights of the plaintiffs as tenants in common, Brown v. Dooley, 36 N. S. R. 56.

Advances by bank to lumbermen—Insurance of lumber against fire — Loss payable to bank — Destruction of lumber by fire — Lice of saveyer — Possessory lien terminated by fire.]—The defendants' bank advanced to C. & Co., lumbermen, money wherewith to carry on lumbering operations. With the bank's knowledge, the plaintiff contracted with C. & Co. to saw their logs into lumber, which he did. C. & Co. then insured this lumber, making the loss payable to the bank; and, while lying in the plaintiff sy ard, the lumber mas burnt. The plaintiff claimed to be entitled to payment out of the insurance moneys, in priority to the bank, of the contract price of the sawing:—Held, that the plaintiff and, at most, a mere possessory lien upon the lumber, for the price of the sawing, depending not upon contract, but wholly upon possession, and therefore for the sawing, depending not upon contract, but wholly upon possession, and therefore for the sawing, depending not upon contract, but wholly upon possession, and therefore possessory, which the plaintiff was not in a position to attack or displace. pose of the contracting parties is realised. Thus, a contract with a firm of lumber merchants for hauling saw-logs at so much per 1,000 feet, and to build a suitable and satisfactory road for that purpose, for a fixed price, does not oblige the contractor to build a road across four lots when there is already one across the first three. A road joining the one already built, in such a way as to afford adequate transportation facilities, is all that is required. The carter was justified in refusing to continue his contract to haul the saw-logs when the manufacturers failed to pay for the building of the road. Dauphin v. Starks Cooperage Co., 37 Que. S. C. 51.

Contract - Accounts - Condition precedent - Absence of common intention -Pleading.]-The plaintiffs owned a lumber mill, situate on the Canadian side of the St. John river, about twenty miles below the mouth of Little Black river, and the defendants a mill about sixty miles below the Little Black river on the American side of the St. John. The logs of both parties became mixed in a jam at the mouth of became in section a name at the modul of Little Black river, and it was agreed that the jam should be broken and the logs allowed to float down the St. John to the booms of the plaintiffs and defendants, each party having the right to saw all the logs party naving the right to saw all the logs that came into their respective booms, irrespective of marks. An account was to be kept, and the excess of the cut of one party's logs over the other was to be paid for at the end of the season, at a rate per thousand agreed upon. It was further agreed that the defendants were to have a man at the plaintiffs' mill, to be paid by the plaintiffs, to check the count of the defendants' logs sawed, and the plaintiffs had the right to have a man at the defendants' mill, at the plaintiffs' expense, to check the count of their logs. The plaintiffs sawed a portion of the defendants' logs without notice to them and without affording an opportunity of having a man present to check the count. In a claim by the plaintiffs for the excess of their logs sawn by the defendants, the defendants contended that the checking of the count at the plaintiffs' mill by their representative was a condition precedent, and, as they were prevented from doing so by the default of the plaintiffs, there was no liability. At the trial, without a jury, the Judge found upon the evidence that the defendants' right to have a man at the plaintiffs' mill to check the count of the cut was not a condition precedent, and the plain-tiffs were entitled to recover on the basis of an account kept by their own servants for the excess of their logs cut at the defendants' mill over the defendants' logs cut that their mill:—Held, that there was evidence upon which the Judge might find as he did. Kennedy Island Mill Co. v. St. John Lumber Co., 38 N. B. R. 292, 4 E. L. R. 107.

Contract for sale of timber — Estimates — Paid for by promissory notes — Raft broken up by storm — Much timber lost — Action on note for price.]—Messrs. H. L. & Co., of Montreal, entered into a written contract with Messrs. L. & Co., for the sale of a quantity of red pine timber, then lying above the Rapids, Ottawa River, stated to consist of 1,391 pieces, measuring 50,000 feet, more or less, to be deliverable at a certain boom at Quebec, on or before the 15th of June, then next, and to be paid for by the purchaser's promissory notes of ninety days from that date, at the rate of 91/2d. per foot, measured off; if the quantity turned out more than above stated, the surplus was to be paid for by the purchasers at 91/2d. per foot, on delivery; and if it fell short, the difference was to be refunded by the sellers. The price of the 50,000 feet at the agreed rate, was paid by Messrs. L. & Co., according to the terms of the conday prescribed in the contract of sale, and when it arrived at Quebec, and before it was measured and delivered, the raft was broken up by a storm, whereby the greater part of the timber was dispersed and lost, L. & Co., after the storm, collected such of the timber as could be saved, paid salvage for it, and applied the timber saved to their own use. In an action brought by Messrs. L. & Co. against Messrs. H. L. & Co., to recover the amount paid on their promissory notes, and for a breach of their promisory notes, and for a breach of their contract, and for the difference between the contract price of 9½d, per foot and 10½d, per foot, the market price when the timber was to have been delivered:—Held, by the Judicial Committee, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeals in Lower Canada:—1. That the action was maintaintable, 2. That, by the terms of the contract, until the measurement and delivery of the timber was made, the sale was not complete; and that the transfer of the property was postponed until the measurement at the delivery; and that the risk remained with the sellers. 3. That the taking possession of a part of the timber by Messrs. L. & Co., after the day mentioned for the delivery thereof, in the contract, and not at the place, could not be considered as an acceptance of the whole, nor could it be considered as an admission, that the property in the timber passed to them before the storm which broke up the raft, The old French law in force in Lower Canada, grounded on the civil law, is in substance the same as the law of England, upon this point. Correspondence - Warranty ings on facts by trial Judge-Refusal to set aside.]-Findings on facts made by a trial Judge will not be set aside unless the Court is clearly of opinion that he was wrong. On April 19th, 1907, the defendants wrote to the plaintiffs asking the price of oak timber of certain specifications, stating, "we want this for heavy engine foundation work, and must be well seasoned, free from wane, shakes and dry rot." April 22nd, the plaintiffs replied, "the price is $60 per M., the purchaser paying for the full survey. Will saw it for you and charge for time it takes; if you have a rotary, think you would do better to cut it yourself." On the same day the defendants sent the plaintiffs specifica tion for an additional lot and on April 24th, sent an order for one piece for a boat keel and order No. 1120 for 51 pieces, "to be well seasoned and free from wanes, shakes and dry rots, and to be well and evenly sawn, and also wrote a latter asking for a new and also wrote a latter asking for a new quotation of price, including the sawing and stated, "presuming you will quote a price in this manner we are enclosing order for the first lot enquired for. . 27th, the defendants sent another order, No. 1149, for 67 pieces, to be "well and evenly sawn, and free from shakes and wane, suitable for car repairs." April 29th, the plaintiffs wrote, "will cost you $60 per M., full survey of what is in the timber. Vit and charge for the time it takes. Will saw The only way we will sell this oak is for the purchaser to take all risks of it turning out good or bad in sawing." April 30th, out good or bad in sawing." April 30th, the defendants wrote plaintiffs to saw up two or three of the larger sticks into sizes on the first order and then advise what the cost was and the cost of re-sawing. plaintiffs sawed two logs and The cost pieces to the defendants, May 4th. The cost pieces to the about $105 per M. On May plaintiffs sawed two logs and shipped the 11th, a telephone conversation took place in which, according to evidence for the plaintiffs, it was stated that the oak sawn was good, and that the rest would run about the same, but no guarantee of quality was made, while, according to the evidence for the defendants, the plaintiffs stated that the logs sawn were of good quality and that they would be a fair average of all the oak, and the defendants told the plaintiffs to go ahead with the orders on that basis. On the same day the defendants wrote, "confirming our conversation of this morning, please go ahead with our orders Nos. 1120 and 1149. There was evidence that the plaintiffs requested the defendants to send a man over to inspect the oak timbers, and also that it is impossible by inspecting oak in the square to tell whether it is good or bad inside. The plaintiffs sawed the oak to the dimensions ordered and shipped it, but all excepting the piece for the boat keel was rejected by the defendants on the ground that it was unsuitable for the purposes that it was ordered for and not free from wane, shakes and dry rot -Held, sustaining the judgment of the trial Judge, that the defendants bought the oak in the stick, agreeing to pay $60 per M. for it, and the cost of sawing; that there was no warranty of quality by the plaintiffs, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the purchase price. Dimensions of lumber sold — Waiver of objection — Condition not arising — Contract price — Right to recover.]—The defendants contracted to purchase from the plaintiffs a cargo of lumber of specified dimensions at an agreed price per thousand, delivered f.o.b. at B., 90 per cent. of the price to be paid on delivery of the lumber on board ship, and the balance, 10 per cent., on right delivery of cargo at the port of discharge. The defendants objected to pay the 90 per cent., on the ground that part of the lumber delivered was not of the dimensions called for by the contract, but waived the objections upon the defendants offering to take back the cargo, or the lengths objected to, if there was any trouble at the port of delivery:—Held, that the parties were then dealing upon the basis of the original contract, and as, owing to the loss of the vessel, the cargo never arrived at the port of de livery, the conditions upon which the defendants were to take over the portion complained of did not arise, and they were entitled to be paid for the whole cargo upon the basis fixed by the contract—Held, also, that the trial Judge erred in treating the contract as at an end and dealing with the transaction on the principle of a quantum meruit, and adopting a different scale of prices for the lumber from that fixed by the contract. Ham v. Smith Tyrer & Co., 42 N. S. R. 321.

Driving logs — Injury to land—Damages — Misdirection — Employment of contractor — Vis major, I—In an action for damages for injuries to the plaintiffs' land by logs which the defendant had neglected to confine within his boom, and which were suffered to be driven up and down stream by the tide, the trial Judge instructed the jury that in assessing damages they were not restricted to the actual damage referred to in the statute (R. S. N. S. c. 95, s. 17), but, at the same time, the amount allowed ought to be reasonable:—Held, that the jury should have been told, at the same time that the actual damage was, as a rule, the measure in common law actions of this kind; but, as the amount awarded by the jury was small, and as there was evidence to support it, the misdirection, if any, occasioned no substantial wrong or miscarriage, and was, therefore, within O. xxxvii., r. 6. Quære, whether the defendant could escape liability by employing a contractor to bring down his logs, when, in the ordinary course of things, they would necessarily come in contact with the plaintiffs' land. Semble, that he could not. In respect to a portion of the damage done, the defendant relied upon a plea of vis major:—Held that this was not a defence unless the defendant could shew that the damage would equally have happened if he had done his duty.—Held, that, in this case, the excuse was insufficient, a larger quantity of logs having been brought down the stream in the expectation that, before the high tides came, a sufficient quantity could be sawed to enable the remainder to be confined within the boom, and the high tides having occurred two or three days earlier than the defendant expected, as the result of which the logs not confined in the boom were carried up the stream and stranded on the plaintiffs' land. Campbell v. Dickie, 36 N. S. R. 40.

Floating — Tolls — Tariff — Retroactivity — Action.]—One who erects works and buildings to facilitate the floating of timber on a river, for which a tariff of tolls is fixed by order of the Lieutenant-Governor in council, in accordance with s. 2972f, R. S. Q. (54 V. c. 25, s. 1), has the remedy of an action to recover tolls upon the timber floated since the erection of the works, as well before as after the coming into force of the tariff. Tanquay v. Royal Paper Mills Co., 31 Que, S. C. 397.

Fraud in reducing to writing — Frequence—Void agreement—Sale of standing timber—Interest in land—Execution by wife—Construction of contract. Lasjinski v. Campbell, 1 O. W. R. 114.

Hauling tan bark-Cord-Agreement as to cubic contents-Payments on estimate-Evidence of collateral agreement as to sale— Jury — Questions — Misdirection—Verdict.] —A written contract, wherein A. agreed to haul certain bark belonging to B. for $1.87 per cord, contained a clause to the following effect: "The survey to be made by buyer or his agent and the owner or his agent, who, failing to agree, shall choose a man who shall choose a third whose scale shall be considered final reckoning, 128 feet per cord. Bark to be estimated by agent of owner as soon as finished hauling, and paid for accordingly; account to be balanced as soon as bark is sold." When the hauling was finished. B.'s agent estimated the number of cords hauled on the basis of 140 feet to the cord, and the hauling was paid for on that basis. The bark was not sold, and no final survey was made or account balanced as provided in the contract. In an action by A. against B. for a balance due on the contract, the Judge directed the jury that in construing the contract (as to that part which provided for a payment on an estimate), the words "the estimate to be based on basis of 128 cubic feet to the cord, and paid accordingly," should be read into the contract:—Held, on appeal (per Tuck, C.J., Hanington and Landry, JJ.), Barker and McLeod, JJ., taking no part, and Gregory, J., dissenting, that the direction was right; that the sale of the bark and survey provided by the contract were not conditions precedent to payment; and the plaintiff might recover on the contract, and was not put to an action for a breach in not selling.—Per Gregory, J., that the construction of the clause of the contract which provided for payment on an estimate was an erroneous construction, and the appeal should be allowed and a new trial granted.—A Judge is not bound on the request of counsel to submit questions to the jury under C. S. N. B. 1903, c. 111, s. 163, and c. 116, s. 78. He may refuse to do so and ask for a general verdict. Shaw v. Stairs, 2 E. L. R. 111, 37 N. B. R. 593.

Interest in lands — Timber licenses.]
—An interest in a special timber license issued under the Land Act of B. C. is an interest in lands. Vauphan-Rys. v. Clary (1910), 15 B. C. R. 9.

Issue as to ownership — Severance by stranger — Waiver of tort — Conveyance of land by husband to wife — Title to timber — Sale to bona fide purchaser — Amendment of issue — Parties — Damages.]—F. conveyed land to his wife for valuable consideration. Shortly afterwards it was discovered that a trespasser had cut timber on the land and sold it to G., who bought in good faith and sold it to another bona fide purchaser. In an action by F's wife against the two purchasers, the money was paid into Court, and an interpleader issue ordered to decide which of the claimants, the plaintiff or G., was entitled to have it:—Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal, Faulkner v. Greer, 16 O. L. R. 123, 11 O. W. R. 198, which reversed the decision of a Divisional Court, 14 O. L. R. 360, 9 O. W. R. 241, 733, that the plaintiff was entitled to the whole sum,—Duff, J., expressed no opinion on the question.—Held, also, Idington, J., disbitante, and Duff, J., dissenting, that, if necessary, the writ and interpleader order could be amended by adding F. as a co-plaintiff with his wife. Greer v. Faulkner, 40 S. C. R. 399.

License to cut timber—Description of land — Boundaries — Winding river — Ambiguity — Evidence — Deed.]—A license to cut timber on lands traversed by a water-course described the portion on which the timber was to be cut as "bounded on the south" by the river. The river crossed the width of the land almost entirely at a point about seven arpents from its northerly boundary, and again crossed it completely at another point about inseten arpents further south:—Held, that there was no ambiguity in the description, but, even if any doubt existed, the language of the instrument must be construed literally, and the party bound thereby could not be allowed to give evidence of extraneous circumstances to shew a different intention. Morel v. Lefrancois, 27 C. L. T. 157, 38 S. C. R. 75.

License to cut timber — 1309 S. R. O. — Reneval of license — Effect, retroactive lots within the limits licensed alienated before the reneval.] — A license to cut timber issued under s. 1309 S. R. O., even though it is a renewal of a former license, takes effect only at the date it bears and has no retroactive effect to the first of May precedent, and the lots in the limits alienated before the issuance are excepted from it. (Price v. DeLisie, 21 C. S. 41). Hence, the holder of a license to cut timber which expired on April 30th, and was renewed or the 10th of December, cannot claim that his rights date back to the 1st of May preceding, and he does not acquire the right to remove the timber from lots within the limits of his license granted by letters pates' between those two dates. Educards Co. v. Halewyn, 18 Que, K. B. 419.

Licenses-Mining lands-Different Crown patents of same locations — Reservation in patents — Right to cut pine for buildings. working of mines, etc.—Right exceeded—Reference to ascertain damages—F. D. and costs reserved.1 — Plaintiffs were licensees with power to cut and remove all red and white pine upon certain locations. claimed same land under Crown patents as mining lands. Defendants' patents were subject to reservation to Crown of all pine, but patentees had right to cut such trees as were necessary for buildings, fencing, fuel, or for purposes essential to the working of the mines thereon. They could also dispose of all trees required to be removed in actually clearing the land for cultivation. Defendants exceeded their rights and plaintiffs brought ac-tion to recover.—Boyd, C., directed a refer-ence to Master at Sudbury to ascertain what damages plaintiffs had sustained by defendants removing timber for purposes other than allowed in their patents. Further directions and costs reserved. Gordon v. Moose Mountain Co. (1910), 17 O. W. R. 661, 2 O. W. N. 333, 22 O. L. R. 373.

Logging—Moneys advanced—Scaling logs
(B.C.), 1 W. L. R. 193.

Logs — Course of manufacture — Lien for advances — Chose in action.]—Under appellant's contract, he was given a lien for advances on logs from which deals, etc., were being manufactured wherever they might lie. He claimed a lien on logs on the Tobique River:—Held, that lien did not attach. The logs could not be identified, and any evidence as to the manufacture was very loose and vague. McKean v. Randolph, 6 E. L. R. 381.

Logs — Quantity — Mill scale — Guarantee,]—Action to recover price of logs. Verdict for plaintiff for $325. An appeal dismissed. Only questions of fact involved. McLead v. White, 6 E. L. R., 251.

Logs cut at 10c each.] — When the plaintiff, by his action, claims the value of 11,050 logs, cut at 10c. a log, in virtue of a contract for an indeterminate quantity, he may recover for the quantity cut if the proof shews that he cut more than alleged in and prayed for in his declaration, and this even when plaintiff has not amended his declaration to make it agree with the proof. Lemelin V. Adam (1909), 17 R. de J. 50.

Logs to be cut into lumber.]—Defendants purchased from plain iffs certain logs to be cut into lumber and paid for at stated prices per M. feet. Defendants put forward many grounds as absolving them from performance of contract. Latchford, J., at trial, held, that defendants had failed to give shipping orders simply because they could not make sales and having refused to give shipping orders, the plaintiffs were justified in selling the lumber at a loss and defendants were liable for said loss, $2,-577.50, with interest and costs. Divisional Court affirmed judgment, 15 O. W. R. 92, and dismissed the appeal with costs, Wood V. Gall Lumber Co. (1910), 15 O. W. R. 429, 1 O. W. N. 503.

Lumbering operations — Cleaning out stream—Allowance for—Proportion of cost—Driving timber—Breach of contract—Construction of contract—Impossibility of performance—Failure to get logs out—Measure of damages—Destruction of logs by fire—Negligence — Nominal damages — Interest —Costs — Claim and counterclaim. Eddy Co. v. Rideau Lumber Co. (1906), S. O. W. R. 361, 339.

Lumbering operations — Price payable according to measurement—Effect of clause providing for employment of government culler, I—When, in an agreement respecting the cutting and manufacture of lumber, it is provided that the logs will be inspected, culled, measured and stamped every month by a government culler, his measurements and certificate thereof are not final and binding. In addition to the case of fraud, the parties may refuse to accept the measurements and certificate on the ground of error, and, for this purpose, parol evidence will be allowed. Racicot v. Church (1911), 39 Que. S. C. 532.

Oral contract-Sale of interest in timber limit-Part performance - Statute of Frauds-Amendment - Partnership.]-The plaintiff, who had an interest in a contract for driving logs, brought an action against the defendant, who had an interest in a timber limit, alleging that by an oral agree-ment the defendant had agreed to give him (the plaintiff) half his interest in the timber limit in consideration of an interest in the log driving contract. It was silearn that log driving contract. It was silearn that the defendant had received an equal share with the plaintiff ($2,330.27) of the profits of the driving contract. The defendant alleged that this was a return for his services in driving the logs, and denied any agreement to pay the plaintiff any share of the profits from the timber limit:—Held, that a contract for an interest in a timber limit is a contract for an interest in land within the Statute of Frauds. That the division of the profits of the driving contract was not a sufficient part performance to take the case out of the statute, as it, at the most, could only be regarded as payment of the purchase money. That there was no evidence that the timber limit was held as partnership property, and, even if it was so, that it did not follow that a transfer by one partner of his interest would not be within the statute. Had the evidence of the alleged agreement been clear and satisfactory, leave to amend and recover the consideration paid on the footing of the contract might have been given. But, as the verdict of the jury was so manifestly against the evidence, the action was dismissed, and leave given to the plaintiff, if so advised, to bring a new action to establish the oral agreement and recover the purchase money. Judgment of Teetzel, J., 2 O. W. R. 714, reversed, Hooffler v. Irwin, 25 C. L. T. 32, 2 O. W. R. 714, 4 O. W. R. 372.

Owner not in possession — Authority to sell — Secret agreement — Estoppel,1— The owner of logs, by contract in writing, agreed to sell and deliver them to McK., the title not to pass until they were paid for. The logs being in custody of a boom company, orders were given to deliver them as agreed. E., a dealer in lumber, telephoned the owner asking if he had them for sale, and was answered, "No, I have sold them to McK." E. then purchased a portion of them from McK., who did not pay the owner therefor, and he brought an action of trover against E.—Held, affirming the judgment in 36 N. B. R. 169. Nesbitt and Killam, JJ., dissenting, that the owner, having induced E. to believe that he could safely purchase from McK., could not afterwards deny the authority of the latter to sell. People's Bank v. Estey, 24 C. L. T. 170, 34 S. C. R. 429.

Payment for information as to timber limits—Condition precedent—Cancellation of previous contract—Defendant putting it out of plaintiff's power to perform condition—Right to payment—Reduction in amount—Deficiency in acreage—Evidence—Counsel in witness box. Lett v. Lye (B.C.), 6 W. L. R. 484.

Purchase of logs - Common law lien Attempt to prove alteration of contract —

Levidence — Onus — Possession Scizure by sheriff — Bill of sale — De-struction of lien.]—When parties who have bound themselves by a written agreement depart from it, and adopt some other line of conduct, it is incumbent on the party insisting on and endeavouring to enforce a substituted verbal agreement, to shew, not merely what he understood to be the new terms on which the parties were proceeding, but also that the other party had the same understanding; that both parties were proceeding on a new agreement, the terms of which they both understood. — In this case the written contract between the parties (for getting out logs) was inconsistent with the idea of the loggers having a common law lien on the logs for their work, but they alleged a new arrangement:—Held, in the circumstances set out below, and having regard in particular to the onus, which was upon the loggers, that it should not was upon the loggers, that it should not be found that there was any alteration of the written contract.—Semble, that, if there had been an alteration, the loggers would not lose their common law lien by reason of the logs being seized by the sheriff at a time when the loggers were not in actual physical possession of the logs. They could not be said to have lost their lien because they had tied up the logs in a boom, made it fast, and gone ashore. And the sheriff would not be entitled to seize without ten-dering to the loggers the amount for which they had a lien. But, held, that the loggers, by including the logs in a bill of a sale

C. c. 132, they did not confer any title upon R. which he could maintain as against the owner of the logs. Poper v. Roberts (1910), 14 W. L. R. 445.

Purchaser of timber, felled by means of advances made by him on the purchase price thereof, who, by reason of the interest he has in having such timber delivered to him, causes it to be floated in face of a prohibition on the part of the seller thereof, acts in the capacity of manager for the seller and places upon him the obligation of paying the tolks existile by virtue of Art. 7300 R. S. Que. (1909), by those persons who have improved the stream in which such timber is floated. Adam v. River Quelle Lumber Co. (1910), 38 Que. S. C. 92.

Purchase of timber limits — Agreement to share profits—Denial of signature—Action to perpetuate testimony and enforce agreement—Assignee of part of claim—Purchase for benefit of incorporated company—Parties—Amendment — Declaratory judgment. Millar v. Beck (1906), 8 O. W. R. 501.

Raft of ties floated down streams and towed or lake — Timber Silde Co. Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 194 — Tolls for use of company's river improvements — Loss by allowing ties to pass into lake—"Raft" not a "ship" or "vesset."]—In an action by three companies for work done for and services rendered and materials supplied to defendant in connection with the floating certain ties down streams and towing them on the lake, the evidence shewed that defendant had used the river improvements of the plaintiffs for the two previous years without objecting to the company's right to compensation for the use of them, and he had made arrangements for the use of them for the year 1908:—Held, that the defendant was liable. International Boom Co. V. Rainy River Boom Co. (1906), 97 Minn. 513 (1908), 104 Minn. 152, followed, Judgment of Britton, J., at trial (1909), 13 O. W. R. 190, affirmed. Pigeon Kiver v. Mooring (1909), 14 O. W. R. 639.

Right to buy a thing.]—An absolute right to buy and a conditional right to be preferred to other bidders in case of a sale. The statute 4 Edw. VII. c. 13 (que.) s. 21 (Art. 1343d.) as follows: "When a lot included in the limits of a license to cut timber is sold by a plan, the holder of the license has the right to buy the merchantable timber cut on the premises by the settler in preference to every other person at the current price paid by such holder of a license for wood of the same quality in the same locality," does not give the holder of the license an absolute right to buy the timber in question, but only a conditional right to be preferred to other buyers in case of a sale by the settler. Moreover, they cannot claim to be the owners of the timber and seize it, Beauce Lumber Co. v. Prortier, 35 Que. S. C. 492.

Rights of licensee — Trespass on limits.] — The holder of a license to cut timber on Crown lands, under s. 1309 et seq., R. S. Que, has no possessory action against a trespasser on his limits. His proper remedy is in damages as for a tort. Price v. Girard. 28 Que. S. C. 244.

Saisie-conservatoire — Petition of defendant for leave to remove for safety or to manufacture.] — When timber lying in a river has been seized and put in the custody of a guardian, under a conservatory process, the Court or Judge his no power to allow the defendant, on the ground that it is exposed to be carried away and lost, to remove it to a place of safety by means of funds to be raised on the security of the timber, nor to allow the defendant to manufacture it, on giving security to the plain-tiff, at a given rate per ton of the goods to be manufactured. Petitions for such purposes will be dismissed. Larouche v. D'Ouistchouan Pulp Co., 32 Que S. C. 414.

Sale — Contract — Time for removal.]
—In 1899 the plaintiff contracted with the defendant B., by an instrument under seal, to sell to the latter certain kinds of timber from the plaintiff's land, "now upon" the lots described, and so much thereof as the purchaser might see fit to cut and remove, with the right of entry "at all times" until removed, the timber removed to be paid for at certain specified prices:—Held, that the agreement being silent as to the duration of the right to cut and remove, it must be exercised within a reasonable time; and B. and his assigns, not having attempted to exercise the right until 1903, should be enjoined from doing so. Dolan v. Baker, 10 O. L. R. 259, 3 O. W. R. 833, 5 O. W. R. 229.

Sale — Property passing — Measurement — Inspection — Marking—Completion of sale — Seisure by reciditor of vendor — Claim by purchaser.]—A contract by which D. engages to furnish to P. 200,000 feet of wood, plank measure, of white birch, sawn into slabs, etc., at the price of $21 per thousand feet, etc., is a sale by measurement, which is completed by the purchaser making inspection, measurement, and placing a mark on the wood, although no notice of these acts has been given to the vendor, and they have been done in his absence, and he has to verify them in order to ascertain and fix the price. The inspection, measurement, etc., make the purchaser the owner of the wood, and he may intervene to contest a seizure made by a creditor of the vendor. Coté v. James Richardson Co., 15 Que. K. B. 359.

Sale of — Contract — Re-sale of treetops — Right of purchaser after time expired — Extension — Trespass — Costs. Wilcox v. Johnson, 4 O. W. R. 9.

Sale of — Interest in land — Severance—Identification — Vendor's lien — Injunction.]—St. G., the owner of land, by an agreement in writing sold all the timber on it to E., taking promissory notes in payment. E. assigned all his interest in the agreement to S., his principal, who made the notes; E. indorsed them to St. G. S.

cut and removed timber from the land, and cut and piled on the land a lot of cordwood, which he sold to the defendant, but did not pay the notes. St. G. sold the land and all her interest in the timber and the notes to the plaintiff. The defendant sought to remove the wood, but the plaintiff obtained an injunction restraining him, and claimed a vendor's lien:—Held, that the sale of the timber to be removed in three years by the purchaser was of an interest in land, in respect of which a vendor's lien arcse by operation of law, which was not displaced by the cutting or sale of the timber, as long as it could be identified and remained on the land; and the remedy was by an injunction and enforcement of the lien. Summers v. Cook, 28 Gr. 179, followed. Ford v. Hodgeon, 22 C. L. T. 177, 3 O. L. R. 526, 1 O. W. R. 121.

Sale of growing timber — Time for remoing—Subsequent growth.]—Right, by virtue of agreement, to cut and remove a certain kind of wood from land, during a fixed period, extends to subsequent growths of same kind of wood as long as the period endures. Belouin v. Howey (1906), 28 Que. S. C. 31.

Sale of interest - Price payable by instalments - Property not to pass if payment in arrear — Bank — Advances to vendce of timber — Security under sec. 38 of Bank Act — Validity — Payment not in arrear at time of agreement for advances - Company - By-law - Authorising security — Necessity for proof of] — The plaintiffs, licensees of timber limits under plaintins, incensees of timber limits under the Dominion Lands Act, R. S. C. 1906, c. 55, s. 173, agreed to sell their interest to M. for a sum payable in instalments, the agreement of sale providing that all logs, etc., should be deemed to be the property of the plaintiffs unless and until M. should have paid all arrears due under the agree-M. assigned his interest to the M. company, incorporated, and the company, as security for advances, executed, pursuant to a previous agreement, in favour of the de-fendants, a chartered banking corporation, an instrument in the form of a security under s. 88 of the Bank Act, R. S. C. 1906 c. 29, pledging all the logs upon their premises, including those cut from the limits of which the plaintiffs were licensees. The plaintiffs alleged that the property in the logs never passed to the company .- Held that as, at the time of the agreement for the advances by the defendants, there were no arrears due to the plaintiffs, and the fact was as stated in the instrument of security, that the logs were owned by and in the possession of the company, and were free from any mortgage, lien, or charge, free from any mortgage, lien, or charge, the security given to the defendants was a valid one, and prevailed against the claim of the plaintiffs.—No evidence was offered to shew that a by-law had been passed by the company authorising the execution of the instrument referred to, as required by the Manitoba Joint Stock Companies Act, Held, that the defendants had not upon them the onus of shewing a by-law; the security being in the usual form, regularly executed and under the seal of the company, this was prima facie evidence of all preliminary formalities having been complied with, Mutchenbacker v. Dominion Bank (1910), 13 W. L. R. 282.

Sale of logs — Cut under Government license — Shipped to defendants mill — Question as to measurement and culls — Evidence as to — Reference — Costs.]— Plaintiff brought action to recover for a certain quantity of logs alleged to have been cut by plaintiff on an island in Georgian Bay under license from the Ontario Government for the defendants, and shipped to the defendants at their mill. Defendants claimed that a large number of these logs were culls. — Lackiford, 1, held, that the measurements made by Government cullers were independent and impartial as to the quality and quantity of timber cut and should be accepted, and as plaintiff's claim was based upon their measurements, judgment should be entered for plaintiff for amount of the contract price. If parties cannot agree to amount a reference was directed to ascertain it at defendants' expense. Costs to plaintiff. Martin v, Beck Mfg. Co. (1910) 17 O. W. R. 291, 2 O. W. N. 219.

Sale of logs — Ofter and acceptance — Account — Price—Debtor and creditor—Security — Evidence. —Held, on the evidence that there was a sale of certain logs, and that defendant was to pay $5 per M. therefor, Royal Bank v. Schaffner, 7 E. L. R. 506, affirmed, 515.

Sale of lumber — Rejection of part — Action for value—Finding of Master—Interference by Court. Potter v. Orillia Export Lumber Co., S O. W. R. 804.

Sale of lumber mill and timber limit—Price to be paid in cash and work—Breach—Rescission—Damages—Specific performance—Improvements—Occupation rent—Counterclaim—Loss of profits. Crowston v. Tait (N.W.T.), 6 W. L. R. 70.

Sale of lumber to be manufactured —Advances made by purchaser — Lien on logs — Identification of logs.] —It was agreed that E, should sell and M, should buy three million superficial feet of deals to be manufactured at E.'s mill, M. to have a lien for advances on the deals and also on "the logs from which the said deals are being manufactured." Afterwards E., by representing to M, that he had cut a number of logs on the T. river for the purpose of this contract, and required advances to out more, and that the logs would be a sufficient security for all advances he might make, obtained advances from M. from time to time. E. had in fact some seven million feet of logs cut on the T. river, but none were marked for M., and part were got out for another. E. then assigned for the benefit of his creditors: — Held, that the logs intended for M. were not sufficiently identified, and no lien would attach for his advances. McKean v. Randolph, 39 N. B. R. 37, 6 E. L. R. 381.

Sale of right to cut—Time for cutting—Trespass—License—Deed—Construction. Columbus Fish and Game Co. v. W. C. Edwards Co., 5 E. L. R. 247.

Sale of right to cut - Time limit unprovided for — Jurisdiction of Court to impose — Sale of right to cut growing trees — Timber or fuel — Period for cutting — Chattels — Action petitoire.]—The Courts are without jurisdiction to impose a limit to the duration of a contractual obligation, when there has been no stipulation therefor between the parties to the contract. To act otherwise would be to substitute iudicial action for the rights or the wishes of the parties, and such an intervention would be an arbitrary proceeding, a danger which Courts ought scrupulously to avoid. —2. Nevertheless, Courts have the right to intervene and fix a period when it is a question of the obligation of doing some act, as in the case of a debtor who is by law or agreement obliged to perform an obligation .- 3. The right of cutting wood for construction purposes (timber) regarded as being acquired for commercial purposes, cannot be viewed in the same way as a right of cutting firewood (fuel), acquired, as the present case, for the personal use of the purchaser.—4. The sale of a right to cut wood is a sale of movables, because the purchaser proposes to make into chattels the subject-matter of the contract. fore, there is no ground for an action petitoire against the owner of such a right, on the ground that he assumes to exercise it for a longer time than his deed authorises, Bégin v. Carrier, 33 Que. S. C. 1.

Sale of right to cut and remove -Effect of - Subsequent purchaser of land Effect of — Subsequent purchaser of the —Irregularity.]—The sale, by a deed in the English language, of the right during 20 years from the 25th January, 1887, of cutting all soft wood which is to be found on lots, etc., is not a sale of a superficial right. nor of a real right or dismemberment of the property, but of a personal right, which may create obligations between the contracting parties without affecting the immovables described. Therefore a third person subsequently purchasing the immovables becomes owner of the wood which is upon the property and may dispose of it without being in any way responsible to the holder of the right of cutting.-The latter is not in a position to invoke against the former the irregularity or the nullity of one of the successive sales which have led up to his purchase, if those interested in this sale have ratified it by their subsequent acts. Baptist v. Laurentides Paper Co., 16 Que. K. B. 471.

Sale of standing timber — Contract —Construction — Quantity of timber — Measurements — Estimates — Conflicting evidence. McAlister v. Brigham, 6 O. W. R, 812.

Sale of standing timber — Deed Construction — Time for removal — Blank in deed — Reasonable time — Acquiescence — Trespass — Damages.]—The plaintif, by a deed purporting to be made under the Act respecting Short Forms of Conveyances in 1881, for a valuable consideration, granted, bargained, sold, and assigned to B. all the timber then standing, growing, or being upon land owned by the plaintiff, together with full power for B., his servants, workmen, and agents, from time to time and at all reasonable times thereafter during the term of — years, to fell the timber, enter upon the lands, etc. There was no evidence to explain the blank left in the deed for the number of years, and nothing to shew what the true agreement was, whereby the deed might be rectified. There were occa-sional acts of ownership of the timber on the part of B. up till his death in 1898, and after his death by his executors, ap-parently acquiesced in by the plaintiff. In 1903 persons claiming under authority from the executors cut and removed timber from the land, and this action was brought for a declaration of the plaintiff's rights and an injunction and damages in respect of the trespasses:—Held, upon the language of the deed, that the right granted was intended to be acted upon within a reasonable time, and that such reasonable time had elapsed and that such reasonable time had elapsed before the trespasses complained of, and had not been extended by the conduct or acquiescence of the plaintiff; Meredith, J.A., dissenting.—Judgment of Magce, J., awarding the plaintiff $505.92 damages, affirmed. Mathewson v. Beatty, 15 O. L. R. 557, 11 O. W. R. 79:—Held, by the Supreme Court of Canada, affirming the above decision, Davice and Duff, J.J., dissenting, that the instrument executed in 1881 did not convey to R. the fee simple in the standing tribute. to B, the fee simple in the standing timber but only gave him the right to cut and it within a reasonable time, and remove that such time had elapsed before the entry to cut in 1903; and the plaintiff was entitled to damages. Beatty v. Mathewson, 40 S. C. R. 557.

Sale of standing timber with liberty to purchaser to remove within Hmited time — Sale of lot without reservation of timber — Actual notice of previous agreement — Registration of conveyance—Right of vendee of timber to recover value from vendor. Barnes v. Golding, 11 O. W. R. 261.

Sale of standing timber — Registered deed — Sale of same by vendor to third person — Remedy of first vendee.]—
The purchaser of a cut of wood, with a registered deed, cannot recover from a third party, acting in good faith, to whom the vendor has sold and delivered the same wood after having cut it, the price or the value. Champony Co. v. Reid, 35 Que. S. C. 156.

Sale of standing timber — Registration of real rights — Ownership — Distinction of things — Mocables and immorables — Priority of title.]—A deed of sale of the right, during twenty years, to cut and remove standing timber, with permission to make and construct such roads and buildings as might be necessary for that purpose, does not affect the title to the lands on which the trees are growing, but merely conveys the personal right to the timber as and when cut under the license. The registration of such a deed, in conformity with the provisions of the Civil Code of Lower Canada respecting the registration of real rights, is unnecessary, and, if effected, cannot operate to secure to the vendee any right, privilege, or priority of title in or to the timber as against a subsequent purchaser of the lands. Watson v. Perkins, 18 L. C. Jur. 261, distinguished. Judgment in Baptiet v.

Laurentides Paper Co., 16 Que. K. B. 471, affirmed Laurentide Paper Co. v. Baptist, 41 S. C. R. 105, 6 E. L. R. 105.

Sale of timber—No provision as to time of performance—Reasonable time—Time for commencement and completion of work—Notice—Trespass — Damages — Injunction. Johnson v. Dunn (B.C.), 2 W. L. R. 317.

Sale of timber - Personal contract of loggers — Action by assignces — Validity of assignment — Construction of contract — Absence of word "assigns" — Intention— Novation Evidence Breach of con-tract — Right to repudiate — Damages. — W. I. P. and T. F. P., carrying on business as a firm, entered into an agreement with the defendants to supply certain logs from certain timber limits at a specified price and of specific dimensions. The term of the agreement was for one year from the 15th February, 1907, and the quantity to be supplied was from 20,000,000 to 25,000,000 feet. On the 8th June, 1907, the firm sold and assigned all their property, including all contracts and orders with the full benefit thereof, to an incorporated company, taking in payment shares of the company, and con-tinuing to manage the business for the company. The company agreed to assume and carry out all the contracts of the firm and indemnify the firm from all losses and damages on account of such contracts. The company kept delivering logs to the defendants who accepted and paid for the same until some time in October, 1907, when they refused to accept or pay for any more logs, asserting that the contract was one which could not be assigned; that there had not been a novation; and that, if the contract was assignable, the plaintiffs had committed breaches thereof which entitled the defendants to repudiate. The company then sold the remainder of the logs which the firm had agreed to deliver under their contract, and brought this action for the difference between the selling price and the price-they would have been entitled to receive from the defendants. W. I. P. and T. F. P. were joined as plaintiffs with the company:— Held, that the words of the contract—"the parties hereto, for themselves, their executors and administrators and successors respectively, mutually covenant"—must be interpreted as meaning that W. I. P. and T. F. P covenanted for themselves and their executors and administrators only, for the defendants an incorporated company, for defendants an incorporated company, for their successors. W. I. P. and T. F. P., therefore, did not covenant for their assigns; but the omission of the word "assigns did not necessarily make the contract un-assignable; and that the nature of the contract coupled with the absence of the word "assigns," did not, having regard to the subsequent conduct of the parties and all the circumstances, shew an intention that the contract should be performed by W. I. P. and T. F. P. only, and not by any other person or company; and the contract was, therefore, assignable: Irving, J.A., dissenting.—Held, also, upon the evidence, that there had not been a novation.—Held, also, upon the evidence, that the plaintiffs had not committed such a breach of the contract as would entitle the defendants to repudiate: Irving, J.A., dissenting .- Held, also, upon the evidence, that the damages awarded at the trial should not be increased or reduced. Paterson v. Can. Pac. Timber Co. (1910), 14 W. L. R. 598.

Sale of timber—Property in standing trees—Right to make roads over vendor's land — Servitude.] — Plaintiffs, appellants, through their agent F., bought from R. "the right to cut all soft wood on certain lots to make the necessary roads and buildings for such purpose, the cutting to be done within 20 years. R. sold to L., through whom defendant claims. What title did F. get? Was it a title in the land or a license to cut the trees of soft wood and remove them in 20 years? The Supreme Court of Canada held it is the latter. If the trees remained standing at the end of 20 years the right ceased. Laurentide v. Baptist, 6 E. L. R. 105.

Sale of timber-Terms of payment.]-The appellant held rights in unpatented lands and agreed to sell the timber thereon to respondent, one of the conditions as to payspondent, one of the conditions as to payment therefor being that, as soon as the Crown grant issued, the respondent should "settle" a judgment against the appellant, which, they both understood, could at that time be purchased for $500. On the issue of the grant, about six months afterwards, the judgment creditor refused to accept $500 as full settlement at the latter date, and he took proceedings to enforce execution for the full amount. The execution was opposed on behalf of the appellant, the respondent becoming surety for the costs and being also made a party to the proceedings:—Held, affirming the judgment in 10 B. C. R. 84, that the agreement to settle the outstanding judgment was not made unconditionally by the respondent, but was limited to settling it for $500, after the issue of the Crown grant for the land :-Held, also, Davies, J., dissenting, that the costs incurred in unsuccessfully opposing the execution of the judgment, upon being paid by the respondent, were properly chargeable against the appellant. O'Brien v. Mackintosh, 24 C. L. T. 115, 34 S. C. R

Sale of timber limits—Ascertainment of price—Survey—Boundaries. 1—A stipulation in sale of timber limits, estimated to contain 5,550 acres, that seller will cause the acreage to be verified by a sworn provincial land surveyor within a reasonable time, and upon a sworn statement by such surveyor, purchaser will pay for the acres in excess of 5,550, at rate of $2 per acre, does not contemplate a survey that will settle boundaries of limits as against third parties, neighbours, or squatters, but simply a verification of area of property sold, in order to arrive at an equitable settlement of price. Nadeau v. Price (1906), 14 Que. K. B. 439.

The contract also contained a by Mr. Joseph Action of the contract also contained a clause that "the waney pine is estimated to average not less than 23 feet lineal, or to average not less than 25 feet mean, or 17½ inches girth; the square white pine 37 feet cube, and the red pine 40 feet cube"; also another clause that "the tim-ber not to be inferior in make and quality to that seen by Mr. Joseph Boulet, Sellers will endeavour not to exceed 20 per cent. second class in waney." The schedule of prices was settled upon the estimated average as a minimum, with a progressive increase for sizes above the average. The defendants admitted the contract but refused to accept delivery of the timber tendered and they refused to pay, claiming that what was tendered was disconform to contract both in sizes and in quality :-Held, that the contract was not carried out by the delivery of timber of dimensions falling below the of timber of unensions mining below the average estimates. Tolls — Application to fix — Rivers and Streams Act — Improvements.] — Proper sum fixed by a County Court Judge as a toll to be paid by one lumber company to another for the use of the constructions and improvements made by the latter upon a creek so as to make it floatable, upon an application by one of the companies under

R. S. O. c. 142, taking into account the original cost of the constructions and improvements, the amount required to maintain the same, the interest upon the original cost, and other matters. Fire-ranging was not considered part of the original cost nor a proper charge for maintenance. A sum of $100 was allowed for book-keeper's time. The Judge refused to divide the constructions and improvements into sections and assign different tolls to the different sections according to the amount of saw logs and timber floated over each of such sectins. He also refused to take into consideration the sum expended in increasing the efficiency of the improvements for the convenience of the respondents. In re South Creek, 21 C. L. T. 344.

Towing — Delivery of logs—Lost logs—Payment for.]—Under a contract to tow logs, the owner of the tug is entitled to be paid only for the logs delivered; and where the special term that he is to be paid for logs "lost or not lost" is relied on, it must be proved specifically. Pacific Towing Co. v. Morris, 11 B. C. R. 173.

Transfer of timber—Right of property in manufactured article — Revendication — Creditors.]—An agreement by which a lumber manufacturer transfers "all the loss which he shall cut in the winter following" to one who advances him money necessary for the purposes of his lumbering operations, does not confer upon the creditor any right of property which permits him to revendicate the lumber manufactured as against the creditors of the manufactured, who has become insolvent, Tremblay v. Lefaivre, 31 Que. S. C. 72.

Vesting of property - Intention of parties — Timber in raft — Raft broken by storm — Loss must be borne by purchaser.]—By the law of England, under a contract for sale of specific ascertained goods, the property immediately vests in the buyer, and a right to the price in the seller, unless it can be shewn that such was not the intention of the parties. If the seller is to do something to the goods sold, the property will not be changed until he has done it, or waived his right to do it. There is no distinction between the law of England and the law in force in Upper Canada in this respect. The respondent enada in this respect. The respondent en-tered into a contract in writing, for the sale to the appellant of "a raft of timber now at Carouge containing white and red pine, at Caronge, containing white and red pine, the quantity, about 71,000 feet, to be de-livered at Indian Cove booms. Price for the whole 7%d, per foot. Payment, one-third cash, one-third sixty and ninety days after date." Shortly before the contract was signed the raft had been measured by public officer, called the Supervisor of Cullers, appointed under the Canadian Act, 8 and 9 V. c. 49, and the number of pieces of timber and the contents of each piece was set down in a specification thereof, which made a total of 71,445 feet, and this specification was delivered by the respondent, before the execution of the contract, ent, perore the execution of the control to the appellant, and sent by him to the place where the raft was to be delivered. The raft was towed to the Indian Cove booms, the appointed place for delivery, where it arrived in the afternoon, and notice of its arrival given to the servants of the appellant, who assisted in fastening the raft outside the booms. This was done at the instance of the appellant's servant, as, from the state of the tide, the raft could not be placed inside the booms. During the night a storm arose, by which the raft was carried away, broken to pieces, and dispersed, and a great portion of it lost. The appellant employed his servants in collecting as much of the wood as was saved, and that was put into the appellant's booms:—Held, that as the respondent had ascertained the price of the raft by the measurement previously made, the specification of which was in the appellant's possession, and as the contract did not shew that any future measurement of the raft was necessary, no act then remained to be done by the respondent or by the appellant, and that the raft, upon delivery at the Indian Cove booms, had wholly passed to the appellant, and the loss incurred must be borne by him. TITLE OF LAND.

Quebec Law — Possessory action — Nature and period of possession.]—The possession necessary to entitle a plaintiff to maintain a possessory action must be continuous and uninterrupted, peaceable, public, and as proprietor, for the whole period of a year and a day immediately preceding the disturbance complained of. Sheriff's sale — Effect of annulment—Possession in good faith—Rents and profits — Compensation for improvements—Liability for deterioration.]—One who is in possession of land by virtue of a title acquired at a sheriff's sale is the possessor in good faith up to the moment at which his title is declared void by the Court, and such title is valid although its subsequent annulment deprives it retrospectively of its effect. 2. A contract set aside as absolutely void is considered as never having had a legal existence and as incapable of producing any juridical effect, past or future; but a contract or a title in virtue of which action has been taken and which has been declared void later is, notwithstanding Art. 412, C. C., a sufficient basis to establish the good faith of the possessor. 3. Such a possessor has a right to retain the profits which he has received and to be compensated for the improvements which he has made, as he will be responsible for any deterioration which he has caused to the property. Savoie v. Gastonguay, 10 Que. K. B. 459.

Trespass — Overhanging roof — Right of Weiver — Evidence — Boundary line — Weiver — In 1844 the defendants constructed a toll-house close to or on the boundary of their land, with windows overlooking the adjoining lot and a roof projecting over it by about three feet. This was done with the knowledge and consent of persons who were then proprietors, and was not objected to by them or any subsequent owner till after the purchase of the adjoining lot by the plaintiff in 1895, when he complained that the overhanging roof interfered with the gable of a house he was building upon it. He cut the roof to permit of the construction of the gable of his house, and the defendants paid the cost of the necessary alteration. In 1900 the plaintiff instituted the present action against the defendants to have the remainder of the projection of the roof demolished and the windows closed up. There was no evidence that there had ever been a division line established between the properties, and the actual width of the land purchased and taken possession of by the plaintiff in 1895 was left in uncertainty: — Held, Strong, C.J., dissenting, that the plaintiff had not satisfied the onus that was upon him of

TRADE MARK AND TRADE NAME.

Absence of registration-Trade Mark and Design Act, s. 20—Labels on beer bottles—Similarity of design—Passing-off—Injunction.]-Upon an application by the plaintiffs for an interim injunction to restrain the defendants from the use of labels on their beer bottles whereby they were enabled to pass it off as beer manufactured by the plaintiffs, it was not alleged that the labels were re-gistered, and no benefit was claimed from the gistered, and no benefit was claimed from the Trade Mark and Design Act, R. S. C. 1906 c. 71:—Held, that s. 20 of that Act was not a bar to the relief claimed, the plaintiffs' case not relating to the infringement of a trade mark, but being based upon the passing off of the defendants' goods for those of the plaintiffs.—De Kuyper v. Van Dukken, 4 Ex. C. R. 71, distinguished. Kiratein v. Cohen, 39 S. C. R. 286, followed.—And held, upon the evidence, that, although the prominent 59 S. C. R. 289, followed.—And neta, upon the evidence, that, although the prominent words upon the labels, "Budweiser" on the plaintiffs', and "Capitol" on the defendants', were not the same, there was a similarity in the labels of the constant of the constant of the were not the same, there was a similarity in the labels as to general design and appear-ance which might deceive intending purchas-ers.—The Judge is, from inspection of the exhibits and from the other evidence, to form his own independent judgment as to the likelihood of deception.—Payton v. Snelling, IRCHIDOO Of deception.—Payton V. Snetting, [1901] A. C. 308, and Hennessey v. Keating, [1908] I. I. R. 43, 24 T. L. R. 534, spe-cially referred to. Injunction till the trial. Acquiescence, by owner of trademark "Listerine," in the use by another of the word "listerated," in the United States, for a number of years, is a ground of estoppel to proceedings taken, subsequently, in Canada, for infringement. Lambert Pharma acal Co. v. Palmer (1910), 39 Que. S. C 64.

Action to compel defendant to assign a trade mark to company as he had covenanted so to do when company purchased his business. Judgment for company with costs. Tilley v. De Forest (N. B. 1910), 9 E. L. R. 28.

Advertisement - Imitation - Defendant using his own name—Injunction—Delay in moving for—Discretion—Appeal.]—Action for injunction to prevent defendant from advertising shoes for sale in such a manner as to infringe upon the plaintiffs' trade mark, "The Slater Shoe." The defendant was the agent in Winnipeg for the rendant was the agent in winnipeg for the sale of goods manufactured by George A. Slater of Montreal, who was not connected with the plaintiffs. George A. Slater adver-tised and sold his goods extensively in Can-ada under the names "The George A. Slater Shoe" and the "Invictus Shoe." The defendant's advertising agent, in an advertise-ment published in a Winnipeg newspaper, described the shoes the defendant was selling described the shoes the detendant was selling as "the celebrated George A. Slater Invic-tus Shoes for men." The words "George A." and "Invictus" were in considerably smaller type than the words "Slater" and "Shoes," but still were quite prominent and easily seen. The defendant discontinued the advertisement as soon as the form of it came to his notice, and before the plaintiffs took exception to it:-Held, that the advertisement objected to, in the form in which it appeared, would, if persisted in, have constituted an infringement of the plaintiffs' trade name; but that the discretion exercised in refusing an injunction should not be interfered with, and that an appeal there-from should be dismissed without costs, for the following reasons: - (a) The defendant was not personally responsible for the form in which the advertisement had appeared, and had voluntarily withdrawn it as soon as it came to his knowledge and before any complaint was made. (b) The action had not been commenced until after the lapse of 16 days from the withdrawal of the advertise-ment. Semble, that it is not necessary in such an action for the plaintiff to prove fraud or an intention to deceive on the defendant's part. It would be sufficient if the advertisement were likely to deceive. Slater v. Ryan, 6 W. L. R. 741, 17 Man. L. R. 89. Slater V.

Assignment — Execution — Right of property.]—The right of property in a registered specific trade-mark is not saleable by itself under a writ of execution. Such a right can be sold, if at all, only as appurtenant to the business in which it has been used. Gegg v. Bassett, 22 C. L. T. 114, 3 O. L. R. 263.

*Buster Brown "—Validity of registration.]—In 1902 the New York Herald began the issue of a comic section of that paper under the titles of "Buster Brown" and "Buster Brown and Tige," and have since continued to sell the same and licensed other newspapers to do so. In 1907 the Herald registered said titles as trade marks, and brought action against the Ottawa Citizen Co. for infringement, and an injunction against the use of them:—Held, that the terms "Buster Brown," and "Buster Brown and Tige" were not susceptible of registration under the Act respecting trade marks, Appeal from 12 Ex. C. R. 1, 5 E. L. R. 265, dismissed with costs. New York Herald v. Ottawa Citizen, 41 S. C. R, 229, 6 E. L. R. 312.

Corporate name — Conflict — Fraud—Intent to deceive.]— In the absence of fraud or bad faith, a body corporate may use its own name on goods of its own manufacture, although such use may tend to confuse its goods with goods of the same kind bearing the trade-mark of another manufacturer. 2. Where the defendants, a corporate body, had obtained their name before a trade-mark with which such name was said to conflict had been registered in Canada by the plaintiffs, a foreign corporation, it was not shewn that the defendants had adopted such name with intent to deceive the public, nor to sell their goods as those of the plaintiffs, the Court refused to restrain the defendants from using their corporate name upon goods manufactured by them. Boston Rubber Shoc Co. v. Boston Rubber Shoc Co. of Montreal, 21 C. L. T. 517, 7 Ex. C. R. 187.

"Cream yeast" — Validity — Trade Name—"Passing-off,"] — Held, that the plaintiff's trade-mark for a certain kind of yeast, consisting of a label bearing the representation of the head and bust of a woman, with the words "Day" and "Hop" on either side, and the words "Cream Yeast" below was properly registerable and valid. Provident Chemical Works v. Canada Chemical Co., 1 O. W. R. 488, 4 O. L. R. 545, followed.—2. That the defendants by selling yeast in packages labelled "Jersey Cream Yeast Cake," the words "Jersey Cream at the top and "Yeast Cake" at the bottom, with the representation of two Jersey cows and a milkmaid between, were not infringing the plaintiff's mark. Coehrane v. MacNish, 13 R. P. C. 100, distinguished.—3. That the defendants were not, upon the evidence, guilty of passing off their goods in such manner as to induce the belief that they were goods manufactured by the plaintiff. Judgment of a Divisional Court, 6 O. L. R. 66, 2 O. W. R. 497, 23 C. L. T. 259, affirmed. Gillett v. Lumaden, 24 C. L. T. 345, 8 O. L. R. 1851.

pcriminal law — Forging or falsely applying trade-mark—Prosecution for—Defence—Invalidity of registration—Title to exclusive use of registered words—Descriptice words.—The defendant was convicted by a magistrate of the offence of forging a trademark, to wit, the registered trade-mark ("Glyco-Thymoline," and falsely applying to certain goods a trade-mark or mark so nearly resembling a trade-mark as to be calculated to deceive, contrary to s. 447 of the Criminal Code. The trade mark "Glyco-Thymoline" consisted solely of these words, applied to a medical compound sold by a company, in the form of a solution in bottles. The defendant made and sold a solution, of which the chief ingredients were thymol and glycerine, which he named "Glyco-Thymol." The company and the defendant labelled their respective magistrate the case was virtually dealt with as a case of passing off the defendant's goods for those of the company, but this, the Court of Appeal pointed out, was not the offence charged, and could only be the subject of a civil action for an injunction and damages. The words registered as the company's trademark were merely descriptive and incapable of registration, and that was a defence open to the defendant. The conviction was therefore quashed. Rex v. Cruttenden, 25 C. L. T. 455, 6 O. W. R. 249, 10 O. L. R. 80.

Descriptive words.] — A trade-mark bearing the words "asbestic wall plaster" was registered by the plaintiffs on the 3rd February, 1896. The particular words were applied to a compound of asbestic and the ordinary wall-paper. The defendants alleged that they had been selling this compound before the registration of the trade-mark by the plaintiffs: that the words were merely descriptive of the articles of which the compound consisted; and that they could not be compelled to invent a new name:— Held, that the words were merely descriptive, and that the appellants could not acquire an exclusive right to their use. Asbestos and Asbestic Co. v. William Sclater Co., 21 C. L. T. 130, 10 Que. Q. B. 165.

Descriptive words - Pleading-Prior user.]—In an action for infringement of the plaintiffs' trade-mark for "asbestic wall plaster," the defendants were entitled to allege in their plea, without having taken steps to have the plaintiffs' mark annulled, that they had sold asbestic wall plaster long prior to and since the registration of plain-tiffs' trade-mark, and that by law they had the right to make use of the words "asbestic wall plaster," the word "asbestic" being merely an indication and description of the article sold by the defendants and referring to the character and quality of the article. Asbestos and Asbestic Co. v. William Sclater Co., 18 Que. S. C. 324.

Descriptive words.]-Where a word is merely descriptive of a natural product, it cannot be appropriated and form part of a trade-mark. Hence, the word "asbestic" prefixed to "wall plaster" being merely descriptive of the material used in the plaster, the sale by other persons of plaster under that name is not an infringement of a registered trade-mark for "asbestic wall plaster." Asbestos and Asbestic Co. v. William Sciater Co., 18 Que. S. C. 360.

there is no allegation of any attempted imitation of a trade-mark and the complaint of unfair and illegal dealing is wholly limited to the use of the word "Slater," a family name, in connection with a trade and industry, and the defendant has used that name publicly, without objection or protest from any person for more than six protest from any person for more than six years, the complainant is too late, even if a right in such respect ever existed, to secure an interim injunction. The Slater Shoc Co. Ltd. v. The Eagle Shoc Co. (1910), 16 R. L. n. s. 474.

Family name - Injunction.]-Where

Fancy name - Descriptive letters -Forum — Exchequer Court.]—The letters "C. A. P.," standing for the words "cream acid phosphates," a fancy name for acid phosphates manufactured by the plaintiffs, were held to constitute a valid trade-mark, and an injunction was granted against the use thereof by the defendants, who had used these letters in the sale of goods of the same class, but ostensibly as standing for the words "calcium acid phosphates." Judgment of Meredith, C.J., 2 O. L. R. 182, 21 C. L. T. 467, reversed. The amendments to the Exchequer Court Act since the decision in Partlo v. Todd, 14 A. R. 444, 17 S. C. R. 196, have not had the effect of giving that Court exclusive jurisdiction to adjudicate as to the validity of a registered trade-mark, and in answer to an action in the High Court of Justice for Ontario to the High Court of Justice for Omario to restrain the infringement of a registered trade-mark, its invalidity may be shewn. Provident Chemical Works v. Canada Chemical Mfg. Co., 22 C. L. T. 381, 4 O. L. R. 545, 1 O. W. R. 618.

Geographical description - Alien -Competition. —An alien has an action in the province of Quebec to prevent unfair competition in trade. 2. An unregistered trade-mark is only entitled to protection where there is unfair or fraudulent competition, and damage is caused to the proprietor of such mark. 3. Unfair competition does not exist where confusion of marks is not possible. So, in the present case, the adoption by the defendants of the name "Milwaukee" to describe their lager beer, made in Montreal, having preceded by ten years the introduction of the plaintiffs' lager beer in the Canadian market, and there being no proof of deception or damage, the defendants using a different label containing the word "Montreal," the plaintiffs were not entitled to an injunction to restrain the use of the word "Milwaukee" in connection with the sale, etc., of the Canadian article. Judgment in 20 Que. S. C. 20 reversed. Pabst Brewing Co. v. Ekers, 22 Que. S. C.

Geographical designation - "Caledonia water" — "Caledonia mineral water."]—The plaintiffs for many years had been the owners of mineral springs in the township of Caledonia, respecting the waters of which they had caused to be registered certain trade-marks, and the names "Cale-donia water" and "Caledonia mineral water." The water, which was used medicinally and as a beverage, had through the plaintiffs' exertions and the expenditure of large sums of money, become very widely known as water from Caledonia springs. and near the springs a village, laid out on the ground many years before, had actually come into existence, where the plaintiffs had erected an hotel, and had procured a railway station and post office to be erected under the name "Caledonia Springs." In 1898 L. & Co., who had purchased a lot about a quarter of a mile distant from the plaintiffs' place, had, by sinking an artesian well, tapped springs, from which water flowed, similar in some respects to the plaintiffs', which they supplied in barrels to their agents, as "water from the new springs at Caledonia," which these agents bottled and sold. The bottles used were similar in shape and size to the plaintiffs'. One of the agents, T. & Co., had, at the time of the commencement of the action, been using labels thereon resembling the plaintiffs', and selling the water as Caledonia water, but this had never been sanctioned by L. & Co., and was at once abandoned: — Held, reversing the judgment in 21 C. L. T. 524, 2 O. L. R. 322, 1 O. W. R. 785, that the defendants could not be restrained from using the word "Caledonia" as they did in designating the water sold by them, and that the injunction granted herein should be dissolved with costs, except as to T. & Co., and as against them the plaintiffs should only be allowed the costs of entering judgment by default. Grand Hotel Co. of Caledonia Springs v. Wilson, Grand Hotel Co., T. 82, 5 O. L. R. 141. Affirmed, 1964, A. C. 103.

"Hall mark" - Right to register.]--If by the laws of any country the makers of certain goods are required to put thereon certain prescribed marks to denote the standard or character of such goods, and goods bearing the prescribed marks are exported to Canada and put upon the market here, it is not possible thereafter, and while such goods are to be found in the Canadian market, for any one to acquire in Canada a right to the exclusive use of such prescribed marks to be applied to the same class of goods, or to the exclusive use of any mark so closely resembling the prescribed marks as to be calculated to deceive or mislead the public. The fact that such marks were not trade-marks, but marks used to comply with the statutes of the country of origin would not in that respect in any way alter the case.—Quare, whether any one would, in such a case, be precluded from acquiring a right in Canada to the exclusive use of such a trade-mark, where there was no importation into Canada of goods bearing the pretion into Canada of goods bearing the pre-scribed foreign marks. 2. The plaintiffs brought an action for the infringement of their registered specific trade-mark to be applied to the goods manufactured by them from sterling silver which, it was thought, so resembled a "British hall mark," or a hall mark, as to be calculated to deceive or mislead the public, and it appeared that during the time that the plaintiffs' goods, bearing the time that the plaintiffs goods, bearing such mark, were upon the Canadian market, goods bearing a "British hall mark" were also upon the market:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not, under the circumstances, exercise the exclusive right to the use of such mark as a trade-mark. Gorham Manufacturing Co. v. Ellis, 24 C. L. T. 119, 8 Ex. C. R. 401.

Incorporated company — Infringement —Passing off goods — Injunction—Scope of. Sovereen Mitt, Glove, and Robe Co. v. Simose Mitt, Glove and Robe Co., 3 O. W. R. 681.

Industrial design — Cook-stove — Imitation — Infringement — Injunction— Cancellation of conflicting design.] — The plaintiffs were registered owners of an industrial design for a cook-stove, called the "Royal Favourite, 9-25," which, as a special article of their manufacture, had become well known to the trade. The defendants procured one of such stoves, caused a model to be made from it, and, with some minor alterations, chiefly in the ornamentation, manufactured a stove called the "Royal National, 9-25," and subsequently registered it as an industrial design. In an action by the plaintiffs for infringement and for an order to expunge the defendants' design from the register, the weight of evidence established that the defendants' design was an obvious imitation of that of the plaintiffs:—Held, that the defendants hould be enjoined from infringing the plaintiffs' design, and that the registration of the defendants' design should be expunged from the register, Findley V. Ottava Furnace and Foundry Co., 22 C. L. T. 200, 7 Ex. C. R. 338.

Infringement — Action.] — "Ruster Brown" and "Buster Brown and Tige" as applied to sale of comic sections of newspapers were not registered as trade-marks in Canada until 1907, although from 1902 onwards they had been selling in this country comic sections of a newspaper published in New York, with words "Buster Brown" and "Buster Brown" and "Buster Brown" and "Buster Brown and Tige" applied to same without having obtained protection of copyright therefor under Can. Copyright Act:—Held, that even if said words, or titles, were subject of valid trade-marks (quada hoc dubitante), the plaintiffs had abandoned to the Canadian public any exclusive right they may originally have had to use the same as trade-marks. New York Herald v. Ottavac Citizen (1908), 12 Ex. C. R. 1; affirmed, 41 S. C. R. 229.

Infringement — Coince word — Similarity — Colourable imitation — Coite.]—
The coined word "Sta-Zon," adopted by the defendants as a trade-mark or name for their eye-glasses, is not so similar to the coined word "Star-Don," adopted by the being word "Star-Don," adopted by the plaintiffs and registered as a trade-mark to distinguish their eye-glasses of very similar appearance, as to mislead ordinary persons, exercising ordinary caution, into purchasing the defendants' goods by mistake for those of the vlaintiffs.—There can be no infringement unless the similarity is so close as to give rise to a reasonable probability of deception.—Where there is no reliable evidence of persons having been actually misled, it is for the Court to determine the question by consideration of the words themselves.—The plaintiffs in advertising their goods used in connection with the word "Shur-On" such words as "On to stay on," "An eye-glass that stays on," etc.:—Held, that, although the defendants had adopted the trade-mark "Sta-Zon" because of the plaintiffs having so described their goods, and with the object of acquiring the benefit of the market which the plaintiffs had developed, the plaintiffs had acquired no exclusive right in the words used in their advertisements other than "Star-Zon" bright in the words used in their advertisements other than "Shur-On" but, on account of the defendants' conduct the dismissal of the plaintiffs action for infringement should be without costs. Kerstein v. Cohen, 11 O. L. R. 450, 7 O. W. R. 247, 8 O. W. R. 934.

may plead that there was no registration of the trade-mark, and also that the alleged trade-mark was invalid. Grand Hotel Co. v. Carlin, 2 Que. P. R. 489.

Infringement — Injunction — Use of defendant's own name — Absence of fraud —Passing-off. Slater v. Ryan (Man.), 5 W. L. R. 142.

Infringement — Inventive term — Coined word — Exclusive use—Colourable imitation — Common idea — Description of goods — Deceti and fraud.]—The hyphenated coined words "shur-on" and "staz-on" are not purely inventive terms, but are merely corruptions of words descriptive of the goods (in this case, eye-glass frames) to which they were applied, intending them to be so described, and, therefore, they cannot properly be the subject of exclusive use as trade-marks. A trader using the term "staz-on" as descriptive of such goods, is not guilty of infringement of any rights in the use of the term "shur-on" by another trader as his trade-mark, nor of fraudulently counterfeiting similar goods described by the latter term a colourable imitation of the latter term calculated to deceive purchasers, as the terms are neither phonetically nor visually alike, — The judgment appealed from, 13 O. L. R. 144, 8 O. W. R. 934, was affirmed. Kerstein v. Cohen, 27 C. L. T. 653, 39 S. C. R. 296.

Infringement — Name not registered in Canada — Passing off goods — Injunction.] — Plaintiffs, manufacturers in the United States of liquid glue and other adhesives which soid largely in Canada, United States and Europe, had adopted the trade name "LePage," which was registered in England and United States, but not in Canada. Defendants restrained from using the name "LePage," Russia v. LePage, 11 W. L. R. 504

Infringement — Similarity — Distinction — Advertisements — Absence of fraud or deception — Passing off goods, National Casket Co. v. Eckhardt, 9 O. W. R. 313, 10 O. W. R. 74.

Infringement — Validity — Comic section of newspaper — Sale in Canada without copyright — Effect of a subsequently registered trade-mark consisting of title of comic supplement. New York Herald Co. v. Ottawa Citizen Co., 5 E. L. R. 265.

Infringement — Visual resemblance—
Idem sonans.]—In deciding whether a trademark so resembles another as to be calculated to deceive, visual resemblance is not necessarily the only thing to be considered; the possibility of confusion to the ear may also be an element. — The letter "B" stamped on buttons of braces manufactured by the defendants in the same manner as the plaintiffs' trade-mark—the letter "D" —was stamped on the buttons of braces manufactured by them was held to be an infringement. Doran v. Hogadore, 11 O.
L. R. 321, 7 O. W. R. 349.

Injunction — Security.] — The owner of a trade-mark, who complains that his orders for sales of an article covered by the trade-mark are filled by the sending of an article covered by the defendant's trademark, and that the resemblance between the two marks is such that it may induce error in purchasing, has the right to an interlocutory injunction upon furnishing security. Lefebvre v. Landry, 5 Que. P. R. 341.

Injunction will lie at the instance of a party who has, for many years, used a non-descriptive word, such as "Standard," as a trade-mark stamped on his enamelled and porcelain ware with the result that, so stamped, it has become generally known as his, to restrain another from using the same word, in the same manner, on like ware, thereby representing it to be the same ware, thereby representing it to be the same that hitherto procured under that name from the plaintiff, so that persons ordering "standard ware," who knew the plaintiff to be the manufacturer, would expect to get his ware, and persons who did not know the manufacturer's name would expect to get what they previously had, and thus be, in either case, exposed to deception. The exclusive right to use a trade-mark registered under the Trade-Mark and Design Act (R. S. C. 1909, c. T1) carries with it the right to have others enjoined from using it and that the latter cannot set up, against a demand for injunction, reasons that might avail against the granting of the registration. The remedy, in case of the improper or wrongful registration of a trade-mark, would seem to be a direct action to have it cancelled. Standard Sanitary Mfg. Co. v. Standard Ideal Co., 37 Que, S. C. 33.

Labels on beer bottles — Possibility of deception — Misrepresentation in plaintiffs' labels as to registration. — In an action to restrain the defendants from unital labels upon bottles containing beer enturing the properties of the labels in this way constituted a passing of the defendants' goods as those of the plaintiffs and a fraud upon the public:—Held, that the proper interpretation of s. 20 of the Trade Mark and Design Act, R. S. C. 1906 c. 71, which provides that no person shall institute any proceedings to prevent the infringement of any trade mark, unless it is registered, involves a limitation of its provisions to an action for infringement strictly so-called.—Held, also, that the label or design in question here came within the definition of a trade mark given in s. 5 of the Act and was capable of registration; but the disability to sue without registration applies only to an innocent infringement; an actual fraud or attempt at fraud, must be proven; otherwise the action remains merely an infringement action. Goodfelow v. Prince, 35 Ch. D. 9, followed. And held, upon the evidence that the defendants could not be heard to say that they did not intentionally produce a colourable imitation of the plaintiffs' trade mark, or that they did not intentionally pass off or attempt to pass off their goods as being the goods of the plaintiffs. The possibility of deceiving an unwary purchaser is sufficient; the character of the goods must be considered, and each case must stand on its own footing; the nature of the goods here involved was such as to suggest unwariness in the majority of cases; and the presence of the defendants' name upon the labels was not sufficient to prevent the probability of deception.—Held, also, that, although the plaintiffs label contained a misrepresentation, inasmuch as it spoke of registration, when none had been made, that was not a misstatement about the goods themselves, and was, therefore, not one which deceived the public; and quare, whether that was a defence open to the defendants, as it had not been pleaded.—Held, also, as to the form of the judgment, as the use of the defendants label was not suggested by any real quality in the goods or by the place of manufacture, but was a straight and arbitrary adoption or imitation of the plaintiffs' label, for which the defendants had no manner of excuse or justification, there should be an injunction, as in Edelston v. Edelston, 1 DeG. J. & S. 185, restraining the defendants from using their present body label or any other colourable imitation of the plaintiffs' body label.—Held, further, that the plaintiffs were entitled to an account of the profits made by the defendants pun the sale of all beer sold by them bearing the label complained of. Anheuser Busch v. Edmonton Brewing Co. (1911), 16 W. L. R. 547, Alta. L. R.

Lieense — Option — Agreement — Declaration of rights — Specific performance —Injunction — Misconduct — Equitable relief — Counterclaim — Reservation of rights — Res judicata. McAvity v. James Morrison Brass Mfg. Co., 2 O. W. R. 156, 1018.

Petition for registration - Specific mark - Name of firm as applied to sale of electro-plated ware and cutlery - English electro-plated ware and cultery — English and Canadian statutes.] — Held, that the wording of the Trade Mark and Design Act, R. S. C. c. 71, s. 5, is wider than the Imperial Patents, Designs, and Trade Marks Act, 1883 (46 & 47 V. c. 57, s. 64), and that, under the word "names" as used in the Canadian Act, the name of an individual or firm, without anything more and without being accompanied by any particular dis-tinctive feature, may be considered and known as a trade mark, and is entitled to registration as such. The facts disclosed in the material filed in support of the petition established that the name "Elkington & Co." (as applied to the sale of electro-plate and goods of precious metals, table knives, carving knives, cake knives, and other articles of cutlery), without any distinctive mark or form, was registered in England as a trade mark in 1876 by the petitioner's pre-decessor in title, and that the name had been in use as a trade mark by them for some thirty-five years before, and had acquired distinctiveness and become wellknown throughout the world owing to such long continuous use. In re Elkington & Co.'s Trade Mark, 11 Ex. C. R. 293.

Pleading — Registration — Prior user ——Superiority of product — False representations — Scire facias.]—In an action for infringement of a trade-mark, the defendant may, in answer to an allegation that the trade-mark was obtained by the plaintiff's firm, deny such allegation and state that the plaintiff was, at that time, doing business under another name. 2, It is immaterial whether the interdict or the curator who suce se-equalité upon a trade-mark, or who suce se-equalité upon a trade-mark,

3. In such an action it is a valid defence to say that the label constituting the trade-mark in question had been used by the defendant and others prior to the registration of the trade-mark by the plaintiff. 4. Although it matters not which of the two products is superior, the defendant may meet an allegation of the plaintiff's declaration stating that his trade-mark product is superior, by denying the statement and affirming the superiority of his own product. 5. False representations regarding the owner-ship of a trade-mark constitute no ground for the voiding of it. 6. A defendant may plead in answer to conclusions demanding that he be ordered to cease to use a trade-mark, that he had ceased to use it before the institution of the action. 7. That the nullity of a trade-mark can be pleaded against an action based upon such trade-mark, without the issuing of a scire facias by the Crown. Fafard v. Ferland, 6 Que. P. R. 119.

Pleading — Statement of claim—Sufficient of a trade-mark, it is a sufficient allegation that the trade-mark it is a sufficient allegation that the trade-mark used by the defendants is the registered trade-mark of the plaintiffs, to allege in the statement of claim that the registered trade-mark of the plaintiffs and the mark used by the plaintiffs and the mark used by the plaintiffs and the mark used by the defendants are in their essential features the same. 2. It is not necessary in such statement of claim to allege that the imitation by the defendants of the plaintiffs' trade-mark is a fraudulent imitation, 3. It is not necessary to allege that the defendant used the mark with intent to deceive, and to induce a belief that the goods on which their mark was used were made by the plaintiffs'. Boston Rubber Shoe Co, v. Boston Rubber Co, of Montreal, 21 C. L. T. 278, 7 Ex. C. R. 9.

Prior use — Application to rectify register — Counterclaim — Title.]—A manufacturer or dealer in cigars cannot acquire the right to an exclusive use, and be entitled to registration, of a specific trade-mark, of which the term "King" forms the leading feature, and is used in combination with the representation of some particular king, while other manufacturers or dealers use the same term with the likeness of their kings. Spilling v. Ryall, 8 Ex. C. R. 195, 23 C. L. T. 102, explained. 2. An application to rectify the register of trade-marks cannot be made by counterclaim. (Secus now, under General Order of the 7th March, 1904.) 3. In an action for the infringement of a trade-mark the defendant may attack the legal title of the plaintiff to the exclusive use of the trade-mark he has registered. Partlo v. Todd, 17 S. C. R. 196, referred to. Provident Chemical Works v. Canadian Chemical Manufacturing Co., 4 O. L. R. 548, approved. Spilling v. O'Kelly, 24 C. L. T. 119, 8 Ex. C. R. 426.

Registration Words — Device Resemblance — First user — Declaration—Truth of — Ezpunging mark.]—Registration of a trade-mark to be applied to the sale of whisky was refused, on the ground that it too closely resembled trade-marks previously registered. The earlier ones consisted in the representation of a maple leaf and such words as "Old Red Wheat." 'Early Dew." The later one consisted of the words "Maple Leaf" and the device of a maple leaf on which was impressed the figure of a beaver, used separately or in conjunction with the words "Fine Old Rye Whisky," etc. 2. A declaration made by the respondents that they believed a certain trade-mark was theirs on account of their having been the first to use it, being true when made, and they having afterwards, when they learned of one J. C.'s registered trade-mark, purchased it from him, the petitioners were not entitled to have the respondents' trade-mark expunged, on the ground that their declaration was untrue. 3. In 1902, after the controversy between the parties had arisen, and without notice to the petitioners, the respondents obtained registration of another specific trade-mark to be applied to the sale of whisky, which consisted of the words "Maple Leaf" and the representation of a maple Leaf—and the representation of a maple Leaf—and the representation of a maple Leaf" and the representation of sitilling Co., S Ex. C. R. 311.

