CHAPTER VII.

"I never heard of her!"
"Let us go in," she said; and Harold, suppressing a sigh, followed her.
Sir Talbot rose and led her to a seat beside him, and caressing her hand, looked into her face with the combined loving eagerness and anxiety which had marked his manner since their meeting, and with a well-defined pride added thereto.
"Are you tired, my dear?" he asked.
"You have come a long way, and the excitement and strangeness! and yet you do not seem strange; that is what delights me so, next to your resemblance to me, if such a beautiful face as that can be likened to the old, wrinkled one of mine! You feel that you are at home, Lillian; is it not so?"
She smiled faintly.
"Yes, Sir Talbot."
The old man winced.
"Sir Talbot!" he said, reproachfully. "Ah! and he sighed, 'it is too soon for you to realize that you have a father! But—but try to remember it, dear Lillian!'"
"I will," she said, in a low voice—"I will, father."
Sir Talbot bent forward and kissed her, then put his white hand upon her thick, silky hair.
"What beautiful hair you have, Lillian and eyes!"
She smiled, and colored faintly as she glanced sideways at Harold, who stood looking down at them from a distance.
"You will make me vain, father," she said in a low voice.
"I almost wish I could," responded the old man. "You seem to be too perfect to be a daughter of mine, Lillian."

And a vague cloud crossed his forehead for a moment.
She leaned back with a lowered face.
"You will discover my imperfections and shortcomings all too soon," she said; and a sigh seemed to hover about her lips.
"God grant I may be spared to learn your whole heart, my child!" said the old man; and he turned away his head to hide the tears which filled his eyes.
"But come," he said, rallying. "I must not make the lesson too long this first night. It is hard to part with you even till the morning, but I know you must be tired. Now, Lillian, it is too long—he paused—a long time since Woodleigh has had a mistress to preside over it, and though we have taken some pains, some little thing or other may not please you. You will not forget that you are mistress here, and that every wish of yours is to be respected and gratified. If there is anything, however great or small, that you would like altered, altered it shall be. Remember that, Lillian."
She stood and looked down at him speechless for a moment; then, as Harold touched the bell, the old man took her in his arms.
"Good-night, good-night, my darling. May your first night at home be filled with happy dreams of happier days to come! and, with something like reverence mingling and refining his love, he took her lovely face in his hands and kissed her.
A quiver passed over the mobile lips as the old man touched them lightly, and as she kissed him in return, the color seemed to fade slowly from her cheek.
Then she turned to Harold and held out her hand.
"Good-night," she said, with a smile; "I shall miss the ship's bells to-morrow morning, and so glided from their sight.
There was a good minute's silence, then Sir Talbot crossed the room and laid his hand on Harold's broad shoulder.
"Harold!" he said, and his voice trembled; "how shall I thank you for the treasure you have restored to me! No wonder you broke down when you tried to describe her beauty by your words; and her grace and exquisite breeding, surely you noticed it, Harold! A princess of the blood could not look, and speak, and move more imperially! Harold, I long and yet I dread to hear the story of her past!"
Harold raised his head.
"It is not a welcome subject with her, sir," he said.
"And I shall not broach it," said Sir Talbot, quickly. "It is enough for me that she is here. As one accepts a beautiful vision unquestioningly, so I accept her. I feel to-night as if it were a dream which some harsh, uncongenial word would dispel." Harold, Harold, we must make her happy!"
At the word "we" Harold tugged at his mustache with a certain wistful uncertainty.
"I do not think it will be difficult, sir," he said; "she seems easily pleased. Such affection as yours will go a long way to rendering her happy."

