Lady Wyvernes' Daughter.

CHAPTER XXVI.
 He looked with wonder at the wild agitation shown in her face.
 "I will do anything you ask me, my dear wife," he said. "I am wretched about you."
 "Take me abroad, Philip," she whispered. "I am ill and unwell. All this excitement has been too much for me. I am craving for rest. Take me away where no one knows us. I shall die if I remain here."
 "You shall go, my darling," he said. "I should have been more careful of you. You were used to such a quiet life. I blame myself bitterly; but I will do all I can to atone for it. You shall go as soon as you like. Let us start to-morrow," she cried eagerly.
 He smiled as one humoring the caprices of a sick child.
 "That would be too soon," he said. "You would not have time to prepare. If you like, we will go on alone as far as Paris on Thursday, and the servants can follow us with the luggage."
 "That will do," she replied. "And Philip, promise me you will not tell one single creature where we are going, or that we are going, or anything about it—will you?"
 "Not against your wish certainly," he said; "but tell me why?"
 "If you talk about it," she said, "people will try to persuade you not to go, and you will give in to them. Promise me, Philip, that you will not tell a single creature; it is just the end of the season, and every one is going somewhere."

To please and console his wife, Lord Lyne gave the promise.
 "What about Agatha and Hortington?" he said. "Our going will interfere with that arrangement."
 "There's nothing in it," replied his wife, wearily. "Agatha does not care for him; and, oh, Philip, she continued, earnestly, "mind, Agatha must go with us. I would not stir without her."
 Owing to Lord Lyne's good management, all preparations for the journey were soon made. His going abroad caused no surprise; the season was drawing to a close, and people were all leaving town. No one—not even his wife's confidential maid, nor Agatha herself—knew their destination.
 As though one could fly from trouble, or from the consequences of wrong-doing! We may cross seas and rivers, pass mountains and hills, but travel as we may, conscience and memory go with us.

CHAPTER XXVII.
 Great and sorrowful changes had happened to Lady Florence Wyvern since she stood on the sunlit lawn of Severn Castle, feeding the white doves that fluttered around her.
 Never was any fate more full of startling contrasts than hers. Brought up in the midst of unbounded extravagance and unlimited indulgence, she had never known a wish ungratified. The late earl had been a prodigal all his life. The establishment he kept up at the castle was magnificent. There were whole troops of domestic servants, and carriages, and horses almost without number; and profusion reigned alike in the hall and the kitchen; no one ever looked after anything; and of this extravagant and unlimited household, Lady Florence had been sole mistress almost from the time she had been able to walk.
 True, there was a stately old housekeeper, even as there were a butler and a steward; but the chief occupation of the servants at Severn Castle seemed to be, in plain and perhaps somewhat vulgar English, what is generally known as "feathering their own nest."
 The earl himself, seldom, if ever, came to Severn; he was engaged in a round of dissipation and pleasure that emptied his once well-filled coffers rapidly.
 The end of his career came at last, and Lord Wyvern awoke from a long dream of folly and indulgence, to find himself old, feeble, and ruined. Of his large fortune nothing remained. The estate, which was entailed, was already plunged into debt and difficulties. The sale of every personal effect he had in the world would not clear it; and, worse than all, no provision had been made for his beautiful young daughter. At his death, when Severn Castle passed into the hands of his heir, the poor girl would be homeless and penniless.
 It was this fact that tortured him above all others when he came to his senses, but he was powerless to help himself. It was then too late to undo the evil he had done. The few last months of his life were embittered by this knowledge; it shortened his days, and Lady Florence knew nothing of the dark future that lay before her until she stood by her father's death-bed. Then he confessed his folly and his crime; but he knew not where to turn to find a friend for his unfortunate child. He had not one. Men had drunk and gambled with him, and had taken his money in bets; but there was not one among his old companions to whom he could now turn in his hour of bitter need. Lady Florence was even more friendless; she had spent her life at the castle, and no one visited there. The only relation she had was Lady Blake; some distant cousins of the earl's were still in England—the Dudleys of Houton—but they refused to acknowledge the prodigal peer during his life, and they refused to assist his daughter after his death. The next heir, the present Earl of Wyvern, was young, and of a mean, parsimonious disposition. His disappointment upon taking possession of the title and estates was deep and bitter. He spoke of the late earl as of an unprincipled dishonest man who had wronged him, whose life had been a disadvantage and shame for all connected with him. And this he did in the presence of the child, who had never known anything but indulgence and tenderness from that same father, and who had loved him with all the warmth of her young heart; so that, when the young earl offered to Lady Florence a meager income from the estate, she indignantly refused it, and told him that she would rather starve than be under any obligation to the man who had slandered her father.
 Something like pity seized him when he saw the young girl bid farewell to the "stately home" where she had so long reigned as queen. But she passed out of his life, and he was easily consoled for the slight pain he suffered.
 Lady Blake offered the friendless orphan a home; but the bread of dependence is proverbially bitter, and that of Lady Blake was of the bitterest. Years and years ago she had imagined herself wronged in some business matters by the dead earl. She had never forgiven him; and she found no better subject of conversation with which to entertain this unhappy daughter than the constant abuse of her father's memory.
 Lady Florence endured it for a time, but she had tenderly loved this poor, prodigal father, and her heart bled at every fresh taunt and insult heaped upon him.