Representations of the King and the Royal Arms — User before registra-tion — Declaration signed by agent.]—A label, as applied to boxes containing cigars, bearing upon it in an oval form a vignette of King Edward VII. with a coat of arms on one side, and a marine view on the other, surmounted by the words "Our King," and with the words "Edward VII." underneath, constitutes a good trade-mark in Canada, and may be infringed by the impression, upon boxes containing cigars, of a fac-simile of the royal arms surmounted by the words "King Edward." 2. The English rule pro-hibiting the use of the royal arms, representations of His Majesty, or of any member of the royal family, or of the royal crown, or the national arms or flags of Great Britain, as the subjects of trade-marks, is not in force in Canada. 3. It is not essential to the validity of a trade-mark registered in Canada that the person registering the same should have used it before obtaining registration. The registration must, however, in such a case, be followed by use, if the proprietor wishes to retain his right to the trade-mark. In this respect there is no difference between the law of Canada and the law of England. 4. The declaration required from the proprietor of a trade-mark by s. 8 of the Trade-Marks and Design Act, R. S. C. c. 63, may be signed by his duly authorised attorney or agent. Spilling v. Ryall, 23 C. L. T. 102, 8 Ex. C. R. 195. Sale of business — Right to use name.]
—The proprietor of a firm name of no pecuniary value per se, and not being merely his own name, who has sold the business with which it was connected, and with it he right to use the firm name for a limited period, cannot, after the expiry of the time, prevent the user of such name, when he himself does not carry on or nined to carry on business under it. Use of corporate name - Fraud and deceit — Evidence.]—Since 1885 the plaintiffs, incorporated in Massachusetts, had done business in the United States of America and Canada as manufacturers and dealers in India rubber boots and shoes under the name of "The Boston Rubber Shoe Com-pany," having a trade line of their manufactures marked with the impression of their corporate name, registered as their trade-mark known as "Bostons," which had acmark known as "Bostons," which nad ac-quired a favourable reputation. The defend-ants were incorporated in Canada in 1896 by the name of "The Boston Rubber Com-pany of Montreal," and manufactured and pany of Montreal," and manufactured and dealt in similar goods, on one grade of which was impressed their corporate name, these goods being referred to in their price lists, catalogues, and advertisements as "Bostons," and the company's name frequently men-tioned therein as "Boston Rubber Company." In an action to restrain the defendants from continuing to use such impressed trade-mark continuing to use such impressed trade-mark or any other similar mark, on such goods as an infringement of the plaintiffs' registered trade-mark: — Held, reversing the judgment in 7 Ex. C. R. 187, 21 C. L. T. 517, that, under the circumstances, the use by the defendants of their corporate name in the manner described on goods of their own the manner described on goods of their own manufacture similar to those manufactured by the plaintiffs, was a fraudulent infringement of the plaintiffs' registered trade make and calculated to deceive the public, and so, in bad faith, to obtain sales of their own goods as if they were the plaintiffs' manufactures, and consequently, that the plaintiffs were entitled to an injunction restraining the defendants from using their corporate name as a mark upon such goods manufactured by them in Canada, Boston Rubber Shoc Co. v. Boston Rubber Co. of Montreal, 22 C. L. T. 275, 32 S. C. R. 315.

Use of similar name — Registration— Misrepresentations — Injunction—Evidence.] —'The fact that the word "Simpson" had been, previously to the plaintiff's registration, used and registered as a trade-mark for pills as a cure for one complaint, did not disentitle the plaintiff to obtain registration of the name as a trade-mark for pills to cure another ailment, and the regis-tration was therefore good. The fact that the name "Simpson" was entirely fictitious and was not the name of the real manufacturer, did not constitute any such misre-presentation as would disentitle the plaintiff to an injunction. Only misrepresentations contained in the trade-mark itself will disentitle the plaintiff to an injunction, and therefore fictitious testimonials published by the plaintiff were not such misrepresentations as would defeat his right. Ford v. Foster, L. R. 7 Ch. 611, followed. Semble, that the prior user outside of Canada of the word "Simpson" in connection with the word simposit in Kidney Pills was not sufficient to disentitle the plaintiff to its exclusive use within Canada: — Held, also, upon the evidence, that the defendant had adopted the word "Simpson" wilfully, and solely to induce the simpson will will, and solvely to induce the public to believe that the pills he sold were those advertised by the plaintiff, and that therefore the plaintiff was entitled to an injunction, with costs. One of the defendant's witnesses stated that he had in the year 1891 seen the name "Simpson's Kidney Publishers." Pills' inscribed upon a wire door mat in London, England. This evidence was objected to on the ground that it was secondary evidence and that the door mat itself should be produced.—Held, that the evidence should be admitted because the production of the door mat would be highly inconven-Templeton v. Wallace, 4 Terr. L. R.

Use of word — Pleading.]—In an action for selling, in violation of plaintiff's right, what purports to be asbestic wall plaster, stamped and labelled as such, it is pertinent for the defendant to plead that he has, before and since the registration of plaintiff's trade-marks, sold asbestic wall plaster, and he has a right to describe it as such. Asbestic & Asbestos Co. v. Sclater, 2 Que. P. R. 467.

Words of same derivation.]—The use of the word "listerated," on a label to qualify or describe a tooth powder, is not an infringement of a trade-mark consisting of the word "listerine," registered and known as the name of an antiseptic preparation. Lambert Pharmacal Co. v. Palmer (1910), 39 Que. S. C. 64.

Action against — Actionable conspiracy — Misdirection — Resolutions of union calling a strike — New trial.]—In an action against the appellants alleging that they had conspired to injure the plaintiffs in the conduct of their business, and that in pursuance of the conspiracy of the Union whom they represented caused the plaintiffs' men to go out on strike, the trial Judge, in effect, directed the jury that if the resolutions of the Union calling out the plaintiffs' men were the cause of the strike, they were an actionable wrong, without regard to the motive and without regard to the conspiracy alleged:—Hedd, that this direction could not be supported, and that there must be a new trial.—Judgment of the Court of Appeal in Metallic Roofing Co. of Canada v. Action against — Conspiracy — Strike —Calling men out — Misdirection — New trial.]—In an action against the members of a trade union for conspiring to injure the plaintiffs in their business, the trial Judge told the jury that the calling out of the members of the union on a strike, by a resolution of the union on a strike, by a resolution of the union, unless within a certain time a particular agreement was entered into, was an actionable wrong, if that resolution was the cause of the strike, without regard to the motive or the conspiracy alleged:—Held, that this direction was a misdirection to the jury and a new trial should be held. When the Privy Council has awarded costs they are not subject to the rules of practice of the Courts below. There is no right of set-off, and stay of execution, with a view to a set-off of other costs to be recovered upon a new trial ordered by the Privy Council, will be refused. Russell v. Expulsion of member — Articles of association — By-law in restraint of trade—Illegality — Militia Act.]—The plaintiff, a musician and a member of the active militia of Canada and of the band of a militia regiment, became a member of the defendant association, a body incorporated under the Friendly Societies and Insurance Corporations Act, whose object was to unite the instrumental portion of the musical profession for protection of its interests, the regulation of prices, the enforcement of good faith among its members and to assist members in sickness, etc. After the plaintiff joined, the defendants adopted a new article providing that no member should play in any engagement with any person playing an instrument who was not a member. The plaintiff was fined, and expelled for default of payment of the fine for playing in his regimental band at a concert, in uniform, under the direction of the bandmaster, and with the permission of the colonel commanding—some of the band not being members:—Held, that, at the time the plaintiff joined Fees of members - Arrears laws - Penalty for infraction.]-By their charter the plaintiff association have power to impose by by-law the payment of an annual fee by each of their members, and also, a penalty for every infraction of their by-laws. The association, in pursuance thereof, passed a by-law fixing the membership fee at $2 a year and imposing a penalty of $10 for every infraction of the by-The defendant took out his license, and paid his fee for one year, and after-wards exercised his trade for three years without paying his fee :- Held, that, in the circumstances, the plaintiff association could claim from the defendant only the penalty which he had incurred for the infraction of the by-laws and not the arrears of his fees. Barbers' Association of the Province of Quebec v. Charlebois, 23 Que. S. C. 287.

Inducing breach of contract . terference with business - Foreign officer-Incorporation - Fleading.1 - Damages are recoverable against a trade union and the members thereof in an action by employers of workmen when, by means of threats, abusive language, and a system of espionage, the workmen are induced to break their contracts of employment with the employers, and other workmen are prevented from entering into the employment in their stead. a foreign officer of an organised body of which the local trade union was a part, who came to this province and aided, encouraged, and directed the members in their unlawful acts, was held liable with them for the consequences. It is too late at the trial, after a trade union has appeared and pleaded in an apparently corporate capacity, to raise the objection that it is not in fact incorporated or liable to be sued. Such an objection must be specially pleaded, Krug Furniture Co. v. Berlin Union of Amalgamated Woodworkers, 23 C. L. T. 170, 5 O. L. R. 463, 2 O. W. R. 282.

The men were not employed under contract. There was a conspiracy to ricket the plaintiffs' works and to prevent picket the plaintiffs' works and to prevent others taking employment with the plaintiffs. Picketting, as conducted here, amounted to common law nuisance, and the individual defendants who took part in it, as well as those acting in combination with them, are liable in damages to the plaintiffs:-Held, that the unions are liable—the law of principal and agent being applicable to trade unions. The lodges approved, supported and participated in the strike, and are jointly liable with the individual defendants for the damage caused by the wrongful acts of the Strikers receiving strike pay from a grand lodge does not make a lodge liable for past illegal acts committed by its employees without its authority. The union ployees without its authority. The union has no right to penalise for a refusal to obey its mandate. The lodge does not violate any person's rights in insisting on obedience to its rules and meting out to its employees who violate its rules the punishment the constitution calls for. Plaintiffs sustained damages by being deprived of the services damages by being deprived of the services of their men, but for that damage they have no remedy against any persons unless it arises from some illegal act performed by the defendants or some of them. Damages assessed against certain lodges, held liable. Vulcan Iron Works Co. v. Winnipeg Lodge No. 174 Ironmoulders Union (Man.) 10 W. L. R. 421.

opinion, upon the evidence, that the findings of fact could not be disturbed.—Per Perdue, J.A.:—Lodges 147 and 335 may have aided the men by distributing strike-pay and giving other monetary assistance, but that is not alone sufficient to render them liable as strikers or ratifying the unlawful acts as strikers or ratifying the unlawful acts as the selection of the control of th Member - Interference with employment - Threatening employer - Refusal by union men to work with non-union man— Coercion of employer — Contractual relationship between employer and employee.] —The plaintiff, a stonemason, applied for membership in the union of which defendants were officers. He made a payment on account of his application fee, but, not become uncleded, for he to we worked. ing vouched for by two members of the union, the executive returned the fee and requested him to submit to a test of workmanship preliminary to his being enrolled. Considering the test an unfair one he declined to submit to it, whereupon the union refused him membership. The test proposed was what is known as "boulder work," but the plaintiff stated that he had been accus-tomed to "sandstone work." After some delay, the plaintiff was told he could submit to a test in any kind of stone he chose, but he did not accept the offer. Subsequently, while he was at work on a building, the union at a meeting passed a resolution instructing the secretary to notify the employer that unless the plaintiff was discharged the union men would be called out. The plaintiff, having been discharged, brought this action for an injunction and damages:

—Held, on appeal, reversing the judgment of Lampman, Co.C.J., 8 W. L. R. 281, that the plaintiff had not shewn that the purpose of the defendants was to molest him in pursuing his calling, and prevent him, except on conditions of their own making, from earning his living thereby. Strikes . - Combined action-Conspiracy to injure plaintiff-Picketting and besetting.] -Whilst workmen, members of a trade union, have a right to strike and to combine for that purpose in order to improve their own position, provided the means resorted to be not in themselves unlawful, yet they have no right to induce other workmen, who are not members of the union and who desire to continue working, to leave their employment, or to endeavour to prevent the employers from getting other men to work for them and for that purpose to watch and beset the places where the men happen to be, or to induce the employers' workmen to break their contracts, as these are actionable wrongs and picketting and besetting are expressly made unlawful by section 501 of the Criminal Code. Quinn v. Leatham, [1901] A. C. 511; Read v. The Friendly Society, dec. [1902] K. B. 732; South Wates Miners' Federation v. Glamorgan Coal Co., [1905] A. C. 239; Lyons v. Wilkins, [1899] 1 Ch. 255, and Charnock v. Court, [1899] 2 Ch. 35, followed:—Held, also, that all the defendants who had participated in, or counselled, or procured the picketting and besetting are expressly ticipated in, or counselled, or procured the acts condemned were each individually liable for the whole amount of the damages suffered by the several plaintiffs in consequence of those acts, but not for any damage caused by those acts, but not for any damage caused by themselves quitting work. Krug Furniture Co. v. Berlin Union (1903), 5 O. L. B. at p. 469. followed. Damages were assessed 469. followed. Damages were assessed against all the defendants found guilty at $2,000 divided amongst the several plaintiffs in proportions fixed by the judgment .- Held, also, that the property and assets of the Union were liable for the amount of the judgment and costs, and that an interim injunc-tion granted should be made perpetual restraining the defendants from persuading, procuring or inducing workmen to leave the employ of the plaintiffs and from conspiring employ or the plaintins and from combining to injure workmen not to enter the plaintiffs' employ, also from besetting or watching places where the plaintiffs or any of their workmen or those seeking to enter their employ reside or carry on business or happen to be with a view to compel the plain-tiffs or said workmen to abstain from doing anything they or any of them have a lawful right to do, and from persistently following them or any of them. Defences enuring, under an order of the Court, for the benefit of absent interested persons, represented for the purpose of the action by one or more of the actual defendants, should not be struck out by reason of a contempt or default com-mitted by such defendants in refusing to produce documents, and any interlocutory judgment entered in consequence of such defences being struck out is a nullity. The destruction during the progress of this suit of a book kept by an officer of the Union at its head-quarters in which were recorded minutes re-lating to the strike and the non-production of a strike register kept and of the reports handed in from day to day by members of the Union actively engaged in picketting and officially appointed for that purpose were circumstances that justified the Court in presuming that they contained entries unfavourable or damaging to the defence and in being

TREES.

Fall of branch — Injury to passer-by on highway — Negligence — Liability.]—
The owner of property on which trees grow close to a public thoroughfare is liable for damages caused by the fall through decay of a branch on a passer-by. Owners of such trees, who fail to have them properly inspected and pruned, are at fault and liable for accidents that happen in consequence. Lamarche v. Les Réverends Pères Oblats, 29 Que. S. C. 138.

Ornamental trees — Destruction by railway company under statute — Rights of owners — Injunction — Construction of statutes.]—The right of property in shade trees on highways and to fence them in, conferred upon the owners of the lands adjacent to the highways by s. 688 of the Municipal Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 116, is not taken away by an Act incorporating a railway company with power to construct a line of railway along the public highway with the consent of the municipality and according to plans to be approved by the council of the municipality, even although such consent has been given and such plans approved. The defendants' Act of incorporation provided that the several clauses of the Manitoba Railway Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 145, should be incorporated with and deemed part of it. And the Railway Act provides that the several clauses of the Manitoba Expropriation Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 61, with respect to the expropriation of land and the compensation to be paid therefor, shall be deemed to be incorporated with and the defendants had no right to cut down the trees on the lighway or to lower the grade in front of the plaintiffs' land, although such action was necessary in carrying out the approved plans, without taking the proper steps, under the Railway Act and the Expropriation Act and the Expropr either to ascertain and pay the damages suffered by the plaintiffs to their land injuriously affected by the intended construction, or to procure an order from a Judge, under s. 25 of the Railway Act, giving them the right to take possession upon giving security for payment of the compensation to be awarded; and that the interim injunction secured by the plaintiffs should be continued until the trial unless the defendants should furnish security that they would proceed forthwith to settle the amount of such compensation. Bannatyne v. Suburban Rapid Transit Co., 24 C. L. T. 380, 15 Man. L. R. 7.

Property in trees planted in highway — Destruction — Recovery.]—Trees planted upon the public highway in the city of Montreal, with the consent of the municipal authority and in conformity with its regulations, become an accessory to the property in the land in front of which and for the advantage of which they have been planted, and the owner of such land may maintain an action for damages against a neighbour, when by reason of the industry carried on by the neighbour, the trees have been destroyed. Distress as for rent — No rent agreed upon—Arbitrary fixing by letter of owner—No assent for agreement or implication — Sale of goods seized — Irregular proceedings.]—Action for trespass to goods. Held, that plaintiff never agreed to pay rent nor consented to hold property on terms set forth in defendant's letter, therefore defendant had no right to distrain. A landlord cannot, by writing a letter, arbitrarily fix the rent which he is to receive unless the amount is assented to by agreement or by implication. Defendant's proceedings were altogether irregular and plaintiff is entitled to recover the whole value of the goods seized together with damages for injury to business. White v. Cusak, 10 W. L. and bounds, but outside of the particular description. Judgment of Britton, J., at trial. 19 O. W. R. 195, 2 O. W. N. 1028, reversed as to damages. Davey v. Foley (1911), 19 O. W. R. 531, 2 O. W. N. 1284.

Action for damages—Water percolating into plaintiffs' cellar—Cause of injury—Evidence contradictory—Onus—Undertaking to repair wall—Action dismissed—No effect on future rights of action.]—Plaintiff brought action to recover damages for injury to plaintiff spremises by water brought thereon by reason, as alleged, of defendants using a large quantity in their livery business upon their premises adjoining the plaintiff's premises and not providing proper means of escape.—Falconbridge, C.J.K.B., keld, that the onus was on the plaintiff to shew that he had appreciably suffered from defendants' wrongful acts and that onus had not been satisfied. Action dismissed without costs, on defendants undertaking to forthwith repair the defect in their wall. Dismissal not to prejudice future rights of action. Pinder v. Sanderson, Neuman & Hough (1911), 18 O. W. R. 240, 2 O. W. N. 726.

Action for damage for — Injunction — Possession sufficient in absence of proof of title—Fouling stream — Nuisance — Reference—Costs.] — Plaintiffs brought action to recover damages for material dumped on plaintiffs' land by defendants, for a declaration that plaintiffs were owners of the land and for a mandatory order compelling the removal of materials dumped over the brow of plaintiffs' land as charged. Britton, J., held, that plaintiffs' possession, in the absence of proof of title by defendants, was sufficient to entitle plaintiffs to maintain the action for the trespasses complained of; that plaintiffs were entitled to the injunction restraining defendants from like trespasses; that plaintiffs had suffered no injury, to any extent, from discolouration of the water of the stream, but that a continuance, for any considerable time, would result in a ground for action as to fouling the water; that the only damage so far was the amount required to either buttress the dumps by a wall, or to remove them. Damage for the expense of so doing awarded at $200. Plaintiffs to have a reference at their own risk, if desired, instead of accepting the award. Plaintiffs to leet within 30 days. Costs reserved. Fisher v. Doolittle (1910), 17 O. W. R. 441, 2 O. W. N. 259.

Action for damages for trespass— Title—Deed—Description—Locus in quo — Possession—Evidence. Millet v. Beazanson (N.S. 1910), 9 E. L. R. 16.

Action for possession — Title in dispute—Lease from Indians — Agreement for sale—Statute of Limitations.] — Plaintiff claimed title as assignee of a lease for 999 years granted by an Indian tribe. Defendant claimed under an agreement for sale and under Statute of Limitations. Trial Judge held in favour of plaintiff, declaring him entitled to the land and ordered defendant to deliver possession, enjoining him from entering or trespassing thereon; and gave plaintiff. $5 damages and costs. Appeal to the Court of Appeal dismissed with costs. Tatt v. Snetzinger (1999), 14 O. W. R. 1029, 1 O. W. N. 193.

Action to determine boundary-Survey - Injunction - Counterclaim for damages occasioned by—Reference to ascertain

—F. D. and costs reserved — Appeal dismissed. [—Plaintiff brought action for a declaration that plaintiff was owner of certain lands and premises claimed by defendants, for a return of the timber said to have been wrongfully taken, for an injunction, and for a declaration of the boundary line between plaintiff's and defendants' lands. In 1887, one Wheelock, a surveyor, ran a line between the two properties.—Riddell, J., held (17 O. W. R. 376, 2 O. W. N. 224), upon the evidence, that he could not say that Wheelock did not strike the true line, and the plaintiff failed. Action dismissed with costs. Defendants counterclaimed for damages occasioned by the injunction order allowed with costs, with a reference to the Master to assess damages. Further directions and costs dismissed plaintiffs' appeal with costs. Horan v. McMahon (1911), 18 O. W. R. 674, 2 O. W. N. 897.

Action to determine boundary between two farms - Injunction to restrain further trespass - Sufficient possession to satisfy rule as to trespass—Ont. Jud. Act, s. 58 (4).]—Plaintiff, a farmer of the township of Alfred, brought action to recover $200 damages for an alleged trespass upon his lands by defendant, another farmer of said township, and cutting of timber thereon, and for an injunction to restrain any further trespass. At the trial judgment was given plaintiff for $25 damages and for the injunction asked. Divisional Court held, that there was sufficient possession in the plaintiff to satisfy the rule as to trespass. The fact that he is a mere mortgagor is rendered immaterial by the Ont. Jud. Act, s. 58 (4). The defendant complained that he had been saddled with costs, although he paid money into Court, and no further or greater amount of damages had been assessed against him.—Held, that as defendant did not admit the plaintiff's title, which was the main matter in dispute, it was necessary for plain-tiff to proceed to trial to obtain his desired relief, that he had acted most reasonably throughout as one who did not desire unduly to press his own rights or at all encroach upon those of others, and there was no reason to deprive plaintiff of costs. Charbonneau v. McCusker (1910), 17 O. W. R. 18, 2 O. W. N. 83, 22 O. L. R. 46.

Adverse possession — Statute of Limitations — Escheat proceedings—Grant by Crown of escheated property.] — The evidence shewed continuous open and notorious possession by plaintiff and predecessors in title. The Crown had escheated this property. Defendant did not live on the property and was not served with escheat proceedings. He became aware of them, however, but took no action. The judgment escheating the lot revested both title and possession in the Crown. The defendant remained in possession after the Crown grant as an intruder. Judgment for plaintiff. Mo-Fetridge v. McCabe, 6 E. L. R. 494.

Agreement for sale of standing timber — License to enter and cut — Extension by parol of period for cutting—Reasonable time—Interest in land.] — Action claiming damages for trespass to land. Judgment for defendant with costs. Drew v. Armstrong (1911), 9 E. L. R. 491, N. S. R. .

Animals — Fences — Agreement — Municipal by-law.]—The plaintiff and defendant, adjoining land-owners, made an arbitrary division of the line fence between their lots, which was less than five feet in height and which they agreed to keep in repair. By reason of the defendant allowing his portion to get into disrepair, his cattle and sheep got on the plaintiff's land and damaged it. The defendant also allowed his cattle to escape and run at large on the highway, whence, by breaking down the plaintiff's fences, they got on the plaintiff's land and further damaged it. A township by-law provided that no fence should be less than five feet high, and prohibited the running at large of all breachy cattle:—Held, that the defendant was liable for the damages sustained by the plaintif, and that such liability was not affected by the by-law. Barber v. Cleave, 2 O. L. R. 218.

Assault:] — Defendant purchased farm at sheriff's sale and obtained sheriff's deed, plaintiff's mother being in possession and plaintiff residing with her. Defendant entered with his team to plough. Plaintiff struck defendant, who resisted. Plaintiff struck defendant, who resisted. Plaintiff brought action of trespass for assault. On the trial the Judge told the jury that defendant had no right to enter, plaintiff and her mother being in possession. Verdict for plaintiff. —Held, on motion to set aside, that defendant had a right to enter. McSucain v. Chappell (1880), 2 P. E. I. R. 317.

Balliff — Recourse against — Pleading—Amends, 1—A creditor whose hailff has by error made a seizure of goods on the premises of a person other than the defendant will be relieved from liability upon paring an indemnity and giving up the effects seized, and will have recourse against the bailiff for reimbursement. The bailiff, if has promised to pay the amount, will not be allowed later, in a suit for the recovery thereof, to plead that the creditor should have waited until sued by the person whose goods were thus wrongfully seized and then brought in the bailiff en garantie; his acknowledgment of the debt deptives him of the right so to plend. Boundary Lines Act — Obligation to femous—Joint owner—Parties—Possession — Right of action.]—The provision in s. 4 of the Boundary Lines Act, R. S. M. c. 12, viz., "Each of the parties occupying adjoining tracts of land shall make, keep up, and repair a just proportion of the division or line fence on the line dividing such tracts, and equally on either side thereof." does not supersede the common law liability of an owner of cattle for all their trespasses except such as are due to defects in fences which the complainant is bound as between himself and such owner to keep up; and such owner will be liable for the trespasses committed by his cattle, unless it is shewn that the complainant was bound to keep up and repair the particular part of the fence through which the cattle entered. The common law rule is not displaced by a joint liability to keep up fences. The injured crops were raised by plaintiff who was in possession, but another person had a half interest in the crop:—Held, that sole possession by the plaintiff was sufficient to support an action of trespass, and it was not necessary to make the co-owner a party or to obtain any release from him. Star v. Rookesby, 1 Sask. 335, and Graham v. Peat, 1 East. 246, followed. Garricoh v. McKay, 21 C. L. T. 421, 13 Man. L. R. 404.

Cancellation of agreement for sale of land — Plaintiff not in possession — Amendment of pleadings.]—An action for trespass cannot be maintained unless the plaintiff has been in actual possession of the land. An application to amend the pleadings by adding a claim for recovery of possession of the land was refused on the ground that to do so would give the plaintiff an entirely new action. Leadley v. Gaetz (1904), 6 Terr. L.

Contract to impreve property—Contractors' foreman removed loam from plaintiff's property—Liability of contractors—Damages.]—Chambers, a foreman for Stone & Wellington, contractors, entered upon plaintiff's land and removed a quantity of sod and black loam, which was used to improve the property of one Magann, held by The Toronto General Trusts Corporation. Plaintiff brought action against all four defendants for trespass and removal of loam, and for a redeposit of said loam, and that plaintiff might enter on land of defendant Magann and take indiscriminately and remove said loam, and for an injunction restraining further interference with plaintiff's roperty.—Britton, J., held (15 O. W. R. 811, 1 O. W. N. 686), that the action against Magann and the Toronto General Trusts Co.

should be dismissed without costs as there was no personal interference with plaintiff's property by them. Judgment given plaintiff for $250 and costs on proper scale, with no set-off of costs against Stone and Wellington and Chambers. Gregory v. Piper, 9 B. & C. 591, and Murray v. Cronan, L. R. 6 C. Cutting and removing timber

Measure of damages—Wrongful and wilful Acts.]—In trespass, the inquiry is, what damages will compensate or restore the plaintiff financially to his original position as nearly as possible at the time when the trespass was committed. Where the defendants had wrongfully and wilfully entered upon and cut and carried away timber from the plaintiffs' limits, and the plaintiffs sued for trespass only: — Held, that the damages should be measured by: (1) the value of the timber after it was severed and manufactured, so far as it was manufactured, while on the timber limits of the plaintiffs, immediately before the defendants removed it;
(2) such sum as represented the extent to which the limits were injured, if at all, by reason of their having been partly denuded by the acts of the defendants, such, for instance, as wasteful methods in cutting, using the surface to pass and repass, etc. Martin

Cutting and removing timber—Rights reserved by Groon—Acquisition of by plaintiffs — Title to pine trees. —Plaintiffs brought action to recover damages for alleged trespass by defendants in entering on plaintiffs' lands and cutting and removing timber, etc.—Clute, J., gave plaintiffs judgment for $3,157 damages and costs, and dismissed the claim of Miller and Dickson by third party notice, against the Eastern Construction Co., and gave judgment for plaintiffs in the action in Schmidt v. Miller for $1,053 damages and costs, and dismissed claim of Miller and Dickson on third party notice against the Eastern Construction Co. Court of Appeal allowed defendants' appeal as to the claim for value of the pine timber, and as to the other claims of the plaintiffs; if the parties are unable to agree as to amounts there will be a reference to ascertain them. Further directions and the question of costs throughout, except of the appeals, to be reserved. The cross-appeal dismissed with costs to the Eastern Construction Co. The costs of the appeal to be allowed to the defendants on the final taxation. National Trust Co. v. Miller (1911), Cutting down tree on boundary line—Action for damages—Ownership of tree—Evidence.]—Motion to set aside the verdict for plaintiff and for a new trial in an action claiming damages for cutting down a line tree. Peters v. Dodge (N. S. 1910), 9 E. L. R. 237.

Cutting logs on land — Trespass not wilful—Extra-judicial affidavits taken before trial — Witnesses in vinculis.]—Action for trespass and damages for cutting logs on plaintin's property: — Held, that trespass was not wilful but was done by one of the defendant's servants in the belief that they were executing his instructions. Measure of damages will not be actual commercial value under special circumstances in this case. Defendant's conduct in procuring extra-judicial affidavits to fetter conscience of witnesses at trial held to be highly reprehensible. Law v. Madden, 11 W. L. R. 6.

Cutting timber — Joint tort-feasors —Independent contractor—Damages—Gross negligence. Phillips v. Parry Sound Lumber Co., 8 O. W. R. 282.

—Counterclaim dismissed — Declaration as asked granted—Costs.] — Plaintiffs brought action, alleging trespass on their lands and cutting of pulpwood, claimed a declaration that the timber logs and pulpwood now in Jarvis river were cut off their lands and were property of plaintiffs; for an account for damages, return of timber, and an injunction: — Sutherland, J., held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to declaration asked; that no sale of said timber, loss and pulpwood was ever made by plaintiff to Smith, and that consequently Smith could not and did not make any valid sale to defendant company. That the property in question was still in existence and available, and the plaintiffs were entitled to the possession thereof; that defendant company should look to the Smiths on account of their contract; that as plaintiffs were recovering their property under circumstances of greater value, they were not entitled to any substantial amount in respect of trespass. As for Smith's counterclaim, it should be set off against the damages claimed by plaintiff; that defendants improvements were of no substantial benefit to plaintiffs for possession of logs in question, with costs of action against both defendants. No order as to costs of Smith's counterclaim. Br. N. Am.

Damages for exclusion and profits—Form of action—Mesne profits.]—A verdict in an action for trespass to land recovered against a defendant in possession, for the expulsion and exclusion of the plaintiff and for profits, will not be disturbed on the ground that the count on which it was obtained was in the form of an action for meene profits. Smith v. Smith, 37 N. B. R. 7.

Defence Expropriation — Plan — Description—Boundary line — Damages.]—The defence in an action for trespass to land was that the land in question has been expropriated by the town of S. under the provisions of the Act of the province of 1889, c. 84, and conveyed by the town to the defendant company. The Act contained a provision that, upon the filing of a plan in the office of the registrar of deeds for the county, immediately after the town council should have by resolution provided for such expropriation, all rights, etc., in said lands should forthwith absolutely vest in that town: Held, that the filing of the plan would be ineffectual in the absence of a resolution of the town council providing for the acquisition or expropriation of the land; and that a description written on the face of the plan was scription written on the face of the pian was made part of and must be taken in connection with it. The defence to the action depended in part upon the position of the line between McD. and McL.—Held, that the mode adopted by the defendant to fix the starting point of this line could not be adopt. ed to the exclusion of all others, and to control the line as established by the vendors and purchasers at the times the conveyances were made, and not since disputed, especially as the effect would be to deprive the plaintiff of his land without proper notice, and with-out remuneration. — Held, with respect to damages, that though they were not such as the Court would have given, the matter was one in the discretion of the trial Judge, and there was no reason for interfering. McLennan v. Dominion Iron and Steel Co., 36 N. S. R. 28.

Disturbance of possession — Encadement — Remedy—Damages.] — The disturbance of possession which affords ground for an action of trespass is such as is adverse or in defiance of the right of a person who is in possession animo domini. A simple encroachment is only ground for an action for damages. Bertrand v. Levesque, 28 Que. S. C. 46.

Disturbance of possession — Intention—Damages.]—An action for trespass is based upon the disturbance caused to possession, without reference to the intention of the supposed trespasser. It is not necessary that the act complained of should be of an aggressive character, nor that there should be proof of actual damage, in order to sustain the action. Latourelle v. Darby, 14 Que. K. B. 553.

of Disturbance of possession — Right of possession.—An disturbance of possession which affords ground for an action of trespass must be a material fact or a judicial act which, directly by itself or indirectly by its consequences, constitutes or implies a claim adverse to the possession of another person. Latourcile v. Darby, 28 Que. S. C. 97.

Division fence — Dispute as to boundaries—Finding of County Court Judge — Appeal—Consent of parties to Court disposing of appeal as arbitrators — Costs.]— On appeal a Divisional Court acting as arbitrators directed that a certain survey line be the boundary between the parties defendant to build a fence within six months. Graham v. Rüddell, 13 O. W. R. 518.

Ejectment — Boundaries — Survey — Encroachment — Damages — Possession — Form of judgment — Variation — Scale of costs—Appeal as to. Gilmore v. Luckhurst, 3 O. W. R. 383, 676.

Entry on land by servant of municipality — Construction of road diversion —Unauthorised entry — Damages, general and special — Responsibility of municipality for act of servant—Scope of authority.] The defendant M., acting or road-boss under instructions from the reeve and one of the councilmen of the defendant municipalthe councilmen of the delegant municipality, entered upon the plaintiff's land for the purpose of making a road diversion around a slough on the road allowance. The plaintiff forbade the construction of the road diversion on his land, but M, proceeded to make it. The preliminary steps necessary to give the municipality the right to enter and appropriate the plaintiff's land had not been taken :—Held, that the defendants were guilty of trespass and liable for the damage resulting therefrom.—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to general damages for the trespass and deprivation of the use of the portion of his land taken, assessed at $75; but not to damages for having 9 acres separated from the rest of his farm by the road diversion-whatever loss he sustained in this connection was a matter for consideration in awarding compensation in the expropriation proceedings since taken expropriation proceedings since taken. — Held, also, that the plaintiff was entitled to special damages, assessed at $99, for the loss of flax and wheat destroyed by water backed on the land by reason of the con-struction of the road diversion without proper culverts.—Held, also, that the de-fendant M. was the servant of the defendant municipality, and in constructing the ant municipality, and in constructing the road diversion was acting within the apparent scope of his authority, and, therefore, the municipality were liable for his acts. Ottizens Life Assurance Co. v. Brown, [1904] A. C. 423, followed. Foley v. Municipality of South Qu'Appelle (1910), 15 W. L. R. 264.

Equitable title — Adverse possession.]
—Action for trespass for cutting timber:— Held, that although plaintiff had not acquired a deed, he was entitled to same and was the equitable owner of the lot. There was no actual or constructive possession by the defendant such as would bar the plaintiff's claim. Appeal dismissed. Judgment for plaintiff confirmed. Grus v. Davidzon, 6 E. L. R. 409; 43 N. S. R. 242.

Escheat proceedings under R. S. (1900), c. 175 — Effect as regards title and possession.] — Where proceedings are taken under the provisions of R. S. 1900, s. 175, of escheating lands forfeited to the Crown, the fact that a small portion of the land, the subject of the escheat proceedings, has been trespassed upon by a person not having his place of abode on the land sought to be escheated, does not entitle such person to personal service. All that is quired in such case is that the notice refer-red to in the Act shall have been duly posted, red to in the Act snail nave occur only poster, and where this has been done and the person trespassing has falled to intervene within the period of three years, as provided by s. 16 of the Act, he is estopped from afterwards attacking the proceedings in escheat, by which the lands are revested in the Crown, not only the title to the land but the possession; and continuance in possession by a person trespassing upon a portion of the land can have no effect as against the validity of a subsequent grant, and is not within the mischief aimed at by Statute of Maintenance, 32 Henry VIII., c. 9, and will not affect subsequent grantees without some new entry or acts amounting to dis-seisin as against subsequent owners. Where plaintiff claiming under a conveyance to her of the land the subject of the escheat pro-ceedings, by virtue of such proceedings, entered into possession and exercised acts of ownership over the whole, and asserted title to the whole, to the knowledge of defend-ant:—Held, that the effect of such entry was to give her seisin of the whole, not-withstanding the continuance of the acts of trespass. A party holding possession without title of a portion of land must establish a strong case to make out disseisn, as against a party occupying the remainder of the whole. McFetridge v. McCabe, 43 N. S. R. 293.

Evidence of possession.]—The casual use of land for pasturing cattle in common with other persons does not constitute evidence of possession sufficient to maintain an action for trespass. Judgment in 1E. L. R. 524 reversed. *Temiscouata Riv. Co. v. Clair, 38 S. C. R. 230.

Fire — Origin of — Action for damages—Convercedam.]—Plaintiff brought action to recover damages for entering on plaintiff's land, cutting trees and brush thereon, and settling fire to same, whereby plaintiff's property was injured:—Held, that plaintiff had proved his case as to the origin of the fire, and was entitled to recover. Judgment for plaintif for $500 and costs. Counterclaim dismissed with costs. Johnston v. McKibbon (1910), 10 O. W. R. 902, 1 O. W. N. 1146.

Forcible entry of premises by public officer — Gambling house — By-law — Justification — Absence of varrants—Criminal Code, s. 575 — Gambling instruments destroyed by justice's order.]—While plaintiff was absent from his store and boardinghouse, left in charge of an employee, the defendant, a police officer, broke in and arrested the assistant and took him to gaol. The defendant's assistants then returned, broke open a door in plaintiff's shop, removed certain goods, and tried to take money from the till, but could not, then returned to the police but could not, then returned to the police station, leaving the door open, when some one entered and robbed the till:—Held, on appeal, that plaintiff entitled to damages for money stolen and goods removed. The character of the house will not affect the damages. Judgment in 7 W. L. R. 637, 1 Sask. L. R. 81, reversed. Win Gat v. Johnson, 1 Sask. L. R. 476, 9 W. L. R. 293.

Highway — Gate — Fences — Title— Easement — Adverse possession — User.]— The first action is one for destroying a gate and trespassing on plaintiff's land. Nominal damages given, as it was rough pasture land, and defendant's cattle had only occasionally strayed thereon. The second action was for breaking and entering and committing trespass on plaintiff's land:—Held, that as defendant was equitable owner action must be dismissed. Reynolds v. Laffin, 7 E. L. R. 100.

Hire of chattel — Contract — Provision for removal on default—Entry by owner on lessee's premises — Damages.]—An agreement, that the lessor of a movable article may at any time, in case of violation by the lessee of the condition of the lease, enter upon the latter's premises and remove the article leased, is contrary to public order, and therefore void. Therefore, a person who, assuming to act under such agreement, trespasses upon the dwelling house of another, is responsible in damages. Cardinal v. Fiset, 29 Que. S. C. 424.

Hunting with gans — Conviction — Falov. VII. O., c. 49, z. 55 — Conviction quasked,1—Defendant was convicted for unlawfully trespassing "with guns and sporting implements" in pursuit of game upon lands of one Colton, under 7 Edw. VII. O., c. 49, s. 25. The conviction did not mention any date of the commission of alleged offences, the prosecutor's land was not, in fact, enclosed by fences. The sign boards were not shewn to be such as the statute required to establish notice. The defendant was not, in fact, go upon any land unless it can be said that being upon the water had did not, in fact, go upon any land unless it can be said that being upon the water had as over submerged land and so upon the land. Upon these facts the conviction was quashed. Rev. V. Russell Lansing (1909), 14 O. W. R.

Injunction — Expropriation — Statute—Aoguicscence — Compensation.)—Where a trespasser, by taking proper steps to that effect, would have the right to expropriate the lands in dispute, an injuncton should be withheld in order to enable the necessary proceedings to be taken and compensation made. Goodson v. Richardson, L. R. 9 Ch. 337, applied. But where there has been acquiescence equivalent to a fraud upon the defendant, the injunction ought not to be granted, even where the legal right of the plaintiff has been proved. Gerrard v. O'Reilly, 3 Dr. & Wart. 414, Wilmot v. Barber, 15 Ch. D. 96, Johnson v. Wyatt, 2 DeG, J. & S. 17, and Smith v. Smith, L. R. 20 Eq. 500, referred to. By the defendants' charter, 59 V. c. 62, ss. 9, 25 (B.C.), it was provided that the powers to enter, survey, ascertain, set out, and take, hold, appropriate, and acquire lands, should be subject to the making of compensation, and that the powers, other than the powers "to enter, survey, set out, and ascertain," should not be exercised or proceeded with until approval of the plans and sites by the Lieutenant-Governor in council. The defend-ants entered upon lands of the plaintiffs, made surveys, and constructed works there on, without making compensation or obtain-ing such approval. Some time after entry ing such approval. the defendants obtained the necessary order in council approving of the plans and sites of the land to be expropriated :-Held, that making of compensation was not a condition precedent to making the survey and taking possession of the land, and, as the order in council was not dealt with at the trial, the rights of the parties could not properly be determined on the material presented; the injunction should, therefore, be refused, and the parties left to take proceedings as they should respectively see fit, Judgment in Byron N. White Co. v. Sandon Waterworks & Light Co., 10 B. C. R. 361, varied, Sandon Waterworks & Light Co. v. Byron N. White Co., 35 S. C. R. 309.

Injury — Trespass — Pleading—Negligence — Scienter.]—In an action of trespass for an injury to the plaintiff's horse by the defendant's cow, the declaration was held bad, on demurer, for not alleging negligence or knowledge of vice. Elliott v. Doak, 36 N. B. R. 328.

Injury to building — Damages — Injunction, — Action for damages for injury to plaintiff's house by raising an adjoining building. It appearing that the injury was caused by joint action of defendant's contractor and plaintiff's excavation under his own building, action was dismissed. Ayerhart v. Weinstein, 13 O. W. R. 377.

Injury to fence.] — Plaintiff owned some vacant land next to defendant company's apartment house. Portions of this house projected and some windows looked over plaintiff sland, yet the defendants did not seem desirous of purchasing it. The plaintiff then erected a board fence sufficiently high to shut out the view from the windows, and in order to limit the borrowed light as far as possible, he covered the side of the fence next the apartment with tar paper. Some one not appreciating either the artistic effect or the altruistic motives of the plaintiff, proceeded to batter down the fence. In an action for damages plaintiff recovered $1 and costs. McKeague v. Great West (1999), 12 W. L. R. 355.

Injury to land — Damages.]—Defendant went on plaintiff's field to cut hay without latter's permission. The field was laid out in lots. Defendant removed a number of survey posts, necessitating a re-survey:—Held, that defendant liable in damages. Oliphant v. Fieher (1909), 12 W. L. R. 636.

In answer the appellant offered $400, which L. accepted, on condition that the appellant, before taking possession, should satisfy himself that the respondent would not take the land at this price. The appellant communicated the offer to the respondent, and, upon the refusal of the latter to buy, took possession of the land. No money was paid:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the consensus having made the sele complete, the appellant could join his possession to that of L. to make up his year's possession, if that were necessary in trespass as well as ejectment (and quare as to this), the action being against the respondent, who had disturbed the appellant's possession. Beauchemin V. Latraverse, 9 Que, Q. B. 56.

Mining claim - Contradictory evidence -Wilful trespass - Rule in assessing damages - Practice - Adding party-Reversal on appeal, |- In an action for damages for entry upon a placer mining claim and removing valuable gold bearing gravel and dirt, the trial Judge found the defendants guilty of gross carelessness in their work, held that they should be accounted wilful trespassers, and referred the cause to the cierk of the Court to assess the damages. The referee adopted the severer rule applica-ble in cases of fraud in assessing the dam-The Territorial Court en banc versed the trial Judge in his findings of fact upon the evidence: — Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, that the trial Judge's findings should be sustained with a slight variation, but that the referee had slight variation, but that the referee had erred in adopting the severer rule against the defendants in assessing the damages, and that his report should be amended in view of such error. Semble, that the record and pleadings should be amended by adding the plaintiff's partner as co-plaintiff.—Held, per Taschereau. C.J.C., dissenting, that, although not convinced that there was error in the judgment of the trial Judge which the Court en hane reversed, while at which the Court en banc reversed, while at the same time it did not appear that there was error in the judgment en banc, yet the latter judgment should stand, as the Court en banc should not be reversed unless the Supreme Court, on the appeal, be clearly satisfied that it was wrong. Kirkpatrick v. McNamee, 25 C. L. T. 125, 36 S. C. R. 152.

Possession of land for a year—Nature of — Prescriptive right — Possession solo animo—Joint possession—Right of action.]
—The possession for a year which affords a ground, in favour of the person disturbed in his possession, for the remedy by action of trespass, is a useful, continuous, and public possession, not equivocal, and in the capacity of owner, by means of which a prescriptive right is acquired. An acquired possession cannot be preserved solo animo as against a rival right openly manifested; and even material acts well marked do not shew, in such conditions, anything more than a joint or promiscuous possession. In neither case can there be a right of action. Raymond v. Convay, 32 Que. S. C. 310.

Possession of plaintiff — Writ of possession against previous occupant. Whitford v. Armstrong, 2 E. L. R. 54.

Possessory action — Disturbed possession — Prescription — Title — Intervention.]—The plaintiff, by possessory action, complained of being troubled in his possession, by the defendants, of the rear portion of lots 2B5 and 2B6 of the cadastral plan of Three Rivers, extending from "decime de la câte" to the river St. Lawrence. The defendants pleaded ownership and possession under arrangements with the Crown. The Canada Iron Furnace Company intervened, claiming ownership of the entire lot No. 2B6 under a deed of sale of the 20th October, 1800, accompanied by constant possession for over ten years. The plaintiff contested the intervention, alleging that the intervention could only claim the extent of ground conveyed to their nuture, by sheriff's sale of the 15th February, 1862, and which extended only to the 'cime de la câte.' mone of which is claimed by the action, the itle and by the cadastral plan as the boundary thereof. The Intervenants were never troubled in their possession judicially, the only disturbance being a notarial protest by the plaintiff, more than a year and a day prior to the institution of this action, not-lying the intervenants than claimed the land now claimed by his action, and requiring them to join in making a line fence along the "cime de la côte." This protest was not followed by any attempt to obtain possession of the land from the intervenants:—Held, that there was no trouble de froit of the intervenants' possession within ten years. 2. A notarial protest is not a trouble de droit of possession of land, and does not interrupt prescription. 3. The intervenants title and constant possession gave them ownership of the land, notwithstanding the title of conveyance to their atteur, 4. The intervenants had a sufficient interest to intervene, having shewn a possession which was troubled by the plaintiff's action. 5. Possession which affects a whole lot of land renders it unnecessary to prove particular acts of possession, within a year and a day, of any special part of the lot. Dupré v. Harbour Commissioners of Three Rivers, 23 Que. S. C. 439.

Possessory action - Public authority — Colonisation roads — Land taken for Liability of agents of the Crown — E propriation - Formalities - Value of land —Indemnity.]—1. A possessory action may be brought against those who shelter themselves behind the orders of public authority, e.g., contractors and superintendents of works, authorised by the Minister of Colonisation to open a colonisation road by virtue of s. 1715 et seq., R. S. Q.—2. The provisions of s. 1718, R. S. Q., that "the lands on which colonisation roads are laid out and constructed become the property of the Crown, and when these works are situated in a county, no indemnity is due for the land taken," is subject to Art. 407, C., and does not exempt the Minister of Colonisation and his representatives from making the expropriation in the forms pre-scribed by law. The owner should not be scribed by law. The owner should not be deprived, unless by an express and formal contract, of the guaranty against illegali-ties which the formalities of expropriation afford, and the indemnity to which he has a right may extend to things other than the value of the land. Gagnon v. Marquis, 35 Que. R. S. C. 406.

Prescription — Lost grant.] — Where the defendant had been using a way by permission and paying compensation during the twenty year prescription it cannot have been used as of right. The doctrine of lost grant applied only where the enloyment cannot be otherwise accounted for. Where a previous action regarding the same right of way had been compromised out of Court between the parties themselves there is no estoppel, and not being in writing did not create an easement. Smith v. McGillivray, 5 E. L. R. 561.

Quare clausum fregit — Effect of deed from Commissioner of Public Lands — Occupier.]—Plaintiff held an agreement for a lease from the original proprietor who subsequently sold to the government under Land Purchase Act. After sale to the government plaintiff agreed to purchase and paid deposit but obtained no deed, Defendant subsequently applied to Commissioner of Public Lands to purchase locus and obtained a deed and entered and cut wood on the land. Plaintiff brought action of trespass and obtained verdict:—Held, (Peters, J.) that defendant's deed was void and verdict was right. McMicken v. McCarthy (1881), 2 P. E. I. R. 389.

Quare clausum fregit - Parol demise by corporation void.]-This was an action of trespass. The plaintiffs had demised by parol for one year, the land to F. and put him in possession. Shortly afterwards defendants entered, turned him out and retained possession. On the trial it was contended that F. being tenant in possession the action should have been brought in his name and not in that of the plaintiffs, and the plaintiffs were non-suited. In support of a rule to set this non-suit aside it was contended that the corporation could only demise under seal and the parol demise to F. was therefore void and the corporation properly made plaintiffs:—Held, Peters, J., that the demise was void and the non-suit must be set aside. St. Andrew's College v. Griffin (1852), 1 P. E. I. R. 80.

Real Property Limitation Act—Limitation of actions — Adverse possession — Isolated acts of ouncership — Service of trespass.]—Action for trespass and to recover possession of some uncleared land. The legal estate has always been in plaintiff. The fence he put up to separate this from the rest of his farm was for convenience and is not a boundary fence. The occasional and intermittent acts of defendants were really a series of trespasses, for plaintiff was not excluded, and also used the property in dispute. The plaintiff was true to the decidence of the decidence of the decidence of partial possession by evidence of partial possession by owner of legal estate. Shunk v. Downey, 13 O. W. R. 398.

Removal of buildings — Action to recover value — Title to land—Proof of — Ownership of buildings—Annexation to free-hold—Equitable interest—Repairs. Mills v. Bryce, 7 W. L. R. 738.

Rescission of agreement for sale of land — Plaintiff not in possession—Amendment of pleadings.]—An action for trespass cannot be maintained unless the plaintiff has been in actual possession of the land. An application to amend the pleadings by adding a claim for recovery of possession of the land was refused, on the ground that to do so would give the plaintiff an entirely new action. Leadley v. Gaetz, 6 Terr L. R. 38.

Right of reversioner to maintain—

Injury to possession—Action in case.]— A tenant for years, not in possession, cannot maintain trespass against a defendant who enters upon the land without objection on the part of those actually in possession; nor can he recover in case, unless there is evidence of an act necessarily injurious to the reversion or in denial of his right. Where the declaration is in trespass, and the plaintiff on the trial relies upon and directs all his evidence to proving injury to his possession, the attention of the trial Judge not being in any way called to the fact that he was proceeding for injury to the reversion, he cannot afterwards, upon a motion to set aside a non-suit and enter a verdict for himself, claim the right under 60 V. c. 24, s. 95, to have a verdict entered for him in case as if he had declared for and proved damages to his reversionary interest. McDougalt V. Campbellton Water Supply Co., 31 N. B. R. 467.

Searching for liquor without warrant — Private ducling house — Liquor Licerse Act — County contable — Notice of action — Bona fide conduct — Leave and license — Jury.]—The defendant, a county constable appointed by a police magistrate, searched the plaintiff's dwelling house for liquor without a warrant and without any special authority. In an action for trespass the trial Judge held that the defendant was acting in the discharge of his duty, and, there being no evidence of malice, that he was entitled to notice of action, and withdrew the case from the jury and directed a nonsult:—Held, on appeal, that the question as to whether the defendant was acting bona fide in the discharge of his duty as a constable, in searching a private house, as being a house of public entertainment, for liquor, was a question for the jury; and that leave and license which was argued on the appeal but not pleaded on the record, should also, if pleaded, be submitted to the jury; and the judgment dismissing the action was set aside and a new trial ordered, with liberty to the defendant to amend by adding a plea of leave and license, Bell v. Lott. 25 C. L. T. 34, 9 O. L. R. 114, 4 O. W. R. 430.

Usufructuary of undivided half.]— The unsufructuary of an undivided half of an immovable has a right of action in trespass. Martin v. Campbell, 23 Que. S. C. 522

Water percolating into lands, buildings and cellar — Inamage to building by vibration caused by ears on railway siding —No damage proved.] — Plaintiff brought action to recover $2,000 damages, for water alleged to have percolated from a ditch along defendants' railway siding to their planing mill, into the lands, buildings and cellar of plaintiff, and for $1,700 damages to her building by vibration caused by cars on said siding.—Britton, J., held, that no damage by water or vibration was proved and no negligence was shewn against defendants; that defendants were not trespassers, and dismissed the action with costs. Gattie v. Eaton & Son (1910), 17 O. W. R. 203, 2 O. W. N. 167.

Woodland—Title — Constructive possession under color of—Sufficiency of acts—Pretended sale to avoid liability.]—In an action for trespass to woodland by cutting, it appeared that both plaintiff and defendant claimed under deeds of the locus from the same original grantor, but that plaintiff stille was prior in point of time.—Defendant detailed isolated acts of cutting in various years, many of them matters of small moment, which may have been unknown to the real owner, and also gave evidence to shew that he had at times turned his cattle out to roum and feed in the woods:—Held, that the acts shewn were insufficient to establish such actual or constructive possession as to har plaintiff's claim.—Bentley V. Pepperd, 33 S. C. R. at p. 446, and Wood V. Lefflanc, 34 S. C. C. 627, as to constructive possession under colour of title followed.—Held, also, that defendant could not escape liability for the cutting by an alleged sale of the land to a third person, it appearing that such sale was not a bona fide transaction, but a scheme to avoid liability, and that the real transaction was an authority from defendant to do the cutting. Grue v. Davidson, 43 N. S. R. 242, 6 E. L. R. 400.

Wrongful and wilful — Damages — Mode of assessment.]—Where in an action of trespass, the judgment is that the trespass was wrongful and wilful, the assessment of damages must be on the basis of such finding, and not as if the trespass was done innocently or bona fide, Union Bank of Canada v. Ridrau Lumber Co., 22 C. L. T. 114, 3 O. L. R. 263.

TRESPASS TO PERSON.

Arrest and search — Reasonable and probable cause—Post office — Decoy letter.] —The appellant, a letter carrier employed by the post office department at Montreal, was intrusted with the delivery of two decoy letters, for the purpose of testing his honesty. Each of the letters contained a small sum of money. One of them bore a non-existent address, the other a real address. The latter was delivered, but the former, under the rules of the department, should have been entered in the book kept at the post office for that purpose, and the letter should have been returned by the carrier to the post office. There being no entry of this letter in the post office book, after the usual time for making such entry had elapsed, the appellant was detained and searched by the respondent, a detective, acting under the instructions of the post office office department. The letter not being found on the appellant, he was released. On the following day the letter was returned to the post office \(\subseteq \text{-Held}, \) (affirming the dispositif of the judgment in 20 Que. S. C. 549, with a modification of the considerants) that the appellant having violated the rules of the post office department, by failing to enter the letter bearing a non-existent address in the book provided for that purpose, there was reasonable and probable cause for detaining and searching him, and that his action for damages against the respondent, in the absence of evidence that the respondent had made an improper and illegal use of his authority in the manner in which he effected such detention and search, and subsequent release, could not be maintained. 2. A letter is a post letter although directed to a fictitious or non-existent address. Mayer v. Vaughan, 11 Que. K. B. 340.

Pleading — Allegations as to character.]
—In an action for damages for trespass or aggravated assault, allegations concerning the respective characters of the plaintiff and defendant will be struck out of the record, upon inscription in law, as being useless and not pertinent to the issue. Chénier v. Martin, 25 Que. S. C. 324.

1. CAUSE LIST.

Case tried out of its turn in absence of party — New trial.]—See Milligan v. Crocket, 36 N. B. R. 351.

Priority — Action for pension.] — An action for an alimentary pension will not be given priority upon the list for trial. Brodeur v. Moreau, 6 Q. P. R. 437.

2. COPY OF PLEADINGS FOR JUDGE.

Dispensing with — Setting down.]— The copy of pleadings required by art. 295, C. P., is for the use of the Judge alone; and where the Judge of the district had informed the advocates and prothonotary of that district that he did not require this copy, an inscription made without was held valid. Menier v. Whiting, 18 Que. S. C. 113.

Necessity for.] — The record for the Judge fulfils the requirements of the law if it contains sufficient of the pleadings and proceedings for the information of the Judge, and it is not necessary to give him a copy of a reply or of a rejoinder which contains only a denial of the facts alleged. County of Nicolet v. Toussignant, 9 Que. Q. B. 350.

Setting down without.] — Notwithstanding Art. 295, C. P., which provides that no cause may be placed upon the list until a copy of the plendings has been produced at the record office for the use of the Judge presiding at the trial, the inscription of a case upon the list without such production will not be set aside upon motion, such copy not being imperatively required by the enactment, and the Judge in like cases being able to exercise his discretion in the application of Art. 295. Menier v. Divers, 2 Que. P. R. 389.

3. EXCLUSION OF WITNESSES.

Evidence — Parties to action.] — The mere fact that a party intends to give evidence does not entitle the other party to call for his exclusion as in the case of an ordinary witness. If a party has been wrongfully excluded, it is not necessary for him to shew that he was substantially prejudiced thereby in order to get a new trial. Quare, in case of harmless exclusion. Bird v. Vieth, 7 Brit. Col. L. R. 31.

Reservation of judgment—New trial.]
—The evidence was taken and the argument heard before Rose, J., who died without having given judgment:—Held, that the ordinary course would be to have the action set down for argument before a Divisional Court on the evidence already taken, but that there was no power to make such an order, either in Court or Chambers, except on consent. Wellbanks v. Conger, 12 P. R. 354, distinguished. The defendant not consenting, no order could be made, and the cause must go down to trial again. Clarke v. Trask, 21 C. L. T. 166, 1 O. L. R. 207.

5. JURY TRIAL.

Act of commerce — Hire of machines
—Action for breach of contract—Damages —Injunction.]—The leasing of machines to a manufacturer for the purposes of his industry is an act of commerce, and the lesses in an action against him by the lessor for damages for breach of the covenants in the lease has a right to a trial by jury, according to the terms of article 421 et seq., C. P. C.—A claim for an injunction in addition to damages does not change the nature of the action, and is no obstacle to its being tried by a jury. Brunet v. United Shoe Machinery Co., 15 Que. K. B. 295.

Action against municipal corporation — Non-repair of street — Judicature Act, s. 103.—Delay in moving—Costs.]—Injuries caused by the negligent use of a steam roller belonging to a municipal corporation and operated by a contracting company on a street of the former, are not caused through non-repair of the street; and a motion by the defendants, under s. 104 of the Judicature Act, to strike out a jury notice in an action to recover damages for injuries so caused, was refused. Because of the long delay in moving the costs were made costs to the plaintiff in any event. Kirk v. City of Toronto, 24 C. L. T. 62, 7 O. L. R. 30, 2 O. W. R. 1138.

Action against municipal corporation — Non-repair of street — Jury notice —Striking out.]—By s. 104 of the Judica-without a jury. accident to the plaintiff was caused by the negligent construction of a certain pavement, which was built on an incline, and made with an exceedingly smooth granite finish, at all time dangerous to pedestrians, and when moist rendered even more dangerous than when dry through the faulty, improper, and negligent construction thereof. The Master in Chambers decided that, secundum allegata, the action was for non-repair, which he defined as meaning any omission of duty on the part of the municipality which makes the highway unsafe. Making a new road or walk defectively and leaving it in such unsafe condition would seem to be non-repair, within the words of the statute, as interpreted by the costs. The jury notice was therefore struck out. Armour v. Town of Peterborough, 25 C. L. T. 283, 5 O. W. R. 630, 10 O. L. R. 306.

Action against municipal corporation — Non-repair of streets — Obstruction. — An action for damages for injuries caused by runaway horses which were frightened by a steam roller, left standing on a highway, is an action based on an act of misfeasance by the defendants, and not on the non-repair of the highway, and the plaintiff is entitled to have it tried by a jury. Order of the Master in Chambers, 2. O. W. R. 1115, reversed. Clemens v.
33, 3. O. W. R. 73.

Action against municipal corporation — Non-repair of streets — Obstruction—Amendment. Read v. City of Toronto, 4 O. W. R. 310.

Action for damages—Amount claimed—Interest.]—An order for trial by jury will not be made in an action to recover $400 damages, even when there is an additional claim for interest upon the amount of damages sought to be recovered for such interest is altogether casual, and depends upon the judgment which may be granted or refused, and only runs from the date of the judgment. D'Helleneourt v. La Patrie Publishing Co., 9 Que. P. R. 14.

Action for damages for closing streets — Injury to business — Shutting off access to factory.]—Damages caused to a manufacturer by the closing of streets bounding his factory and giving access to it, although his works and business are affected by it and it affords ground for a personal action, are not damages resulting from personal wrong; or torts or quasitoris to personal property, within the meaning of Art. 421. C. P. C.; and therefore a person suing for such damages has no right to a trial by jury. Montreal Brewing Co. v. City of Montreal, 15 Que. K. B. 207.

Action for damages for illegal seizure — Trespass—King's Bench Act, s. 59.]—Under s. 59 of the King's Bench Act, a party complaining of an illegal seizure of his goods has a right to have his action tried by a jury unless he expressly waives such right.—That the act complained of might have been properly characterised as a trespass will not affect the right to a trial by jury, for every illegal seizure is a trespass, although there may be a trespass without a seizure. Bartlett v. House Furnishing Co., 4 W. L. R. 567, 16 Man. L. R. 350.

Action for damages for negligence—King's Bench Act, R. S. M. 1992, c. 40, s. 59—Discretion.] — The plaintiff's claim was for damages for the loss of an arm in consequence of being run over by a car of the defendants, which he alleged was going at excessive speed, without a fender, and without the gong being rung to warn him. On his application, under s. 59 of the King's Bench Act, R. S. M. 1992, c. 40, a Judge ordered that the action should be tried by a jury, on the grounds that the principal issues to be tried were issues of fact, and that a jury would be more likely to assess the proper damages in case of a verdict for the plaintiff than a Judge—Held, that the judicial discretion exercised by the Judge in this case should not be interfered with. Morrison V. Robinson, S. Man. L. R. 213, Use of the V. Winnipe, Electric Rungley, and Bergman, v. mith, 11 Man. L. R. 364, discussed and distinguished. Griffiths v. Winnipeg Electric Ruc. Co. 5 W. L. R. 149, 371, 16 Man. L. R. 512.

Action for damages for personal injuries — Non-repair of highway.]—A plaintiff who complains that he injured himself by falling on a defective sidewalk, that he was beaten by a drunken man while placed in a patrol waggon, and that he was unable to attend to business, can ask for a jury trial, all these causes of action being triable by jury. Larrasey v. City of Montreal, 8 Que. P. R. 429.

Action for deceit — Claim for rescission of term of contract—Abandonment by plaintiff — Amendment—Plaintiff's jury notice allowed to stand. McCloy v. Holliday, 13 O. W. R. 928.

Agreement of a commercial nature—Agreement for removal of snow between a city municipality and a tranear company in a contract pursuant to a by-law. — A covenant or agreement in a contract between a city municipality and a tranear company, pursuant to a by-law granting the privilege to operate tranears on certain conditions, that the company shall pay the city one-half the cost of the removal of snow from the entire street surface, in the streets where tranears pass, is not an agreement of a commercial nature, within the meaning of Art. 421 C. P. Hence, a trial by jury cannot be had in an action brought under the agreement by the city against the company, to recover the cost of removal of snow. Montreal Railway Vo. & Montreal (1909), 19 Que. K. B. 216.

Answer by majority to question submitted — Failure to take objection at time—Recording verdict a unanimous.] In an action for damages for placing a car laden with lumber on the plaintiffs track, whereby a collision occurred and the plaintiffs suffered injury, questions were submitted to the jury, who, without having remained out for four hours, returned the answer of a majority to certain of the questions. The prothonotary read over the answers to the jury, without making reference to whether the answers were unanimous or not, and asked the question, "as you say one so say you all," and, no one objecting, the verdict was entered accordingly: — Held, that this had the effect of making the verdict a unanimous one.—Per Longley, J., that if counsel for the defendants wished to object to the validity of the finding, he should have done so on the spot, when the jury could have been sent back, and having been silent and allowed the verdict to be recorded, he could not afterwards raise the objection. Answers to questions — Inconsistent findings—Mistrial. Nettleton v. Town of Prescott, 10 O. W. R. 944.

Application for — Action for money lent—Joinder of claim — Exception. | — A claim arising from a loan of money by an advocate to a broker is not a debt of a commercial nature, and consequently is not susceptible, under Art. 421, C. C. P., of trial by jury. And where such claim is joined to a demand of a commercial nature the defendant is entitled, under Art. 177, C. C. P., to stay the suit by dilatory exception. Gilman v. Fenvick, 20 Que. S. C. 513.

Application for — Change of venue — Time for — Amendment.]—An application for change of venue and trial by jury after an order made giving leave to amend defence, but before delivery thereof, is premature. Bank of British Columbia v. Oppenheimer, 7 B. C. R. 446.

Application for — Delay in proceeding —Bar.]—A party who has applied for a trial by jury is deprived of the right of proceeding by the expiration of the delay of 30 days from issue joined, if the application has been made by pleading, or from the judgment granting a special application for a trial by jury, if there has been such an application. Copland v. Canadian Pacific Rev. Co., 4 Que. P. R. 163.

Application for — Equitable relief — Questions of fact.] — Action by a former shareholder in a company against T. and the company, the latter being joined as defendant because T. and his brother and partner had a controlling interest in the company, and the consens of the company to be joined as plaintiff could not be obtained. It was alleged that T. while a director of the company had discovered a valuable hed of gold in areas as to which the company held an option to purchase; that the discovery was concealed; and that T. procured a conveyance of the property to himself, and also purchased the shares of the other shareholders, including those of the plaintiff, without disclosing the discovery. These facts were put in issue by T. The relief sought to be obtained was, among other things, a declaration that T. held the areas as trustee for the company, and that the company was entitled to a transfer thereof; also, that the transfer of the shares by the plaintiff to T. should be set aside. The defendant applied for an order to have the issues tried by a jury: O. 342:—Held, that the admitted relation of T. with these properties and to his co-owners and co-partners in the transaction was such as to entitle all others interested in the property to the fullest explanation of the dealings of T. with the officers of the company, and the circumstances under which he and his partner became proprietors of the mine. The inquiry could be more effectively made in a trial before a Judge, as in other equitable proceedings, than before a jury. The application was dismissed. Rood v. Thompson, 22 C. L. T. 36.

Application for — Fraud — Time,]—
There cannot be a trial by jury except in the cases enumerated in Art. 421. C. P. 2.
An action for damages, founded upon fraud and false representations, does not come within any of the classes of actions mentioned in that article. 3. After a motion

Application for — Time.]—A special application to a Judge for leave to exercise the option of having a case tried by a jury, when that option has not been exercised by the declaration or the defence, must be presented to the Judge within the three days which Art. 423 fixes for this purpose, and it will not suffice to give to the opposite party notice of this application within this time.

even when one of three days is a non-juridical day. Canadian Pacific Rw. Co. v. Foster, 12 Que. K. B. 139.

Application for — Time.]—An application for a trial by jury will be received if it is made within three days after issue joined, although the notice thereof was not given a clear day before the return of the motion. Richer v. Shawinigan Water and Power Co., 7 Que. P. R. 71.

Application for — Time — Justice's Court — Adjournment — Continuation of trial before another justice — Security for costs.]—An application for a jury under C. S. c. 60, s. 31, must be made one clear day previous to the trial; and a demand made after a trial had been commenced, and adjourned at the request of the defendant before any substantial progress had been made, is too late. A bond for security for costs under 49 V. c. 53, approved of by a justice who has been called upon to continue a trial commenced before the justice who issued the first process, and who was unable by reason of illness to conclude the trial, is sufficient. Temperance and General Life Assec. Co. of North America v. Ingraham, 35 N. B. K. 558.

Application for — Time — Non-juridical day.] — Where the third and fourth days following that upon which issue is joined are non-juridical days, a motion for leave to elect to have a case tried by a jury may be presented on the following juridical day. Morlock v. Webster, 5 Que. P. R. 484.

Application for — Time — Pleading.]
—A plaintiff who is in default for a reply to a plea, may obtain leave to file his reply, but such filing will not have the effect of extending the time to elect for trial by jury, the time therefor having expired on the fourth day after issue joined. Deniger v. Grand Trunk Rw. Co., 5 Que. P. R. 136.

Application for — Trespass.] — To make a case for an order for trial of an action by a jury, all the causes of action must be susceptible of being tried in this exceptional way. 2. An action in which damages are claimed against the defendants for having executed an illegal mandat de perquisition and having entered without warrant the domicil of the plaintiff and having threatened her with criminal prosecution, may be tried before a jury; but if the plaintiff claims, besides, damages on account of being deprived of the use of certain personal property, that cause of action takes away the right to trial by jury. Roy v. Dickson, 4 Que. P. R. 357.

Application for trial by jury—Action for negligence causing personal injuries—Grounds for directing jury trial—Decision of referce—Discretion—Appeal to Judge in Chambers—Apeal to Gourt of Appeal—Rule 682 (a)—Practice.]—Rule 682 provides for an order or decision of the Referee in Chambers to a Judge, and clause (a) says that such appeal may be made notwithstationing that the Referce exercised his discretion in making the order or giving the decision. The Referee in Chambers dismissed an application by the plaintiff for an order directing that the action be tried by a jury. The plaintiff the appealed from the Referee's decision, and a appealed from the Referee's decision, and a Judge in Chambers dismissed the appeal, on the ground that the discretion exercised by the Referee should not be interfered with. The plaintiff appealed to the Court of Appeal from the order of the Judge in Chambers:— Held, that the Court of Appeal was in the same position as the Judge in Chambers, and was at liberty to review the discretion exer-cised by the Referee, and decide whether the action should or should not be tried by a jury. The 4 members of the Court were divided in opinion as to whether the case was or was not a proper one for trial by jury. The action was to recover damages for personal injuries sustained by the plaintiff by falling on a slippery floor in the defendants' store, where she was employed as a clerk owing to the negligence of the defendants, as she al-leged:—Held, per Howell, C.J.A., that it was a doubtful point whether or not the case came within the Workmen's Compensation for In-juries Act (though it had been ruled by a Jurges Act (though it and been ruled by Judge, whose decision was not appealed from, that it did not); if it did come within the Act, the case must be tried by a jury; if it did not, there was a discretion to order a jury. It must appear that there would be conflicting testimony, and that the question of assessing the damages would be a complicated one. The facts raised an issue akin to those which the legislature had declared should be tried by a jury, thereby establishing a policy as to the trial by a jury.—Per Richards, J.A., that a Judge could deal with the testimony and the damages as well as a jury, and in this particular case no sufficient reason was shewn for having a jury trial. Per Perdue, J.A., that, while an appeal may be made to a Judge from a discretionary order made by the Referee, on the hearing of such an appeal the Judge should follow the same rule that is observed by the Court when dealing with an appeal from an order made by a Judge in regard to a matter within his discretion, viz., not to interfere unless the order appealed from is clearly wrong; and, as no attempt had been made to shew that the Referee had acted upon a wrong principle, or upon a wrong ground, in refusing the order, and no special reason had been shewn by the plaintiff why the case should be tried by a jury, the Re-feree's decision should not be interfered with. Per Cameron, J.A., agreeing with Howell, C.J.A., that the case was one properly triable by a jury. Hewitt v. Hudson's Bay Co. (1911), 17 W. L. R. 61, Man. L. R.

Challenge to array — Disqualification—Interest of sheriff—Ratepayer—Notice—Venire.]—It is no ground for a challenge to the array that the jury was summoned by a coroner who was the deputy sheriff of the county who was disqualified by reason of being a ratepayer in the town the corporation whereof were the defendants in the action, or that the coroner summoned the jury under a notice by the clerk of the circuits, pursuant to s. 18 of c. 126, C. S. N. B. 1905, and no venire was issued. Mimore v. Town of Woodstock, 3 E. L. R. 204, 38 N. B. R. 133.

Claim and counterclaim.]—Where the claim is such that it cannot by reason of R. 170 of the Judicature Ordinance (C. O. 1898 c. 21), be tried by a jury, and there is a counterclaim which, if the defendant had sued in a separate action, he would have been entitled to have tried by a jury:—Held, that if the counterclaim arises out of the same transactions as the claim, they must be tried together; and in that event the defendant, having accepted the forum chosen by plaintiff, a jury cannot be allowed. Friel v. Stinton, 5 Terr. L. R. 252.

Composition of — Jury de medietate lingua.] — A jury composed exclusively of persons speaking the French or English language can only be had upon the application of either party and if the opposite party does not object; otherwise it will be refused, even if both parties speak the same language and are of the same origin. Martin v. Frères de la Charité de St. Vincent de Paul, 9 Que. P. R. 381.

Composition of — Jury de medicate lingua.]—Where the parties to an action are of the same race and speak the same language, a Judge will grant the request of one of them that the jury shall be exclusively composed of persons speaking the same language, whether French or English.—Semble, that a procedure statute (in this case a statute modifying the right to trial by jury) is applicable to causes pending at the time assent is given to it. Judgment in Martin V. Frères de la Charité de 8t. Vincent de Paul, 9 Que. P. R. 381, reversed. Frères de la Charité de 8t. Vincent de Paul, 9 Que. P. R. 304.

Consent of parties to filing of the plea long after the usual delay has the result of prolonging for 30 days from the date it was filed the delay within which the defendant could proceed upon his option for a jury trial. 8t. Paul Electric Light & Power Co. v. Quesnel (1910), 12 Que. P. R. 158, 17 R. I. n.s. 122.

De medietate Hinguae. I—If one of the parties is a corporation and objects to a jury of the same language, the Court must order a jury de medietate linguae. Beaulieu v. Montreal St. Rv. Co. (1911), 12 Que. P. R. 263.

Default of proceeding on — Certificate—Filing—Time.] — A certificate of the prothonotary attesting that a party who has demanded a trial by jury has made default in proceeding upon his demand will be struck out of the record if it is filed before the expiry of thirty days from the joining of the issue. Mathers v. City of Montreal, 3 Que. P. R. 382.

Delay in proceeding — Terms—Jury—Postponement—Practice — Dismissed for seant of prosecution.]—In the Yukon Territory the rules and practice as to the trial of actions which would prevail in a more settled community cannot be enforced, the conditions being entirely different. It is the endeavour of the Court to suit its rulings to the conditions prevailing, and, so far as possible, to accommodate suitors and witnesses. Cases are often heard in part at one time and adjourned to suit the convenience of witnesses and suitors—An action to establish a partnership in a mining venture may be tried by a jury, if either party desires it, and the Court has no power to dispense with the jury—The plaintiff being in default under Rule 170 (2) for not serving notice of trial within 6 weeks after the close of the pleadings, the defendant moved to dismiss the action for want of prosecution, and the plaintiff moved to postpone the trial, on account of the absence of G., a man decount of the absence of G., a man was worn may, could not be obtained until July. The plaintiff intended to ask for a jury:—Held, that, if the plaintiff desired the evidence of G., she must be put upon terms to proceed without a jury, and the trial must go on within 10 days, and a postponement would be allowed till July to take the evidence of G.; but, if these terms were not accepted, the trial must proceed at once, with or without a jury as the plaintiff might elect, and no postponement would be granted; in default of the plaintiff proceeding to trial, in any case, within 10 days, the action to be dismissed. Morgan v. Knorr (1910), 14 W. I. R. 230.

Delays to bring the case to trial— C. P. 442.]—A party, by allowing a delay of more than 30 days to elapse, from date at which a case stands ready for trial without preceeding to bring on the trial, is, by the sole operation of law, deprived of his right to a jury trial. Osifuraka v. MacDonell (1910), 12 Que. P. R. 29.

Depositions under commission—Use of by jury—Nect trial.]—On the trial of an action on a promissory note, the evidence of a witness taken under a commission was, subject to the objection of counsel, given to the jury and by them taken to the jury room when they retired to consider as to their verdict:—Held, that the practice was not usual, and was not to be commended, but, as the incident could not have had a prejudicial effect, it was not a ground for a new trial. Royal Bank of Canada v. Hale, 37 N. B. R. 47.

Different causes of action—Damages and settlement—C. P. §21,1—No right to *n jury trial can be had unless the whole of the plaintiff's action is susceptible of being tried in that manner, and there cannot be two trials of the same case. So if plaintiff's action is based on damages said to have been suffered while in the employ of the company, and on an agreement between the parties and under which settlement of plaintiff's claim was arrived at, there can be no jury trial, the first ground alone being triable by jury. Mc-Kinstry V. Ivroi (1910), 12 Que P. R. 195.

Diligence required to avoid the loss of the right to a trial of this nature.]—In order to avoid being deprived of the right to a trial by jury, the party who has obtained it must, within the thirty days following the joinder of the issues, not only take one of the steps required for the trial but every other proceeding necessary for the commencement of the trial. Huard v. Landrieux (1910), 37 S. C. (Que.) 478.

Direction to — Submission of questions — Scientific investigation — New trial—Exceptions to charge—Exclusion of jury.)—In an action by a ship owner against a tug owner for damages for negligence on the part of the tug in allowing the ship to drift ashore while attempting to two her from a dangerous position, the Judge in his charge to the jury explained the law applicable to the issues, but he did not point out to the jury the bearing of the facts in evidence upon the questions to be determined:—Held, that the charge was incomplete and was misunderstood by the jury and that there must therefore be a new trial. The Judge is bound to submit questions to the jury if requested to do so. Per Hunter, C.J.: (1) A jury is not suited to try a dispute involving questions as to what were the proper nautical manœuvres to be performed under peculiar conditions, and the new trial should be held before a Judge without a jury. (2) The Court has jurisdiction to order a new trial without a jury, although the appellant in his motion for a new trial does not so ask.—Per Martin, J.: (1) It is the duty of the Judge under s. 86 of the Supreme Court Act, 1904, to instruct the jury upon all leading groups of evidence and apply to them the law as affecting the issues arising out of such evidence. (2) The jury should not be excluded from the court room during the discussion on an application by counsel for further direction by the Judge. (3) The plaintiffs have an inherent right to a jury, and mere complexity of fact is no ground for depriving them of that right. Alaska Packer's Association v, Spencer, 24 C. L. T. 361, 10 B. C. K. 473.

Disagreement — Motion for nonsuit— Negligence of master—Death of servant — Action for damages. Rogers v. Empire Limestone Co., 3 O. W. R. 788.

Disagreement — Fraud — Judgment by Court.]—On the second trial of an action on a promissory note, where the defence alleged fraud on the part of the plaintiffs in obtaining the indorsement, the jury disagreed. Plaintiffs then moved for judgment on the ground that there was no evidence of fraud, and the motion was refused:—Held, that no jury could properly find fraud, and it was desirable, especially in view of the first abortive trial, that the judgment should now be entered which should have been entered at the trial. Yorkshire Guarantee and Securities Corporation v. Fulbrook, 9 B. C. R. 270.

Disqualification of juror — Setting aside verdict.]—If a juror on the trial of a cause is allowed without challenge to act as such on a subsequent trial, that is not per see a ground for setting aside the verdict on the latter. Dunsmuir v. Lowenberg, Harris & Co., 24 C. L. T. 117, 34 S. C. R. 228.

Disqualification of jurors — Grounds for new trial—Misdirection—Rejection of evidence.]—The fact that a juror was related to the plaintiff's wife, which was not known to either party or their attorneys at the time of the trial, and that two other jurymen were open to challenge on the ground that they had not the necessary property qualification, are not grounds for a new trial.—Telling the jury in an action of replevin that if there is any question about the defendant's possession of the property replevied it was settled by the record of the return at the time of replevying, is misdirection and a ground for a new trial, though there is other evidence amply justifying the finding of possession.—A statement of a person, through whom a plaintiff claims, made to a stranger, not in the presence of the plaintiff, and before the transfer to the plaint tiff, that he, the predecessor in title, was not the owner of the property in question, is evidence as a declaration against interest, and its rejection is ground for a new trial. Lloyd v. Adams, 37 N. B. R. 590.

