WAR NEWS.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Latest advices from Ladysmith, describing the fighting on Thursday and Friday last, show that Gen. Buller's force of cavalry and infantry to attack the Boers at Tatham's farm, about ten miles to the northwest, near Beers's, and apparently achieved a surprise, the Boers being caught on the open veldt and cut to pieces and their camp captured. Encouraged by this success Gen. Buller decided to risk an even more important engagement on the following day, which was again justified by success. Ladysmith has been isolated and a Boer force had intercepted the railway between Ladysmith and Colenso. This force on Friday had descended upon Colenso, and, as shown by the despatches from Estcourt, having compelled a hurried abandonment of Colenso and a retirement of the British to Estcourt. Gen. Buller had ascertained that the Boers were attacking Colenso, but he was not aware of the British retreat. Gen. Buller's division caught the Boers in the rear, and, after the hills had been shelled, the British infantry stormed the position. Meanwhile the British cavalry swept round the hills, and, as the retreating enemy descended into the plain with the British bayonets behind them, they were charged by the cavalry and seemed to have perished almost to a man. The British then returned to Ladysmith without coming into touch with the Colenso garrison which had retired to Estcourt.

The Telegraph publishes the following despatch from Pietermaritzburg, dated Saturday evening: "Since their occupation at Colenso, the Boers have attempted no advance further south. Estcourt is now becoming a strong and growing camp. Confirmation has been obtained of the report that Gen. Schalk Burger is the Boer commander at Vryburg. A general Boer advance is not thought probable. Means have been taken to secure Pietermaritzburg against any possible attack, and also to relieve Ladysmith from the enemy can come further." Boer reports have reached Cape Town to the effect that on the arrival at Johannesburg of the news of the Boer reverse at Etandlaagte the whole Rand special police force was sent to the front with guns from Johannesburg fort, the fortress being left with only one gun and a garrison of twenty men.

It is now virtually decided to send another division of 10,000 men to South Africa as speedily as possible. For this purpose a second and third army corps will be mobilized. The second will consist of 40,000 men, of whom 10,000 will go to Africa, the rest being concentrated at Aldershot in readiness for emergencies. The third corps, a nominal affair, will number 25,000 men, who will be used for garrison duty at home. Thus the entire British army will virtually be mobilized, which will be an unprecedented occurrence.

DURBAN, Natal, Nov. 5 (Sunday evening).—The Boers have invaded Ingwenizama, Zululand, and looted and burned the public buildings and stores.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—With the arrival at Cape Town of the British transports Roslyn Castle and Moore, to be followed by a continuous succession of troop-laden ships, the real campaign in South Africa may be said to have commenced, and the fact that the former was ordered to proceed to Durban, Natal, forthwith is said to indicate an entire change, or at least a modification, in the plan of advance. It seems that Gen. Buller's first move will be to free Gen. Buller, thus somewhat departing from the earlier plan credited to him of advancing through the level country of the Orange Free State and Southwestern Transvaal. It has been apparent for some days that the situation at Ladysmith could not be indefinitely prolonged, and it is understood information has reached the government that the quietness of the Boers, will shortly be changed by the arrival of the siege train from Pretoria into a determined attempt to deliver a telling stroke. This, it is added, led Gen. Buller to prepare a counter stroke and endeavor to push the Boer by a direct attack. Such an operation if attempted, will necessarily entail great expenditure of life, as during the month the Boers have occupied Northern Natal they have fortified most of the passes and other positions suitable to their style of fighting.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—The consensus of opinion here is that the prolonged absence of news is not due to lack of interesting intelligence, but to the government's desire to suppress anything that could possibly be regarded as unwelcome to the British public. Not a single word in regard to the movements of General Buller is permitted to transpire. The reason for this secrecy probably is that the continental agents of the Boers are in communication with Kruger through some friendly government and would immediately notify him of Buller's plans if published. The government is apparently obliged to reconsider his plan of campaign, and to determine whether he will proceed direct to the relief of Ladysmith and send other columns to the relief of Mafeking and Kimberley, or, abandoning those places, march direct through the Orange Free State to Pretoria. This plan would also include the capture of Bloemfontein. It is not known to even the average war office official, nor, perhaps, to the Secretary of War, for that matter, which of these plans Buller will decide upon. If he decides to leave Ladysmith, Mafeking and Kimberley to their fate, and invading the Orange Free State, it is feared that by the time he has sufficient troops to take the field he will have to fight his way every inch, even through Northern Cape Colony. Having succeeded in this, as he possibly would, he would still have enormous difficulties to encounter. To cross the Orange river with a strong enemy holding the bridges, assuming that any bridges would be left, would be a hazardous undertaking.

Sir Redvers Buller has to wait three weeks before his army will be sufficiently strong to try to retrieve lost ground. Before that is achieved the British losses must be enormous, and though the public is solely concerned at present with the idea of victory, no matter at what price, when the bill is presented in full there will be a tremendous outcry against the war office's unpreparedness.

DURBAN, Natal, Nov. 4, 5.55 p. m.—A native eye witness of Thursday's battle near Ladysmith says the Boers were caught on the open ground and raised several white flags. The British then advanced without firing to accept the surrender of the Boers, but were met with a volley at close range. Enraged at this treachery, the Lancers, Hussars and Dragoons followed by the infantry, with fixed bayonets, charged through and through the enemy and did great execution. A lot of prisoners and loot were captured.

MISERABLE WOMEN

HOW WOMEN LOSE INTEREST IN THEIR HOUSEHOLDS.