"And atoning for the past; do you think so, do you really think so?" eagerly queried Sir Talbot. "But, Harold," he went on, scanning the handsome, downcast face; "you are sure that she and you get on all right, that there is no—no misunderstanding; but that's too distinct a word."
"There is no misunderstanding," said Harold, thoughtfully. "No, but—and he paused.
"But what?" asked Sir Talbot, anxiously.
"But—oh, nothing, sir; well, there seems to be a vague something, an indefinable barrier between us. I cannot put it into words," he went on musingly, and almost to himself. "Not a coldness, certainly not that, for she is too grateful for any little, trifling service I am fortunate to render to her. As it is not coldness, it is a strange, indescribable reserve. It has been so all along; from the first night I discovered her until now." "He stopped, suddenly, as if recalled to the fact of the old man's anxious face. "But there, sir, I am not discouraged."
"No, no," said Sir Talbot. "Remember our covenant, Harold," and he held up one white, thin finger.
"Our covenant, sir," said Harold with a faint, almost anxious smile. "Yes, it is not likely I would forget it. But when we made it, we two, we forgot, I think, that there was a third person to the bargain; and that—beautiful girl. We have to get her signature to the bond, sir, and throwing himself into a chair, he thrust his hands into his pockets and lowered his face.
"We shall get it, we shall get it," said the old man. "Let me enjoy my happiness without a shadow to-night; my heart is shared between you, Harold."
With the same graceful composure, Lillian Woodleigh crossed the hall and ascended the broad staircase. Every inch of the way was elegant, not only of the wealth of her new home, but of the welcome prepared for her. Indeed, the old Hall had been transformed, decorations of the most elaborate and artistic, and therefore of the most costly, kind met her gaze at every point. Her journey to her rooms was marked, as it were, on all sides by wealth and the beauty which wealth alone can purchase. Choice exotics lined the stairs and filled the corridors with subtle perfume; rare statues and priceless pictures gleamed softly in the shaded lights. Once or twice a servant in the Woodleigh livery crossed her view noiselessly, or stood with bowed head to allow her to pass. The very maid who had been hired to wait upon her, and who was in appearance and manner all that a lady should be, seemed to regard her as if she were a superior being.

And yet she moved on with the most perfect composure, seeing everything to its details yet appearing to notice nothing.
With noiseless ease the maid escorted her to her rooms, a dainty suite of apartments furnished with an anxious care, made evident and eloquent in every particular, from the very costly inlaid furniture and rare lace hangings, to the antique bowl of roses that stood upon a table to greet her waking moments.
Nothing had been forgotten. Silently she allowed the maid to envelop her in a dressing gown, and silently she sat for some minute or two after the door had closed and she was left alone.
She had earned those moments of supreme rest; she had played her difficult, dangerous part well. She had not undertaken the character she had assumed, and more fatal still, she had not for one moment overacted.
Here she sat the acknowledged daughter of Sir Talbot Woodleigh, and the mistress of Woodleigh Hall. Suddenly a thought flashed through her mind.
What if that other girl whom she had left in the prairie hut had been in her place, would she have gone through the ordeal so easily and passed it so well?
A smile of satisfaction, almost of pride, crossed her pale face, as she felt instinctively that the other girl would have failed. Only an actress by nature and harmony could have played the difficult role she had successfully performed.
For a moment or two, incredible as it may seem, professional pride absorbed her mind; to the exclusion of all other emotions. She had acted her part well; so well, at times, to deceive even herself.

Rheumatism Cured In 3 Weeks
By Father Morriac's "No. 7" Tablets.
Mr. James L.E. Johnston, a prominent member of the Citizen's Band, of Chatham, N.B. writes:—"I contracted Rheumatism by exposure five years ago, and was ailing for two months and in great pain all the time. I got Father Morriac's No. 7 Tablets, and took them for about three weeks, when the Rheumatism all left me, and I have had no return of the pain since."
"Father Morriac's No. 7" Tablets have a remarkable record of cures of Rheumatism and Kidney Troubles. They act directly on the kidneys, which have become clogged with impurities and are therefore unable to free the blood of the poisons it is continually gathering from every part of the body. The tablets clear the kidneys and tone them up for their work so that they can properly purify the blood. Once the Uric Acid is taken out of the blood the agonizing pains stop, and the Rheumatism is cured. "No. 7" tablets cost 50c at your dealer's, or from Father Morriac's Medicine Co., Ltd., Chatham, N.B. 19

Itching Piles For 27 Yrs.
Despaired of ever getting relief until cure came 3 years ago with use of DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.
Mr. John Johnson, Cavley, Alta., writes: "Three years ago I was cured of blind, itching piles of twenty-seven years' standing by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. I used to think that death would be the only relief I could ever get from the terrible misery of piles."
"Dr. Chase's Ointment is worth six dollars a box instead of sixty cents by dollars a man since using it. I am farming all the time now and never miss a day. Words fail to express my gratitude for the cure this Ointment made for me. I cannot tell half as much about it as it deserves. Any one doubting this can write direct to me."
Do not accept an imitation or substitute in place of Dr. Chase's Ointment, for there has yet to be discovered a treatment which so promptly gives relief from itching and so thoroughly cures every form of piles. 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Toronto. ## The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

"Are your tools sharp enough?"