Effect on future trial.]—A jury notice is not a notice of trial, but one changing the mode of trial. If given in sufficient time it assigns the case to the jury list of trials, and when once given makes the case a jury case, at any time or times when the trial comes on, unless the case be an equitable one, or the parties agree to a trial without a jury. Hackett v. Rorke, 37 N. S. R. 435.

Equitable action — Discretion — Review.)—Where the action is of an equitable nature, the Judge ought not to grant an application for a jury without substantial reasons, and where he exercises his discretion and grants a jury, his discretion is reviewable. Colonial Investment Co. v. Ledbetter, 40 N. S. R. 504.

Exclusive jurisdiction of Chancery—Legal and equitable issues.] — The plaintiffs' claim was to enforce a charge against the defendant's lands and for a personal order or judgment for immediate payment of the sum for which they asserted the charge:—Held, not such an action as would have been, before the Administration of Justice Act of 1873, within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery, within s. 103 of the Judicature Act, R. S. O. c. 51. There being, therefore, legal and equitable issues raised, and notice for a jury given, Rule 551 applied, and the action should be entered for trial at a jury sittings. Savyer v. Robertson, 20 C. I. T. 254, 19 P. R. 172.

Exhausting panel — Talesmen—Juror treated by agent of party — New trial.] — Where the jury panel has been exhausted by reason of some of the jurors being out in another case, the presiding Judge may direct talesmen to be summoned.—Treating one of the jurors during the progress of the trial by the attorney of one of the parties is ground for a new trial. Nadeau v. Theriault, 2 E. L. R. 135, 37 N. B. R. 498.

Extension of delay — Joinder of issue —C. P. 442.]—A case, in which option has been made for a jury, stands ready for trial, within the meaning of 442 C. P., as soon as the issues are joined, whether within the delays fixed by law or outside such delays when by consent of the parties. St. Paul Light & Power Co. v. Quesnel (1911), 17 R. L. n. s. 122, 12 Q. P. R. 158.

Facts assigned — Inscription on ordinary roll.]—After the facts to be submitted to the jury have been assigned, a party cannot, even if thirty days elapse after such assignment, inscribe the case on the ordinary roll. Kermode v. University of Queen's College, 7 Que. P. R. 368.

Facts assigned — Motion to settle— Peremption.]—Where a party has caused to be served, within the time allowed therefor, notice of a motion to settle the facts to be submitted to the jury, he cannot be deprived of his right to a trial by jury except by the ordinary peremption. Furness, Withy, & Co., Limited, v. Great Northern Rw. Co. of Canada, 7 Que. P. R. 361.

Failure to agree—Dismissal of action.]
—When in an action tried with a jury the presiding Judge holds that there is evidence to submit to the jury and refuses a nonsuit, he cannot, upon the jury disagreeing, himself decide under Rule 780 in the defendant's favour upon his own view of the evidence. Judgment in 30 O. R. 635, 19 C. L. T. 194, affirmed. Floer v. Michigan Central Ru. Co., 20 C. L. T. 204, 27 A. R. 122.

Failure to answer material question—Power of Court to supply—New trial.]—Where the jury, in answering questions submitted to them, fail to answer a material question, upon which their answers to other questions depend, their findings will be set aside and a new trial ordered.—Assuming that the Court has power to supply a finding, on a point not answered by the jury, it will not do so in a case where the evidence is not clear or where it is conflicting. Blois v. Midland Rvc. Co., 39 N. S. R. 242.

Failure to set down in time — Power to give leave to set down—Jurors Act, s. 97 — Amending Act, 2 Edw. VII. c. 14, s. 3. Fleming v. Canadian Pacific Ruc. Co., 5 O. W. R. 588.

Failure to submit question — New trial.—In the trial with a jury of a replevin action, the fact in issue was whether an annual rent, the amount whereof was fixed by an award, was agreed prior to the submission to arbitration to be paid in advance, or whether both the amount of the rent and the time of payment were included in the submission. The ascertainment of this fact was not left to the jury, and pursuant to a general verdict judgment was entered for the defendant:—Held, on appeal, that, in consequence of the non-submission of this question of fact to the jury, there must be a new trial. MacAdam v. Kickbush, 10 B. C. R. 358.

Findings — Menning of negligence — Contributory negligence—Injury at railway crossing — Signals — Evidence — Nonsuit. Moore v. Grand Trunk Rw. Co., 6 O. W. R. 1031.

Findings — Negligence — Failure to agree as to contributory negligence. White v. Canada Atlantic Rw. Co., 3 O. W. R. 840.

Findings as to negligence — Questions as to special grounds—Judge's charge —Nondirection—Misdirection—New trial.]— Upon a trial by jury, the Judge in directing the jury as to the law is bound to call their attention to the manner in which the law should be applied by them according to their findings as to the facts, the extent to which he should do so depending on the circumstances of the case he is trying. And, where the form of the charge was defective in this respect, and, consequently, left the jury in a confused state of mind as to the questions in issue, a new trial was directed. Judgment in Alaska Packers' Association v. Spencer, 10 B. C. R. 473, affirmed; Davies, J., dissenting:—Held, per Nesbitt, J., that in an action founded on negligence it is advisable that specific questions should be submitted to the jury to enable them to state the special grounds on which they find negligence or no negligence. Spencer v. Alaska Packers' Association, 35 S. C. R. 362.

Findings of jury — Effect of—Finding of negligence on one ground—Inference that negligence negatived on other grounds.] — See McGraw v. Toronto Rv. Co., 18 O. L. R. 154, 13 O. W. R. 129.

Findings of jury — Interpretation — Negligence — Contributory negligence—Ultimate negligence—Dunages—Scale of costs.] — Action for damages for personal injuries and for injury to plaintiff's property, defendants' street car having collided with plaintiff's team and cornbinder:—Held, that the proper interpretation of the jury's answers is that plaintiff could by reasonable care have avoided the collision, but that defendants' servants negligent in not stopping the car sooner, whereby plaintiff and his team were dragged a considerable distance, when they received their injuries. It is a case of liability for ultimate negligence. Kooner, Windsor, Essex and Lake Shore Rapid Ruc. Co., 13 O. W. R. 950.

Findings of jury — Questions and answers—Injury caused by defendants' negligence—Question whether plaintiff could have avoided injury by exercising reasonable care —Answer, "he might have "—Construction —Contributory negligence. Badgeley v. Grand Trunk Ruc. Co., 13 O. W. R. 685.

Fixing facts — Special verdict—Judgment after verdict—Motion for judgment—Responsibility—Fault causing death — Viccitin's voluntary act.] — In a jury trial in which the facts have been fixed, and wherein the question is as to the liability of a contractor for death resulting from the victim grasping the handle of a crane which, in swinging round, had come into contact with electric wires heavily charged with a high voltage, an answer in the verdict that the fault chargeable to the defendant was "that he had not taken the necessary precautions to prevent the arm of the derrick from coming into contact with the electric wires," is, as to detail, in sufficient compliance with the requirements of Art. 483 C. P., although it does not state what the precautions were which the contractor should have taken.—The Judge presiding at the trial is bound, after the verdict has been received, to render judgment at once, or after taking the case without there being any necessity to move him by motion or otherwise.—The spontaneous and voluntary act of a passer-by who rusless to the aid of a workman whom he believes to be in danger and who is instantly killed by electricity, as above related, cannot be pleaded as the cause of his death by the party responsible for the accident. Martineau & Dumphy (1909), 19 K. B. (Que.) 339.—Reversed by the Supreme Court.

Formation and challenging of the jury — Supplementary number of jurors called without the consent of the parties—C. P. 448, 449, 460.]—(Reversing Guerin, J.)—The Judge cannot, without the consent of the parties, order the calling of other jurors than those summoned, and if such order is issued at the request of one of the parties without notice to the other party, it will be set aside. Archibald & Cullen (1910), 11 Que. P. R. 363.

General verdict.]—If either party asks that the jury return a general verdict, the jury must do so, unless they are unable to agree. Macleod v. McLaughlin, 13 B. C. R. 16.

General verdict — Questions submitted — Oral contract—Credibility of parties.] — The terms of an oral contract were in question. The plaintiff and defendant, being the only witnesses on the point, each swore positively to his version of the contract. Counsel for each of the parties at the trial proposed certain questions, asking that they be submitted to the jury and objecting to the submission of the questions proposed by the other side. The Judge submitted both sets of questions, but directed the jury that they were at liberty either to answer the questions and thus give a special verdict, or to give a general verdict. The jury gave a general verdict for the plaintiff. On a motion by the defendant to set aside the verdict:—Held, that the question of there being a mistake or no consensus ad idem did not arise, and that the verdict depended on the jury's view of the credibility of the parties, and that therefore, the verdict should not be disturbed. Neuson v. McLean, 2 Terr. L. R. 4.

Grounds for demanding — Damages—Injunction.]—It is not necessary, to authorize a trial by jury, that all the claims made by the plaintiff in a commercial action should be for payment of money. Neither a claim for an injunction accompanying a demand for damages, nor the fact that an interlecutory injunction has been granted, can tak away the right to a jury. Brunet v. Unit. Shoe Machinery Co. of Canada, S. Que, P. R. 9.

Illegal issue of panel of jurors may be quashed on verbal objection and demand. Archibald v. Cullen (1910), 16 R. I., n. s. 382.

Incompetency of jurors.] — A new trial was ordered, upon payment of costs, where it was shewn that one of the jurors was not selected to be of the panel, that another was so deaf that he was not able to hear some of the most important evidence, and that a third was in such friendly relation with the defendants, an incorporated company, as should have induced him to decline to sit on the trial. Cameron v. Ottovae Electric Rw. Co., 20 C. L. T. 304, 32 O. R. 24.

Inconclusive findings — New trial — Negligence.]—The plaintiff's intestate had a contract with the defendant company to repair a bridge, and in an action to recover damages for his death by the defendants' negligence, the jury found, inter alia, that he went on such business on a coal train without any ticket, but with the consent of the officer in charge, and that the latter had no authority, unless by custom, to allow the deceased to travel on the train:—Held, that the findings were inconclusive and that there should be a new trial. Nightingale v. Union Colliery Co., 8 B. C. R. 134.

Inconsistent and unsatisfactory findings — Re-trial. Moore v. Grand Trunk Rw. Co., 5 O. W. R. 211.

Inconsistent findings - Contract New trial.]-In an action for damages for breach of a contract the jury found, answer to questions submitted by the Judge, that the racks furnished under the contract by the plaintiffs, and rejected by the defendants' inspector, were not in accordance with the contract and specifications, but with the contract and specifications, but were in accordance with the sample rack furnished by the defendants on acceptance of the plaintiffs' tender; they also found that the defendants employed a competent inspector and he acted in good faith, and they assessed the damages at $831.70, for which amount a verdict was entered for the plaintiffs:-Held, on a motion to set aside the verdict and enter a verdict for the defendants, that, in view of the findings that the inspector acted in good faith, and that the racks were not manufactured according to the contract and specifications, there must be a new trial. Lawton Co. v. Maritime Combination Rack Co., S6 N. B. R. 604.

Interpleader issue.]—Neither a Judge nor the Court, in the North-West Territories, has power to direct the trial by jury of an interpleader issue. McIntosh v. Shaw, 4 Terr. L. R. 97.

Irregular verdict — Powers of trial Judge—Direction to reconsider.]—In a cause tried with a jury, if the jury brings in an informal, contradictory, or inconsequent verdict, the Judge has the power and it is his duty to point out to the jury the defects in it, to give the necessary explanations, and to order the jury to reconsider and correct it. Joliceur v. Grand Trunk Rue, Co., 34 Que. S. C. 457.

Irregularity — Cause removed from Surrogate Court into High Court—Terms of order removing—Time for filing jury notice. McKenzie v. Shosbotham, 10 O. W. R. 1055.

Irregularity — Claim under Mechanics' Lien Act—Exclusive jurisdiction of Court of Chancery—Claim for immediate payment—Discretion—Striking out. Trussed Concrete Steel Co. v. Wilson, 9 O. W. R. 238.

Irregularity — Ontario Judicature Act, s. 103—Exclusive jurisdiction of Court of Chancery before 1873—Action to set aside contracts for fraud.]—In an action to set aside contracts for fraud and for a return of money paid, the plaintiff filed a jury notice: —Held, that s. 103 above applies and jury notice struck out. Hall v. McPherson, 13 O. W. R. 939.

Irregularity — Specific performance— Counterclaim for deceit—Legal and equitable issues—Striking out jury notice—Discretion. Huron and Bruce Loan Co. v. Evans, 3 O. W. R. 701, 756, 801.

Irregularity — Striking out — Action against municipal corporation—Non-repair of highway. —The plaintiff by her statement of claim in an action to recover damages for injuries sustained by falling into an open sewer dug in the street by the defendants.

alleged that such injuries were caused by the negligence of the defendants in not securely guarding said sewer and making the same safe for passengers using the said street:—Held, that the failure of the defendants to guard the excavation was non-repair within the meaning of s. 104 of the Judicature Act, and the plaintiff's jury notice was struck out. Burns v. Toronto, 8 O. W. R. 867, 13 O. L. R. 109.

Inscription for enquete and merits—Motion to reject—Jury trial—Delays; are they suspended by the death of one party?—Notice of such death.—C. P. 268, 293, 423.]—The death of one of the defendants does not interrupt the delays as regards proceedings to trial, or interfere with the right of the plaintiff to take the necessary proceedings for trial in the absence of any suggestion or notice of such death. Chartrand v. Paquette (1910), 11 Que. P. R. 551, 1910.

Issue — Finding — New trial.]—Where the issue submitted to and found by the jury involves, and as a necessary consequence determines, the issue raised by the pleading, a new trial will not be granted, though the precise point was not submitted. Porter v. Tibbits, 37 N. B. R. 25.

Judge's charge — Misdirection—Error in law. |—The Judge's charge to the jury can be attacked only for errors in law. City of Montreal v. Ryan, 17 Que. K. B. 143.

Judge's charge - Misdirection-View of facts — Assignment of facts dispensed with—General verdict—Additions—Evidence -Damages - Excess.]-Misdirection by the trial Judge on matters of fact affords no ground for a new trial, more particularly when the Judge expressly instructs the jury that they are not bound by his view of the facts.—2. When, in a trial by jury, the facts.—2. When, in a trial by jury, the assignment of facts is dispensed with by consent of the parties, and the jury bring in a general verdict, to which they append a recommendation and an expression of opinion, the Court will not infer that the verdict rests exclusively on these additions, which, in view of all the evidence, could reasonably have been found.—3. In the ab sence of an assignment of facts, the Court cannot apply special rules of law (v.g., respecting employer's liability) to any one or more of the facts proved, to say that a general verdict is wrong. In such a case, the verdict must stand, if there is enough in the whole evidence to support it.—4. When it does not appear that the jury was actuated by improper motives, or was misled, a ver-dict of $2,000 damages to a father for the death of his son is not excessive. Montreal v. Enright, 16 Que. K. B. 353.

Judge's charge—Objection by counsel— Correction by Judge—Subsequent objection to corrected charge — Misdirection.]—See Can. Pac. Rv. Co. v. Hansen, C. R. [1907], A. C. 523.

Judge's charge — Practical withdrawal of case — Evidence — New trial.]—On the trial of an action against a surety the defence was that he had been discharged by the plaintiff's dealings with his principal. The trial Judge directed the jury that the facts proved in no way operated to discharge him, and that while, if they could find any evidence to satisfy them that he was relieved from iiability, they could find for the defendant, he knew of no such evidence, and it was not to be found in the case:—Held, that the disputed facts were practically withdrawn from the jury, and, as there was evidence proper to be submitted and on which they might reasonably find for the defendant, there should be a new trial. Wood v. Rockwell, 27 C. L. T. 236, 38 S. C. R. 165.

Judge's charge — Time for objecting—Statement in writing—Misdirection—Affida-vit.]—A party who desires to object to the direction given to the jury by the trial Judge must formulate his objection at the trial, and indicate in writing the portion of the charge to which he objects, and he will not be permitted to make the objection at a later stage, establishing by affidavit the direction given to the jury which he alleges to be contrary to law. Bélanger v. Larocque, 25 Que. S. C. 463.

Judge's charge to the jury — Mixed questions of law and fact—Quoting judicial opinions.]—In an action (tried by a jury) directed by a carter against the party whom the goods were delivered, for an action which happened to the carter at the moment of delivery, the question to ascertain whether, at that moment, delivery has been made in such a way that the defendant and its employees had been put in charge of the goods delivered, is one of law and of fact which was properly left with the jury. In any event, the Judge's opinion on a question of law, in the course of his charge to the jury, is irregular only in so far as the opi-nion is wrong. There is no irregularity in the fact that the Judge in his charge to the jury, quoted a judicial opinion which was Jury, quoted a judicial opinion which was expressed in an analogous, although not an identical case, with the one in which it was cited from the moment that the point emphasised is applicable. As a consequence, an opinion upon the duties of employers towards their workmen may be cited to shew the precautions to be taken by those who receive delivery of goods which, when being handled, are a source of danger for those engaged in the work. Canada Car Co. v. Poirier, 19 Que. K. B. 140.

Jurox — Affinity — New trial.]—On the trial of this cause a verdict was found for defendant. The foreman of the jury was married to a sister of defendant's wife, and plaintiff moved to set aside the verdict and for a new trial, on the ground that this affinity disqualified the foreman: — Held, (Hensley, J., Hodgson, C.J., and Peters, J., concurring), that the foreman was disqualified, and there must be a new trial. Bevon v. McLeed (1870), 1 P. E. I, R. 297.

Juror treated by defendant's attorney. Nadeau v. Theriault, 2 E. L. R. 135.

Jurors — Same juror sitting on former trial — Challenge — New trial.)—The fact that a member of a special jury was one of the jurors at a former trial is a good ground of challenge at a new trial, but the fact that such a juror served without challenge is not per se a ground for granting a new trial. of iss fact ne of ound that not trial. At the first trial, with a special jury, the plaintiff got a verdict in his favour, and on appeal a new trial was ordered. At the second trial a nonsuit was entered, and on appeal a new trial was ordered. At the third trial, also with a special jury, the plaintiff got a verdict in his favour. Between the second and third trials the defendant changed her solicitors. At the first trial the defendant was in Court, but on account of illness was not present at either the second or the third trial. J. M. was a juror, on the first trial and also on the third trial, but neither the defendant nor her solicitors were aware of the fact until after the conclusion of the trials—Held, refusing a new trial on this ground, that in selecting a special jury it was the duty of the solicitor to ascertain any grounds of challenge, an opportunity to do which is provided by s.-s. 5 of s. 59 of the Jurors Act. Harris v. Dunamuir, 22 C. L. T. 341, 9 B. C. R. 303.

Jury not qualified to assess value of lands expropriated without expert evidence. Beaudry v. Montreal (1858), C. R. 2 A. C. 342, Leave to file — Delay — Short notice of trial — Interpleader issue — Equitable issue — Court of Chancery, O'Connor v. O'Connor, 2 O. W. R. 737, 794.

Libel — Necessity for.]—The effect of s. 102 of the Judicature Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 51, which provides for actions of libel, etc., being tried by a jury, is to dispense with a jury notice being given in such actions, so that a notice of trial is properly given without such notice having been first served; s. 106 not applying to actions of libel, Putterbaugh v. Gold Medal Mfg. Co., 22 C. L. T. 122 3 O. L. R. 250

Loss of right by valid inscription by adverse party for proof and hearing— C. 6. 442.—A party having made option for a trial by jury, proceeded to have the facts defined, but thereafter allowed a delay of over thirty days to elapse without further proceeding. The adverse party moved that he be ordered to make the deposit required by Art. 434, but the motion was dismissed. The adverse party having afterwards inscribed the case for proof and hearing in the ordinary manner, the party desiring the jury trial moved to reject the inscription, there having been no judgment declaring lapse of the right to a jury trial. The Superior Court dismissed the last mentioned motion:—Held, refusing leave to appeal, that the case could be validly inscribed for proof and hearing under the last clause of Art, 442 C. P., even though there had been no judgment declaring the right to a trial by jury to have lapsed.—Landrieux & Huard (1910), 16 R. d. J., 374.

Loss of right to — Within what delay proceedings thereto should be taken—C. P. 442.1—The party who has demanded a jury trial must take proceedings to that end within thirty days from the judgment fixing the facts to be submitted to the jury, otherwise his right to such a trial will be forfeited; in default of the party who demanded a jury trial doing so, the opposite party may inscribe the case for proof and hearing in the ordinary way. Landrieux v. Huard (1910), 12 Que. P. R. 198.

Misdirection — Judge's opinion of evidence. I—It is not misdirection for the Judge to tell the jury his own opinion on the evidence before them. In his charge to the jury the Judge stated that he himself would pay very little attention to certain corroborative evidence adduced by the defendants, but he also told them that the matter was entirely for them to decide:—Held, not misdirection, Harry v. Packers S. S. Co., 10 B. C. R. 258.

Misdirection — Non-production—Inference — New trial.]—In an action involving disputed accounts, it is not a ground for a new trial that the Judge told the jury they might draw inferences, favourable or unfavourable to the plaintiff's case, from the fact that he refused to produce, under notice, documentary evidence in his possession, which, it was admitted, contained some account of the transaction in dispute. Hale v. Leighton, 36 N. B. R. 256.

Motion for directions — Preservation of right to trial by jury.]—A demand by way of motion to settle the faces to be placed before the jury, as provided in Art. 424, C. P. C., even when it is not followed by an adjudication thereon, is a proceeding within the meaning of Art. 442, which has the effect of relieving the party who makes it within the time prescribed from the forfeiture of the right of trial by jury provided by that article. Furness, Withy & Co., Limited v. Great North. Rv. Co., 29 Que. S. C. 11.

Motion for striking of panel of jurors served and entered into Court within the 30 days following that on which the case was rendy for trial is not too late, because it was argued after the expiration of said delay, Beaulieu v. Montreal St. Ric. Co. (1911), 12 Que. P. R. 263.

Motion to reject option for a jury trial — C. P. 198, 214, 423, 442.]—A motion to define the facts for a jury trial duly served, but which was never presented, cannot be considered a proceeding to bring on the trial. The filing of a reply to an answer, which reply contains no affirmative allegation of a new fact, does not interrupt the delays within which a motion to define the facts for a jury trial must be presented; the issues were joined by the filing of the answer. Simard v. Taschereau. 11 Que. P. R. 200,

Motion to strike out — Discretion.]
—Striking out a jury notice is a matter of discretion, and should be confined strictly to cases where no Judge would try the issues on the record with a jury. Referred to the trial Judge. Dyment v. Dyment, 13 O. W. R. 461.

Motion to strike out — Discretion exercised before trial — Equitable issue — Judicature Act, s. 103 — Con. Rule 551.]—Since the Rules providing for the holding of separate jury and non-jury sittings, it is desirable, at any rate where the venue is laid in Toronto, to have it settled at as early a stage of the action as possible, whether the case is to be tried with a jury or without a jury.—Montgomery v. Ryan, 13 O. L. R. 297, approved.—In this action the plaintiff sought to set aside a certain agreement as fraudulent and void as against the plaintiffs and to have the plaintiffs declared entitled to a one-eighth share in the property in question; and, in the alternative, a declaration that the plaintiffs were entitled to a one-eighth share in certain stock; or damages and other relief:—Held, that this was an action which it was proper to try without a jury. Saveyer v. Robinson, 19 P. R. 172, distinguished. Clisdell v. Lovell, 10 O. W. R. 609, 925, 15 O. L. R. 379.

Motion to strike out — Discretion exercised before trial — Place of trial outside of Toronto — Equitable defence.] — The discretion of a Judge in Chambers in Striking out a jury notice, in an action to be tried outside of Toronto, was held to have been properly exercised where the action was brought by the executors of a deceased mortgagee upon the covenant contained in the mortgage deed, and the defence was that the written documents, the mortgage deed and the deed of conveyance to the mortgages, did not express the true agreement between the parties. — Semble, per Meredith, C.J.C.P., that the rule laid down in Montgomery v. Ryan, 13 O. L. R. 297, might well be extended to all cases, whether to be tried in Toronto or elsewhere.—Nemble, also, that the facts alleged in the defence would not have been admissible under the plea of non est factum; that the defence was really an equitable one, involving rectification of the instrument sued upon; and in that case the jury notice would be irregular. Bryans v. Moffatt, 10 O. W. R. 1027, 15 O. L. R. 220.

Motion to strike out — Discretion exercised before trial — Separate sittings for jury and non-jury cases.]—The practice where the venue in an action is laid out of Toronto is, except in rare cases, to leave the matter to be dealt with by the trial Judge; but in Toronto, where there are separate sittings for jury and non-jury cases, the latter being practically a continuous sitting throughout the year, the practice has been adopted, in order to prevent the jury list from being unduly incumbered, to strike out before the trial the jury notice in cases which properly ought to be tried without a jury.—In an action on a promissory note, which involved an investigation of accounts, and therefore was properly triable without a jury, an order was made in Chambers directing such notice to be struck out. Montgomery v. Ryan, 8 O. W. R. 855, 13 O. L. R. 297.

Motion to strike out — Equitable issues. Ontario Bank v. Stewart, 2 O. W. R. 811, 819.

Motion to strike out — Judge in Chambers — Common law action — Practice — Separate sittings for trial of jury and non-jury cases — Avoidance of delay. Hurdman v. Gall Lumber Co., 14 O. W. R. 143.

Motion to strike out — Judge in Chambers — Judge at trial — Practice — Convenience, — Held, reversing an order of Riddell, J., in Chambers, striking out a jury notice, that in an action of merely common law character the determination as to the method of trial should not be taken out of the hands of the trial Judge; and that, if he determines that an action on the jury list should be tried without a jury, he should himself try it, because the litigants are entitled to have their cause tried in its order upon the list. The reasons for letting the determination rest with the trial Judge prevail over those of convenience and expedience applied peculiarly to actions tried at Toronto.—Review of the previous decisions. Stavert v. McNaught, 18 O. L. R. 370, 13 O. W. R. 1105.

Mutual insurance — Policy at a fixed premium — Commercial matter — C. P. 42L. C. C. 247L.]—A mutual insurance company which underwrites policies at a fixed premium and for a fixed period, does a commercial act by issuing such policies and such policies may form the basis for a jury trial. Hunt v. La Provinciale Assec. Co., 11 Que. P. R. 222.

New panel of jurors will not be granted a parte, when a panel has become exhausted. This can only be done by motion in writing and with consent of other party. Archibald v. Cullen (1910), 16 R. L. n. s. 382.

Non-direction — Onus — Substantial miscarriage — New trial.]—Where a verdict is attacked for non-direction, the onus is upon the attacking party to shew that the proper instructions were asked for and refused. And where the charge of the trial Judge has placed the case as a whole correctly before the jury, and no injustice has been done by the verdict, and no substantial miscarriage of justice has resulted, a new trial will not be allowed for non-direction which has not materially affected the result. Burrill v. Sanford, 37 N. S. R. 535.

Notice — Action for deceit — Claim for rescission of term of contract — Abandomment by plaintiff — Amendment,—Plaintiff filed a jury notice. On motion to strike out same he proposed to abandon claim for equitable relief. This was permitted, jury notice to stand, all necessary amendments to be made. McClay v. Halliday, 13 O. W. R. 928.

Notice - Striking out - Irregularity -Action against municipal corporation—Non-repair of sidewalk.]—Plaintiff by his statement of claim in an action for damages for injuries alleged to have been sustained "by reason of a hole or depression in a boulevard caused by the negligence of defendants taking up the old sidewalk and not filling in." served a jury notice and defendants moved to have it set aside under O. J. A. s. 104. The Master in Chambers struck out the jury notice but the Chancellor restored the notice preferring to suspend matters until the stage of trial was reached .- Divisional Court held, that they could not say that the legislature in s. 104 of the Judicature Act intended to restrict its application to non-Appeal allowed and the jury nofeasance. tice struck out. Costs in the cause.—Judgment of Boyd, C., reversed and order of Master in Chambers, 15 O. W. R. 544, 1 O. W. N. 544, restored, Brown v. Toronto (1910), 16 O. W. R. 118, 21 O. L. R. 230. Followed in Jackson v. Toronto (1910), 16 O. W. R. 931, 2 O. W. N. 24.

Notice — Striking out — Order of Judge at jury sittings — Transfer to non-jury list, Bilsky v. Peterson Lake Silver Cobalt Mining Co. (1910), 1 O. W. N. 615.

Notice of—Motion by defendants to set adde—Ground, omission to name place of trial in statement of claim—Order allowing plaintiff to amend by naming North Bay as place of trial and striking out jury notice if plaintiff consents, if not amended to be allowed, and jury notice to stand, but defendlowed, and jury notice to stand, but defendants to be at liberty to move to postpone trial if unprepared—Costs to defendants in any event. Turcotte v. Finkelstein (1911), 18 O. W. R. 912, 2 O. W. N. 952.

Notice of trial—Jury sittings—Work-men's Compensation for Injuries Act, s. 2 (c)—"Workmen"—Clerk in store—Pleading—Right to jury—King's Bench Act, s. 2 (c).]—The plaintiff alleged that she was a clerk in the service of the defendants in their store, and was injured while serving customers, by reason of the negligence of the defendants or of some one in their service in authority. The plaintiff sought to recover damages from the defendants for her alleged injuries, but did not directly seek them under the Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act, though she alleged in the statement of claim that she was conforming to the orders of the defendants' manager, etc. Assuming that the action was for the recovery of damages under the Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act, the plaintiff, relying on the King's Bench Act, s. 59, s.-s. 1, gave notice of trial for a jury sittings, without obtaining an order for a jury:—Held, that the plaintiff was not to be regarded as a "workman," within the meaning of s. 2 (c) of the Act, not having alleged any facts from which it could be inferred that she was engaged in manual labour at the time the injuries were manual labour at the time the injuries were sustained; and she was not, therefore, entitled as a matter of right to a jury, Bound v. Lawrence, [1892] 1 Q. B. 226, followed. Order of the Referee setting aside the notice of trial, affirmed. Heneitt v. Hudson's Bay Co., (1910), 15 W. L. R. 372, 20 Man. L. R. 126.

Option for — Failure to bring on trial — Subsequent reply — Motion for act of option.]— When, after making the option for a jury trial in his declaration, the plaintiff allows more than 30 days to chapse from the date on which he should have filed his answer to a plea, without preceeding to bring on the trial, he is deprived of his right to a jury trial, and subsequent production of an answer, whether by consent or otherwise, has not the effect of reviving the lapsed right to a jury trial. A motion praying act of an option already made is not a proceeding to bring on the trial. Asselin v. Montreal Light, Heat and Power Co., 7 Que. P. R. 218.

Option for — Time — Pleading—Vacation.)—If a plea is filed during the long vacation, the plaintiff may reply on the 7th September, from which date the delay for making option for trial by jury will run if the plea is not answered. Belanger v. Montreal Street Ruc. Co., 7 Que. P. R. 272.

Order for special jury — New trial.]
—Pursuant to an order therefor, a trial was had with a special jury; on appeal a new trial was ordered:—Held, that the order for a special jury was not exhausted, and a summons for a special jury on the new trial was unnecessary. Alsaka Packers' Association v. Spencer, 11 B. C. R. 138, 1 W. L. R. 103, 188, 567.

Order for special jury — New trial— Change of circumstances.]—Pursuant to an order therefor a trial was had with a special jury; on appeal a new trial was ordered:—
Held, per Irving and Morton, JJ., Hunter, CJ., dissenting, that the order for a special jury was not exhausted by the abortive trial, and that, as there had been no amendment of the pleadings or change in the circumstances, the order was not provisional in its nature. Per Hunter, CJ., dissenting.—Any purely procedure order which does not touch the merits of the case, or the rights of the parties, can be disregarded or vacated if the circumstances have changed or the ends of justice require it, although it has not been appealed against; and, as there were issues involving scientific investigation, the trial should be had without a jury. Alaska Packers' Association v. Spencer, 11 B. C. R. 280, I W. L. R. 103, 188, 567.

Order for trial by jury — Jurisdiction of Referee in Chambers—Under Rules 27 and 29 of the King's Bench Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 40, the Referee in Chambers may exercise the power of ordering the trial of an action by a jury, given to a Judge by s.-s. (b) of s. 59 of the Act. Cameron v. Winnipey Electric Rue. Co., 7 W. L. R. 698, 17 Man. L. R. 475.

Order for trial by jury — King's Bench Act, a. 59 (b.).—Action brought for damages by widow and children of deceased, who had been killed in an accident on defendants' railway. The referee decided that the trial should be by a Judge y Judge and the Court of Appeal. McCormick v. Can. Pac. Rec. Co. (1909), 12 W. L. R. 363.

Order for trial by jury — Manitoba King's Bench Act. s. 59 — Discretion — Negligence — Personal injuries—Damages.] — Plaintiff while rescuing a child of tender years who had wandered on defendant's street railway tracks, was himself struck and injured. He brought this action for damages, Order made for trial by jury. Seymour v. Winnipeg, 11 W. L. R. 679.

Order striking out — Powers of a Judge in chambers — Leave to appeal, See People's Building & Loan Assn. v. Stanley, 22 C. L. T. 254, 4 O. L. R. 90.

Ordinance respecting juries—N. W. T. Act — Damages — Personal injuries.]—The effect of c. 44 of 6 Edw. VII. (Ca.), was to annul the repeal of the North-West Territories Act, so far as Alberta and Saskatchewan were concerned, and the Ordinance respecting Juries is in consequence not in force. Hansen v. Can. Pac. Rw. Co. (1907), 6 Terr. I. R. 420.

Postponement of trial — Same jury.]
—Where there is a postponement of a trial by jury after the jury has been selected, the Court will order that the jury already chosen shall serve upon the postponed date, unless there are serious reasons to the contrary.
Milonas v, Grand Trunk Rw. Co., 7 Que.
P. R. 427.

Power to deprive party of right to jury — Judicature Act, s. 110 — Intra vires. People's Building & Loan Assn. v. Stanley, 2 O. W. R. 122. Private regulations of a company— C. P. 498, para, 2.]—(Reversing Fortin, J.)—It is illegal to admit and allow to be placed before the jury the private regulations and instructions of a company for the guidance of its employees. Klienbrod v. Montreal St. Rw. Co. (1908), 11 Que. P. R. 301.

Proceeding to trial — Time — Extension)—The time which Art. 442, C. P. C., allows for proceeding upon a demand for trial by jury is not extended by the fact that the party who elects for such trial has obtained the issue of a foreign commission returned for less than 30 days, nor by the fact that such party has been allowed to amend one of his pleadings, after the expiration of 30 days from the time that the cause is ripe for trial, that is to say, after issue joined. Foley v. Foley, 17 Que. S. C. 480, 3 Que. P. R. 53.

Qualification of jurors — Age limit.]
—The age limit provided for by s. 1 of the Act respecting Juries, C. S. N. B. 1903 c. 126, operates as a disqualification, and not merely as an exemption. Morgan v. O'-Regan, 38 N. B. R. 399, 4 E. L. R. 573.

Question for jury — Master and servant — Injury to servant — Negligence—Pindings of jury — Casual connection — New trial — Costs.]—Plaintiff received — New trial — Costs.]—Plaintiff received workman, and the jury found negligence, and stated in what the negligence consisted, but because they did not state that such negligence was the cause of plaintiff's injuries a new trial was ordered. The jury when asked whether the defendants through their foreman were gulty of negligence, and it so in what such negligence consisted, were not explicitly directed to confine their findings to such negligence, if any, as, upon the evidence, they should be satisfied had caused the explosion which injured plaintiff. Billiper V. Wilkinson Plough Co., 5 O. W. R. 748, 9 O. L. R. 711.

Questions submitted — Answers by jury — Determination of issue — Verdict — New trial — Questions by counsel — Duty of jury to answer.]—T. & Co., under an arrangement made with B. in 1900, agreed to supply S. with materials to be used in building and repairing houses owned or managed by B. The materials were charged direct to B., and supplied upon his credit. This arrangement continued down to the Sth November, 1902, without any dispute between the parties. T. & Co. alleged that about that time B. requested them for his convenience to change the account and charge all materials got under the arrangement between them to S., to prevent the amount from getting mixed up with his private account with T. & Co., with which S. had nothing to do, and the account was changed in the books accordingly, but without any intention on the part of T. & Co. to alter the liability of B. This arrangement and request was denied by B., and he said, on the other hand, that about the Sth November, 1902, he gave T. & Co. a written notice that he would be no longer liable for goods supplied to S., and that the arrangement between them to that effect of the arrangement between them to that effect of the results of the said on the other hand, that the arrangement between them to that effect of the arrangement between them to that effect of the contraction of the arrangement between them to that effect of the contraction of the properties of the contraction of th was terminated. On the trial of an action by T. & Co. against B, for goods sold and delivered after the 8th November, 1902, the jury were asked: "After the 8th November, 1902, to whom was credit given by Co., to B. or S.?" and they found, to B. They were also asked whether the goods were sold upon the credit of B. or S., and they found, upon the credit of B. They were sold upon the credit of B. or S., and they found, upon the credit of B. They also found, in answer to a question that B. agreed to become liable for the goods supplied subsequent to the 8th November, 1902, and charged in T. & Co.'s books to S. On these findings a verdict was en-tered for the plaintiff for the amount claimed:—Held, per Tuck, C.J., Hanington and Landry, J.J., that these findings were in effect findings that the change in the ac-count was made in the circumstances alcount was made in the crange in the ac-count was made in the circumstances al-leged by T, & Co, at the request of B., and that the notice alleged to have been given by B. terminating his liability was not given; and it was no ground for a new trial. that no distinct questions were left or findings asked on these issues. — Held, per Barker, McLeod, and Gregory, JJ., that, as the questions submitted did not necessarily involve findings upon the issues between the parties, and upon which the defendant's liability must depend, there should be a new trial; that under s. 163 of c. 111 of C. S. N. B. 1903, counsel have the right to require the Judge to submit questions to the jury, and if they are pertinent to the issue it is the duty of the Judge to instruct the jury that they must answer them if they can.—The Court being equally divided, the rule dropped, and the verdict for the plaintiffs stood. W. H. Thorne & Co. Limited v. Bustin, 37 N. B. R. 163. See 37 S. C.

Regularity — Action for damages — Amount under $500 — Statutes — Construction — Application — Repeal. Ledicu v. Roediger (Y.T.), 1 W. L. R. 515.

Retirement of — Evidence for Court alone.]—Trial by jury. The securities, the subject-matter of the action, having been lost after action brought, the plaintiffs were proceeding to prove the loss, when the Judge proposed to allow the jury to retire pending the giving of the evidence. Counsel for the plaintiffs objected:—Held, that on a trial by jury after the plaintiffs' case has commenced the Judge may permit the jury to retire in his discretion while proof is being given of facts with which the Judge alone is concerned. Bank of British Columbia V. Oppenheimer, 20 C. L. T. 370, 7 B. C. R. 448.

Right to a jury — Contract based on a municipal by-law—Infringement of.]—A case is not triable by a jury when it is taken on an infringement of a contract based on a municipal by-law. A municipal by-law is purely an act of administration, excluding all idea of commerce, and the signing of a contract based on said municipal by-law in no way changes the nature of the municipal act. Montreal Terminal Rw. Co. v. Montreal. 11 Que. P. R. 1.

Right to elect for jury — Damages for personal injuries — Incidental damages.] c.c.l.—135. —The damages claimed in an action were principally for personal injuries suffered by the plaintiff by reason of a fall upon a side-walk attributed to the negligence of servants of the defendants, whereby the plaintiff's leg was broken, but incidental damages were also claimed:—Held, that the plaintiff had the right to elect a trial by jury. Armstrong v, Westmount, S Que, P. R. 29.

Right to jury — Action in warranty—Art, et., P.]—Where the corporation of the city of Montreal, being sued in damages for defective sidewalks, bring an action in warranty against a third party, the demand is based on a special right conferred by the city charter, and the plaintiffs in warranty do not sue for personal wrongs. Article 421, C. P., being a restrictive one, there can be no jury trial in such an action in warranty. Churchwardens of the Parish of St. Aguès de Montréal v. Montreal. 10 Que. P. R. 157.

Right to jury — Action to set aside a will—Issues.]—In an action to set aside a will on the ground that it was obtained by fraud and undue influence, the plaintiff asked for a jury:—Held, that the action was one of those referred to in Rule SI, and as such, according to Rule 330, must be tried without a jury. Per Drake, J., that the character of an action is determined by the issues raised in the pleadings rather than by the prayer for relief, Stevart v. Warner, 4 B. C. R. 298, and Corbin v. Lookout Mining Co., 5 B. C. R. 281, approved. Hopper v. Dunsmuir, 10 B. C. R. 17.

Right to jury — Amount claimed for damages — Interest.] — There cannot be a trial by jury in an action for damages to the amount of $1.000, with interest from the day of the commencement of the action. The claim for interest is an accessory demand, like that for costs, and cannot be a factor in determining whether there may be a trial by jury. Bélair v. Dominion Textille Co., 10 Que. P. R. 237.

Right to jury — Contestation under Winding-up Act.1—The right to trial by jury is exceptional and exists only in casea specially provided for by law. Where a contestation is governed by the Winding-up Act, it is not susceptible of trial by jury, Tetrault Shoe Co. v. Kent, 10 Que. P. R. 244.

Right to jury — Duty of Judge.]—The power which a Judge has to take a case away from the jury should be exercised only when it is clear that the plaintiff could not hold a verdict in his favour: if the matter is reasonably open to doubt, the Judge should let the case go to the jury, and then decide, if necessary, whether there is any evidence on which the verdict can be supported. Nightingale v. Union Colliery Co. of British Columbia, 23 C. L. T. 206, 5 B. C. R. 453.

Right to jury — Insurance — Powers of jury—Motion—Costs.]—An action to recover the amount of a policy of insurance issued by a mutual insurance company is not of such a nature that it can be submitted to a jury. 2. The question of the want of jurisdiction of the jury may be raised at any stage of the cause, but if it is raised for the first time in answer to a motion to "fiser les faits," such motion will be dismissed with costs. Montreal Coal and Tocing Co. v. British Empire Mutual Assurance Co., 5 Que. P. R. 283.

Right to jury — Joinder of issue — Expiration of time—Waiver—Pleading.]— Joinder of issue takes place by sole operation of law, on the expiration of delays to file answers or replications. So, when the delay for answering an affirmative plea. or answer to a plea, has expired, issue is joined and the case stands ready for trial by jury, within the meaning of Art. 442, C. P.; and the subsequent filing of a replication by consent will not operate as a waiver of the delay within which proceedings must be taken to bring on the trial. Anderson v. Norvicih Fire Insurance Co., 17 Que. K. B. 361.

Right to jury — Joinder of issue — Subsequent leave to reply—Revival of right to ask for jury.]—Issue is joined by reason of default in replying to a plen; and the right to trial by jury, lost by neglect to demand an act of option within the 30 days following that upon which the plaintiff has been foreclosed of his right to reply to the plen, is not revived by the plaintiff subsequently obtaining leave to file his reply. Vincent v. Montreal Urban Rw. Co., 6 Que. P. R. 289.

Right to jury — Joinder of issue—Time —Waiver.]—A case is ready for trial on the day when issue is joined, either by the filing of a pleading or the foreclosure from filing same. 2. After the right to a jury trial has been forfeited by the expiry of 30 days after a foreclosure, the consent to the filing of a pleading does not constitute a waiver of such forfeiture. Mathews v. Town of Westmount, 6 Que. P. R. 52.

Right to jury — Lapse of time for demanding—Leave to file amended pleading— New right.]—Where a party is permitted to file an amended pleading, he does not thereby acquire again the right to have the cause tried by a jury, if that right has already been forfeited by the expiry of thirty days since issue joined. Montreal Light, Heat and Power Co. v. Dupras, 10 Que. P. R. 114.

Right to jury — Option — Inscription for proof and hearing—Delay.]—The delay of 30 days, within which a party must proceed to bring on a trial by jury, runs from the day of the granting of a motion praying acts of his option for jury trial. 2. A motion for fixing the facts for the jury is a proceeding to bring on the trial, and an inscription for proof and hearing filed by the adverse party, notwithstanding such motion, will be rejected. Morlock v. Webster, 6 Que. P. R. 49.

Right to jury — Option forfeited by lapse of time—Leave to amend pleading — Revival of right.] — Leave granted to a plaintiff to amend his answer to the defendant's plea does not revive his right of option to a trial by jury, which he had declared, but had forfeited by allowing a delay of thirty days to clapse from the date at which the case stood ready for trial. Cf. Anderson v. Norwich Union Insurance Co., 17 Que. K. B. 361. Montreal Light Heat and Power Co. v. Dupras, 18 Que. K. B. 174.

Right to jury — Practice — Demand in pleadings—Time — "Ready for trial" — Amendment.]—A cause stands "ready for trial," under the provisions of Art. 442, C. C. P., upon issue being regularly joined between the parties; and if a party who has made a demand in the pleadings for a jury trial, allows more than 30 days to elapse after the cause so stands ready for trial, without proceeding to bring on the trial, or obtaining an extension of the delay on application to the Court, he is deprived of his right to a jury trial by the sole operation of law. This rule is not affected by the fact that the adverse party, during the 30 days, with the formal consent of the party who demanded a jury trial, withdrew an allegation of one of his pleas. Standard Life Assurance Co. v. Monircal Coal and Towing Co., 13 Que. K. B. 183.

Right to jury — Time for exercising option.]—A motion to compel a party to exercise his option for or against a trial by jury, will be granted even after the expiry of the time fixed by Art. 423, C. P., if it appears that the delay has been for the purpose of accommodating the opposite party. Varin v. St. Laurence Sugar Refining Co., 6 Que. P. R. 295.

Selection of jury must be so done as to place both parties on an equal footing. Nothing can be done without both parties being notified or consenting. Archibald v. Cullen (1910), 16 R. L. n. s. 382.

Settlement of facts for jury — Subsequent proceedings — Time.] — Where a party has caused the facts as to which the jury must inquire to be settled within 30 days of issue joined, he is not in default even when he takes no other proceedings for more than 30 days afterwards. Brosseau v. Montreal Light, Heat and Power Co., 9 Que. P. R. 227.

Settlement of facts for jury — Time—Commencement—Inscription in law.]—The delay of 30 days allowed by Art. 442, C. P., for having the facts fixed for the jury, does not run until an inscription in law filed by the defendant with his plea has been determined. Canada Industrial Co. v. Kensington Land Co., 8 Rev. de Jur. 187, distinguished. Clough v. Fabre, 9 Que. P. R. 231.

Severing issues — Rule 170. Turner v. Van Meter (N.W.T.), 2 W. L. R. 345.

Special direction to sheriff.]—Where an action is to be tried at the Victoria or Vancouver civil sittings held pursuant to s. 5 of the Supreme Court Act Amendment Act, 1901, a special direction (under s. 69 of the Jurors Act) to the sheriff to summon a jury is necessary. Tanaka v. Russell, 9 B. C. R. 536.

party in support of application to set aside must be certain.]—Plaint ff applied to quash the special jury panel for alleged partiality of the under sheriff by whom it was returned The grounds of the application were set out in an affidavit made by plaintiff, and were to the effect that plaintiff and defendant were respectively editors of the Islander and Examiner, the organs of the opposing poli-tical parties in P. E. Island, that the action was for libel on the plaintiff published by the defendant in his paper, that the under sheriff was a violent partizan of the defendant's political party, and had returned fortythree or forty-four out of the forty-eight jurors on the panel from the strong political partizans of the party opposed to the plaintiff. The plaintiff's affidavit was not supported by others, nor was there any affidavit of defendant contradicting it. The defendant's counsel took the objection that there could be no challenge to the array in a special jury case, and, therefore, the panel could not be quashed:—Hetd, Peters, J., that though there could be no technical challenge to the array, yet the panel could be set aside on application to the Court, and the applicaon application to the court, and the applica-tion was, therefore, the proper mode of pro-ceeding. 2. That as the grounds on which the plaintiff based his application were stated with sufficient certainty in his affidavit, and there was no rebutting affidavit, the application must be granted and the panel set aside, and a new panel returned by the coroner in the manner directed by the Court. McLean v. Whelan (1856), 1 P. E. I. R.

Special jury — Certificate for — B. C. Jurors Act, s. 63.]—As the difficulty in this case lies in the law and not in the facts, a certificate for a special jury was not granted. Cross v. Esquimatt, 11 W. L. R. 257.

Special jury — Fees of jurors — Mileage.]—A special juror is entitled to $2 for each day's attendance at Court, whether he serves or not, and whether in order to attend Court he travels from his place of residence or not; if he so travels he is in addition entitled to mileage. Taylor v. Drake, 22 C. L. T. 220, 9 B. C. R. 54.

Special jury — Notice of striking — Time—Holiday. Holman v. Times Printing Co., 1 O. W. R. 7, 338, 756.

Special jury — Striking — Parties — Defendant to counterclaim — Challenge.]— The defendants in the original action counterclaimed against the plaintiff and one R. On the defendant's application an order for a special jury was made, the plaintiff and R. acquiescing. On the striking of the jury the sheriff refused to allow R. to take any part, and the plaintiff then applied under Rule 157 to strike out the counterclaim because of the impossibility of properly striking a special jury where there are more than two parties:—Held, that the plaintiff had no right to make the application. As R. acquiesced in the order for a special jury when it was made and had not appealed, a challenge to the array by his counsel at the trial was overruled. Bank of British North America v. Robert Ward & Co. (Ltd.), 9 B. C. R. 49.

Settling issues of fact — Order XXXII., Rule 1. Purcell v. Smith, 40 N. S. R. 611.

Striking out — Discretion — Issues of fact and law.]—A jury notice was struck out, the case being one which, in the opinion of the Judge before whom the motion is made, would be tried without a jury. Stavert v. McNaupht, 13 O. W. R. 921.

Striking out — Judge in Chambers — Common law action—Nuisance—Injunction—Damages.]—Motion to strike out a jury notice in an action for an injunction to restrain a nuisance in the shape of a sewage farm, and for damages:—Held, this not being an action which prior to the Administration of Justice Act, 1873, was cognizable by the Court of Chancery, that the jury notice could not be set aside as irregular by the Common Law Procedure Act. Long prior to the Administration of Justice Act, 1873, the common law Courts had power to grant an injunction in a case such as this. While, no doubt, a Judge sitting in Chambers has power, in the exercise of his discretion, to strike out a jury notice in an action such as this, although the party requiring a jury may primá jacie be entitled to it, the practice is not to exercise that power, but to leave it to be dealt with by the trial Judge. Shantz v. Berlin, 23 C. L. T. 15, 4 O. L. R. 730, 2 O. W. R. 1115.

Striking out — Mortgage action — Venue—Speedy trial—Consolidation of actions—Conduct of. Lemon v. Lemon, 2 O. W. R. 445, 473.

Striking out — Separate sittings for jury and non-jury cases—Practice, Montgomery v. Ryan, 8 O. W. R. 855.

Summoning of — Procedure — Juror's Act—Directory or imperative.]—If on the trial of an action in the Supreme Court twenty persons do not appear from which a jury may be selected the panel may be quashed. The provisions of the Jurors Act relating to the procedure to be followed by the sheriff in summoning a jury are not imperative but directory, and an irregularity in respect thereto is not ipso facto a ground for setting aside the panel. Ross v. British Columbia Electric Ru. Co., 7 B. C. R. 394.

Time — Acquiescence.]—Option for trial by jury by special application must be made within 3 days after issue joined; the subsequent acquiescence or the filing of necessary pleadings does not re-open the right to ask for a jury trial. La Banque Nationale v. Atlantic and Lake Superior Rw. Co., 8 Que. P. R. 309.

Time — Default in proceeding.]—Where a party has demanded a trial by jury, and has proceeded upon such demand within the 30 days following that on which the cause was ripe for trial, he is not deprived of such right by delaying more than 30 days his application to fix a day for the summoning of a jury panel, the penalty indicated in Art. 442, C. P., applying only to the commencement of the proceeding, and not having reference to any subsequent default. Enright v. Montreal, 9 Que, P. R. 27.

Time — Joinder of issue — Default of reply.]—Issue is joined by the default of the plaintiff to reply to a plea within 6 days after it is filed; a motion for leave to elect for trial by jury made after the 3 days which follow the joinder of issue will be dismissed as too late. Cox v. Phænix Assurance Co., 9 Que. P. R. 117.

Time — Leave. Castle v. Chaput, 2 O. W. R. 499.

Time — Non-juridical day,]—A motion for leave to elect to have a trial by jury may be made on the fourth day after issue joined, when the third day is a non-juridical day. Langerin v. Allan Line Steamship Co., 8 Que. P. R. 149.

Time — Rule 168 — Discretion. Brindamour v. Robert, Robert v. Brindamour (Y.T.), 6 W. L. R. 148.

Time for applying — Notice of motion.]—A simple notice of motion is not a valid proceeding to bring on a trial by jury, the only valid proceeding being the motion itself, and if that is not made within the time allowed, the party applying loses the right to a jury. Bray v. Montreal Street Rv. Co., 8 Que. P. R. 122.

Time for demanding — Lapse — Revival.]—The filing, with or without consent, of a reply by the defendants after default, has not the effect of reviving in favour of the plaintiff a lapsed right to demand a jury. Leclair v. Montreal Street Ric. Co., 7 Que. P. R. 453.

Title to land — New trial.]—Cases involving the title to land should be tried without a jury, so that the necessity for a second trial may be avoided. Wason v. Douglas, 21 C. L. T. 521.

Venue — Change — Right to special jury—Statutes, 1—The paintiffs named Nelson as the place of trial, the action having been commenced in the Vancouver registry. The defendants applied to have the venue the action be tried by a special jury if the plaintiffs desired a jury. No affidavit was filed alleging any ground for supposing that a fair trial could not be had at Nelson, but it was urged that there was no provision by which a special jury could be had:—Held, by the full Court, that the defendants could obtain a special jury at Nelson, and that in any event the application was rightly dismissed, as no ground had been shewn for supposing that a fair trial could not be had. Fernie Lumber Co. v. Crow's Nest Southern Rv. Co., 12 B. C. R. 148, 3 W. L. R. 472.

Verdiet — Ambiguity and precision — C. P. 487, 489.]—Where in an action in damages for tort, the jury brings in a verdict of common fault, but supported by obscure and ambiguous reasons, the Judge may, at the suggestion of the plaintiff's attorney, send the jury back for further consideration of their verdict and make their verdict more accurate by giving clearer and more precise reasons. Ethier v. Broder (1910), 17 R. L. n. s. 136.

Verdict — Indefiniteness — Circumstances of case—Discharge of jury—Recalling and amending verdict-Effect of-New trial - Non-direction.]-In an action for damages caused by water being backed up on to the plaintiff's premises, the jury did not answer the questions put, but answered:

"We have not answered exactly in the form of the question. We find that the construction and grading of the street across Boundary creek caused the plaintiff damage in the sum of $3,000;" without stating that the grading was done by the defendants. It grading was done by the defendants. It appeared that the dispute at the trial narrowed down to whether it was the grading of the street by the defendants or the grading of an alley by one Fletcher that caused the damage. On the verdict judgment was entered for the plaintiff:—Held, on appeal, that from the circumstances of the case the verdict would support the judgment. Where counsel at the trial abstains from asking the Judge to submit a point to the jury, a new trial will not be granted on the ground of non-direction as to that point. After judgment was pronounced and the jury was discharged, at the direction of the Court the jury was recalled and asked certain questions as to the meaning of the verdict, and the verdict was amended accordingly: Held, that whatever was done after the discharge of the jury was a nullity. Water-land v. Oity of Greenwood, 22 C. L. T. 245, 8 B. C. R. 396.

Verdiet — Misapprehension — Assignments and preferences—Fraudulent assignment.]—In an action brought by plaintiff as assignee of M., against defendant, the sheriff of the county of Queens, who levied under execution on a portion of the goods covered by the assignment, the defence relied upon was that the deed of assignment was made fraudulently, with intent to hinder and delay creditors. It appearing that the jury had no difficulty in determining the only question upon which they had to pass, and their verdiet being in accordance with that finding:—Held, that it could not be disturbed upon any reason based upon the circumstances under which it was rendered. Townshend, J., dissented, on the ground that there was no evidence to justify the verdiet, and that it was given in disregard or misapprehension of the instructions of the Judge, Fraser v. Dreu, 32 N. S. R. 385.

Verdiet — Motion to set aside—Negligence—Duty of Court—Reasonable verdiet.] —In an action for damages for personal injuries caused by the alleged negligence of the defendants, in which the question of their liability is tried by a jury, the appreciation of what constitutes the fault or neglect is for the jury. The Court, upon motion to set aside the verdiet, is not called upon to decide whether the verdiet rests upon an erroncous appreciation of the evidence, but whether it is or is not unreasonable. Quebea and Levis Ferry Co. v. Jess, 14 Que. K. B.

werdiet — Sencial verdict — Setting and the Weight of evidence.]—The Court will not set aside a verdict rendered by a special jury, merely because the Court would have come to a different conclusion on the evidence; the verdict is not considered against the weight of evidence unless, in the opinion of the Court, it is one which the jury, viewing the whole of the evidence, could not reasonably find. (Article 501, C. C. P.). McLeod v. Montreal Street Rw. Co., 20 Que.

Verdict - Weight of evidence - Negligence—Railway — Sparks from engine.] — Fire was discovered on J.'s farm a short time after the passing of a train of the Grand Trunk Railway, drawn by two engines, one having a long, and the other a short, or medium, smoke box. In an action against the company for damages it was proved that the former was perfectly constructed. Two witnesses considered the other defective, but nine men, experienced in the construction of engines, swore that a longer smoke box would have been unsuited to the size of the engine. The jury found that the fire was caused by sparks from one engine, and they believed it was from that with the short smoke box; and that the use of said box constituted negligence in the company, which had not taken the proper means to prevent the emission of sparks:heads to prevent the emission of sparks:— Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 2 O. L. R. 689, 22 C. L. T. 12, that the latter finding was not justified by the evidence, and the verdict for plaintiff at the trial was properly set aside. Jackson v. Grand Trunk Rw. Co., 22 C. L. T. 249, 32 S. C. R. 245.

Verdict which the jury, viewing the whole of the evidence, could not reasonably find — Art. 501 C. P.] — A verdict is clearly not against the weight of evidence when it is one which the jury, "viewing the whole of the evidence, could not reasonably find," Art. 498 No. 4, and Art. 501 C. P. This text of the law means: "a verdict which twelve reasonable men should not have found." Montreal 8t. Ruc. V. Henderson, 19 Que K. B. 135.

When does a case stand ready for trial?—Registration of a judgment of the Supreme Court —Quare, when motion for a trial by jury is continued?—Right to a mixed jury—Corporation party to suit—C. P. 436, 442—R. S. C. c. 139, s. 58, 8 Edw. VII. c. 77.]—Held (confirming Davidson, J.).—A party to a suit who has been granted a trial by interpreserve by its stable by by jury preserves his right by proceeding with it within the thirty days following the date upon which the case stands ready for trial of that nature. When a new trial has been ordered by the Supreme Court, the case stands ready for such trial only from the date of the registration of the judgment of the Supreme Court in the office of the Superior Court of the district in which suit was taken. The fact that more than thirty days have elapsed from the date of the discharge of the delibere of a motion for a new trial by jury and the service upon the opposite party of a notice that the same motion will be again presented cannot entail the loss to a party of his absolute and acquired right to a trial by inry.—(Reversing Davidson, J.). When one jury .- (Reversing Davidson, J.). of the parties to a suit speaks neither French nor English and the other party is a cor-poration, the latter alone has the absolute right to ask for a jury de medictate lingue. Can. Rubber Co. v. Karavokiris (1910), 12 Que. P. R. 122.

Wrongful dismissal—Action by servant to recover damages for.]—An action to recover damages for an act which amounts to a breach of a contract of services, and which could not be maintained in the absence of such a contract, is not an action "resulting from a personal wrong." within the meaning of Art. 421 C. P., and is therefore not triable by jury. Montreal v. de Montigny (1910), 20 Que. K. B. 49.

6. NEW TRIAL

Absence of material witness—Taking chances at trial. McLellan v. Hovey, 1 O. W. R. 215, 707.

Action for damages for negligence—Best evidence available should have been adduced.]— Plaintiff, a brakesman in the employ of defendants, brought action to recover damages for injuries caused as alleged by negligence of defendants placing a switch stand where it was placed. At trial, Teetzel, J., granted a non-suit, with costs, but subject to provision that if Divisional Court was of opinion that there was any evidence on charge of negligence which should have been submitted to a jury the judgment to be entered for plaintiff for $2,520. Divisional Court entered judgment for plaintiff for $2,520. Court of Appeal ordered a new trial on ground that the best evidence available had not been adduced at the trial. No costs of former trial to either party. Letteh V. Pere Marquette Rv. Co. (1910), 15 O. W. R. 699.

Action tried without a jury—Mistrial—Costs. Wade v. Livingston, 12 O. W. R. 1211.

Affinity of one of several J. P.'s trying cause to party, ground for setting aside judgment — J. P.'s affinity to principal, ground for setting aside judgment against servant.]—On appeal, in several cases of assault arising out of the same matter, from convictions by four J.P.'s, it appeared that one of the J.P.'s was married to a first cousin of the principal respondent, and the other respondents at the time of the alleged assaults, though not of affinity to any of the J.P.'s, were servants of the principal respondent:—Held, that the convictions must be set aside, and that no distinction could be made between the case of the principal respondent and the cases of his servants, but that all must be set aside. Campbell v. McIntosh (1872), 1 P. E. I. R. 423.

Appeal — Subsequent discovery of new evidence—Obscure facts—Costs.}—Divisional Court granted an order for a new trial upon grounds of discovery of new evidence, the trial Judge baving had difficulty in finding the facts, and the new evidence not being in the knowledge of the defendant at the trial. Costs of former trial to be in the discretion of Court at new trial. Costs of appeal to the plaintiff in any event. Hall v. Schiell (1911), 19 O. W. R. 3135, 2O. W. N. 1136.

Charge to jury — Misdirection—Bias.]
—In an action upon a guarantee, judgment was entered for the plaintiffs at the trial upon the answers of the jury to questions submitted, and the defendants moved for a new trial on numerous grounds of improper reception and rejection of evidence, misdirection, improper direction, and remarks by the trial Judge. The Supreme Court of New Brunswick (37 N. B. R. 163) was equally divided, and the defendants appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada, where judgment was given (Davies, J., diss.) ordering a new trial, on the ground that the charge of the trial Judge to the jury shewed passion and bias and was improper. Bustin v. Thorne & Co., 37 S. C. R. 533.

Counsel reading judgments to jury— Substantial wrong — C. S. 1903, c. 111, s. 376.]—At the trial the plaintiff's counsel was allowed, subject to objection, to read as a part of his closing address a judgment on a former motion for a new trial in this cause delivered in this Court, and also a judgment delivered on appeal in the Supreme Court of Canada, These were both dissenting judgments; they dealt with the same facts and expressed opinions on the facts, but covered a wider range of questions than those on which this jury was asked to find; the trial Judge expressed his opinion that the jury could not have been biased by the reading of these judgments; this was the third trial of the cause and at each trial the plaintiff had a verdict, and the weight of evidence was in favour of the findings of the jury :- Held, that while it was improper to allow the judgments to be read, yet under the special circumstances this was not a ground for a new trial,-Held, also, that the cobjection was cured by s. 376 of Supreme Court Act, C. S. 1903, c. 111, as no substantial wrong or miscarriage of justice had been thereby occasioned. Harris v. Jamic-son (1909), 39 N. B. R. 177.

County Court action — Verdict for insufficient damages — Weight of evidence — Powers of Judge.]—In an action for trespass and trover, brought in a County Court, the jury found for the plaintiff for part of his claim, on evidence which, while contradictory as to part of the claim, was strongly in favour of the plaintiff's whole claim. The Judge of the County Court made an order setting aside the verdict and directing a new trial, on the ground that the damages were insufficient and the verdict against the weight of evidence:—Held, on appeal, that the Judge had power to make the order, and the appeal was dismissed. Gallant v. O'Leary, 38 N. B. R. 335, 4 E. J. R. 516.

Decree of Appellate Court—Reasons for judgment,1—E., a passenger on a railway train, was thrice assaulted by a fellow-passenger during the passage. The conductor was informed of the first assault immediately after it occurred, and also of the second, but took no steps to protect B. In an action against the railway company B. recovered damages assessed generally, for the injuries complained of. The verdict was maintained by the Court of Appeal, but the Supreme Court of Canada ordered a new trial unless B. would consent to his damages being reduced (34 S. C. R. 75.) In the reasons given for the last mentioned judgment it was held that damages could be recovered for the third assault only, but the judgment as entered by the Registrar stated that the Court ordered the reversal of the judgment appealed from and a new trial unless the plaintiff accepted the reduced amount of damages. Such amount having been refused, a new trial was had, on which B. again obtained a verdict, the damages being apportioned between the second and third assault. On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada from the judgment of the Court of Appeal maintaining this verdict:—Held, Taschereau, C.J.C., and Davies, J., dissenting, that, as the decree was in accordance with the judgment pronounced by the Court when the decision was given, and as it left the whole case open on the second trial, the jury were free to give damages for the second assault, and their verdict should not be disturbed, Blain v. Can. Pac. Rw. Co., 25 C. L. T. 107; Can. Pac. Rw. Co., V. Blain, 36 S. C. R. 159.

Discovery of fresh evidence.] — The crumstances under which a new trial will be granted or refused on the ground of the discovery of fresh evidence, discussed. Sexsmith v. Murphy, I Terr. L. R. 311.

Discretion of Court below—Refusal of Court of Appeal to interfere—Affidavit of merits—Costs. Clarke v. Union Stock Underwriting Co., 9 O. W. R. 486.

Divisional Court setting aside nonsuit and directing new trial—Appeal— Evidence for jury—Negligent setting out fire. Pareau v. Can. Pac. Rec. Co., 2 O. W. R. S72.

Evidence — Findings — New trial,]—In an action to recover damages for injuries sustained, the plaintiff must make affirmative proof of the particular acts of negligence charged in the declaration as constituting the cause of such damages. The province of the jury is to find on such facts, and when the findings of the jury rest on grounds of negligence, other than those so charged, and are not given upon all the issues submitted, the Court of Review will grant motion for a new trial. MacDonald V. MacDonald (1910), 16 R. de J. 408.

Findings of Judge on conflicting evidence — Promissory notes — Denial of signature—Comparison of handwritings — Absence of expert evidence — Refusal of majority of Court to order new trial.]—The plaintiff sued the defendant for $2,000 said to have been lent, and produced two promissory notes for $1,000 said, said to have been written by the plaintiff and signed by the defendant. The notes were signed "Alec. Keiser." but the defendant's name was "John Keiser." The defendant denied the signatures, and swore that he never saw the plaintiff ill the plaintiff endeavoured to collect the money. The trial Judge — there was no jury—believed the plaintiff's evidence, which was corroborated to some slight extent, and was of opinion, from a comparison made by himself of the signatures to the notes with a signature made by the defendant in the witness-box, that the former were written by the defendant. He therefore gave judgment for the plaintiff: —Held, Beck, J., dissenting, that the Court could not, in these circumstances, reverse the judgment of the trial Judge, nor grant a new trial.—Per Beck, J., that, in the absence of any expert evidence as to handwrit-

Findings of jury-Contrary to evidence Closts. —On the trial of an action for the delivery up and cancellation of an order given by the plaintiff in favour of the defendant D. upon the defendant S., as a means of avoiding a threatened arrest upon a charge of having been a participant in the blowing up of the defendants' dam, the jury, in answer to several questions submitted to them, negatived the fact of plain-tiff's complicity in the offence charged, and upon their finding a verdict was entered for the plaintiff. There being strong evidence to shew that the plaintiff, although not an actual participator in the offence charged, was conspiring with, and aiding and abetting, those by whom the dam was blown up; that he received sums of money from people in the neighbourhood which was used for the purchase of dynamite, to be used in blowing up the dam; and that, although not actually present at the time, he was in the vicinity, and knew all about the intentions of those by whom the act was committed:-Held, that the findings must be set aside, with costs to be paid by the plaintiff, and a new trial ordered. Moore v. Dickie, 33 N. S. R. 375.

Findings of jury — Court to draw inference that nealigence had or had not been established. —Though allowance is to be made for the technical difference of the proceedings in the Courts of Canada and those of England, yet where trial by jury prevails, a special verdict ought to be the finding of facts, by the jury, from which the Court is to pronounce its judgment on the law, and the verdict ought not to leave facts to the Courts to draw an inference; such as, whether negligence has or has not been established; negligence being a question of fact and not of law. The negligence of a bailee in disobeying the instruction of a bailor, in disobeying the instruction of a bailor, —Held, not sufficient, though proved in the cause, to entitle the plaintiff to recover damages thereon. A venire de novo awarded, with liberty to amend the pleadings. Tobin v. Murison (1845), C. R. I. A. C. 256.

Findings of jury — Negligence — Contributory negligence—Judge's charge—Misdirection—Excessive damages, Street v. Can. Pac. Rw. Co., 9 W. L. R. 558.

General verdict — Answers to questions—Doubt as to meaning of jury—New trial—Misdirection — Negligence — Contributory negligence — Ultimate negligence — Street railways—Appeal — Costs.]—In an action for damages for injury to a child who was run over by a car of the defendants, in which negligence was alleged, several questions were submitted to the jury by the trial Judge, but he also told them that they might, if they chose, find a general verdict. When the jury returned into Court, the foreman announced, "We award the plaintiff $300 damages." On being asked by the trial Judge whether they had answered the ques-Judge whether they had answered the questions, they said they had answered 3, as follows: "(1) Q. Was the company guilty of negligence? A. Yes. (2) Q. If so, in what did such negligence consist? A. Overspeed. (3) Q. Was the plaintiff guilty of contributory negligence? A. Yes." On this the trial Judge dismissed the action:—Held, that there should be a new trial; it was probable that the verifier was intended to be a bable that the verdict was intended to be a general one, but the matter was not free from doubt; and the jury should have been asked to make the matter plain before being discharged .- Among the questions that were not answered by the jury, was the fol-lowing: "Could the motorman, after it became apparent to him that the boy was going to cross the track, by the exercise of reasonable care and skill have prevented the accident, if he had been running at a reasonaccident, if he had been running at a reasonable rate of speed?" In leaving this question, the trial Judge said: "I want you to consider that last question, because it is not 'Could he have prevented the accident if running at an unreasonable rate of speed?"—Held, that this question was not properly directed. The unreasonable rate of speed was the original negligence, and the question which the sure had to consider question which the jury had to consider, after finding such negligence, was whether notwithstanding that unreasonable rate of speed, the motorman, after seeing the child committing or about to commit a negligent act, could, by the exercise of reasonable care, have avoided the consequences of it:— Held, that the defendants should pay the Heta, that the detendants should pay the costs of the plaintiff's appeal from the judgment dismissing the action (Martin, J.A., dissenting as to this): and that the costs below should abide the result of the new trial. Rayfield v. B. C. Electric Rw. Co. (1910), 14 W. L. R. 414.

Granted on appeal — Ground of mistrial—Question of malice not submitted to the jury—Jury found reasonable and probable cause—Duty of the Judge—No comment on facts which might prejudice the trial—Discussion of rule of law—Costs. Harris v. Bickerton (1911), 19 O. W. R. 383, 2 O. W. N. 1197.

Ground for—Defence not availed of.]—
If the defendant on the trial of a cause neglects to avail himself of a defence of which he was apprised, and which he could have then made if he had wished, it is not open to him to move for a new trial in order to make such defence. Kennedy Island Mill Co., W. McInterney, 36 N. B. R. 612.

Judgment directing new trial—No substantial difference in evidence—Nonsuit.]
—The judgment of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia (34 S. C. R. 366) in an action by the executrix of M. to recover an amount alleged to be due under a contract of hiring with the defendants, was reversed on appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, on the ground that the illness of deceased, by which he was permanently incapacitated, would of itself terminate the contract, and a finding of the jury that the deceased did not entine in his employment after notice of a rule that an employee was only to be pid for time that he was actually on duty, wis held to be against evidence and was set aside.—A new trial having been ordered and had, the prestiding Judge, on the conclusion of the plaintiff's case, stated that, in his opinion, the additional evidence made no material change in the case from what it was before, and withdrew the case from the jury:—Held, that the facts being substantially the same as before, no useful purpose could be served as submitting the case to a jury, and that the Judge was right in withdrawing the case from the jury and in dismissing the action. Marks v. Dartmouth Ferry Commission, 38 N. S. R. 386.

Jurisdiction — Objection not taken at trial.]—Effect was given to an objection to the Judge's charge not taken at the trial, and a new trial ordered, but without costs. Wason v. Douglas, 21 C. L. T. 521, 1 O. W. R. 552.

Jury—Verdict—Setting aside—Powers of Court en bane — Nonsuit.] — Where the Court en bane set aside the verdict of the Jury in favour of the plaintiffs:—Held, that the Court could not, under any of the Rules in the King's Bench Act, 58 & 59 V. c. 6, dismiss the action or enter a nonsuit or verdict for defendants in the face of the verdict of the Jury. Rules 639, 640, and 642 discussed. Connecticut Mutual, etc., Co. v. Moore, 6 App. Cas. 644, and British Columbia Toving, etc., Co. v. Sewell, 9 S. C. R. 527, followed. New trial ordered without costs of former trial. Costs of the application to be costs in the cause to the defendants in any event. Davidson v. Stuart, 14 Man, L. R. 74.

Misdirection.]—Judge, in charging the jury, told then that if they thought the scars on the plaintiff's face, caused by the bite, were likely to be permanent, and that such lasting disfigurement might affect her prospects of making a good marriage, they might consider such possible loss of marriage in assessing the dannages:—Held, misdirection, as such damages were too speculative and remote. The jury were further directed that in assessing the damages they might take into consideration the financial position of defendant and the condition in life of plaintiff:—Held, misdirection. Price v. Wright, 35 N. B. R. 26.

Misdirection — Questions for jury — Verdict on issues — Damages.]—An order for a new trial should not be granted merely on account of error in the form of the questions submitted to the jury where no prejudice has been suffered in consequence of the manner in which the issues were presented by the charge of the Judge at the trial, and the jury has passed upon the questions of substance. Judgment of the Court of Appeal for Manitoba in Wald v. Winnipeg Electric Rv. Co., 18 Man. L. R. 134, affirmed, Fitzpatrick, C.J.C., dissenting, and Davies, J., hasitante, as to the quantum of the damages awarded. Winnipeg Electric Rv. Co. v. Wald, 41 S. C. R. 431.

Misdirection — Substantial miscarriage — Court equally divided—Negligence.] — In a 1 action for damages for the negligent cornition of an elevator by the defendant's servant, causing the death of the plaintiff's son, a new trial was moved for on behalf of plaintiff, on the ground of misdirection. The Court was cenally divided:—Held, per Graham, E.J., and Russell, J., that, as the effect of the misdirection complained of was to withdraw from the jury questions which were proper for their consideration, and upon which they should have been asked to pass, there should be a new trial.—Per Townshead, J., that, although the trial Judge in his instructions to the jury used inaccuracies of expression in regard to the law of negligence, these expressions were not of such a character as to mislead the jury on the main subject of inquiry, and, no substantial wrong or miscarriage having been occasioned, the provisions of O. 37, r. 6, applied, and a new trial should not be granted.—Per Longley, J.—The findings of the jury were warranted by the evidence, and, the questions submitted being proper, there was no reason for a new trial, and the application should be dismissed. Haveley v. Wright, 39 N. S. R. I. I. E. L. R. 26.

Motion for—Misconduct of jurors—Contradictory affidavits — Oral examination before Court.]—Where one of the grounds in support of a motion for a new trial was that some of the jury had been tampered with, and the charge included the defendant's attorney, an officer of the Court, and a number of affidavits very contradictory and of an entirely irreconcilable nature were read, under the special circumstances of the case an order was made that the deponents should appear before the Court to be examined vice vocc touching the matters in question. Wood v. Le Blanc, 36 N. B. R. 47.

Motion for—Notice of — Amendment—Appeal — Improper admission of evidence — Absence of objection at trial — Perverse verdict.]—An amendment was allowed to a notice of appeal so as to ask expressly for a new trial, but only on the grounds stated in the notice of appeal. An amendment so as to set up the ground, not stated in the notice, of the improper admission of evidence taken on commission was refused, as it did not appear from the Judge's notes that objection was made at the trial, though the commissioner had noted the objection. A new trial on the ground that the verdict was perverse was refused. Edmonton v. Thompson, 1 Terr, L. R. 342.

Motion for—Practice—Service of notice on Judge.]—See Lang v. Brown, 34 N. B. R. 492

plaintiff a new trial, costs of the former trial and of this appeal, including the examination of the plaintiff on her affidavit, to be costs in the cause. Mulock C.J.ExD., dissenting, holding that the motion and appeal should be dismissed with costs. Casucell v. Toronto Ruc. Co. (1911), 18 O. W. R. 464, 2 O. W. N. 655.

Negligence-Findings of jury-Not satisfactory-New trial granted on terms.]-In an action for negligence the jury gave these answers to the following questions: Was there any negligence on the part of the railway causing the accident to the plain-tiff? A. Yes. (2) If so, what was the neg-ligence? A. If the conductor had been on rear end of car the accident may not have happened. (3) Was the plaintiff guilty of any negligence which caused or contributed to his own injury? A. Yes. (4) Damages? A. $200. Middleton, J., dismissed the action with costs. Divisional Court held, that a new trial should be ordered on terms of plaintiff paying costs of former trial and of appeal within 30 days after taxation, on the ground that the above answers of the jury were not satisfactory and that the jury should have been asked to find what the negligence of the plaintiff was. Smith v. Hamilton St. Rw. Co. (1911), 18 O. W. R. 729, 2 O. W. N. 801.

Notes of evidence not before Court -Amendment - Costs. |- In a case tried at circuit a verdict was entered for the defendants on a declaration amended at the trial, subject to the defendants' objection, by substituting, for counts therein set forth, causes of action at common law and causes of action under the Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act; the plaintiff en-tered the cause on the special paper to move for a new trial, and the defendant to move for a nonsuit pursuant to leave, in case the Court should be of the opinion that the verdict should not stand; and the motions could not be argued owing to the stenographer not filing any record of the trial; the Court ordered a new trial without costs, and that the case be brought down for a second trial on the original record as if no order to amend had been made. Bourque v. Record Foundry & Machine Co., 3 E. L. R. 481, 38 N. B. R. 239.

Order directing—Appeal from — New trial pending appeal—No application to stay —Judgment. Webb v. Can. Gen. Electric Co., 2 O. W. R. 322, 865, 1113.

Order directing a new trial refused under Arts. 502, 503 C. P. Q., where it did not appear that the amount of damages awarded was so grossly excessive as to make it evident that the jury had been led into error or were influenced by improper motives. Lachance v. Can. Pac. Ric. Co., (1909), 35 Que. S. C. 494, affirmed 42 S. C. R. 205.