WEAK, RUN DOWN AND AILING

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Brought Relief When Other Medicines Failed
 Part Man, B. C.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I was tired and run down, and had headaches and no appetite, and was troubled for two years with sleeplessness. I tried many medicines, but nothing did me any real good. While I was living in Washington I was recommended by a doctor to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am stronger and feel fine about them and am able to do my housework. I am willing for you to use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. J. C. GRAY, Fort Mann, B. C.
I Feel New Life and Strength
 "Mrs. N. H.—"I was weak and run down and had headaches and all sorts of troubles which women have. I found great relief when taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I am able to do my work and feel new life and strength from this medicine."—Mrs. A. J. HARRISON, 72 Carpenter Street, Keene, N. H.
 Sick and ailing women everywhere in the Dominion should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. C

Music an Important Asset in The Home.

CHICAGO, June 12.—The way to counteract the demoralizing and disruptive influences that draw young people more and more away from the home to seek recreation and pleasure elsewhere, is not by criticizing and attacking them, but by constructive educational work. Robert W. Lyon, Secretary of the American Better Home Bureau told the Music Industries Chamber of Commerce of the United States here to-day.
 "This kind of a campaign will stimulate interest in the home and teach people how to make their homes so attractive that their young people will not be so easily lured away," Mr. Lyon added. "In this program, music in the home should play one of the most important roles."
 "We are trying to teach the people that beautiful homes are within reach of every income, however small, but this educational work cannot end with the mere physical construction and adornment of the home. The home that is to hold the love and focus the interest of youth must be dynamic and not static. There must be something doing, and one of the most powerful means of keeping the young folks at home is to make that 'something doing' music."
 "I believe that the player-piano and the phonograph have done more in the last 25 years to create a desire for good music in the home than all the work of all the orchestras, operas, concert-singers and teachers of music that went before them."
 "With all the facilities that science and ingenuity have placed at the disposal of everybody, there is no longer any excuse for any home not having music, and good music."
 "The great work of selling the American home back to the American people has only just begun. It is the work of a lifetime to which hundreds of earnest, unselfish men and women have consecrated their lives."

Swedish Iron Company PATS DIVIDEND OF FIFTEEN PER CENT.

STOCKHOLM, May 31.—Sweden's biggest corporation, the Grangesberg Iron Mining and Traffic Company, whose activity is looked upon as a barometer of industrial conditions, shows in its report for 1922 a net profit of about $3,860,000 on a total capital of about $23,000,000. The board of directors proposed a dividend of 15 per cent. The quantity of iron ore shipped out during the year rose to more than 5,000,000 tons. It is reported that prices of iron ore have been steadily sinking and are now only 25 per cent. above those of normal peace times before the war.
 The sale of Swedish ore to the United States for delivery during 1923 has been particularly brisk, and the quantity ordered is already five times as great as the total shipments to America during 1922. The company now has thirteen of its own steamers carrying iron to the United States on a regular schedule, and many of these vessels bring back American coal to Sweden.