The Ills to Which Women are Heir Cause Much Suffering—The Experience of a Lady who has found a Speedy Cure. Mrs. Isaac T. Comeau, who resides at 83 1/2 Arago street, St. Roch, Quebec, is a teacher of French, English and music. For many years Mrs. Comeau has suffered greatly from internal troubles peculiar to her sex, and also from continuous weakness the result of headaches, neuralgia and nervous prostration. Her trouble became so bad that she was forced to give up teaching and go to an hospital, but the treatment there did not materially benefit her and ultimately she left the hospital still a great sufferer. Mesdames her husband having heard of the great value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, purchased a few boxes and prevailed upon his wife to try them. What interested her in the merits of the pills Mrs. Comeau gave her story to the reporter about as follows: "My trouble came on after the birth of my child, and up to the time I began to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I could find nothing to cure me. I suffered much agony, was very weak, had frequent severe headaches, and little or no appetite. It was not long after I began the use of the pills that I found they were helping me very much and after taking them for a couple of months I was as well as ever I had been. My appetite improved, the pains left me, and I gained considerably in flesh and again able to attend to the lessons of my pupils and superintend my household work. Since using the pills myself I have recommended them to others and have heard nothing but praise in their favor wherever used."

No discovery of modern times has proven such a boon to Women as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Acting directly on the blood and nerves, invigorating the body, regulating the functions that restore health and strength to exhausted women, and makes them feel that life is again worth living.

Sold by all dealers in medicine or sent post paid at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Lowell, Mass., U.S.A. All substitutes.

A Readed Disease in November.

THOUSANDS ARE SUFFERING. Paine's Celery Compound Gives Prompt Relief and Cures Permanently. Thousands of people die in November of rheumatism. In the vast majority of cases carelessness, ignorance and a lack of medical skill send the sufferers to the grave. It can be honestly and fearlessly asserted that in ninety-nine cases out of every hundred Paine's Celery Compound would have banished the disease and saved life.

The original cause of rheumatism, as in so many other diseases, is a lack of nerve force. With this weakness of the nervous system there is a derangement of the digestive organs; the food stays too long in the stomach, it turns sour, and the resulting acid enters the blood. The victim then takes cold, and the acid cannot be expelled from the system by ordinary means. Soon the joints swell, and there is inflammation and great suffering.

Paine's Celery Compound used promptly and regularly quickly expels all the deadly acid from the body; the pains are banished, muscles and joints that have become contracted and stiffened soon become limber and regain their power, and the patient walks with comfort and ease.

No other medicine can do such marvelous work for those afflicted with rheumatism and sciatica. Paine's Celery Compound is truly your friend and life-renewer; it is the medicine recommended by the ablest physicians for the banishment and cure of a disease that has such fatal results in the variable autumn months.

Railway Grant Wanted. FREDERICTON, Nov. 8.—The local government heard Dr. Moore, president of the York and Carleton Railway Co., in behalf of the application for a grant of the provincial subsidy to the proposed line of six miles from Crisis Creek Station to Stanley, which has been subsidized by the federal government. The doctor was told that it would be necessary to have the matter go through the Legislature.

Counterfeiters.

AMHERST, N. S., Nov. 7.—Two men, Arthur Stewart and Neil Barkley, both of Macdon, the latter being an I. C. R. telegraph operator, are in custody here charged with circulating counterfeit two-dollar bills, and the telegram received here announced the arrest of a third man, Alex. Chisholm, in Halifax. About six months ago an individual made a tour through the maritime provinces, visiting New Glasgow, Stellarton, Westville, Truro, Macdon, Amherst and Halifax. In each place he chose one individual, saying that he was about to form a company to handle counterfeit money, and offered each fifty dollars, one person to each place. He said that forty thousand dollars counterfeit two-dollar bills were to be struck off and divided equally among the shareholders. For some time the scheme did not materialize, the excuse being that one maker of the bills got drunk and split some acid on the bills and spoiled them. He left for Boston on Oct. 17th, returning later with the bills, giving the shareholders two hundred dollars each.

Detective Skelton, in company with Officer Jones, arrested Stewart at Macdon. From information received from Stewart, officer Jones arrested Barkley, a telegraph operator, on whom was found $102 in counterfeit two-dollar bills. Barkley admitted receiving two hundred dollars of the money. This led to the arrest in Halifax of Chisholm, formerly baggage master on the I. C. R., and he was brought here tonight and will be put on trial with the other two men.

New York's Horse Show.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—The White Star line steamer Bovic, which arrived today from Liverpool, brought a trotting mare known as Bertie R., record 2:12. This mare won many trotting events in England under the name of Folly G., and in France under the name of Bertie. The mare will enter the horse show at Madison Square Garden. Entries for the horse show, which opens the week of November 13, show that though the total number of horses on exhibition will be about the same as in the last two or three years, there is an entirely different complexion as to the exhibitors. Whether it is the new conditions, barring winners and champions, or whatever it may be, the fact remains that not in any year has there been so large an infusion of new blood.

Another Allan Liner.

TORONTO, Nov. 7.—The Telegram's cable from London says tidings have reached there that the Allan line steamship Turanian is ashore on Blissh reef, off country Mayo, west coast of Ireland. She had jettisoned some of her cargo of live stock, but was bumping heavily and making water in all the holds. The crew and cattle, it is reported, are safe. She did not carry passengers.

Poetry.

COMP'NY'S HOME TO OUR HOUSE
Comp'ny's come to our home—mother's awful busy—
Lot to do, my little man go an' play with Lizzie,
Go an' play with Lizzie—that's what they always say
When comp'ny comes to our house, "Now run out an' play."
Wonder why they never let a feller see the folks!
I know lots of stories an' anecdotes an' jokes,
I could show the album, an' show em' who is who,
But when I even mention that, why that would never do,
That would never do, my son, you're only in the way;
Lizzie's waitin' in the yard—now run out an' play.