Restricting to particular issues — Jury. — The jury brought in findings upon which the trial Judge was unable to enter judgment for either party. The plaintiff asked for a new trial on some of the issues not disposed of by the jury; the defendant on all the issues:—Held, that there must be a new trial on all the issues. This was not a proper case for limiting the new trial, as the jury might give answers on the issues not disposed of which might be inconsistent with the findings of the former jury, Irvine v, Parker, 24 C. L. T. 138.

Staying proceedings — Appeal to Supreme Court of Canada — Special circumstances.]—The Court has power, in its discretion, to stay the second trial of an action pending an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada from the order directing a second trial, but the discretion should only be exercised where special circumstances are shewn by the applicant. No special circumstances being shewn, the decisions of the Master in Chambers, 7 O. L. R. 186, 24 C. L. T. 134, 3 O. W. R. 312, and of a Judge on appeal, refusing to stay the trial of these actions, were affirmed. Hoeldey v. Grand Trank Ru. Co., Davis v. Grand Trunk Ru. Co., 24 C. L. T. 311, 7 O. L. R. 588, 3 O. W. R. 603.

Surprise — Loss of cattle — Bailment —Cause of disease not assigned in pleading or examination.]—The defendant agreed to "feed and winter" 47 young cattle for the plaintiff and to be responsible for the loss of any of the cattle in any other way than by death from ordinary disease. A large number of the cattle died, and the plaintiff sued for damages. At the trial, the plaintiff had a verdict on the strength of evidence proving that the stable in which the defendant had kept the cattle was too small for so many cattle. There was nothing in the statement of claim to inform the defendant upon what grounds he was held liable, and he filed affidavits to shew that he had been unable to ascertain such grounds on the examina-tion of the plaintiff for discovery, also, that the stable, which had been taken down and removed before the trial, had been of quite sufficient size to accommodate the cattle :-Held, that there should be a new trial, on the ground of surprise in the evidence produced by the plaintiff as to the size of the duced by the plaintin as to the size to the stable. Costs to abide the result of the new trial. McLenaghan v. Hood, 15 Man, L. R. 510, 1 W. L. R. 422, 25 C. L. T. 19.

Verdict—Finding of jury.] — Where a case has been properly submitted to the jury, and their findings upon the facts are such as might be the conclusions of reasonable men, a new trial will not be granted on the ground that the jury misapprehended or misunderstood the evidence, notwithstanding that the trial Judge was dissatisfied with the verdict. Fraser v, Drew, 20 C. L. T. 111, 20 S. C. R. 241.

Verdict against weight of evidence —Jury — Contract — Sale of lops.] — A new trial will not be granted on the ground that the verdict was against the weight of evidence if the verdict was one which the jury, acting as reasonable men, could have found.—The Court refused to disturb a verdict for the plaintiff for $525 in an action to recover the balance due on a sale of a quantity of logs. McLeod v. White, 39 N. B. R. 32, 6 E. L. R. 249.

Verdict for defendants — County Court action — View by Judge and juryJudge ordering new trial — Refusal of Court of Appeal to interfere — Municipal corporations — Diversion of water — Injury to property. Glazan v. Rossland, 9 W. L. R.

Verdict of jury — Judgment.] — In an action for negligence against a municipality the Judge gave judgment for the defendants, holding that the findings of the jury in favour of the plaintiff amounted to a verdict of non-feasance only. Other actions by other plaintiffs arising out of the same occurrence had been decided against the defendants by the Privy Council:—Held, that it was useless to send the case to another jury, and that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment for the amount of the verdict. Gordon v. Victoria, 7. Brit, Col. L. R. 342.

Weight of evidence - Compromise of cause of action—Pleading—Abandonment at trial — Reference in Judge's charge — New trial.]-The defendant, the father of a young girl, about whom the plaintiff, a boy of 18, had used some equivocal words, gave the plaintiff a severe thrashing. This action was brought to recover damages for the assault. The defendant also made a statement about the occurrence to a newspaper reporter, and the occurrence to a newspaper reporter, and the statement was printed in certain newspapers. At the trial the jury found a verdict for the defendant, and added, "Each party to pay their costs." The jury made no finding as to damages:—Held, that there must be a new trial.—Per Macdonald, C.J.A.;—
There was misdirection to the control of There was misdirection in the trial Judge Incre was missirection in the trial Judge telling the jury to consider whether the defendant had provocation, and whether it excused what he did as to relieve him from damages. The case was not analogous to an action for libel. The defendant had no right to take the law into his own hands, and could be according to the control of the not escape liability for the assault on the plea of provocation, either fancied or real, little or great, in circumstances such as were disclosed in this case. Circumstances of provocation may be given in evidence, and the jury can and ought to consider them in arriving at the measure of damages. But where, as here, there is a clear case of assault, of an aggravated character, the jury should be directed that such assault is a legal wrong, and that, as a matter of law, the plaintiff is entitled to redress. The jury should be directed to consider, in mitigation of damages, all the circumstances—for example, such as might tend to shew that the defendant did might tend to snew that the derendant dua not act as he did out of mere wanton cruelty. Conversely, they should be directed to con-sider all matters in aggravation of damages, such for instance, as the newspaper publication, and all acts of the defendant which they might consider ought to be visited with punitive damages.—Per Macdonald, C.J.A., also:—The verdict was against not only the weight of evidence, but against all the evidence; and from this and what took place after the verdict was rendered, it was apparent that the verdict was a compromise, and that the jury had not fulfilled their function that the jury had not rullined their function of deciding upon the merits of the case.—Per Irving, J.A.:—If the verdict could be upheld on the ground that the defendant was justified in doing as he did, there was plenty of evidence to enable the jury to reach the conclusion they did, that is, if their verdict was grounded on the plaintiff's behaviour towards the defendant's daughter.—Per Irving, J.A., also:—The defendant pleaded a compromise of the cause of action, and the plaintiff set up a walver of the allered compromise; and the trial Judge erred in putting it before the jury; the jury may have based their finding for the defendant on this; and that alone would entitle the plaintiff to a new trial. Slater v. Watta (1911), 16 W. L. R. 234, B. C. R.

Witness remaining in Court — Indexection of Judge to allow him to be examined.] — At the trial all the witnesses were ordered to withdraw. The defendant, however, remained and was tendered as a witness but refused by the Court, and a verdict found for the plaintiff: — Held, Peters, J., in discharging a rule for a new trial, that the rejection or admission of the witnesses' testimony was entirely in the discretion of the Judge, that the witness was rightly rejected. Young v. Young (1854), 1 P. E. I. R. 98.

7. NOTICE OF TRIAL.

Close of pleadings.]—A reply delivered by the plaintiff joining issue upon the statement of defence and further alleging that the facts set forth in the defence were no answer to the claim:—Held, a joinder of issue "simply, without adding any further or other pleading thereto," within the meaning of Rule 282: and therefore that when it was delivered the pleadings were closed, and a notice of trial thereupon served was regular. Gibson v. Nelson, 20 C. L. T. 426, 19 P. R. 265.

Close of pleadings — Several defendants — Irregularity—Waiver—Delay.] — A notice of trial is irregular unless the pleadings are closed as against all the defendants; and a defendant against whom the pleadings are closed when notice of trial is served by plaintiffs can take advantage of the fact that the pleadings are not closed as against all the defendants, and have the notice of trial set aside, although the other defendants are content to accept it. A defendant, by delaying the delivery of statement of defence till the last possible day, and by delaying a motion to set aside a notice of trial for six days after service thereof, does not waive an irregularity in the notice. Long v. Long, 24 C. L. T. 297, 7 O. L. R. 596, 3 O. W. R. 428.

Distant sittings — Dismissal of action.1—In January, the plaintiff's solicitors gave notice of trial at the civic sittings to be held in July in Victoria, where, according to statute, civil sittings are also held in February, March, and May:—Held, on a summons to dismiss for want of prediction, that the plaintiff must give notice of trial for the March sittings, otherwise the action will stand dismissed. Wike v. Timee Printing and Publishing Co., 10 B. C. R. 226.

fendants was inoperative and void. Judgrendants was noperative and void. Judg-ment for default of appearance was entered against three of the four defendants in June, 1899. In February, 1990, an appearance was entered on behalf of all the defendants and a defence delivered. Notice of trial was given and the action entered by the defend-ants. The plaintiffs moved before the trial Judge to set aside the notice. This motion was dismissed; and, the plaintiffs not proceeding with the trial, an order was made dismissing the action for want of prosecu-tion unless plaintiffs paid costs and gave se-curity:—Held, that the action was of an equitable nature, and the plaintiffs were not entitled under any practice prevailing immediately prior to the 1st October, 1884 (when the Judicature Act came into force), to obtain a judgment by default against the defendants as at common law; the suit must be governed by the same practice as any other equitable action not provided for in Order XIII., Rules 11, 13; the defendants could appear at any time before judgment, although the time limited for ap-pearance had elapsed; a defendant could appear at any time, though not served. 2. The appearance and defence being regular, the notice of trial and entry were regular; and semble, that, if the appearance and defence were irregular the motion should have been to set them aside, and not the subsequent proceedings. 3. The notice of trial was regularly given under Order XXXIV., Rule 11, and, the defendants having appeared when the cause was called for trial, peared when the cause was called to appear, and the plaintiffs having failed to appear, the action was properly dismissed under Rule 23 of that Order. 4. The conditions of the order made by the trial Judge, though unusual, were within his province. order made at the trial should be amended by adding recitals shewing what actually took place at the trial, and the appeal from it should be dismissed without costs, the difficulty having been created by want of care in drawing up the order, and the action should be dismissed with costs in case the conditions imposed were not complied with. Duyon v. LeBlanc, 34 N. S. Reps. 215.

Failure to proceed pursuant to notice — Motion for nonsuit — Affidavit in answer — Service — Leave to proceed — Terms.]—An application for judgment as of nonsuit for not proceeding to trial pursuant to notice, was refused, upon the plaintiff giving a peremptory undertaking to go to trial at the next sitting, and on payment of the costs of the motion, notwithstanding that the plaintiffs affidavit in answer to the motion, excusing the default, had not been served, as required by the Rule of Hilary term, 1894. Frederick v. Gibson, 36 N. B. R. 364.

Irregularity — Pleadings not closed— Leave to serve joinder nunc pro tunc. Mc-Kenzie v. Budd, 40 N. S. R. 626.

Late service of — Motion to set aside —Failure of applicant to negative service of proper notice. Johnston v. Tapp, 10 O. W. R. 23.

Motion to set aside — Irregularity — No place of trial named in statement of claim—Place of trial named in writ of summons not specially indorsed—Waiver of irregularity—Costs. Barrett v. Perth Mutual Fire Insurance Co., 10 O. W. R. 464.

Necessity for — Order to proceed at next sitting — Adjournment.] — An order made on the defendants' application to dismiss for want of prosecution, directing that the plaintif set down his action for the next sitting at Nelson and proceed with the trial, otherwise the action to stand dismissed without further order, dispenses with a notice of trial; and if, before the date fixed for the sitting at the time the order was made, the sitting is adjourned, it is a compliance with the order by the plaintiff if he enters the action for the later date, and is ready for trial when the case is called. McLeod v. Waterman, 9 B. C. R. 370.

Regularity — Close of pleadings — Action to establish will—Defence setting up agreement with testator—Joinder. Russell v. Russell, 10 O. W. R. 873.

Regularity — Close of pleadings — Counterclaim—Joinder of issue—Rules 262, 263—Jury notice.] — On the 19th October, 1906, the defendants delivered a statement of defence and counterclaim. No further pleadings were delivered until the 11th February, 1907, when the plaintiff delivered a joinder of issue, and served a jury notice and notice of trial, which were moved against as too late, it being contended that the cause was at issue not later than the middle of November, 1906:—Held, that the defendants (plaintiffs by counterclaim) not having noted the pleadings closed for default, it was open to the plaintiff to join issue when he did, and the pleadings were not closed until the 11th February, 1907, and therefore the notices were regular. — Con. Rules 262 and 263 considered. Nixon v. Mundett, 9 0. W. R. 400, 14 O. L. R. 343.

Service of — Letter wrongly addressed — Ratification.]—On the day prior to the last day for serving notice of trial, the plaintiff's solicitor, who lived in St. Thomas prepared a notice of trial and copies thereof, in three actions, which he directed to be forwarded to his Toronto agents, with instructions to serve a return with admissions of service; but, by a mistake in the office, the envelope was addressed to the defendants' solicitors in Toronto, and reached their office on the following morning; but did not come to the notice of the member of the firm who had charge of the defences therein until after four o'clock, when, on discovering that the letter was not addressed to his firm, he returned it with the notices to his St. Thomas agents, with instructions to return it to the plaintiff's solicitor, which was done:—Hold, reversing the decision of the Master in Chambers, that what was done did not constitute valid service of the notices on the defendants' solicitors of anything to ratify such service. Neusome v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association, 22 C. L. T. 115, 3 O. L. R. 253.

Setting down for trial — Motion to set aside and strike off list—Invalidated by subsequent proceedings—Amendment — New defendant—Fresh grounds of action.]—Master in Chambers granted plaintiff an order setting aside notice of trial as having become irregular, owing to case not being yet at issue, through amendments made subsequent to setting down and notice of trial. Costs to plaintiff in any event. Brennen v. Bank of Hamilton (1910), 17 O. W. R. S. 2 O. W. N. 01.

Time — Judgment granting new trial—Settlement of, 1—By the judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada an appeal in this action was allowed and a new trial granted. The judgment was read in open Court on the 27th May. The plaintiff's solicitor thereupon gave the usual ten days' notice of trial for the 10th June, 1902. The minutes of the judgment were not settled until the 3rd June, and when settled bore date the 27th May, 1902. The notice of trial was set aside as premature. Grant v. Acadia Coal Co., 22 C. L. T. 261.

Time for — Power to abridge—County Courts.] — A County Court Judge has no jurisdiction to abridge the six clear days' notice of trial required by s. 92 of the County Courts Act. Hickingbottom v. Jordan, 21 C. L. T. 490, and B. C. R. 126.

Waiver - Entry for trial - Motion to waves—Entry for trial—Motion to strike off—Non-appearance—Action dis-missed for—Appeal—Costs.]—Defendants after giving notice of trial accepted service of a replication pleaded by plaintiff, without making any objection thereto: -Held, that they thereby waived the notice and admitted that the cause was not at issue when it was given. Where defendants subsequently gave another notice, which was admittedly defective, and entered the cause on the docket of causes for trial:—Held, that the cause was improperly entered and that a motion to set aside the notice, and to strike the cause set aside the notice, and to strike the cause off the docket, should have prevailed. Plain-tiff did not appear at the time at which the cause was entered for trial, and an order was obtained by defendants under O. 34, R. 33, dismissing the action for non-appearance:-Held, that there was an appeal from the order so made, and that plaintiff was not limited to an application, under the order, to have the judgment set aside. Per Meagher, J. (dissenting), that there should be no costs, as the difficulty appeared to have arisen from a misunderstanding between solicitors. Cummings v. Pickles, 32 N. S. R. 489.

8. POSTPONEMENT OF TRIAL.

Absence of witness — Onerous terms.]

—Where a party to a suit is entitled to a postponement of the trial, on the ground of the absence of a material witness, it is improper to impose as a term of granting the order a condition that the party consent to a change of venue. Royal Bank of Canada v. Hale, 36 N. B. R. 471.

Absence of witness — Terms—Venue —Costs. Gooch v. Anderson, 2 O. W. R. 426.

Action to recover possession of mining lands — Act of provincial legislature passed pendente lite validating title of defendants — Petition for disallowance — Grounds for postponement. Florence Mining Co. v. Cobalt Lake Mining Co., 10 O. W. R. 38, 225. Adding parties — Amendment — Trial proceeding without adjournment — Witness for defendant not present — Refusal to adjourn — New trial. Arthur v. Faucett, 5 O. W. R. 334.

Application for — Illness of plaintiff—Inability to undergo examination for discovery — Evidence — Physicians — Detectives.]—Order made postponing trial owing to illness of plaintiff. Some interesting comments will be found on the virility of opposing affidavits of medical men and the use of detectives as witnesses on interlocutory motions in civil proceedings. Stone V. Currie, 13 O. W. R. 591.

Consent — Disbursements — Attorney fees—C. P. 291.1—When all the parties agree to a joint hearing of a case, such consent applies only to the service of subpenas, the taxation of the witnesses and the cost of the depositions; it cannot affect the fees of the attorneys appearing for the parties to the suit. Lawregne v. Larvivere (1910), 17 R. L. n. s. 133, 12 Que. P. R. 206.

Costs — Inspection of mining land,] —
The defendants got an order at the trial for the inspection of a vein in the plaintiffs' claim, which they alleged was the continuation of a vein the apex of which was within the limits of their own claim, and the plaintiffs, alleging that such order necessitated inspection by them of other similar places on their property, with a view of furnishing evidence to rebut that which might be adduced by reason of the defendants' inspection, and asked for an adjournment for that purpose, were allowed the adjournment, but only on the terms that all costs occasioned thereby should be borne by them in any event:—Held, on appeal, that such costs should abide the result of the issues to which the inspection related. Iron Mask v. Centre Star, 7 Brit, Col. L. R. 66.

Determination of questions arising in another pending action — Causes of action — Identity. Toronto v. Toronto Rec. Co., 4 O. W. R. 221, 345, 5 O. W. R. 14.

Discretion — Review — New trial.]—If a trial Judge refuses, except upon unusual and onerous terms, to postpone a trial on the ground of the absence of a material witness, the Court will review the exercise of his discretion, and grant a new trial. Hale v. Tobique Manufacturing Co., 36 N. B. R. 360.

Extension of time for delivery of defence — Illness of defendants' manager — Terms — Costs. Cliff v. New Ontario S. S. Co., 6 O. W. R. 519; Grandin v. New Ontario S. S. Co., & Can. North. Rw. Co., 6 O. W. R. 521.

Grounds—Action for libel — Costs.]—Where it was understood that one action for libel in a newspaper should be made a test case, and that action was settled, Master in Chambers granted order postponing two other similar actions against other newspapers until March sittings. Wilkinson v. Mail Printing Co., Wilkinson v. Hamilton Spectator Co. (1911), 18.0 W. R. 277, 2.0 W. N. 644. See 17 O. W. R. 935, 2.0 W. N. 471.

Walter v, Independent Order of Foresters,
5 O, W. R. 421.

Preliminary trial of question of law -Demurrer. |-The action was founded upon an agreement, under which the defendants were to transfer to the plaintiff a quantity of stock in certain telephone companies and property and assets connected therewith, in consideration of which the plaintiff agreed to make certain payments in money, deliver certain stock, and transfer to the defendants certain lands, including the portion of parish lot 3, Kildonan, lying west of the main highway. The plaintiff conveyed the land to the defendants, but charged that he had been induced to enter into the agreement by the misrepresentations of the defendants and that the stock transferred to him was of no value. He claimed $210,000 damages and value. He claimed $210,000 damages and also claimed a lien on lot 3, Kildonan, for $150,000. In the statement of defence the defendants raised the question of the plaintiff's legal right to a lien:—Held, that a Judge should make an order for the trial of such a question before the trial of the issues of fact, only where the points of law involved are such as affect the whole case, the disposition of which would either determine the case or declare some important principle which would influence the consideration of the matters remaining. If there are issues of fact which must be tried in any event, however the point of law be decided, the order should be refused and the point left to be argued before the Judge at the If the question of the plaintiff's right to a lien were argued and decided, the main issues raised in the action would still remain undisposed of. A question like the present one, not being the principal issue involved, but arising as an incident to the main relief sought, should not be set down to be argued and decided before the trial of the action. Gardner v. Bickley, 24 C. L. T. 382, 15 Man. L. R. 354.

Preliminary trial of question of law—Pleading.]—Under Rule 453 of the King's Bench Act, Man, it is only in respect of some question of law which is fundamental or goes to the root of the cause of action or defence set up that there should be a separate argument before the trial. As to all other matters in the pleadings which may be objectionable, an application in Chambers under Rule 326, to strike them out, is the proper remedy. Makarsky v. Can. Pac. Rv. Co., 15 Man, L. R. 53.

Separate trial of preliminary issue—Settlement of action — Rule 531—Consent. Thomas v. Imperial Export Co., 7 O. W. R. 745, 807.

10. SETTING DOWN.

Application for leave to set down—Irregularity— Pleadings not closed— Counterclaim— Defence— Reply. Brookfield v. Sutcliffe, 40 N. S. R. 628.

Close of pleadings — Rights of defendant — Injunction motion — Terms of order. Saunderson v. Johnston, 4 O. W. R. 459, 487

Delay — Motion to strike out inscription.]—A motion by the plaintiff to strike out an inscription on the merits made by the defendant on the 2nd June for the 11th September following will be refused, where it does not appear that such inscription has been made for the purpose of unjustly delaying the proceedings. Belanger v. Montmorency Cotton Mills Co., 7 Que. P. R. 202.

Desistment - Re-entry -Copies of pleadings - Discretion - Dismissal of action.]-A party who desists from any proceeding may proceed anew when no have been incurred .- Where a party has desisted from a setting down of an ac tion for trial before the lapse of the proper time, he can set it down again without having to pay costs as a condition precedent.— The Court of first instance, being seised of a cause, has discretion to determine whether the copies of the proceedings produced are sufficient, according to the requirements of the law, for understanding the case. — Semble, that the Superior Court may dismiss an action in default of proof, reserving to the plaintiff the right to apply, although the plaintiff has set down an appeal from an order upon a motion to strike the case out of the list of cases for examination and Nicolet v. Toussignant, 3 Que. P. hearing. R 239 Inscription ex parte — Copy of account not served. — An inscription for trial by the plaintiff ex parte will be set aside on motion, if a copy of the account sued for has not been served upon the party defendant. Laurie Engine and Machine Co. v. Dumont, 9 Que, P. R. 40.

Inscription ex parte — Default of plea.]—Where a defendant has appeared and raised a preliminary exception, which has been dismissed, but has not pleaded to the merits, the plaintiff may inscribe for trial ex parie, but not as upon default. Lefebvre-Descoteaux v. Lefebvre-Descoteaux, 8 Que. P. R. 348, Inscription for trial — Ex parte inscription — Notice — Irregularity,]—An ex parte inscription should not be accompanied by a notice for a fixed day, saving the completion of it later, and if it is accompanied by an irregular notice, but followed by a regular notice, it will not be set aside on motion. Boucher v. Mondor, 9 Que. P. R. 258.

Irregularity — Re-entry — Costs.] — Where an action has been improperly entered for trial, the entry may be withdrawn and another substituted for it, the first being without effect; and the only costs to which the attorney is entitled are the costs of the motion to strike out the first entry, if such motion has been made. Nicolet v. Toussipnant, 9 Que. Q. B. 356.

Irregularity — Time — Joinder of issue.]—An inscription for hearing upon the merits filed less than three days before issue joined is illegal and will not be set aside on motion. Brisson v. International Harvester Co., 6 Que, P. R. 42.

Peremption of suit — Is the striking of a cause from the hearing roll a useful proceeding — C. P. 279.1—The mere striking by the Court of a cause from the hearing roll is not a proceeding interrupting peremption, where no notice was given by either party of the date on which such a case was set down for hearing. Comp. Glasson, 798, Carre & Chauceau, Art. 399, Q. 1437; Coke v. Millar, 4 R. L. 240. Delle J. Prouls v. Les Commissaires D'Ecoles de Dorval (1910), 11 Que, P. R. 395.

Proceeding taken in name of deceased party — Amendment — Discretionary order — Interference with discretion on appeal.]-During the time between the hearing of a case and the rendering of the judg-ment in the trial Court, the defendant died. His solicitor by inadvertence, inscribed the case for revision in the name of the deceased defendant. The plaintiffs allowed a term of the Court of Review to pass without no-ticing the irregularity of the inscription, but when the case was ripe for hearing on the merits, gave notice of motion to reject the inscription. The executors of the deceased defendant then made a motion for permission to amend and to be allowed to make a regular reprise d'instance. The Court of Review allowed the plaintiffs' motion as to costs only, permitted the amendment and reprise d'instance applied for, and reversed the trial Court judgment on the merits. The Court of King's Bench (appeal side) reversed the judgment of the Court of review, on the ground that it had no jurisdiction to allow the amendment and hear the case on the merits, and that, consequently, all the orders and judgments given were nullities :reversing the judgment appealed from Strong. C.J., and Taschereau, J., dissenting, that the Court of Review had jurisdiction to allow the amendment and reprise d'instance, and that, as there was no abuse of discretion, the Court of King's Bench should not have interfered. Price v. Fraser, 22 C. L. T. 46, 31 S. C. R. 556.

Reinstatement of case struck out— Notice.]—Where a case, inscribed on the roll for trial, has been struck out in the absence of the attorneys, it may be reinstated, on the roll on the application of either of the parties, after notice to the other party. Carter v. Walker, 23 Que. S. C, 123.

Time — Premature filing.]—A proceeding in an action has no efficacy except as of the day upon which it is filed at the record office and made part of the record. 2. An inscription for examination and hearing, made before the expiration of the three days which follow issue joined, will be set aside upon the application of the opposite party. Lachance v. Casault, 4 Que. P. R. 223.

to strike out pleading — Res judicata — Practice — Costs. Armstrong v. Crawford, 12 O. W. R. 1155.

Prejudice.]—When the sum in litigation (in this case an alimentary allowance) is the only resource of the party seeking it, to whom serious prejudice will arise if the cause is not heard until it is reached in its place on the list, the Judge may order that the cause shall be called on as soon as possible. Jones v. Moodic, 3 Que. P. R. 163.

12. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Affinity of one of several J. P.'s trying cause to party is ground for setting aside their judgment.]—These were appeals from judgments of four J. P.'s fining appellants in assault cases. One of the magistrates was married to a first cousin of D. McIntosh, the respondent in one of the cases. The respondents in the other cases at the time of the alleged assault, were not themselves of affinity to any of the magistrates but were acting as servants of D. McIntosh. Objection was taken to the convictions on the ground of D. McIntosh's affinity to one of the magistrates:—Held, Hensley, J., that this objection was tala, and the convictions must be set aside, and that no distinction could be made between the case of D. McIntosh and those of his servants, but that the convictions in their cases must be set aside on the same ground. Campbell v. McIntosh 1872), 1 P. E. I. R. 423.

Agent not summoned may defend first trial without variety principal's right to rehearing — Nev trial.—An absent debtor attachment under 20 Geo. III., c. 9, was issued against W., but no summons was served on his arent. The 8th section of the statute gives the absent debtor the right to a rehearing within three years after judgment. At trial of this cause, the defendant's agent, by his counsel, wished to cross-examine the witnesses and address the jury. It was objected that he could not do so without waiving defendant's right to a rehearing and that as no appearance had been entered by the agent for the defendant, the agent could not be heard to defend. The Court at the trial refused to allow the agent's counsel to proceed, but reserved the point:—Held, (Peters, J.) that the agent had the right to defend without waiving his principal's right to a rehearing. Cormack v. Worrel (1850), 1 P. E. I. R. 1.

Joinder of actions for trial - Test Fairness to all parties - Practice.]-In considering whether or not a joinder trial should be ordered under Art. 291, C. P., of actions for damages for quasi-offences, the test is not whether the issues are similar or identical but whether the facts to be proved are the same in each, so that they may be tried and decided on the same evidence, and due regard must be had to fair and equal treatment to all the parties concerned. Hence, when litigation grew out of the collapse of a structure as follows: (a) a suit for damages by the owner against the builder; (b) a suit in warranty by the builder against a sub-contractor; (c) a suit in sub-warranty by the sub-contractor against a special contractor for the steel work; (d) a suit by the builder against the owner for the balance of the contract price; (e) an incidental cross-demand by the owner for the damages caused by the collapse:— Held, that the enquiry into the cause of collapse must be the chief object of trial in each case, and they therefore may be joined, but the joinder of two or more, by an order which excludes one of them, to the detriment of a party thereto, is wrong and will be reversed on appeal. Gardiner v. Wilson, 17 Que, K. B. 498.

Judge interested in another action against defendant on similar facts, disqualified to try cause — Query] — Objection was taken to the Judge trying this cause, on the ground that he was a share-holder in the Bank of P. E. I., which had a case against the same defendant, in which the same questions would arise, and the same evidence be given as in this case, and, as such shareholder, was interested in the result of the present action, and, therefore, disqualified to try it.—Peters, J., was of opinion that the objection did not disqualify him, but the Chief Justice being of a contrary opinion, he declined to try the case. Hodgson v. Dawson (1868), 1 P. E. I. R. 282.

Must be brought to trial at third term — Discontinuance.]—An attachment under 20 Geo. III. c. 9, and all subsequent proceedings, are dissolved if the plaintiff neglect to bring the cause to trial at the third term without having obtained leave to continue it to another. A motion to set aside such proceedings may be made by a subsequent attacher who tried and obtained judgment at the third term. Wood v. Gay (1862), 1 P. E. I. R. 200.

Stay of trial — Action for arrest — Appeal pending from judgment of acquitial.]—It is convenient to suspend the hearing of an action for damages resulting from an arrest, when there is an appeal pending from the order dismissing the complaint upon which the arrest was made, and this appeal has not yet been decided by the Test action - Substitution of another action as test action.] - After one of a number of actions brought by different plaintiffs against the same defendants in respect to causes of action which were identical has been ordered to be tried as a test action, the Court has power to substitute another action as a test action. Twenty-nine actions action as a test action. Twenty-nine actions were brought by different persons against the defendants for damages caused by the death of relatives in an explosion in the defendants' coal mine, and on the plaintifs' application an order for a test action was application an order for a test action was made, the order providing that the defend-ants, if dissatisfied with the result of the test action, might apply to have the other action proceeded with, and that they might apply to have any of the actions forthwith proceeded with, if there existed any special ground of defence applicable to it, and not raised in the test action. After obtaining the order, the plaintiffs' solicitor discovered that, on account of the particular place in the mine in which McLeod was killed, a separate defence not applicable to the other cases might apply, and an application was made for the substitution of another action as the test action:—Held, that the object of the order which was provisional in its nature, was to have a fair test action, and, as the one chosen would not be a fair one, another should be chosen. McLeod v. Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co., 23 C. L. T. 341, 10 B. C. R. 103.

Undertaking as to trial — Judgment.]
—An undertaking, embodied in an order, that the plainiiff should not proceed further, until the trial of the action, with his application for a certificate of improvements, is substantially compiled with if no proceedings are taken until after judgment pronounced, though something be done before the judgment is drawn up and entered. Demand — Evidence — Onus.] — The plaintiff sold to the defendant two horses and took a lien-note for the price, which was not paid at maturity. The defendant re-took the horses under his lien-note, but that was after this action had been brought for unlawful detention of the horses: — Held, that, to succeed in the action of detinue, the plaintiff must shew that the defendant detained the horses after the plaintiff made a demand; the onus was on the plaintiff; the evidence did not shew a demand; and the action was dismissed with costs. Macleod v. Scramlen (1910), 14 W. L. R. 262, 3 Sask. L. R. 155.

Demand and refusal.]—In an action of detinue, as distinguished from an action of conversion, a proof of demand and refusal is essential, if the detention is denied. Gray v. Guernsey, 5 Terr. L. R. 439.

Negligence — Parent and child.] — A lad borrowed a horse from a person from whom his father had forbidden him to borrow horses. On the son reaching home with the horse, his father told him to tie it up, with the intention that his son should return it later. On his father attempting to untie the horse for the purpose of his son returning it, it broke away and was lost, and the father made no effort to find it:—Held, that the father was not liable in detinue or trover, or in an action for negligence, Kirkland v, Rendernecht, 4 Terr. L. R. 195.

Permission to store goods, with knowledge of dispute as to title — Intent to convert necessary — Evidence of intent — Setting aside finding of trial Judge, — Mere permission by the defendant to store goods in the defendant's barn, with knowledge of a dispute as to the title to the goods, but without intent to exercise dominion over the same, does not constitute conversion.—Where a cause is tried by a Judge without a jury, and the facts in evidence are not disputed, the Court may reconsider the evidence in the case and overrule the judgment of the trial Judge, if they think it wrong.—Here, in the opinion of the majority of the Court, the evidence did not prove any intent on the part of the defendant to convert the goods in dispute, and the finding of the trial Judge that there had been a conversion was reversed: per Barker, C.J., McLeod, Gregory and White, JJ.; Landry, J., dissenting, Donald v. Accidental mixture of goods - Sale by trustee - Tenants in common - Following proceeds - Equitable claim - Jurisdiction of County Court - Demand.] - The defendant shipped wheat in a car from a place in Manitoba to Duluth with instructions that the wheat was to be unloaded at Roland and cleaned and dried at the plain-tiff's elevator there. This was done, and the wheat was thereby reduced in bulk to about 573 bushels. The plaintiff's employees, in reloading it into the car, supposing it to be the plaintiff's wheat, added about 260 bushels of the plaintiff's own wheat to make up a car load, and forwarded the car to its des-The defendant had obtained an tination. advance of money from B., the repayment of which he secured by transferring to B. the bill of lading for the wheat with the agreement that B. should sell it, and, after deducting the amount of the loan, pay the balance to the defendant. B. sold all the wheat, paid himself, and accounted to the defendant for the balance, neither of them knowing what part of the wheat was the plaintiff's:-Held, that there was a mixture of goods by accident, and the owners became tenants in common of the whole in the proportions which they severally contributed to it; (2) that B., as regards the wheat in question, stood in a fiduciary relation towards both the plaintiff and defendant; that the proceeds of property sold by a trustee without the consent of the owner can in equity, when traceable, be followed as fully as the property itself, if unconverted, could have been; that, so long as such money can be definitely traced it makes no difference that it has been mixed with other money; and that this rule applies, not only in the case of a trustee in the narrow and technical sense, but to any person in any kind of a fiduciary relation to others; (3) that an equitable claim like the plaintiff's in this action can now be entertained by a County Court; (4) that no demand and refusal were necessary before action. Action by trustees — Executors of deceased trustee — Joinder.]—By a marriage contract a trust as to $10,000 was created by the wife for the benefit of herself and husband as to income and as to capital for the benefit of the children of the marriage, and five trustees were appointed, the husband being one of them. The marriage took place in 1862, and in 1866 the wife died. Afterwards one of the trustees died and others resigned and were replaced. In Janu-1899, the husband died, leaving two children. By his will he appointed one child and two other persons his trustees and executors:-Held, that an action with respect to part of the trust estate instituted by the four surviving trustees and the executors and trustees of the fifth (deceased) was regular as regards form, inasmuch as their administration was joint, like that of the members of a syndicate. No comes to meet the general expenses. (See 37 N. S. R. pp. 452-464). This order was affirmed by the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia in banco: — Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (37 N. S. R. 451), that the allowances for such expenditures need not be restricted to expenditures need not be restricted to amounts actually shewn to have been so expended that, under the Nova Scotia statute 2 Edw. VII. c. 13, and Order XXXII., Rule 3, a Judge may exercise judicial dis-cretion towards relieving a trustee from cretion towards relieving a trustee from liability for technical breaches of trust, and, for that purpose, may direct the admission of any evidence which he may deem proper for the taking of accounts. Cairns v. Murray, 37 S. C. R. 163.

Breach of trust — Liability for of cotrustee — "Honestly and reasonably."]—
A testator devised his estate to his three executors upon trust. One of the executors was a solicitor, and with regard to him the will provided that in the administration and management of the estate he should be entitled to the same professional remuneration as if he were not trustee. Another executor was in England and the third, the defendant, was told by the testator that the solicitor-trustee was to have the management of the estate, and consented to act upon that understanding. All three proved the will and acted as trustees, but the whole management of the estate was left to the solicitor, and at his death it was found that he had, without the knowledge of the defendant, misappropriated the moneys of the estate, and that his own estate was insolvent. The testator had perfect confidence in the solicitor, who up to the time of his death was reputed to be wealthy:—Held, that the defendant, having acted honestly and reasonably within the meaning of 62 V. (2) c. 15, s. 1, was not liable to make good to the estate the loss occasioned by the misconduct of the solicitor. Dover v. Denne, 22 C. L. T. 204, 3 O. L. R. 664, 1 O. W. R. 201.

Breach of trust — Moneys placed in hands of trustee by mortgagee — Loan to pay off incumbrances and complete buildings on land — Misapplication — Declaration— Account — Liability of partner of solicitortrustee. Miller v. German, 12 O. W. R. 179.

Breach of trust - Purchase by trustee from trust estate — Partnership — Adequacy of price — Delay in bringing action—
Evidence — Entries in books.] — In 1885 the trustees of a certain business sold it at an adequate price to B., who before purchasing stipulated with C., one of the trustees, that he should go into partnership with him; C. did go into partnership, and in 1893 he sold out his interest at a large profit. In 1903 certain beneficiaries commenced an action founded on an alleged breach of trust against C. and the representatives of his deceased co-executor, and asked for an order declaring that the sale to B. was a sham and was really one to C .: - Held, that considering the number of years since the sale took place and that it was for a fair price, C.'s account of the transaction must be accepted, notwithstanding several suspicious circumstances, In cross-examination of a defendant it is admissible to question him as to what disposition he has made of his property since the suit was begun or in anticipation of it, and a defendant so disposing of his property does an act which will be viewed with suspicion. Per Hunter, C.J.:-Entries made by the deceased executor in a private book kept by him were not admissible in evidence either for or against the other executor, neither were the entries in the charge book of the solicitor for B. and C. as to instructions received by him from B. in regard to the drawing of certain papers carrying out the arrangement between B. and C. admissible in evidence as against C. Camsusa v. Coigdarripe, 11 B. C. R. 177.

Breach of trust — Relief — 61 V. c. 25 — Costs.]—A testator devised and bequeathed his real and personal estate to his wife "to be hers in such a way that she shall during her natural life have the full use, benefit, and enjoyment thereof." He directed his executors to sell his real estate and to invest any money belonging to his estate in certain specified securities, "so that my said wife may have the interest and income arising therefrom during her life," and appointed his wife and the plaintiffs

The widow invested part of the proceeds in securities in the name of herself and one of the plaintiffs, and disposed of, though in what way did not appear, the balance of the principal moneys. A suit was brought by the plaintiffs after the widow's death to be relieved from liability for the loss of such part of the estate. By 61 V. c. 26, a trustee who has acted honestly and reasonably, and ought fairly to be excused for the breach of a trust, and for omitting to obtain the directions of the Court in Equity in the matter in which he committed such breach, may be relieved by the Court from personal liability for such breach. Relief granted, but without costs. Simpson v. Johnston, 22 C. L. T. 38, 2 N. B. Eq. R. 333.

Breach of trust — 62 V. (2) c. 15 s. 1 — "Honestly and reasonably" — Opinion evidence—Inadmissibility.] — The provisions of 62 V. (2) c. 15, s. 1, relieving trustees from the consequences of technical breaches of trust who have acted "honestly and reasonably," does not render competent as evidence the opinions of bankers or other financial men as to whether the trustee has so acted in the course he has taken or omitted to take. The general rule of evidence still applies, that mere personal belief or opinion is not evidence, and that the test of reasonableness is that exhibited by the ordinary business man, or the man of ordinary sense, knowledge, and prudence in the conduct of his own affairs. The nearest conduct of his own affairs. The nearest approach to a working rule is, that, in order to exercise a fair judgment with regard to the conduct of trustees at a particular time, we must place ourselves in the position they occupied at that time and determine for our-selves what, having regard to the opinion prevalent at that time in the neighbourhood and concurrent with the transaction, would have been considered the prudent course for them to have adopted. This is a different thing to asking the opinion of witnesses of what would have been done or what would have happened under stated circumstances several years ago, as was sought in this case. Smith v. Mason. 21 C. L. T. 260, 1 O. L.

Cestui que trust claiming a beneficial interest of any kind, may lodge a caveat under Land Titles Act, s. 136, whether the trust is evidenced by writing or not. ran the paper for some time and finally effected a sale of the plant. After paying expenses a loss resulted to the plaintiffs, and they brought action, charging defendants with failure to renew the chattel mortgage and failure to sell the plant within a reasonable time. At trial Latchford J., gave plaintiffs judgment for $500.—Divisional Court reversed above judgment, holding that defendants had acted honestly, and no loss fendants had acted honestly, and no loss had resulted to plaintiffs through their actions in dealing with the property.—Whitcher v. The plaintiff alleged that he had bought and paid for the lands and taken deeds in the defendant's name with his knowledge and consent. fendant positively denies this, and asserted that he had himself bought and paid for the lands. The trial Judge held that the plaintiff had not satisfied the onus that lay on him to establish a clear case upon the evidence, and gave judgment for the defend-ant: — Held, on appeal to the full Court, that, in view of the letters written by the defendant to the plaintiff and of the undis-puted facts and circumstances, as set out in the judgments below, the plaintiff's case was clearly made out.—2. Notwithstanding s. 7 of the Statute of Frauds, an express vereal trust of land may be proved by oral testimony, wherever a strict reading of the statute would enable the trustee to commit a fraud. Re Duke of Mariborough, [1894] 2 Ch. 141, and Rochefoucauld v. Boustead, [1897] 1 Ch, 196, followed. Gor-don v. Hanford, 4 W. L. R. 241, 16 Man. L. R. 292. express verbal trust of land may be proved Fraud — Finding of trial Judge — Reversal on appeal — Construction of documents—Inferences from facts — Statute of Frauds—Parol evidence of express trust — Corroboration — Fiduciary relationship—Judgment declaring trust and directing account—Form of. Gordon v. Handford (Man.), 4 W. L. R. 241.

Conveyance of land to trustee for infant — Fraud of trustee — Conveyance to creditor as security — Breach of trust— Constructive notice — Solicitor acting for both parties — Purchase for value — Occupation of land by tenant — Negligence — Redemption — Costs.]—The defendant H., being solicitor for the plaintiff, at his request accepted the trusteeship of the land in question for the plaintiff's infant son, but afterwards, as found by the trial Judige, fraudulently conveyed the land to the defendant S., who had been his client, in satisfaction of the sum of $400, part of his then indebtedness to her. S. had no notice of the plaintiff's claim, and supposed that the land was vacant, although it had a house both parties - Purchase for value - Occuthe land was vacant, although it had a house on it, which, in fact, had been all the time on it, which, in fact, in beet an the time coccupied by tenants paying rent to the plaintiff:—Held, that notice of the plaintiff claim should not be attributed to S. on account of her solicitor's knowledge of the facts; because, in carrying out the transaction, the solicitor would naturally suppress that knowledge .- Rolland v. Hart, L. R. 6 Ch. 678, followed.—2. The occupation of the land by a tenant affected S, with constructive notice only of that tenant's rights, and not with notice of the lessor's title or rights. -Hunt v. Luck, [1902] 1 Ch. 428, followed. -3. S. was entitled to be treated as a purchaser for value without notice; and, having the legal estate, her claim should prevail over the prior equity of the plaintiff, but only to the extent of the amount by which she had reduced her claim against H., as no new or further consideration passed from her to H, when she acquired the title .- 4. The action of the plaintiff in conveying the land to H., and not afterwards enquiring what the trustee was doing with the property, could not be considered as negligence disentitling the plaintiff to relief, in view of the fact that he continued to receive the rents.—Shorpshire, etc., Co. v. The Queen, L. R. 7 H. L. 507, followed.—5. The infant was entitled to redeem the land upon payment to S. of the $460 with interest, her subsequent outlays, and costs of suit .- 6. The defendant H, should pay the infant the amount so found due to S, and the plaintiff's costs. MacArthur v. Hastings, 15 Man. L. R. 500, 1 W. L. R. 285.

Sale of part by trustee to purchaser for value — Power of sale without notice to cestui que trust — Implication from circumstances — Reconveyance of lands unsold — Redeupption — Terms. McMillan v. Gunn (Man.), 5 W. L., R. 479.

Costs Set-off Beneficiary.]—Trustees cannot set up as a set-off to the claim of one of the beneficiaries for his share of revenue declared not seizable, the amount which such beneficiary owes for the costs of an action for removal of one of the trustees from his office, and paid by the trustees upon dismissal of such action.—A trustee may charge to the trust the costs which he has incurred in an action to remove him from the office which has been dismissed; and trustees can also charge to the trust the costs of an action which their solicitors have begun against them to force them to pay such costs. Brunet v. Brunet, 17 Que. S. C. 490.

Creation of trusts — Co-owners of property — Revenues — Lease — Attachment of rent.1—The creation of a trust by co-owners of property, in a power of attorney to the trustees, to receive the revenues of the property and apply them to certain uses, but without any conveyance of title or ownership, can have no effect on a lease, made subsequently by one of such co-owners, of his share of the property, or on the relations between him and his lessee. Hence an attachment of the rent by his judgment creditor cannot be attacked or set aside at the instance of one of his co-owners on the ground of the trust created as stated above. Nelson v. Resther. 16 Que. K. B. 550.

Debentures — Validity — Ultra vires—Breach of trust — Crosen, I—In an action for the recovery of interest upon certain debentures issued by the defendants and held by the Crown, the defendants set up that they had no authority to issue the debentures; that the application by them of moneys received from the sale of debentures to the payment of interest on other debentures, was a misapplication of the trust fund and a breach of trust; and that the Crown's advisers knew, when the debentures were acquired by it, that the proceeds were to be so misapplied:—Held, that, inasmuch as the defendants had authority to issue and dispose of the debentures, their acts in so doing were intra vires, and that compilicity by the Crowa in a breach of trust committed by them could not be relied on as a defence to the action. Declaration of trust — Consideration to support action — Statute of Frauds — Memorandum — Part performance — Mining areas - Equitable interest, assignment of — Judicature Act, s. 19 (5).]—Where money was advanced by B. to enable the defendant to take up certain coal mining areas for the benefit of himself and other persons, of whom M. was one:-Held, that the money so advanced, being advanced with M.'s knowledge, was consideration to support an action by the assignee of M, to enforce a declaration of trust made by the defenda declaration of trust made by the detendant in favour of M., although the latter had contributed nothing towards the acquisition of the areas, and the defendant's act in proposing to give him an interest was purely voluntary; that it was not necessary that there should be consideration to enable the Court to enforce against defendant a declaration of trust made by him in favour of M. after the acquisition of the areas: that, to enable the defendant to avail himself of the defence of the Statute of Frauds against the plaintiff, on the ground that there was no writing as between the plaintiff (the assignee) and M., it was necessary that such defence should have been pleaded -Nevertheless, as the areas had been sold by the defendant before the making of the assignment, and the assignment only related to the proceeds of the sale and not to the areas transferred, the statute did not apply. areas transferred, the statute and no appli-—If otherwise, the requirement of a writing was satisfied by a receipt given by M.-expressed to be for a share of his interest; and the transfer of a bond from M. to the assignee, and the transfer of shares on the stock book of the company, constituted part performance.—Held, also, that s. 19 (5) of the Judicature Act did not apply, this being the assignment of an equitable interest. Corbett v. McNeil, 1 E, L. R. 368, 2 E. L. R. 257, 41 N. S. R. 110.

Deed of donation in trust - Interpretation of deed as to the beneficiaries therein mentioned.]—That the deed of donation, invoked in the pleadings in this case, made on the 21st June, 1875, by the late John Harris before James Smith, notary, to the Reverend Thomas Fry Lewis Evans, rector of the parish of St. Stephen, his successor or successors in office, in trust, the uses and upon the trusts in said deed mentioned, of the property known as lot No. 1817 St. Ann's Ward in the city of Mont-real, was made for the use and benefit of said parish as it existed when said deed said parish as it existed when said deed was executed; and that said property so donated is not vested in the intervenants, to wit, the rector and church wardens of the church and present parish of St. Stephen, a parish partly situated in the city of Westmount, and not comprising within its limits any part of the territory known as the parish of St. Stephen when the said deed of donation was executed. Incumbent, etc. v. Rector, etc. (1910), 16 R. de J. 487. (Confirmed in Court of King's Bench; and appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada is now pending.)

Defaulting trustee — Following trust funds — Assignee.]—The rules as to following trust funds in the hands of a defaulting trustee apply against the assignee of a defaulting trustee as fully as against the trustee himself.—The beneficial owner has a charge on the property wrongfully disposed of, and may follow it wherever it can be distinguished. In this respect there is no distinction between an express trustee and an agent or a bailee or anybody else in a fiduciary position. Smith v. Faulkner, 40 N. S. R. 528.

Discretion — Lunatic — Setting apart moneys for — Will.]—Where, under the terms of a will, executors and trustees are required to retain in their hands a sufficient sum to provide for the support of a lunatic, the Court will not interfere with the exercise of the discretion given to the trustees as to the appropriation of the moneys for such purpose. In re Sargent, 24 C. L. T. 357, 8 O. L. R. 250, 3 O. W. R. 769.

Drunkard interdicted — Curator's accounts.]—When the curator to the property of an interdicted drunkard is replaced during the interdiction, his obligation as a trustee is discharged when he accounts to his successor.—The interdict is only entitled to a final account of his curators' administration after his interdiction has been removed. The only remedy he has against those who have already accounted, is to have their accounts amended. Goyette v. Goyette (1910), 39 Que. S. C. 124.

Ejectment - Counterclaim to enforce trust and to set aside conveyance as fraudulent - Statute of Frauds - Pleading -Creditors — Improper joinder of causes of counterclaim — Amendment — Election.]— The plaintiff sought to recover possession of land; and the defendant, by way of of land; and the defendant, by way of counterclaim against the plaintiff and the plaintiff's grantor (her son) alleged that the latter held and conveyed the land subject to a trust in her (the defendant's) favour; and also that his conveyance to the plaintiff was voluntary and without consideration and made for the express purpose of defeating and delaying the defendant and the other creditors of the son, and was fraudulent and void; but the defendant did not directly allege that she was a creditor, nor did she state that she counterclaimed on behalf of all creditors:—Held, that the trust, if there was any, resting in parol, there was nothing to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds, and it necessarily failed.—Held, also, that if a counterclaim could be asserted on behalf of the defendant and all other creditors of the grantor, the two claims could not be joined in one action of counterclaim; and leave to amend should not be given to enable the defendant to abandon the claim to enforce the trust, and proceed upon the other claim on behalf of all creditors; but the dismissal of the action should be without prejudice to any action which the defendant might bring to set aside the conveyance. — Judgment of Boyd, C., affirmed. Parker v. Tain, 10 O. W. B. 36, 848, 15 O. L. R. 187.

Farm held by daughter in trust for mother and father's estate — Declara-tion granted — Subject to lease to brother -Lien of daughter for moneys paid for interest on mortgage and taxes - Undivided one-half interest—Conveyance of to mother.]
Plaintiff brought action against her daughter and her son, for a declaration that the daughter was a trustee for her of lot 20, con. 4, in township of Tay, and that a lease of said lands from said daughter to said son should be set aside.—Latchford, J., held, that the daughter held said lands upon a trust for plaintiff and her deceased husband: that there were no grounds for setting aside the lease, as it was made in good faith be-tween brother and sister for the advantage of their parents. Action against son dis-missed without costs. Declaration granted declaring that daughter held said lands as trustee for plaintiff and the estate of plaintiff's husband, subject to said lease, and to a lien claimed by daughter for all moneys paid on account of the mortgage and for taxes on the property, together with interest and costs; that on payment of defendant's lien, plaintiff should be entitled to a conveyance of an undivided one-half interest in the lands, subject to said lease. Brown v. Thompson (1910), 17 O. W. R. 297, 2 O. W. N. 220

Funds held in trust by Dominion for Ontario — Rate of interest — Right to pay over funds and extinguish liability— Tender — Sufficiency of]—Held, that the Dominion of Canada, prior to the 31st December, 1904, was under an obligation to pay to the province of Ontario interest at the rate of 6 per cent, per annum on the capital of certain trust funds held by the Dominion and belonging to the province, viz., the Upper Canada Grammar School Fund, the Upper Canada Building Fund, and the Upper Canada Improvement Fund.

—2. That the Dominion at the date mentioned had no right, without the assent of the province, to reduce the rate of interest from 5 per cent., to 4 per cent. per annum .-3. That the Dominion has the right at any time to pay or hand over to the province the amount of such trust funds, with interest accrued thereon, in discharge of its obligations in respect thereof both as to the principal and the interest.—4. On the 29th December, 1903, the Minister of Finance for the Dominion of Canada wrote to the Premier of Ontario respecting the payment of interest on the above funds as follows:"It has been decided to pay on the 1st of January, 1904, the interest on these funds at the rate heretofore paid, namely, 5 per cent. After that date, interest at the rate of 4 per cent, will be paid until further notice, or until the principal of the funds is paid to Ontario in full. If this arrangement is not satisfactory to your government, I shall be pleased to receive notice to that effect, whereupon arrangements will be made to pay off the principal sum at an early date." On the 6th January, 1904, the Premier of Ontario replied that such proposal was not satisfactory to his government; and intimated that the rate of interest, 5 per cent., was not susceptible of modification without the consent of the province:

Grant of land from Crown to church trustees subject to trusts declared — Sale of part of land — Conveyance to local trustees — Saskatchevan Land Titles Act — Saskatchevan Real Property Act.]—Action for a declaration that defendants were trustees for plaintiffs of certain lands:—Held, that they were, and directed to execute a transfer to the plaintiff. Fish v. Bryce, 10 W. L. R. 616, 2 Sask. L. R. 111.

Grant on condition — Revocation — Release.]—The owner of land, "in consideration of natural love and affection and of one dollar." conveyed it to the defendants in fee, subject to a life-estate in his own favour and "subject to the payment thereout by the (defendants)" of certain sums to the plaintiffs; the deed being voluntary as to them. The deed contained a covenant by the defendants with the grantor to make the payments, and was executed by the grantor and the defendants. Seven months later the grantor conveyed the same land to the defendants in fee, for their own use absolutely, free from all incumbrances:—Held, that an irrevocable trust was created by the first deed in favour of the plaintiffs, and was enforceable by them, and that this trust was not affected or released by the second deed. Gregory v. Williams, 3 Mer. 582, and Mulholland v. Merriam. 19 Gr. 288, applied. Edmisson v. Couch, 19 C. L. T. 388, 29 A. R. 537

Interest in partnership — Trustees under will — Sale of partnership interest to surviving partners — Discretion of trustee — Adequacy of price — Good-will — Beneficiaries under will —Atteack on sale—Account — Costs. Smith v. Smith, 7 O. W. R. 586.

Investment — Shares in company — Conversion.]—An order was made authorising an executrix to convert certain shares in a company bequeathed to her for life with remainder to her children into shares of a new company (in which the old one was about to be merged), such shares not being an investment authorised by the Trustee Investment Act, but it appearing that the arrangement would be for the benefit of the estate. In re Strathy Trusts, 21 C. L. T. 339.

Investments — Realisation — Tenants for lite — Remaindermen — Apportionment — Election — Rate of interest. — A testatrix devised and bequeathed all her real and personal estate to trustees to sell and convert into money and to invest the money. She directed that the residue after payment of debts, etc., should be divided equally among her four children, three daughters and a son; each daughter to receive the income of her share for life, and her children the capital after her death; the son to receive his fourth absolutely on coming of age. In 1887, after all the children had attained their majority, a deed of partition was made. The investments were divided into four equal parts, an undivided fourth of certain real estate which had belonged to the testa-trix being allotted to each of the children. By the deed the children ratified the acts of the trustees and continued them in the trust. At the same time the son executed a deed to the trustees, under which they were to hold his share in trust for him during his life, with remainder to his children. The real estate above mentioned was subject to a building lease renewable. When the lease expired in 1893 it was renewed for 21 years at $1,850 a year. The lessee made default in 1894, and the trustees took possession of the land and buildings, but for a number of years were unable to obtain an adequate rental or make a sale. an accounter relatin of make a sais. In November, 1902, a sale was effected for $47,500:—Held, following In re Cameron, 2 O. L. R. 756, that the life tenants were entitled to some portion of this sum. But in ascertaining what sum was to be allowed them, the period before the deed of partition in 1887 was not to be considered. life tenants then, in effect, elected to treat this property as a satisfactory investment. The rate of interest was to be determined by the rate which could be obtained on which rustees may invest. Walters v. Solicitor for the Treasury, [1900] 2 Ch. 107, followed. An enquiry was ordered 2 Ch. 104, 1010wed, An enquiry was ordered to determine what sum invested on the 1st May, 1894, would have produced $47,500 on the 15th November, 1992, interest being calculated at 4½ per cent, with half-yearly rests, and credit being given for sums actually received by the life tenants from the rents accruing during that period. Land alleged to have been purchased by defendant as trustee for plaintiff—Parol evidence to establish contract—Insufficiency—Statute of Frauds—Agency of defendant's husband — Failure of proof.]—Action for declaration that Abraham Harris, husband of defendant, purchased the house occupied by plaintiff as plaintiff as agent, and held such property as trustee for plaintiff subject to payment by plaintiff of the purchase money thereof, and for specific performance of agreement to convey said property to plaintiff. At trial Riddell, J., 30th March, 1908, gave judgment for plaintiff, following Goldatein v. Harris (1908), 12 O. W. R. 797. The Court of Appeal held that the Goldstein case was decided on its facts and was not a case binding upon any Court in any other case. Trial judgment reversed. McKinnon v, Harris (1907), 14 O. W. Lien of trustee - Abortive sale Foreclosure — Purchase by trustee — Report on sale — Certificate in lieu of — Order — Terms.] — The defendant having been declared a trustee, with a lien for advances, and the greater portion of the trust estate having been offered for sale, to satisfy the amount found due him under the direction of the Court, and the sale having proved abortive:—Held, that the defendant's posi-tion as a trustee debarred him from the ordinary remedy of foreclosure, to which a mortgagee is entitled after an abortive sale. But, after a sale by auction has been tried in vain, the trustee is at liberty to make proposals on his own behalf, and the Court may, in its discretion, accept him as a purchaser of the estate. Tennant v. Trenchard, L. R. 4 Ch. 537, 546, 38 L. J. Ch. 661, followed.—Held, also, that it was not necessary to wait for the report on sale, but the mo-tion might be based upon a certificate of the Master shewing that the sale had proved abortive, no ground for impeaching the sale proceedings being suggested. - Held, also, that the property embraced in the order not being the whole of the trust estate, it would being the whole of the trust estate, it would not, upon the evidence, be just to compel the defendant to accept that which was put up for sale in satisfaction of his entire claim. The defendant offering to submit to terms, an order was made providing that he should be allowed to purchase at the amount of his claim less $250, in the event of $17,500 not being realised by a sale by tender or private contract. $Hutton\ v.\ Justin\ 22\ C.\ L.\ T.\ 23,\ 2\ O.\ L.\ R.\ 713,\ 1\ O.\ W.\ R.\ 64.$

Misappropriation of trust funds . Payment by trustee to stranger-Appropriarayment of trustee to strange—appropriation to debt of trustee.]—A sum of money was bequeathed to B., by his father, "to the use and benefit" of the children of B., for their "support and education," and not in any wise to be subject to or liable for any debts or obligations of B, personally. B. forwarded to T, a sum of £500 to hold "in trust," informing him that it was a special legacy for the benefit of his children. acknowledged receipt of the money, as stated, and placed it to the credit of the children of B, as directed. The money so remitted T. and his co-defendants, in part payment of the indebtedness to them of B. personally, an action was brought by B., as trustee for the children, and by the children, to have the defendants declared trustees, and for an account:—Held, per Weatherbe and Henry, JJ., that the appropriation could not be disturbed, it having been made to appear that the money paid over to T. by B. was not the money set forth in the pleadings, but a sum of money bequeathed to B. absolutely.-Held, per Graham, E.J., that there should be an enquiry to ascertain what sum should be allowed for the support and maintenance of the children of B., and that the plaintiffs, other than B., should have judgment against B. for the balance; that the defendants should make good this balance to the extent of the fund received by them. - Held, per Henry, J., that the intention of testator was to give the legacy to B., subject only to the obligation to use it for the support and education of the children; that if the sum of £500 became at any time subject to the terms of the trust, it became free from its operation as soon as the purposes of the trust were performed, and that the defend-ants, having whatever rights in the fund B. had, were no more answerable to the plaintiffs than B, himself would be. Mortgage to company - Release by mortgage to company — Release by mortgagor of equity of redemption—Alleged trust as to surplus after sale—Absence of writing — Oral evidence—Statute of Frauds -Preponderance of evidence-Consensus ad idem - Consideration - Admission - Burden of proof—Notice of trust.]—The plaintiff, on the 8th February, 1909, made an absolute transfer to a trading company of an hotel property, upon which the company had a first mortgage for $8,379,23. There was a second mortgage upon the property for $1,500; there were arrears of taxes against the property, and past due insurance premiums; and the plaintiff was indebted to various persons for supplies, wages, etc. The transfer was expressed to be made for the consideration of $1. The plaintiff's liabilities, at the date of the transfer, were found to be about $13,000, including the mortgage debts and other debts above mentioned; and the value of the property was found to be about $16,000. The trading company, on the 12th February, 1909, made a mortgage of the property to the defendants the Canadian Bank of Commerce for $12,815. The plaintiff alleged that the transfer was made upon trust to sell and account to him for any surplus. This was not directly expressed by any writing: but oral evidence was given by the plaintiff and an independent witness on his behalf, which was credited by the trial Judge, and a letter dated the 19th June, 1909, was written to the plaintiff by one D., a member of the defendant company, in which he stated that two other members of the company, who had the management of the company's affairs, "would feel themselves honourably bound to pay" the surplus over to the plaintiff; and "this they feel obliged to do on the understanding that they will continue to have your goodwill towards the business: Quare, whether this letter was not a sufficient manifestation of a trust to make inap-plicable the 7th section of the Statute of Frauds.—But, treating the letter as insufficient for that purpose, held, that the evidence of the plaintiff and his witnesses, corroborated by the letter, was sufficient to establish the trust alleged, either on the ground that there was a preponderance of evidence in the plaintiff's favour, or on the ground that there was no consensus ad idem between him and the company.-The effect of the statute and the authorities under it is to require, where there is no writing manifesting the trust, very clear and definite evidence of it.-The statement of the consideration as $1 might be taken as a convenient method of indicating that the true consideration was the assumption by the company of all incumbrances and charges against the property, but it was admitted by the company that they were to pay certain debts of the plaintiff not charged against the property; and the burden upon a mortgagor attacking a release of his equity to the mortgagee was lightened by that consideration.—Held, also, upon the evidence, that notice of the trust was not brought home to the bank; and against the bank the action was dismissed. McCue v. Smith (1911), 17 W. L. R. 145, Alta. L. R.

Municipal corporations - Mayor and his co-partner purchased city debentures-Re-sale at a profit—Trustee for city—Accounting for profit.]—Mayor and Corporation of City of Toronto were authorized by the Canadian Act, 13th and 14th Vict., c. 84, to issue debentures to a certain amount, to assist in the construction of Toronto, Simcoe, and Lake Huron Union Rw. At that period B. was Mayor and a member of the Finance Committee, and took an active part in passing a by-law which authorised the issue by the Corporation of debentures for the completion of the railway. B. at the time was engaged in co-partnership with H., and B. & H.'s firm purchased of S. & Co., contractors, for the Rw. Co., some of the debentures so issued, which had been assigned to S. & Co. by the Corporation, B. and his partner afterwards sold the deben-tures, and thereby realized a large profit. This transaction was without the knowledge of the Corporation .- Held (affirming the decree of the Court of Chancery in Canada). that B. must, in the circumstances of his being a member of the Corporation, and the manner in which he acted throughout the transaction, be treated as the trustee of the corporation, and was not entitled to any benefit received from the sale of the debentures, and was liable to account to the Corporation for the ascertained and unquestioned amount of profit made and received by him in the transaction in which he had engaged in respect of the sale of the Corporation debentures .- Held, further, that it made no difference that the profit from the sale of the debentures was made by B. and his partner H. jointly, and not by B. alone. and his Bowes v. Toronto (1858), C. R. 3, A. C. 10.

New trustee — Married woman.]—Under the Trustee Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 129. a married woman was appointed a trustee to fill a vacancy, in view of the circumstances detailed in the report. In re Gough, 22 C. L. T. 112, 3 O. L. R. 206.

Notice of trust - Constructive notice —Knowledge of solicitor — Priority of equitable claims — Loss of priority by negligence — Vendor and purchaser.]—The knowledge of a solicitor that a vendor of land holds it only as trustee will not be imputed to his client, the purchaser, merely because the client employs a clerk in the solicitor's office to prepare the necessary transfer and search the title, when the solicitor is not actually informed of the transaction, and the clerk knows nothing transaction, and the cierk knows nothing of the trust. Brown v. Sweet, 7 A. R. 725, followed.—The plaintiffs purchased a lot of land from the city of Winnipeg, and took the agreement of sale in Valle's name; Held, that it was gross negligence in them not to file a caveat in the Land Titles office or notify the city that Valle was a trustee for them, and that by such negligence they had lost priority as against a purchaser who had bought from Valle without notice of the trust. North-West Construction Co. v. Valle, 16 Man. L. R. 201.

Trustee for others — Action for account.]
—An agreement of co-owners of immovables in undivided shares to have a sale decreed by way of forced licitation at which one of them is to be declared the purchaser at a nominal price, is to acquire the property and administer it in trust for all, is lawful and not contrary to public policy. Therefore, the remedy of an action en reddition de comple against the heirs of the one who thus became the purchaser, is open to those who were originally his co-owners. Passing accounts — Jurisdiction of Court of Equity — Commission.]—A trustee under a deed of trust for the benefit of creditors cannot, upon his own application, pass his accounts in the Court of Equity. Trustee allowed a commission of five per cent. on receipts. In re Van Wart, 21 C. L. T. 509, 2 N. B. Eq. R. 320.

Powers - Party wall - Tenants in common — Deed—Description.]—M., owner of two warehouses, Nos. 5 and 7 (the dividing wall being necessary for the support of both), executed a deed with power of sale of No. 5, by way of marriage settlement on his daughter. M. having died, his exe-cutors executed a deed of confirmation by the purchaser of No. 5 from the trustees of marriage settlement by a description which, it was claimed by the purchaser, conveyed absolutely the freehold estate in the party wall and the land covered by it. An action being brought by the executors of M, to have it declared that the wall in question was a party wall:-Held, that the trustees of the will and marriage settlement were bound by the trust declared in the instruments under which they derived their powers, and even if it could be shewn that the confirmation deed had the effect of conveying a greater quantity of land than the deed from the trustees of the marriage settlement, such a voluntary conveyance in favour of one beneficiary, which would operate prejudicially to the interests of the other beneficiaries, would be a breach of trust and beneficiaries, would be a breach of trust and consequently void: — Held, that, upon the execution of the deed by way of marriage settlement of No. 5, the wall common to the two warehouses, Nos. 5 and 7, became a party wall of which the owners of the warehouses were tenants in common. Lewis v. Allison, 19 C. L. T. 372, 30 S. C. R. 173.

Pretended sale of trust property by trustee — Conveyance to wife—Subsequent resale at profit—Liability of trustee and wife to account — Fraudulent representations — Pleading—Amendment.]—In 1904, the two plaintiffs and the defendant I. B. bought an undivided one-half interest in certain land. The conveyance thereof was made to I. B. as trustee for himself and the plaintiffs; and in 1907 he executed a deed of trust under seal by which the trusts in favour of his co-purchasers were declared. The other undivided interest was owned by P., and in December, 1908, this was acquired by the wife of I. B., also made a defendant. In the spring of 1909 I. B. purported to make a sale of the undivided interest standing in his name to P. for $11,000, which the plaintiffs agreed to sanction, if they got, as their shares of the profits, $1,000 each:—Held, upon the evidence that the plaintiffs so assented under the belief, induced by I. B.'s false and fraudulent representations, that a bona fide agreement of sale had been entered into by I. B. with P., and that litigation would result to enforce the agreement unless it were carried out.—I. B. then conveyed the property to his wife; and on the 28th September sold both interests in the land for $51,065, or $25,532.50 for the half interest in which the plaintiffs had had a share:—Held, upon the evidence, that the wife had no real interest in the transaction; it was nominally entered into on her behalf, I. B. acting as her agent: she was a fictitious purchaser, but, even if she were a real one, she could not be permitted to take advantage of the fraud of her agent.—The defendant I. B. asked leave to amend so as to set up a claim that the plaintiffs and himself were trustees for a certain company, whose moneys they had used, without the leave of the company, to purchase it:—Held, that I. B. could not be permitted to deny the trust which he had declared under his seal; and leave to amend was refused.—Semble, that, if any action was brought by the company against I. B., he would be entitled to have the plaintiffs added in respect of any of the trust estate that had passed into their hands .- And held, that it should be declared that the defendants were trustees for the plaintiffs of the profits of the sale to the extent of one-third for each of the plaintiffs.—As the plaintiffs had, by their statements of claim, asked only for an account of the proceeds of the sale, the de-fendants could not be held accountable for the present value of the property. Huggard v. Bennetto, Smith v. Bennetto (1911), 16 W. L. R. 523, Man, L. R.

Property transferred by mother to daughter-Evidence - Declarations of deceased mother-Property transferred in trust and forming part of estate of deceased.]-The testatrix had one daughter and two sons. After making her will, in which she named her daughter as executrix and left the whole of her property to her in trust to distribute the main part among the 3 children in equal shares, the testatrix conveyed and transferred certain portions of her property to the defendant, absolutely so far as the instruments of transfer shewed. There was evidence, however, of declarations of the testatrix that some parts of the property transferred were so transferred to the defendant in trust for the benefit of the testatrix or her estate: -Held, upon the evidence, that, with the exception of two mortgages and a house and lot transferred to the defendant, all the property held in her name, at the time of her mother's decease, was held in trust for her mother, and formed part of her estate. Campbell v. Campbell (1910), 15 W. L. R. 487, B. C. R.

Although trustees of public property cannot alienate the property of the trust in perpetuity, and although all rights granted must be for a limited time only, nevertheless an alienation or grant of exclusive occupation of wharves by harbour commissioners for forty years, for the due fulfilment of the objects of the trust, is not in excess of their powers; and the contract in the present case by which the Montreal Harbour Commissioners proposed to grant to a syndicate for a term of forty years the exclusive use and occupation of certain wharves, for the purpose of constructing elevators thereon, was valid. Taylor v, Montreal Harbour Commissioners, 17 Que. S. C. 275.

Public park - Conveyance to municipality in trust - Conditions - Breach Forfeiture - Assignee - Champerty.]-C. conveyed lands to a city corporation for a park and public recreation ground, with conditions prohibiting their use for certain specified purposes, and that the corporation should, within a limited time, clear the lands, seed them, build a road thereto, and maintain the same in good condition. In an action by the assignee of C.'s reversionary interest, for a declaration that the corporation held the lands in trust and for a re-conveyance, under the proviso on breach of conditions, it appeared that about one-sixth of the land had been left in its natural state, but that the remainder had been cleared and made fit for ordinary athletics, though not level. The road had been built, but, as population did increase in the vicinthe grounds were not in demand for athletic or exhibition purposes, and had not been used, and had become covered with undergrowth:—Held, affirming judgment in 10 B. C. R. 31, that there was no such breach of the conditions as would warrant a declaration of forfeiture. Semble, that, had there been a breach of trust, the resulting forfeiture could have been decreed in favour of the assignee. Clark v. Van-couver, 35 S. C. R. 121.

Purchase of land — Advance of money for Resulting trust — Evidence to establish — Nonsuit — Jury trial — Withdrawad of issues of fact.]—The plaintiffs as assignees of M. Sought to obtain a declaration that certain lands held in the name of defendant were, at the time of the assignment, the property of M., and, by reason of the assignment, became vested in the plaintiffs. The evidence shewed that the money required by the defendant for the purchase of the properties in question was obtained from M., but that M. had nothing to do with any of the purchases except to advance the money to the defendant, by whom the negotiations were conducted, and in whose name the deeds were taken and recorded, and who, in all cases, acted independently of M. in negotiating for and acquiring the properties from the respective owners:—Held, that the dectrine of resulting trusts was not applications.

cable, and, there being no issue of fact for the jury on this phase of the case, that the Judge was justified in withdrawing it from them.—Held, also, the Judge having at the close of the trial announced his intention of withdrawing the case from the jury, that counsel for the plaintiffs should at that time have indicated the facts or issues that they wished the jury to pass upon, and, having neglected to do so, that it was now too late for them to object.—Held, also, that the objection was without merit, as the jury was applied for by the defendants and not by the plaintiffs. Semble, that where a cause of an equitable nature has been ordered to be tried with a jury, under the provisions of O. 34, r. 2, the trial Judge cannot, without the consent of both parties, withdraw the case from the jury, and himself try the issues of fact. Purchase of timber by agent — Claimed to have purchased as principal — Question of pact.]—The plaintiff sued for a declaration that he was the owner of the standing timber, sawmill and fixtures, blacksmithing tools, farming implements, all manufactured timber, tambark, cordwood and sawlogs, in and upon the west half of lot No. 31 in the concession of King, and that defendant was merely a trustee for plaintiff in the same. At trial, Anglin, J., held in favour of defendant and dismissed plaintiff's action. Divisional Court reversed Anglin, J., holding that the agency have great the same that the agency having been proved to have at first existed it was incumbent upon the agent to shew that the agency had been determined. Court of Appeal held, that it was a question of fact, and in dealing with such cases the question for that Court to decide was—not frage to the court of the cou

W. N. 305), held, that the evidence of plaintiff and his wife was unworthy of belief, and that plaintiff was barred by acquiescence and laches. — Divisional Court affirmed above judgment, holding that the facts of the case made it exceptional from the rule against trustees making a profit by dealing with a cestui que trust. Lamb v. Franklin (1910), 16 O. W. R. 588, 1 O. W. N.

Removal of trustee — Insolvency.]—
Upon petition to remove a trustee, under c. 11 of the Acts of 1888, ss. 37 and 38, where it appeared that the trustee was insolvent, the Court ordered his removal, and a new trustee was appointed.—The above sections are now incorporated in R. S. N. S. c. 151, g. 26. In re Hood, 40 N. S. R. 33.

Remuneration of trustees - Fixed annual sum — Solicitor-trustee — Profit costs.]—Appeal by one of the trustees of an estate from the judgment of a Surrogate Court fixing his remuneration. The Surrogate Judge allowed five per cent. on the in-terest collected only, but nothing for any other services, on the ground that he had allowed two and a half per cent, in a former order for the taking over of the corpus:-Held, following Re Berkeley's Trusts, 8 I R. 193, that an annual allowance should be made for looking after the corpus of the fund, and that it should not depend upon amount collected and invested, but should be a fixed annual allowance, based on the nature of the property and the consequent degree of care and responsibility involved. — Held, also that the Surrogate Judge, instead of allowing the trustees a percentage on the principal sum taken over, and nothing for the collection of the interest, should have allowed them nothing for the taking over of the estate, but a percentage on all interest collected and paid over, and an annual sum for the care of the estate.—Held, also, that the general rule is, that a trustee-solicitor is not entitled to charge the estate with fees for any professional services, but that an exception, which is not to be extended, has been established by the decision of Lord Cottenham in Cradock v. Piper, 1 Macn. & G. 664, under which a solicitor-trustee, who brings or defends proceedings in Court for himself and his co-trustee, is entitled to recover profit costs, and, therefore, to charge such costs to the estate. In re Williams, 22 C. L. T. 323, 4 O. L. R. 501, 1 O. W. R. 501. Resulting trust — Intention of purchaser at time of conveyance—Pleading, 1—Held, that when it appears that the actual purchaser by whom the purchase price is paid directs that the conveyance be made to a third party, intending that a beneficial interest in the land should pass to the person to whom it was conveyed, no trust results to the real purchaser by presumption of law, although no value is given by the third party.—Semble, per Wetmore, J., that while a question of law may be raised without being pleaded, yet the facts upon which such question of law is raised must be pleaded, and therefore it is not open to a defendant who has not pleaded frand to set up that the plaintiff is precluded from obtaining the relief asked for by reason of fraud, evidence of which is brought out at the hearing.—Semble, that undue delay in the bringing of an action to have a resulting trust declared is strong evidence of an intention to convey a beneficial interest. King v. Thompson (1905), 6 Terr, L. R. 204.

Resulting trust — Judgment — Interest — Rests — Delay of trustee.]—In an action by the plaintiff claiming a resulting trust in his favour, a conveyance of certain property to him, and an account of the rents and profits, a decree for the conveyance of the property was granted, and the accounts were subsequently taken by a referee, who in his report made annual rests and charged the defendant interest thereon: —Held, that, although interest had not been allowed in the judgment or decree, and had not been asked for in the statement of claim, the Court subsequently was not prevented from allowing interest and directing rests to be made.—If a trustee is guilty of unreasonable delay in investing the fund or in transferring it, he will be answerable to the cestui que trust for interest during the period of his laches. McKenzie v. McKenzie, 40 N. S. R. 246.

Resulting trust — Lond purchased by husband conveyed to wive — Voluntary conveyance — Estoppel.]—The plaintiff caused the land in question to be conveyed to his wife, the defendant, and registered the deed without her knowledge. His motive was to avoid payment of an anticinated claim against him:—Held, that he could not succeed in an action to compel her to reconvey the land to him. Curtis v. Price. 12 Ves. 103, and Roberts v. Roberts, 2 B. & Ald. 207, followed. Children v. Childers, 1 De G. & J. 481, and Huigh v. Kaye. L. R. 7 Ch. 469, distinguished. McAuley v. McAuley, 18 Man. L. R. 544, 10 W. L. R. 419.

Resulting trust — Oral agreement — Conveyance of interest in land to trustee — Statute of Frauds.]—The plaintiff, defendant, and M. verbally agreed to purchase from S. his interest in a lot of land, and to become the owners thereof in equal shares, it being also agreed that S. should convey his three-fourths to the defendant, who should, when required, convey to the plaintiff and M. each one undivided third part. The plaintiff, defendant, and M. gave to S. their joint notes for the purchase money, and S. conveyed to the defendant subsequently objected to giving the deed, and then each party arranged with the agent of S. a settlement of his share of the balance due, whereupon the defendant again verbally promised to give the plaintiff his deed of one-third of the lot, but no deed was ever given: — Held, that the transactions created a resulting trust in favour of the plaintiff. The Statute of Frauds did not extend to such trust, and, in any event, the defendant having admitted the agreement, a court of equity would not permit him to use the Statute of Frauds as an instrument for accomplishing a fraud. Right of beneficiary to enforce trust. Morse v. Morse, 1 O. W. R. 500.

Rights and obligations of trustees—
Re-purchase of hypothecated immovable property—Loaning or using capital to effect repairs—Reimbursement out of recenue.]— Trustees are bound to give to the discharge of their duties the care of a prudent administrator. Hence, an investment in a mortgage requiring the sale by authority of justice of the hypothecated property and its repurchase by the trust will justify the trustees if the bad condition of the property should make it necessary, in effecting a loan for the purpose of repairing the property and putting it in a revenue-producing state, or devote part of the capital in their hands for such purpose. In such case the trustees should use the revenue from the property to pay off the loan or amount taken from trust funds before paying balance of revenue to beneficiary, and this even when trust deed declares that "the revenue shall be devoted to his maintenance after deducting insurance premiums and assessments." Arnton v. Stevenson & Arnton (1910), 38 Que. S. C. 213.