HAIR STAYS COMBED, GLOSSY

"Hair-Groom" Keeps Hair Combed—Well-Groomed

Millions Use It—Fine for Hair!—Not Sticky, Greasy or Smelly
 Get a Jar of "Hair-Groom" from any druggist for a few cents and make even stubborn, unruly or shampooed hair stay combed all day in any style you like. "Hair-Groom" is a dainty combing cream which gives that natural gloss and well-groomed effect to your hair—that final touch to good dress both in business and on social occasions.
 Greaseless, stainless, "Hair-Groom" does not show on the hair because it is absorbed by the scalp, therefore your hair remains so soft and pliable and so natural that no one can possibly tell you used it.

Radio Increases Catch of English Fishermen.
 LONDON, May 31.—American fishermen off the Grand Banks and the Atlantic coast may find it profitable to emulate the example of their brother fishermen in England, who have equipped their vessels with radio. The purpose is to enable them to communicate with the shore or with sister trawlers, whenever they discover a shoal of fish too large for their capacity. At a time when a remarkable shortage of fish is reported from the North Sea, some thirty steam trawlers have been fitted with wireless apparatus.
 It has been found that with the use of radio communication huge hauls, which otherwise would certainly be missed, can be taken in a short time by vessels which are in constant communication with each other and with the shore.
 The cost of radio installation is insignificant compared to the great catches of fish it makes possible. Also the value of constant communication between the trawler owner ashore, who knows the condition of the market, and the skipper at sea is obvious. If the supplies at one port are heavy, the owner can send orders for the catch to be landed at another port. If the catch is unusually heavy, he can make arrangements to facilitate unloading.

A NEW AND SIMPLE APRON MODEL

4361. This may be charmingly developed in cretonne or chintz, with bias binding in a contrasting color for trimming. It is also good in gingham, linen, or rubberized material.
 The Pattern is cut in 4 Sizes: Small, Medium, Large, and Extra Large. A Medium size requires 2 1/2 yards of 42 inch material.
 Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

A PRETTY FROCK FOR DANCE OR PARTY.

4364. Dotted Swiss was chosen for this model with frills of organdy. This is a pretty style for voile and for the new figured cottons, also for mull and organdy. The bertha may be omitted.
 This Pattern is cut in 4 Sizes: 8, 10, and 12 years. A 10 year size requires 4 1/2 yards of 36 inch material. It would be attractive in plaid crepe or crepe de chene with pipings or headings in self- or contrasting color.
 Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

British Warships in the Scrap Heap.

Nearly one hundred dreadnought cruisers, destroyers and submarines have now been withdrawn from active service by the British Admiralty and have been sold for breaking up. Included in the list was the Orion, the proud battleship that led the line when the Grand Fleet steamed past the Queen Elizabeth after the German High Seas fleet had been safely shored up into captivity. Ship-breakers have no sentiment, so the Orion is already being torn to pieces in a dockyard on the Thames. Razor blades are to be manufactured from some of the best steel which a floor for a dancing hall is to be made from the planks of her deck.
 Light and power sufficient for a town of 70,000 inhabitants are produced by the engines of a modern battleship, and although the Admiralty usually forbids the sale of engines on bloc, even when taken apart, the scrap value is very considerable.

SPEAKING OF FAME.