NOTICE.
Ain't it tough, I'd like to know! And then with prink and perk
Mother she goes in the parlor—lay aside your work;
Tos is ready—then they come and set in solemn state,
An' mother says, "Now little man you will have to wait;
Ran along now—here's a cooky—one for Lizzie, too,
An' pretty soon you'll have your tea when all the rest are through."
Then Lis' an' me, we hang around, an' peer in at the door,
An' watch how fast the chicken goes, an' hear them ask for more;
An' eye the nice, big frosted cake, as it passes into view,
A wondering if we'll get a piece when all the rest is through.
There's pleasant parts an' horrid parts to havin' comp'ny come,
There's too much "yes ma'am," please excuse, and not enough of fun,
But on the whole I guess I'm glad when mother says to me,
"Now wash up clean an' comb your hair, for comp'ny's come to tea."

MIZPAH
Go thou thy way, and I go mine;
Apart, yet not afar,
Only a thin veil hangs between
The pathways where we are,
And "God keep watch 'tween thee an' me,"
This is my prayer.
He looks thy way, He looketh mine;
And keeps us near.
I know not where thy road may lie,
Or which way mine shall be;
If mine will lead through parching sands
And thine beside the sea;
Yet God keeps watch 'tween thee and me,
So never fear;
He holds thy hand, He clasps my mine,
And keeps us near.
Should wealth and fame perchance be thine
And my lot lowly be,
Or you be sad and sorrowful,
And grieved for me for me,
Yet God keeps watch 'tween thee and me,
Both be His care.
One arm 'round thee, and one round me
Will keep us near.
I sigh sometimes to see thy face,
But since this may not be,
I'll leave thee to the care of Him
Who cares for thee and me,
"I'll keep you both beneath my wings"—
This comforts dear.
One wing o'er thee, and one o'er me;
So we are near.
And though our paths be separate,
And thy path is not mine,
Yet coming to the mercy seat
Thy soul will meet with mine.
And "God will watch 'tween thee and me,"
I'll whisper here,
He blesseth thee, He blesseth me,
And we are near.

SABBATH IN THE OLD COUNTRY
The winds have blown the smoke away,
Cold is the forge and hushed the mill;
The toll-worn cotters rest today,
Traffic is mute and labor still;
The wood-bird's lays
Chime with the song of sacred praise.
The unharmed horse feeds on the green,
The laboring ox rests in the shade,
A holy calm pervades the scene,
And dumb is the smooth tongue of trade;
Even the brook
Is a soft psalm in nature's book.
The fragrant flowers that light the clod,
Like drops of sunshine from the sky,
Bow their sweet heads, and the green sod
Is touched with tints of every dye;
Like incense to the Sabbath skies.
Under his fig tree and his vine,
That shade the lonely cottage door,
The toiler rests, and reads the lines
Of promise sweet forevermore;
His truth was given
To light the trusting soul to Heaven.
Now softly stealing on the air,
The sweet tones of the Sabbath bell,
Invite to worship, praise and prayer;
The sky seems like a corded shell
Attuned to love,
And swept by angel hand above.

Interruptions Ceased.

A clergyman who had been greatly annoyed by continued interruptions to which he had been subjected during the delivery of his sermons stopped abruptly, and looking round at the congregation spoke as follows:
"Some time ago, while delivering a sermon, I was frequently interrupted by a gentleman sitting in front of me, who gesticulated, moved about and whispered to his neighbors, and at last I addressed to him a sharp reprimand for his unseemly conduct. When the service was over my clerk in the vestry mentioned the matter to me, and asked if I was ignorant of the fact that the person addressed was an idiot. I have since then always hesitated to reprimand any of my own congregation for interrupting me in fear that I may be addressing an idiot, who is not responsible for his actions."
Silence reigned throughout the delivery of the remainder of his sermon.

REV. EDWARD A. WILSON,
33-177,
Brooklyn, New York.
Sick headache is often practically incurable. It is a manifestation of some lack of equilibrium in the nervous system and is beyond reach of perfect cure. The attacks, however, may be few and slight if the causes which provoke them (exciting causes) are found and removed. Spectacles may even cure them when eye strain is the exciting cause. The sufferer must work daily only as much as can be done without the stimulation of tea or coffee, and make it a duty to save a little strength of what is daily made by food and drink. A sleep after dinner and retiring before eight and nine in the evening will be rest enough in most cases. Some persons stand and talk or sit talking when asleep or even dropping into a chair would be wisdom. There are many supposed duties which should be given up by a person whose cerebral and nervous organization is easily set off the poise which produces bodily comfort. Take no medicine but use salt water injections to keep the bowels free. Apply Fend's extract, or witch hazel extract, to your head when hot and always eat less and drink more when your head threatens to ache. Ginger to taste in milk and hot water is quite useful as a diet to tide over a headache. The spice stimulates the digestive tract and the bulk of liquid satisfies the craving for food for a day or two.—Montreal Witness Medical Department.
Storing Squashes for Winter.
"I prefer to leave the squashes where they have grown until a light frost has killed the leaves," says an Iowa correspondent of Orange, Judd Farmer. "Select, if possible, a good, dry day, go through the patch and sever the squashes from the vines without cutting or breaking them. Then place some hay or straw in the bottom of the wagon or wheelbarrow, and place each squash carefully in the same, handling them like eggs, so as not to bruise. Take them to a dry, cool shed or upper room, and there leave them as long as safe from freezing. After this they should be taken to a dry, cool cellar or pit and laid not over two deep, one deep preferred, on shelves, the lowest of which should not be less than one foot from the bottom of the cellar. The cooler they can be kept without freezing the better."

The number before us contains an interesting selection of short stories, anecdotes, accounts of travel and adventure, glimpses of natural science, bits of useful information, and other matter especially suited to the youthful mind. In an article addressed to parents particular stress is laid on the importance of seeing that their children are supplied with something better than the trashy and degrading literature so common at the present day.

Murder at Sea.