It seems to me that is a question which ought not to be left wholly to the workman who saws, or files, or carves, or cuts real materials, but should be asked also by all of us who are building, or trying to build, our structure of achievement and success.

Once in so often I think all of us ought to sit down, examine all the tools we are working with, and ask ourselves, "Are they in the best possible condition? Are they sharp enough?"

For instance, how about the most wonderful and delicate tool that God has given man—eyes. In what condition are they? Is your tool of eyesight blunted by improper use, dulled by a failure to provide it with a necessary auxiliary, or is it as keen as science and care can make them?

What about your stomach? More than anything else, I fancy, the stomach is allowed to become a blunted tool, working harm where it should combine with the other tools to work good.

How about your tool of personal appearance? Such a wonderful, such an important tool. Do you give it the careful daily polishing and sharpening of absolute personal cleanliness, of minute attention to all that goes to make a man or woman well groomed; of painstaking selection and care of your clothes, that this tool needs to keep it efficient?

How about the tools of handwriting and diction? Are they both as sharp as they should be? I once knew a young man who started on his business career well equipped in all but handwriting. He was quick, intelligent, of good address, and full of ideas, but he wrote a scraggly unbusiness-like hand. He might have said, "I can succeed by the use of my other sharp tools, even if this one does happen to be dull." But he didn't. He wasn't that kind. Instead he said, "I want all my tools sharp." That is, I don't suppose he said just that, but he lived it. For he spent three evenings a week all through his first winter in business at a commercial night school, struggling with his penmanship, and sallied forth with all his tools sharp. Which is pretty nearly why, I fancy, that at thirty his structure of achievement towers far above that of any of his classmates, who were contented to have a few sharp tools and let the rest be dull.

How about your tool of system and orderliness? When I hear of a fairly successful business man working at an untidy desk, and in haphazard fashion, instead of being impressed as so many people are by the fact that a man can succeed despite untidiness and lack of system, I always think sadly how much more successful he might have been had his tool of system and order been sharp.

There are just a few suggestions. There are many tools that he who would rear a fair temple of achievement, must keep bright and keen. A little thought will tell you what they are in your case.

—Are you keeping them so?

Ruth Cameron

Remedies are Needed

Were we perfect, which we are not, medicines would not often be needed. But since our systems have become weakened, impaired and broken down through indiscretions which have gone on from the early ages, through countless generations, remedies are needed to aid Nature in correcting our inherited and otherwise acquired weaknesses. To reach the seat of stomach weakness and consequent digestive troubles, there is nothing so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a glyceric compound, extracted from native medicinal roots—sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For Weak Stomach, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Stomach after eating, Heartburn, Bad Breath, Belching of food, Chronic Diarrhea and other Intestinal Derangements, the "Discovery" is a time-proven and most efficient remedy.

The genuine has on its outside wrapper the Signature

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic, medicine or know composition, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

Fads and Fashions.

Hats do not match gowns.

Afternoon frocks escape the ground.

Butterfly motifs are extensively used.

Wide stitching is again in vogue for girls.

There has been a revival of silver filigree.

Silk gloves come in all colors and in all lengths.

Some of the newest raincoats are made with capes.

Changeable silks were never more used than at this minute.

No one longer sees the stiff-boned collar in the evening.

Crocheted handings are again trimming summer coats and gowns.

For all styles of hair dressing parted hair is very popular.

Some of the chiffon veils are hemstitched on all four sides.

Many of the new sashes are edged with fringe and silk tassels.

Parasols and stockings match the gown, whether the shoes do or not.

White wash ribbons are fast replacing the colored ones for lingerie.

Changeable taffetas are in high favor for little summer afternoon frocks.

The fringe appears on wraps, the lower edge of skirts, hats and parasols.

Deep hems with design of silk-colored cords are put in many kinds of gowns.

Tailor-made of silk and satin are seen more and more as the season advances.

Chiffon embroidered with chenille for a gauzy evening wrap is quite effective.

One of the new fancies in gloves is

A Round Trip on the Steamer Susu.

BY C. R. D.