Sale of land - Specific performance-Contract for sale of land by trustees—Evidence of concurrence by all — Statute of Frauds — Correspondence — Authority of trustees to bind co-trustee.]—One of three trustees assumed in the name of all to make trustees assumed in the name of all to make an offer to sell a freehold property, part of the trust estate, for $^3,000. A second trustee assented to and approved of the offer when made aware of it; but the third repudiated it as soon as it came to his knowledge;—Held, in an action brought against the three trustees for specific performance, by the person who had accepted the offer, that the trust estate was not bound, although the dissenting trustee had, only a fortnight same probefore, assented to a sale of the sam perty to another person at $12,000. situation had changed in the fortnight; further inquiries had been made; a new customer had been found; a new negotiation had been opened with the prospect of a better price. The cestui que trust had a right to the benefit of the third trustee's best judgment in the changed situation before concluding the new contract, and to have that judgment manifested by his signature, either actual or expressly authorized. Where there are several trustees, all must act. Gibb v. McMahon, 25 C. L. T. 291, 5 O. W. R. 554, 9 O. L. R. 522.

Sale of lands — Approval of Court.]— Trustees, having unsuccessfully offered for sale en blov property of the trust estate, consisting of a hotel and stores and a dock, and subsequently the hotel and stores without the dock, received an offer for the hotel by itself:—Held, on an application to the Court to approve and confirm the sale under R. S. O. c. 129, s. 39, and Rule 938, that the Court had jurisdiction to express its approval, and that, under the circumstances, it was a case in which the jurisdiction ought to be exercised. In re Crawford—Nelson v. Bell, 20 C. L. T. 380, 32 O. R. 118.

Sale of real estate — Action by cestuique trust for account—Expectancy.]—In an appeal from an order passing trustees' accounts, the appellants claimed the trustees should have been charged with the value of her expectancy in certain real estate sold with the concurrence of the trustees. Settled estate — New trustee — Resident out of province—Appointment by Supreme Court of N. S.—Appointment by Ontario Court of N. S.—Appointment by Ontario Court of Near appeal from order appointing new trustees — Jurisdiction of Divisional Court to hear appeal—Ont. J. Act, s. 74;—Motion by way of appeal to set aside the appointment of one Herbert W. Sangster, trustee under a certain deed of trust in the place and stead of Arthur P. Nagle, on the ground that he resides in Nova Scotia, while the assets are largely in Ontario. The estate which formed the subject of the settlement came from the will of the late John Bell, a resident of Toronto, and his estate was largely in Toronto. It was being administered by the Tor. Gen. Trust Co., one of the trustees resided in New Brunswick and the other in Nova Scotia. The appellant resided in Boston and petitioners resided in Nova Scotia:—Held, that enquiries regarding the trust estate, its value and the most opportune time for sale, would have to be made where the estate was, and it would be most convenient in the interests of all parties and beneficial to the estate, aside from other considerations, that one of the trustees should be resident in Toronto. There being no special circumstances as should induce the Court to depart from the well-organized principles applicable in a case of this kind, the order appointing James W. Sangster must be set aside. Costs of all parties here and below out of the estate. Re Jones Trusts (1910), 15 O. W. R. 554, 20 O. L. R. 457, 1 O. W. N. 532.

Shares in building society—"In trust"—Notice—Mortgage—Purchaser for value—Consolidation.]—The defendant A. J., being the holder of six shares of permanent stock in her own name, and six shares in a building society, obtained a loan of $700 from the company, and transferred to the company's treasurer, as security, "all my stock in the said company." Subsequently she obtained a further loan of $600, and transferred to the treasurer, as security, six shares of instalment stock, the intention being to transfer the six shares held "in trust" and already assigned, as the company contended, to secure the prior loan of $700, giving also a mortgage on land, reciting that she was the owner of six shares of the capital stock of the company, and that the company had agreed to advance $600 upon the said shares with this mortgage as further security. The defendant A. K. J. became the purchaser of the land subject to the $600 mortgage (which she assumed), and purchased from A. J. her equity in the six shares of instalment stock:—Held, that the use of the words "in trust" put the company upon inquiry, and they were affected by the notice that A. J. was not the owner of the shares and had no power to mortgage.—Held, also, that s. 53 of c. 205, R. S. O. 1897, did not empower the company to disregard the trusts, although it relieved them from seeing to the execution of any trust to which the shares were subject.—Held, that the company could not consolidate the two mortgages as against A. K. J., as she was a purchaser for value, without it being shewn that she was aware at the time she purchased the equity of redemption in the lands that any prior mortgage existed against the six shares in the hands of the company. Birkbeck Loan Co. v. Johnston, 22 C. L. T. 160, 3 O. L. R. 497, 1 O. W. R. 163, affirmed with a variation as to parties. Birkbeck Loan Co. v. Johnston, 6 C. L. R. 258, 2 O. W. R. 556.

Shares in company — Contract — Declaration of trust — Statute of Frauds. Creighton v. Carman, 3 O. W. R. 748.

Shares in company — Trustee for several beneficiaries — Right of one beneficiary to apportionment.]—Where a trustee held a number of shares in the capital stock of a company in trust for several persons, each of whom was entitled to a certain proportion of the face value of the same, but no provision was made for sale or division of the stock, and no time was fixed during which the trustee was to hold, and one of the cestuis que trust brought an action to compel the trustee to transfer to him a portion of the shares equivalent to his interest, but the other cestuis que trust were not made parties to the action, and objected to the transfer being made:—Held, that, independently of the question of the interests of the unrepresented cratuis que trust, the trustee could not be compelled to discharge his trust piecemeal. Bechtel v. Zinkann, 16 O. L. R. 72, 10 O. W. R. 1075.

Statute of Frands — Express trust — Purchase, to make a home for relative — Implied trust — Absence of fraud.]—The plaintiff claimed a declaration that certain lands standing in the name of the defendant W, were held by him in trust for the defendant F, and a sale thereof to satisfy the plaintiff's judgment against F. Three things were mainly relied on to establish the trust; (1) that W, on one occasion told the plaintiff that he had bought the land for F; (2) that in a letter to the inspector of a company, he said that the land would eventually belong to F; (3) that in his books he had kept an account of his dealings with F, entering the different items of debit and credit in respect to this farm, as well as of other matters:—Held, on the evidence, that W, no doubt, intended that F, (a relative) might have a home upon the farm, but was determined to retain the ownership of the land. There was no agreement between the parties, either as to a life tenancy or as to the acquisition of the fee simple in the land by F., which he could have enforced against W. in a court of law; and the plaintiff, under his registered judgment against F., was in no better position than the latter would be if suing on his own behalf. It was urged that there was a trust in favour of F; that this was a resulting trust and therefore excluded from the provisions of the Statute of Frauds. As no portion of the purchase money of the land was advanced by F, there could be no resulting trust in his favour. No fraud on the part of W. was shewn, and there was no trust which could be enforced. Thompson v. Wright, 24 C. L. T. 97.

Substitutions — Representation in substitutions before the code — A trust in general terms for the benefit of the family.]—In a substitution created before the civil code, when the trust is conceived in general and collective expressions in favour of the descendants or of the family, without special designation of any one in particular, representation will take place unless it is specially provided against. Technical breach of trust — Reliefunder Trustee Act — Statute of Limitations—Accounts—Evidence—Books of account—Reference—Report — Correction on further directions.]—Under the last will of N., after making provision for his daughter E., all the rest and residue of his estate was given to his two daughters A. and C., equally, share and share alike. A. was appointed executrix and trustee, and the share given to C. was directed to be invested, and the interest, dividends, and annual produce paid to her half-yearly during her lifetime for her sole and separate use, etc. A. proved the will and filed an inventory, and paid over to E. the amount bequeathed to her, but with respect to C., who was very deaf and weak-minded, contented herself with supporting her during her lifetime, usually taking from her at the close of each year a receipt mentioning no amount, but sealed and withnessed, and acknowledging payment of the interest due her to the date of each receipt. The incomes of both A. and C. were applied by A. to their joint support, C. being provided with all necessary care and attention. After the death of both A. and C., at the instance of the plaintiffs, claiming under E., a reference was ordered to a Master to ascertain the amount of the residue of the estate of N. to which C. was entitled, and also receipts and expenditures by A. in her lifetime on account of C., and by the defendants as executors of A. after her death. After receiving the report back to be varied, and with further instructions. On appeal from the latter order:—Held, that the whole cause and the matters in controversy being still before the Judge, he had power, in giving further directions to the referee, to correct any errors into which he thought he had fallen, the cause in this respect being unlike a common law action. Also, as to income received by the defendants since the death of A., the Judge was ants since the death of A. the Judge was charged within 6 years of action brought. Also, as to a sum of money received by A., and not accounted for, her estate could not be relieved from liability, but with respect to income which should have been derived from the investment of the sum so not accounted for, the same rule must be applied as in the case of income received by the de-fendants after the death of A., and that the liability must be restricted to the period of 6 years before the commencement of the action. Also, that the Judge was right, under the provisions of O. 32, r. 3, in directing books of account kept by A., and which consisted largely in admissions against her own interest, to be taken as prima facie evidence of the truth of the matters therein contained. WHII — Annuitics—Setting apart securities—Distribv'ion of residue — Realization of estate—Investments—Redemption — 38.1 n. and order made under Rule 938. classified and order made under Rule 938. declared that the persons interested in the residue of the estate of a testator were entitled to have sums set apart by the executors and trustees, from time to time, from the capital of the estate, to provide for annuities bequeathed by the testator, as sufficient funds for that purpose came to the hands of the executors, or to have such sums applied by them in the purpose came to the hands of the executors, or to have such sums applied by them in the purpoise of Government annuities, and, after provision made for payment of the specific legacies and the annuities, to have the residue in the hands of the executors from time to time distributed among the persons entitled:—Held, that the order was substantially right. The annuitants were not entitled to have the estate of the testator realized and converted into money further than might be necessary for the payment of his debts and funeral and testamentary expenses; their right was limited, after this had been done, to having the annuities sufficiently secured by the setting apart of such part of the estate as might be adequate for that purpose. Plaintiff gave defendant certain jewellery and released his interests in certain bonds for a small consideration. There were certain other dealings between parties. Defendant was executrix of the will. She passed her accounts before Surrogate Court and plaintiff ratified them upon coming of age. Later he repented his dealings with plaintiff and brought action to set aside the transactions and for an accounting. Suther-land, J., held (17 O. W. R. 603, 2 O. W. N. 302), that the evidence shewed that plaintiff was intelligent and educated and properly understood what he was doing at the time in question, and dismissed the action with costs. The jewellery to be returned to plaintiff .-Divisional Court held, that while an infant is by law incapable of making a valid will for very obvious reasons, yet the modern view as to donations of chattels is that the gift of infants is not void but voidable:—That plaintiff was rightly in Court and should get a return of his things and his costs as to that part of the case :- That he failed as to the part of the case relating to the Petawawa bonds and he should pay costs as to that :- That acting on the well-known rule in the case of divided success there should be no costs to either party of motion or of appeal. Will — Misappropriation by co-trustec— Limitation of actions—Trustee Act — Bar.) —R. G. died in 1870, having by his will given the income of his estate to his widow for life, and subject to certain bequests, the residue to the children of his brothers and sisters, and appointed T. H., J. G., and the widow executors and executrix of his will with power "to dispose of the property if they see fit." J. G. managed the estate until the time of his death in 1885, by which date some of the real property had been disposed of and invested, and his management was duly accounted for. T. H. then took the management of the estate until 1895, when the widow, after much pressure by her friends, took proceedings against him for an account, the result of which was that he was found largely indebted, and a large sum was lost to the estate. In an action by the plaintiffs against the defendants in 1903 to compel them to make good the losses to the estate of R. G. occasioned by the negligence of the widow in permitting her co-executor to misappropriate the funds of the estate:—Held, that, as all the alleged acts of negligence or breaches of trust charged against the widow occurred more than six years before action, s. 32 (11 (b) of the Trustee Act, R. Separation from property — Reunion—Condition as to alienation — Sale — Defence]—The appellant had made a gift of land to his daughter subject to the payment of mortgages and to a charge for maintenance of the donor and his family, and afterwards the donor and his family, and afterwards the donor had his family, and afterwards the dependent the usufruct of it, such usufruct being untransferable and unseizable. The brother afterwards gave the land to the appellant, subject to all the provisoes and conditions imposed by his sister's gift to him. The appellant soid the land to one R., now represented by the respondent, with a proviso for redemption, but, when R. wished to take possession at the expiry of the period fixed for redemption, but, when R. wished to take possession at the expiry of the period fixed for redemption, the appellant pleaded that the usufruct was untransferable and that he ould not dispose of it:—Held, that the acquisition of the bare property, by virtue of a subsequent title, in spite of the fact that these different title, in spite of the fact that these different title, have united the usufruct and the property in the same person, cannot have the effect of annulling the conditions contained in the prior title transferring only the usufruct and bare property in a parcel of land is regulated by the title of acquisition of each of these rights, and the conditions to which they are separately subject are not affected by the reunion of the two rights in the same person.—2. 1. AGENTS' TRANSACTIONS.

Authority of agent — Ratification — Receipt of purchase-money — Acquiescence — Specific performance — Agents joined as co-defendants — Alternative relief — Costs.] — Where the authority of the agent is disputed by the person on whose behalf the contract is made, the agent may be joined as a co-defendant, and relier claimed against them alternatively.—Bennetis v. Metheratik (1896). 2 Que. B. 464, followed. — The plaintiff sued the owners of land and their agents, in the alternative, for specific performance of a contract for the sale to him and purchase by him of land entered into by the agents with him, or for other relief. The purchase-money was paid by the plaintiff to the agents, possession was taken by the plaintiff and improvements made, and possession retained for 6 years, but no conveyance or transfer was made to the plaintiff.—Held, upon the evidence, that the acts of the agents in effecting the sale, and in the acceptance of the purchase-money were ratified by the owners, and it was not necessary to determine whether or not the agents were agents for sale or whether they were authorised to accept payment of the purchase-money from the plaintiff.—A ratification of an act or transaction will be implied, wherever the conduct of the person on whose behalf it is done or entered into is such as to indicate an intention to adopt it in whole or in part; the receipt of the purchase-money or part thereof operates as a ratification of an unauthorised sale; and in the case of an agent exceeding authority ratification may be applied from silence or acquiescence.—Jugment for the plaintiff against the principals for specific performance, and action dismissed as against the agents without costs. Taylor V. Hegleson (1916), 15 W. L. R. 738.

Authority of agent — Ratification — Warranty — Real Property Act — Caveat — Caveation.] — The plaintiff's brother, in the plaintiff's absence, and without authority, agreed to sell the plaintiff's land to the defendant for a named price, and upon specified terms. The plaintiff was the registered owner of the land in fee, and the defendant registered a caveat against the land forbidding the registration of my person as transferee or owner of the land, or of any instrument affecting the land, unless such instrument was expressed to be subject to the defendant's claim. The plaintiff, on his return, repudiated the agreement, but afterwards treated with the defendant in such a way as to indicate ratification, but always on the assumption that the defendant would make the terms of payment to suit the plaintiff, which the defendant did not agree to do:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to have the registration of the caveat cancelled; and that the defendant was not entitled to specific performance of the agreement, nor to damages against the plaintiff's brother for breach of warranty of authority. Fernie v. Kennedy (1910), 13 W. L. R. 437.

Authority of agent of vendor — Inference — Incomplete contract — Specific performance.]—In viewing the relations or dealings between principal and agent, an unconditional authority to sell land should not be lightly inferred, but it should be clear beyond any reasonable doubt that such authority was conferred. Specific performance of contract refused. Jull v Rasbach, 7 W. L. R. 404, 13 B. C. R. 398.

Authority of agent of vendor—
Making the contract — Offer and acceptance.
— Statute of Frauds — Specific performance.]—Held, that authority to an agent to effect a sale prima facie means a sale effectual in law, including the execution of an agreement where the law requires a contract in writing; and an agent authorised to conclude a tinding agreenent for sale.
—2. That several documents may be read together so as to constitute a binding contract.—3. That when an offer has been made and accepted a binding contract is constituted, notwithstanding a reference in the documents to a formal agreement to be thereafter prepared. Harris v. Darroch, 8 W. L. R. 86, 1 Sask, L. R. 116.

Authority of agent of vendor — Ratification — Estoppel — Part performance — Statute of Frauds.]—One T., who had been appointed agent for the manage-ment of plaintiff's estate at E., by the plaintiff's wife, which appointment was expressly ratified by the plaintiff, had appointed, with ratined by the plaintiff, had appointed, with her authority, one M., a real estate agent, as agent for sale. M. made several sales, all of which were confirmed by the plaintiff, and, on the 3rd February, 1904, sold to the defendant C. the land in question, of which sale the plaintiff was duly notified; and the defendant went into immediate recognisions and some parts of the contraction. possession and commenced making improvements, of which the plaintiff was also notified on the 19th February. On the 8th ned on the 19th February. On the 8th June, after a large sum had been spent in improvements, the plaintiff notified the de-fendants that he repudiated the sale, and brought an action for possession: that M. had authority from the plaintiff through T. to make the sale to the defendant. 2. That if M. had not been authorised to make the sale, the plaintiff had ratified it by his conduct in standing by and allowing the defendant to make improvements, under the arrangement of purchase, and not immediately repudiating it and giving notice within a reasonable time. 3. That the part performance of the agreement of purchase by the defendants was sufficient to take it out of the Statute of Frauds. Quare, whether non-compliance with the Statute of Frauds comes in question in an action of ejectment, or whether the plaintiff could recover possession in such an action by reason of a breach of any of the terms of the agreement. McDougall v. Cairns, 2 Terr. L. R. 219.

Authority of agent to contract for vendor—Misrepresentation as to instructions—Specific performance—Refusal to enforce. Walker-Parker Co. v. Thompson, 7 O. W. R. 125, S O. W. R. 197.

Contract made with clerk of vendor's agent—Ignorance of vendor of position of vendee — Right to repudiate on discovering truth — Duration of agency — Termination of authority — Vendee acting as representative of actual purchaser. McGuire v. Graham, 10 O. W. R. 370, 863.

Defendant applied to the plaintiff for a loan of $58,000, but negotiations to that end and for the sale of certain lands for $56,000 failed. Subsequently the person with whom the plaintiff was negotiating was introduced by the prospective pur-chaser's banker to the agent of the mort-gages, and a sale was brought about for $50,000, the defendant paying the agent a $50,000. the derendant paying the agent a commission. An action by the plaintiff for a commission for having procured the purchaser was dismissed by Irving, J., at the trial and his judgment was affirmed by the Supreme Court of British Columbia, rison, J., dissenting, and it was held that as the plaintiff had been engaged to find a purchaser at a certain price and having failed to do so he was not entitled to a commission on the sale subsequently made to the person originally introduced by him at a lower price. It was held by Hunter, C., that when, prima facie, the agreement is to pay a commission on a named price it is for the agent to shew in the clearest way that the intention of the parties was to pay a commission on any sum at which a pay a commission on any sum at which a sale might be effected. Bridgman v. Hepburn (1908), 13 B. C. R. 389, 8 W. L. R. 28, affirmed, 42 S. C. R. 228.

Deficiency in quality—Innocent misrepresentations by agent of vendor—Proof of agency—Secific performance—Compensation for deficiency.]—In an action for a declaration that the plaintiff was entitled to be relieved from the obligations arising out of a contract to purchase land from the defendant, on the ground that the defendant's agent misrepresented the quantity of land, and for a return of the moneys paid by the plaintiff.—Held, upon the evidence, that L, who made the contract with the defendant and assigned it to the plaintiff, and who made the representations to the plaintiff, was in fact the agent of the defendant in fact the agent of the defendant in fact the agent of the defendant was bound by the representations; that, in the absence of any conlations of sale, the plaintiff could insist on having all that the defendant could convey, with compensation for deficiency, if any:
that the purchase was one on a basis of 80 acres; and there was a shortage of 6.18 acres; and that the representations being innocent and the contract not executed, it should be carried out, with compensation for the deficiency. Stewart v. White

Estoppel — "Land Commissioner" Specific performance.] — The plaintiffs, as assignees, claimed specific performance of an alleged agreement for the sale of lands based upon the following letter:—"Fernie, B.C., June 5th, 1900.—D. V. Mott. Esq., Fernie, B.C.;—The sale to you of mill site.—Dear Sir:—The Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company hereby agree to sell to you a piece of land at or near Hosmer Station, on the Crow's Nest line, to contain at least one hundred acres of land, at the price of $5 per acre; payable as follows: When title issued to purchaser, title to be given as soon as the company is in a position to do so. Purchaser to have possession at once. The land to be as near as possible as shewn on the annexed sketch plan. Yours truly, W. Fernie, Land Commissioner.—

the lands claimed were not those shewn on the sketch plan, but other lands alleged to have been substituted therefor by verbal agreement with another employee of the defendant company, at the time of survey:—
Held, affirming the judgment in 12 B. C. R. 433, but on different grounds, that specific performance could not be decreed, in the absence of any proof of authority of the agent to sell the lands of the defendant company, and that the mere fact of investing their employee with the title of "Land Commissioner" did not estop the defendants from denying his power to sell lands. Elk Lumber Co. v. Cron's Nest Pass Coal Co., 39 S. C. R. 169.

Failure of vendor to convey—Crown lands—Appropriation for town site—Notice -Damages -- Improvements made by purchaser.] - Defendants had an agreement with the Ontario Government that five townships should be withdrawn from general settlement for six years, and should be set apart for settlement by defendants, who had acquired nearly three hundred veterans' claims. Plaintiff applied for one half of a certain lot and defendants forwarded his application to the Government. An agree-ment was made between plaintiff and defendants by which he was to buy land applied for, and make payments as provided. He made a deposit, took possession and partially cleared the land when the Government notified defendants that the lots sold to the plaintiff along with others were withdrawn, being required for a town site. The de-fendants failed to notify the plaintiff:— Held, that defendants were not plaintiff's agents, but vendors, and that he was entitled to damages. Monaghan v. Ontario Veterans' Land Co., 13 O. W. R. 187.

Failure to keep appointment—Damages—Travelling and necessary expenses—Agent for undisclosed principal.—A person who, in execution of a promise of sale, makes an appointment with the intending purchaser to effect the sale, and sign the deed, but who is unable to do so on the day fixed, through legal hindrances and want of authorization of part owners and sellers under age, is liable in damages to the nurchaser for his travelling and other necessary expenses. Nor is he relieved therefrom by the fact that he is merely the agent of the owners, haying acted in h.s own name, without disclosing the names of his principals. Laurin v Thibaudeau, 34 Que. S. C. 503.

Fiduciary relationship — Specific performance.]—Where an intending purchaser, by disguising his intentions under the role of a disinterested friend, imposes on the confidence thus established, and induces the owner of land to accept an offer for the purchase of it, which probably would not otherwise have been accepted without independent investigation, spedific performance of an agreement for sale thus procured will not be enforced. Fellowes v. Lord Gwydyr, I Sim. 63, discussed and distinguished. Henderson v. Thompson, 41 S. C. R. 445.

Formation of contract—Conditions— Acceptance of title—New term—Statute of Frauds-Principal and agent-Secret commission—Avoidance of contract — Fraud— Specific performance.]—While A. was absent abroad B. assumed, without authority, to sell certain of his lands to C., and received from C. a deposit on account of the price. On receipt of a cablegram from B., notifying him of what had been done, but without disclosing the name of the proposed purchaser, A. replied by letter stating that he was willing to sell at the price named, that he would not complète the deal until he ne would not complete the deal until he returned home, that the sale would be subject to an existing lease of the premises, and that he would not furnish evidence of title other than the deeds that were in his possession, and requesting B. to communicate these terms to the proposed pur-chaser. On learning the conditions, C., in a letter by his solicitors, accepted the terms and offered to pay the balance of the price as soon as the title was evidenced to their satisfaction:—Held, that the correspondence which had taken place constituted a contract sufficient to satisfy the requirements of the Statute of Frauds; that the words "so soon as title is evidenced to our satisfaction," in the solicitors letter accepting the con-ditions, did not import the proposal of a new term; and that A. was bound to speci-fic performance.—Held, also, that an arrangement, unknown to A. and made prior to the receipt of his letter, whereby B. was to have a commission on the transaction from C., could not have the effect of avoiding the contract, as B. was not, at that time, the agent of A. for the sale of the property. —Judgment appealed from, Calori v. Andrews, 12 B. C. R. 236, 4 W. L. R. 259, affirmed. Andrews v. Calori, 38 S. C. R.

Incomplete contract—Purchaser dealing with agent—Authority of agent—Offer —Acceptance—Correspondence —Statute of Frauda.] — The defendant, being in Montreal, and owning property in Vancouver, instructed his agents to obtain a purchaser at $1.400, offers to be first submitted to him. They received an offer and gave a receipt for a deposit of $25, "price $1.400, $900 or $950 cash, balance C. P. R., subject to owners's confirmation:" and telegraphed the defendant: "Deposit on lot Kitsilano, $1.400, Wire approval and instructions." The defendant wired in reply: "$1,400 O.K. Letter instructions:" at the same time writing that his papers were in the bank and could not be obtained until bis return to Vancouver; that he wanted $1,400 net to him, and if this was satisfactory he would complete the transaction on his return to Vancouver:—Held, affirming the judgment of Hunter, C.J., 7 W. L. R. 40, 13 B. C. R. 268 (Morrison, J., dissenting), that the agents were not authorised to sell: (2) that there was no completed contract; and (3) that there was no memorandum to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, Williams v. Hamilton, 14 B. C. R. 47.

proposed purchase of the lots at $25,000. L. & Co., wired the proposal to the defendants, who wired back. "Will not accept offer." L. & Co. wired again: "Telegram received; wire price and terms you will accept." The defendants wired: "Will accept." The defendants wired: "Will accept." Held, that L. & Co. had no greater authority from the defendants than to receive and submit offers, and any agreement made by them based upon the telegrams was not binding upon the defendants.—2. That there was no completed agreement between the parties.—3. That there was no sufficient memorrandom to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, Doyle v. Martin (1910), 14 W. L.

Mining rights—Re-sale to company — Commission paid by purchaser—Right to charge against vendors—Appeal from report —Time — Waiver.]—The defendant, acting on behalf of a syndicate of which he was a member, obtained from the owners of a number of coal mining areas transfers of the areas for the purpose of putting them into a company in which he was interested, and purchase price being payable in some cases in cash and in others in bonds and stock of The plaintiffs were part the company. owners of areas which were to be paid for in bonds and stocks. For the purpose of carrying the transaction through, and paying those proprietors who required payment for their properties in cash, it became necessary to borrow a considerabe sum of money. This was obtained from bankers, who charged a commission for the accommodation. defendant sought to deduct from the amount payable to the plaintiffs a proportion of the commission so paid, alleging assent on their part. It was shewn that the plaintiffs had no knowledge of the expenditure, and that there was no authorization from them to incur it:—Held, that, under these circumstances, the plaintiffs were not liable; also, that the defendant's agency for his associates in the purchase excluded the idea of agency for the plaintiffs: also, that the benefit which accrued to the plaintiffs from the loan was too remote to create any liability on their part.—On appeal from the order varying the referee's report the objection was taken that the application for the order was made out of time.—Held, that the objection was one which should have been taken before the Judge who made the order, who could have extended the time, and not being so taken was waived; also, that the Court could not, in any case, give effect to the objection in the absence of evidence shewing the date at which the report was filed. Fultz v. McNeil, 53 N. S. R. 506; Fultz v. Corbett, 1 E. L. R. 54.

Nominal purchaser—Name of manager of vendor's agent inserted in sale agreement as purchaser—Ignorance of vendor—Assignment to real purchaser — Specific performance.]—A sale of land was arranged between the agent of an intending purchaser and he owner's agent, the owner accepting the purchaser's offer, although ignorant of his name. The purchaser refused to allow his name to appear in the agreement, which had been prepared by the vendor's solicitor with a blank for the purchaser's name, on the ground that it would affect other purchases which he proposed making in the neighbourhood. The office manager of the vendor's agent then inserted his own name as purchaser, with the object as he said, of preventing the sale from falling through. Neither the vendor nor her solicitor knew of the position of the ostensible purchaser, and, on the vendor inquiring who he was, and, on the vehior indulring who he was, he was merely informed by the purchaser's agent that he was a "responsible person," upon which the vendor signed the agreement, which was then assigned to the plain-A few days after a draft deed had been submitted and the deposit made, the venior discovered who the nominal purchaser was and refused to carry out the sale: - Held, that the sale could not be supported, as there had not been a full and fair disclosure of material circumstances in connection with the transaction, in leaving the vendor in ignorance of the position of the purchaser as the representative of the vendor's agent. McGuire v. Graham, 16 O. L. R. 431, 11 O. W. R. 999.

Proof of contract-Payment of deposit -Receipt by agent - Owner's approval -Memorandum in writing-Statute of Frauds Oral evidence to show real transaction — Admissibility — Liability of agent—Specific performance — Damages.] — The plaintiff alleged an agreement between himself and the defendant whereby the defendant agreed to sell to the plaintiff certain land, and the plaintiff agreed to purchase the same; and the plaintiff claimed specific performance or damages. The plaintiff paid the defendant $50 as a deposit or part of the purchaseprice, and the defendant gave the plaintiff a receipt therefor. The property did not, as the plaintiff knew, belong to the defendant, but the plaintiff sought to make the defendant personally liable because the receipt did not shew him to be an agent. The receipt itself was lost. The plaintiff offered in proof of the agreement his recollection of the contents of the receipt. The defendant, while he could not positively swear that the re-ceipt was not in the terms set out by the plaintiff, said he was sure that it was agreed that it was to be subject to the owner's approval, the defendant being merely agent for the owner:-Held, upon the evidence, that the defendant agreed only to submit the plaintiff's offer to the owner for his approval .- Held, also, assuming that the receipt was in the exact words stated by the plaintiff, that it was not in form an agreement, but at best only a memorandum of one. Evidence was admissible to shew that the receipt was not a memorandum of the real transaction at all. It would be a fraud upon the defendant to allow the plaintiff to maintain his contention through the Statute of Frauds, which was enacted to prevent and not to assist fraud.—Held, also, that, even if the defendant were liable on the receipt, there could be no specific performance, as the property was sold by the owner, without the defendant's knowledge, before the money was paid by the plaintiff; and, as the $50 and another $50 subsequently paid were returned by the defendant and there was no examina-tion of title by the plaintiff, the plaintiff had suffered no damages. Purchase of town lot under agreement through agent—Sale approved by owner—Aftervards cancelled as agreement contained not terms which owner desired to be included—Resale to third party, who obtained land titles certificate—Action against vendor for fraudulently depriving purchaser of said lot.1—Purchaser paid agent of vendor $25 as down payment on a town lot and signed agreement to pay balance, $100, in $25 payments. Vendor approved of agreement, and purchaser erected valuable building on said lot with knowledge of vendor. Later vendor assumed to cancel the agreement and effect a resale to a third party, who acquired a certificate of ownership under the Land Titles Act. Purchaser brought action.—Riddell, J., held, that the certificate could not be set aside, but gave purchaser judgment for $1.700 against vendor, with costs. Bucovetsky v. Cook (1910), 16 O. W. R. 257, 1 O. W. N. 1988.

Sale of land by company—Agreement of managing director to repurchase at specified price—Inducement to purchase—Principal and agent—Undisclosed principal—Personal liability of agent — Specific performance. Litchfield v. Saskatchevan and Battle River Land and Development Co., 7 W. L. R. 475.

Sale to syndicate-Subsequent sale to another — Right to syndicate members — Agent's authority—Specific performance.]— The action arose out of the sale by Dom. Brewery Co, of its property and assets. The Brewery Co, having made default in payment of its debentures, an action was brought in the English High Court on behalf of debenture holders against the Co., and the Railway Share Trust and Agency Co., for the sale of the property, and on July 24th, 1905, an or-der was made in that action authorising the receiver and manager of the company to sell the property to Charles Russell for £52,000. Russell, on November 16th, assigned his interest in the contract to Gavin Brown Clark, H. S. Foster was then sent to Can-ada to effect a sale of the property. He employed Case as a suitable broker to find a purchaser. Various negotiations took place and the property was sold to defendant Mackenzie. The action was brought to set aside kenzie. The action was brought to set aside the conveyance by Lovell (Mackenzie's nominee as purchaser) to the new company as fraudulent as against Clisdell and Orpen, or in the alternative for damages.—Riddell, J., 13 O. W. R, 748, dismissed the action as against all the defendants, except Case, G. A, Case, Ltd., and Millar.—Livisional Court (15 O. W. R, 773, 1 O. W. N, 648), varied above judgment, holding that the case against G. A. Case, Ltd., failed, and that costs G. A. Case, Ltd., failed, and that costs should not have been awarded against Case. The plaintiff's case as to him failed, and they obtained no other relief against him. The appeal allowed, and judgment entered dismissing the plaintiff's action as against the appellants as well as the defendants, as to whom it had already been dismissed, but without costs to appellants here or below. without costs to appending here or below.— Court of Append affirmed Divisional Court. Meredith, J., dissenting, holding that the judg-ment of Riddell, J., ought to be restored. Cliedell v. Lovell (1910), 17 O. W. R. 583, 2 O. W. N. 315.

Vender contracting in representative capacity—Beneficial interest of vendor not specifically allocated — Specific performance with abatement of purchase-money-Lien for improvements.]—The defendant, who was administratrix of the estate of her late husband, made a lease of a hotel, part of the estate, to the plaintiff, containing an option to the plaintiff to purchase the property. In previous leases of the hotel to the plaintiff, vious leases of the hotel to the plaintui, the defendant had been described as administratrix, but not so in the lease containing the option. The plaintiff, however, knew that the defendant's title was in her representative capacity. In St. Germain v. Renealt, 2 Alta, L. R. 371, 12 W. L. R. 169, it was held that the option to purchase was void. This action was brought against the defendin her individual capacity for specific performance of the agreement to sell to the plaintiff contained in the lease to the extent of a one-third interest in the property, presumed to be the defendant's beneficial interest, with an abatement of the purchasemoney to the extent of two-thirds thereof :money to the extent or two-inited thereof:— Held, that, as it had not been shewn that the estate had been distributed or the bene-ficial interests specifically allocated, the equitable rule that a party should be compelled to perform his contract to the extent that he is able to do so, could not be applied; and the action was dismissed.—Oceanic Steam Navi-gation Co. v. Sutherberry, 16 Ch. D. 236, dis-tinguished.—Semble, that the plaintiff was entitled to a lien upon the property for the value of the improvements made by him beyond such as he was bound to make as lessee. Boudreau v. Reneault (1910), 15 W. L. R. 414, Alta. L. R.

2. Cancellation of Agreement.

See sub-head 11, RESCISSION.

3. CONDITIONS OF SALE.

Building restriction — Construction—Limitation of time — Effuxion.] — The plaintiffs conveyed an aere of land to the defendant. The agreement for sale contained these clauses: "12. The purchaser agrees that he will not erect or cause to be erected any building nearer than 33 feet from the easterly boundary of said property, and the vendors agree that, should the said vendors want 33 feet of the most easterly side of said land, they will convey to the purchaser an equal amount of land to be immediately adjoining on the south side of the property mentioned herein." "14, Relating to clause 12, the vendors shall have the privilege of taking the road mentioned above only on or before the 14th September, 1909:"—Held, that the prohibition contained in the first part of clause 12 was not absolute and general, but was to hold only in case the vendors (plaintiffs) required the ensterly 33 feet for a road, before the 14th September, 1909, and this was made clear by the testimony of one of the plaintiffs, which was admissible to shew what was in the minds of the parties.—The plaintiffs not having asked for the road before the 14th September 1909, the restriction to longer existed, and the plaintiffs could not compel the defendant to remove buildings erected on the most easterly 33 feet. Mensics v. Van Walleghem (1910), 15 W. L. R. 209. Affirmed (1911) 16 W. L. R. 646, Man. L. R.

"Cash" payment—Failure to make— Reasonable delay—Abandenment of contract— Oral evidence—Statute of Frauds.]—The defendant, being the owner of a city lot, on the 29th October, 1909, signed a document in which she acknowledged the receipt from the plaintiff of $50, "being deposit on purchase of lot" (describing the defendant's lot) "for the sum of $10,000 net to me, and on the following terms, $4,500 cash, also setting out the other terms, and a provision as to possession, etc. The plaintiff never tendered the $4,500, nor was the defendant ever asked to execute any agreement for sale other than the above. On the 4th November the defendant notified the plaintiff orally that unless the $4,500 was paid in two days, the defendant would sell to another. On the 16th November the defend-ant sold to another: — Held, that cash meant "immediate or prompt payment in current funds," and, if any evidence could be given to modify its primary meaning, none was adduced in this case which supported the contention that it meant payment in 30 days. If such special meaning could be attached to the word, it was not shewn that the defendant knew of it, which would be necessary. If oral evidence was admissible at all on this point, the evidence of the defendant and her son (taken subject to objection) shewed that in this case cash meant payment on the Monday or Tuesday following the 29th October. The evidence of notice of intention to resell was not admissible, in view of the Statute of Frauds, But, in all the circumstances, even if time was not of the essence of the agreement, a period of more than 2 weeks was a reasonable time to wait for a cash payment and, when it was not forthcoming within that period, the defendant was justified in treating the agreement as abandoned. Higgin-botham v. Mitchell (1910), 13 W. L. R. 649.

Completion of houses by vendor—
Prechaser to have right, on default of vendor, to complete and deduct price from balance of purchase money — Payment of balance of cash—Retusal of purchaser to deliver mortgage for part of price, houses being incomplete—Action for declaration of rights—Mandatory order for delivery of mortgage—Lien—Costs. Cummings v. Docl. 10 O. W. R. 331, 959.

Deed of sale — "Contre-lettre" — Construction of terms of two instruments so as to make one complete contract—Condition—Obligation to maintain insurance—Breach—Forfeiture — Compensation. Houle v. St. Aubin, 3 E. L. R. 446.

Default—Time of essence—Forfeiture— Notice—Delay—Assignment of contract by purchaser — Resale by vendor — Parties — Damages—Measure of—Costs — Defendants severing — Apportionment of costs.]—An agreement of sale contained provision for forfeiture for non-performance by the purchaser of conditions, time being "of the essence of the agreement," or at the option of the vendor a right of resale. After the conditions had been broken, the vendor entered into negotiations with the purchaser to induce him to live up to his agreement, and delayed for some months to give notice of forfeiture required:—Held, following Re Dagenham (Thames) Dock Co., L. R. 8 Ch. 1022, and Cornwall v. Henson, [1900] 2 Ch. 1028, that the vendor did not possess the right to cancel the agreement as against the pur-chaser:—Held, however, that where the ven-dor had actually resold, and the second pur-chaser had been let into possession, and remained in possession for some months with the knowledge of the original purchaser, before the latter took any steps to assert his rights, that the original purchaser had lost the right to assert his interest under the original agreement as against the second purchaser, but that he was entitled to damages against the vendor.—Held, also, that the measure of damages was the amount of the down payment (no other payments having been made), plus the amount of profit on the resale.—The original purchaser having assigned to two persons, only one of whom was made defendant in the action: -Held, that it was proper, at the trial, to add the administrator of the other (who had died in the meantime), on his own application, as a party defendant .- Semble, where defendants appear by the same solicitor, they are not entifled to be represented by different counsel at the trial, as regards the costs. -Disposition of costs as between the vendor, the original purchaser, and the second purchaser, in the special circumstances of this case. Crawford v. Patterson, 7 W. L. R. 183, 1 Alta, L. R. 27.

Deferred payments - Substituted contract—Dispute as to conditions—Tender— Dispensing with—Default — Notice of cancellation-Invalidity - Specific performance Damages.]-The plaintiff agreed to purchase from the defendant, a quarter section of land for $1.600, and paid $400 cash. The balance was to be paid in four annul instalments of $300. Before the first deinstalments of $300. Before the first de-ferred payment was due, a new arrangement was made between the parties by which the defendant was to give the plaintiff a transfer of the land upon certain conditions: what these conditions were, was in dispute. The plaintiff alleged that the defendant agreed to give him the transfer upon payment of the balance due with interest to the date of payment, which sum he was to raise by a loan on the land. The defendant testified that the arrangement was that he was to give the transfer upon payment of the balance and interest (amounting to $1,272) and of a note for $315 given in another transaction. The plaintiff arranged for a loan of $1,200 upon a mortgage on the land and, before he received the amount, paid the defendant $372, borrowing the money from a bank on a chattel mortgage. The plaintiff instructed the mortgagees of the land to pay $900 to the defendant, but, after getting the $372, the defendant refused to give the transfer of the land unless the note for $315 was paid, as well as the balance under the agreement. The defendant knew that the money was ready for him. This balance was not tendered to the defendant; and, the next payment under the original agree-ment not being made, the defendant served it ion the plaintiff a notice of the cancellation of the agreement :- Held, upon the evidence, that payment of the note was not made a condition upon which the plaintiff was to have a transfer of the land; that, in the circumstance, a tender of the balance of the purchase money would have been useless, and the plaintiff was in the same position as if he had made a proper tender; and, the payment of the purchase money having been prevented by the defendant, he could not afterwards effectively cancel the agreement, without shewing that at a subsequent date he was willing, but the plaintiff was unable or unwilling to carry out the new arrangement, and this he had not done; the defendant's therefore ineffective; and the plaintiff, on payment of the balance of the purchase money and any taxes or other sums properly paid by the defendant, was entitled to a transfer:—Held, also, that the plaintiff transfer:—Held, also, that the plaintiff was entitled as damages to the expenses incurred in negotiating the loan; but not to loss sustained by the forced sale of his chattels by the bank as chattel mortgages, which was too remote; and not to loss of a tenant of the land, which was not proved. Marvin v. Blasdell (1910), 13 W. L. R. 423, 3 Stask, L. R. 64.

Delay of vendor-Time of essence Whether of contract or acceptance of offer -Deed to be prepared at vendor's expense-Effect of-Misrepresentation - Description -Statute of Frauds-Specific performance.] -Where the non-completion of a contract for the sale of lands within the time limited thereby was caused by the yendor, she was held to be precluded from insisting on the strict performance of the provision in that respect by the purchaser.—The contract consisted of an offer made by the purchaser and its acceptance by the vendor, the offer containing the terms of the contemplated contract, tamongst which were the provisions that "time shall be of the essence of this offer," and that the deed should be "prepared at the expense of the vendor:"-Held, that the limitation making time the essence referred merely to the acceptance of the offer (Magee, J., dissenting); (2) that the provision as to the deed being prepared at the 'vendor's expense dispensed with the requirements of the general rule that the purchaser should prepare and tender the deed to the wender.—In the agreement for sale the land was described as lot No. 22, whereas it should have been lot No. 24. The proper park lot was given, and it was described by its frontage and depth, and was the only lot owned by the vendor in the street, there being in fact, no such number as 22 in the street. The agreement also stated it to be subject to an existing mortgage for $4,000, while a deed containing a proper description had been executed by the vendor, which was held by the solicitor in escrow:—Held, that there was not such vagueness and uncertainty in the description as would render the contract void under the Statute of Frauds.—A decree for specific performance was directed. Foster v. Anderson, 10 O. W. R. 531, 998, 15 O. L. R. 362.

Discharge of mortgage by executor —Registering probate — Local improvement rates—Covenant to convey "free from incumbrances "-Executions and general registrations.] — On an application under the Vendors and Purchasers Act, R. S. O. 1897 134:-Held, that, as the purchaser was entitled to a registered title, the vendor was bound to register the probate of the will of a deceased mortgagee whose executor had given a discharge in 1888.-Held, also, that under an agreement that the vendor "would convey the lands freed and discharged from all incumbrances . . from and after the day fixed for the completion of the sale, local improvement rates were not apportionable as "taxes, rates, and assessments and must be removed by the vendor .- Held, also, that the purchaser must satisfy himself by the usual searches as to entries in the general register and executions affecting the lands. Re Taylor and Martyn, 9 O. W. R. 666, 14 O. L. R. 132.

Fees on sale of land—Non-payment—Non-payment—Repea.]—Held. that a sale made by the plaintiff, out of the Province of Quebec, of land in that Province to the defendant domiciled there (55 & 56 V. c. 17, s. 3, relating to dues payable upon transfer of land, being in force at the time), was radically und absolutely void, the defendant not having paid the dues which he was bound to pay, nor registered his title within the time prescribed; and the vendor was in a position to set up this nullity, which is d'ordre public.—The repeal of the statute has not rendered valid acīs made void de plano by default of the carrying out in due time of the formalities required. Nadeau v. Pouliot, 17 Que. S. C. 184.

Notice—Improvements.]—Plaintiff agreed to sell certain lots to M. & F. provided that all improvements placed on these lots should remain there until the final payment had been made. M. & F. agreed to sell to the defendant, who erected a building not affixed to the ground. The defendant commenced to remove this building and plaintiffs applied for an injunction which was refused, as the defendant had no notice of the agreement between M. & F. and the plaintiffs. Graves v. James, 9 W. L. R. 220.

Performance—Waiver—Time — Equitvable right — Possession — Ejectment. Farr v. Foster, 12 O. W. R. 1286.

Pledge by the donee, in case of aliention of the property given, to give a particular person an opportunity to buy on conditions offered—Penalty for violation of this pledge—Recourse of the beneficiary on this pledge.—A stipulation in a gift of real estate that the donee will give the donor's son a preference, in case of the alienation of the property given, an opportunity to buy it on the terms offered by third parties under pain of paying him $400, is violated and the penalty is incurred when the donee having placed the beneficiary in a position to accept a gift of the real estate alone on conditions which being too onerous caused a refusal, and immediately made a gift to a third party on the same conditions, adding therefor morables of great value. The real estate given being subject to a lien for the payment of the penalty, the beneficiary may bring an action on his lien against the purchaser, who has become the detainor. Bissonnette v. Martin, 1909, 36 Que. S. C. 477.

Provision that no assignment by purchaser be valid unless approved by vendor.]—Appeal from judgment, 10 W. L. R. 539, 2 Susk. L. R. 93 (1909), Dig. Col, 708, allowed. Savyer-Massey v. Bennett (1909), 12 V, L. R. 249.

Purchaser ready to complete — Vendor insisting on restrictive clause-Restraint on alienation—Invalidity—Dispensing soith tender.]—Held, that a provision in a transfer of land restraining the transferee from subdividing the property into lots is void as being in restraint of the free power of alienation necessarily implied by a transfer in fee simple.—2. Proof of tender of the purchase in an action for specific performance is unnecessary if the vendor, by his conduct, renders tender unnecessary. Maloney v. Whitlock, T. W. L. R. 460, 1 Sask L. R. 41.

Redemption-Extension of the term of redemption—Nature of the agreements for that purpose — Procedure — The buyer's remedy when the right of redemption is seized-Lesion as a ground for setting aside a contract.] - Lesion, being no longer a ground for setting aside a contract, cannot be set up against the creditors wishing to enforce the contract. The purchaser of an immovable has his remedy in an opposition to annul when the right of redemption has been seized, at the instance of a creditor of the seller who stipulated for it, on the ground that the term for redemption had expired. The stipulated term of a right of redemption is to be strictly observed, and it cannot be extended by the Court or by the purchaser. Any agreement or understanding of that nature is without effect with regard to third parties, and, as between the parties thereto, creates a new contract, namely, a promise of re-sale by the purchaser to the original vendor. Beaucage v. Harpin & Paul, 37 Que. S. C. 351.

Redemption - Forfeiture.] - The clause in a contract of sale with right of redemption, that in the event of failure to pay municipal and school taxes, when due, the seller would forfeit the benefit of the term and of the right of redemption, is subject to renunciation by purchaser, even impliedly, by acts which establish his intention. Consequently, when the taxes became due in Jan. and that, several months later, the pur-chaser claims the interest accrued on the price, accepts payment of it and renews the insurance upon the property in vendor's name, he is debarred from invoking the clause of forfeiture for non-payment of taxes. If, subsequently, a small sum ($1.21) becomes due for taxes, and if the vendor deposits it in Court with the moneys claimed in the first action, as soon as he is served with the writ, by application of the principle "de minimis non curat prætor," he will not be declared to have forfeited his right of redemption particularly when it would tappear that the action was taken more from spite than from a desire to have a right sustained. Blanchet v. Bessette, 37 Que. S. C. 92

Redemption — Second absolute sale — Ratification by first purchaser with reservation of rights — Registration of judgment against second purchaser—Hypothec,—A, sale with power of redemption (réméré) deprives the vendor of the property in the heritage sold. He cannot sell it to a second purchaser, and a deed of sale executed by him is, in such circumstances, only an assignment of eventual rights. It is of no avail that the first purchaser intervenes and assumes to ratify the second sale, if at the same time he reserves the rights which he has acquired under the deed to him. Therefore, the registration of a judgment against the new purchaser, as if he had become the owner of the land, does not create a legal hypothec thereon. Ménard v. Guibrd, 31 Que, S. C. 484.

Redemption — Simulation — Pledge— Evidence to establish—Effect between parties—Effect as against third persons.] — A sale of land described by the parties as a sale a réméré is, in reality, as to them, a simple pledge, if it appears that the intention of the purchaser in subscribing it was only to take a security for the payment of a debt, and not to acquire the land as purchaser.) The fact that the so-called purchaser is left in possession after the term of réméré has expired, and the admission of the purchaser are sufficient to establish such intention. However, whatever may be the effect between the parties, the transaction as against strangers takes effect according to what it purports to be on its face. Grégoire v. Beaurivage, 30 Que. S. C. 523.

Rents of land — Apportionment—Contract—Conveyances.]—The plaintiff, on the 220th May. 1902, contracted in writing with the defendant for the saie to the defendant of certain land, a portion of which was at the time under lease to a tenant whose term commenced on the 1st May. 1902, and was then unexpired. The plaintiff claimed an apportionment of the rent between the 1st May and the 24th June, when the deed was delivered:—Held, that the Act respecting the apportionment of rent, R. S. N. S. c. 150, s. 2, did not apply as between vendor and purchaser, and the written contract containing no reservation of rent, the purchaser was entitled to the whole rent. Miller v. Nicholls, 23 C. L. T. 176.

Representation — Agency — Non-compliance with terms — Action for specific performance — Refusal of Court to adjudge. Bowerman v. Fraser, 10 O. W. R. 729.

Restraint in alienation—Invalidity.]—A prohibition against allenating land sold or given å titre onereus is void, even when the prohibition is for a limited time, for example the life of the vendor or donor. The latter cannot be assumed to have intended an additional guarantee of the fulfilment of the charges of alienation; the precise and formal terms of Art. 970, C. C., do not admit of this construction. Janelle v. Courchene, 31 Que. S. C. 157.

Right of remere—Exercise of.]—One who has reserved the right of réméré upon an immovable must seek out the purchaser in order to fulfil the conditions upon which he has reserved such right, and it is not for the purchaser to seek him out. Chartrand v. Desrouard, 6 Que. P. R. 131.

VENDORS AND PURCHASERS.

Right of remere-Jus ad rem-Assignment of right.1 — A vendor à réméré de-prives himself of all his rights of property; he reserves only a simple jus ad rem in the property sold, and cannot, consequently, sell it anew to a second purchaser: Art. 1487, C. C. 2. In this case, L., the vendor à réméré, was held not to have sold the pro-perty a second time to C., but to have merely assigned to him his right of re-purchase, which is assignable. Judgment in 24 Que. S. C. 438, reversed. Sirois v. Carrier, 13 Que. K. B. 242.

Right of remere—Payment of taxes Mise en demeure — Rente viagere — Instalments — Default in payment — Demand.]—1. A condition imposed upon the reservation of a right of réméré, that the vendor shall pay the taxes on the immovables sold, upon their falling due, applies to the reimbursement of the purchaser, who has become a personal debtor in respect of these taxes, and who has paid them. Therefore, a vendor with right of réméré cannot be in default for not having made such paybe in detaint for not naving made such pay-ment, so long as the purchaser has not re-gularly called upon him for payment, after having himself pajd the taxes.—2. The per-son liable to pay a life rent, payable by instalments on fixed dates, who lives with the person entitled to receive, is not in default for non-payment simply by the falling due of an instalment; a further demand of payment or mise en demeure is necessary. Labelle v. Chapleau, 35 Que. S. C. 23.

Right of remere-Reservation in contract of sale - Subsequent agreement to resell — Default in payment — Forfeiture — Place of payment — Demand — Domicil.] -A réméré is a reservation made by the vendor in a contract of sate; if made afterwards, even the day after the sale, the agreement is not an agreement of réméré, but a promise of the purchaser to resell to the vendor, the effect of which is very differ-2. A condition in a contract that default in making payments thereunder will forfeit the right to a stipulated benefit, is subject to the rule that in default of any indication of the place of payment, the payment must be made at the domicil of the debtor, and as long as the creditor does not enable the debtor to make payment at this place, the forfeiture is not incurred. Therefore, the purchaser of an immovable who grants to his vendor the right of repurchasing, in consideration of periodical payments, without indicating a place where they are to be made, but upon the condition that default of paying any one of them will forfeit the right of repurchase, is not in a position to obtain a judgment for payment upon this ground, until he has put the vendor in default by a demand made at his domicil. Vallée v. Dease, 33 Que. S. C. 299.

Sale of building — Party wall — Reservation of right of mitoyenneté—Transfer—Notice.]—The vendor of a building, a wall of which is susceptible of becoming a common wall (mur mitoyen), can retain and reserve to himself the right of mitoyennété in such wall. This right is not a real, but a personal, conditional, right of acquiring the use of the wall without charge, in the event of becoming the owner of the contiguous property, or of recovering the charges and dues prescribed in Art. 518, C. C., from any other party who, becoming such owner, chooses to make the wall a common one. The vendor who reserves the right of mitoyenneté as above, can assign it to others, and the assignee is not bound to signify the assignment to the person who makes the wall common, before bringing suit to recover the charges exigible under Art. 518, C Duperreault v. Roy, 29 Que. S. C. 343.

Suspensive condition-Rights of purchaser before fulfilment—Attempt to alien-ate—Nullity—Declaration.]—The sale of an immovable under a suspensive condition coninmovable under a suspensive condition con-fers no right upon the purchaser as long as the condition is unfulfilled. An attempted alienation of it by the purchaser in favour of a third person is, in the circumstances, of no effect, and the owner, the original vendor, has the remedy of an action for a declara-tion of the nullity of the deed by which the alienation is sought to be effected, and its registration. Walker v. Davis, 16 Que. K. B. 495.

Time of essence - Waiver-Notice Rescission — Forfeiture of payments — Re-ceiver—Rents — Laches — Specific performance-Costs.]-Semble, that the acceptance by a vendor of a payment on account of a past due instalment of purchase money is a waiver of his right to take advantage of a provision in the agreement of sale making time of the essence thereof; but, if there be a subsequent default in payment of a subsequent instalment, that, being a new breach, gives the vendor a right to insist on that provision:—Held, that a vendor, if he gives to the purchaser a notice limiting a reasonable time within which to complete an agreement to purchase, and informing him that after the lapse of the time limited the agreement will be treated as at an end, and if he does not act subsequent to waiver the effect of the notice thereby legally rescinds the agreement, and the purchaser is not entitled to specific performance.—2. That mere delay in enforcing his rights, consequent upon such a rescission, does not disentitle the vendor to a declaratory order that the agreement is rescinded.—3. That in such a case payments on account of purchase-money are forfeited to the vendor if there be a provision to that effect in the agreement, and, semble, even without such a provision.—4. That where, after such an agreement, the property in question passed into the hands of a receiver appointed by the Court, and he, as well as the purchaser, was given a notice of the terms above mentioned, the receiver was ac-countable to the vendor for the rents received countable to the vendor for the rents received subsequent to the date on which the notice terminated the agreement. The receiver, on the grounds of his being an officer of the Court, and of the delay of the vendor in t.king steps to enforce his rights, was not ordered to pay the costs of the application to which the above questions were raised. Forfar v. Sage, Exp. Wilkins, 5 Terr. L. R.

Unpatented Crown lands-Holder of location ticket—Right to sell—Specific per-formance.]—Lots granted by the Crown by location tickets under Arts, 1208 et seq., R. S. Q., may be validly sold before the issue of the letters patent which confer the definite title. Therefore, a contract for the saile of one of these lots may be enforced by the vendor, and upon transfer of the title to the purchaser, the latter will be bound to pay the price agreed upon as in the case of contract of sale of any other immovable. Fauteux v. Guindon, 31 Que. S. C. 143.

Written offer of pirchaser—Acceptance of sendors by conduct—Receipt of deposit—Action for balance of purchase price Terms of payment not provided for in offer — Formal contract executed by vendors—Refusal of purchaser to execute—Incomplete contract—Failure of action.]—In an application for purchase, $25 was payable in cash but other terms of payment were omitted. Plaintiffs accepted contract, received deposit and subsequently sued for balance due: — Held, contract incomplete and judgment of non-suit entered. Imperial Development Co. v. Matthew (Man.), 10

4. COVENANTS.

Against incumbrances — Breach — Measure of damages — Payment of mortgage — Real Property Limitation Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 100, s. 24 — Charge on land.] — A claim for damages for breach of a covenant against incumbrances on land is not a claim "to recover any sum of money secured by any mortgage, judgment, or lien, or otherwise charged upon or payable out of any land or rent," within the meaning of s. 24 of the Real Property Limitation Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 100, and an action to recover such damages is therefore not barred under that section by the lapse of ten years. —Re Powers, 30 Ch. D. 291, followed. Sutton, v. Sutton, 22 Ch. D. 511, and Fearnside v. Flint, 22 Ch. D. 579, distinguished. — Where the covenant for the breach of which an action is brought is one against incumbrances, the plaintiff is not entitled to recover as damages the amount of all incumbrances, but only such as have been actually enforced, though it would be otherwise if the covenant had been that the land was free from incumbrances except a mortgage of $1,000:—Held, that the plaintiff's damages should be limited to the excess of the mortgagee's claim over $1,000, notwithstanding that there were at the time registered judgments against the land for further sums of money. Wilson v. Graham, 3 W. L. R. 517, 16 Man. L. R. 101.

Building restrictions — Creation of servitudes. — A stipulation in a conveyance of land divided into building lots whereby the purchaser covenants not to do certain things, for example, not to build in a space reserved at the line of the street, does not create a servitude upon each lot at the expense of the other. In the absence of a dominant tenement, it creates only an obligation not to so build, of which the vendor and his legal representatives are the obligees, and the purchaser and his representatives the obligors. Pelletier v. Trudeau, 27 Que. S. C. 196. S. C. 196.

Building restrictions — Intention of parties — Security — Building scheme — Breach of covenant — Damages in lieu of injunction — Assessment. Snow v. Willmott, 5 O. W. R. 361.

Construction of covenants—Dependent or independent — Payment into Court.]—The plaintiff's claim was for payment of the balance of the purchase money of land under an agreement of sale, in the usual form, in which the purchaser covenanted that he would well and truly pay the said sum of money together with the interest thereon on the days and times mentioned, and the vendor covenanted that, in consideration of the purchaser's covenant and on payment, &c., he would convey and assured to the purchaser, his heirs and assigns, by a good and sufficient deed in fee simple, &c., the said price or parcel of land freed and discharged from all incumbrances:—Held, following Macarthur V. Leckie, 9 Man. L. R. 110, that the two covenants were independent, and that the defendant was bound to pay the purchase money before he could call on the plaintiff to convey the property, and that it was not necessary for the plaintiff to prove the tender of a conveyance, or to allege that he was ready and willing to convey, although it appeared that the property was subject to two mortgages. With the plaintiff's consent, the defendant's purchase money was ordered to be paid into Gourt so that the incumbrances could be discharged out of it and only the balance paid to the plaintiff. Sovord V. Tedden, 21 C. L. T. 546, 13 Man. L. R. 572.

acquisition by the defendant of S.'s interest. The value put upon S.'s interest in the land was $13,760, and in the goods $5,240, in all $19,000. Of this, $6,000 was to be paid by the conveyance by the defendant to S., within one year, of a section of land in Saskatchewan. The remaining $3,000 was settled by notes. S. executed conveyances of his interest in the Manitoba property, and the defendant obtained title thereto, and mortgaged the land, but did not convey the Saskatchewan land within the year or afterwards. The defendant's covenant to convey the Saskatchewan section was contained in a deed whereby he undertook, in consideration of $16,000, to convey to S, within a year, time to be of the essence of the agreement. The defendant admitted that the half interest in the Spring-field land was to be taken at $13,760, and that was included in the $16,000: — Held, that the amount stated in the deed as the consideration was conclusive. The defendant had the option of paying for the interest in the Manitoba farm within a year by conveying the Saskatchewan section. This he did ing the Sassatchewan section. This he did not do, and the result was that S, or the plaintiff was entitled to receive the agreed consideration in money.—Held, therefore, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover $16,000 from the defendant with interest, and to a vendor's lien upon an undivided one-half interest in the Manitoba lands, in respect of $13,760 of the $16,000, and interest, and in default of payment, to enforce the lien by sale.—Held, also, that the lien should not be limited to damages for the failure to convey the section, although it appeared to be worth not more than $5,120. By the nature of the transaction, the prompt observance of the stipulation as to time was essential; and to make the plaintiff take damages in the value of the land at a later period would be to force upon him a contract different from that into which S. entered. The measure of dam-ages is the amount of the consideration with interest,-Held, also, that the mortgage made by the defendant upon the Manitoba land could not be affected in this action; nor could any deficiency caused thereby be thrown on the defendant's original half interest. Snider v. Webster (1911), 16 O. W. R. 397, Man. L. R.

Pay ground rent—Force of the expression "ground on which the mill stands,"]—
In a sale of three parcels of real estate, the last of which is described "the beach lots numbered on the government harbour plan as 28 and 29, north side inside, with the mill thereon," a clause providing as follows, "subject to the payment by the purchaser of any ground rent or other moneys due to the government in respect of said lands as well for the past as the future, save and except in regard to the ground upon which the mill stands, which shall be payable by the vendors," must be construed as a covenant by the vendors to pay the taxes on lots numbers 28 and 29 and not merely on the part of those lots forming the site of the mill. Scott v. McNeill (1909), 18 Que. K. B. 575.

Restrictive covenant — Prohibition of sale of intoxicating liquors on land sold — Breach of covenant by sub-purchaser — Wholesale liquor license — Vendors ocening other lands in the neighbourhood — Ejusdem generis rule — Leches — Squatter — Adverse possession — Subjection to coven ant.]—The plaintiff sold a lot to B., whose husband sold it to defendant. No transfers were registered and defendant was unaware that his vendor's wife was the owner. Plaintiff sold this lot and others with a restrictive covenant that no purchaser or assignor should sell liquer nor carry on the business of a licensed victualler on said lot:—Held, that plaintiff owning other lands on which this easement can depend is entitled to an injunction. Ejusdem generis rule does not apply and a wholesale liquor business cannot be carried on. The defendant had constructive notice of the covenant. Defendant is not a squatter; even if he were, the restrictive covenant would be good. International Coal and Coke Co. v. Evans (Alta.), 9 W. L. R. 711.

Restrictive covenants—Building scheme—Release of covenants by assignee of covenance — Rights of not specially endorsed has no binding effect, and the plaintiff is free to name. |—M. sold to C. some vacant land north of his residence, subject to certain building restrictions. Defendant became owner of all the land sold to C. except the rear 20 feet sold to W. Plaintiffs now owned M.'s residence:—Held, that W. was not a necessary party to a release of these restrictions given by plaintiffs to defendants. Cosmopolitan Club v. Lavine, 13 O. W. R. 687.

Running with land — Charge upon lands. — Plaintiff sold certain lands in fee simple to A., from whom defendants bought. The conveyance contained a covenant to the effect that A., its successors and assigns, would give 60 loads of slack coal annually to A. and his heirs:—Held, that there is no charge on the lands, no rent reserved nor a covenant running with land. Action for damages for non-fulfilment dismissed. Carroll v. Dominion, 8 E. L. R. 54.

Sale of mining claims—Mortgage registered against claims—Sale free from incumbrance — Action to compel discharge—Covenant against incumbrances — Covenant for title — Breach — Damages — Measure of. Rost v. Syndicat Lyonais du Klondike, 9 W. L. R. 352.

Vendor to prepare land for cultivation and leave hay on land — Misrepresentations by vendor — Amendment — Reformation of contract and rescission — Damages — Counterclain.]—Action for balance due under a covenant in an agreement for sale of land. Vendor agreed that 200 acres were broken, whereas only 136 were broken:— Held, defendant not entitled to damages for this misrepresentation, as no fraud or deceit, Claim of defendant to have contract reformed refused. Damages allowed defendant for insufficiency and defective preparation of land and shortage in hay. No damages allowed for loss of profits on crops as too remote. Cross v. Domglas, 10 W. L. R.

Affirmed 12 W. L. R. 273; 3 Sask. 97.

5. EXCHANGE OF LANDS.

Action to set aside—Misrepresentations—Failure to prove. Myroniw v. Wainstock (Man.), 4 W. L. R. 522.

Agreement as to taxes-Special sewer rate — Date of assessment,]—On the 4th May, 1894, the plaintiff and defendant made an exchange of properties and covenanted reciprocally "to pay all taxes and assess-ments for which the said properties may be liable from and after the 1st day of April, 1894." Before the exchange, in September, 1894." Before the exchange, in September, 1893, the city of Montreal had decided to construct a sewer in Woodstock avenue where the property received by the defendant in exchange was situated - the cost whereof was to be borne by the owners of land bordering on the avenue. The sewer was constructed in October, 1893, and on the 7th May, 1894, a special assessment roll dividing the cost among the owners on the avenue was signed and deposited in the office of the city treasurer for purposes of collection. The name of the plaintiff was entered on the roll as a contributory, and he was obliged to pay the taxes thus imposed. He brought this action for reimposed. He brought this action for reimbursement:—Held, reversing the judgment in 9 Que. S. C. 300, that, in spite of the fact that the roll had not been signed until the 7th May, 1894, the property in question was, before the 1st April, 1894, affected and pledged for the payment of the cost of the sewer, and the plaintiff alone should bear the special tax which had been imposed upon him. Rochon v. Hudson, 16 Que. S. C. 356.

Conditional contract — Acquisition of title — Receission — Notice — Concurrence.]—When one of the parties to an exchange of immovable properties is not the owner of that which he offers to give, the contract is conditional, and can only be enforced by him when he has fulfilled the condition, i.e., when he has become the owner of the property.—When one party to an exchange has performed his part of the contract by signing the requisite deed to effect a conveyance of the property given by him, and notifies the other to do the same, as to his part, within a delay after which his failure to do so will be taken as a resiliation of the contract, and the latter party first to error, and takes steps to carry out the contract, and afterwards pretends that his refusal was due to error, and takes steps to carry out the contract, but without putting himself in a position to do so effectually, such conduct will amount to an implied concurrence in the notice of resiliation given by the first party. Blanchard v. Walker, 30 Que. S. C. 171.

Conditions — Account — Claim and counterclaim — Costs.]—Action for an account. Purely questions of fact involved. Dodulitz v. Krainean (1909), 12 W. L. R. 1.

Improvement to building—Work not completed by sendor — Taken over by purchaser — Allowance for money expended — Rents — Accounts — Reference — Report Poperty on the corner of Adelaide and Church streets, Toronto, known as St. James Chambers, and the alleged non-performance of covenants by defendant. Plaintiff claimed $2,240.07 for payments made by him in carrying out the agreement for sale, $2,500 for moneys paid by him to settle a certain action by a creditor of defendant and to remove a lis pendens against the property, and $3,000 damages for delay in completing the contract. At trial, judg-ment was given declaring that plaintiff was not entitled to charge defendant with the amount paid in settlement of said action, and referred it to the official referee, to take and referred it to the official referee, to take account between parties. As a result of taking accounts, the referee found a large balance due by defendant to plaintiff. On appeal by defendant to the Chancellor, 14 O. W. R. 224, Court of Appeal, 15 O. W. R. 606, varied the judgment of the Chancellor, by increasing the rental of 93 Carlton street chargeaple against plaintiff from street, chargeable against plaintiff, from $780 to $1,000 per annum. No costs to either party.—Plaintiff moved for judgment either party.—Finith moved for judghten on further direction and defendant moved by way of appeal from the report of the official referee. The questions involved official referee. The questions involved were: (1) How should the amount fixed by the Court of Appeal as chargeable against plaintiff for occupation rent, be applied, from time to time, as payments were made, or brought into account at the final adjust-ment between the parties; (2) time for redemption; (3) costs.—Riddell, J., held, that the plaintiff should not charge interest upon his expenditures, etc., so long as these did not exceed the amount which he should be charged for rental, or at least the interest should be charged only on the excess above the amount of rental with which he should be charged from time to time, but he was prevented from giving effect to it by the former decisions; that the Court of Appeal refrained from reversing the Chancellor (14 O. W. R. 224), holding that no interest was to be allowed upon the amount found due for rent, seemed to conclude him to hold that the direction not to allow interest was not overruled or intended to be reversed; that as to the second question, one month should be allowed from the date of judgment, the plaintiff to have the general costs of action; that the registrar to settle adjustment of insurance premiums, etc., as agreed. Foster v. Radford (1910), 16 O. W. R. 145.

Incumbrances—Plaintiff and defendant agreed to exchange certain lands. Plaintiff was to assume $5,590 on defendant's property. After a conveyance had been made to plaintiff he discovered that the incumbrances were $950 more than he agreed to assume. Having paid the latter sum he now sued to recover it. There was no fraud nor a covenant to pay:—Held, that he cannot recover it. Foster v. Stiffler (1909), 12 W. L. R. 60.

Incumbrances exceeding amount represented — Convegace of land by one party — Contract not displaced or merged—Vendor's lien — Realisation.]—The plaintiff and defendant agreed to exchange certain properties, and entered into a written agreement to that effect, by which it was provided that the exchange should be on the basis that the plaintiff agreed to purchase from the defendant described land in Winnipeg for $11,200, "assuming the sum of $5,500 on the said property," and the defendant agreed to purchase from the plaintiff certain farm lands for $10,500, including chattels, etc., thereon, as per inventory attached. "assuming the sum of $200 on" one parcel of the farm lands, and give $4,600 in two mortgages. The parties also agreed "to raise a first mortgage" on the other parcel of farm lands, the proceeds to be paid to the plaintiff, and the plaintiff to take a second mortgage for the balance. The parties promortgage for the balance. The parces pro-ceeded to carry out the transaction on the assumption that $5,500 was the total in-cumbrance against the Winnipeg property, and that $200 was the total incumbrance against the farm lands, and that $4,600, which was, on that basis, the difference in value, was to be paid or secured in the manner set out in the agreement. A first mortgage was raised on the first parcel of farm lands, and the proceeds, amounting to $1,938.15, were paid to the plaintiff; this parcel was conveyed to the defendant, but the second mortgage thereon was not given. The other parcel of farm land was not conveyed. The Winnipeg property was conveyed to the plaintiff, subject to the incumbrances, which were found to exceed $5,500. The plaintiff paid the excess, and brought this action to recover the amount from the defendant, and for a vendor's lien on the farm lands for the amount for which the second mortgage ought to be given:—Held, that the agreement was not displaced by or merged in the conveyance made to the plaintiff; the amount due or payable under the agreement had still to be adjusted; and the plaintiff was entitled to a vendor's lien upon the lands conveyed and to be conveyed by him, for the amount due as adjusted, and to realisation thereof in the usual way.—Judg-ment of Mathers, C.J., 12 W. L. R. 60, varied. Foster v. Stiffler (1910), 14 W. L. R. 178.

Reformation of contract—Mistake in description — Specific performance — Statute of Frauds — Part performance—Terms of contract — Liquidated damages — Payment into Court — Costs. Knapp v. Carley, 3 O. W. R. 940.

Time of the essence of agreement—Waiver by conduct — Notice of rescission—Jureasonable — Breach — Action for danges.]—Plaintiff and defendant entered into an agreement to exchange properties. The whole matter was to be completely closed on 25th April. Negotiations as to title continued between their solicitors until Friday, 7th May, when defendant's solicitor wrote plaintiff's solicitor, that if certain objections were not removed by Monday, 10th May, the defendant would treat the agreement as at an end. Plaintiff's solicitor was unable to do so and defendant declared the agreement ended. Plaintiff solicitor was unable to do so and defendant declared the agreement ended. Plaintiff brought action for damages: — Held, that time was of the essence of agreement originally, but it had been waived by conduct, and the agreement could only be ended by reasonable notice. Considering that Saturday was practically a half-holiday, defendant did not give reasonable notice. Judgment entered for plaintiff for $125 with costs. Hetherington v. McCabe (1910), 16 O. W. R. 154.

6. FRAUD AND MISREPRESENTATION.

Action for price of land—Defence— Misrepresentations of vendor as to value— Purchaser not relying on vendor's statements—No ground for avoiding contract.]—Action to recover $625, selling price of certain lands. Defendant claimed that plaintiff had misrepresented their value, saying they had cost him $775, whereas at the trial plaintiff admitted they had actually cost him not more than $475. After sale completed defendant made other enquiries regarding their cost. As defendant not deceived, he must pay. Fleming v. Bonnie, 10 W. L. R. 50, 2 Sask, L. R, 30,

As to building on land - Statute of Frauds — Oral evidence — Damages — Rectification of contract — Common intention — Description — Specific performance —Tender of conveyance.]—A builder agreed verbally to erect a house of a certain charversion to elect a noise of a Certain character and value upon a piece of land owned by him and to sell the property complete at a certain price. After the building was apparently complete as agreed, certain latent defects not then being apparent, a written contract was entered into for the sale of the property in accordance with the terms of the original agreement, but omitting the provisions as to the character and value of the house to be erected. In an action for rectification of the agreement by inserting the original provisions as to character and value of the structure :- Held, that before there can be rectification of an agreement there must be evidence of a common intention that the document to be rectified should contain the whole of the contract and that the omitted terms were left out by fraud or mutual mistake, and, as the parties when they executed the contract were in a position to judge of the character and value of the building, and believed that it complied with the terms of the original contract, there was no common intention that these terms should be inserted, the purchaser actually believing that the original contract had been complied with; the contract there-fore could not be rectified.—Held, further, however, that the purchaser having been induced by the vendor to enter into the agree-ment upon the vendor's representations that the building was of the description and value originally agreed upon, which representations as a matter of fact were false, the purchaser was entitled to damages for misrepresentation, and that the Statute of Frauds was no answer to an action for such damages.—Held, also, that in an action for specific performance it is not incumbent upon the purchaser to tender a conveyance before action, it being the duty of the vendor to prepare and execute the same. Ellerman v. Carruthers, 8 W. L. R. 692, 1 Sask. L. R. 157.

By agent of vendor before written contract made—Defence to action for purchase money—Specific performance.]—The negotiations between the parties for the sale and purchase of a town lot were comprised in three interviews: (1) when the defendant agreed to take the lot, when certain representations were made; (2) when he paid a deposit, at which time no representations were made; and (3) when he signed the agreement, when certain further representations were made. In an action to compel specific performance of the agreement to purchase:—Held, on appeal (Martin, J., dissenting), that the plaintiffs having failed to carry out some of the material representations made by their agent at the time of and as an inducement to the defendant to enter into the contract, specific performance should be refused. Crow's Newt Pass Coal Co. v. Mills, 5 W. L. R. 218, 12 B. C. R. 402.

By vendor's agent—Right of purchaser to rescission of contract—Election to affirm, by conduct — Laches — Damages.]—1. A misrepresentation by the vendor's agent, without the knowledge of the vendor, as to the locality of the land sold, although innocently made, will, if relied on by the purchaser, be sufficient to entitle him to rescind the contract, although he had the means of knowledge of the true location before he entered into the agreement. Rawlins v. Wickham, 3 De G. & J. 317, and Derry v. Peck. 14 App. Cas. 337, followed.—2. But when the purchaser failed to complain of the misrepresentation within a reasonable time after he became aware of the true location of the property, and promised the wendor to pay the next instalment of the purchase money due under the agreement after it was overdue, saying that he was then a little short of money, it should be held that he had elected to affirm the contract and had lost his right to rescind it.—Clough v. Local and the contract of the mountain the contract and had lost his right to rescind it.—Clough v. Local and the contract in this case, with the contract in this case, and the cou

Error - Rescission - Exchange - Improvements — Option — Actio quantum minoris — Latent defects — Damages — Warranty.]—An action will lie against the vendor of land to set aside the sale and recover the price, on the grounds of error and latent defects, even in the absence of fraud. The purchaser has the option of returning the property and recovering the price or of retaining the property and recovering a por-tion of the price; he cannot be forced to content himself with the action quantum minoris and damages, upon the pretext that the property might serve some of his poses, notwithstanding the defects. Where the vendor has sold, with warranty, a build-ing constructed by himself, he must be presumed to have been aware of any latent defects, and to have acted fraudulently in making the sale. Where the vendor repre-sented that a block of buildings had been constructed by him of solid stone and brick, and it was discovered after the transfer that a portion was built of lumber encased with stone and brick in a manner to deceive :-Held, that the contract was vitiated for error and fraud, and the vendor, as he knew of the faulty construction, was liable to re-turn the price and for damages. The action quantum minoris and for damages does not apply to cases where contracts are voidable for error or fraud. The sale was made in part in consideration of vacant city lots given in payment pro tanto, and, during the time the defendant was in possession of the lots, he erected buildings upon them with his own materials.—Held, that, even if the contract amounted to a contract of exchange, it was subject to be rescinded in the same manner and for reasons similar to those which would avoid a sale, and, if the contract be set aside for bad faith on the part of the defendant, the plaintiff has options similar to those mentioned in Arts. 417, 418, 1526, and 1527 of the Civil Code, that is to say, he may either retain the property built upon, on payment of the value of the improvements, or cause the defendant to remove them without injuring the property, or compel the defendant to retain the property built upon and to pay its value, besides having the right to recover damages according to the circumstances. Pagnuello v. Choquette, 24 C. L. T. 77, 34 S. C. R. 102.

Evidence of statement made—Proof of truth — Matters of opinion — Examination of land by purchaser — Reliance not placed upon representations — Cancellation and damages refused—Counterclaim for balance of purchase money — Acceleration by default.]—Purchaser sought to set aside an agreement for sale and purchase of land on account of misrepresentations made by defendant which turned out to be untrue:—Held, that as plaintiff had examined the crops, inspected the land and seen the well, he bought on his own judgment and did not rely upon defendant's representation. Action dismissed. Judgment on counterclaim for full amount owing, all now being due under the acceleration clause. Zimmer v. Karst (Sask.), 10 W. L. R. 551.