Shipping circles and the community at large were startled yesterday morning when word reached this city from Lepraux that a sailor on the American schooner J. B. Vandusen, which left here Saturday afternoon, had murdered the captain, and for a time the story was hardly credited. Many reports were soon in circulation, some most sensational, but generally ranging from a simple murder story to a wholesale mutiny, in which the crew were said to have run off with the schooner and were heading for the West Indies. While the facts, so far as known, are not so gruesome or sensational as some of the reports had them, they are horrible enough.

The first report to reach the city was the following telegram sent by the mate of the schooner to J. M. Driscoll of the west side, one of the owners of the schooner: "PR. LEPREAUX, Nov. 11.—Row on board Vandusen, off Musquash. Capt. Baisley stabbed by Seaman Maxwell. Afterwards falling overboard. Mate with one man took boat to rescue captain, who died on boat before reaching Dipper Harbor. Left St. John and Maxwell on board. Last seen was sailing away from us in the dark directly for land. I think vessel must be ashore between Dipper Harbor and Musquash. What will I do Answer."

(Sgd.) A. T. CAMPBELL.

Mr. Driscoll informed the police at once of what had happened. The insurance underwriters also received several telegrams from Lepraux, and bit by bit more particulars of the tragedy were gleaned.

The J. B. Vandusen, a schooner of 211 tons, sailed from this port Saturday afternoon in charge of Capt. Geo. Baisley, with a cargo of long lumber and laths for New York. She went out short-handed, there being only four men on board besides the captain. Among these was a man named Maxwell, who had previously sailed in the schooner as mate. Maxwell, it is understood, was under the influence of liquor when he shipped, and it is supposed that in a fit of drunken rage he committed the deed.

There was considerable speculation among all interested as to the whereabouts of the schooner. About two o'clock word came from St. George that the schooner had reached Beaver Harbor and had come to an anchorage in safety.

Before this telegram was received, Chief Clark, in company with Sergt. Kilpatrick, had started to drive down. Detective Ring wired the chief at Musquash telling him where the schooner was, and last night Capt. Jenkins received a message from the chief stating that he would proceed to Beaver Harbor. In the meantime word had been sent to arrest Maxwell.

The following telegram was received at this office last night from Point Lepraux: "Mate Campbell of the three masted schooner J. B. Vandusen reached here at one o'clock this morning to report the trouble which took place on that vessel last evening. His statement is as follows: We left St. John yesterday, and when six miles off Musquash light, Capt. Baisley called Seaman Maxwell on duty. Maxwell had been drinking, and after four hours sleep sobred up. The captain called to the mate for help, as Maxwell was using his knife. The mate separated them, the captain going aft. Maxwell followed him, and shortly after there was a cry of captain overboard. The mate took one seaman, leaving the vessel in charge of the steward, and guided by the call through the darkness for help, finally reached the captain and got him in the boat. He was unconscious and expired soon afterwards. The vessel had then disappeared, and it is supposed had run ashore east of Dipper Harbor. The mate sculled the boat into Dipper Harbor where the captain's body will remain until further instructions. Reports today state that the Vandusen reached Beaver Harbor at 10.30 last night, with the seamen and steward on board. Three extra men were placed on her until the crew arrived.

John L. C. Sherrard, the pilot who took the Vandusen out, when seen last night by a sun reporter stated that Maxwell was under the influence of liquor when the steamer left her berth, but seemed rather good natured than otherwise, although he was bullying the captain to some extent, and once Capt. Baisley pushed him away, making some remark that he did not hear. When he was leaving the schooner the captain told him he was going to run into Beaver Harbor and try and get an extra man; he also remarked that he was afraid Maxwell might try and make trouble. Mr. Sherrard was very much surprised when he heard of the occurrence, and said that Maxwell was one of the last men he thought would have used a knife.—Sun.

The Yukon Country.

Nov. 10.—J. R. Tyrrell, the well known explorer of Canada's barren lands, who covered his connection with the geological service some time ago, has arrived here after having spent some time in the Yukon. He is convinced the business of the Yukon is becoming permanent, but many difficulties must be overcome before stability is really felt. He says that 10 per cent. royalty excises a deterrent effect. If it were reduced by half the government would receive more besides encouraging development. He states the indifference between crooks and hillside and bench claims cause much litigation. Tyrrell is devoting himself entirely to mining, having succeeded in obtaining several gold claims and intends returning to Dawson in February.

MY LAST CHANCE.

I was nearly at the end of my meagre resources, and growing desperate, despairing, and, I fear, on occasions, suicidal.

Every day for weeks I had fruitlessly studied the advertisement columns, answering those requiring ladies' help, mothers' help, governesses, even that of the nursery, though, as some say, a fortune had been expended on my education.

The truth was, I was almost penniless, without a soul to help me, and I was ready to accept absolutely anything rather than starve.

As a final effort, after much consideration, I sold my last piece of jewellery, save a brooch, and with a portion of the money—the whole was not twenty shillings—bought another advertisement.

"It's a forlorn hope," I thought, in a very slough of despondency. "It is only throwing good money after bad, and money I sorely need. I shall not have one answer. I never do. Still, 'Nothing venture, nothing have.' It will only hasten the final catastrophe by a day or two."

So my advertisement appeared. It is quite true what Pope says:

"Hope springs eternal in the human breast."

I told myself about once every half hour that I didn't hope; but I did. I could not help it, and felt I could almost have jumped out of my shoes when, a few minutes after I had heard the postman's knock the next morning, my landlady pushed a letter under my door.

I literally pounced upon it. Yes, it was an answer to my advertisement. My heart in my mouth, or feeling so, I took off the envelope, and read: "Gordon Square"—that sounded well—"London. Mrs. Octavia Smythe would like to see F. H., whose advertisement she has just perused. Mrs. Smythe will be at home and see F. H. between six and seven to-morrow evening."