Fame is a queer thing. There is a certain group of people whose names are not likely to be forgotten for a century or so, and perhaps not so long as the English language lasts. And yet many of us who often speak those names never heard of the people to whom they belonged and do not even know we are speaking them. I refer to the people whose names, for one reason or another, have become crystallized in the English language. When you ask the clerk for some mercerized material for a lining do you know that you are perpetuating the name of John Mercer, an English calico printer, who introduced the process of mercerizing? When you speak of pasteurizing the baby's milk you are keeping alive the name of Pasteur, the great French scientist. His Amusement Enshrines Him. The term silhouette comes from the name of a French minister of finance who lived in 1759 and whose diversion it was to make such portraits. How surprised he would probably have been if he could have known that his work as minister of finance, which doubtless seemed all important and vital to him, would soon be completely forgotten, while his amusement careful for. Silhouette is an instance of an avocation producing greater fame than a vocation. Epicurus means to all of us, one devoted to the luxuries of the table. Yet Epicurus, the old Greek philosopher from whom the word was derived, actually taught the beauty of simple living. Unfortunately he had an enemy who circulated false stories of epicurean banquets indulged in by Epicurus and his followers. The lie got the head-start and the truth hasn't overtaken it in 20 centuries.

Poor George Washington. It rather looks as if the distinguished physician, Osler, because of a few words he once said about the time when a man's usefulness begins to decline, might leave some form of his name, such as Oslerism, in the language standing for the idea that man is no good over 40. Yet those few words were only casual words and were not meant in the sense in which they were taken. Aside from them, Dr. Osler was a distinguished physician and made great contributions to science which the lay world knows nothing of.

One is reminded of George Washington, the dignified, and of the emblem which springs into existence in every shop when his birthday comes around. Poor George Washington, how he would have hated that hatchet and that cherry tree. Still I suppose he is rather lucky that "to Washington" has not come to mean to chop down a tree.

CLARA.

Fair Clara is so widely known that when we hear her name our thoughts are of one girl alone; and such, my dears, is fame. Wherever public prints are read, wherever wires are strung, wherever stately peacocks tread, her name is on each tongue. Ten thousand Clara's pass our eyes; engaged in useful tasks, and some are making luxurious pies, and some are padding pants; but they are humble and obscure, they cut but little grass, they gain no fame that will endure while long-drawn fortnights pass. All kinds of Clara's scoot around on worthy errands bent, but journalists don't paw the ground behind them, worth a cent. When they are born the Weekly Wave gives them three lines or four; and when we hear them to the grave they draw some eight lines more. Some Clara's go through their humble ways and shine the limelight's glare; in useful tasks they spend their days, and don't get anywhere. One Clara now is wearing bells and figures in the news; we hear about her taste in cells, the kind of gum she chews; around her correspondents buzz, with divers colored inks, and chronicle the things she does, and all the thoughts she thinks. Reporters trail her to and fro until she finds them boring, while all the unknown Clara's do about their useful chores.

Cardinal Assassinated.

Cardinal Soldevilla Romero, aged Archbishop of Saragossa, was shot and killed while visiting a monastery in the vicinity of Saragossa, Spain. The Cardinal was seated in a motor car with his secretary when attacked by a group of unidentified men. The chauffeur was killed and the secretary severely wounded. A search for the assassins is under way.

Jean, Cardinal Soldevilla Romero, was elevated to the cardinalate in December, 1919, and the barrette was conferred upon him at Saragossa at the Christmas season in that year. He received the red hat the following April. He was born October 20, 1844, a native of Zamora, became bishop of Tarazona in 1889, and archbishop of Saragossa in 1901.

The London Times Madrid correspondent says the assassination of Cardinal Soldevilla Romero was connected with a labor dispute between the Cardinal and some workmen employed on his property. The Cardinal was reputed to be generally beloved in Saragossa where he had been archbishop since 1901. He took a prominent part in connection with the Government's proposal to grant greater freedom to non-Catholics.

Mission Takes Bible to Many Foreign Lands.

CHICAGO.—(A.P.)—The development of a Christian Mission enterprise through an "inter-denominational and un-denominational organization" over a period of thirty-six years, is the history of the Christian and Missionary Alliance, as recorded here in the 16th annual council just closed.