On Tuesday evening, June 1st, after the usual preparations which one makes for travel, I proceeded to Crosbie & Co's. wharf and on boarding the steamer I was met by the chief steward, who politely escorted the writer to number five stateroom, where placed my luggage, and returned to the deck to await the departure of the ship.

At 4 p.m. we started out from the pier with a stiff breeze blowing from the N.W., and after the usual waving of handkerchiefs we headed for the Narrows, where the last glimpse of St. John's city was obtained. We were how passing Cable Cove and running down the shore at a lively rate, and at 5 p.m. we passed Torbay Head, which is a very prominent point of land rising to a height of three hundred feet. As the wind was a kind of cold, we went to the smoking room where we passed the time until tea hour playing cards and draughts. The ringing of the bell called us to the saloon, where we sat down and did full justice to the good things placed before us. Tea being over we returned to the deck and were surprised to find that we had

The New Council.

We congratulate Messrs. Martin, Cooker, Channing, Ryan, Mullaly and Myrick on their election as members of the City Council. The office to which they have been elected is high and honorable and its responsibilities are by no means light. We are not inclined to under-rate the difficulties which they have to face, but we believe they can be overcome, and moreover, we declare that they must be overcome. What is required is determination to discover the causes which have given St. John's its bad eminence in death-rate; an intention to eradicate the evil; courage in approaching difficulties and tact in dealing with men. The problem of the death rate overshadows every other problem. The hundreds of persons who die annually from disease engendered by dirt is appalling. The city must be cleaned up. The streets must be made sweeter. The drains must be cleared, and the sewers flushed, and the noxious atmosphere which shrouds them dissipated. The six Councillors and the Mayor, whom citizens have chosen, have sought the office with some knowledge at least of the difficulties of the offices to which they aspired. Citizens have granted them the boon they prayed for. The Mayor and Councillors will have the dignities and emolument of their offices, but they will also be saddled with onerous duties. Let them not shirk the latter. We believe that every one of them will assume office with the intention of honestly fulfilling the duties of their position. The five Councillors new to their office will have the advantage of the counsel and experience of Mayor Ellis and Deputy Mayor Martin, the former with eight years and the latter with four years familiarity with the work of the Council. The election of the Mayor by acclamation and the placing of Mr. Martin at the top of the poll show that the electors were not unmindful of a principle we laid down before the Municipal campaign, viz., that knowledge and experience of old Councillors are assets valuable to the city. In conclusion, we reiterate much responsibility is imposed on the new Mayor and Councillors. Much is expected of them, and "Reform" and other vigilants will keep an eye on them and note what they do and what they leave undone.

Three Fine Trophies.

The three handsome silver cups presented by the Trades and Labor Council, Sir E. P. Morris and Mr. P. F. Collins for competition in the Labor Day Sports, Tuesday, were put on exhibition in the store of the latter gentleman yesterday and attracted much attention. The 46 medals and other cups will be shown to-morrow.

Is Dangerously Ill.

Mrs. Byrne, wife of Mr. James Byrne, of the Horwood Lumber Co's premises, is dangerously ill at the General Hospital where she recently went. The physicians there hope, however, that with proper care and attention she will pull through all right.

He Often Appears.

A labourer who often appears in court for inebriety, was arrested last evening and brought to the station. This is his tenth time to be arrested this season. He had a bottle of liquor on him, and if not taken into custody might have met with an accident.

Stormy Weather.

Yesterday the rain poured down in torrents in Trinity and Conception Bays, while during the afternoon the wind blew a gale in both sections. As a result a heavy sea ran and it is feared that more traps and nets have been damaged.

Bird Island.

A Paradise for the Feathered Kind—Adventures and Loss of Life of Its Explorers.

Few people have yet heard of that famous island, near Cape St. Mary's, which is named Bird Island. No other name could suit the purpose so well, for the island is a living mass of birds of all kinds, but more especially at this date of the gannets, (a large bird about the size of a goose) and murre.

The island is situated about one-half mile south-west from the Cape. It is about 300 feet long, and about 100 feet wide, and has an almost perpendicular cliff all around its shores. Every inch of the island is practically covered with birds. Up to 25 years ago it was the breeding place of the murre, gulls, tricklacs and pigeons. They did then have entire possession of the island. But about the year 1885 the gannet took control of the island and determined on making it her home. As years rolled on other birds insisted on making it their home, and at the present time the gannets and murre control it. There are, however, many other kinds of birds, but the above mentioned are the most plentiful. Both are getting more numerous as the years roll on, but it is feared by many that the gannets will be in a short time the rulers.