London! I was living at Goshall, where my last engagement had been. The return fare, third-class, was four shillings. I thought of my poor little hoard, and taking it from my purse, arranged it on the table.

"It's a lot to spend upon a chance," I reflected. "I wish Mrs. Octavia Smythe had been a little more definite, that is, explanatory, also a little more thoughtful in respect to time. Between six and seven! If I'm delayed at all, I shall only catch the last train. But the money! Were it twice as much I must not miss a chance. There."

Putting back the silver into my purse, I consulted the time-table. I fear, during the interval, I often began to reckon my chickens before they were hatched; such as concerning whether my engagement would be nice, and my new home pleasant. My new home—for I carried it about with me, having neither kith nor kin that I knew of to care for or care for me.

I had been so very near despair that this little blink of hope quite excited me, and my pulse was beating at nearly double its normal rate, when I knocked at Number—, Gordon Square.

The door was opened by a hybrid, that is half footman, half groom, who regarded me somewhat superciliously, which increased when he learned my business.

"Could I call again? Mrs. Smythe was not at home. She had gone to a matinee."

At that moment I hated Mrs. Smythe. What did she mean by telling me she would be at home, and not keeping her word? Of course I would call again.

Very indignant, I walked about for half an hour, then returned. The footman showed me into a room where I waited nearly three quarters of an hour. Mrs. Smythe being engaged in dressing for dinner.

At last she appeared, tall, stout, as a supercilious saffron footman. She required a governess for her two children, aged four and five. She loaded me with questions; was sorry I had not acquired my French in Paris, my German in Germany, and that I was not a R. A. M., and was I able to cut out and renovate dresses?

Finally, she informed me she would think over it, and if she decided to try me, she would write. I took my leave sick at heart, as well aware as Mrs. Smythe herself that she had no intention of writing. Some tears would force their way despite my effort at control. My journey, the expense, all useless.

"Ah," I half sobbed, "if she only knew the thin line between me and absolute want. Pahaw!" bitterly, "the knowledge would only make a woman like that despise, not pity me."

A clock told me I had ample time to walk to the station, and though tired from sad heart weariness, I determined to save the omnibus fare.

"All my eggs are smashed, my milk spilt," I thought, hurrying on, absorbed by my own troubles, when suddenly I found myself amidst a rush of people. For a moment, as they swirled round the corner, they bore me along with them; but I managed to force my way to the railings and let them pass. There had been a fight, and the police were taking the men to the station. Very soon the street was clear, and I hurried on. If I lost the train there was no other.

It wanted yet ten minutes to the hour when I entered the station, and put my hand in my pocket for my purse wherein was my ticket.

My purse had gone!

The first moment I believed it, the next I didn't. It was impossible. The terror of what its loss meant to me made me say it couldn't be.

But it was. Here were my handkerchiefs, my keys; but purse there was none. When I had been surrounded by that surging crowd it must have been stolen. I felt indignant, humiliated at being made a victim.

Then the real horror of my position broke upon me. How was I to get home? How was I to pay my fare, for my return ticket, had, of course, gone with my purse? I was literally without a penny, without a friend who could assist me, alone in London.

For a moment I could do nothing. I felt too sick and dazed even to think. Then what must I do—what could I do? Whom could I ask where all were alike strangers? Who would lend me the money? I had not a card, not even an addressed envelope to prove who I was, and assure them the loan would be returned. I felt ready to cry, but by an effort restrained my tears, and, the booking office being at the moment empty, determined to try the booking clerk.

"Where for?" he asked, sharply, as I appeared at the pigeon-hole, and, before I had half got through my nervous, hesitating recital of my position, coolly walking away and began casting up figures in a ledger.

Oh, what was I to do? I would, I must try the ticket-collector.

"Lost your purse, eh? Stolen! Don't you know anyone to borrow from in London? That's bad. Please stand aside."

A train had come in, the people were crowding down the stairs. That to move. I drew into a retired corner, then raised my eyes to the clock. Oh, Heaven! It did not want five minutes to the starting of the last train. If I missed it what was I to do?

Do! What could I do? Trouble the money they could not take me home. I should have to wander about the streets until morning—the London streets. What hotel would take me in without payment? Who would run the risk of a stranger's forwarding the sum afterwards, if it were lent?

I began to feel faint, hysterical; and my terror, no doubt, showed on my white face, as I stood leaning against the wall in that retired corner, when I became aware, like one awakening from a dream, of somebody speaking to me. It was a young man, handsome, pleasant-looking, and respectfully dressed, though his clothes were not of the newest.

"I beg your pardon," he said, raising his hat, his voice low and musical; "pray believe I mean no impertinence in addressing you, but you seem in some trouble. If I can be of any service, please do let me be!"

I think I must have looked very pitiable; I know my eyes were brimming with tears, as I raised them to his face. What a pleasant, kind face it was. I did not hesitate an instant in answering him, and explaining my position.

"Ah, London is a very bad place," he smiled. "Its thieves could almost steal one's head without one's knowing it. Have you far to go?"

I told him.

"Will you permit me to assist you?" he asked. "Remember, it might be my own case."

What could I do but thank him, tell him the amount, third-class, and promise to enclose it to him immediately I reached home? He did not give me the money. He was too much of a gentleman to do that. He went and got me a ticket—not a third but a second. Gratefully I received it, and asked, in a tremor of delight, where I was to send back what I owed him.

"There is no haste about that," he smiled; then, as he perceived me draw back: "I beg your pardon, Stanley Greville, Newman Street, Oxford Street."

As he raised his hat in farewell, these words, spoken fervently, leaped from my lips: "Heaven bless you; you have been, sir, a friend indeed. If ever you are in such need as I was, may you find as kind and generous assistance as I have."