The work began in 1887, and today the organization claims ministrations to more than 48,000,000 souls in every quarter of the globe. It is one of the largest of the few organizations working in the foreign fields whose programme is founded upon a belief in the literal inspiration of the scriptures. The Whole Bible to the Whole World is the motto of the alliance.

The work is carried on through 150 foreign stations and approximately 1,000 workers in America. In distant lands the gospel is delivered in 18 fields and 22 languages. The chief work of the alliance is in South America, China, and India. Other spheres of activity are Japan, the Philippine Islands, Porto Rico, Jamaica, Africa and Palestine. In America, the alliance maintains Live Bible Schools, the largest of which is at Nyack, N.Y., with an enrollment of 400 students in training for work in foreign lands. In addition, there are throughout the country hundreds of affiliated churches, tract stations, and branches.

Islands That Come and Go.

Reports from Saigon, in South China, announce the remarkable appearance of an island suddenly making its appearance on the surface of the ocean. This new addition to the world's collection of islands is the result of a volcanic eruption, and measures four hundred yards in diameter. Although an occurrence of this nature seems uncanny it is not the only case on record of islands with peculiar habits. In the State of Michigan there is one which every summer comes to the surface of Lake Ontario and every winter returns to the depths from which it came. So regular are the appearances and disappearances of this island that the actual date of its arrival and departure can almost be foretold.

All efforts to control its movements have failed. On one occasion a party of farmers attempted to sink it once and forever by loading it with large quantities of massive stones, in the hope that when it took its actual dive it would be unable to rise again. When the appointed time for the island's reappearance became due, however, up it came as usual, but the stones were all gone.

Another curious instance is that of an island on Henry's Lake, in the Rocky Mountains. This freak of nature floats about on the water like a boat. A willow thicket thrives in the centre, interspersed with small aspens and dwarf pines, which catch the breeze and set a sail, by means of which the island is carried from place to place. One evening it may be within a stone's throw of the shore. Next morning it may be five miles away.

The Tomb of a Princess.

PROTESTS AGAINST EXCAVATIONS. Considerable indignation is felt at Gravesend over the excavations which are proceeding in St. George's Church in an endeavour to discover the remains of Princess Pocahontas, the young Red Indian woman, central figure of many romantic stories, who died while on a visit to London more than 300 years ago, and is believed to have been buried in the church. The churchwardens of St. George's have issued a statement in which they dissociate themselves from any responsibility in the matter and express disgust that any grave should be disturbed to satisfy "idle curiosity."

Yesterday afternoon the bones of more than fifty people which had been moved during the excavations were interred in the churchyard. The bones were placed in three boxes, and a shortened form of buried service was read by the rector, Canon Gedge. It was stated that three or four skulls were being very closely examined and that one of them approximated in several respects to the Red Indian type. Presiding at the meeting in London of the Society for the Protection of Ancient Buildings, Marquis Curzon said there was a modern craze for digging up remains of the dead. The latest in this direction was the search for Princess Pocahontas' body at Gravesend. "I read of a lot of science, too—searching among debris for a skull with black hair on it," he said. "In our revived passion for antiquity, let us spare the dead."

Hall Caine's First Book Bought Him Only $250.

London.—(A.P.)—Hall Caine, who recently observed his seventieth birthday, took the opportunity to speak of things as they used to be. Referring to the relations between writers he said: "There comes a time when all writers get stuck in their work and want advice. I knew Willie Collins intimately, and whenever I got stuck I would go and see him. Always he would help me without hesitation.

"This comradeship was a common feature of literary work in those days, not only here but abroad. Flaubert, George Sand and the younger Dumas, to mention only examples, would help one another in difficulties. To-day, however, you never hear of that sort of helpfulness, and I think the loss is a great one."

For the manuscript of his first novel, Mr. Caine said, he received $250 and was supposed to have done well. Literary values have increased enormously since. "When I first came to London," he declared, "the usual arrangement was for a publisher to pay $200 out for a novel. In some cases writers like Willie Collins, Charles Reade or Walter Besant had some sort of actual valuation made of their potential financial worth, and sold themselves to the publishers. It was an arrangement which generally operated greatly to the advantage of the publishers."