The island is about forty yards from the mainland, and has an almost perpendicular coast. On a fine day, with a slight westerly breeze blowing, it would greatly interest a person to sit on the green bank of the mainland and view the island, for you would be looking at a scene that cannot be equalled in any part of the world. The island is a moving mass of birds, (now do not misunderstand me) it is not a few thousand birds, but hundreds of thousands of birds covering the rocky surface as thick as they can stow. There is always a continual cloud of birds flying over and around the island. Like bees around a hive, but ten thousand times thicker; they make as much noise chattering and shrieking that it is with difficulty you can hear your chum beside you talking. The birds are always there.

Sportsmen who want to enjoy a few days shooting cannot secure a more suitable spot, for sport is here enjoyed to its utmost perfection, because there are always birds passing to and fro over the island. One can scarcely believe what a charming island this is with its numerous bird qualities. It far outclasses any other near the coast of Newfoundland. If Bird Island, with its many attractions, was in far-off South Africa or on the distant shores of India, the world would to-day know more about it, because it would be advertised to them in the true sense of what it is and has been.

Probably this is the first time many of our own people, in fact, Placentia Bay people have ever heard tell of this most remarkable island. Ex-President Roosevelt in his late famous hunting trip did not meet a sight that could be compared to the Bird Island in June, July or August; for during these hot summer months there are base but this puzzled him; he could not climb down, he thought he would have to stay there. By this time a goodly number of people had collected on the beach and saw the unsafe position he was in. They got a piece of twine and tied a stone to one end of it, and on the other end a rope, they then threw him the stone; when he (Cohoon) got the stone he hauled on the twine and got the rope and felt safe. They got a block and made a tackle, then rigged a boatswain's chair and secured himself firm to one part of the tackle. The people on the mainland now tried to haul him ashore, but through some fumble when he stepped from the island one part of the tackle suddenly slackened, and Cohoon went down a distance of 50 feet. Only he was so firmly secured in the chair, and the rope so strong, it would have been all over with him. After a short time they had him safely landed on the shore. He sincerely thanked the good and kind people who assisted in removing him from the island. He was not contented with this experience but tried to climb another such cliff, it being the Shaz Roost, at Cuslett, P.B. He was in this attempt going to seek crew's eggs, but the problem of getting there had to be solved. However, he got a small manilla buoy line and tied it to the top of the hill, and went down on the line opposite to where the crew's nest was situated, he then swung himself into it after a difficult time. He took eggs and showed them to his companion who was at the foot of the cliff. He then climbed up the line and succeeded in getting to where the line hung out over the cliff, but he couldn't get his fingers between the line and rock; for fully 15 minutes did he struggle to get over the pinch, but in vain. His strength became exhausted, his mind weary, and his whole body tired and worn out. He now slipped down the line to get into the nest to take a rest; he tried to swing himself in but couldn't, he was exhausted, but still he tried, but still in vain. Hanging on a buoy line (a small half inch rope), for 15 minutes, struggling hard, was more than the human heart of man could endure. He glanced above, he looked below and saw his end, and exclaimed: "It is all over!" Being nervous of seeing his death so near his strength failed him, and he began slipping down the line, the rope left his hands and his last effort was to cross his hands on his breast to try and grip the line. But, alas! he was exhausted. It was all over with poor Cohoon, he slipped down the line and fell 70 feet on a flat rock and rolled into the sea; he was instantly killed. His companion had his body dressed, cofined and sent home for burial to his friends in the U. S. A.

I have now said enough about Bird Island for the present, but some able pen than mine is wanted to write and explain to the world the beauty of this remarkable island.

Do You Know Your Ailment?

Or is it a complication which can be reached only by DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

There is only one medicine that can prove thoroughly satisfactory in complicated ailments of the liver and kidneys, and that is Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

They begin by regulating the bowels and awakening the action of the liver, thereby effecting a thorough cleansing of the excretory system. By thus removing the poisons from the system they lighten the work of the kidneys and gradually restore them to health.

Nobody who once learns of the definite and certain action of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in regulating and invigorating the kidneys, liver and bowels, is willing to take chances by experimenting with other medicines.

Such ailments as biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion, liver complaint and kidney disease yield readily to this treatment.