Good farming lands.]—Defendant, on negotiutions for the sale of wild lands, represented to plaintil's agent that they were fairly good for farming. He had not seen the lands and did not state that he had. It turned out that a large portion was not good enough for farming:—Held, that the plaintiff could not succeed in his action for the recovery of damages by reason of the defendant's misrepresentations, which should be considered merely as expressions of opinion not amounting to a warranty. De-Lasalle v. Guildord, [1901] 2 K. B. 221, followed; Mey v. Simpson (1908), 17 Man. L. R. 597; affirmed (1908), 42 S. C. R. 230.

Inducing contract of purchaser — Approbation after discovery of falsity — Rescission — Damages for deceit — Possession — Costs. Webb v. Roberts, 10 O. W. R. 962.

Proof of contract — Memorandum in writing — Statute of Frauds—Fraud and misrepresentation — Declaration that no misrepresentation to Land Titles Act —Application to discharge caveat — Summary trial of issue. Re Babbitt & Boileau (N.W.T.), 6 W. L. R. 20).

Provision that no assignment by purchaser be valid unless approved by vendor — Validity—Restraint upon alienation — Assignment to polantiffs without approval of vendor — Subsequent assignment to another — Fraud — Notice — Status of plaintiffs to maintain action to set aside subsequent assignment — Third assignment — Abandonment of — Evidence — Laches.]—Defendant B., who had agreed to buy certain lands from Canadian Pacific Railway Company, transferred said lands to the plaintiffs as if he were owner in fee simple. The railway company sent a statement of the amount owing to plaintiffs, but refused to recognise them unless plaintiffs obtained an assignment of the agreement: — Held, that sending such a statement is not a waiver of the provision requiring all assignments to be approved of by the railway company's commissioner. The agreement was subsequently transferred to M., and through

VENDORS AND PURCHASERS.

Purchaser acting on vendor's statements — Option—Rescission.]—Purchaser succeeds in action to rescind an agreement for purchase on the ground of fraud and misrepresentation on the part of vendor. Whitla v. Toye, 10 W. L. R. S9.

Rescission — Affirmation by purchaser after knowledge — Occupation rent—Judgment.}—The defendant bought a house and lot from the plaintiff for $1,400, purchase iot from the plaintin for $1.400, purchase money to be payable by instainments of $1.0 a month. The contract further provided that, unless the amounts were punctually paid, all payments made should be forfeited and all rights of the defendant cease and determine, and the plaintiff be at liberty to re-cuter. The defendant paid the first three instalments, although before paying the third he became aware of misrepresentations third ne became aware or insrepresentations of the plaintiff inducing the contract. He refused to pay the fourth instalment, but continued to hold possession. The plaintiff brought this action for possession, and claimed for use and occupation since the last payment on the contract. The defendant counterclaimed for rescission and return of his money paid, and in the alternative damages for misrepresentations: — Held, that the defendant had by his conduct affirmed the contract after knowledge of the mis-representations, and that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment for possession unless the defendant should elect to pay the proper value of the property, having regard to the amount to be deducted as compensation for misrepresentations. If he declined to do this, the measure of the defendant's damages would be the amount which he had paid, less a proper occupation rent. Webb v. Roberts, 16 O. L. R. 279, 11 O. W. R. 639.

Sale of mining rights — Exaggerated representations — Rescission — Parties.]— Representations exaggerating the value of Representations exaggerating the value or rights sold do not constitute acts of fraud which give to the purchaser the right to insist that the sale is void, but they amount to a simple wrong, which is not a ground for nullifying a contract between adults. 2. An action to set aside a sale of mining rights and rights of redemption, of which the plaintiff alleges that he possesses only a very will be dismissed upon denurger if part, will be dismissed upon demurrer, if the owners of the other parts of such rights are not before the Court. Jeannotte v. Car-on, 5 Que. P. R. 183.

Secret commission to purchaser's agent—Collusion—Election.]—The defendant was induced by his agent to agree to buy the plaintiff's farm for $1,850, although the plaintiff's price was only $1,800. He paid $250 in cash and went into possession. It was represented to him that there were 80 acres of cultivated land on the farm, but it turned out that there were only about 58 acres. On discovering this he asked to have the agreement cancelled and his money rec.c.L.-138.

turned, but this was refused. He then, on the advice of the same agent, raised a crop on the farm and remained in possession for on the farm and remained in possession for over a year, but refused to make the further payments agreed on. The plaintiff then brought this action to have the agreement cancelled and the money he had received forfeited. At the trial it came out that the plaintiff had paid the agent $50 out of the money paid by the defendant, who asked to have the agreement cancelled and his money refunded to him:—Held, without deciding whether the defendant by his inaction had lost his right to repudiate the bargain on account of the shortage in the cultivated area, and distinguishing Campbell v. Flemarea, and distinguishing Campbell v, Fleming, 1 A. & E. 40, that, on account of the newly discovered secret payment by the plaintiff to the defendant's confidential agent, the defendant had the right to ask for cancellation of the sale and repayment of the $250, with costs of action. Panama, &c., Co. v. India Rubber, &c., Co., L. R. 10 Ch. 515, followed. Murray v. Smith, 22 C. L. T. 241, 14 Man. L. R. 125; Sparling v. Houlihan, 22 C. L. T. 306, 14 Man. L. R. 134. R. 134.

Value of land-Rental - Abatement of price — Exchange.] — A person, who has bought a specific immovable property after due examination, and has received delivery of the same, but who alleges that his consent to the contract was obtained by a fraudu-lent representation of the vendor which had the effect of increasing the buyer's estimate of the value of the property, and of inducing him to buy at a price exceeding that which he would have given if the fraud had not been practised, cannot, while adhering to the contract and retaining the property, bring an action to get back part of the price. 2. General statements by a vendor as to the renting value of the immovable property sold, without any representation as to the actual rental, are not grounds of nullity, and do not give rise to an action for the recovery of part of the price paid.—3. In an action quantum minoris, it is necessary to prove that the buyer gave more than the real value of the property (which was not done in this case), and where the contract is one of exchange, the party complaining must establish that he suffered loss by the exchange .-4. In any event where representations are made by vendor to purchaser, as to rental value of the property sold, they are not to be considered as extending beyond the termination of the current leases. Bailey v. Reinhardt, 17 Que. S. C. 387.

7. OPTIONS.

Absence of consideration - Right to withdraw before acceptance - Company-Notice of withdrawal.]-An option by the defendant, for which he received no consideration, was given to a company on two par-cels of land, and contained the statement that "this offer is open and irrevocable for six months from the date hereof." Before the option expired, it not having been in the meantime accepted, the defendant handed to the company's secretary a letter addressed to him by name, but not designating him as such, stating that the option was withdrawn. The secretary, while intimating that he did not think the plaintiff had the power to withdraw, stated that there would shortly be a meeting of the company, when the option would probably be accepted. The company met and accepted the option for both lots, which they assigned over to the plaintiff, who brought an action for specific performance of the alleged agreement to sell:—Held, that the action was not maintainable, for, there being no consideration for the option, the defendant had the right to withdraw it.—Held, also, that the letter of withdraw it.—Held, also, that the letter of withdraw it.—Held, seeved by the secretary in his capacity of secretary. Carton v. Wilson, S. O. W. R. 781, 13. O. L. R. 412.

Acceptance.] — Defendant conveyed to plaintiff a house and lot and at the same time gave him an apption on the vacant lot adjoining to be exercised within one year, or some conveyed part of said to another party for $500. Plaintiff sought to exercise his option and brought action for specific performance of contract for sale.—Sutherland, J., held, 15 O. W. R. 134, that plaintiff was entitled to specific performance of sale for the part retained by defendant, and that the consideration therefor should be reduced by the $500 paid defendant by the other party.—Divisional Court allowed defendant's appeal from above judgment on the ground that the option was an unilateral contract without consideration, a mere offer to sell, and could be withdrawn before acceptance without any formal notice to plaintiff. Davis v. Shaw (1910), 16 O. W. R. 273, 21 O. L. R. 474, 1 O. W. N. 931.

Acceptance—Provision for formal agreement — No formal agreement executed—Action by vendor for instalment of purchase money — Action maintainable—Interest—Delay — Default in making title—Possesion—Vacant lands — Costs — Munroe V. Heuback (Man.), 8 W. L. R. 785. Affirmed 10 W. L. R. 196.

Acceptance in name of another—Time.]—If the holder of an option to purchase land, instead of accepting the offer himself within the time limited, tenders another person as purchaser, and asks the vendor to sign a contract of sale to such other person, the vendor is not bound to sell to such other person, and the holder of the option, if he has delayed accepting it on his own behalf until after the time limited, cannot have specific performance against the vendor. Vanderlip V. Peierson, 4 W. L. R. 403, 16 Man. L. R. 341.

Assignment — Notice — Renewed and midication of option — Rights of assignce—Chose in action.]—An option was held by R. upon property of the defendant company for the sum of $502.580. By agreement dated the 7th August, 1908, reciting the option and that the company had arranged through R. to execute an option to P. and C. for $640.000, it was witnessed that if the property was purchased in accordance with such option, "or mutual modification of the same," the company would pay to R., or his assigns, any excess realised above the option price of $562,586. R. immediately afterwards assigned a one-half interest in the agreement to the plaintiff. By agreement of the same date, the company gave an option on the property to P. and C. for $700,000, who, in case of a sale by them under that option, or any mutual modification thereof, were to be allowed $60,000. This option expired the 1st March, 1904. On the 27th October, 1904, a new option was given by the company to P. and C., and this by subsequent agreement was extended to the 15th June, 1905. On the 10th June, P. and C. agreed to sell the property to I. P. Co. for $725,000. This agreement fell through. On the 2nd October, 1905, a sale was made to I. P. Co. for $675,000. By agreement of the same date the defendant company agreed to pay P. and C. $100,000 for their services in connection with the sale, leaving $575,000 as the net amount to the company from the sale. Prior to the sale the company, having no notice of the assignment by R. to the plaintiff, agreed with R. that his option should be for $580,000. The plaintiff claimed one-half of the difference between the sum realised by the company from the sale and $562.586: - Held, that under the circumstances the option given after the expiry of the first option to P. and C. was a modification of it, within the meaning of the agreement with R., but that the company, having no notice of the plaintiff's assignment, were free to deal with R., and that, consequently, the change made by R. in his agreement with the company was binding on the plaintiff, to whom therefore there was nothing coming. Winslow v. William Richards Co., 3 E. L. R. 258, 3 N. B. Eq. 481.

Condition — Payment by purchaser of moneys disbursed by vendor — Revenue of Idad.]—The condition, in a promise to sell real estate, that the purchaser shall pay, at the time of the sale, to the vendor, "all sums disbursed" applies only to sums advanced by the latter from his own funds, and does not comprise those taken from the revenues of the real property. Demers v. Demers, 17 Que. K. B. 481.

Consideration — Seal — Extension — Notice — Continuing offer — Acceptance—Specific performance.]—Plaintiff had an option expiring on the 14th September. Vendor's agent wrote to plaintiff extending time to 1st October:—Held, that after 14th September this was merely a continuing offer and the sale by vendor amounted to a withdrawal of the offer. The vendor is not bound to sell to anyone but the holder of the option. Thompson v. Skill, 12 O. W. R. 1033, affirmed, 13 O. W. R. 887.

Delay in signifying acceptance—No time fixed by instrument — Tacit renunciation — Mining property — Change in circumstances.]—A promise or option of sale, without limitation of time, may be declared extinguished by the tacit renunciation of the promisee, which may be inferred by the Court from a consideration of the circumstances; especially where it was made to the promisee in view of a mining exploitation which he has never begun, and where he has allowed 23 years to pass without signifying his acceptance, and where, on the other hand, the position and value of the land, the subject of the option, have com-

Equitable jurisdiction—Specific performance.—Action by vendor for specific performance of a contract for the sale and purchese of land. As plaintiff did not exercise his option within the time fixed by the agreement he has no right to do it afterwards. Under the circumstances in this case the equitable jurisdiction of the Court should not be made use of to compel the plaintiff to convey the land. Action dismissed. Paterson v. Houghton, 11 W. L. R. 118.

Extension—Notice — Continuing offer— Acceptance — Specific performance. Thompson v. Skill, 12 O. W. R. 1033.

Given by agent — Person holding option assigned to plaintiffs — Assigns not named in option — Accepted — Action to enforce — Dismissed.] — Defendant's agent gave one Murray an option to purchase certain land. Murray assigned the option to plaintiff on same day as it was given. No consideration was expressed in the assignment. The option was accepted by plaintiffs' solicitors. Defendant refused to convey. Action for specific performance or damages in lieu thereof .- Clute, J., held, that the agent exceeded his authority in giving the option, and the defendant was only bound to the extent of his assent, which was given upon the understanding that he was to receive the balance of the purchase money within ten days and the money not having been paid, the bargain was off. There was no authority to sell except for cash.—That an option given to a person not naming his assigns is a personal option and not assignable before ceptance.-That it was unnecessary to determine whether the solicitors were authorized to act for the plaintiffs in accepting, or whether what was done by placing the letter of ac-ceptance under the door of the agent was a sufficient acceptance within the time. That the plaintiffs had not made out a case for specific performance or damages. Action dismissed with costs. Can. Pac. Rv. Co. v. Rosin (1911), 18 O. W. R. 387, 2 O. W.

mount payable as rent forming part of purchase price—Relationship of lessor and lessee — Remedy arising from contract.]—
A contract whereby the owner of an immovable declares that he leases it in consideration of a certain sum payable by instalments, the last whereof will become due at the expiration of the lease, at which time he promises to sell the leased premises to the lessee, the amount agreed upon being, at one and the same time, the rent during the lease and the price of the sale to follow, establishes between the parties the relationship of lessor and lessee provided for in Arts. 1159 and following C. P. Hence, the owner has at his disposal all the summary proceedings and proceedings by attachment of a lessor to recover the instalments and damages which fall due and for the purpose of setting aside the contract and obtaining possession of the leased premises, Crevier v. Lamoureux (1909), 38 Que. S. C. 172.

Mineral claim — Time of the essence— Tender of instalment of purchase money.]— Where the contract is for the sale of property of a fluctuating value, such as mineral claims, although there is no stipulation that time is to be of the essence of the contract, yet by the nature of the property dealt with, it is clear that time shall be of the essence. —Where there is a stipulation to pay money on a particular day, and no place is agreed upon, it is the duty of the payor to find the payee and tender him the money. Decision of Hunter, C.J., 12 B. C. R. 9, 3 W. L. R. 161, affirmed. Morton & Symonds v. Nichols, 12 B. C. R. 485.

Payment of sum agreed upon as consideration—Condition not julfilled ——Cancellation—Evidence.]—Action to recover $1,000 consideration mentioned in an option to purchase certain land: — Held, that plaintiff cancelled the option, that the title had not been made, that there was a conflict of evidence if option was not in escrow, and that weight of evidence is in favour of defendant. Action dismissed, McKintley v. Frank. 11 W. L. R. 571. Affirmed 12 W. L. R. 498.

Person holding option to sell-Offering land by auction - Vendors notifying ing land by auction — Vendors notifying auctioneer not to proceed — Refusal of auctioneer to sell — Loss of resale — Action for damages.] — B., one of the beneficiaries of an estate, who had been given a two-weeks' option to purchase certain land for $12,000, less his share of the estate, $\frac{1}{200}$ and $\frac{1}{200}$ are the self-th of the state, $\frac{1}{200}$ are the self-th of the state, $\frac{1}{200}$ are the self-th of the $1,200, agreed to sell the same for $13,500, but was allowed by his purchaser to first offer the property for sale by auction, to secure if possible a better price. This he proceeded to do, when the defendant, one of the vendors, wrote notifying the auction-eer that the plaintiff had no right to sell, whereupon the auctioneer refused to go on with the auction sale, and the purchaser with the auction saic, and the particular refused to carry out his agreement to purchase, and the two weeks elapsed without B. being able to carry out his option:— Held, that no actionable wrong was shewn on the part of the defendant, for B.'s only right was that secured him by the option, the right to the performance of which on his payment of the amount specified therein was not interfered with, the agreement made by B. with his proposed purchaser being altogether foreign to the transaction. Bradley v. Bradley, 10 O. W. R. 223, 14 O. L. R. 473.

Costs. Dingman v. Jarvis, 7 O. W. R. 244.

Rescission — Time — Laches,]—The plaintiff agreed to purchase land from the defendants, and to pay the balance of the purchase price on the 1st July, 1904, the agreement providing that time should be of the essence of the contract, and that in case of the plaintiff's failure to pay the balance at the time agreed, the defendants should be at liberty to treat the contract as cancelled; a deed of the property was executed in Toronto and sent to the defendants' agent in Vancouver to deliver to the plaintiff when he paid up; the plaintiff did not pay the balance on the 1st July, and on the 18th July the defenants notified him that they had re-sold the land:—Held, that the defendants had exercised their option of rescinding within a reasonable time, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to any relief. Peirson v. Canada Permanent & Western Canada Mortgage Corporation, 11 B. C. R. 139, 1 W. L. R. 99.

Resolutive condition — Possession — Title.] — A promise of sale subject to a resolutive condition (e.g., failure to pay the price), though made with tradition and actual possession, is not equivalent to sale, and does not pass the ownership of the thing. Matteau v. Godbout, 32 Que. S. C. 411.

Taken by agent — Assignment to principal — Estoppel — Absence of considerations.] — Britton, J., held, that an option "in consideration of the sum of one dollar herein acknowledged, I agree to give an option," etc., not being under seal, is a nudum pactum and cannot be enforced if in fact no consideration passed.—That where an agent obtains an option the principal may assert his true position as principal and accept the option.—Sec Can. Pac. Rec. Co. v. Rosin, 18 O. W. R. 387, 2 O. W. N. 610. McKay v. Wayland (1911), 18 O. W. R. 696, 2 O. W. N. 74.

Timber limits — Acceptance—Time—Contract — Specific performance.]—By a writing under seal signed by the defendant, in consideration of $1, he agreed to give the plaintiff the exclusive right to purchase certain timber limits described, at $1.50 per acre. The only terms stipulated were that examination of and cruising of limits were to be made by the plaintiff within 30 days from the date of the agreement (4th September, 1908), "and, if accepted," the plaintiff "shall pay" the defendant, "the sum of $2,000, and balance of purchase money in equal portions," etc., and a provision for interest on postponed payments. The cruising was done within the 30 days, and the timber cruised satisfactorily: — Held, that the examination and cruising of the limits, and even the plaintiff's intimation that they cruised satisfactorily, did not constitute an acceptance of the option; that the option should have been accepted within the 30 days, no other time being mentioned in the writing; but, if that were not so, it should be within a reasonable time, and a tender made by the plaintiff on the 23rd October, 1908, was not, having regard to the nature of the transaction and the fluctuating character of the subject-matter, made within a reasonable time; the option never ripened into a contract; and the plaintiff was not entitled to specific performance as of a completed contract; Martin, J.A., dissenting.—Judgment of Irving, J., affirmed. Cumningham v. Stockham (1910), 13 W. L. R. 312, 15 B. C. R. 141.

8. ORAL CONTRACTS.

Conflict of evidence as to its terms— Part performance — Statute of Frauds. Thibideau v. Cyr, 2 E. L. R. 246.

Execution of deed and mortgage Misdescription - Defective title - Inno-Misdescription — Defective title — Inno-cent misrepresentation — Rescission—Com-pensation.]—The plaintiff at an interview with the defendant agreed to purchase "the F. property" belonging to her, for $2,300-$500 cash and the balance in six years with interest, and advised her to get the papers made out, and she instructed her solicitor to prepare the deed and mortgage. When to prepare the deed and mortgage. When they were ready, she advised the plaintif, who had, however, changed his mind and refused to go on, but offered to pay the expenses. Under pressure from two solici-tors and the issue of a writ, he accepted the deed, executed the mortgage to secure the purchase money, and made the cash pay-ment, without searching the title, relying on the representation of one of the solicitors. the representation of one of the solicitors that the defendant had a good title. Subsequently he discovered that the description in the deed to him covered more property than the vendor owned, and that what he did get was subject to an outstanding lease for life. In an action for a rescission of the contract, the trial Judge having found that the defendant was not guilty of any fraudulent misrepresentation or conceal-ment; that there was no mutual mistake, and no express agreement as to title was innocently made:—Held, that fraud having been negatived and the deed having been executed, the plaintiff was not entitled to a rescission of the contract.—Held, also, that as an adverse claim to title by possession could not be decided in this action owing to the claimant not being a party, it could not be said there was an entire failure of consideration, and the plaintiff was therefore not entitled to relief on the latter ground, and the action was dismissed, but under the circumstances without costs. the 1st August, 1905, the defendant L., being the owner of certain lands, contracted to convey them to the defendant S. in fee upon payment of $3,200. On the 19th June, 1906, S. assigned the contract and his interest under it to the defendant V. as collateral security for the payment of sums due to V. and secured in the first instance by promissory notes. No provision was made for realising upon the collateral se-curity in the event of non-payment of the curity in the event of non-payment of the notes:—Held, that the interest of V, was that of an equitable mortgagee without power of sale,—On the 30th June, 1906, S, sold the lands to the plaintiff by contract in writing for $9,600, a large part of which was paid to S, before December, 1906, when V, became aware of the contract between S. and the plaintiff and of the payment actually made. V. held other collateral securities for the debt due him by S., and S. assured the solicitor for the plaintiff that if the balance due from the plaintiff to S. should be paid to V., the latter would release his claim under the assignment. Negotiations followed, and an agreement was come to, as the trial Judge found, whereby V., on receiving from S. $1,000; and on an instrument being executed by S., under seal authorising V, to sell the lands if payment of his debt in full was not made on or before the 1st May, 1907, agreed with S. and the plaintiff to assign to the plaintiff all his (V.'s) interest in the contract between L. and S. There was no written agreement; L. and S. There was no written agreement; but the Judge found that, relying on the oral promise of V. to carry out this arrange-ment, S. executed the sealed instrument referred to. The plaintiff offered to pay V. the balance due to S. under her contract with S., and S. offered to pay the $1.000, but V. refused to accept these sums or either of them, and refused to assign as agreed:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to have the land conveyed to her by L. (who, having been paid his money, submitted to do what the Court should adjudge), upon payment of the moneys owing by her and of the $1,000. There was consideration for the promise of V.; the plaintiff having registered a caveat against the lands, V. could not deal with them except subject to her claim.—Quare, whether V. had disentitled himself to renef as an equithis dealings with some of his securities.— Held, that the plaintiff should have leave to amend so as to set up the facts upon which she relied; and that the Statute of Frauds had no application. Newkirk v.
Stees (1910), 13 W. L. R. 181, 3 Sask.

Specific performance — Statute of Frauds — Part performance — Possession taken by purchaser vithout consent of vendor — Note or memorandum — Delivery of deed in escrow.]—Action for specific performance of sale of land. Plaintiff agreed to buy certain Brandon lots, giving in payment an assignment of an agreement to purchase certain Saskatchewan lands, ballance payable in cash to be raised on Brandon lots, and went into possession of the Brandon property. The owner of the Saskatchewan lands would not consent to the assignment and cancelled the agreement, nor could plaintiff get a tenant for the lands, as he had agreed. The plaintiff therefore could not perform his part of the agreement: — Held, that plaintiffs taking possession of Brandon property was without knowledge or consent of defendant, so is not part performance within the statute. Leaving the deed and assignment in escrow with the solicitors is not evidence of the verbal agreement. Action dismissed. Vandervoot v. Hall, 9 W. L. R. 702.

9. Possession.

Action for possession — Agreement to purchase—Failure by plaintiff to convey— Sale of building—Evidence. Wile v. Joudry (N.S. 1910), 9 E. L., R. 263.

Agreement for sale-Default in payment — Further directions — Costs reserved at trial.]—On a motion for judgment for possession of land in possession of defend-ant under agreement for sale, held, that action was rightly in the H. C. J. to determine the question involved upon the land and its ownership, and that defendant was entitled to specific performance in duly making all future payments till the whole amount owing was paid. On appeal to Divisional Court on further directions, and as to costs reserved at trial, held, that there should have been no appeal as to a matter of no importance to the appellants; the declaration of right complained of being no more than a statement of what is the unquestionable right of the respondent, viz., to have a conveyance of the land upon performance of veyince or the land upon performance of agreement. As to costs, there was no reason to differ from the disposition made of them. Appeal dismissed. Hislop v. Lester (1909), 14 O. W. R. 624; affirmed 14 O. W. R. 1054, 1 O. W. N. 197.

Construction — Ambiguity—Inability of vendor to give possession — Resclasion by purchaser — Return of part of purchase money paid — Damages — Stock and plant purchased for use upon land — Not in contemplation at time of contract. Cairns v. Dunkin (Man.), 6 W. L. R. 256.

Delivery of conveyance—Covenant for possession — Enforcement. Ham v. Pillar, 1 O. W. R. 259.

Expulsion of vendor—Damages.]—The vendor who has engaged to give immediate possession of the land sold, and who neglects or refuses to do so, has, nevertheless, a remedy in damages against the purchaser if the latter expels him by force and violence. Robichaud v. Genest, 16 Que. S. C. 327.

Good faith—Improvements and expenses — Transfer of rights — Proof — Acknowledging a fact in a point of procedure.]—The right of the possessor in good faith to keep real estate until paid for his improvements and expenses, is transferable, nothing in the law opposing it. The sale of real estate with the rights and improvements of the vendor, includes the right to keep what he had as the possessor in good faith until repayment for his improvements and expenses.
The purchaser of real estate, against whom an action is brought to set aside the sale, who pleads a right to keep it that his vendor has granted him, the plaintiff may not set up a debt by the vendor, which has been assigned to him, even though it be a part of the price of the real estate which the vendor was owing to his grantor. The possessor of real estate belonging to another who proves that he purchased it from a previous possessor for a legal consideration, and which he has held by himself and his grantors, as owner to the knowledge of the claimant's agent, for fifteen years and during that time he has paid the municipal taxes on the real estate, establish sufficiently the possession in good faith, which gives him the right to repayment for his improvements and expenses made during that period. The acknowledgment of a fact in a procedure (e.g., a deed) produced by a party in the cause proves the fact in another cause. Frèchette v. Gagné, 1909, 36 Que. S. C. 300.

Instalments of purchase money— Eviction—Interest.]—A purchaser of immovables, for the time that he has been in possession, in spite of the fact that he has eventually been evicted, must pay interest upon the portion of the purchase money which fell due during the time that he was in possession. Beriau v. Stadacona Water, Light, and Power Co. & Town of Farnham, 25 Que. S. C. 525.

Interest—Equitable relation of parties.]
—The defendant purchased a lot of land from A. for $1,140, under an agreement in writing, by the terms of which A, was to give a deed of the land to the defendant, or to any other person named by him, as receipt of the purchase price, and to accept a mortgage of the property for $1,000, part of the purchase price, on receiving from the defendant all moneys due over and above that amount. After the making of the agreement, the defendant paid A. $140, and entered into possession of the premises, and for a period of two years paid A. interest on the sum of $1,000, as if the deed and mortgage had been executed, although, as a matter of fact, he had not received the deed or given the mortgage as agreed. No further interest was paid on the ground that A., and the plaintiffs claiming under him after his death, wrongfully and in breach of the agreement, refused and neglected to convey the land to the defendant, and that the agreement itself contained no provision calling for the payment of interest :- Held that the defendant, being in possession of the property and enjoying the fruits of it, was bound to pay interest pending the carrying out of the terms of the agreement, and that the question whether the delay was due to the action of the deceased or not was immaterial.—Per Russell, J.—The position of the parties in equity was that of mortgagor and mortgagee, and interest was due by the defendant on that footing, notwithstanding the absence of any stipulation in the agreement, the defendant having gone into possession and enjoyed the fruits. Anderson v. Phinney, 38 N. S. R. 393.

Purchaser — Title—Waiver—Improvements.]—Where a purchaser, entitled by the terms of the contract to a perfect title, upon payment of his deposit entered into and continued in possession as provided by the contract, and made improvements even after alleged defects in the title were brought to his attention, and after he had brought an action for specific performance, the vendor asserting that he had a good title:—
Held, that the purchaser had not waived his right to have a good title-shewn. In the absence of fraud on the part of the vendor, or other special circumstances, if a purchaser takes possession under the contract, and the vendor is unable to make a good title, the purchaser is not entitled to be repaid the amount expended by him in improvements. Rankin v. Sterling, 22 C. L. T. 230, 3 O. L. R. 646, 1 O. W. R. 243.

Purchaser taking possession — Default in payment of purchase money — Notice of cancellation — Conditions of contract not compiled with — Specific performance — Repossession — Account of profits — Misrepresentations — Damages. Le Neveu v. McQuarrie (Man.), 5 W. L. R. 348.

Purchaser taking possession - Purchase money payable by instalments — De-fault — Rescission of contract by notice pursuant to conditions — Forfeiture — Time - Remedy.]-The defendant held possession of the land in question under an agreement of purchase which provided that, in default of payment of any instalment of the purchase money, the vendor should be at liberty to determine and put an end to the agreement . . . and to retain any sum or sums paid thereunder as and by way of liquidated damages, by serving a notice intimating an intention to determine the agreement, and that, at the end of thirty days from the mailing or delivery of such notice, if such default should not be remedied in the meantime, the purchaser should deliver up quiet and peaceable possession of the land to the vendor or his agent, and the agreement should become void and be at an end and all rights and interests thereby created or then existing in favour of the purchaser or derived under the agreement should thereupon cease and determine, and the premises should revert to and revest in the vendor without any further de-claration of forfeiture or notice or act of re-entry, and without any other act by the vendor to be performed, and without any suit or legal proceedings to be brought or taken, and without any right on the part of the purchaser to any compensation for or the purchaser to any compensator to moneys paid under the agreement. The agreement also contained the clause, "Time shall be in every respect of the essence of this agreement:"—Held, that a notice served upon the defendant by the vendors' assignee, after default in payment, that "the said agreement is hereby determined and put an end to and unless such default shall be remedied by you within thirty days . . you shall then be required to deliver up quiet and peaceful possession of the said lands and premises, and said agreement shall be absolutely null and void and all rights," etc. (following the wording of the clause quoted) was not in accordance with the terms of the power and was therefore in-effectual to put an end to or determine the agreement or to entitle the vendors' assignee R. Acquies trinsic Finding Unsettl Costs, to an order of the Court for possession of the land.—Such powers of rescission must be strictly followed and their exercise subjected to rigorous scrutiny in a court of equity, just as in cases of notices under powers of sale in mortgages.—Held, further, that, even if the notice served had been worded in strict accord with the power in the agreement, the latter should be treated as in the nature of a penalty against which the Courts will relieve.—In re Dagenham (Thames) Dock Co., L. R. 8 Ch. 1022 and Cornucall V. Henson, 11900] 2 Ch. 298 followed.—Semble, that the plaintiff's remedy would be to commence an action in the nature of specific performance to have the contract cancelled by decree on the Court, upon default, after a time to be fixed by the Court. Hudson's Bay Co. v. Macdonald. 4 Man. L. R. 327, and Lysoght v. Edwards, 2 Ch. D. 506, followed. Canadian Fairbanks Co. v. Johnston, 18 Man. L. R. 589, 10 W. L.

Tenant in possession under lease—Knowledge of purchaser — Damages for delayed occupation — Delivery of possession — Art. 1/93, C. C.].—The vendor of an immovable is not responsible for damages suffered by the purchaser by reason of the fact that a lease to a third party hinders him from having the immediate occupation of the immovable; especially when the purchaser knew of the existence of the lease at the time of the sale. A clause in the deed that the purchaser shall enjoy from this date, etc., and shall have possession immediately, imports only the obligation of the vendor to deliver, which is fulfilled as soon as he allows the purchaser to take possession of the tenant, being that of the owner, that is to say, of the purchaser, from the time of the sale, is not one of the obstacles intended by Art. 1493, C. C. Brunet V. Brisebois, 32 Que. S. C. 158.

Vendor remaining in possession—
Power of redemption— Grant of hypothec—Cancellation.]—A sale being perfected by the consent of the parties, though no delivery of the thing sold takes place, the seller of an immovable who remains in possession of it, with a jower of redemption at will, ceases nevertheless to be the owner, and has no power to grant a hypothec upon it. Such a hypothec will be declared void at the suit of a subsequent acquirer of the property, and the judgment will order the registration thereof to be cancelled, or will stand in lieu of such cancellation. Chapleau

Action by vendor for instalment of purchase money — Fraud and misrepresentation.]—Actions to recover instalments of purchase money under contracts for sale of Kildonan lots. The trial Judge believing agent in preference to defendant in each action, that there had been no misrepresentation, gave judgment for plaintiff in each action. Weaver v. Whaley. Weaver v. Wallace, 9 W. L. R. 579.

Action by vendor for purchase money — Title — Tender—Incumbrances.] — The vendor of an immovable is entitled to demand from the purchaser the price of sale due by an acte sous seing privé, on condition only that he tenders to the purchaser a good and sufficient title to the land, free and clear from all incumbrances; otherwise his action will be dismissed on inscription in law. Derome v. Can. North. Quebec Rev. Co., 10 Que. P. R. 59.

Action by vendor for purchase money—Tendor acquiring legal title before action — Vendor equitably entitled when contract made — Delivery of abstract — Condition precedent—Incumbrances — Practice — Defendant not appearing — Judgment against, at trial.]—Action to recover balance of purchase money of land. Plaintiff held entitled to recover, he having had an equitable interest in the lands in question when the sale agreement was entered into and having obtained title in fee before action brought. It is not the practice to sign final judgment where one defendant does not appear. The proof can be given at the trial. Maybery v. Williams (1910), 12 W. L. R. 689, 3 Sask. L. R. 125.

Action for — Evidence — Trespass to goods. Grear v. Mayhew, 1 O. W. R. 529, 2 O. W. R. 140.

Action for — Time for payment — Acceleration — Insolvency of purchaser.] — Under Art. 1092. C. C., an action to recover the balance of purchase money of land may be brought although the time for payment has not arrived when the debtor has become insolvent or has diminished the value of the security. Judgment of Court of King's Bench, Quebec, affirmed. Kensington Land Co. v. Canada Industrial Co., [1903] A. C. 213.

Action for balance of purchasemoney — Charitable corporation — Proof of ownership — Corporate scal.]—In an action by an incorporated charitable society to recover a balance of the purchase-money of lands soil by the plaintiffs to the defendant, the plaintiffs by their statement of claim, alleged the entering into and execution of the agreement for sale, set out the terms thereof, alleged default in the payment of instalments, and also alleged the, by virtue of an acceleration clause, the whole balance of the purchase-money was due. The prayer was for payment and further and other relief generally. By the statement of defence, the defendant admitted all the plaintiffs' allegations except those with respect to default and acceleration. At the trial the defendant urged: (1) that the plaintiffs had not shewn that they were owners of and in a position to give a valid title to the land; (2) that the plaintiffs had not shewn that their corporate seal had been affixed to the agreement by persons authorised; (3) that the plain-tiffs had no power to sell land except for cash, and (4) that, as a charitable institu-tion, they could not sue without the consent of the Attorn y-General :-Held, as to the or the Attornsystement — reas, as to the first three objections, that they were not raised by the pleadings and were inconsistent with the admissions made in the statement of defence; as to ownership, the implied admission was such that the plaintiffs were not called upon to shew anything in that respect; the execution of the agreement was sufficiently proven by the identification of the seal thereon as their corporate seal; and they were expressly given power by their Act of incorporation to enter into such an agreement neofportuon to enter into such an agreement as that in question.—Canadian Pacific Rw. Co. v. Cornucallis, 7 Man. L. R. 1, and Canadian Pacific Rw. Co. v. Burnett, 5 Man. L. R. 395, distinguished.—Held, as to the 4th objection that the contract of the con tion, that the plaintiffs had, by their Act of incorporation, the right to sue without obtaining leave of the Attorney-General under s.

17 of the Charitable Trusts Act, 1853.—

Held, also, that the plaintiffs were entitled, under their prayer for general relief, to a declaration of lien on the property and to a sale in the event of non-payment-such relief being consequent upon the relief specifically prayed .- The defendant counterclaimed to enforce an alleged collateral agreement that the defendant should have part releases proportionate to the amount of the purchase-price paid:—Held, that judgment in the action should not be delayed by reason of the defendant not being ready to go on with the trial of the counterclaim; but that the defendant should be at liberty to set it up in an independent action. Sisters of Charity v. Forrest (1910), 16 W. L. R. 58, Man. L. R.

Nonsuit,1—The plaintiff and defendants entered into an agreement for the sale by the plaintiff and purchase by the defendants of 160 acres of land in British Columbia for $3,000; $1,000 of which was to be deposited with a bank until such time as satisfactory evidence of the issue of the Crown grant of the land should be produced; and the balance to be paid at later dates. It was also provided that in case the plain-tiff obtained a title to part only of the 160 acres, the purchase-price should be reduced so as to amount to $18.75 per acre for so as to amount to $18.75 per acre for the portion for which title should be obtained. The plaintiff brought this action for $1,014, alleging that he had obtained title to 54.98 acres. The defendants pleaded a general denial of all the allegations of the statement of claim:—Held, that this form of pleading did not comply with Rule 200 of the Wiser Beach. 290 of the King's Bench Act, and might have been stricken out on application, but, as it was left on the record, it must be treated at the trial as a denial of the title.—The defendants attempted to establish that the agreement never became operative-that it was delivered as in escrow—but this was negatived by the facts in evidence.—The plaintiff, before action, as evidence that he had obtained title to the 54.08 acres, shewed the defendants a certificate of title. The defendants then repudiated the agreement and refused to carry it out. Upon the trial, the plaintiff tendered in evidence a copy of the patent from the Crown for the 54.08 acres, which was annexed to the certificate of title. No notice of the in-tention to produce the copy as evidence was given to the defendants.—Held, that under the Manitoba Evidence Act, s. 21, the copy could not be received; that Lord Brougham's plaintiff made the cash payment and all the subsequent half-yearly payments down to and including that of the 1st June, 1909, but did not make the payment due on the 1st December, 1909, on that day; and on the following day the defendant sent the plaintiff a notice in writing, that unless payment of that $300 was made within 20 days, the defendant would cancel the agreement. The plaintiff did not make the agreement. The plaintiff did not make the payment; he made arrangements, however, with the defendant's admitted agent to pay the full balance of the purchase-price re-maining, but, owing to difficulties placed in the way by the defendant's agent, the arrangements for payment were not complete on the 22nd December; and on the 24th on the 22nd December; and on the 24nd December the defendant gave the plaintiff a written notice cancelling the contract. The plaintiff had the $300 and would have paid it over but for the arrangements made with the agent. On receiving the notice of the 24th December, the plaintiff ten-dered the amount due, but this was re-fused:—Held, that the notice of the 2nd December did not operate as a cancellation of the contract; but the notice of the 24th December was sufficient for that purpose if December was suncient for that purpose it the defendant was then in a position to cancel.—Steele v. McCarthy, 1 Sask. L. R. 317, 7 W. L. R. 902, and Great West Lum-ber Co. v. Wilkins, 7 W. L. R. 160, followed .- Held, however, that the defendant had, by her agent, waived the right to cancel; and the plaintiff was entitled to judgment for specific performance of the contract. Timmins v. Smith (1910), 14 W. L. R. 503, 3 Sask. L. R. 204.

Action to recover instalment of purchase-money—Parties to contract—Identification — Parol evidence — Company — Description of property — Selection of particular lot out of a number described—Contract to enter into formal contract, not binding — Title to land—Tender of formal contract — Return of moneys paid under agreement.] — Action by vendor against purchaser to recover an instalment of purchase price of land. Parol evidence admitted to identify the parties to the contract. The agreement was one to enter into an agreement for the sale of land and therefore is no binding contract. Action dismissed. Title being unsatisfactory, money paid by defendant to be repaid to him. Anglo-Canadian Land Co. v. Gordon (Man.),

Assignment by vendor—Action for balamer of purchase-price—Counterclaim—Fraud—Fraud and proposed to prove—Powers of assignce—Company—Pleading—Title—Readiness to make.]—In an action for the balance of the purchase-price of land which the defendant contracted to buy from K., who assigned the contract to the plaintiffs, the defendant set up that he was induced to enter into the agreement by fraud, and he counterclaimed for the money which he had paid:—Held, that the fraud must be established beyond reasonable doubt; and, not having been so established, the defence and counterclaim failed.—It was contended that the plaintiffs, an incorporated company, were not authorised to hold securities of the character of the agreement sued upon:—Held, that, as this defence was not raised by the pleadings, no effect should be given to it.—Held, also, that the plaintiffs, being ready and willing to make a good title, were entitled to the balance of the purchase-price. Winnipeg & Morris Jmaprov. Co. v. Watson (1910), 15 W. L. R. 592, Man. L. R.

Bills of exchange given for purchase-money—Action on bill—Pleading—Exception—Taxes charged on land—Perti of eviction—Xosation.]—A vendor of land who accepts bill of exchange in payment of the purchase money for which he gives an unconditional discharge, does not thereby make a new contract. Hence the purchaser, when sued for the amount of one of the bills, may set up in answer by way of exception the period of eviction by reason of taxes which were a charge upon the land at the time of sale, and of the existence of which he was ignorant. Richards & Co. v. Theberge. 29 Que. S. C. 308, 15 Que. K. B. 310.

Cancellation of agreement upon default—Recovery of amounts paid on purchase price.]—A purchaser under agreement for sale accompanied by delivery agreed to by a buyer in virtue of a previous agreement for sale, with delivery, who is notified that the original owner is about to take advantage of a clause in the first agreement for sale which provided for the cancellation of the agreement upon any default to pay the price therein mentioned, has a remedy by action against Lis own immediate vendor to recover any sums paid on account of the purchase price. Dupre v. Brabant (1910), 38 Que. S. C. 450.

Default in payment of instalment-Forfeiture — Acceptance of lease by pur-chaser—Action for cancellation.] — Defend-ant agreed to sell to plaintiff certain lands. Time was of the essence of the agreement and the agreement was to be null and void if terms not complied with. Plaintiff expended considerable money upon the premises, which were destroyed by fire. Default was made by plaintiff. On 3rd June, 1908, a lease was executed. Plaintiff brought action to set aside above lease alleging that she supto set aside above lease alleging that she sup-posed she was signing claim papers to get the insurance, and not a lease. She also asked for an account of the insurance and other moneys, including the value of certain lumber.—Mulock, C.J.Ex.D., held, that the contract became null and void on 1st June, 1908, and the plaintiff ceased to have any interest in the property or in the insurance moneys arising from the destruction of the premises thereafter. That all of above, together with her payments, had been forfeited to defend-ant, who had acted harshly towards her, exacting from her his full legal rights, but unfortunately the terms of the contract did not permit granting her any relief. Action dismissed with costs, Macammond v. Govenlock (1911), 18 O. W. R. 357, 2 O. W. N. 563.

Default in payment of purchase-money—Cancellation — Notice — Waiver.] —By an agreement in writing dated the 1st June, 1906, the defendant agreed to sell and the plaintiff to purchase land for $5,000, payable $600 in cash, and the balance in con secutive half-yearly instalments of $300 each, to be paid on the 1st days of June and December in each year, with interest at 8 per cent. The agreement provided that, in default of payment of any of the moneys on the days and times fixed, the defendant should be at liberty to determine the agreement by mailing in a registered letter a notice inti-mating an intention to determine, and at the end of 20 days from the time of mailing the same the plaintiff should deliver up possession and the defendant should be at liberty to resell, etc. The Evidence Act, 1851, did not apply, the other Act existing; and neither Act contained the means of proof contended for; and, therefore, there was no evidence that the land referred to in the certificate of title was part of the land agreed to be sold to the defendants, and the plaintiff had not complied with the terms of his agreement by producing satisfactory evidence of the issue of the Crown grant; and a nonsuit was entered, McPherson v. Edwards (1910), 14 W. L. R. 172.

Default of purchaser in making deferred payments—Attempted cancellation by vendor — Clause in contract declaring time of essence — Intention — Conduct — Waiver.] — Vendor brought this action to cancel an agreement for sale of land and to discharge a caveat registered by purchaser:

—Held, that although time is stated to be of the essence of the contract, yet that same has been waived by vendor. Defendant having brought all arrears into Court, action dismissed. Crawley v. Hamley, 11 W. L.
R. 574.

Instalment of purchase-money to vendor's agent — Acknowledgment under seal — Estoppel — Fraud of agent — Specific performance. — To paid to D., a real estate agent, $700 as part payment of the purchase price of a certain lot. D. procured from N., the owner of the lot, an agreement under seal for the sale of the lot to T., containing a recital of payment of and a receipt for $700 on account of the purchase price, and delivered the same to T. D. in reality paid only a $20 "deposit" to N., the owner, and afterwards absconded:—Held, that N. was estopped from denying receipt of the $700, and that T. was entitled to a conveyance, on payment of the balance mentioned in the agreement. Gordon v. James, 30 Ch. D. 249, followed. Tuytens v. Noble, $W. L. R. $50, 13 B., C. R. 484.

Instalment payments — Agreement — Construction—Insolvency of vendee—"Due" — Extrinsic evidence.] — Appeal from the judgment of Graham, E.J., S. E. L. R. 229, in favour of defendant in an action claiming damages for breach of an agreement to convey land. D'Hart v. McDermaid (N. S. 1910), 9 E. L. R. 183.

Instalments—Acceleration clause—Foreigners not understanding English — Duty of vendor to interpret — Elimination of clause — Action for tehole purchase money.] —Action by vendor to recover amount due on sale of a flour mill. The vendor assumed the burden of explaining the agreement to the defendants who could not speak English. A printed form of agreement was used containing a clause to the effect that if any instalment of the purchase money became in arrears the full amount of the purchase money would become due:—Held, that the defendants' signatures had been obtained in ignorance of this default clause, and they are not bound by it, and that the proceedings taken by distress and attachment were malicious and without reasonable and probable cause, and damages given to defendants. Streimer v. Nagel, 11 W. L. R. 325.

Instalments — Action for specific performance — Rescission by purchaser — Counterclaim for return of deposit—Failure of vendors to make unincumbered title — Statute of Frauds — Completion by conveyance — Conduct of parties — Giving of notes. Brandon Steam Laundry Co. v. Hanna, 9 W. L. R. 570.

Instalments — Conveyance on payment of fixed portion of purchase money—Right to sue for instalments without tender of conveyance — Assignment of agreement.]—Where by an agreement for the sale of land the purchase money is payable by instalments without interest, and, on payment of a fixed portion of the purchase money, the purchaser is to have a conveyance, he giving back a mortgage for the balance due, the vendor is entitled to recover the instalments falling due within such limit, without the tender of a deed to the purchaser.—Where an agreement for the sale and purchase of land is made with the purchaser,—Where an agreement for the sale and purchase of land is made with the purchaser,—Where an agreement for the sale and purchase of land is made with the purchaser,—Where an agreement for the sale and purchase of a billion under the contract by assigning it, unless the vendor has accepted the assignee in place of the purchaser.—Judgment of a Divisional Court, 15 O. L. R. 280, 10 O. W. R. 75S, affirmed. Viction (H. H.) Co. V. Clergue, 16 O. L. R. 372, 11 O. W. R. 1014.

Instalments—Deed to be delivered when three-fifths paid — Right to sue for instalments without tendering conneguance.] — A vender of land—under an agreement providing for payment of the purchase money in annual instalments with interest, and that the purchaser so soon as he had paid three-fifths should be entitled to a conveyance, upon executing a mortgage back for the balance—is entitled to sue the purchaser for the payments falling due prior to three-fifths being paid, without proving that he has tendered a conveyance. H. H. Vidan & Ce. Ltd. v. Clerque, 10 O. W. R. 186, 758, 15 O. L. R. 280.

Instalments — Default — Acceleration clause — Action to recover whole purchase money or in default for cancellation — Default by vendor - Purchaser relieved on terms.]—By agreement dated the 7th June, 1906, the plaintiff sold to the defendant 625 acres of land for $17,500, $1,000 being payable on the execution of the agreement, and the balance in yearly instalments with interest. It was provided that on default in payment of any instalment the whole of the purchase money and interest should at once become due and payable. Owing to some difficulty over the title to the property, the agreement was not completed until the 8th November, 1907, when each party got a duplicate signed by the other, and the defendant paid $957.60 of the $1,000 payable on the execution of the agreement. On that date there was also past due the second instalment of the purchase money, and some taxes which the defendant had covenanted to pay. It was admitted that, prior to the completion of the agreement by delivery, a verbal agreement was arrived at extending the time for payment of the second instalment, but the parties differed as to the terms of this verbal agreement, and, as it would contradict the writing, the trial Judge held a pla for tit! that it should not be given effect to and that the plaintiff was not bound by it. The plaintiff demanded payment of the full amount of the purchase money, alleging that it was due by virtue of the acceleration clause above quoted. The defendant asked that, upon payment of all arrears, he might be relieved from the effect of the acceleration clause:-Held, that such a provision in a contract is not in the nature of a penalty against which equity will relieve.—Wallingford v. Mutual Society, 5 App. Cas. 705, followed.—2. The plaintiff, by completing the agreement, waived his right to call in the full balance of the purchase price, because at that date the agreement was, so far as the past due payments were concerned, impossible of performance .were concerned, impossible of performance.

3. For that reason, and also because the plaintiff had made default in carrying out a term of the agreement by which he was to place a mortgage of $10,000 on the property for a five years' term, the defendant was entitled to the relief prayed for. Vosper v. Aubert, 7 W. L. R. 758, 18 Man. L. R. 17.

Instalments—Default — Assignment of contract by purchasers — Payment by assignee — Agreement as to re-assignment—Consent of vendors — Refusal to give — Breach of condition — Specific performance, Halliday v. Vincent (Man), 7 W. L. R. 7.

Instalments - Default-Cancellation-Acquiescence - Return of first instalment paid — Counterclaim — Wrongful seizure of crop.]—In November, 1907, H. agreed to sell to the defendant and the defendant to purchase from H. a half-section of land, for $6,391.60, of which $1,500 was paid at the time, the balance being payable in ten annual instalments. In January, 1908, the defendant filed the caveat against the half-section to protect his interest under the agreement. few days later H., in consideration of $2,437, transferred to the plaintiff his interest in the half-section, subject to a mortgage for $2,500 and to the agreement with the defendant, and the plaintiff obtained a certificate of title, subject to the mortgage and the caveat. In March, 1908, H. leased other lands to the defendant, who entered thereon and put in a crop. In October of that year H. served the defendant with notice of cancellation of the lease, demanded possession of the de-mised premises, and seized the crop. In Movember of that year the first deferred in-stalment fell due, and the defendant failed to pay it, and had not since done so. In March, 1909, the defendant was served with notice of cancellation of the sale-agreement, signed by H. and the plaintiff. In November, 1909, the defendant recovered judgment against H. for $568.27 and costs in an action for wrongful seizure of his crop. In December, 1909, the plaintiff brought this action for specific performance of the sale-agreement. The defendant, by his defence, set up that he was unable, on account of the wrongful seizure of his crop, to make the first payment under the sale-agreement; he acquiesced in the cancellation of the agreement, subject to his rights by reason thereof, and counterclaimed against the plaintiff and H. for the $1,500 which he had paid:—Held, that the defendant had no claim against the plaintiff on account of the crop seizure, nor for a return of the $1,500, which the plaintiff never got; when the defendant said he acquiesced in the cancellation of the agreement, that must mean the whole of it, and what was reserved could only be his rights enforceable by personal action; nor could the counterclaim succeed against H., for the defendant must be presumed to have got, in the former action, all relief he was entitled to by reason of the crop seizure.—Judgment declaring the agreement cancelled, vacating defendant's caveat, and dismissing the counterclaim. Miller v. Sutton (1910), 15 W. L. R. 206.

The agreement sale and purchase of land. The agreement provided that in case of default the vendors could, with or without notice, cancel the contract and declare the same void, but there were no means provided by which this was to be accomplished. If by notice, they must give the purchaser an opportunity to make good his default :-Held, that the agreement is still in force and effect and plaintiff entitled to make good his default. Before the action the plaintiff had tendered the amount in arrears, which defendant refused to accept, maintaining that the notice given had determined the agreement, and that all payments previously made were forfeited to them. Whitla v. Riverview, 11 W. L. R. 250

Instalments - Default-Cancellation by vendor — Action for specific performance Laches — Resale by vendor at profit — R turn of instalment paid by purchaser.]—The plaintiff purchased land from the defendant M. for $58.950, payable $1.000 in cash and the balance by deferred instalments. The $1,000 was paid and the first instalment of $14,000. Default was made in the other payments. Time was of the essence of the agreement, and the defendant M. gave the plaintiff written notice of the cancellation of the agreement, and thereafter treated the the agreement, and thereafter treated the agreement as cancelled, and resold the pro-perty at a higher price. The agreement provided for this, and for retention by the defendant M., the vendor, of any amount paid on account of the price, as liquidated damages for the non-fulfilment of the agreement. The plaintiff sned for specific performance or a return of the money paid:—Held, that, as the plaintiff had delayed two years in bringing his action, and the land had been sold in the meantime, he was not entitled to specific performance; but, the retention clause providing for something in the nature of a penalty, the Court could relieve against it, under s. 20, s.-s. 7, of the Supreme Court Act; and, the vendor having resold the land at a profit, there should be a return, not of the $1,000 but of the $14,000, less taxes for the period that the plaintiff was in possession.—In re Dagenham (Thames) Dock Co., L. R. 8 Ch. 1022, and Cornwall v. Henson, [1900] 2 Ch. 298, followed. Butchart v. Maclean (1910), 15 W. L. R. 224.

Payment was by instalments, pur-chaser to be given 60 days' notice of quarterly payments before contract could be declared void: — Held, that plaintiff had made no misrepresentations as to the value of the business .- Held, that plaintiff entitled to relief, but as he has not carried out his agreement forfeiture now allowed. Defendant agreement to the state of the s declared void with other relief. Dobson v. Doumani, 9 W. L. R. 692, 2 Sask. L. R.

Instalments — Default—Forfeiture of sum paid — Relief against — Attempted cancellation — Time — Tender — Specific performances.] — Held, affirming the judgment of Macdonald, J., 11 W, L. R. 350. Howell, C.J.A., dissenting that the plaintiff (the purchaser) was entitled to be relieved from the forfeiture of the part of his purchase money paid, ensuing upon default of payment of subsequent instalments, under a clause in a contract for the sale and purchase of land, and was entitled, notwithstanding that time was made of the essence of the contract, to enforce specific performance, a proper tender of arrears having been made after notice of cancellation.—In re Dagenham (Thames) Dock Co., L. Instalments — Default—Forfeiture of sums paid — Time of essence — Invalidity of contract — Penal clause — Relief against forfeiture - Specific performance -Jorjeture — Specific performance — Right of resale — Notice — Time — Liability of vendor to purchaser.] — An agreement for the sale of lands contained the following clause: "Time is to be considered the essence of this agreement, av' unless the payments are under the contained of the contained ments are punctually made at the times and in the manner above mentioned, these presents shall be null and void and of no effect, and all moneys paid hereon shall be absolutely forfeited to the vendor, and the vendor shall be at liberty to peaceably re-enter upon and resell the said lands, together with all buildings thereon, after giving twenty days' notice to the purchaser, and the purchaser covenants not to remove any buildings whatsoever that may be erected on said land:"-Held, that the clause was void in its entirety.-Where the purchase price is payable by instalments, a clause in an agreement making time of the essence so as to apply to the terms of payment is penal; and the Court will relieve against it, by granting specific performance to the purchaser who has remedied or offered to remedy his default with reasonable promptitude. — Independently of any express provision a right of resale exists in favour of the vendor under an agreement of sale upon default by the purchaser.—Noble v. Edwards, 5 Ch. D. 378, followed.—But the vendor must first give a perfectly distinct notice of his intention to resell, and allow the purchaser a reasonable time within which to remedy his default.—Thus, where the vendor had resold, without having effectively either rescinded the contract or exercised his right of resale, the defendant was held entitled on his counterclaim to specific performance, or to counterchim to specific performance, or to recover the amount of surplus after the defendant had been charged with the original purchase price and interest, and credited with the purchase money paid by him plus the selling price on the resale. *Moodie v. —An agreement for sale of land contained a proviso that, in default of payment of any of the instalments payable under it, the vendor should be at liberty to determine and put an end to the agreement and to retain any money paid, "in the following method, that is to say, by mailing . . a notice . . . intimating an intention to determine this agreement, addressed to the purchaser," and that at the end of twenty days from the time of mailing the same, the purchaser should deliver up quiet possession of the land to the vendor or his agent, immediately at the expiration of the twenty days:—Held, that the agreement could not be construed as providing that it could be cancelled immediately on default in payment of the money on the day fixed by the mailing of the notice provided for, but that the purchaser was entitled to the time specified to make good his default. Instalments — Default—Rescission.]—

The plaintiff's claim was for payment of an instalment of the purchase-money overdue on an agreement of sale of a hotel property to defendant, which provided that, upon default in payment, the plaintiff might determine the contract by notice in writing. After the due date of the instalment defendant notified plaintiff that she would not carry out her contract, and about twelve days later plaintiff, without giving defendant any notice, entered into a binding agreement of sale of the property to a third party. He then brought this action:—Held, following Sawyer v. Pringle, 18 A. R. 218, Sawyer v. Baskerville, 10 Man. L. R. 652, and McCord v. Harper, 26 C. P. at p. 104, that the plaintiff had practically rescinded the contract of sale to defendant and could not thereafter sue upon it. Parent v. Bourbonnière, 20 C. L. T. 358, 13 Man. L. R. 172.

Instalments-Default-Time of essence -Waiver - Rescission - Notice - Specific performance - Instalment paid - Return to purchaser — Deposit — Forfeiture.]— By an agreement in writing made between the parties on the 25th May, 1905, the defendants agreed to sell land to the plaintiff, for the price of $290; the purchase-money was to be paid in three instalments, the first of $100, which was to be (and was) paid down, the second of $75, which was to be paid in five months and three weeks, and the third, of $115, in eleven months and three weeks, and the latter two instalments were to bear interest at six per cent, until paid. The plaintiff was to be entitled to possession until default, and was to pay the taxes after the date of the agreement. The agreement was on a printed form, and one of its printed provisions was: "And it is expressly under-stood that time is to be considered the essence of this agreement, and unless the payments are punctually made at the time and in the manner above mentioned, the defendants are to be at liberty to resell the said lands." The plaintiff was given the privilege of paying the residue of the purchase-money at any time, and the defendants were to convey when the whole purchase-money should be paid. According to the evidence, the time for the payment of the plaintiff's purchase-money was arranged to correspond with the time when the defendants were required to make payments to one R., from whom they had purchased the land, with the object that they should be able to pay R. with the money which the plaintiff should have paid them. The second instalment of the plaintiff's purchase-money fell due on the 15th November, 1905, and was not paid. In the following December the plaintiff asked O'C., the husband of one of the defendants. for a delay of two or three weeks, saying that at the end of that time he would pay the purchase-money in full; O'C, said that it would be necessary to consult the other defendant, and that he would let the plaintiff know by mail whether they would accede to his request. Not having received any word from O'C., the plaintiff waited until February, 1906, when he wrote to the defendants asking for his deed and telling them that he was ready to pay the purchasemoney in full with interest. To this and two subsequent letters no reply was received. In April the plaintiff saw O'C., who said that the plaintiff would have to lose the $100, and that the defendants would "stick to the lots and the money as well." A formal tender was made and refused on the 23rd April, and this action for specific performance was begun on the 23rd May: — Held, Meredith, C.J.C.P., dissenting, that, in the absence of fraud, accident, or mistake, the provision that time should be of the essence was binding upon the plaintiff, and the latter had the right to rescind upon de-feult in payment of the second instalment; that no formal notice of rescission was necessary; and that the plaintiff was not necessary; and that the plaintiff was not entitled to specific performance. Barclay v. Messenger, 22 W. R. 522, 43 L. J. Ch. 449, followed. In re Dagenham (Thames) Dock Co., L. R. 8 Ch. 1022, and Cornwall v. Henson, [1899] 2 Ch. 710, [1900] 2 Ch. 298, distinguished. — Held, also, that the $100 paid by the plaintiff, not being a deposit, but an instalment of the purchase-gener was an instalment of the purchase-money, not forfeited, but was returnable to the plaintiff upon rescission, and he should be allowed credit for it upon the costs ordered to be paid by him. Lebelle v. O'Connor, 15 O. L. R. 519, 11 O. W. R. 95.

Instalments - Default-Use and occupation — Contract — Rent.]—The plaintiff had promised to sell land to the defendant for $1,000, upon which $50 had been paid. The difference, $950, was payable in 19 years by half-yearly payments of $25, with interest at six per cent., and the plaintiff was to give a deed when the defendant should have paid $500; but, if the latter should make default in two payments, he was to lose all his rights under the agreement, without re-imbursement of the sums paid. By the same instrument the plaintiff leased the same land to the defendant for 10 years, at an annual rent of $57, which represented interest at six per cent, upon the $950, which rent was to be diminished according to the sums paid upon the purchase-price. The plaintiff hav-ing sued for one year's interest, the defend-ant alleged that, by default in payment of two instalments, the contract had been rescinded, and that he owed nothing:—Held, that the rescission of the contract was discretionary with the plaintiff, and that, in any event, as the defendant had had the enjoyment of the land for one year, he should, even in the case of his default to meet the two payments having effected the dissolution of the contract, pay to the plaintiff the year's interest as to the value of this enjoyment, for otherwise the parties would not be remitted to the same position as they were in before the contract, Picard v. Renaud, 17 Que. S. C. 353.

Instalments - Default-Void clause of contract — Remedy — Damages — Specific performance - Rescission - Sale - Forfeiture — Default judgment — Practice-Notice of motion — Service — Relief other than that claimed — Setting aside order.]— In an action by a vendor against a purchaser on an executory contract for 'he purchase of land, where the plaintiff is not merely seeking a declaration that he has effectively exercised a legally binding express provision for rescission, or a legally binding express provision or the implied provision for resale, he may claim, (1) damages, (2) specific performance, (3) rescission, (4) sale to realise vendor's lien.—In order to succeed the vendor must shew a good title .--Cases on forfeiture, cancellation, and vendor's remedies discussed, and Great West Lumber Co. v. Wilkins, 7 W. L. R. 166, 1 Alta. L. R. 155, applied.—Where a plaintiff applies for judgment against a defendant who has not appeared, either ex parte, or on notice not personally served, no relief will be granted him further or other than that ex-pressly prayed or claimed by the statement of claim—This rule applied to the special circumstances of this case.—Semble, an order made against a defendant in absentia may be set aside by a Judge, on motion of the defendant, without the necessity of an appeal to the Court en bane. relieve .- An action for cancellation or rescission merely on the ground of non-payment of purchase money is not maintainable; the vendor's proper remedy is by action for specific performance. In such an action, if the vendor is found entitled to specific performance, an order is made for the payment of arrears within a specified time, and upon default in payment the vendor may then move for an order for rescission; but, as this in some cases may constitute a for-feiture of the purchaser's interest in the land, the Court or Judge has power under the Judicature Ordinance, s. 8, as amended by 7 Edw. VII. (Alberta) c. 5, s. 7, s.-s. 8, to relieve against the forfeiture, by directing a sale of the lands, with proper directions, either on the application of the defendant, either on the application of the defendant has not appeared, even though the sale may be resisted by the plaintiffs. — In the circumstances of this case the trial Judge rightly stances of this case the trial Judge rignly exercised his discretion in directing a sale.—
Held, per Stuart, J., dissenting in part, that the effect of the amendment of 1907 is not to give this Court any greater powers than are possessed and exercised by the Courts in England under their equitable jurisdiction.—A purchaser is entitled, in equity, to be relieved against the forfeiture of moneys paid —A purchaser is entitled, in equity, to be re-lieved against the forfeiture of moneys paid on the purchase price, and to be protected in his right to acquire a title to the property on payment of the balance.—By ordering a sale the Court is in effect enforcing, not relieving against, a forfeiture. There is no discretion to order a sale, if the vendor refuses, and if payment of arrears is not made by a day named, the vendor is entitled, by order of the Court, to rescission.—In exercising this discretion the proper principle to be observed is that of restitutio in integrum; to restore the parties, as far as possible, to their antecedent position.—The Court will direct payment to the vendor of principal, interest, and costs on a fixed date; in default order rescission, upon payment into Court by the vendor of the moneys paid by the purchaser, less a fair rental for use and occupation of the premises and the plaintiff's costs of action; if the amount of the costs and rental value exceeds the amount paid on the purchase price, the plaintiff should have, in addition to the order for rescission and possession, judgment for the difference .-Remarks as to form and contents of decree, reference, and order on further directions. Canadian Pacific Rw. Co. v. Meadows, 8 W. L. R. 896, 1 Alta. L. R. 844.

The notice shall be well and sufficiently given, if delivered at the chief place of business of the party of the second part, or mailed at Red Deer post the second part, or manied at Acci Deer post office under registered cover, addressed as follows: 'The Great West Lumber Company, Ltd., Red Deer, Alta.'" A notice dated the 16th April, 1907, addressed to the Great West Lumber Company, Ltd., Red Deer, Alta, was given by the vander in the follows. Alta., was given by the vendor in the following terms: "Take notice that unless the ing terms: "Take notice that unless the instalment of $575 now due upon the agree-ment for purchase, etc., etc., dated March 14th, 1906, together with all interest accrued upon the unpaid balance of principal purchase price, under the terms of the said purchase price, under the terms of the said agreement, is paid to me, on or before the 20th day of May, 1907, I shall, according to the provisions of said agreement, declare the same cancelled: "—Held, that the notice contemplated by the agreement was a direct demand, and that the notice in question not being an express, but merely an implied demand and containing a notice that a subsequent specific act will be done by the vender, was even a convolince with the agree. dor, was not a compliance with the agreement.—Held, further, that, as the notice in-accurately stated the date of the agreement, it was invalid on this account.—Held, further, that, as the notice demanded payment of more interest than was payable on a true construction of the agreement, namely, in-terest on the whole amount of principal, instead of upon the instalment that had fallen due only, the notice was bad on that account also. In order to form the basis of a forfeiture, the notice must strictly comply with every condition required by statute or con-tract, as the case may be.—Held, however, that the clause did not merely work a for feiture against which under c. 5 of 1907 (Alberta), s. 7, s.-s. 8, or otherwise, the Court could, in its discretion, relieve; but, in view of the fusion of the Courts of law in view of the fusion of the Courts or law and equity, and the prevalence of the rules of equity over those of law, was, as a matter of legal construction, "bad" and void.—

Held, however, that, if the purchaser had not merely delayed but abandoned or repudiated the contract, all his rights in it are gone, and the vendor may deal with the provents and avenue is on account, as if the gone, and the venote may deal with the property and payments on account, as if the contract had never been made, — Cornwall v. The contract was made on the 19th February, 1907. The price was $1,600, payable $400 on the execution of the agreement, and the balance in four equal payments of $300 each, the last of which was to be made on the 19th August, 1909. The plaintiff covenanted that he would pay the several sums and interest as each of them became due, and C. agreed to convey on payment of the sums named and interest punctually at the times fixed. The agreement did not contain any stpulation that time should be of the essence, nor any provision for cancella-tion and resale upon non-payment. The plaintiff made the $400 cash payment, but plaintiff made the $400 cash payment, but no further payments. He did not occupy the land, Letters passed between the plain-tiff and C., the plaintiff explaining that he was not able to pay the instalments and C. pressing for payment. On the 20th May, 1808, the plaintiff wrote: "Cannot you make a big effort to sell these lots and relieve the situation?" On the 15th July, 1908, C. wrote giving the plaintiff notice that he (C.) wrote giving the plannin notice that he (C.) would sell after 30 days, at the best possible price, and would look to the plaintiff to make up any deficiency. The plaintiff never replied to this letter, and C. made efforts to sell, but was unsuccessful until February, 1910, when he sold to B. for $1,500. On the 4th April, 1910, the plaintiff paid into the 4ft April, 1910, the plaintiff paid into a bank to C.'s credit the amount due under the agreement; but C. promptly returned the amount to the plaintiff. An unexpected rise had taken place in the value of the property, and the plaintiff had an offer for it of $2,500; hence his sudden activity: — Held, having regard to the plaintiff's con-Heta, naving regard to the plaintur's con-duct, that he was not entitled to specific performance.— C. mortgaged the property after the agreement for sale to the plaintiff was made and registered.—Held, that the mortgages did not affect the right of C. to be paid the instalments; and, if the right was affected, it would not help the plaintiff in his action for specific performance.—Held, also, that the plaintiff was not entitled to a return of the $400 paid .- Howe v. Smith, a return of the $400 paid.—Hove V. Smin, 27 Ch. D. 89, and $prague v. Booth, [1909] A. C. 576, followed.—Review of the authorities.—Held, therefore, that the plaintiff must fail in the action and must pay the costs; but, as C. had intimated his intention of charging any deficiency to the plaintiff, and as C. contended that he was authorised by the plaintiff to sell, the resale might be regarded as made upon their joint account, and against the costs payable by the plainand hadnest the costs payable by the plantiff should be set off any profit made by C. on the resale; C. crediting the $400 and the $1,500, and deducting the costs of the action and C.'s expenses of the resale and efforts to sell. In such a case the damages allowed should include: (1) the value of any crop taken off the land by the purchaser after the cancellation; and (2) the amount of any diminution of the value of the land for which the defendant is responsible, as, for example, the cost of summer fallowing again a number of acres which were well summer fallowed when the defendant took possession, and of which work he had the benefit. K. sold land to the plaintiff on terms of payment of the purchase-price by instalments. The plaintiff took possession, and paid the first instalment, and, before any other was due, brought an action against K. for rescission of the agreement for sale, on the ground of mistake and misrepresentation.

In that action K. counterclaimed for payment of the entire balance of the purchaseprice, having, under the terms of the agreement, declared the whole amount to be due and payable by reason of the plaintiff being in default as to the second instalment. That action was dismissed, and judgment was given for K. upon the counterclaim for the full amount. The plaintiff did not pay the full amount. The plaintiff did not pay the amount of the judgment or any part thereof, and, after the judgment, K. determined the contract, under a clause in the agreement, and notified the plaintiff that he intended to retain the instalment paid as liquidated damages, as provided in the agreement. K. then sold the land to the defendant E. This action was brought against K. and E. to compel specific performance of the agreement or, in the alternative, for damages for breach thereof:—Held, that taking judgc.c.l.-139.

ment for the balance of the purchase-money did not deprive K. of the right to cancel the contract for default in payment of the purchase-money .- Held, also, that the plaintiff was not entitled to a return of the instalment he had paid .- In cases of agreements which do not contain a clause enabling the vendor upon default to determine the contract and retain the moneys already paid, he may rescind, and get back his land, but he must return to the purchaser the moneys paid (except perhaps the deposit); but where the agreement provides for determination of the contract and retention of the moneys paid, the vendor is not rescinding the contract when he determines it, and the purtract when he determines it, and the purchaser's only remedy is to apply to the equitable jurisdiction of the Court to be relieved from the consequences of his default. And semble, that the determination of the contract is neither a penalty nor a forefative, within the meaning of 5, 30 (5). of the contract is neither a penalty nor a forfeiture, within the meaning of s. 30 (5) of the Judicature Act, nor otherwise, Steele v. McCarthy, 1 Sask, L. R. 317, 7 W. L. R. 902; Hall v. Turnbull, 2 Sask, L. R., 10 W. L. R. 530, and Banton v. March, 12 W. L. R. 598, discussed.—But, assuming in the plaintiff's favour that the retaining of purchase-money is a penalty against which the Court might relieve, a proper case was not made out for the experiment. proper case was not made out for the exercise of the Court's equitable jurisdiction. The purchaser cannot come to equity relying on his own default. He must first purge himself of that default, and that he can only do by coming to the Court ready and willing to perform all that he agreed to do in the contract. The plaintiff having not only failed to pay the balance of the purchase-money, but never having tendered or offered to pay it, could not be heard to say, "Give me my money back."—Held, also, that the plaintiff was not entitled to have the judgment on the counterclaim in the prior action vacated, although equity would restrain its enforcement as to costs .- Jackson v. Scott, 1 O. L. R. 488. followed, Simmer v. Karst (1910), 15 W. L. R. 58, 3 Sask. L. R. 304.

Instalments — Right of purchaser to accelerate — Tender — Interest — Action for specific performance — Costs — Title,] — A purchaser under an agreement of sale of land has no right to accelerate the due date of future instalments of the purchase money, even though he tender interest, at the rate provided by the agreement, up to the date of the final payment. If the purchaser, by reason of such tender, and upon refusal by the vendor, after demand, to execute and deliver conveyance, begins an action for specific performance, semble, the action will be dismissed with costs against the purchaser. — Semble, a purchaser cannot be compelled to make any of the deferred payments until the vendor can shew a clear title. Instalments — Written agreement silent as to possession—Collateral oral agreement for immediate possession by purchaser—Purchaser taking possession and re-acling—Default — Notice of cancellation — Vendor taking possession — Improvements — Interest—Right of purchaser to regain possession—Account of rents and profits—Estoppel.]—Plaintiff, by written contract, agreed to purchase lands from defendant, to be paid in instalments. Plaintiff re-sold and purchasers went into possession and began cultivation. Plaintiff having made default defendant went on and spent a large sum on improvements. Subsequently, on plaintiff being served with notice of cancellation, all arrears were paid up. Plaintiff sued for possession and accounting of rents and profits.—Held, that there was a collateral oral agreement by which plaintiff entitled to immediate possession when contract entered into. He is also entitled to rents and profits from date of contract, defendant to be allowed for reasonable expenses and some allowance for improvements to the land. Hasey v. Marshall, 10 W. L. R. 321.

Judgment for purchase-money—Subsequent reacision by vendor.]—A vendor obtained judgment against a purchaser for certain instalments of the purchase money, less a sum allowed to the purchaser money, less a sum allowed to the purchaser money, less a sum allowed to the purchaser way of set-off. The agreement for sale provided that the vendor might rescind in case of default, and that all moneys theretofore paid should be forfeited; and, after execution under the judgment had been returned unsatisfied, and after default in payment of further instalments, the vendor gave notice of rescission:—Held, that he was entitled to do this, and that his doing so did not entitle the defendant to an order setting aside the judgment and for payment to him of the amount allowed by way of set-off. Jackson v. Scott, 21 C. L. T. 227, 1 O. L. R. 488.

Land outside of province—Defendant resident out of the province—Action for purchase money — Default — Specific performance—Rescission — Forfeiture — Jurisdiction.)—The defendant agreed in writing to purchase land in Saskatchewan from the plaintiff and to pay for it in instalments. There was a proviso in the agreement for cancellation by the plaintiff upon default after notice, and a covenant that, in the event of default, the whole purchase money should become payable. In an action in the Court of King's Bench, Manitoba, to recover the balance due, upon default, the defendant contended that, as the land was not in Manitoba, and the defendant did not reside there, the Court had no jurisdiction:—

Held, that the contract was to be treated as containing no provision regarding forfeiture; and under such a contract the Court, upon it appearing that the defendant was in default, has jurisdiction to order that the purchaser perform his contract within a reasonable time, and to declare that, in default, the contract is rescinded. In such cases the Court acts in personam, and its right to so act is not limited to cases where the property purchased is within the jurisdiction. Burley v. Knappen (1910), 13 W. L.

Lien of vendor for unpaid purchase money — Death of purchaser Action against executors — Addition of devisees as defendants — Judgment declaring lien — Reference — Costs.] — In an action by executors of the will of Alfred Hayward to recover from defendants, executors of the will of William Hayward, $3,800 and interest under a covenant to pay $225 a year to Alfred Hayward, during his life, it was held, that plaintiffs were entitled to a lien on the lands conveyed for the amount due. Judgment of Riddell, J. (1909), 14 O. W. R. 59, affirmed. Ferguson v. Hayward (1909), 14 O. W. R. 617.

Making the contract—Stipulation for formal contract — Waiver.] — Action to recover payment of an instalment of purchase money under an agreement of sale of land in the form of a written option signed by the plaintiffs and accepted in writing by the defendant. The option contained all necessary terms of the proposed purchase, including a provision that, should the defendant sell any portion of the lands, the plain-tiffs would execute a transfer or conveyance of the lands sold, provided that the amounts had been agreed upon between the plaintiffs and defendant, and, in the event of their being unable to agree, then provided that the selling price was at a fair valua-tion to be determined by named arbitrators. It contained also a clause providing that upon the exercise of the said option a formal agreement of sale should be entered into between the parties containing such terms and conditions as are suitable and usually contained in the form of an agreement of sale in common use by a firm of solicitors named. The letter of acceptance also contained the defendant's statement: "I shall be pleased to have you arrange for the preparation of the formal agreement of sale." No formal agreement was ever prepared or executed, but the defendant, before the due date of the instalment sued for, entered into an agreement for the sale of a considerable portion of the property, and applied and obtained a conveyance of such portion from the plaintiffs, upon payment of an amount agreed upon between the parties: — Held, that there was a completed contract between the parties, enforceable by the plaintiffs, notwithstanding the absence of the more formal agreement contemplated. — The principles laid down in *Chinnock v. Payable by instalments - Default -Action for balance — Defence — Abstract of title not produced — Conveyance not tendered — Right to recover — Construc-tion of contract — Judgment — Reference as to title—Direction to convey on payment of claim and costs.]—The plaintiff and defendants on the 6th May, 1907, entered into an agreement for the sale of land by the plaintiff to the defendants for $3,420, payable in instalments upon named days extending for one year from the date of the agreement. The defendants covenanted to pay these sums to the plaintiff on the days named, and to pay interest. The defendants paid the first instalment and part of the second, but made no further payments; and, after the time for payment of the last instalment had elapsed, the plaintiff brought this action upon the covenant to recover the balance due. At the time the agreement was entered into, the plaintiff had only ment was entered into, the plaintiff had only an equitable title to the land by virtue of an agreement for the purchase of it, but he acquired the legal title on the 22nd January, 1908, and had issued to him a certificate of title free of incumbrance. After the last instalment became due, the plaintiff notified the defendants that the purchase arises were the defendants that the purchase-price was due, and demanded payment. The defendants paid no attention to this demand. The plaintiff testified that he had a clear title to the property, and that he was prepared to execute a conveyance to the defendants upon being paid the balance of the purchase-money. No abstract of title was procured or shewn to the defendants or either of them :-Held, in these circumstances, that the omission to produce and shew an abstract of title was not a defence to the action; the purchaser has a right to require that a good title, free from incumbrances, be shewn; but litte, free from incumbrances, be shewn; but he cannot rest and say nothing and do nothing, pay no attention to the contract, and then he held not liable for the purchasemoney, if the vendor is in a position to make out a good title, because the vendor has not produced an abstract before action brought.—Review of the authorities, and remarks upon the inapplicability of many of the English and Ontario cases by reason of the difference in conditions as to registration of title-the registration in Saskatchewan being conclusive to some extent.—If the defendant title which the plaintiff had to offer, it was quite open to him to ask for a reference; but he did not choose to do so.—No convey-ance of the property was prepared or tend-ered to the defendants. The agreement con-tained the covenant of the defendants to pay and the covenant of the plaintiff, "on pay-ment of the said sums of money," to convey :-Held, that the payment of the money was a condition precedent to the making of the conveyance, and it was not necessary for the conveyance, and it was not necessary for the plaintiff to tender a conveyance before action; but there should be a reference as to title.—Judgment of Johnstone, J., in favour of the plaintiff for recovery of the balance of the purchase-money, varied by directing a reference as to title, and that the plaintiff should, upon title being shewn, and his claim and costs being paid, execute a conveyance to the defendants. Maybery v. Williams (1910), 15 W. L. R. 553, 3 Sask. L. R. 350.