Many Women Preachers in U.S.

CHICAGO, June 7.—There are 187 women preachers of various denominations in the United States, all of whom are members of the International Association of Women Preachers, according to the list of members recently made public here. Six women preachers of foreign lands also belong to the association, three in China, two in India and one in Africa.

Hindus leads in the number of women preachers with 33, 17 of them being in the city of Chicago. Kansas ranks second with 30 women ministers, seven of whom are at Wichita. Nebraska is third in number with 18.

LAND OF DREADFUL NIGHT.

CANTANA, June 21. The smiling, fruitful and thickly populated slopes of Mount Etna and surrounding country have become, with ghastly suddenness, "A Land of Dreadful Night." Through the thick darkness, which can almost be felt, flows the crimson of the lava fire flowing from the broken lips of the crater, extending for miles and centers, growing darker as the lava flows and cools and hardens, until the black and crevices appear on the lava through which can be seen bubbling up, boiling lava from beneath. The fields of Fiume, Freddo, and Calatabiano, once green and beautiful, but now covered with heavy deposits of dust and cinders, and leaves beneath the feet, the roaring sounds accompany the eruption, mingled with the rumbling of the lava through the darkness carrying away from the doomed villages, by one of the splendid homes and others are overborne and destroyed; the gardens are consumed; the intense heat long before the lava reaches them, blowing off myriads of sparks and finally smoulder to grim blackness. The living-rooms in almost every house where the lava has not yet reached, is transformed into a chapel with statues of the Madonna and Saints and candles burning before them; kneeling figures prostrate themselves in prayer for protection. The visit of King Victor Emanuel and the outstanding event of the day, seemed to infuse new courage and spur the helpers and workers. He is the object of intense enthusiasm wherever he appeared.

Closing Exercises at Methodist College.

The annual closing exercises and Distribution of Prizes by the Lower School pupils of the Methodist College took place in the College Hall last night, and was attended by a capacity audience of parents and friends of the pupils. To mark the annual closing a delightful Operetta in two acts, entitled "The Three Little Kittens of the Land of Pie" was staged by some 200 children of the Preparatory classes. The scene, which was a most picturesque one, was laid from a room in King Thomas's Palace while the costumes of the children added greatly to the proceedings. The opera, which consisted of acting, solos and chorus singing, was cleverly executed by the little ones. The cast of characters which formed this very pleasing operetta is as follows: "King Thomas, the First," Master Jardine; "Ringtail," his Lord High Chamberlain, Master George Martin; "Kitecat," the Court Jester, Master Gordon Glass; "Prince Tortoiseshell," Master Max Rabbits; "Prince Spot," Master Clouston; "Prince Velvet," Master Cross; "Princess Kitty," Miss Brenda Marshall; "Princess Malta," Miss Millicent Green; "Princess Angela," Miss Bernice Salter. Each of the performers played his or her role to perfection; their acting and singing was indeed a revelation, and the whole audience time and again greeted them with well merited applause. The chorus singing by the 200 voices, which consisted of courtiers, ladies in waiting, etc., blended beautifully, while the high notes were taken with a certainty of rendition which was pleasing to all. The Grand Finale, which was a real outburst of song, clearly showed how carefully the performers had been trained, and the climax was reached when the young voices in a clear and distinct tone mastered the high B flat note. It would be hardly fair to give special mention to any one of the characters, they all took their parts well and are deserving of every congratulation. A great deal of praise is due Mr. Gordon Christian, L.R.A.M., the conductor, who devoted his whole attention for several weeks past in training the children to such a high state of efficiency. The operetta was about the finest ever staged in the Methodist College Hall, particularly in the part where so young in years, and many complimentary remarks were passed on all sides by those who had the pleasure of attending. Following the operetta the distribution of prizes took place. Lady Squires, who was in attendance, very graciously presented the prizes to the winners. The following is the list of prize winners:

Concert at S. A. Citadel.