The expression of his face abruptly changed; it became grave to earnestness, and he said, impressively:

"Thank you—thank you, very much. Ah, that is your train."

The ticket-collector had shouted it out. I could not wait. I ran up the steps as the train stopped.

All the way home as we rushed through the darkness, and through the night, I could do nothing but think of Stanley Greville's face. It was a strange support to me, and produced a sensation of comfort that dominated my gloomy reflections upon my really now penniless condition.

Next morning, I was wondering from whom I could borrow the money to send to Newman Street, when another letter was pushed beneath my door. Was it a second answer to my advertisement? No, for on the blue, oblong envelope, my name was in full. I broke off the envelope, and, as I looked at the contents, uttered a loud cry.

"Madame" (it ran).

"We beg to inform you that, as the next-of-kin to Samuel Bridg, who died recently in Australia, intestate, you are the inheritor of his wealth, about two thousand a year in shares and property. If you will favor us with an early call, we shall have the pleasure of explaining more fully.

"Your obedient servants,
CLOUD, TENNES & SHAM."

Inheritor to two thousand a year! The inheritor to my mother's cousin, Bridg, who had run away years ago to Australia, and never been heard of! How the next half-hour passed, I don't quite know. I believe I fainted, or lost my reason, for of it I remember nothing.

"Now, this room, my bonjour, I require to be paneled, and with hand-painted scenes of English scenery."

Two years had elapsed since my accession to Samuel Bridg's money. I had just purchased a charming house in old Kensington, and was informing Mr. Lampton, the art furnisher, what I wished done.

"Six months ago, I knew the very man for that," replied my companion. "A clever young artist, a good, noble, hard-working fellow; yet fate seemed ever against him. Try as he would—as he did, he never got on, while hoards of mere dabblers did. I fancy it almost, at last, broke his heart, or his spirit, which is about the same thing."

"Why not give him this paneled to do?" I asked.

"I wish I could, madam," replied Mr. Lampton; "but for six months I've quite lost sight of him. I heard once that he had been desperately ill. I sent round to Newman Street, to inquire, and word was brought back that poor Greville had left three months previously."

"Greville!" I ejaculated. "Not Stanley Greville?"

"That's the man, madam. You know him?"

"He once, though a stranger," I answered, my heart beating and throbbing most foolishly, "did me a great service, one I shall never forget. Mr. Lampton, I would give I know not what to find him—to be of service to him. Is it not possible you could assist me? You say—say, from the manner you speak—I am sure you are his friend."

"I am, indeed, madam!" he ejaculated, fervently. He was a dark, brisk, impulsive little man. "And trust me, I'll not leave a stone unturned that may help you."

But all the stones, metaphorically turned, brought no news of Stanley Greville, of whom, from the night of our acquaintance, I had thought constantly.

Over and over I had almost prayed to see him again, and a feeling, a whisper, like a still, small voice, had ever come to me that I should, and—well, let me confess it—that thought or belief had made me happier than the possession of my wealth.

But the months had sped by without a sign, until Mr. Lampton had mentioned him.

How many more months were now to glide on without a sign, for all our efforts failed, leading to no result, save failure; and known to myself alone, like Clara Vere de Vere, though from a different cause.

"I pined among my halls and towers. The lauged light of my (poor) eyes (Were) wearied of the rolling hours."

Another year, yet no news of Stanley Greville, when one day about dusk, I was hastening home through the park, thinking of him, as I was ever doing. That part of the park seemed deserted, save for myself, when I became aware of a man sitting upon a seat I was approaching—a shabby man, with that air of hopeless despair and dejection, the outcome too often of want, one sees so often. Yet there was something more than pity that attracted my attention in this case. My inner self was conscious, by its keener, subtler essence, of that which my grosser outer self was not.

But suddenly he arose, and a quick electric thrill ran through me.

He hurried swiftly on, as one who has arrived at a sudden resolve, and I, perplexed, what to do, followed, full of much joy, for I knew I had found Stanley Greville at last!

Through the shadows under the trees he went, I scarcely able to keep near him. Where was he going? I must speak before he left the park. What was that? A gleam, a sudden shine of pale light before him—the gleam of water.

It was to that he was hastening. I knew, then, the truth.

My heart stood paralyzed with terror, with fear; a weight felt on my limbs. But as he reached the fatal edge my strength came, and with a cry I ran forward, and with both hands clasped his arm, clinging to him.

"No, no!" I cried. "No, no; not that, Stanley Greville. Be a man, fight and live. Oh! Heaven! not that!"

He looked down at me, startled, and I saw how thin, pale and haggard he was. He knew me, even in the dusk, for he exclaimed:

"Is it you? How did you come here?"

He did not speak as if years had divided us, but as though we had parted but yesterday. Had I been in his thoughts, as he in mine?

"Heaven and gratitude sent me," I answered, hysterically, "I think, to save you. What you contemplated doing was through despair. Ah! I know what that is. But you need despair no longer.

There is work to be done. Mr. Lampton—you know him—he has work for you. Oh! for months we have been seeking you."

"Well!" he repeated.

"Yes. Mr. Lampton told me all, and I am no longer poor. Oh, yes, there is much for you to do, and you shall make a name yet."

"How good and kind you are," he said, fervently.

"I have but taken a leaf from your book," I laughed.

"Ah! you do not know."

"I know," I answered now, gravely, "that no one has a right to give up hope. At the eleventh hour, when all appears darkest, the silver lining of our black cloud will show. It was so with me. It shall be so with you. Come with me; trust me. I will prove it."

He seemed half bewildered, but came with me as I bade, and I have kept my word. Of those English landscapes in my bonjour Stanley Greville was the painter; now he is their master—and mine!

THE WITHOUT CHARGE. End-of-the-Century Offer.

AN EXTRAORDINARILY LIBERAL PROPOSITION.