Payable by instalments — Default — Notice of cancellation — Non-compliance with contract — Tender of amount due — Refusal to accept — Specific performance.] — The defendants, in May, 1905, agreed to sell land to the plaintiff for $2,200, payable $600 on the execution and delivery of the contract, and the remainder in deferred annual instalments with interest. The agreement contained a clause by which, in case of default on the part of the plaintiff in paying the instalments, the defendants were to be at liberty to declare the agreement until and void by giving 30 days' notice in writing to that effect, and thereupon all the rights and interests of the plaintiff under the agreement were to cease, and the premises to revert to and revest in the defendants, without any further declaration, forfeiture, or notice, and without any right on the part of the plaintiff to any reclamation or compensation for moneys paid thereunder. The plaintiff made the first payment of $400, and went into possession. No further payments were made; and in April, 1909, the defendants were made; and in April, 1909, the defendants served on the plaintiff a notice which referred to the contract and the instalments to be paid thereunder, which set out the default of the plaintiff, and notified him that the "contract is now declared null and void in accord-The plaintiff then made a tender of the amount unpaid under the agreement, and asked for a conveyance. The defendants refused to accept the money or to make a conveyance. The plaintiff then brought this action, wherein he claimed specific performance, or a return of the $600, and further and other relief :- Held, that the notice of April, 1909, was not the notice provided for in the agreement; it was not a 30 days' notice; and could not of itself have the effect of putting an end to the contract. To entitle the defendants to determine the contract, and retain for themselves the money paid, they must strictly comply with the requirements of the agree-ment; and, not having done so, they were in the same position as if there was no such clause in the agreement as that providing for cancellation by notice. And, considering the agreement without that clause, the defendants' notice had not the effect of rescinding the contract, the default of the plaintiff not being such as to amount to an abandonment or repudiation by him of the contract. Abandonment of a contract is to a certain extent a matter of intention. The plaintiff's default, of three years' duration, would be some evidence of abandonment; but, in view of other facts and circumstances (set out below), the failure to pay the instalments did not indicate an intention to abandon. In his statement of claim the plaintiff alleged that the agreement was still a subsisting one at the time the action was commenced; in his reply he explicitly denied that the notice terminated the contract; and nowhere in the pleadings did he allege an acceptance of the notice. The trial Judge held that the plaintiff was not entitled to specific performance, but gave judgment for the return of the $600. From that judgment the defendants appealed. During the hearing of the appeal, counsel for the plaintiff stated that he accepted the notice as terminating the contract, and asked the Court so to consider it .- Held, that it was not open to the plaintiff's counsel on appeal to set up a state of facts diametrically opposite to that on which he went to trial. The refusal to grant the equitable relief of specific performance did not terminate the contract; its effect was to leave the parties to their remedies at law. A purchaser can be entitled to a re-turn of the purchase-money paid only after the contract has been rescinded, either by the parties themselves or by the Court. But the plaintiff's alternative claim for a return of the $600 must carry with it a claim for a rescission by the Court, for the Court can-not grant the relief asked for while the contract is still subsisting. The pleadings were, therefore, sufficient to enable the Court to direct a return of the purchase-money paid, if the plaintiff was entitled to have it re-turned.—Held, also, that the $600 was an instalment of the purchase-money, and not a deposit, and there was no agreement, express or implied, that it should be forfeited, other than the clause in the contract within which the defendants did not bring themselves by giving proper notice; and, the vendors having refused to accept the balance of the purchase-money and convey the land, the plaintiff was entitled to have the contract rescinded and the purchase-money returned to him, on the principle laid down in Williams on Vendors and Purchase-money has been forfeited to the vendor, that it is necessary to appeal to the equitable jurisdiction of the Court for relief, under s.-s. 5 of s. 30 of the Judicature Act. The defendants' refusal to carry out the contract declared to be rescinded, and, as there had been no forfeiture, to a return of the moneys paid, less any damages which the defendants had suffered; but, as no damages were claimed, the $600 should be returned in full, Judgment of Johnstone, J., 12 W. L. R. 598, affirmed. Banton v. Marsh Bros. & Wells (1911), 16 W. L. R. 338.

Payable by instalments — Default -Notice terminating contract - Clause of contract entitling vendor to retain money paid.] — In November, 1907, the plaintiff and defendant entered into an agreement in writing by which the plaintiff agreed to sell to the defendant certain lots of land, with the privileges and appurtenances appertaining thereto, including a livery barn and a machine or implement business carried on upon the premises, for $8,000, payable $2,000 on the execution and delivery of the agreement, $2,000 on the 4th December, 1907, and the balance in four equal annual instalments. The agreement contained a provision by which, on default of payment by the defendant of any moneys due under the contract, the plaintiff had the right to declare the contract null and void, by written notice to that effect, personally served upon the defendant, and thereupon all the rights of the defendant under the contract should cease and determine, and the land should become revested in the plaintiff, without any further notice and without any right on the part of the defendant to any reclamation or compensation for moneys paid thereon. defendant made the cash payment of $2,000, and entered into possession. He failed to make the payment due on the 4th December. On the 31st December the plaintiff served upon the defendant a notice, in proper form, declaring the contract null and void. The defendant refused to give up possession, and the plaintiff brought this action, for a declaration that the agreement was null and void, for possession, and for a declaration that the $2,000 paid should remain her property. The defendant admitted the agreement and set up that he had paid $2,000 thereon, but alleged that the plaintiff had not performed her part of the contract, and had on the 31st December cancelled it and refused to return him the $2,000; and he counterclaimed for a return thereof. Judge held that the plaintiff had performed the contract, as far as any obligation thereto rested on her, but that the defendant had made default, and the plaintiff had cancelled the contract in accordance with the terms thereof, and gave judgment declaring the contract rescinded and the plaintiff entitled to possession of the premises, and he dismissed the counterclaim:—Held, per curiam, that an appeal by the defendant from the part of the judgment dismissing the counterclaim should be dismissed. Per Lamont, J:—The contract having provided that, on default by the defendant in the payment of the purchase-money, the plaintiff might cancel it, and the plaintiff having given a proper notice cancelling it, the contract was at an end, and the premises became revested in the plaintiff without any right of reclamation on the part of the defendant of the $2,000. That was the contract of the parties. Were it not for the clause taking away the right of reclamation, the defendant would be entitled to be restored to his original position: Williams on Vendors and Purchasers, p. 951. This clause prevented that, and in effect worked a forfeiture of the defendant's right to such restitution, against which the Court had jurisdiction to relieve: Judicature Act, sec. 30, sub-sec. 5. But, before a party appealing to sub-sec. 5. But, before a party appearing to the equitable jurisdiction of the Court is entitled to relief, he must make out a proper case therefor; and, in view of the circumstances in evidence, the defendant had not made out such a case. He was not now, nor had he ever been, ready and willing to pay the instalments of purchase-money. He did not ask that the plaintiff should be compelled to carry out the contract, because he was not in a position to perform his part of it if she were willing. He had not done equity to the plaintiff, and was, therefore, or not in a position to ask a Court of equity to consider the merits of his case. Per Brown, J.:—The defendant's whole ground of defence, and the sole basis of his counterclaim, was that the plaintiff agreed to transfer to the defendant certain implement agencies which formed part of the implement business, and that she failed to carry out her contract in this respect. On this point the trial Judge found against the defendant, and the defendant had not appealed from that finding. Having accepted that finding, and not having asked by his pleadings to be relieved from the forfeiture clause of the agreement, he was precluded from contending on the appeal that he should be so relieved. But, apart from the question of pleading, the defendant was not entitled to be relieved, having regard to all the circumstances of the case. Judgment of Prendergast, J., 10 W. L. R. 145, affirmed. Hole v. Wilson (1911), 16 W. L. R. 352. Sask. L. R.

Payable by instalments — Default — Termination of contract — Retention of moneys paid.) — In October, 1905, the defendants agreed to sell land to the plaintiff for $500, payable $60 in cash and the balance in deferred monthly payments of $20 each, with interest. By a clause in the contract, in default of payment of the instalments on the days named, the defendants were to be at liberty to determine the agreement and "to retain any sum or sums paid thereunder as and by way of liquidated damages." The plaintiff made payments amounting to $310.20, the last being $40 in December, 1907. In June, 1908, the defendant gave the plaintiff notice, in accordance with the contract, that the agreement was determined; and in April, 1909, conveyed the land to another for $300. In July, 1910, the plaintiff brought this action, for specific performance or damages or relief from the forfeiture of the moneys paid: —Held, that specific performance was out of the question; but, the Court could relieve from the forfeiture of the money paid. Whitla v. Riverview Realty Co., 14 W. L. R. 359, 19 Man. L. B. 746, specially referred to. Equitable relief, however, will not be granted where injustice to another would result; and, as it appeared that the property had depreciated in value, the loss therefrom should be borne by the defaulting plaintiff; the defendants should be ordered to repay the moneys paid, less the amount of the loss on the resale. Datziel v. Homeseckers' Land Co. (1911), 16 W. L. R. 406, Man. L. R.

Payable by instalments - Default rayable by instalments — Default — Termination of contract by vendor; — By an agreement in writing under seal, dated the 14th June, 1907, the plaintiffs agreed to purchase an undivided third interest in certain lands from the defendant, for $11,150, part of which was payable, and was paid, at the execution of the agreement, and the remainder of which was payable by deferred instalments with interest. The agreement contained the following provisions: (1) that in the event of default being made in the payment of principal and interest or any part thereof, the whole purchase-money should become due and payable; (2) that, upon such default, the defendant should be at liberty to determine and put an end to the agreement and to retain any sum or sums paid thereunder as and by way of liquidated damages, upon giving notice in a prescribed manner; (3) that time should be in every respect of the essence of the agreement. The plaintiffs made default as to the first deferred instalment; and the deagreement. fendant, on the 16th November, 1907, ter-minated the agreement by notice in the manner prescribed. On the 14th May, 1908, the plaintiffs offered to pay the defendant amount to which they would then have been liable under the agreement had it not been terminated, and were about to tender the amount, which they had with them in a bag, when the defendant escaped from them. The money was not their own, but was temporarily raised for the occasion, when it be-came plain that the land had increased in The action was brought in September, 1909 :- Held, upon the evidence, that the per, 1849:—Head, upon the evidence, that the plaintiffs were never ready, willing, and able to carry out their contract, which had been virtually abandoned by them before the date of the cancellation by the defendant; and they were, therefore, not entitled to enforce specific performance. The plaintiffs, in their settement of claim alleged cancellation and statement of claim, alleged cancellation and termination of the contract by the defendant, and this was admitted by the defendant in his statement of defence. No waiver was alleged. The plaintiffs purchased at $11,150, of which they paid $5,340.96. The defendants sold the property in December, 1907, at $75 an acre; and, at that price, considering the sum agreed to be paid by the plaintiffs, he lost a considerable sum through the failhe lost a considerable sum through the failure of the plaintiffs to carry out their contract. The plaintiffs sought relief against forfeiture and asked for a return of the $5.340.96.—Held, not a case in which equitable relief could be given. Steele v. Mc-Oarthy, I Sask. L. R. 317, 7 W. L. R. 902. followed. The defendant did not put an end to the contract merely for the nursons of to the contract merely for the purpose of gain, or for some other reason against which a Court of equity might grant relief, but merely to save himself from loss; and the effect of ordering a restitution of the purchase-money would be to place a premium on wrong-doing. Enkema v. Cherry (1911), 16 W. L. R. 480, Sask, L. R.

Payment—Purchase of lots from city corporation.]—Action for balance of purchase money for sale of two lots. Plaintiffs claimed that they had sent the transfer of these lots to defendant in error. The transfer contained the usual acknowledgment of the receipt of the purchase money, which plaintiffs say was not paid, and defendant claims was. The onus being on plaintiffs, action dismissed. Regina v. Garrett (1909), 12 W. L. R. 96.

Payment — Time — Default — Rescission.]—A stipulation upon a sale of land upon terms of credit that time shall be of the essence of the contract does not constitute a binding contract and does not give a right to the vendor to claim rescission of the sale in default of payment of the price at the time agreed upon. Carroll v. Drolet, 16 Que. S. C. 329.

Payment of full purchase-price -Receipt given inapplicable to such paymen - Consensus ad idem not reached-Subsequent signing of application—Restrictions on purchase—Specific performance—Re-turn of money paid — Pleading—Amend-ment.]—The plaintiff paid the defendants $1,500, the full purchase-price of certain lots of land, and accepted from the defendants a receipt for that sum, stated therein to be "the first payment" made by the plaintiff for the purchase of the lots, and stating also that the receipt was "subject to the also that the receipt was subject to the terms of application, conditions, and com-pletion of agreement of purchase for above property. The defendants intended to sel all the lots in the tract in which the lots in question lay, subject to certain restrictions, which were indicated in a transfer afterwards offered to and refused by the plaintiff, as follows: "Subject to the reservations of mines, materials, coal, and valuable stones in or under the said land, and subject to caveat No. 2096," By the caveat the defendants claimed "an interest under agree-ment of sale," in the whole tract, "for the purpose of preventing the purchaser from using the property" for certain purposes. The plaintiff signed no application before or at the time he paid his money, but after-wards, upon one being sent to him, signed it and sent it back, but, in his letter enclosing it, pointed out that it was not applicable to his case, as he had paid for the lots, and a clear title was "due to him." The application stated that he agreed to purchase subject to the restrictions and covenants. plaintiff sued for specific performance, that is, for a transfer of the land free from restrictions insisted upon by the defendants: -Held, that there was no consensus ad idem, and the plaintiff was not entitled to specific performance.—Held, also, that the defendants were not entitled to stand upon the legal position that there was a contract, binding in law, in the terms indicated by the transfer tendered by them, and that, if the plaintiff did not choose to accept the transfer, the defendants might retain the $1,500; the plaintiff was not precluded from proving in an action for the return of the $1,500 that he had not consented to the special provisions set forth in the caveat.—Hussey v. Horne-Payne, 4 App. Cas. 322, followed.—The signing of the application failed to bring about a complete agreement evidenced by writing; and what followed was disagreement rather than agreement.—Held, therefore, that the plaintiff was entitled to a return of the $1.500, upon a permitted amendment of his pleading.—Judgment of Stuart, J., varied. Dobell v. Grand Trunk Pac. Devel. Co. (1910). 15 W. L. R. 149.

Payment of money - Condition-Nonfulfilment—Action for return of money — Authority of agent—Parol evidence to shew condition upon which written contract was signed-Admissibility of-Consistency or inconsistency with terms of written contract.]
—Plaintiff brought action to recover $480 paid by plaintiff in April, 1908, to one Webster as agent of defendants, in connection with a proposition of defendants that a syndicate would be formed to purchase 10,000 acres of land in Saskatchewan. Plaintiff alleged that it was agreed that if the syndicate was not completed—if purchasers were not was not completed—if purchasers were not secured for the whole 10,000 acres—the money paid would be returned. The syndicate was not completed; only 2,880 acres were subscribed for. Plaintiff subscribed for 960 acres and paid Webster $480 by cheque in favour of defendants, who cashed it. De-fendants pleaded that the $480 had been forfeited.—Latchford, J., held, that Webster re-presented to plaintiff that defendants would return the money in the event of the syndicate not being completed, and entered judgment for plaintiff for $480 with interest and ment for plaintiff for $480 with interest and costs.—Divisional Court affirmed above judgment, Meredith, C.J.C.P., dissenting.—Ontario Ladies College v. Kendry, 10 O. L. R. 328, 5 O. W. R. 695, followed. Carter v. Can. Nor. Ru. Co. (1911), 18 O. W. R. 42, 1 O. W. N. 892, 2 O. W. N. 639, O. L. R.

Payment of part purchase-money in cash—Default in defence payment—Notice of cancellation — Resale — Action for refund of part paid—Legal right—Equitable relief against forfeiture—Circumstances of case.]—The defendant agreed to sell land to the assignor of the plaintiffs for a price to be paid half in cash and the other half by deferred payments. The cash payment was made, but there was default as to the first deferred payment, and the defendant gave a notice in writing of cancellation of the agreement, stating his intention to resell and call on the purchaser for any deficiency, in this purporting to follow the terms of the contract. The contract undoubtedly provided for a notice of cancellation on default, and the notice was given and accepted by the plaintiffs as a notice of cancellation. The plaintiffs sued for a return of the cash pay-ment, alleging the default, the notice, a resale by the defendant, depriving the plaintiffs of their right of redemption, and claiming a declaration that the agreement was rescinded, and a refund of the cash payment and interest :- Held, that it was not open and interest:—1264, that it was not open to the plaintiffs to contend that the notice was not sufficient; and the fact of the resale, if it took place, was not material:— Held, also, that the plaintiffs had no legal right to a return of the moneys paid, and no right to equitable relief from the forfeiture of these moneys, which was provided for by denial clause and charge laid on denial clause—Sale by decree of immovables subject to lien on the donation—Judgment liens.]—A penalty of a thousand dollars in case of the alienation of goods given, stipulated in a gift of immovables made in a rent charge service and other protestations forms no part of these charges nor of the obligations that spring direct from contract. Hence, the sale by decree of immovables given, subject to the charge of the donor "to pay, acquit and fulfil all the obligations imposed on the donee by the deed of gift," does not render the latter liable to the penalty incurred before the execution and does not compel him to repay that amount to a third party who had paid it to the donor with the subrogation of the rights of the latter. Belanger v. Ouellet, 18 Que. K. B. 369.

Promissory note given for part of purchase-money — Issue as to whether taken in payment — Default — Cancellation of contract — Pleading — Evidence.]—On the 7th February, 1908, the plaintiff entered into an agreement with the defendant for the purchase from the defendant of certain land of which the defendant held an agreement for sale from one L. The price to be paid by the plaintiff was $2,240, to be paid as follows: $1,000 by the delivery of a certain stallion upon the execution of the contract; $200 on or before the 1st November, 1908; and the balance by the plaintiff assuming the L. contract—such assumption to take place upon the payment of the $200 on the 1st November, 1908. At the time of the execution of the agreement, a promissory note for the $200 to be paid on the 1st November, 1908, was made by the plaintiff in favour of the defendant, payable on that day; and the horse was handed over to the day; and the norse was handed over to the defendant. The contract contained a clause providing that, upon the purchaser's default in making any of the payments, the vendor should be at liberty to cancel the contract and retain any payments made on account thereof, and that time should be considered of the essence of the agreement. The plaintiff did not make payment of the note when it became due, or at all; and the defendant, on the 12th February, cancelled the contract by notice in accordance with the provision of the contract. The plaintiff then brought this action for a declaration that the notice of cancellation was void and for specific performance of the contract, or, in the alternative, for the return of the note and for the value of the horse. The plaintiff, by his pleading, alleged that the note was given and accepted in lieu of the $200, and that, at the time it was given, it was understood and agreed that the defendant would im-mediately execute and deliver to the plaintiff an assignment of the L. contract; and that his reason for failure to pay the note was that the defendant had not executed and delivered the assignment as agreed. The de-fendant pleaded that the note was given as collateral security only, and that the plain-tiff was not entitled to an assignment of the L. contract until the note was paid. The evidence at the trial shewed that, at the time of the execution of the contract, the defendant agreed to forward the L. contract and an assignment thereof to the office of W., a conveyancer, to shew title, and that the documents were to remain in the possession of W, until the note was paid; and that the defendant failed to forward either the contract or the assignment; but this was not alleged in the pleading, and no amendment was asked for :- Held, that the question suggested by this evidence, not being raised by the pleadings, should not be considered; and the sole issue to be determined was, whether the note was given in full discharge of the covenant in the agreement for the payment of $200. And held, upon the evidence, that that issue must be determined against the plaintiff.—Held, therefore, following Steele v. McCarthy, 7 W. L. R. 902, that the de-fendant had a right to cancel the contract, and it was at an end; and the plaintiff was not entitled to any relief on the ground which alone he had set up. Midgeley v. Bacon (1911), 16 W. L. R. 496, Sask. L. R.

Reformation — Omission of provisions as to acceptance of whole purchase money—Mistake — Abandonment of option — New agreement—Costs. Heath v. McLenaghan (Man.), 5 W. L. R. 358.

Rights of the purchaser—Danger of eviction — Hypothec to guarantee a claim payable only after purchase price—Right to security and how it should be demanded.]—The purchaser of an immovable property, when sued for the recovery of the purchase price, cannot set up, in a plea to the merits, the danger of eviction resulting from a hypothecary debt, which he has bound himself to discharge, and which is payable only after the purchase-price claimed by the action—When there is danger of eviction from a hypothec registered on his property, the purchaser has but the right to obtain security from the party suing him for the purchaseprice, and this ground of defence should be set up by dilatory exception. Alain v. Pareni (1910), 37 Que.. S. C. 473.

Sale by vendor to another—Application of purchase money — Payment of mortgage—Subrogation to rights of mortgagee. Quider v. Hedges, 3 O. W. R. 555.

Sale of land at auction en bloc—
False bidding—Part payment.]—Where an immovable composed of several lots is sold at auction en bloc, in pursuance of notice of sale, a sum paid on account of the purchase price should be deducted from the total price, and one of the purchasers cannot escape the consequences of false bidding by saying that he has paid his part. Marccau v. Morin, 5 Que. P. R. 349.

Separate agreement as to profits — Condition — Defect in title — Right of vendor to recover on condition — Right of purchaser to set up defence of defect of title — Judicial admission — Specife performance.]—The appellant, by notarial deed, sold to the respondents certain immovable property, the price of which was acknowledged in the deed to have been fully paid. By another notarial agreement, executed at the same time, the appellant deposited with the respondents a sum of money equal to one third of the price, the condition being that the respondents should pay him one-third of the respondents should pay him observation of the profits made by them by selling the property in lots, but he reserved the right to demand the return of this deposit if he were dissatisfied with their management of the enterprise: - Held, that the two contracts must be deemed to be, and were, distinct and independent transactions - the one being an absolute sale of the property to the respondents, and the other a joint venture with them, for the disposal of the pro-perty in lots. And the appellant, having exercised his option to take back his deposit, was entitled to recover the same, and the was calculed to recover the same, and the respondents could not, by dilatory exception, set up a defect in the title of the property transferred by a deed of sale, or ask, under Art. 1535, C.C., that the disturbance be removed before repayment of the deposit, the respondent's recourse against a defect in title being by a separate action against the appellant as warrantor, 2. Where ambiguity exists in one or more of the answers of a party examined as a witness, an isolated expression cannot be detached from the context, to serve as a judicial admission for the purpose of making proof against an authentic act. 3. In case of uncertainty, the law which the parties have made for themselves in the text of contracts formally executed by them, should be literally enforced by the Courts. Anderson v. Provost, 13 Que. K. B. 458.

11. Rescission.

Abandonment by purchaser—Cancellation by vendor—Action by purchaser for return of moneys paid, 1—Action to recover an amount paid by a purchaser under an agreement for purchase of land:—Held, that as plaintiff had abandoned the contract he cannot recover. Smithneseki v. Willsie (1909), 12 W. I. R. 533.

Act of sale—Droits de mutation—Failure to pay — Nullity — Improvements—Mortgage — Priorities — Payment o insolvent mortgage also to fland to C. in 1888 and 1889 en 1899 P., the possessor of the lot, sold the improvements thereon to C. The plaintiff, a judgment creditor of P., caused the lot to be seized in the possession of P., invoking a sale by the defendant oP, in 1894. The defendant claimed the property as his, and sold it to C. for $25 - Held, that the act of sale in 1894 was absolutely null and void and must be considered as non-existent, because the dues thereon had not been paid; that such nullity not only prevented the transmission of the property, but took away all probative value as to establishing the sale, and that such an act, being non-existent in the eye of the law, did not even prove the payment and the receipt of the moneys mentioned in it.—2. That C. committed no fraud in purchasing from the defendant.—3. That, besides, in the actual case, the plaintiff, a creditor of P., claiming to be the earlier purchaser, alleging that P., his debtor, was charged with the mortgage debt, could not invoke his lien for the improvements, the mortgage debt of C. having priority in law over such improvements.

There is nothing illegal in a mortgagee paying for the improvements upon the mortgaged premises with the object of protecting his security, even if he whom he pays is insolvent, insamed as it is not fraud for a debtor to pay his insolvent creditor. Nadeau v. Roseberry, 18 Que, S. C. 542.

Action by purchaser—Misrepresentations—Knowledge of purchaser — Evidence as to falsity of statements — Statements made in good faith. Robb v. Samis, 3 O. W. R. 907.

Action to rescind — Fraud—Misrepresentation of agent for vendors as to value—Large commission paid to agent—Crediting on purchase money—Acquiescence. Krolik v. Essex Land, Loan, & Improvement Co., 3 O. W. R. 508.

Action to rescind—Undue influence — Mental incompetency — Vendor's understanding of transaction — Inadequacy of consideration — Conflicting evidence. Bernst v. Kuhn (Man.), 2 W. L. R. 448.

Actual fraud—Damages for deceit.1—Plaintiff brought action for rescission of a contract for sale by defendants of 7 acres of land, because of alleged false and fraudulent misrepresentation, or, in the alternative, for damages as in an action of deceit:—Held, that plaintiff had failed to establish actual fraud, and the claim for rescission must fail, and on account of the absence of actual fraud and because it was not shewn that plaintiff was induced to enter into the contract through any misrepresentation, the action of deceit also failed. Judgment of Meredith, C.J.C.P., affirmed. Borrett v. Guezner (1990), 14 O. W. R. 1151, 1 O. W. N. 231.

Attempted cancellation by vendors—New agreement vith sub-purchaser—Evidence to establish—Negotiations with agent of cendors — Assignment of rights of original purchaser—Sub-purchaser taking possession—Improvements under mistake of title—R. S. O. 1837, c. 119, s. 30—Lien—Compensation—Costs.]—Plaintiff under special agreement sold lands to B., who getting in arrears gave a quit claim deed to L. Negotiations for purchase were carried on by L. with plaintiff's agent. Plaintiff gave to B. notice of cancellation under terms of said agreement, but unknown to L., who made a payment on account, which was received by plaintiff; L. took possession and made improvements:—Held, L. was entitled to a lien for these improvements, or he might retain the lands on making payment of all arrears and making proper compensation. Colonial Loan & Investment Co. v. Longley, 13 O. W. R. 388.

Cancellation—Return of moneys paid on account of purchase—Alternative claim for damages for deceit—Untrue representations by agent of vendor—Purchaser not relying on representations.]—Plaintiff purchased from defendant X., through his co-defendant, M., certain Manitoba property. Plaintiff brought this action for damages or the return of the moneys paid on the grounds that the representations made by M. were false:—Held, that the land in question was within the representations made by Y. in his letter to plaintiff. Cancellation by vendor on default of payment of instalments of purchase-money—Tender by nomince of purchaser—No assignment to nomince—Executions against purchaser registered against the land—Refusal of evendor to execute—Transfer to nomince—Specific performance denied—Right of purchaser to return all moneys paid on account of purchase.]—Action by purchaser for specific performance or for return of moneys paid on account of purchase money. Plaintiff had made default and was notified that contract was cancelled. M. tendered the balance due but there was never any assignment of the agreement to him. There was a written request by plaintiff to defendant to issue transfer to M. As there were executions against plaintiff's lands, and the duplicate agreement was not produced, defendants refused to give the transfer. Specific performance refused but judgment for amount of cash payment. Banton v. March (1909), 12 W. L. R. 598.

Cancellation under provisions of agreement.] — After making some payments to defendant on account of purchase of land under an agreement, plaintiff discovered he had made a poor bargain and repudiated the contract. Defendant cancelled the agreement under provisions thereof:—Held, that plaintiff failed in his claim for damages founded on alleged misrepresentations of defendant and could not recover as an alternative the moneys paid on account of the purchase. Kerfoot v. Yeo (1910), 20 Man. L. R. 129, 11 W. L. R. 355, 15 M. L. R. 351.

Collateral undertaking — Non-fulfilment-Right to recover price—Reacission of contract—Abatement in price.]—A stipulation in a deed of sale by which the vendor collaterally undertakes to procure for the purchaser, by way of expropriation, an immovable belonging to a third person, is not a condition upon the fulfilling of which the right of the vendor to recover the purchase price depends. At the most it is only a ground for an action on the part of the purchaser to rescind the sale or for an abatement in the price. Price v. Ordway, 15 Que. K. B. 67.

Gonstruction — Payment of purchasemoney by instalments — Default — Action by vendor for cancellation—Acceleration of further payments — Payment into Court — Stay of proceedings on payment of instalments due and costs. Read v. Richardson (N.W.T.), 4 W. L. R. 123.

Contract not carried out as intended —Mental incapacity of vendor—Action by executor to set aside transaction—Onus—Mortgage — Postponement — Priority of charge for down payment.]—M., the plaintiffs testator, was the owner of an hotel, subject to a mortgage to a brewing company for $6,000. The defendant proposed to purchase the hotel, and a memorandum of agreechase the hotel, and a memorandum of agree-ment for sale was signed by M. and the de-fendant, the price being $26,000. The mem-orandum stated that the $26,000 was to be made up as follows: $5,000 in cash; $2,700 by the transfer of the defendant's equity of redemption in a dwelling-house; the brewing company's mortgage for $6,000, to be assumed by the defendant; a second mort-gage for $12,300, to be given on the hotel property by the defendant. The transaction was not carried out as provided in the memwas not carried out as provided in the memorandum, but in this way: M. executed a transfer of the hotel property to the defendant; the mortgage to the brewing company was discharged. M.'s certificate of ownership was cancelled, and a new one issued to the defendant; the defendant executed a mortgage to the brewing company for $11,-000, and a subsequent mortgage to M. for $12,000, and these mortgages were registered; the defendant also transferred his equity of redemption in the house, and paid $300 by an arrangement in a collateral matsoor by an arrangement in a connectal mat-ter:—Held, upon the evidence, that the true agreement was that which the memorandum expressed.—M. died a month after the trans-action of softening of the brain; he had been, for years previously, an invalid and addicted to drink; for many months before sical and mental condition, and during the greater part of the time actually drunk; his usual condition was one of incapacity, as the defendant knew:—Held, that the onus of shewing capacity was on the defendant: -Held, however, upon the evidence, that the agreement was not an unfair one, and should not be entirely set aside; but M. did not understand that, contrary to the expressed agreement, the amount of the cash payment was to form a charge upon the property prior to the intended mortgage to him-self or the balance of the purchase-price.— Had the braining company been a party to the action, their mortgage should have been postponed, to the extent by which it ex-ceeded $6,000, to M.'s mortgage for $12,000; but, in the absence of the company, all that but, in the absence of the company, all that could be done was to adjudge that the defendant pay the plaintiff $5,000 and interest and the costs of the action (brought to set aside the transaction), and that the total be a charge upon the property, Murray v. Weiler (1910), 14 W. L. R. 677.

Crop-payments — Default—Attempted cancellation by vendor — Assignment of contract by purchaser — Resale by vendor — Rights of assignee of purchaser — Specific performance — Delay — Damages — Costs — Defendants severing — Lien. Crawford v. Patterson (Alta.) 7 W. L. R. 183.

J.'s agent took to plaintiff an agreement for sale of land. Before plaintiff signed, a clause was inserted regarding interest, and plaintiff was given a letter to make everything satisfactory. The agent then took the agreement to J., who accepted, but did not so notify plaintiff. Defendant shortly after gave a quit claim deed of the property to his wife for a nominal consideration:—Held, that as the approval of the alteration had never been communicated to plaintiff there was no contract. Appeal allowed and relief claimed granted. Hill v. Linden (1909), 14 O. W. R. 422.

Default—Rescission—Demand on notice Necessity for—Costs of pending opposition.]-The plaintiffs had sold to the defendants a bit of land for construction of their line, for an annual rent of $25 as long as the purchase-money, $500, should not have been paid, it being stipulated that if the defendants made default in payment of any gale of rent for six months after it fell due, the sale should be rendered void and of no effect, and it should be lawful for the plaintiffs to resume possession of the land and to dispose of it as their own property without indemnity or reimbursement of the sums paid. The defendants having made default in payment of one of the gales of rent for more than six months after it fell due, the plaintiffs began an action to rescind the sale, and, besides, claimed the costs of a pend-ing opposition which they had filed to protect their rights upon a seizure of the land being made as against the defendants :- Held, that, by reason of the default clause above referred to, the plaintiffs had the right to demand the rescission of the sale, without any demand of payment of the gale of rent, or any mise en demeure having been addressed to the defendants, the latter being in default by the very terms of the contract.—2. But the plaintiffs could not recover from the defendants the costs of the opposition, seeing that litigation was still pending on the subject of such costs, no adjudication having been made upon such opposition. Maison St. Joseph du Sault au Récollet v. Montreal Park & Island Rv. Co., 19 Que. S. C. 484.

Default in payment of instalments of purchase-money—Defence, that contract not fulfilled by vendor—Procuring or endeavouring to procure business for purchaser—Time of essence of contract—For-feiture of payment made—Purchaser not reedy and willing to fulfil agreement—Counterclaim—Expenses of resisting vendor's re-entry—Right to possession—Costs—Pleading.]—Action by vendor for a declaration that a contract for sale of land is void, that she is entitled to possession, and to retain a cash payment made by purchaser. Defendant claimed that plaintiff had not transferred 3 implement agencies to him:—Held, (1) that plaintiff had only agreed to do her best to get them, which she did, but unsuccessfully; (2) that time was of the essence of the agreement, and that the subsequent actions of the parties shewed such was the intention. The forfeiture clause is not in the nature of a penalty, but a matter of agreement. The defendant is not willing to carry out the agreement. The defendant is not entitled to any costs in connection with his disputing plaintiff spossession, as her re-entry was quiet and peaceable, and he should have vacated same on receiving notice. There is no necessity of declaring plaintiff entitled to retain the part of purchase money paid. Hole v. Wilson, 10 W. L. R, 145, 2 Sask. L. R. 50.

Default of payment—Registration.]— The vendor cannot demand that the sale of an immovable effected by him shall be declared void, and that he shall be placed in possession of the immovable, without alleging and proving that the stipulation for the rescission of the sale in default of payment has been registered. Beaudoin v. Gaudry, 4 Que. P. R. 161.

Deferred payments—Default — Breach of covenants—Power of cancellation by notice — Penalty — Time of essence of contract — Equitable jurisdiction of Court — Sufficiency of notice—Construction of contract.]—Held, Lamont, J., dissenting, that when in a contract for sale of land the parties expressly agree that time is of the essence of the contract, and that upon default the vendor may cancel the contract by notice to the purchaser, and in pursuance of such power the vendor cancels the contract, the Court has no jurisdiction to relieve against such cancellation, which is purely a matter of contract between the parties.—Held, also, that failure to fill in a blank in a printed agreement has not the effect of rendering the clause in which such blank is found of no effect.—Held, further, that a notice of cancellation which is substantially in the terms of the covenant authorising it is sufficient. Steele v. McCarthy, 1 Sask. L. R. 317, T. W. L. R. 902.

Delay in making title — Pleading — Oral demand.]—The delay of a vendor to make title to his purchaser of the immovable, which he has sold him, is not a ground for rescinding the sale.—2. When the purchaser has not demanded the rescission of the sale by his pleading, he cannot obtain it upon a demand made ore tenus, and this is so even when the grounds which he invokes for obtaining it, appear upon the record. Brunet v. Berthiaume, 21 Que. S. C. 314.

Description — Rectification — Specific performance — Reacission — Negotiations — Lackes — Delay in giving possession — Evidence.]—Action for specific performance and rectification of an agreement for the sale of land. Agreement rectified, Defendant to have option of having agreement cancelled by re-paying plaintiff his money; if not, plaintiff to be put in possession on paying balance due on contract, Campbell v. McKinnon, 11 W. L. R. 721.

Fraudulent misrepresentation of vendor's agent—Replevin of documents—Damages for detention, Dillabough v. Scott (Man.), 3 W. L. R. 449.

Fraudulent representations - Failure of proof—Alleged conditions of contract not proved.]—An action for rescission of a sale by the defendants to the plaintiffs of a twothirds interest in a quarter-section of land, on the ground of fraudulent representations by the defendant C. as to the nature, quality, and value of the land, and also on the ground that it was part of the agreement that the joint credit of the plaintiffs and of C. should be utilized for the purpose of financing the expense of breaking 400 acres the same year, so as to make the land more readily saleable, and that C. should not part with a certain promissory note for $1,600 which the relating from the control of t plaintiffs gave him as consideration for the sale, nor with his remaining one-third interest, until a sale of the whole could be effected, and that C. observed none of these conditions, was dismissed; it being held, on the evidence, that there was no fraudulent representation on C.'s part, but that the plaintiffs purchased with their eyes open, and that the conditions alleged to be part of the agreement were not so in fact. Lien for unpaid purchase-money -Cancellation of contract — Release of purchasers — Findings of trial Judge—Contradictory evidence—Weight of evidence—Delivery of deed—What constitutes — Intention of parties — Conditional delivery—Es crow-Revocation.]—The plaintiffs and the defendants other than the company and one deremanns other than the company and one A., a trustee for the plaintiffs and such other defendants, acquired a right to purchase a large tract of land from the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. The defendant company Railway Company. The defendant company were organised for the purpose of acquiring these rights at an advanced price. The contract with the railway company was made directly with the defendant company, and provided, as a condition precedent and of the essence of the contract, that the contracts should become null and void upon default in any payment thereunder. The defendant company also agreed to pay the advanced company also agreed to pay the advanced price referred to, to A, as trustee for the option-holders. The defendant company, being unable to sell the lands as rapidly as anticipated, made default in the payments to the railway company, which company threatened to cancel the contracts. It being represented to the railway company, how-ever, that the shareholders of the defendant company upon such cancellation would suffer a heavy loss, the railway company there-upon agreed, if the holders of the original option would waive their claim to the advanced price, to grant easier terms and an extension of time for making payments. Thereupon a release was prepared and executed by all the members of the original syndicate, releasing all their claims to such increased price. Both plaintiffs subsequently requested that their names be struck off the release, one after it had been signed by all members of the syn-dicate, and one before it had been so signed. They then brought this action, alleging insolvency of the defendant company, claiming a lien on the land for the advanced purchase price, a declaration that the contract with the defendant company should be cancelled, and alleging that they had been in-duced to make the release by fraud, that it was never delivered, and was merely an escrow:—Held, that the trial Judge having found that the plaintiffs were not induced by fraud and misrepresentation to execute the release, and the evidence being evenly balanced, the appellate Court should not in-terfere with his findings.—2. That in deter-mining whether a deed was delivered as an escrow the Court must consider the intention of the parties, and, while the deed in question would not become operative until all parties had executed it, yet in so far as the parties had executed it, yet in so far as the plaintiffs were concerned they executed it and delivered it to take such effect as they could give it, and released all their rights in the contract, and it could not therefore be said to be delivered in escrow.—3. That the deed being effectual in so far as the plaintiffs could make it effectual could not be revoked by them even before it had been executed by all the parties, and so become operative.—4. That delivery is entirely a matter of intention on the part of the party executing the deed; and actual delivery to the party taking under or benefiting by the deed is not essential. Huggard v. Ontario and Saskatchevan Land Corporation, 1 Sask. L. R. 526, 6 W. L. R. 645, 8 W. L. R. 866.

Misrepresentations — Consideration— Possession—Laches — Waiver — Ratifica-tion.]—The defendant, by falsely representing that he had a serious offer for the purchase of his property for a brewery, induced the defendant to take a deed of it, the de-fendant fearing that a brewery might be an injury to a hotel which he was projecting near by. Payment of the purchase money was deferred. On discovering the falsity of the representations, the defendant notified the plaintiff that he repudiated the contract, and plaintiff that he repudiated the contract, and invited him to bring an action to test its validity if he was unwilling to take back the property. The plaintiff delayed some time in bringing this action for the recovery of the purchase money, and in the meantime the defendant remained in possession and collected the rents:—Held, that, under the provisions of the Quebec Civil Code, as the vendor had made false representations which desired the nurchaser as to the principal ceived the purchaser as to the principal consideration for which he contracted, he could not recover; that the purchaser had a right to have the contract rescinded on the ground of error; that, under the circumstances, the delay could not be imputed as laches of the defendant, nor waiver of right to have the contract set aside, and that the defendant's administration of the property in the meantime could not be construed as ratification of the contract. Barnard v. Riendeau, 31 S. C. R. 234.

Misrepresentations of vendors as to quality of land—Failure of proof—Absence of title in vendors—Pleading—Equitable right under agreement for sale — Purchase money payable by instalments-Recovery by purchaser of moneys paid—Reserva-tions in original agreement—Release — Ab-stract of title. Hartt v. Wishard-Langan Co., 9 W. L. R. 519.

Mutual mistake-Innocent misrepresentation—Rescission of contract—Danages—Costs—Fraud.] — Plaintiff entered into a contract for the purchase of land from the defendant, after the latter had personally shewn him what he honestly thought was the land he owned. After payment of certain instalments of the purchase money and certain sums of money for taxes and otherwise in connection with the land, the plaintiff bought an outfit of horses, implements, lum-ber, etc., and took them out to the railway station nearest the land, intending to take possession and commence farming operations. He then discovered that the property which he had bought was not the one which which he had bought was not the one which had been shewn to him, but was greatly inferior to it in value. He then brought this action in which he charged the defendant with fraudulent misrepresentation as to the with fraudulent misrepresentation as to the locality of the property: — Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to have the contract rescinded and to repayment of all moneys paid by him under it with interest at five per cent. per annum. Adam v. Newbigging, 13 App. Cas. 308, followed. (2) The plaintiff was an activitied to demange as the detiff was not entitled to damages, as the defendant's misrepresentation had not been fraudulently made. (3) Appearances having justified the charge of fraud, though this was not proved, costs should be allowed. Hopkins v. Fuller, 25 C. L. T. 481, 15 Man.

Part performance of contract—Non-fulfilment of conditions—Abandonment.] — The defendant had sold his restaurant to the plaintiffs, who had paid a part of the price in cash, another part being agreed to be paid on the day of the transfer of the liquor license, and the balance by monthly payments thereafter. The defendant put the plaintiffs in possession of the restaurant, but afterwards retook possession. The plaintiffs took no steps to obtain the transfer of the license, and the defendant did not offer them a transfer. Subsequently the plaintiffs sued for the cancellation of the sale and to be reimbursed what they had paid to the defendant, alleging that he had dispossessed them:—Held, that the parties not having executed or really inthe parties not having executed or really intended to execute the bargain made between them, there was ground for adjudging the cancellation of the sale. Coté v. Neveu, 22 Que. S. C. 268.

Payment in goods-Rescission-Failure of consideration—Trover for goods—Reconveyance.]—V., being desirous of purchasing a lot of land in the possession of F., was negotiating with him about it, but no agreenegotiating with him about it, but no agree-ment of purchase had been arrived at. W., a dealer in cattle, went to V. and offered to purchase from him two head of cattle. He refused to sell, stating that he wished to exchange them with F. for the land. W. then went to F. and agreed to extinguish a debt of $79 that he had against him if he would convey the land to V. W. went again to V. and offered him the land in exchange for the two head of cattle and his note for for the two head of cattle and his note for $20. This offer V. accepted. The parties then met at the office of a justice, and F. gave W. is note for $20. W. selected the cattle, asked V. to turn them out, and said he would come again and take them away. he would come again and take them away. he would come again and take them away. V. recorded the deed, but, discovering that F. had not title on the records, told W. he could not have the cattle. W. afterwards went and took the cattle from V.'s pasture without his consent. V. alleged that W. told him that F. had a good title, and agreed to give him a good title, and if he did not do so the bargain was to be off. W. denied that he told V. that F. had a good title, or that he agreed to give V. a good title. In an action of trover in a County Court to recover the cattle and note. the Judge told the jury the cattle and note, the Judge told the jury that if they believed V.'s version of the transaction, the title in the cattle did not pass, and there was evidence upon which they might find for the plaintiff. The jury found for the plaintiff :- Held, on appeal, that V. having accepted and registered the deed under the contract, the consideration had not entirely failed, and V. could not rescind the contract and sue in trover for the cattle and note without reconveying or offering to reconvey the land, and the appeal should be allowed and a nonsuit entered. v. Requisitions — Right of vendor to rescind — Waiver of right by negotiations — Conveyancing practice.]—The benefit of a provision in a contract for the sale of land that if any objection or requisition be made by the purchaser which the vendor shall be unable or unwilling to comply with, the vendor shall be at liberty, by notice in writing, to rescind the agreement, is lost if the vendor's solicitor attempts to answer the requisitions and enters into negotiations with the purchaser's solicitor in regard to them. A vendor should either cancel the contract when he first reads the requisitions; or, when embarking on the attempt to comply with them, or to remove the objections, should reserve to himself the benefit of the right to rescind further on during the negotiations. Crabbe v. Little, Moses v. Little, 9 O. W. R. 551, 14 O. L. R. 631.

Sale of land — Counterclaim by purchaser to rescind—Misrepresentations—Deceit—Damages—Money lent — Interest — Price of land—Abatement for deficiency in acreage—Costs — Set-off. Turner v. Zas (Man.), 6 W. L. R. 191.

Sale pendente lite — Creditors attacking vendor's title — Purchaser in good faith purchased land while an action paulienne is pending for the purpose of impenching the title of the grantor of the vendor, who also purchased after the commencement of the action, paulienne has been sunnot, when the action paulienne has been sunnot, when the action paulienne has been sunnot, when the action position is a sunnot action to the sale made in fraud of creditors of the vendor not affecting the rights of purchasers or mortgagees in good faith, even when such rights arose during the action for revocation. Barsalou v. Royal Institution for Advancement of Learning, 5 Que. Q. B. 383, followed. Laramée v. Collin, 16 Que. S. C. 346.

Title—Conveyance—Notice — Tender.]
—The plaintiff agreed to purchase land from the defendant, and to pay the purchase-money in instalments. The last payment was not made when due, and more than a year afterwards the plaintiff tendered to the defendant the amount due, demanded an immediate transfer, and, because the defendant did not produce a transfer forthwith, brought an action, on the day after the tender, to rescind the sale. The defendant's title was under an agreement of sale from another person, and he could at any time procure title by payment of the balance due to that person. The plaintiff at the time of the purchase was aware of the nature of the title, and there was a clause in the agreement to the effect that the defendant agreed to use all reasonable diligence to obtain title, that the defendant was not to be required to furnish evidence of title, and that the plaintiffs accepted the title. Time was originally of the essence of the contract on the part of the plaintiff, but this was waived by the defendant: — Held, that, under the provision of the contract referred to above, the defendant was entitled to a reasonable time to obtain title after the plaintiff had completed his part of the contract by paying the purchase-money, and, on a strict construction of this clause, the plaintiff would have to accept an assignment of the defendant's agreement of sale.—But, apart from this clause, the plaintiff had no right to determine the contract without notice: where the defect is merely one of conveyance, and not of title, the purchaser must give a reasonable time to remove the defect before repudiating the contract.—Wood v. Machu, 16 L. J. Ch. 21, and Hatten v. Russell, 38 Ch. D. 348, followed. Gregory v. Ferrie (1910), 14 W. L. R. 219, 3 Sask. L. R. 191.

Want of title-Pleading - Removal of objection to title after action begun for rescission.]—Held, per Howell, C.J.A., and Phippen, J.A., that in an action by the purchaser for rescission of the agreement of sale on the ground of fraud and misrepresentations, it is too late for the plaintiff, at the hearing of the appeal, for the first time to take the position that he is entitled to rescind because the defendants' tile is not good.—2. The title of the defendants to the lands in question, although it was only under an agreement of purchase from the Q. under an agreement of purenase from the Q-company, which in turn only held under an agreement of sale from the Canadian North-ern Railway Co., was a sufficient equitable title with a right to get in the absolute title before they should be called upon to convey, and the plaintiff could not rescind, although and the plaintiff could not rescind, although the defendants purported to agree to sell and convey the fee simple in the lands.—Shaw v. Foster, L. R. 5 H. L. 350, Egmont v. Smith, 6 Ch. D. 476, Re Head's Trustees, 45 Ch. D. 310, Want v. Stallibruss, L. R. 8 Ex. 175, and Re Bryant, 44 Ch. D. 219, followed.—3. The purchaser, not having demanded an abstract of title or called on the vendor to make the title good, had no right to rescind the contract, and as certain rescrations in the contract, and, as certain reservations in the agreement under which the defendants held had been released by the companies interested before the trial, the Court would not now rescind the contract.—4. The reserva-tion not released, viz., that in the agreement from the Canadian Northern Railway Co. reserving any land that might be required reserving any land that might be required for right of way and station grounds of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, should not be held fatalt to the title, as no evidence was given to shew that any of the lands bought by the plaintiff were or would be affected by it.—Held, per Richards, and Perdue, JJ.A., that the Court will not force a purchaser to take an equitable estate except where the vendor has the whole equity in the land and controls the legal estate in such a way that he can readily procure it, and the defend-ants had not, either at the time the contract ants had not, either at the time the contract was made or at the trial, such a title as the plaintiff was compellable to accept: Craddock v. Piper, 14 Sim. 310; Esdaile v. Stephenson, 6 Mad. 366; Madeley v. Booth, 2 De G. & Sm. 718; Fry on Specific Performance, 4th ed., p. 586.—2. The defendants were too late in procuring the release of the reservations after the commencement of the suit, though it might be otherwise in an action for specific performance: Dart, p.

1005. The reservation in favour of the G. P. P. Rw. Co. was a fatal objection to the title, as it bad not been and could not be removed.—3. The position taken by the defendants in their statement of defence, setting up the various contracts under which they held, was a repudiation of their contract to furnish a title in fee simple, and an attempt to set up that the plaintiff had only bought the equitable interest they had in the land, which entitled the purchaser at once to treat the contract as rescinded: Wrayton v. Naylor, 24 S. C. R. 295.—4. The bringing of the suit for the return of the money paid, alleging that the vendor had not a good title, was a sufficient repudiation of the contract on the part of the plaintiff, and it was not necessary for him to give notice of rescission or demand the repayment of the money before commencing suit: Want v. Stallibrass, L. R. B Ex. 175. Neither was it necessary for the plaintiff to demand an abstract of title, as the defendant's agent shewed the plaintiff the nature of the company's title before the action.—5. Although in Ontario the Court may allow money to be paid into Court to secure the purchaser against an outstanding incumbrance, as in Cameron v. Carter, 9 O. R. 426, that course is permissible under the Act respecting the Law of Transfer of Property, R. S. O. 185°. c. 119, s. 15, and there is no similar statutory provision in Mnitoba.—6. So far as the question of pleading was concerned, the statement of claim was quite sufficient, for the plaintiff was entitled to join two grounds of relief as he had done and to rely upon either or both of them.—The Court being equally divided, the appeal was dismissed without costs. Eartt v. Wishard-Langan Co., 18 Man. L. R. 376, 9 W. L. R. 518.

12. SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

Acceptance of lease by purchaser—Estoppel—Pleading.]—I. A person is not estopped by entering into a lease of land, which has expired before the commencement of the action, from bringing an action for specific performance of an agreement for the sale of the land to him by the lessor, alleged to have been made before the signing of the lease.—2. A pleat that the plaintift had never been in possession of the land, except only as tenant to the defendant under a lease in writing made between the parties, does not amount to a plea of estoppel. Poliquin v.

Action for specific performance — Pleading—Statement of claim—Prayer for general relief — Judgment for return of moneys paid based on forfeiture of contract — Inconsistency — Refusal of plaintiff may have under the prayer for general relief in his statement of claim is limited to the facts which are alleged and the relief which is expressly asked; the plaintiffs cannot, under a general prayer for further relief, obtain any relief inconsistent with that relief which is expressly asked for.—Cargill v. Boucer, 10 Ch. D. 502, followed.—The plaintiff alleged an existing agreement that, as the agreement had been forfeited by the defendant reselling the land, he, the plaintiff, was entitled to a return of the portions of the purchase money paid by his assignor and himself; no attendment of the statement of claim was asked for, and none was made, but the trial Judge pronounced judgment for the repayment of the money said: —Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled in this action to that relief, and that the action should be dismissed, and without prejudice to an action for that relief, if the plaintiff were advised to bring one.—Judgment for the were advised to bring one.—Judgment of Dubuc, C.J., reversed. name, but not disclosing the name of the vendor, and signed "P. W. Black, agent:"—
Held, that this was not sufficient to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, parol evidence to supply the name of the vendor not being admissible.—Semble, also, on the evidence, that the agent had no authority to bind the vendor by executing a contract, and that, on account of the inadequacy of the price, the court would be slow to enforce specific performance.—Judgment of Falconbridge, C.J., reversed. Contract of parties—Costs.] — The plaintiff purchased leasehold property from the defendant for $340.53 and paid $300 on account. The plaintiff alleged that the property was sold free of all unpaid rent and taxes, and refused the pay the balance of purchase money unless the defendant contributed towards the unpaid rent which was due at the time of the sale. The defendant alleged that no such agreement as to unpaid rent and taxes was made, and was willing to execute a conveyance on payment of the true balance, but refused to entertain any proposition for settlement unless certain other dealings between the parties were adjusted at the same time:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for specific performance.—Held, also, that, as the evidence failed to establish the plaintiff's contention as to the agreement for sale and the unpaid balance; and that, as the defendant had acted wrongfully in attempting to make the settlement of this matter contingent upon the settlement of other dealings between the parties which were distinctly foreign, there should be no order as to costs. Correspondence — Ofter — Quasi-acceptance — Agent.] — The defendant, the owner of land in Ontario, being abroad, arranged with an estate agent to send him any offers of purchase which he might receive. The plaintiff filled up and signed a printed form offering $13,000, naming terms of payment and other details. This was sent by the agent to the defendant, who refused it. The plaintiff then signed another offer of $14,000, on a similar form, half cash, ballance payable by instalments, offer to be accepted by a certain day, and sale to be completed by a certain day. This was sent by the agent to the defendant, who, upon receiving it, wrote to the agent a letter in which he intimated that he would take $14,000 in cash. In reply the agent, on instructions from the plaintiff, wrote to the defendant informing him that the plaintiff accepted the terms and would pay he $14,000 in cash. On receipt of the letter, the defendant drew up an offer at $14,000, containing the same terms, but changing the date for acceptance and for closing, and forwarded it for engrossment and for signature by the plaintiff. This was engrossed and then signed by the plaintiff and sent to the defendant, who then wrote to the agent decilining to accept it:—Held, in an action for specific performance, that no contract binding upon the defendant could be made out from the documents and correspondence. Harvey v. Facey, [1893] A. C. 552, followed. Bohan v. Galbratih, 8 C. W. R. 555, 9 O. W. R. 95, 13 O. L. R. 301; affirmed by the Court of Appeal, 10 O. W. R. 143, 15 O. L.

Correspondence — Uncertainty as to amount of purchase money — Ambiguous offer by letter — Acceptance by telegrom — Construction of documents—Specific performance denied, — Defendant wrote plaintiff that he would take $1,000 for lot A., half eash, balance in 6 months, with 5 per cent. interest; or, "will allow 10 per cent. discount for cash." Plaintiff telegraphed in answer, "Will take lot as per your letter, $900 cash." Plaintiff now sued for specific performance. Action and appeal dismissed. The letter was void from uncertainty as it cannot be determined on what sum the discount was to be allowed. Watson v. Jamies on (1910), 12 W. L. R. 667.

Defence of fraud — Misrepresentations — Findings of fact—Appeal—Caveat emptor.] — The defendant resisted the planitiff's claim for specific performance of a contract for the sale of a farm to him, alleging that he had wholly relied on the planitif's representations that the land consisted of a black sandy loam 18 to 20 inches deep with clay bottom, free from white sand, and worth $15 per acre, and that these representations were all untrue. The defendant had not inspected the land before purchasing, but had consulted persons other than the plaintiff as to the quality, location, and value of the property. The trial Judge's findings of fact, both as to the alleged representations and as to their falsity, were adverse to the defendant:—Held, with doubt as to whether, upon the written evidence, the Court would have decided in the same way, that the verdict of the trial Judge could not properly be reversed.—The trial Judge could not properly be reversed.—The trial Judge had held that, apart altogether from the conflict of testimony, the defendant could not succeed in having the contract rescinded on the ground set up, as public policy requires that persons should be expected to exercise ordinary prudence in their business dealings, instead of calling on the Courts to relieve them from the consequences of their own inattention and negligence, citing Attwood v. Small, 6 Cl. & F. 232, and Stauphter v. Gerson, 13 Wall. (U. S.), 379.—Perdue, J.A., dissented from this opinion, following Redpress v. Hurd, 20 Ch. D. J. and Smith v. Gradom, 7 W. L. &. 504, 8 W. L. Statute of Frauda.] — B. on behalf of D. negotiated with C. for the purchase of C.'s property on the north-west corner of Hastings street an Arestminster across the street of the transfer of the property of the part payment of the purchase price, leaving the description blank for C. to fill in, as he did not know the land registry description, but adding the description "N.W. cor., etc." below the space reserved for C.'s signature. B. took the receipt to C. and paid him $10, and he filled in the blank description as lots 9 and 10, block 10, and signed the receipt. Lots 9 and 10, block 10, were on the north-west corner, and were not owned by C. whereas lots 9 and 10, block 9, were on the north-west corner, and were owned by C. B. sued to have the agreement or receipt rectified or performed so as to cover lots 9 and 10, block 9, and to have the agreement specifically performed:—Held, that it was the property on the north-west corner that the parties had in contemplation, and that C. filled in the wrong description either by mistake or fraud, and that the plaintiff was entitled to specific performance of the true agreement. Borland v. Coote, 24 C. L. T. 383, 10 B. C. R. 498.

Description — Parol evidence—Statute of Frauds—Specific performance.]—A written agreement to sell "lots 16, 17, block 196, district lots . ." must be taken to refer to land belonging to the vendor, and is a sufficient description within the Statute of Frauds to make extrinsic evidence admissible for the purpose of identifying the land and shewing the subject-matter of the negotiations between the parties. Enforcement by purchaser against vendor company — Defective organization — Provisional directors — Authority of manager—Manitoba Joint Stock Companies' Act, s. 22.]—Action by purchaser for specific performance of a contract for sale and purchase of land. When defendant company became incorporated certain parties were called provisional directors. No by-laws were adopted, no directors laken:—Held, that these directors are the directors of the company. The contract was made by a de facto manager, with the acquiescence of the directors, and is binding on the defendant company. The property was referred to in the agreement as 330 Arnold street.—Held, that description was not vague. Farol evidence can be adduced to shew property intended.—Held, that the contract was substitute of a condition subsequent imposing upon directors and is directory only. Muldocan v. VENDORS AND PURCHASERS.

Fixed price payable in money or by cross-sale of land — Absence of title in defendant — Action for specific performance or damages — Defence — Misrepresentations — Contradictory evidence,]—Action for specific performance: — Held, that as there was a road through plaintiff's land which formed an encumbrance and which he could not get rid of when action brought, specific performance refused and contract cancelled. Welkood V. Haw, 10 V. L. R. 4.1

Foreign divorces.]—In an action for specific performance of an agreement for specine performance of an agreement for the sale of land, and in the alternative for damages, plaintiff (vendee) having wholly fulfilled his part of the contract, defend-ant pleaded that (1) before action brought he had been sued for divorce by his wife. in an American Court, where suit was still pending, and that said Court had issued an injunction enjoining him from "transferring any property of any kind whatsoever or wheresoever situate" during pendency of the divorce proceedings, and that he was resident within the jurisdiction of such Court and amenable to such injunction; (2) that he was ready and willing to perform his part of said contract for sale, but had been hindered from so doing solely by such injunction and by reason of his wife refusing to sign away her dower in the land in question, but that he would complete said contract immediately on determination of contract immediately on determination of said divorce suit and annulment of said injunction:—Held, (per Graham, E.J., in Chambers) that the injunction of the Court of a foreign State granted after the contract was made did not discharge defendant. ant from performance of such contract; but that if plaintiff elected to proceed for damages rather than for specific performance, because of refusal of defendant's wife to release her dower, there ought to be an order striking out defence as to that alternative claim and to have damages assessed. Devenne v. Warren (1910), 8 E. L. R. 453.

Incumbrance — Lis pendens — Notice Interpleader — Rule 1103 (a), 1—Action brought against one who had contracted to prought against one who had contracted to purchase lands for the purchase price. Pend-ing the action the Moisons Bank sought to set aside, as fraudulent as against them-selves and his other creditors, a grant of certain lands by one Sanderson to his wife, the vendor. Before accepting conveyance of these lands or paying the purchase money, the purchaser from Mrs. Sanderson was apprised of the registration of a certificate of lis pendens issued in the action brought by the bank :- Held, that the registration of a certificate of lis pendens is not an incumbrance within the meaning of R. S. O. c. 119, s. 15. It did not create any lien or charge upon the lands against which it was registered. Nor was this case one in which would be at all possible to comply with the requirements of the statutory provision which the purchaser invoked. The Molsons Bank could not assert any liability on the part of the purchaser to pay to them such purchase money. Their claim must have been to have it declared that the lands in question were exigible to meet the demands of themselves and the other creditors of the vendor's grantor. Rule 1103 "deals with a liability in one person to pay a specific sum of money, while at the same time two other persons are making claims in respect of that sum:" Ingham v. Walker, 3 T. L. R. 448, 31 Sol, J. 271. See too Bastler v. Day, 73 Wisc. 27. The application was wrongly conceived, and should be dismissed with costs to be paid by the applicant to the vendor. The Molsons Bank, having sup-ported the motion, should have no costs. Molsons Bank v. Fager, 6 O. W. R. 93, 180, 10 O. L. R. 452.

Inequitable contract — Discretion— Appeal — Mistake or fraud, Drummond Mines Co. v. Farnholm, 8 O. W. R. 864.

Interest — Purchase-money ready and vendor notified — Costs.] — The vendee is discharged from the duty of paying interest by a tender of the purchase-money when it becomes due and a con-tinued readiness to pay it since, or by depositing it in a bank, with notice to the vendor, subject to his order, to be delivered to him on the execution and delivery of a deed. Kershaw v. Kershaw, L. R. 9 Eq. 56, In re Golds and Norton's Contract, 33 W. R. 333, and In re Riley and Streatfield, 34 Ch. D. 386, followed. In this case no tender was made by the plaintiffs, the vendees, nor was the money paid into a bank, subject to the order of the defendant, the yendor, on delivery of a deed, as the defendant re-quested: but the money was deposited by the plaintiffs with a private person at the place of payment fixed in the agreement, and kept there until the commencement of the action (for specific performance), when it was sent to the plaintiffs' solicitor, who notified the defendant that he had the money, and would pay it over to him upon delivery of a good and sufficient deed:—Held, that this was sufficient to stop the interest; and the plaintiffs should pay interest only up to the date when the money was available to the defend-ant.—Held, also, that there should be no costs to either party; the matter should not have been brought into Court. Quinlan v. O'Connell (1911), 16 W. L. R. 288, Sask L. R.

Laches - Stipulations that time is to be of essence of contract - Possession as excuse for delaying suit - Damages in lieu of specific performance.]-The variation of an agreement for the sale of a lot of land. by a subsequent conveyance of a part of the lot to the purchaser in fee simple, will not of itself operate as a rescission of the agreement as to the remainder .- 2. A stipulation in an agreement of sale of land that time shall be considered to be of the essence of the contract will be treated, in circumstances such as appeared, and when everything goes to shew that it was not the intention of the vendor to insist on its being strictly carried out, as only in the nature of a penalty which a court of the nature of a penalty which a court of equity should relieve against. In re Dagenham (Thames) Dock Co., L. R. 8 Ch. 1022, Louther v. Heaver, 41 Ch. D. 248, and Hipvell v. Knight, 1 Y. & C. 401, followed—3. A purchaser of land under an agreement of sale who takes and resistance. of sale who takes and retains possession will not be barred from taking proceedings for specific performance, although he de-lays them for more than six years.—4. When specific performance for any reason cannot be granted a plaintiff may now be awarded damages in lieu thereof as at common law, and no delay in seeking his remedy, short of that imposed by the Statute of Limitations, would afford a sufficient defence. Barlow v. Williams, 4 W. L. R. 233. 16 Man, L. R. 164.

Leasehold interest—Action for specific performance — Vendor holding lands under sub-lease — Objection of purchaser—Waiter — Time — Approval of assignment — Esistence of easement or right of eagen not known to purchaser — Inaccurate description of property — Materiality — Validity of objection — Dismissal of action — Unfounded charges of fraud. I—Action for specific performance. Under an agreement to sell a leasehold interest a purchaser is not bound to accept an interest under a sub-lease:—Held, that defendant had waived his right to raise this objection. An easement existed known to plaintiff, but not mentioned in the agreement, nor known by defendant until a survey was made subsequently. As there was, therefore, a material mis-description action dismissed, but without costs, defendant having failed in charges of fraud against plaintiff and his solicitors. Dineen v. Young, 13 O. W. Mineral claim — Specific performance—tuding value — Time of the essence—Place of payment — Tender — Intoxication, i—where the contract is for the sale of property of a fluctuating value, such as mineral claims, although there is no stipulation that time shall be of the essence of the contract, yet, by the very nature of the property dealt with, it is clear that time shall be of the citation is an option, or unilateral contract, for that reason time is to be taken as intended to be of the essence.—Where the transaction is an option, or unilateral contract, for that reason time is to be taken as intended to be of the essence.—Where there is a stipulation to pay money on a particular day, and no place is agreed upon, it is the duty of the payor to seek out and find the payce if he is within the jurisdiction. On the evidence the defendant was not, when he signed the contract, so intoxicated that he did not understand the nature of the instrument he was signing, Morton & Symonds v. Nichols, 12 B. C. R. 9, 3 W. L. R. 161.

Misdescription — Innocent mistake as to frontage of city lot—"About" and "more or less"]—An action for specific performance of a contract for sale of certain lands, and if defendant could not convey all the lands described in the contract, that she may be required to convey such portion thereof as she can convey, and that the plaintiff shall be compensated by the defendant by way of abstement from the purchase money for the difference—Purchase price not fixed per foot—Specific performance—Knowledge of purchaser—Question of title or conveyance—Action dismissed with costs, Bullen v. Wilkinson (1911), 19 O. W. R. 408, 2 O. W. N. 1202.

Mistake as to depth of city lot—Described as 110 ft. "more or less"—Actually only 88 ft. 6 in.—Purchase price not fixed per foot—Action by purchase r for specific performence with compensation.]—Defendant entered into an agreement to sell a lot, in the City of Toronto, to plaintiffs for $12,000, describing it as having a frontage of 110 feet more or less. It turned out to have a frontage of only 98 ft. 6 in. Plaintiff brought action for specific performance with compensation.—Meredith, C.J.C.P., held, that the words "more or less" added to the statement of the depth control that statement, so that neither party would be entitled to relief on account of a deficiency or surplus unless in case of so great a difference as would naturally raise the presumption of fraud or gross mistake in the very essence of the contract.—Noble v. Goggins (1888), 99 Mass. 231, followed.—Plaintiffs given option of taking what defendant owned without compensation or costs or having their action dismissed with costs. Election to be made within ten days. Wilson Lumber Co. v. Simpson (1910), 17 O. W. R. 820, 2 O. W. N. 410, O. L. R.

Mistake as to number of lot.]—Action by purchaser for specific performance for sale of lot A. Defence that it was B, and A. that was intended to be sold. Plaintiff not having rescinded, defendant given one month to carry out agreement, otherwise deposit to be returned with interest. Giellum v. Lott (1909), 12 W. L. R. 4.

Negotiations - Concluded agreement-Negotiations — Uncluded agreement— Correspondence — Authority of agent — Non-disclosure of purchaser's name—Stat-tute of Frauds.]—A, who temporarily re-sided in England, had had certain dealings with a firm of real estate agents, C. & Co., in Vancouver, who cabled to him inquiring the lowest price, cash, he would accept for a certain lot in Vancouver. He replied "$13,-000 net." C. & Go. cabled back that the best offer they could get was $12,000, net to him, and asking if they could accept. A. made no reply. Subsequently C. & Co. cabled that they had sold the lot for $13,000 cabled that they had soid the lot for storow, net, had accepted, without stating purchaser's name, a desposit of $500, and asking confirmation by cable. A cabled "writing acceptance." The letter following upon ing acceptance. The letter following upon this stated that his reason for cabling in those terms was that he "wanted it distinctly understood that I could not complete the deal until I returned. . . It would be impossible to close before, as the title deeds belonging to the property were left in Toronto. I will accept the offer on the following terms, that is, the adjustments to be calculated to 1st April, After that time the purchaser can collect the rents. The premises are leased for a year from last fall. Kindly make it known to the pur-Tail. Kindly make it known to the purchaser so that there will not be any missunderstanding; be sure and tell the purchaser that I cannot give him possession of the premises; he will simply have to accept the $13,000, net cash offer, with the understanding that I am not to be called upon to produce any till papers other than upon to produce any title papers other than these in my possession; no doubt you have explained all this to your client. . . . Kindly write and let me know if your client accepts these terms." C. & Co. handed this letter to the plaintiff's solicitors, who accepted "unreservedly the stipulations made by Mr. Andrews." but added, "We are ready at any minute to pay this money over to Mr. Andrews as soon as proper title is evidenced to our satisfaction." C. & Co. communicated this to A. The latter in reply repeated, in effect, the terms of his former letter. There was some evidence at the trial about a proposed change in the terms of payment from a cash basis to instalments:—Held, Irving, J., dissentiente, that A.'s letter following his cable 'writing acceptance,' read with C. & Co.'s cable announcing sale at $13,000, and the letter of the plaintiff's solicitors to C. & Co., constituted a memorandum of a contract between the plaintiff and defendant sufficient to satisfy the Statute of Frauds; that the letter of the plaintiff's solicitors to C. & Co. contained an unqualified acceptance of the terms proposed in A.'s letter to C. & Co., and did not import the proposal of a fresh term. Calori v. Andrews, 12 B. C. R. 230, 4 W. L. R. 259.

Notice of prior unregistered sale—Fraud.]—Under ss. 71 and 91 of the Real Property Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 148, the title of the holder of a certificate of title, as against the claimant under a prior unregistered sale, can only be impeached for fraud, and fraud cannot be found merely because the purchaser had been told of the prior sale by the solicitor of the prior purchaser, when it appeared that he had afterwards been informed by the vendor himself that he had not sold the property had not been sold but had been placed by the vendor in his hands for sale, also that due scarch had been made in the land titles office. The trial Judge found there was a valid contract for sale of land and directed a reference. In some way the direction to the master to ascertain when plaintiff was in a position to make title was omitted from the judgment. On appeal, judgment varied accordingly. Bird v. Lavallee, 13 O. W. Outstanding legacies against property — Barred by Statute of Limitations —R. S. O. (1897) c. 134.]—Defendant purchased a lot from plaintiff, paying $100 as a deposit thereon. He entered into possession and made considerable alterations to the property. He then refused to pay over balance of purchase money or give up possession. Plaintiff made application under V. & P. Act for specific performance of contract of purchase. Defendant pleaded that there were several outstanding legacies under a will, charged against said lot:—Held, that the legacies in question were barred by Statute of Limitations and as the vendor had power to sell, and as the purchaser had gone into possession that the defendant must pay over the balance of the purchase money and interest thereon, since he went into possession. Mulholand v. Morris (1909), 14 O. W. R. 1112, 1 O. W. N. 214, 20 O. L. R. 27.

Part performance — Delivery of deed in escrow — Statute of Frauds.]—As part of the consideration for the sale of a house and lot to the plaintiff, the defendant verbally agreed to take an assignment of the plaintiff's interest in certain farming lands under an agreement of purchase from one E., provided that one B, would take a lease of the lands. A deed of the house and lot and an assignment of the agreement of sale were prepared and executed and left with the defendant's solicitors in escrow:—Held, that the plaintiff's failure to secure B. as a tenant barred his right to specific performance, as did also the fact that the plaintiff had, pending the action, lost his interest in the farm lands through cancelpation by E. of the agreement.—2. The receipt by the plaintiff of a payment of rent from the tenant of the house, without the consent or acquiescence of the defendant, was not such a part performance of the contract as would take the case out of the Statute of Frauds.—Semble, that the documents left in escrow could not bused as evidence of the verbal agreement sufficient to take it out of the statute. Vanderwoort v. Hall, 18 Man. L. R. 682.

Parties-Costs.] — The defendant held two half sections of land from the Canatwo hair sections of land from the Cana-dian Pacific Railway Co. under interim re-ceipts signed on behalf of the company ac-knowledging payment of $160 on each, stating the price, and expressed to be given subject to the conditions of the company, and pending completion of agreement for the purchase of said land." The plaintiff afterwards agreed to buy the defendant's interest in the land for $1,440 and to assume the debt still due to the company. He paid $720 cash, and was to pay the other $720 in 30 days on receiving assignments from the defendant of the agreements of sale to be given by the company. When the 30 days expired the defendant had not yet procured the agreements from the company but offered to assign them to the plaintiff and hand over interim receipts on payment of the money :-Held, that the plaintiff was not bound to accept such offer, but was entitled to withhold the money until the defendant should procure the agreements from the company and hand them over with assignments. After the receipt of the company agreements, the defendant refused to carry out the sale to the plaintiff, and entered into an agreement to sell one of the parcels to one W., who was aware of the plaintiff's claim.— Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to specific performance by the pa De De ste Jo Possessory title — Knowledge of purchaser — Easement — Extinguishment.]—Purchaser's action for specific performance. Vendor claimed to have a good possessory title to a 20-foot road or lane laid out on a plan:—Held, that vendor had not shewn that rights of dominant tenements east and west of this property had been extinguished. Plaintiff knew there was some question of defendant's title to this lane.—Held, that plaintiff did not know it was impossible to get a good title thereto. Currah v. Ray. 13 O. W. R. 652, 1071.

Prior agreement to sell same property.]—Plaintiff brought action for specific performance of an agreement for sale of land: — Held, that specific performance should not be decreed, nor damages awarded in lieu thereof, as the parties entered into the agreement under a mistake, as to the effect of a prior agreement made with W. for sale of same property, and plaintiff having had notice of the prior agreement, the action should be dismissed, but under the circumstances without costs. Bouley v. Cornelius (1910), 15 O. W. R. 414, 1 O. W. N. 526.

Purchase-money - Payment to vendor's agent - Scope of authority not to receive purchase-money.] - An action for specific performance of an agreement to sell plain-tiff three lots in New Liskeard for $850, which plaintiff alleged and defendant dewhich phibatin angle and detendant de-nied that he had paid. At trial Mulock, C.J.ExD., 18 O. W. R. 350, 2 O. W. N. 560, entered judgment declaring payment by plain-tiff to Weaver of the purchase money ($850), was payment to defendant, and ordering specific performance, with costs. Divisional Court held, that this was another instance of the deplorable litigation which arises between two innocent parties who have been wronged by a trusted intermediary, and the apparently hard rule usually is that he who trusts most has to suffer most. The defendant's letter made it clear that Weaver was agent to complete the sale, but was not agent to receive the purchase-money. There was simply a breach of trust in the application of the money as between the plaintiff and Weaver, but no satisfaction of the price as between the parties to the action. Appeal as between the parties to the action. Appear allowed with costs and judgment for defend-ant with costs. Hendry v. Wismer (1911), 19 O. W. R. 204, 2 O. W. N. 1054. Sale by vender to another — Purchaser for value without notice — Damages — Fraud — Amendment — Costs — Cancellation of contract - Notice.]-The plaintiff made an agreement in writing for the purchase of the land in question from the purchase of the land in question from the defendant H., paid $200 on account, went into possession, and erected a good house on the lot. The title to it was under the Real Property Act. The plaintiff did not register his agreement. Some time afterwards the defendant R. procured an assignment from H. to himself of the agreement from the defendant is the state of the transfer of the title to the contract of the c ment, and also a transfer of the title to the lot. The trial Judge found that these transfor, The thal Judge found that these transfers were obtained by fraudulent promises on the part of R, or his solicitor to protect the plaintiff's interests. R. afterwards transferred the lot for value to the defendant P., who was not proved to have had any notice or knowledge of the plaintiff's rights or that he was in possession of the property:—Held, that the plaintiff could not have specific performance of the agreement as against P., but should be allowed to remove the house from the lot if he desired.—In his statement of claim the plaintiff had asked only for specific performance of the agreement, but, under the power conferred on the Court by s. 38 (k), of the King's Bench Act, and Rules 344 and 346, as to amendment of the pleadings, if found necessary, the Court, having found the denecessary, the Court having found the defendant R, guilty of fraud, granted the plain-tiff further relief against him by ordering him to pay the plaintiff, by way of dam-ages, what he had paid to H, on the lot with interest.—Action dismissed as against the defendants H, and P.—Held, as to costs, that the defendant R, should be ordered to pay not only the plaintiff's costs, but also those of his co-defendants directly to them: those of his co-defendants directly to them: Daniel's Ch. Pr., 7th ed., p. 980.—Rudow v. Great Britain Mutual Life Assurance Society, 17 Ch. D. 600, followed.—There were two clauses in the agreement providing for cancellation in case of default, the first say-ing that, after such default, the vendor might cancel with or without notice, the second providing for the manner of giving the nouce of default .- Held, that the vendor might elect to adopt one or other of such modes of cancellation; that, if he elected to cancel without giving notice, he could not do so by a mere operation of his mind, but must do something by which he gives the purchaser clearly to understand that he decides to avoid the contract, and that the relation of vendor and purchaser no longer exists between them, or do some act directly affecting the vendee in his position or interest, as, for example, a sale to another. McCord v. Harper, 26 C. P. 104, and, on the other hand, if he adopts the and, on the other hand, it he adopts the mode of cancellation by notice, he must con-form strictly to the mode prescribed. The agreement which had fallen through was to be taken up anew, the purchaser to pay £100 additional. The intended purchaser then repudiated the agreement and requested the vendor to convey to another:—Held. that the agreement cannot be enforced against the defendant, and that plaintiffs are entitled to damages from C. Limited. Clisidell v, Lovell, 12 O. W. R. 90, 13 O. O. W. R. 748.

Shortage in dimensions — Reduction in purchase price.]—When, in a deed of sale of immovable property, the description contains an estimate of its superficies, but refers to it under its cadastral number and, to more clearly define it, gives the adjoining properties, the purchaser cannot claim a reduction in the purchase price if the dimensions are found to be short. Bessette v. Seguin (1911), 39 Que. S. C. 473.