The young people of No. II, Corps, S.A., held a very interesting and enjoyable concert in the Citadel, Adelaide Street, last evening. A large audience was in attendance and showed by frequent and hearty applause how much they enjoyed the proceedings. Colonel Martin presided, and accompanying him on the platform were ex-Mayor I. C. Morris and Staff Capt. Tilley. The Colonel, in his opening remarks, expressed his pleasure at being present. It would in all probability be the last gathering of that nature that he would be presiding over at No. II, as he would be conducting his farewell meetings on Sunday next, and he leaving soon after that to take up work in his new appointment. He wished the band and young people's work generally much success in the future.

Summer Sickness Prevalent.

As yet the Scarlet Fever outbreak in the city shows little signs of abating. The Hospital is now filled with patients and a dozen or more cases are outside waiting admittance. The disease is of a mild type. A disease said to be akin to "Flu" is somewhat rare amongst children. It attacks the eyes or nose. In the former case the optic suddenly becomes inflamed and much swollen, but in the course of two or three days the symptoms disappear leaving no ill effects. Boracic Acid wash is the remedy prescribed.

WHAT BAD TEETH LEAD TO.

Do you know that many serious diseases come from diseased conditions of your teeth. It is a fact now well known to medical science.

Obituary.

GREGORY LEWIS.

The axiom, "in the midst of life we are in death" is often quoted, and daily and hourly its stern reality and truth is being brought home to some of us. Such was the passing of Gregory Lewis while in the pursuit of his daily avocation at the Sydney Steel plant. It appears that while about his work he became entangled in a piece of machinery which had suddenly been put in motion, and before it could be stopped he had received such injuries to his legs and other parts of his body as to cause his death a few hours later at the Emergency Hospital, where he had been immediately rushed. Everything possible was done to save his life, but to no avail, and fortified by the rites of Holy Mother Church he entered into his last long sleep at the early age of twenty years. The deceased was the 3rd son of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Lewis, of Holyrood, C.B., and together with being physically a specimen of the finest type of Newfoundland he had woven in his character those virtues of honesty and straightforwardness which always won for him the confidence and good will of all those with whom he came in contact. He leaves to mourn besides his father and mother, two sisters and five brothers, Margaret, Aaron, Bernard and James at home; John (who did his bit with the Canadians), William and May in Boston. The body was brought to Holyrood for interment, and the unusually large attendance at the funeral testified to the esteem in which he was held, and the widespread sympathy for his grief-stricken relatives. His father and mother are deeply grateful to the many kind friends who by letters or words expressed their sympathy, especially to Mr. and Mrs. William Stag and Mrs. Donovan of Sydney. Requiescat in pace. Sydney and Boston papers please copy.—Com.

Novel Insect Cure.

Bent on ridding an unoccupied frame house of bugs, A. W. Dawson, of Kenilworth avenue, Hamilton, Ont., employed a method that killed the bugs all right, but which also burned the house to the ground and almost cost him his life. Shutting all windows and doors, Mr. Dawson sprayed the interior of the house with gasoline. He then stirred a potful of sulphur. This burst into flames and ignited the fumes of the gasoline. The interior of the house was soon like a furnace. Mr. Dawson made a frantic effort to escape. He had difficulty in opening one of the doors, and was badly burned about the neck, back and arms. The firemen were called, but the frame structure was doomed. The loss was estimated at $1,000, covered by insurance.

Household Notes.

A vanilla sponge made with gelatin is nice served with whipped cream and fresh strawberries. Line hallowed-out French rolls with lettuce, fill with shrimp salad and cover with mayonnaise dressing. Candied fruit or nut meats cut in small pieces are nice added to Bavarian cream as it begins to stiffen. Plant pineapple tops in boxes or flower pots. Surrounded with drooping vines they make nice porch plants. back of lamb that is generally cut into kidney chops makes a very good roast. White furs can be cleaned with slightly heated cornmeal. Use generously, shaking and brushing the furs well. If lettuce is to be used in sandwiches it should be washed and crisped in the refrigerator hours before using. When using cubes of aspic jelly as a garnish, decorate them with colored butter, forced through a pastry tube. If the shredded coconut for your cake frosting is very dry, steam it.