FOR LESS THAN THE 2 PAPERS AND A 300 PAGE BOOK PRICE OF ONE PAPER

First, and properly, in making a choice of reading for the home you select your own home paper. However good may be the reading of other papers, there is none that comes home so closely to you as your local weekly. It is to further increase this interest by adding to our lists that the following liberal proposition is made to subscribers. We have been careful to form combinations only where we knew we were touching safe ground and could thoroughly recommend the publications offered. Read carefully every word of this offer for it means a saving of money to you.

The Montreal Daily Herald
A GREAT METROPOLITAN DAILY

WE are pleased to announce that we have been able to make most extraordinarily liberal arrangements with the publishers of one of the greatest of Canadian dailies—The Montreal Daily Herald.

The Herald has achieved a well-deserved reputation for the remarkable value it gives its readers. It is one of the most enterprising newspapers in the Dominion, and in thousands of home circles is welcomed on account of the great interest it manifests in subjects of special interest to the family. It is admittedly the favorite daily of the women of Canada. To the farmer and business man, it appeals through its accurate market reports and business columns. To the young men, through the attention it bestows on clean, manly sport. To the lover of fiction, through the excellent stories appearing regularly in its columns. To the politician, through the calm and moderate tone of its editorial expressions.

The only reason which prompted the publishers of The Herald to make us the offer, which enables us to club the two papers at the extraordinarily low price given below, is their desire to immediately introduce the Daily Herald in large numbers in this neighborhood. The offer they now make will hold good for a limited time only.

It should be mentioned that subscribers to The Herald during the next few months will enjoy to the full the opportunity which that paper is offering to all readers to secure valuable books at merely nominal figures.

The Dominion Cook Book
A Copy for Every Subscriber

IN the best sense of the term this is an Ideal Cook Book—ideal in being a practical book—a book which the housewife will want to keep constantly by her side and can depend on, because of the simplicity and reliability of every recipe. Starting with a chapter on soups, naturally the first course, throughout its three hundred pages and over there are to be found more than 1,000 recipes, winding up with an excellent chapter on sick room cookery. Following the cookery section there is a department entitled "The Doctor," in which are recipes selected from eminent authorities, and which will be found invaluable where the doctor is not readily available. The recipes are numbered throughout the book, and each is prefaced with a list of the ingredients called for by the recipe, rendering it unnecessary for the housewife to read through the entire recipe and make calculation of what is wanted. Size of page is 5 inches by 8 inches, bound in handsome oilcloth covers. It would be a mistake to confuse this book with any paper-bound cook book that would go so pieces in no time.

OUR BIG OFFER

an Ideal Local Paper, every week, from the present date to January 1, 1901..... $1 00
THE MONTREAL DAILY HERALD, One Year..... 3 00
THE DOMINION COOK BOOK, over 300 pages and more than 1,000 recipes, bound substantially in white oilcloth..... 1 00
$5 00

ALL THIS FOR $2 00

Wisdom suggests taking advantage of this offer quickly. If you are now a subscriber to either paper, and your time has not yet expired, by taking advantage of our big offer promptly, your subscription will be extended one year from date of expiry. Everything will go to you at once. The Herald, during the closing months of 1899, will make some wonderfully liberal offers to subscribers. The Cook Book is mailed to you promptly on receipt of order, and coming along Pair Time and Thanksgiving Day, and later Christmas and New Year's, you want this book beside you. Drop into the office the first time you are in town, or, if more convenient, sit down now and write a letter, enclosing amount, and everything will have our prompt attention.

We cannot but consider the hydra-headed cigarette habit the greatest evil threatening the youth of our land.

eretic user lies in the practice, of late years so enormously prevalent, of inhaling the smoke. This quickly introduces a narcotic poison into the system and awakens sensations akin to those produced by opium. From the Medical Record we call the following: "The seriousness of cigarette smoke inhalation lies not alone in the fact that it involves a steady absorption of poison, but in the utter hopelessness of the habit and entire inability of the indulger to give it up."

Statistics corroborate the fact of a steady increase in the manufacture and sale of cigarettes, not only in the United States but in our own Dominion. In the former country, despite the decrease in manufactured tobacco, snuff and cigars—attributable to the stringency of the times—3,000,000,000 cigarettes were manufactured during the past fiscal year. This represents an average of about fifty cigarettes per capita. The Commercial Gazette says: "Ten years ago the number manufactured yearly was far below a billion." The increase truly is terrific and represents not only that much money worse than wasted, and which might have been turned into useful channels, but what is decidedly worse, it represents an awful increase in wrecked lives and premature deaths.

The old gentleman was not as Green as He Looked.
In a pullman car on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway the other week a young traveller noticed an old, white-bearded gentleman trying to get into a light dust coat. The young man rushed to his assistance, and in helping him with the garment noticed a good sized whiskey-bottle protruding from one of the pockets. Being of a waggish nature, he appropriated the bottle, helped the stranger on with his coat and then pulling out the flask said, "Will you take a drink?"