THE NEW COUNCIL.

All yesterday afternoon and last night the attraction for citizens was Duckworth Street, opposite the Seamen's Home, where the bulletins of the voting in the Municipal contest were being exhibited. All through the day the position of the candidates did not alter, the first six standing thus: Martin, Coaker, Channing, Bishop, Ryan, Mullaly. During the evening Mullaly's stock took a rise and he took fifth place, and until well into the night it looked as if these would be the successful men. Then it was seen that Mr. Myrick's vote was increasing, and when the 1600 mark was passed the bulletin showed Myrick only 9 votes behind Bishop, he having picked up 59 votes on this particular hundred. When the next record was shown Myrick had forged ahead of Bishop, taking sixth place and increasing his lead until when the poll was closed at 12.30 this morning he led Mr. Bishop by 101 votes. When the poll was declared from the window of the building by Mayor Ellis, cheer after cheer greeted the new Councillors, whose position and votes were:—

Martin	1,831
Coaker	1,768
Channing	1,658
Ryan	1,600
Mullaly	1,513
Myrick	1,463

The defeated candidates had:—

Bishop	1,362
Moore	1,355
Searle	1,245
Laracy	1,170
Penny	1,035
Fitzpatrick	896

The total number of votes cast was 3,192. Number accepted, 3,171; number spoiled, 21. After the result was announced Mr. Martin, who takes the honored position of Deputy Mayor, addressed the crowd thanking them heartily for the honor conferred on him, and was followed by the other newly-elected Councillors and Messrs. Bishop and Laracy. Mayor Ellis, supported by Mr. Martin, proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. F. J. Doyle, Returning Officer, and his aides for the painstaking manner in which their work was performed. Most of the newly elected Councillors were escorted to their homes by cheering crowds.

Manufacturers Meet.

A meeting of the St. John's Manufacturers' Association was held in the Board of Trade rooms last evening. Mr. J. H. Monroe was in the chair. Amongst those present were John Browning, J. McCoubrey, C. Duder, Mr. Cornick, Mr. Archibald, Mr. Renne, J. W. N. Johnstone, Mr. McLean, Mr. McCaffrey and Mr. Hirst. A committee consisting of F. McNamara, J. R. Bennett and C. R. Duder had been appointed at a former meeting to interview Lieut.-Col. Rendell in order to negotiate for the hire of the C. L. B. Armoury to hold the exhibition and also to wait on the Government to suggest that the Agricultural Show and Industrial Fair be held co-jointly. In connection with this a letter was received from Mr. Bennett saying that the Government were prepared to help on the Fair. Mr. G. C. Fearn, the Secretary, spoke strongly in favor of this idea and expressed the opinion that it would be a mistake to hold the exhibition separately. He stated that if the sible way. He also stated that if the manufacturers wished to have the Prince's Rink the Government would arrange to have the Agricultural Exhibition in the Curling Rink. He suggested that a committee be appointed to see the Executive of the Government in order to get their views on the matter. The subject will be taken up by the Finance Committee at the next meeting.

"The Missouriians."

Last night the Chicago Stock Company produced this drama of Western life. The stage setting was as usual good and depicted scenes typical of the West. Running through the play is a keenly interesting story of human life with the liquor seller generous, good and hearty, and a banker mean, treacherous and despicable. The play affords opportunities to all the members of the caste to show what is in them, and they were not backward in taking advantage of the opportunities. This afternoon Neil Gwynn of Old Drury will be put on again and to-night "The Missouriians" will be staged a second time.

McMurdo's Store News

THURSDAY, June 30, 1910.

We announce to-day the opening of another large consignment of the well known and highly spoken of Hair Restorer and Dressing, Salvia. Never in our recollection has a preparation of the kind "caught on" as Salvia has. The reason is patent. Salvia is really good and does all that is claimed for it; hence people recommended it to their friends, who in turn recommend it to theirs. If you have not yet tried it, buy a bottle. It is splendid as dressing, keeping the hair in first class condition, as well as stimulating the roots and scalp where necessary. 50c. a bottle.

For white shoes use "2 in 1" White Dressing, 25c. a bottle.

NO THOUGHT READER

Can foretell the day or the hour when your property may burn. Most people are aware of this and make provision for the disaster by insurance. Why are you not so insured? I offer the lowest rates and strongest offices. The promptness and liberality of my settlements are well known.