Subsequent deficiency in acreage Subsequent denciency in acreage—
Action by purchaser for specific performance with abatement in price—Mutual mistake—Executed contract—Remedy— Rescission — Option — Election founded allegation of fraud — Costs.] — Where, on a sale of lands, there is a mutual mistake, going not necessarily to an essential, but to a material, substantial, and important element of the contract, the Court will ordinarily order rescission, even though the contract has been completely executed, if it can do so on equitable terms.-Where, therefore, the vendor and purchaser had contracted for the sale and purchase of a block of land under a common mistake that it contained 160.86 acres, whereas, in fact, it contained only 97 acres :- Held, that the deficiency was so material, substantial, and important an element as to entitle the purchaser to relief, although the contract had been completely executed by conveyance.—

Held, in the circumstances, that the purchaser, the plaintiff was entitled to have the contract rescinded, and his purchase money returned with interest, and a fair sum for compensation for permanent improvements made by him; but with the option to the defendant of paying to the plaintiff com-pensation for the deficiency in acreage.—As this relief was not claimed by the plaintiff, who sued for specific performance an abatement in the price, or in the alternative for damages by reason of the deficiency, which the Court refused, and, as the plaintiff had made unfounded allegations of fraud, the plaintiff was refused his costs. De Clerval v. Jones, 8 W. L. R. 300, 1 Alta, L. R. 286.

Time of essence.] — Defendant agreed to take up plaintiff's interest in certain property on the 1st December if the latter decided to dispose of it. Plaintiff asked defendant to buy on 4th December, but defendant then said it was too late:—Held, that plaintiff must succeed as he had come with sufficient promptness. Hill v. Rove, 9 W. L. R. 302.

13. STATUTE OF FRAUDS.

Alternative payment of money—Validity of, in part—County Court appeal—Divisional Courts—Independent judgment.]
—Although a part of a contract for the sale and purchase of land may not be binding under the Statute of Frauds, another part of it, if in the alternative and distinct from the agreement to purchase—e.g., that either party will pay to the other named sum if he does not fulfil his agreement to sell or purchase—may, on his refusal to do so, be enforced against the party refusing. Review of English and American cases—A Divisional Court, being the Court of last resort on appeal from a County Court, should, on such an appeal, give an independent judgment. Canadian Bank of Commerce v. Perram, 31 O. R. 116, followed. Mercier v. Campbell, 9 O. W. R. 101, 14 O. L. R. 639.

Authority to agent to sign offer.]—The defendant verbally expressed her willingness to sell the land in question, which was her property, to the plaintiff for $300, but referred him to her husband, who was not then living with her. The plaintiff then obtained from the husband a document, signed by him, giving the plaintiff an option, to hold good for one week, to purchase the land at that price. The plaintiff alleged that within the week he handed to the defendant a letter addressed to her husband containing an absolute acceptance of the offer. This letter was not produced at the trial. The plaintiff had kept no copy of it, but undertook to give the contents of it in his evidence. The offer did not contain a sufficient description of the property. The defendant and her husband both swore that the defendant had not given her husband any authority to sign the offer—Held, that Evidence to connect documents Sufficiency of a statement of consideration and terms. 1—In an action for a specific perand terms.]—In an action for a specine per-formance against a vendor, the evidence to satisfy the Statute of Frauds consisted of a receipt signed by the plaintiff for $50, "to apply on equity on Canadian Pacific Rail-way land," describing it "at $5.50 per acre," and a letter from the vendor offering to return the $50 and referring to the sale as having been "declared off long before." The agreement alleged was to sell the land at $5.50 per acre, the purchaser paying off the balance due the railway company out of his purchase money:—Held, that the letter from the defendant could be used with the receipt to satisfy the Statute, although it repudiated the sale.—Held, however, that the require-ments of the Statute of Frauds were not satisfied, the writing indicating an agreement to sell for $5.50 per acre, subject to the railway company's claim and not the agreement alleged. The plaintiff had done some breaking upon the lands without the knowledge of the defendant.—Held, that the breaking done upon the lands by the plaintiff, being unknown to the defendant, could not be relied upon to show the part performance of the agreement. Berry v. Scott (1906), 6 Terr. L. R. 369.

Memorandum in writing — Purchaser not named — Cheque — Ageney, 1 — A writing signed by the defendant not under seal agreeing to sell a parcel of land for $2,000 on terms stated, and acknowledging the receipt of a cheque for $100 deposit on same, but not mentioning the name of any person as purchaser or containing anything to indicate who the purchaser is, is not a sufficient memorandum in writing to bind the defendant under the Statute of Fraudis; and, if the person whose name is signed to the cheque is not acting as the agent of the purchaser in the transaction, the cheque and the agreement do not together constitute such sufficient memorandum. Pearce v. Gardner, [1897] 1 Q. B. 688, distinguished. Grant v. Reid, 5 W. L. R. 361, 10 Man. L. R. 527.

Memorandum in writing incomplete as to terms — Admission of terms by plaintiff — Parol evidence — Purchaser for value — Enforcement of contract against — Notice to solicitor — Registry laux — Misconduct — Costal.] — The action was brought to compel specific performance of an agreement for the sale by the defendant S. to the plaintiff of a house and premises. The plaintiff paid $10 on account of his purchase and obtained the following receipt signed by S.: "Hamilton, Oct. 10, 1904. Received from Mr. Edwin Green the sum of ten dollars on house and lot number 328 East avenue sold by Mr. James Stevenson for $350 by paying (fifty dollars) to Mr. Stevenson, allowing one-half for lawyers' fees, also paying water rates. Balance $40 on house." S. afterwards sold and conveyed the property to the defendant B. for $425. The plaintiff admitted that the agreement only made was for a sale of $400, payable $50 in cash and $350 by the assumption of an existing mortgage, and for sumption of an existing mortgage, and for payment by the plaintiff of the taxes for 1904 and interest upon the mortgage since the 14th May. The receipt was the only memorandum of the bargain. The solicitor for B, had full knowledge of the previous sale to the plaintiff, and it was held that this was notice to B., who was thus deprived of the protection of the Registry Act. The second point ruled was that the receipt plainly shewed a contract for a sale at $400, of which $350 was to be paid by the assumption of the existing mortgage and $50 in cash; and the third that the receipt sufficiently shewed that Edwin Green was the purchaser. The defendants escaped, however, upon the fourth question raised, however, upon the fourth question raised, which, like the second and third, depended upon the Statute of Frauds-the omission from the receipt of all reference to the special terms as to interest and taxes. The defendants averred that these terms were part of the bargain, and the plaintiff admitted that it was so, and expressed his willingness to perform that part of the contract as a to perform that part of the contract as a condition of obtaining specific performance. The Court (distinguishing Martin v. Pycroft, 2 De G. M. & G. 785). reductantly gave effect to this defence. "The receipt," said Anglin, J., "not purporting to contain the whole terms of the bargain, offers no legal impediment to the introduction of parol evidence to prove terms which it omits. The contract was, for aught that appears to the contrary, designedly left in part parol. Its special equitable jurisdiction not being invoked by the defendant or requisite to his defence, the Court is not in a position to impose terms upon him. He defeats the plaintiff's claim without any indulgence which it is peculiarly the province of a court of equity to afford. By evidence admissible in any court he shews a parol contract of which only some of the terms are evidenced as required by the Statute of Frauds. His defence is thus complete. By no known process can those terms be put in a writing signed by the defendant. Nothing less can constitute an enforceable agreement so long as the Statute of Frauds prevails. There is no fraud, no mistake, even if it would suffice, to enable the Court to avoid the effect of the statute; nor part performance to satisfy it in the absence of a sufficient memorandum. Green v. Steven-son, 25 C. L. T. 354, 5 O. W. R. 761, 9 O. L. R. 671.

Memorandum of agreement — Signature of party charged or his agent—Tender of convegance.]—An agent to purchase or sell land need not be authorised in writing in order to bind his principal. It is sufficient, under the Statute of Frauds, if the agent, though authorised only by parol, has signed an agreement in writing so as to satisfy the statute—2. The writing of the purchaser's name near the beginning of a written agreement of sale, prepared by a solicitor under the instructions of the purchaser's duly authorised agent, may be a sufficient signature by the purchaser's agent within the meaning of the statute, although the agreement is signed by the vendor only. McMillan v. Bentley, 16 Gr. 387, Evans v. Hoare, [1892] 1 Que. B. 593, and Schneider v. Norris, 2 M. & S. 286, followed.—3. When the purchaser has formally refused to carry out the purchase, it is not necessary for the vendor to tender a conveyance of the land before commencing an action to recover the purchase money.—Il-lustration of correspondence and documents together constituting a memorandum in writing sufficient to satisfy the Statute of Frauds in a case of a sale of land. McIlevride v, Mills, 16 Man. L. R. 276.

No name of purchaser in memoran-dum — Laches — Agent's duty to furnish name of purchaser.]—Action for specific performance of an alleged contract by the defendant to sell to the plaintiff two lots of land. The writing relied on was an acknowledgment signed by the agents for the de-fendant (naming firm) of having received from B. & R. $25 deposit on the purchase of the lots, describing them, with the price and terms of sale. The plaintiff asserted that he was the purchaser, though his name that he was the purchaser, though B. & R. did not appear in the agreement. B. & R. fence was that the agreement did not comply with the requirements of the Statute of Frauds, as the name of the purchaser did not appear in it; that the plaintiff by his laches had disentitled himself to specific performance of the agreement; and that, on account of the default of the plaintiff, the defendant had rescinded the agreement:— Held, that the plaintiff had not made out a case entitling him to specific performance of the agreement in question, and the action should be dismissed with costs. note or memorandum of an agreement for the sale of real estate must contain the names of the contracting parties, or such a description of them that there cannot be a fair dispute as to their identity. The term "vendor" is not in itself a sufficient description of one of the contracting parties: Potter v. Duffeld, L. R. 18 Eq. 4; Williams v. Jordon, 6 Ch. D. 517; White v. Tomalin, 19 O. R. 513. In the present case the purchaser was neither named nor described in the agreement. As the agreement did not comply with the requirements of the Statute of Frauds, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. Maber v. Penkalski, 24 C. L. T. 407.

Resolution by municipal corpora-tion — Acceptance of offer to purchase — Evidence - Written instruments - Statute of Frauds - Estoppel.]-T. offered to purchase lands which the municipality had bid in at a tax sale, and to pay therefor the amount of the arrears of taxes and costs. The council resolved to accept "the amount of taxes, costs, and interest" against the lands, and authorised the reeve and clerk to issue a deed at that price:-Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, that, even if communicated to T. as an acceptance of his offer, this resolution would have raised no contract, on account of the variation made by the addition of interest. An instrument, which was never delivered to T., was executed by the reeve and clerk of the municipality, in the statutory form of conveyance upon a sale for taxes, reciting the above resolution, but without a reference to any contract in pursuance of the resolution, and about two months after the passing of the resolution, upon receipt of another offer for the same lands, the council resolved to intimate to the person making the second offer "that the lot had been sold to T.:"—Held, that these circumstances could not be relied upon as an admission of a prior contract of sale.—Held, also, that, even if it could be inferred that contractual relations had been established between T. and the municipality, it did not appear that there had been any written communication in respect thereto made on behalf of the municipality, and, consequently, the alleged admission of a contract did not satisfy the Statute of Frauds, and could have no effect. District of North Vancouver v. Tracy, 24 C. L. T. 114, 34 S. C. R. 132.

The agreement alleged was to sell the land at $5.50 per acre, the purchaser paying off the balance due the railway company out of his purchase money:—Held, that the letter from the defendant could be used with the receipt to satisfy the statute, although it repudiated the sale .- Held, however, that the requirements of the Statute of Frauds were not satisfied, the writing indicating an agreement to sell for $5.50 per acre, subject to the railway company's claim and not the agreement alleged .- The plaintiff had done some breaking upon the lands without the knowledge of the defendant .-Held, that the breaking done upon the lands by the plaintiff, being unknown to the defendant, could not be relied upon to shew the part performance of the agreement. An intending purchaser of land who has been guilty of laches, bad faith, and default for a considerable time in payment of the cash stipulated for, disentitles himself to the exercise of the judicial discretion to grant specific performance in his favour. Maber v. Penskalski, 24 C. L. T. 407, 15 Man. J. R. 236.

Specific performance — Possession.]
—The land which the defendant agreed to purchase from the plaintiff for the sum of $5,000 was subject to mortgages and registered judgments for the mortgages and registered judgments for the mortgages and registered judgments for the purchase money, and he undertook to neget the subject of the purchase money, and he undertook to necessary the sum of the purchase money. And he undertook to necessary the sum of the purchase money and he undertook to necessary the sum of the purchase money. The sum of the purchase money is so not as a loan can be arrangement the defendant was to pay the purchase money in soon as a loan can be arrangement the defendant was to pay the purchase money in a soon as to when the purchaser was to have possession of the property, and the plaintiff remained in possession during the negotiations for completion, which lasted about nine months:—Held, that specific performance of the agreement should be refused, on the following grounds: (1) the plaintiff had failed to shew a clear title of his ability to give such a title; (2) such failure caused such delay in the defendant getting possession that it would be a great hardship on him to enforce the contract, as specific performance is purely a discretionary remedy available according to the equities of each case: Fry on Specific Performance, p. 183 et 'req., (3) the provisions in the agreement that the purchase money was to be paid "as soon as a loan can be arranged" was so indefinite, obscure, and uncertain as to render the contract incapable of being the subject of an action for specific performance:

Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, vol. 26, p. 137, Major v. Nhepherd, 18 Man. L. R. 504, 10 W. L. R. 298.

Specific performance — Transfer in blank—Mortague back—Payment by instalments.]—A transfer of land, in the statuents.]—A transfer of land, in the statuents.]—A transfer of land, in the statuents. In complete except for the insertion of the name of any person as the person by whom the consideration has been paid or as transferee, is a sufficient memorandum under the Statute of Frauds to charge the transferor; the person who paid the consideration being identifiable by parol evidence, and for form of transfer requiring the insertion of his name in both blank spaces.—in an action in which the plantifit relies upon such a transfer as the memorandum to satisfy the statute, but admits that the purchase price was not all paid, the agreement being that part of it should be payable by instalments, secured by mortgage, the defendant cannot rely upon this to shew that the transfer is not a complete memorandum containing all the terms of the agreement, since to contradict the acknowledgment in the transfer he must accept the admission of non-payment. Taylor v. Grant, 3 W. L. R. 254, 6 Terr. I. R. 353.

Time of essence — Time for completion Delay of purchaser—Default of vendor to tender conveyance-Duty as to preparation--Misdescription of land-Statute of Frauds-Misrepresentation—Mistake — Specific per-formance.]—The contract for the sale and purchase of land set up by the plaintiff, the purchaser, consisted of a written offer by purchaser, consisted of a written oncer by him to buy and a written acceptance by the defendant of his offer. The off-r contained, inter alia, the following provisions: "This offer to be accepted by September 25th, A.D. 1906, otherwise void, and sale to be completed on or before the 10th day of Oc-tober, 1906." "Time shall be of the essence of this offer." "Deed . . . to be prepared at the expense of the vendor and mort-gage at my expense:"—Held, that time was gage at my expense: —Held, that time was of the essence as to all the terms of the contract; but that the duty of the purchaser to make tender of his purchase money did not arise until the vendor had done that which was incumbent upon her to do to put herself in a position to complete the sale; it was her duty to prepare the conveyance and her duty to prepare the conveyance and submit the same for approval, having regard to the provision last quoted; and, having failed to do so, her default precluded her from setting up the lapse of the time at which the sale should have been completed as an answer to the plaintiff's claim for specific an answer to the plaintill's claim for specific performance. — Among the words of de-scription of the parcel of land in ques-tion, the contract contained the words, "being the premises known as number 22 Ann street." The correct number was 24; there was no number 22; and the defendant owned no other property in Ann street:— Held, that, there being a description which identified the parcel without the aid of the street number, the words quoted might be rejected as surplusage, and there remained sufficient, with parol evidence, to satisfy the Statute of Frauds; Osler, J.A., debutante.—Held, also, upon the evidence, that misrepresentation and mistake such as would afford ground for refusing specific performance were not shewn.—Judgment of a Divisional Court, 15 O. L. R. 362, awarding specific performance, affirmed. Foster v. Anderson, 16 O. L. R. 565, 11 O. W. R.

Transfer in blank.] - A transfer of land in the statutory form complete ex-cept for the insertion of the name of any person as the person by whom the consideration has been paid or as transferee, is a sufficient memorandum under the statute of Frauds to charge the transferor, the person who paid the consideration being identifiable by parol evidence, and the form of transfer requiring the insertion of his name in both blank spaces. Where in an action in which the plaintiff relies upon such a transfer as the memorandum to satisfy the statute, but admits that the purchase price was not all paid, the agreement being that part of it should be payable by instalments, secured by mortgage, the defendant cannot rely upon this to show that the transfer is not a complete memorandum containing all the terms of the agreement, since to contradict the acknowledgment in the transfer he must accept the admission as a whole, not only as an admission of non-payment. Grant (1906), 6 Terr. L. R. 353. Taylor V.

Written agreement — Oral evidence to shew true agreement—Admissibility —

Agreement partly written and partly oral — Statute of Frauds — Rectification — Immaterial collateral conditions-Specific performance with addition of terms.]-When two parties enter into a formal written agreement for the sale and purchase of land containing all the particulars necessary to make it bind-ing under the Statute of Frauds and all the terms they intended to embody in it, and there is no suggestion of accident, fraud, or mistake in the preparation or execution of it, specific performance of it may be decreed. notwithstanding that the parties at the same time verbally agreed upon a number of col-lateral agreements or subsidiary conditions for conveniently carrying out the written agreement, and notwithstanding the Statute of Frauds.—The following variations of or additions to the written contract made in that way in this case were held not to stand in the way of specific performance being decreed, the plaintiff being willing to carry out the agreement as thereby modified:—I. out the agreement as thereby modified;—I. The vendor was to allow a deduction of $30 per acre from the price mentioned for any deficiency in the estimated acreage that might be found on actual measurement.—2. The purchaser agreed to accept possession at a date two weeks later than the time fixed by the agreement for taking possession .- 3. Taxes, interest on a mortgage, and insurance premiums were to be adjusted as of the date of the agreement, which was silent on these points.-4. It was understood that, although the plaintiff had a certificate of title under the Real Property Act, the defendant's solicitor was to examine the title and see if it was all right, whilst the written contract declared that the purchaser accepted the vendor's title and should not be entitled to call for an abstract or evidence of title or any deeds, papers, or documents other than those in the possession of the vendor. The title not being satisfactory, plaintiff demanded his deposit back, and on defendant's refusal, brought action. At trial judgment was given for plaintiff for $301.68 and costs. Divisional Court allowed defendant's appeal with costs. Judgment below set aside and judgment entered for defendant dismissing the action without costs. Cotton v. Medcalf (1910), 15 O. W. R. 787.

Agreement for sale of land — Tender of transfer from third party—Action for purchase money — Repudiation—Penalty—Specific performance—Election.]—Where at the time of an agreement for sale and purchase of land, the title to the land stool in the name of the vendor's wife, but the vendor obtained and tendered a transfer from his wife to the purchaser before the purchaser repudiated the agreement:—Held, following Paisley v. Wills, 19 O. R. 303, 18 A. R. 210, that the purchaser was liable to an action for balance of purchase money. Right to repudiate discussed. If a thing be agreed to be done, though there be a penalty annexed to secure its performance, by et the very thing itself must be done, and the Court will not permit the person on whom the penalty rests to resist specific performance by electing to pay the penalty. Hamilton v. McNeill, 2 Terr. L. R. 31.

Application under Vendors and Purchasers Act — Scope of — No dispute as to validity of contract—Question of title—Registered title standing in name of two persons, one of whom is dead—Survivor desiring to sell—Affidavit that deceased had no interest—Refusal to declare title valid on summary application. Re Farmer & Reid, 12 O. W. R. 1076.

Breach by vendor — Guaranty of title—Assignment of contract—Feilure of title—Representation of interest—Cause of action—Pleading — Damages, 1—Action by purchaser for damages for breach of contract for sale and purchase of land. Defendant, a foreigner, while not expressly guaranteeing title to certain lots, led plaintiff to believe he was; although believing he had, yet he had no title to them. Plaintiff had transferred certain property to defendant, the part of the consideration being defendant's supposed interest in said lots. Damages equal in amount to said interest given to plaintiff. Graham V. Dremin (Man.), 9 W. L. R. 641.

or sketch of the land conveyed, but which he did not supply. When the defendant received his deed, he applied for registry, but it was refused, owing to the non-registration of plaintiff's title. On request, plaintiff refused to obtain the necessary map, and then defendant had a survey made of plaintiff's block and plan prepared, when defendant succeeded in having his deed registered. It was compulsion of law, forcing him to protect his interest. Section 71 above requires a map or sketch made from the survey, not a mere picture of the survey. Defendant, on his counterclaim, received amount paid surveyor, and a reasonable sum for his expenses in having survey made. Alder v. Letion, 11 W. L. R. 23.

Charge — Assessment — Municipal bylaw. — A charge upon immorables imposed by a municipal by-law is apparent within the meaning of Art. 1508, C. C. Therefore, a vendor is not obliged to guarantee his purchaser against special assessments imposed or exigible after the sale by virtue of a bylaw in force at the time the sale is made. Bourdon v. Deslongchamps, 16 Que. K. B. 163.

Completion — Delivery of registrable conveyance—Repudiation before completion—Immoral purpose of purchaser—Defective decacription—Operative deed.1—The plaintiff, through an agent, negotiated a sale of land, and had executive deed.1—The plaintiff, through an agent, negotiated a sale of land, and had executed conveyances, and received part of the purchase money, when he heard that the purchaser intention was to allow the land to be used for immoral purposes, and refused to complete unless some assurance to the contrary should be given. Meanwhile the conveyance had been sent to the registry office and returned unserption. The plaintiff inserted words to dearly the land properly, and also a provision by which the land should be forfeited and returned to the owner in case a house of ill-fame should be erected and maintained thereon. The deed thus altered was registered by the purchaser, and the transaction completed by payment to the plaintiff, the forfeiture clause not having been noticed by the purchaser. The bintiff brought this action claiming a reconveyance on the ground of breach of the above condition:—Held, that as between the plaintiff and the vendee the transaction had been completed when the deed was sent back to the former from the registry office for correction; and the conveyance was operative to pass the property, the fault in the description merely rendering it equivocal and causing latent ambiguity, which might be removed by extrinsic evidence; and the plaintiff could derive no right under the condition inserted, even if in form valid, because made without consent after the execution and delivery of the deed.—Judgment of Boyd, C., 12 O. L. R. 529, 8 O. W. R. 151, reversed. Owen v. Mercier, 10 O. W. R. 11, 14 O. L. R. 491.

Conditional devise over to children of named woman — Possibility of issue extinct — Presumption — Evidence.]—Land was devised to the vendor for life with remainder to her son in fee, subject to a devise over to the children of M., a married woman, in the event of the vendor's son dying without issue. The son was living and had had issue, and he and the existing children of M.

(all being of age) had conveyed their interests to the vendor. M. was now a widew and 54 years of age:—Held, on an application under the Vendors and Purchasers Act, that the Court should, without evidence as to the physical condition of M., act on the presumption that there would be no further issue of her body, and declare that the vendor could make a good title in fee simple—such a title as could be forced upon an unwilling purchaser. In re Tinning & Weber. 25 C. L. T. 38, 8 O. L. R. 703, 4 O. W. R. 514.

Contract for sale - Payment - Conveyance—Dependent obligations — Title Dower - Payment into Court-Costs.]--By an agreement entered into between plaintiff and defendant for the sale of land, it was provided that if the process money was paid by instalments the door was to be given when and not before the last alment was paid. If defendant exercised his option and paid the whole purchase money at any time within four years, then the deed was to be given when the money was paid :-Held, that the obligations were mutual and dependent, and that the acts were performed concur-rently. By the terms of the agreement, a good title was to be given, and this could not be done, as a release of dower could not be obtained, but defendant signified his willingness to retain possession and to accept compensation. The matter being a small one, and there being some question as to the jurisdiction of the County Court to afford relief: Held, that the matter should be transferred to this Court, and the judgment for defend-ant in the County Court set aside, that the plaintiff should have leave to apply to Chambers to ascertain the value of the dower, and that the balance of the purchase money should be paid into Court within one month after the ascertainment of the value of the dower; otherwise defendant should be taken to have abandoned his option, and plaintif should have judgment for the amount of his claim with costs.—Held, that plaintiff's claim being for an amount under $80, costs must be taxed according to the scale of the County Court in such cases. Arenburg v. Wagner, 33 N. S. R. 396.

Covenant running with land—Building restriction affecting title of vendor— Insk of action for damages for breach. Ham & Cameron, Re (1910), 1 O. W. N. 821.

Crown lands — Vendors not covenanting for title—Knowledge of purchaser that tendors not owners of land—Application by vendors to Crown Lands Department—Expenditure of money by purchaser on improvements.]—Action to compel defendants to convey certain lands to plaintiffs and for damages. The defendants were settling Crown lands and plaintiff applied for a portion of a lot. The defendants informed him that it might be required by the Government for a town site:—Held, that contract not absolute but subject to contingency above. There was no covenant as to title. There was no legal duty on defendants to notify plaintiff that land was wanted for a town site. Estoppel does not apply as plaintiff had knowledge of all the facts. Appeal allowed. Defendants have paid into Court all moneys received from plaintiff. Moore v. Ontario Vet. Land Co. (1909), 14

Defective title — Improvements by purchaser — Compensation — Estoppel.]—Held, that defendant, an agent, who had acquired title to certain property, held as trustee for plaintiff, he being manager for plaintiff company, and, under the circumstances, is estopped from setting up his deed. Empire V. Patrick, 6 E. L. R. 266.

Deferred payment - Default - Forfeiture of down payment - Failure of vendors to make title.]—By an agreement of the 2nd November, 1908, the plaintiff agreed to buy and the defendants to sell lands, the object of the plaintiff being the exploitation of a gypsum deposit. The price was to be $18,000, of which $1,500 was payable on the execution of the agreement, and the balance on the 1st May, 1909, and, in addition, 2 per cent. of the total shares of a company to be formed by the plaintiff for the purpose of mining the gypsum. The date for delivery of the shares was not stated, but, by the agreement, the plaintiff undertook to have the incorporation of the company completed before the 1st May, 1909. The plaintiff was also to be at liberty to sell the lands. and if he sold them before the 1st May, 1909, he was, in lieu of the shares, to pay $4,000 or more, according to the amount obtained, to the defendants. The defendants agreed to convey the lands after payment of the purchase money and delivery of the shares, and they covenanted that they had a good title. The plaintiff was given immediate possession, with liberty to mine until default in payment of the purchase price, and, in case of such default, the defendants were to be at liberty to repossess, and all payments made by the plaintiff were to be forfeited, and time was made of the essence. The first payment of $1,500 was made, but the defendants had not obtained a patent for the land on the 1st May, 1909, and the plaintiffs had not formed the company, and he did not pay or tender the $16,500 on the 1st May, 1909. On the 3rd May the de-fendants notified him that the contract was cancelled, and he accepted this, and demanded back the $1,500 paid, and brought this action therefor: — Held, that evidence to shew that the Department of the Interior, which was to issue the patent, had on occa-sions allowed an assignment of the claim to a patent to be filed was inadmissible; but, even if admissible, it was not shewn that the plaintiff had agreed to accept such an assignment in lieu of a deed; the plaintiff knew the nature of the title, but expected that the title would be in the hands of the defendants by the 1st May.-The defendants were bound under the covenants in the agreement to deliver a title in fee simple to the plaintiff, on his paying the balance of the purchase money on the 1st May, 1909, and on delivery of the shares or payment of the additional money in the event of a sale; and, not being in a position to give title, they were not in a position to forfeit the $1,500 paid; and the plaintiff was entitled to a return of it, in all the circumstances. Tuhten v. Loewen (1910), 13 W. L. R. 374.

Doubtful title — Forcing on purchaser. Re Campbell & Horwood, 1 O. W. R. 139.

Execution against vendor — Registration of purchaser's title.]—Where the vendor has continued in open and public possession of the immovable sold, and the title of acquisition had not been registered by the purchaser until after the seizure of the property by a third party, under a judgment against the vendor, the registration is without effect as regards the seizing party. Bernard v. Demers, 17 Que. S. C. 402.

Failure of title as to parts of land contracted to be sold — Materiality to purchasers — Specific performance refused — Offer to substitute equivalents — Expert evidence — Return of part of purchase money paid — Expenses incurred by vendors — Costs — Multiplicity of actions—Interest.] — Appeals from judgment, 12 O. W. R. 706, dismissed. Clarkson v. Crawford, Bayer v. Clarkson (1909), 14 O. W. R. 410.

Failure of vendor to make title to part — Repudiation by purchaser — Let-ters — Rescission of contract — Purchaser's lien for purchase price — Interest—Specific performance.]-The defendant agreed to sell a section of land to the plaintiff, a portion of the purchase price being paid down, and the balance payable on deferred payments. The defendant did not have any title to onehalf of the land sold, nor could he procure On this being communicated to the purchasers, it was arranged that the money purchasers, it was arranged that the money paid should be applied in payment of that portion of the land for which the vendor could give title. The vendor did not carry out this arrangement, but, later, offered to return the money. To this suggestion the purchaser acceded, but demanded interest. No money being re-paid, the purchaser then write the vander or two occasions demands. wrote the vendor on two occasions demanding the money, and, getting no response, brought an action for specific performance: —Held, that when a person sells property which he is neither able to convey himself, nor has the power to compel a conveyance of from any other person, the purchaser, so soon as he finds that to be the case, may rescind the contract and recover back his purchase money.—2. That upon payment of a portion of the purchase price the vendor became the trustee of the purchaser to convey to the purchaser the ownership of a corresponding portion of the estate, and the purchaser was therefore entitled to a lien upon that portion of the land to which the vendor had title to the extent of the pur-chase price paid by him. Bannerman v. Green, 1 Sask. L. R. 394, 8 W. L. R. 441.

Failure of vendor to procure title—fight of purchaser to damages — Duty of wendor — Statute of Frauds.]—The plain-tiff applied to the defendants in writing to purchase certain lands, upon stated terms. The defendants, bona fide believing that they had the right to sell the land, sent the plain-tiff a formal contract for the sale thereof, which he executed and returned. The defendants subsequently found that they could not secure the land, the same having been previously sold by the company for which they were agents. The evidence disclosed that they had done everything in their power to secure the land from the company for which they were acting: but had not applied to the party to whom such company had sold for the purpose of securing the same. It also appeared that they had not notified the plaintiff of their inability to secure the land for nearly six months after they learned that it was not obtainable. In an action by the purchaser for specific performance or damages:—Held, that the exception to the ordinary rule of law rendering a party unable to complete a contract liable to damages, obtaining in the English Courts in cases of contracts for sale of land, exempting a vendor from liability in damages in the event of inability to complete title, being founded on the uncertainty of title prevailing in England, did not apply here, where the system of land titles was simple and certain; and therefore the ordinary rules applicable to contracts applied, and the defendants were therefore liable in damages .zeea, turther, that in any event the defend-ants were liable, as it did not appear that they had applied to the party entitled to sell the land for a title, and had not acted promptly on learning of their inability to procure title. G'Neill v. Drinkle, 1 Sask. L. R. 402, S. W. L. R. 937. Held, further, that in any event the defend-

Failure to make title—Action to recover deposit—Defence of husband and wife—Severing.]—Plaintiff brought action to recover $200, amount paid as a deposit on an agreement to purchase a house from defendants who failed to make title. Defendant Thos, S., alleged that he could give and offered to give possession, and counterclaimed for $200 for breach of contract and his wife denied making any contract with plaintiff.—Boyd, C., gave plaintiff judgment for $200 with interest and costs against defendant Thos, S. and dismissed his counterclaim without costs. Action against defendant wife dismissed without costs. Parkev v. Sanderson (1911), 18 O. W. R. 368, 2 O. W. N. 586.

Failure to make title-Description of land-Tender of deed of transfer-Action for return of purchase-money-Necessity for re-scission of agreement-Notice by action itself-Ability to make title at time of trial-Changed conditions - Speculative character of property-Return of money-Interest-Expenses-Costs - Damages.] - The plaintiff agreed to purchase from the defendant land described according to a preliminary unregistered plan of a proposed subdivision. agreement contained the provision that the defendant was not to be called upon to convey the property with reference to the plan. and was not to be liable in damages if, through no fault of his, he was unable to re-gister the plan, so long as, after the plain-tiff had fulfilled his part of the agreement, the vendor should convey the actual land, even though describing it by metes and bounds. The plaintiff paid the purchase-price, by instalments, in full, and endeayoured to get title from the defendant. Failing to obtain title, the plaintiff brought this action to recover the moneys paid by him. The plaintiff was advised, through the defendant's solicitor, that title to the lands could not be had either by metes and bounds or according to the plan :-Held, that, in these circumstances, the tender by the plaintiff of a transfer was a useless proceeding; but, if such a tender was necessary, the plaintiff had suffi-ciently complied with his agreement by tendering a transfer with a description according to the plan, leaving the defendant to substitute a description by metes and bounds if he thought fit.—Held, also, that the plaintiff was entitled to ask for a return of the purchase-money, without having rescinded the agreement, and without seeking rescission—where there is a want of title, a notice of rescission and demand for the deposit is not necessary before bringing action; the com-mencement of an action for the money is menement of an action for the money is the strongest kind of a demand and of notice of rescission.—Yasne v. Kronson, 17 Man. L. R. 301, 7 W. L. R. 119, distinguished.—Hartt v. Wishard-Langon Co., 9 W. L. R. 519, foilowed.—The plaintiff became entitled to a transfer on the 18th July, 1909. It appeared at the trial (more than a year afterwards), that title could be made:—Held, that it would be inequitable, in view of the changed conditions since July 1909 and of changed conditions since July, 1909, and of the speculative character of the property, to force it now upon the plaintiff.—Held, also, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the money paid by him, with interest, expenses and costs; but was not entitled to damages, as the failure of the defendant to make title was through no fault on his part.—Rove v. School Board for London, 36 Ch. D. 620, followed. Laycock v. Fowler (1910), 16 W. L. Man. L. R. R. 441.

Failure to make title to part of Brand purported to be conveyed — Breach of covenant — Innocent mistake of vendor — Failure to shee notice to purchase — Reclusal to decree rectification — Offer of refund before action — Judgment for amount offered — Interest — Costs — Recovery of small sum — "Event."] — Action for damages because defendants have not given plaintiff a good title to certain land. Through an oversight the fact that defendants had previously conveyed to another purchaser part of this land was overlooked. Before action defendants offered to compensate but omitted to specially mention payment of interest. Judgment for plaintiff for amount offered with interest. Hird v. Eaguimalt, 11 W. L. R. 504.

Free from incumbrance — Caveat of purchaser—Subsequent caveat of prior purchasers—Priority—Land Titles Act, a. 97—Notice of knowledge—Lis pendens—Prior aotion—Default—Equitable rekief—Extension of time—Specific performance—Discharge of caveat—Coats.] — On the 11th September, 1909, the defendants W. and J. entered into an agreement to sell lands to the plaintiff for $12,690. The vendors were at that time the registered owners of a portion of the lands, free from incumbrance, and held a transfer from a company who were the registered owners of the period of the lands, free from incumbrance, free from incumbrance, the plaintiff made the downpayment, $5,000, and the vendors, in pursuance of the terms of the agreement, executed transfers of the land, and deposited them, together with their duplicate certificates of title and the transfer from the company, with a third person for the purpose of being delivered to the plaintiff, upon his paying, on or before the 11th March, 1910, the balance of the purchase-money. On the 22nd September, 1909, the plaintiff registered in the land titles office a caveat against the lands, claiming to be interested as purchaser under the agreement. The balance of the purchase money was not paid; the plaintiff was ready and willing to pay it, and tendered it, but the vendors were not able to convey a clear title, because the defendants B. and H. had, on the 15th November, 1909, registered a caveat forbidding any dealing with the land. The claim of the defendants B, and H. was founded in earlier agreements with the vendors for the purchase of the lands. An action had been brought by the vendors to enforce these agreements, and a decree for specific performance and sale in default made, under which, after default, there was a sale, at which the vendors themselves became the purchasers; but on the 31st December, 1909, the order for sale and the sale were set aside. reserving the rights of the plaintiff in this reserving the rights of the plaintin in this action:—Held, upon the evidence, that the plaintiff had no knowledge, at the time of entering into his agreement, of any right or claim of right on the part of B. and H., nor of any facts which might have given rise to any suspicion so as to put him on in-quiry.—The plaintiff did not base his claim for specific performance of his contract or damages on any title of his vendors except that which they held, at the time the agreethat which they held, at the time the agree-ment was entered into, as the registered own-ers or as entitled to become registered:— Held, that by virtue of the prior registration of his caveat, the plaintiff had, under s. 97 of the Land Titles Act, acquired priority over the defendants B. and H., both as to the lands of which the vendors were the regis-tered owners and these for which that held tered owners and those for which they had only a transfer from the registered owners.— The defendants B. and H. contended that the principle of lis pendens applied, and that, by virtue of the action upon the first agreement pending at the time of the second agreement, the plaintiff, even without notice, must be subject to the rights of the parties in that action. No such defence was suggested by the pleadings, nor was any amendment asked:—Held, that, if the issue could be raised, the defendants B. and H. had, on the facts, no equitable right to claim the lands; up to the time of the filing of the caveat they had neither the ability nor the willingness to pay what was due under the agreements; it was then more than 8 months after the time had elapsed within which they were entitled to redeem by the terms of the decree in the first action; and the facts were not such as would justify an extension of time certainly, as between the plaintiff and these defendants, it would be inequitable to grant defendants, it would be inequitable to grant any such relief.—The plaintiff should, there-fore, be declared entitled, upon payment to the vendors of the balance of his purchase-money, to a transfer free from all incum-brances, and to a discharge of the caveat registered by the defendants B, and H; the costs of the plaintiff and the defendants W. and and B, to be paid by the defendants B, and and B, the defendants B. and H. Inability of vendor to make title— Right of purchaser to rescind.]—Action to rescind an agreement for the purchase of certain land and for return of moneys paid. Defendant never had title. Plaintiff held entitled to return of moneys paid but not entitled for improvements made as no permission to go into possession. Agreement rescinded. Wirth v. Cook (1909), 12 W. L. R. 102. Incumbrances ereated by vendor sale to purchaser—Remoral of lien—Purchase money—Payment into Court.]—Held, that the defendants N, had knowledge, at the time they obtained their lien, that the plaintiff held an agreement for sale of the land. N. to remove their lien. Defendant C. to make title. Taskar v. Carrigan, 11 W. L. R. 621.

Judgment against vendor — Title of purchaser — Priority — Registry laves.] — The hypothee resulting from a judgment against the vendor of an immovable registered before the title of the purchaser, has priority over the rights of the latter. Orepeau v. Bruneau, 24 Que, S. C. 368.

Misdescription — Re-sale — Action by sub-purchaser for abatement in price — Remedy of first purchaser against vendor — Action en garantie — Defence — Common error — Roweedge of purchaser.]—A person who, having bought land under an erroneous description, resells it to a third party, and is sued by him for a rebate in the price and for damages, has a remedy by an action en garantie against his vendor for indemnity. In that action the vendor cannot defeat the claim by setting up a common mistake, and alleging that he relied for the description upon the notary who prepared the deed, to the knowledge of the plaintiff en garantie, and that the latter discovered the mistake of the notary before re-selling; his obligation of garantie subsists none the less. Paradis y Venne, 35 Que. S. C. 158.

Motion by vendor for order declaring that he was able to make title — Registered plan — Amended by order — Road allovances — Title vested in abutting owners — Surveys Act.] — Order granted declaring vendor able to make good title to certain lands. The effect of the registration of the plan and the order amending it was to divest the title of original owner to the road allowance and to vest it in the abutting owner. Re Purse & Forbes (1910), 16 O. W. R. 750, 1 O. W. N. 1085.

Objections to vendors' title—Tax sale deed to rear 28 feet of lot—Sutherland, J., held it a cloud on title—To be removed by vendor—Proofs of adverse possession not satisfactory or adequate—No order as to costs. Re National Trust Co. & Ewing (1911), 18 O. W. R. 770, 2 O. W. N. 801.

Ofter to sell — Purchaser pendente lite—Certificate of lis pendens — Specific performance — Delay — Damages.]—A letter by the vendor's agent to a probable purchaser, giving the description of the vendor's land, mentioning the price at which the vendor is willing to sell, and asking the person written to if he is willing to purchase at that price, is an offer to sell, not simply a request for an offer to purchase, and, upon the person so written to stating that he wishes to buy at the price named, a contract of sale and purchase is constituted between the parties. After the contract for the sale had been entered into, the vendor sold and conveyed the land in question, which was of a speculative character, to a third person, who purchased in good faith and without notice of the prior contract. The vendor having deliberately broken his contract because of a better offer, substantial damages were assessed against him. Clergue v. McKay, 23 C. L. T. 243, 6 O. L. R. 31, 1 O. W. R. 178-241, 2 O. Power of executor to sell — Legal estate and power of sale implicitly given by will — Application under Vendor and Purchasers Act.]—Held, that as this estate consists of real and personal property, the direction to hold, manage, control, invest and reinvest, impliedly involves the conferring of the legal estate in the land on the executors, and gives them power to sell and make title thereto. Re Sherman & Keenleyside, 13 O. W. R. 487.

Previous sale of land - Partition -Title of vendor confirmed - Costs of vendee -Evidence - Ancient documents, 1-Where a suit for partition of lands sold previously to the commencement of the suit established the exclusive title of the vendor, and the suit was not caused by any fault of his, the vendee made a party to the suit was held not to be entitled to deduct his costs from the purchase money. Where a document, of date 1831, purporting to have been executed by father and son, was produced from the custody of a grandson of the former, and as having been kept with title papers in a box formerly in the custody of the grandson's brother, and now in the grandson's custody, and where a document, of date 1840, purporting to be a will, was produced from the custody of a nephew of a person purporting to have signed it as a witness, and as having been kept by him with other papers in a chest now in the nephew's custody, both documents were held admissible in evidence without proof of execution. Patterson v. Patterson, 25 C. L. T. 91, 3 N. B. Eq. 106.

Recital in deed more than twenty years old — Evidence — Onus.]—A deed more than 20 years old, by which certain lands were conveyed to the grantee in fee, contained the recital that the grantee was the administrator of his father's estate, and that the land was conveyed to him in satisfaction and discharge of a debt due to his father. It appeared that some four years prior to the date of the deed letters of administration ad litem had been granted by a Surrogate Court to the father's widow. In an action brought for specific performance of a contract for the sale of the land: -Held, that such recitals were sufficient evidence of the facts so recited, and were not displaced merely by the fact of the prior grant of administration to the widow for a stated limited purpose. Judgment of Teetzel, J., at the trial, affirmed. Gunn v. Turner, 8 O. W. R. 796, 13 O. L. R. 158.

Registered hypothecs — Cloud on title—Validity of registration.] — The registration, alone, of hypothecs affecting an immovable property sold gives the purchaser the right to invoke the benefit of Art. 1535, C. C., and he is not obliged to contest with the creditors the contention made by the vendor that such registrations are without effect. Malbaf v. Leduc, 19 Que. S. C. 67.

Registered title in two persons— Survivor desiring to sell.]—Registered title stood in the names of two persons, one deceased who had died intestate leaving her husband and infant daughter surviving. The survivor desiring to sell made an affidavit that deceased had no interest in the property:—Held, that vendor cannot now make a title. Leave given to survivor to bring action. Re Farmer & Reid, 12 O. W. R. 1076.

Registry Act - Judgments binding land -Prior unregistered deed.]-In May, 1856. L. conveyed certain lands to J., but the deed was not registered until April, 1860. Subsequent to the execution of the deed, but before registration, certain judgments were recovered in the Supreme Court against L., but no memorial was registered. In 1859 de-fendant exchanged these lands for lands of the plaintiff, and a good clear title was to be given, and defendant tendered a deed which plaintiff refused to accept on the ground that the judgments recovered against L. previous to the registration of the deed from him affected the title. The question raised was, whether a judgment, no memorial of which was on record, bound lands previously conveyed to a bona fide purchaser who had neglected to register his conveyance until after the judgment was entered up :-Held, Peters, J., that such judgment would not bind the lands, Reddin v. Jenkins (1863), 1 P. E. I. R. 232.

Removal of incumbrances — Certificate of registrar, 1—One who has bought an immovable, free and clear of incumbrances, is entitled to compel his vendor to make title to him in respect of such immovable and to remove the charges upon such immovable. 2. The documents of title to an immovable include a certificate of the registrar stating that the property is free from every charge and hypothec. Ville-Marke Bank v. Kent. 4 Que. P. R. 206.

Requisitions on title — Dover — Taxes — Executions. — The purchaser made these requisitions: (a) That evidence should be given shewing that dower rights do not attach in the cases of conveyances made without bar of dower (in 1852 and 1853) before commencement of the period of possession relied on, (c) That the vendor should furnish evidence that the lands to be conveyed by her are not incumbered by any executions or arrears of taxes or local improvement rates:—Held, that the vendor was bound to comply with the requisitions. In re Clayton & Vandecar, 21 C. L. T. 337.

Reservation of coal and other minerals — Inability of vendors to convey lands with minerals — Dominion Lands Act — Certificate of title — Land registration— Rescission of contract — Return of moneys paid — Interest — Demand — Action — Costs.]—Action by purchaser for a return of moneys paid under a contract for sale and purchase of land. Judgments for plaintiffs as prayed, as defendants had contracted to sell "lands," whereas they were not the owners of the minerals therein. No interest allowed, Raymond v. Knight, 11 W. L. R. 687; 2 Alat, L. R. 141, L. R. 1687; 2 Alat, L. R. 1687; 2 Alathyrian Ala

Sale of land without title — Remedy of purchaser — Executor — Power to concept.]—A purchaser of land troubled in his possession has no right of action en garantie against his vendor who has sold him the land of another, but has a right of action for indemnity. 2. In the absence of express provisions in a will, an executor cannot, without the consent of his co-executors, as such executor, transfer the title to property. Gosselin v. Martel, 5 Que. P. R. 205.

Sale under power in will - Debts charged on lands - Devise after payment-Executors' power to sell — Gifts to widow in lieu of dower — Evidence of election to the of dower — Evidence of election — Release.]—A testator by his will directed his executors to pay his debts, and, subject to the payment of debts, devised a particular portion of the estate, and directed that the balance of that portion of his estate, after payment of the debts, should be divided among his four children in equal shares. Then followed a paragraph declaring that the property willed should go to the parties direct:—Held, that a power of sale was given to the executors under the provisions of s. 19 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 129, and that purchasers were, by s. 19, released from the necessity from enquiring as to the due execution of the power. The will also contained gifts to the widow, including an annuity to be accepted in lieu of dower, which was regularly paid to her, and which she apparently had elected to accept in lieu of dower. - Held, that the purchaser was entitled either to a release from her or to a declaration from her in form sufficient to estop her as aginst him from claiming dower. In re Bradburn & Turner, 22 C. L. T. 142, 3 O. L. R. 351, 1 O. W. R. 152.

Specific performance — Purchaser at judicial sale — Administration proceedings — Mortgage — Administration proceedings — Porm of — Sheriff's deed.]—A lot of land was devised to M. for the term of her natural life, and, after her death, to any child or children that she might have by the devisor. At the time of the devisor's death the property was subject to a mortgage, and there was one child by the marriage, who subsequently married. M. instituted an administration suit for the settlement of the estate, as the result of which, a sale was ordered; and she became the purchaser at the sale, and the Master's deed was made out to her. Subsequent to the purchase, M. executed a paper by which she agreed to convey the property in question to her daughter K. for her life, subject to the life interest of M.; then to go to the children of K. in fee simple:—Held, following Kearney v. Kean, 3 S. C. R. 339, that the purchase by M. at the administration sale must be presumed to have been an act done in the due course of administration; that it was in substance a mere discharge of an incumbrance; and, notwithstanding the fact that the Master's deed was absolute in its form, M. took the property in question subject to the life interest in herself, in trust for her daughter K., who had a clear title to the remainder in fee, paramount to any title derived under the agreement. 2. That, as against the title of K., the instrument executed by M. purporting to give K. a life estate only had no effect. 3. That K. had a good title to the land, and that, as against the defendant, who purchased at a sheriff's sale under the decree in an action on a mortgage made by K, and her husband, and who refused to complete the purchase, the plaintiff, the holder of the mortgage, was entitled to a decree for specific performance. 4. The advertisement of sale was in the following form: "All the sale was in the following form: "All the estate, right, title, interest, and equity of redemption of K., and of all persons claiming, or entitled from or under the said K., of, in, to, or out of all that lot, piece, or parcel of land," &c.; and the form of the order was that "the said land and premises order was that "the said land and premises be sold," &c. — Held, that this form was sufficient to cover all the estate right, title, interest, and equity of redemption of the defendant at the time of giving the mortgage. 5. That the deed was given by virtue of the statute (Acts 1890 c. 14, ss. 5 and 6), and by virtue of the provisions of the statute the land ordered to be sold by virtue of the sheriff's deed was vested in the grantee. 6. Semble, that the form of words in use in Nova Scotia was adopted in consequence of the practice of not settling conditions of sale, and offering a specific title: Diocesan Synod of Nova Scotia v. O'Brien, Ritch, Eq. Dec. 352; and that the form is suitable for a good title, or a limited one, and a more specific reference to the title is not made. Power v. Foster, 34 N. S. R. 479.

Vendor unable to make title — Bona fides — Damages — Return of deposit — Pleading — Amendment — Costs. Moody v. McDonald (Man.), 4 W. L. R. 303.

Vendor without patent for land entered into contract for sale—Purchaser went into possession—Made permanent improvements—Failed to make payments Right of vendor to retake possession—Liene f purchaser for improvements—Damages and costs.]—Vendor without laving patent for land entered into contract for its sale, and purchaser went into possession. He made certain permanent improvements, and later found that vendor had no patent. He refused to make further payments, and tried to get a patent from the Crown in his own name.—Riddell, J., held (16 O. W. K. 569, 1 O. W. N. 988), that upon non-payment the vendor was entitled to rescind the contract. He allowed purchaser $340 for permanent improvements made prior to the time he learned that vendor had no patent, but refused to allow purchaser a lien for $250 for improvements made after that time. Amounts paid by purchaser to vendor to be returned to him with interest, and possession delivered to vendor.—Divisional Court held, that above judgment should be varied, and the defendant let in to redeem upon payment to plaintiff of the full amount of purchase money.

Vendor's heir is the purchaser's warrantor, and as institute in a substitution created in his favour, he cannot revendicate from the purchaser the immovable sold. It does not become necessary to prove his acceptance of the vendor's succession. Such acceptance is presumed, — Semble, the purchaser of substituted property, when his vendor's only title is contained in the deed creating the substitution, should not be permitted to take advantage of the absence of registration of the substitution. Taillefer v. Langevin (1910), 39 Que. S. C. 274.

Warranty of title — Eviction—Special agreement — Damages.]—A sale of land, including a dam, was accompanied by a warranty of the vendor of his title. The vendee, having been evicted from the portion of the premises used for the dam, brought an action to recover back the price he paid, and for damages. The vendor tendered the price and costs of resisting the action for eviction, but denied liability for damages on the ground that there was no special agreement as to the cause of eviction under Art. 1512, C. C.: —Held, that the warranty of title did not constitute a special agreement which would entitle the vendee to damages under Art. 1512, C. C. Allan v. Price, 20 C. L. T. 432.

will — Motion for construction — Devise to two persons as joint tenants for life — Right of survivorship — Remainder — R. S. O. (1897), c. 119, s. 11.]—Jacques Gignae by his will devised lands in question to his two daughters, Febronie and Delima, and to the Survivors of them, her heirs and assigns forever." Febronie died in 1895, and Delima agreed to sell the land, and objection was taken to her title,—Middleton, J., held, that the above words conferred a separate estate in remainder upon the survivor. Order granted declaring that notwithstanding the objection taken to the title, the vendor could convey in fee. Re Gignac & Denis (1910), 16 O. W. R. 965, 2 O. W. R. 40.

15. WARRANTY OF VENDOR.

Action for partition — Recourse to a term any — Sale — Offer to buy followed by acceptance — Executor's acceptance of an offer to buy by one of several executors —Revudiation by the others set up in a partition action by the buyer — Recourse of the latter.]—A partition action of an immovable is a real action, and recourse on a formal guarantee against the vendor is open to the plaintiff whose rights to a share are contested. An offer to buy at a fixed price an immovable under a devise where there are three executors accepted by means of a letter in terms for all and signed "Succession D" by T. B. V. (on of the executors) constitutes a sale on its face perfect. The repudiation by the other two executors acting together, set up as a defence to a real action for his share by the buyer, that the above letter had not been written with their consent, but by the sender alone without their consent. This renders the latter liable to the plaintiff in an action on the warranty of his authority. Vinet v. Martel, 18 Que. K. B. 390.

Against eviction - Accessory rights-Rights arising from contiguity - Disturbing rights - Claim to set aside a boundary agreed upon.]—The seller of an immovable such as acquired by its grantor under a title to which it refers is a guarantor to the purchaser against eviction through collateral rights which arise from agreements with third parties coming in afterwards. In vain it is claimed that having sold the immovable under its registered number, this obligation extends no further. Notably to the effect of a boundary agreed upon between the grantor and the neighbouring owner, the immovable sold by its registered number comprehends as its appurtenances the rights which may arise from the boundary. claim to set aside a deed agreeing upon a boundary, urged by one of the neighbours against the grantee of the other, is raising a question of title which gives the latter the right to have recourse to his grantor on the guarantee which his grantor as owner of the immovable sold, has covenanted for in the deed attacked. McLennan v. N. S. Steel d Coal Co., 18 Que. K. B. 317.

Against eviction — Boundary and demand for a boundary line implying eviction — Action in warranty — Relationship of such action with principal action— Subsidiary personal conclusions—Sale of immovable described by its conter-minous lands—Precise boundaries and area - Mention of a cadastral number as one of the boundary - Failure to deliver -Damages resulting thereby.]-The purchaser of an immovable who, in an action of boundary, is met by his neighbouring proprietor with a boundary line acquired by prescription and entailing partial eviction, has a recourse by action in warranty against his vendor. Under such conditions, the action in warranty is none the less connected with the principal action because of the fact that it contains subsidiary conclusions for a condemnation in money in case of eviction. The sale of an immovable described by its conterminous lands, is of a certain and determined property, and it is the precise boundaries contained in the title and not the area of the land which should be the guiding mark. When in the description of the immovable sold, one of its boundaries is stated to be a cadastral number, the latter must be interpreted to mean the cadastral number contained on the official plan and in the book of reference and does not include additions which its owner may have acquired by prescription. By application of the rule that in cases of inexecution of obligations, the debtor is held to pay such damages only as are the direct and immediate result of his default, the vendor of a vacant lot is bound to indemnify the purchaser evicted from a part of such lot, to the extent merely of the value of such part, and of the diminished value of the lot sold resulting from its reduced area. He is not bound to the extent of the extra value of the buildings erected by the purchaser when such would result from the whole lot sold remaining in the possession of one person. Vallee v. Gagnon, 37 Que, K. B. 165.

Against eviction — Claim of third party — How shewn — Demand and threats —Insufficiency.]—The remedy in warranty against an eviction threatened by a third party, is open to the purchaser only where the third party has shewn what he claims by taking possession of the property sold, or by bringing an action to establish his rights. Therefore, a simple demand for payment of the price of a previous sale, even accompanied by threats of cancellation, will not suffice. Mathieu v. Trudeau, 17 Que. K. B. 531.

Against eviction — Municipal taxes— Extent of — Subsequent imposition—Special taxes,]—The warranty which the vendor of land gives to the purchaser as regards municipal taxes extends only to such as are due or accrued at the time of the sale, and not to those which become exigible afterwards. This rule applies as well to special or extraordinary taxes as to general and ordinary taxes. Bourdon v. Deslongchamps, 30 Que. S. C. 477.

Against eviction — Trouble de droit—Action by contiguous owner to annul deed fixing boundaries.]—An action by the owner of an immovable against the owner of a contiguous immovable to have a deed, in which the division line had been agreed upon by their predecessors in title, declared null and void, "under reserve of the plaintiff's right to afterwards proceed en bornage, or otherwise, to recover the part of his property possessed by the defendant under the authority of the deed," is a trouble de droit which gives the defendant the right to sue his vendor in warranty against eviction. Cl. Vile de Chicoutimi v. Lavoie & Guag, 30 Que. S. C. 148. Montreal Harbour Commissioners v, Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Co. & McLenna, 34 Que. S. C. 446.

Appurtenant water power — Easement of flowcage — Covenant — Right to overflow lands on payment of indemnity — Implied condition — Warranty.]—A declaration, in the English language, in a deed of sale of an immovable which includes a water power, that it comprehends "all rights of flowage" on lots Nos., etc., refers to the legal right of riparian owners to dam back the water of a river which they use for industrial purposes upon the lands above, in consideration of an indemnity. Therefore, the transfer of this right being regarded as made under an implied condition of indemnity, the vendor does not warrant the purchaser against claims which may arise after the sale for the flooding of the lands above. Hovey v. Lefebvre, 33 Que. S. C. 123.

Assessment for building church — School taxes — Payment of arrears by purchaser — Recovery — Prescription.] — In case of a sale of land "with warranty against all troubles, hypothecs, debts, dowers, donations, substitutions, alienations, and in-cumbrances whatsoever," the existence of an assessment (répartition) for the building of a church, at the time of the sale, cannot give the purchaser a right of warranty or to be indemnified against the vendor if he knew at the time of the deed of assessment. The school taxes and assessments for building a church affecting land, being public charges or of common law, ought to be taken into consideration in the purchase of land, and as to future payments to be taken into account at the time of sale. The purchaser with legal warranty, who has paid municipal or school taxes owing by the vendor, cannot recover these taxes from the latter, if, when he commenced his action, the debt due the municipality by the vendor for payment of these taxes had been prescribed; the pur-chaser, being subrogated to the rights of the school corporation, has no greater rights than the latter against the vendor. Peabody v. Vincent, 26 Que. S. C. 37, 253.

Charge on land — Municipal by-lave—Drainage — Ascessment roll.]—A by-law was passed by the municipal council of a town, providing for the construction of a drain, which drain was to pass in front of an immovable property subsequently sold by the defendants to the plaintiffs. The by-law also provided that the immovables on either side were charged for the construction of this drain at the rate of $1.75 per running foot. The drain was constructed before the sale an assessment roll was prepared in accordance with the by-law:—Held, that, as the by-law created the charge and determination already arrived at by the town council, the charge was covered by the legal warranty of the vendor. Masson v. Les Ecclésiastiques du Seminaire de St. Sulpice de Montréal, 17 Que. Sc. C. 573.

Construction of deed — Sheriji's deed — Sale of rights in land — Eviction by claimant under prior title.]—By the deed of conveyance the vendor declared that he had sold with warranty all rights of property and other rights which he had acquired by virtue of a deed of sale from the sheriff of the lands therein mentioned, and of which he was actually in possession, and that "the immovable belonged to him as having been acquired from the sheriff:"—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, Strong, C. J., and Taschereau, I., dissenting, that the warranty covenanted by the vendor had reference merely to the rights he might have acquired in the lands under the sherifs's deed, and did not oblige him to protect the purchaser against eviction by a person claiming prior title to a portion of the lands. Ducondu V. Duppy, 9 App. Cas. 150, followed. Drowin v. Morissette, 22 C. L. T. 79, 31 S. C. R. 563.

A party called into a petitory action to take up the fait et cause of the defendant therein, as warrantor of the title, may take up the defence for the purpose of appealing from the trial Court judgments maintaining both the principal action and the action in warranty, although he may have refused to do so in the Court of first instance, but, should the appellate Court decide that the action in warranty was unfounded, it is ipso facto ousted of jurisdiction to entertain or decide upon the merits of the principal action. Monarque v. La Banque Jacques-Cartier, 22 C. L. T. 7, 31 S. C. R. 474.

Eviction — Charges.]—A purchaser of immovables cannot sue his vendor, nor the grantor of his vendor, to obtain from him a clear title, before eviction from his property, or before having been sued for charges or claims upon it which were not made known to him at the time of the purchase. Trudeau v. Molleur, 5 Que. P. R. 221.

Eviction — Special agreement — Damages, I—A sale of land, including a dam, was accompanied by a warranty of the vendor of his title. The vendee, having been evicted from the portion of the premises used for the dam, brought an action to recover back the price he paid, and for damages. The vendor tendered the price and costs of resisting the action for eviction, but denied liability for damages, on the ground that there was no special agreement as to the cause of eviction under Art. 1512, C. C.:—Held, that the warranty of title did not constitute a special agreement which would entitle the vendee to damages under Art. 1512, C. C. Allon v. Price, 20 C. L. T. 432, 30 S. C. R. 536.

Failure of title — Specific performance—Reactision — Payment by vendor to real owner — Remedy against arri re-garant.]—
The purchaser of an immovable with a legal garantie, whose vendor was not the owner at the time of the sale, may, without waiting until the true owner claims possession of the sale or to compel him to make a good title. 2. When, in such a case, the vendor can obtain a good title by paying a fixed sum to the true owner, the purchaser may have judgment against the vendor for payment of this sum to the true owner, and upon default by the vendor in the payment of it within the time fixed, the purchaser may make the payment and charge the vendor with it. 3. The purchaser may exercise this remedy against the vendor's predecessor in title who has given a garantie. Trudeau v. Molleur, 24 Que. S. C. 27, 5 Que. P. R. 418.

Incumbrance — Discharge—Title deeds— —Uertificate of registrar:]—The purchaser of an immovable, sold to him with garantie, may demand that the vendor be ordered to pay off a creditor who at the time of the sale had a hypothec upon the immovable. 2. On such a sale, the vendor is bound to hand over to the purchaser the title deeds of the immovable sold, and among them the certificate of the registrar stating that the immovable is free from all charges and hypothecs. In re Banque Ville-Marie, 22 Que. S. C. 162.

Incumbrance — Special Municipal charge — Apparent charge, — The warranty of the vendor of an immovable property does not extend to a charge imposed by the municipality in which the property is situate, for a term of years, as a special tax for the cost of a drain, except as to the arrears of such tax due by the vendor at the date of the sale. Thibault v. Robinson, 3 Que. Q. B. 280, and Les Ecclésiastiques du Séminaire de St. Sulpice v. Masson, 10 Que. K. B. 570, followed. Sharpe v. Dick, 22 Que. S. C. 527.

Incumbrance - Special Municipal tax — Apparent charge.] — When an immovable is sold after the passing of a municipal by-law providing for the execution of certain works in the municipality where the immovable is situated, and for payment for such work by means of a tax upon the immovables in such municipality, but before the completion of an assessment roll for the purpose of levying such tax, the vendor is not liable as a warrantor to pay such tax. 2. It is only by the putting into force of such roll that the tax becomes a charge upon the immovables of the municipality.

3. One who buys an immovable in a municipality. pality is supposed to have knowledge of all the municipal by-laws which can affect and a charge made by a by-law is therefore an apparent charge, as to which the vendor is not a warrantor, 4. The vendor who has sold with a guaranty of title, but without any stipulation "de franc et quitte," is not any stipulation "de franc et quitte," is not obliged to extinguish a charge which exists upon the immovable sold, as long as the debt which constitutes such charge is not exigible. Judgment in 17 Que. S. C. 573, reversed. St. Sulpice Séminaire v. Masson, 10 Que. K. B. 570.

Land abutting on street — Reduction in viddh.]—A vendor who has sold land fronting on a street is not obliged to indemnify the purchaser because, subsequent to the sale, the municipal authority has reduced the width of the street so that the land sold is no longer upon the street line. Judgment in 19 Que. S. C. 93, reversed. Banque Jacques-Cartier v. Gauthier, 10 Que. K. B. 245.

Misrepresentations — Warranty as to value — Evidence — Opinion.] — The defendant, on the negotiations for the sale to the plaintiff of a number of parcels of wild land, represented to the plaintiff's agent that they were a fairly good lot of farm lands. He had not seen the lands and did not state that he had. It turned out that a large portion of the lands was not good enough for farming purposes:—Held, that the plaintiff could not succeed in an action to recover damages by reason of the defendant's representations, which should be considered merely as expressions of opinion not amounting to a warranty. De Lassalle 7. Guildford, [1901] 2 K. B. 221, followed, Mey v. Simpson, S W. L. R. 472, 17 Man. L. R. 507.

Terms of warranty — Right of action.]—The purchaser of land, who has paid the price thereof, has no right of action against his vendor for damages and a clear title, if the deed of sale does not contain a clause of franc et quitte, but simply that the vendor warrants the buyer against trouble and will hold him harmless against all incumbrances, Vail v. Baker, 6 Que. P. R. 159.

16. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Action by vendor to enforce after default — Personal judgment for purchase money — Foreclosure — Remedies—Statute of Limitations.] — Plaintiffs soid land to defendant under an agreement. He defaulted and this action brought for personal judgment and foreclosure. Plaintiffs given judgment for amount claimed under covenant, though it appeared to be barred, defendant not having appeared, and pleaded Statute of Limitations. Foreclosure not ordered, the vendor's remedy being action on the covenant for specific performance, when agreement may be cancelled. Leave given to amend and serve amended statement of claim here if more than personal judgment wanted. Canadian Pacific Rv. Co, v. Mc-Ananny (Ruske), 10 W. L. R. 47.

Assignment of contract - Fraudulent second assignment — Priorities—Know-ledge — Notice — Registry of caveat — Equitable rights — Damages.]—The defendant company, in Feb., 1906, entered into a contract (in writing) with P. to convey land to P., upon payment by P. of $2,270. with interest, by instalments. The con-tract provided that no assignment should be valid unless for the entire interest of P. and approved by the company. In October, 1908, P. assigned the contract to the defendant G. On the 2nd November, 1909, G, agreed to procure an assignment of the contract to the plaintiff; and on the 5th November assigned his interest to the defendants M. and B. The plaintiff, on the 10th November, lodged a caveat in the proper land titles office, as owner of the land, and in February, 1910, began this action against G., M. and B., and the company, for specific performance or damages. The other defendants had no knowledge of G.'s dealings with the plaintiff, and there was no evidence of notice to them, other than proof of the lodging of the caveat:—Held, following Shaw v. Foster, L. R. 5 H. L. 321, that the defendant company were justified in receiving the balance of the purchasemoney due them, in approving of the assignment to M. and B., and in completing the sale made to P. The position of M. and B. was much stronger in equity than that of the plaintiff.—The plaintiff's action was dismissed as against the defendants other was dismissed as against the detendance than G.—Held, following Day v. Singelton, [1899] 2 Ch. 320, that the plaintiff was entitled to damages against G.; the amount to be ascertained by a reference, Alexander v. Gesman (1910), 15 W. L. R. 261.

Bond by owner of land — Charge on land.]—J. E., the owner of certain land, executed a bond (which was registered) whereby, for himself, his heirs, executors, or administrators, he covenanted that, on his effecting a sale of the land, which, however was to be entirely at his option, he would pay to A. E. half the purchase money. He died without having effected a sale; and subsequently A. E. died, J. E. by his will devised the land to I. E. for life with remainder in fee to L. D. E., and they both joined in an agreement to sell to D.:—Held, without deciding whether the bond was in force as between J. E. and A.E.'s representatives, that it did not constitute a charge on the land, the liability thereunder being merely of a personal character. Baker V. Trusts & Guarantee Co. (1898), 29 O. R. 456, distinguished. Re Eagan and Daveson (1909), 18 O. L. R. 638, 13 O. W. R. 634.

Breach of contract — Damages—Price of resule — Rising market — Speculative contract — Loss of profits — Increase of damages on appeal. — Damages for breach of a contract for sale of lands should be awarded on the same principle as for breach of contract for sale of goods, and the rule laid down in Hadley , Basendale, 9 Ex. 341, applies (Harvey J. Aubitante).—If the lands are bought for speculation on a "rising market," and this is known to the vendor.—Semble, that the purchaser can recover by any of damages for breach of contract the profits that he might have made, up to the time of the trial, but in ordinary circumstances the difference between the purchase price and the selling value at the time the purchaser was to be let into possession of the lands will be the measure of damages. —The rule as to damages in Hadley v. Basendale applied. Robertson v. Dumaresq, 2 Moo, P. C. 3366, distinguished. Upon the plaintiff's cross-appeal the damages were increased. Dunn v. Callehan, 8 W. L. R. 189, 1 Alla. L. R. 179.

Building — Party wall — Deed — Reservation — Indemnity.]—The vendor of land with a building thereon of which a wall is in a position necessary to become a party wall, may make a reservation in his deed of this wall as a party wall. By this reservation the right of the vendor and his assigns to one or two alternatives is established; either to make the wall a party wall without paying the indemnity provided by Art, 518, C. C., if he acquires the adjoining lands; or to recover such indemnity from a third person who acquires such adjacent lands, if he makes the wall a party wall. Dupcrault v. Roy, 28 Que. S. C. 519.

Consideration stated in deed.]—Action for taking and converting to defendant's use certain personal property which plaintiffs claimed as having been transferred to them by defendant as an inducement to complete the purchase of a farm. The deed of the farm was expressed to be made for a specific consideration, and no reference was made to the personal property, the subject of the action:—Held, that it was open to plaintiffs to shew that their agreement to

.]—Acdefendwhich usferred nent to ne deed e for a ce was subject pen to lent to purchase the farm for the consideration expressed in the deed was conditional upon defendant transferring to them the personal property claimed. That evidence was not receivable on the part of the plaintiffs to shew any other consideration outside of that expressed in the deed. Also, that plaintiffs were called upon to account for delay of four years after the taking by defendant in commencing their proceedings. Also, that the trial Judge erred in not giving sufficient weight to the fact that certain acts of plaintiffs after they entered into occupation of the property, were inconsistent with the claim subsequently set up by them to ownership of the personal property. Newell v. Campbell (1908), 43 N. S. R. 11.

Contract by correspondence — Acceptance — New offer.] — Defendant made a written offer to buy certain property payable either in cash or on terms. Plaintiffs' writing in acceptance added "that property is to be taken just as it is without any repairs":—Held, that there was no completed agreement. St. Lawrence v. Levesque, 5 E. L. R. 58.

Contract by correspondence — Acceptance — New offer — English and Quebec law. St. Lawrence Investment Society v. Levesque, 6 E. L. R. 58.

Contract by correspondence — Non-resident.]—A contract made by correspondence between a resident purchaser and a non-resident vendor for sale of land in the Territories—the acceptance of the vendor's offer to sell having been mailed in the Territories — is one which, according to the terms thereof, ought to be performed within the Territories.—In an action for damages for breach of such a contract:—Held, that service out of the jurisdiction was properly allowed.—The question, where it is doubtful, whether there was a completed contract should not be determined on an application to set aside the order for service ce juris. Bishop v. Scott (1904), 6 Terr. L. R. 54.

Correspondence — No concluded agreement.—The plaintiff endeavoured to establish a contract by correspondence between himself and the defendant H.. the president of the defendant company, for the sale to him by the company of certain lots of land; but the Court held, upon the evidence, that there was no actual agreement between the parties, either written or oral; and affirmed a judgment dismissing an action for specific performance. Freuen v. Hays (1911), 16 W. L. R. 253, B. C. R.

Description — Mistake — Building included — Abatement in price.] — The sale en bloo of lots of a certain size, described by their cadastral numbers, "with the buildings thereon excepted," does not include the adjoining land upon which is a stable, one of these buildings, which the vendor erroneously believed to be situated on one of the lots sold. His judicial admission of this mistake is not an acknowledgment of default in conveyance, and does not give the purchaser the right to an abatement in price, especially where it appears that the lands described and conveyed are of the extent mentioned in the deed. Laurin v. Bégin, 18 Que. K. B. 77.

Furnished hotel — Removal of furniture — Security for payment of purchase money — Time for payment.] — A purchaser of a furnished hotel and of the right to sell alcoholic liquors by virtue of a license granted to the vendor, not being able to obtain a renewal of this license, removed the furniture to another place:—Held, that he did not thereby diminish the security given to his vendor, and did not lose the benefit of the time which he had for payment of the price. View V. Gosselin. 33 Que. S. C. 373.

House and portion of land — Boundary line — Interference by fence with enjoyment of vendee — Light and air — Derogation from grant — Injunction.] — The defendant, being the owner of certain land, on the east end of which was a house lighted by windows on the west side, sold and conveyed part of the land, including that part upon which the house was built, to the plaintiff. The defendant subsequently built a high fence very close to the house, entirely on his own land, but up to the boundary line. The fence cut off the light, and by excluding the air impaired the ventilation, and the snow and ice collected in the narrow space between the fence and the house, from which it could not be removed, and when melting in the spring the water could not run away, but soaked through the walls of the house:—Held, that the defendant could not derogate from his own grant, and, as the plaintiff was thus deprived of that confortable and reasonable enjoyment of the house which he had a right to expect, an injunction was granted restraining the defendant from continuing the fence in such a way as to interfere with that enjoyment. Ruetsch v. Spry, 9 O. W. R. 696, 14 O. L. R. 233.

Interest of judgment debtor in lands.—Indomnity.— Warranty.— Eviction.— Sheriff's title.].— The purchaser at a forced sale of the rights of the judgment debtor in an immovable, who sells them as they are conveyed to him in the sheriff's title, is bound to indemnify the buyer for loss from eviction of the immovable by reason of its never having belonged to the judgment debtor. — The prosecuting creditor is only bound to warrant the purchaser at a forced sale against eviction by reason of informalities in the proceedings or of the property seized not ostensibly belonging to the debtor. Mahoney v. Diotte, 28 Que. S. C. 314.

Judicial sale under decree in mortgage action. —Plaintiffs sold under their mortgages, and after payment of their claims an amount remained in Court. The purchaser now sought to have a portion of the moneys in Court applied towards paying off arrears of taxes:—Held, he was not entitled to this. If these taxes, as well as the noxious weed rates, are a charge on the land, the purchaser must assume them. Canada Permanent v. Martin (1909), 12 W. L. R. 440 burdened with a lien in the nature of a bailleur de fonds, for appreciable charge in money stipulated for in the act of gift, or for what remains due of the price of sale. Such hypothee exists in favour of the vendor or donor, or of the third person to whom it is stipulated in the act of gift or sale that the charges upon the gift or the price of the sale shall be paid.—2. The lodging of his claim by a creditor with the liquidator to be collocated upon the product of the sale of an immovable, of which the price is due to him, as a creditor indicated in the act of sale, constitutes a sufficient acceptance of the stipulation on his part. Canadian General Electric Co. v. Shipton, 21 Que. S. C. S. 3.

Making the contract — Letters—Off-fer to treat—Terms only partly indicated—Acceptance.]—The plantiff alleged a contract for the sale of land to him, made out of two letters, the first of which (in response to an enquiry by the plaintiff) was written on the 5th January by the defendant to the plaintiff, saying: "I would sell those 4 lots for $16,000, about one-half cash and the balance 6, 12 and 18 months, interest at 7 per cent. I expect to be back to Vancouver about or shortly after the 15th inst, and will call on you at once, when we can talk it over if you wish." The second letter was written by the plaintiff to the defendant on the 18th January, and said: "I have left a deposit . . . on your lots, which I take on terms mentioned in your letter:—Held, that the defendant's letter was a mere offer to treat, and could not be converted into a binding contract, even if accepted according to its terms. Reid v. Sinclair (1910), 14 W. L. R. 478.

Making the contract — Letters — Terms — Prices — No concluded contract.]
—The plaintiff sought specific performance of an alleged agreement by the defendants (a company and others) to sell him a number of lots in a townsite. The plaintiff relied on two letters as constituting the contract. By their terms the lots were to be selected by the plaintiff with the concurrence of the defendant company; and the only lots which the company would concur in transferring to the plaintiff were those in the "Phillips list." The prices were to be fixed by the company; and the company and the Government employed valuers, who put reserve prices on the lots; but these were not communicated to the plaintiff as the prices which the company would accept from him:—Held, that this was not a price-list binding on the company at the option of the plaintiff, and that the only prices which the company were bound to accept were those in the Phillips list, which were repudiated by the plaintiff. There was no concluded agreement which the Court could recognise and enforce. Freuen v. Hays (1910), 14 W. L. R. 632.

Mistake — Rectification of agreement.]—Suit for rectification and specific performance. The defendant agreed to sell to the plaintiff lots 26, 27, and 28 according to a subdivision in Kildonan; he gave him a transfer under the Real Property Act, which the plaintiff registered, and he received a certificate of title. The plaintiff supposed the lots so sold to him to be those which were really 27, 28, and 29, and took possession of the last named three, and made improvements on lot 29. Later on the defendant sold lots 29 and 34 to another person. when they were located by a surveyor, and the plaintiff discovered that the lot on which plaintiff discovered that the 29, instead improvements were was lot 29, instead improved. The plaintiff of 28. brought this action to have it declared that the intention had been to sell him the lots which were really 27, 28, and 29, and to have the sale agreement rectified, and for specific performance of the rectified agreement. The performance of the rectified agreement. The plaintiff testified that the defendant old him that a house, which since turned out to have been on lot 29, was on lot 28, and he relied on that representation in buying, and making his improvements. The defendant said he told the plaintiff he was selling by the plan only, and that the plaintiff must find the lots for himself. It was admitted that the plaintiff looked over the property that the piantin looked over the property before buying, though he did not measure the distance from the railway track to the lots he chose, which, if done, would have shewn him their numbers and probably prevented the mistake:—Held, that the plaintiff did not rely on any representation by the de-fendant, but looked over the property with a knowledge of how to find the lots according to their actual numbers, and his misfortune was the result of his own mistake only. It was argued that the case was one of a un ilateral mistake, but to entitle the plaintiff to damages as in a case of unilateral mis-take a plaintiff must shew fraud on the defendant's part: May v. Platt, [1900] 1 Ch. 616. There was no suggestion of fraud in the present case. Williams v. Hespeler, 24 C. L. T. 409.

Mortgage—Payment into Court—Interest—Bonus—Municipal corporation.] — Where the corporation of a city acquired the property of a light, heat, and power company, which was subject to a mortgage for a large sum, the Court refused to exercise the powers conferred on it by ss. 15 and 16 of the Act respecting the law and transfer of property, R. S. O. 1897, c. 110, by requiring the company to accept, on an existing mortgage, three per cent., the rate of interest, instead of 5 per cent, the rate secured by the mortgage for the unexpired period thereof, and to authorise the corporation to deduct the amount of the mortgage so computed from the purchase money. In re Kingston Light, Heat & Power Co. & City of Kingston, 24 C. L. T. 358, 8 O. L. R. 258, 3 O. W. R. 769.