Chipman. A race if not rosate history is drawn in last week's GAZETTE by an anonymous writer, respecting the department of two of the fair daughters of a neighboring parish, while the Sheriff of Sunbury was endeavoring to serve an execution upon their aged father, Wm. Dorcy, of Northfield. The author of the article states that these two girls set a vicious dog upon Sheriff Holden and his horse which the defendants deny, but admit that one of them seized the sheriff's horse by the bridle to prevent the horse from trampling her underfoot. Lawyer Gregory will plead the defendants' case when it comes off in the County Court and thinks the girls will gain the verdict. Messrs. Ebbett and Mercier have been very busy the past season in doing inside painting in this community. Those who have been fortunate in securing their services are loud in their praises and have no hesitancy in stating that they have turned out work that will compare more than favorably with the best painters of St. John. Mr. Wm. Ebbett is a young man who hails from Gagetown and a workman who needeth not to be ashamed as his work will speak for itself and can be seen here at Mr. Andrew Darrak's who will take pleasure in showing admiring connoisseurs what a Gagetown boy can do. Beside these, two more sons live in the west, Theodore and Isaac, who were unable to visit their venerable parent before his death. Rev. Mr. McIntyre who conducted the funeral ceremonies paid a just tribute of respect to the memory of the departed as his remains were laid at rest in the Baptist burying ground at the mouth of Salmon Creek. Harry King is the owner of a handsome English Pointer that has recently been brought over from England and is probably the most costly canine species in the county. B., Nov. 11.—A dastardly attempt to wipe out this thriving little village was made late last night. The old school building, which is very near the new one, and in the lower end of the village, was found in flames. While the firemen were working manfully to save the new building, the bell again sounded, and word was promptly handed in that fire was discovered in the basement of Bartt's two-story building in the upper and windward part of the village. The firemen responded promptly to this call, to find that the fire had already been extinguished. Some kerosene had been used, also rags near a cask of oil. The site of the new school building is badly charred with the fire and some glass broken. The fire policy for $800 on the old building expired in September. The new building was to be occupied January 1st. Much praise is due the efficient fire department. The firebug has not yet been discovered. Big Fire at St. John. St. JOHN, Nov. 11.—A disastrous fire commenced here about ten o'clock last evening, when the tannery owned by Thomas Peters, Union Street, was found to be on fire. Owing to the oils and inflammable finishing materials stored in the tannery, there was great danger in fighting the flames. Every now and then some cask of this material exploded sending into the air millions of sparks and burning debris. From the tannery the fire worked back to Brussels and toward Patrick streets. The house owned by John Peters is a total loss. The total loss is estimated at $20,000. A brick house owned by G. A. Moore stopped the advance of the flames. The fire evidently started in the boiler room of the tannery and its advance was very swift. Fire and Loss of Life. RENFREW, Ont., Nov. 10.—A. A. Wright & Co.'s large business block was gutted by fire early this morning. For a time the whole upper portion of the business section was in great danger. The loss on the building stock is estimated to be between $40,000 and $50,000; insurance, $15,000 to $20,000. Adam Bion, a bus driver of the Dominion Hotel, was killed by being caught under a mass of falling brick.

Terrible Battle. PORTO CABELLO, Venezuela, Nov. 12.—General Paredes, a former commander in the army of ex-President Andrade, who had refused the demand made upon him by General Castro and the de facto authorities to surrender the town, even when this was re-inforced by the request of the British, American, French, German and Dutch commanders, surrendered this morning at 10 o'clock after a terrible battle. The aspect of the city is one of ruin and devastation, and it is estimated that upwards of 600 persons were killed or wounded during the fighting. Dr. Gratiot of the U. S. cruiser Detroit and the other surgeons of the various warships in the harbor are ministering to the wants of the wounded. Gen. Ramon Guerra began a land attack upon the town and the position of Gen. Paredes on Friday night. Desultory fighting continued until Saturday morning, about 4 o'clock, and the fierce struggle ensued. Gen. Paredes made a stubborn defence, but Gen. Guerra forced an entrance into the town at 5 o'clock yesterday. As early as 8 o'clock in the morning the fleet arrived and began a bombardment, but the range was too great and the firing proved ineffective. Gen. Paredes held the fort on the hill and Fort Libertador until this morning. Porto Cabello is about twenty miles northwest of Valencia, on the Gulf of Trist. It has a spacious, safe port, with a mole and good wharves. The population is about 9,000. Its import and export trade has been considerable. Leading articles of export are coffee, hides, skins, fustic, logwood and indigo. Prior to the bombardment it had a large municipal building, a customs house, a hospital, a charitable institution and many large and well kept warehouses. Accused of Murder. TORONTO, Nov. 9.—Two burglars entered the house of John E. Varcoe, grocer, Queen street East, early this morning, and in the endeavor to rob him shot Varcoe in the groin and right side. They then endeavored to escape, with the result that one jumped from the second story window and was badly hurt. The other was pursued by Policeman Dickson, who fired four shots at him, finally bringing him down. Both men were taken in an ambulance to the police station, where it was found they were Henry Williams and James McIntosh. Varcoe was removed to the General Hospital, where he died at seven o'clock this morning. The men under arrest now have to face a charge of murder.

B., lives to tell the tale—Suffered for Seven Years with Kidney Disease—Cured by a Few Boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills. INDIANTOWN, St. John, N. B., Nov. 13.—Robert Moore of this place is famous as the man who escaped death from chronic Kidney Disease by means of Dodd's Kidney Pills. He likens Dodd's Kidney Pills to a bridge which has carried him safely over the chasm of death. He was travelling on a road still traversed by far too many people in this country—the road to the grave from one of the forms of Kidney Disease, including Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Rheumatism, Heart Disease, Dropsy, Bladder and Urinary Affections, Women's Weakness and Blood Poisons. There is only one way of crossing this dark gulf and Mr. Moore speaks of it in the following letter written in answer to a correspondent:—"For seven years I have been a victim of Kidney Disease, at times suffering the most excruciating pain. I had almost considered my case hopeless and had given up medical treatment. One day while I had been to get a plaster to apply to my back, a boy handed me a paper about Dodd's Kidney Pills. I came home. My wife addressed me, for I could not address myself, and went to bed. Then my wife got a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills at Mr. Hobson's, the druggist on Main St. I used them and two more, when I was able to go to work. "If any man mis doubts me let him come to me or any of my neighbors and they or I will soon convince him. I thank Dodd's Kidney Pills, the bridge that carried me over and lots of others to whom I have recommended them do the same. I wish all Kidney Disease victims could find the relief I have."