A Change of Name Only.

To give an idea of how Premier Squires and his candidates "put it all over the people" by using the cry of the Humber Deal to gain votes it is only necessary to hark back to the old Carbide Wilson contract passed by the Morris Government in 1915. There was no blowing of trumpets on that occasion. The public did not get excited at the prospects of the new industry because they very correctly estimated that it would be such another labor-giving industry as Grand Falls, that would provide labor for two to three thousand people who would take it as a choice to go into the woods to learn their living. Nobody would think of using it as an election cry to stampede the people and to impress them with the idea that there would be employment for all and that the fishery could be abandoned. The Wilson Company was known as the "Newfoundland Products Corporation," and the contract was a much better one for Newfoundland than the Armstrong Whitworth Co's., in that it asked no guarantee for the capital that would be expended in development. The agreement bound the company to establish an industry at Bay of Islands at a cost of $18,000,000 for the manufacture of wood-pulp, ammonia, cement, phosphate and lumber. The estimated cost of the ten dams that they would build was $1,597,500. The balance of the outlay in cost of Power House, electrical equipment, etc., would be $4,842,800. In other words the power was provided to operate the mills. Then there was the cost of the industrial plant, which was estimated to be an additional sum of $3,745,000. The grand total was summed up as $16,349,300 as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Item and Amount. Items include Water Power ($6,440,200), General Work ($2,564,000), Industrial Plant ($3,745,000), Phosphoric Acid Plant ($900,000), Ammonia Plant ($450,000), Working Capital ($2,000,000), Railway Revision ($250,000). Total: $16,349,300.

All this expenditure carried no guarantee from the Colony, and in this point alone the contract was infinitely better than the much boosted "Humber Deal," which is after all the Wilson ideas of the Morris legislation with the new feature of a guarantee. Provision was made for the development of 120,000 horse-power. In introducing the Resolutions in the House of Assembly in 1915 Sir Edward Morris, now Lord Morris, never for a moment with all his well-known enthusiasm regarded the measure as anything more than an auxiliary to the Fishery. This enterprise would, no doubt, have been carried out were it not for the prolongation of the war and the death of Carbide Wilson. Premier Squires now comes on the scene with this same old Wilson deal and impudently attempts to palm it off as a newly conceived project—the emancipation of his own brain. It is the same old Carbide deal with the exception of a few details such as obtaining phosphate from Florida and pyrites from Spain to make Phosphate of Ammonia. It was a better deal than the revamped one in the all important detail that it asked no guarantee from the people of Newfoundland.

Schooners Leave With Salt. WILL RELIEVE SHORTAGE IN PLACENTIA BAY.

The anxiety caused by the salt shortage in Placentia District will be relieved somewhat by the arrival of three or four schooner loads of salt which left port this morning for the Cape Shore. Quite a lot of fish has been spoiled for want of salt and in many cases as high as 30 qts. had to be thrown away for want of the preservative. Last Sunday fish made its appearance in the bay and with the caplin school struck in its abundance. When messages reporting a salt shortage were received in the city the members, Messrs. Walsh, Sullivan and Sinnott made arrangements to have a quantity sent along. The S. S. Minorean was laden with 180 hhds. at Baine Johnson's premises and this morning was ready to sail. A message from Placentia, however, stating that there was salt there, made the despatch of the steamer unnecessary.

Prospector Goes to North West River. WILL SEEK INDIANS CACHE.

The mining engineer representing Hollinger interests who was in the city last week, has, it is understood, started for the North West River section of Labrador in search of gold bearing ore which is reported in that section. Whilst other prospectors and engineers are devoting their attention to St. Ag Bay section the Hollinger representative will try and locate the source of the gold nuggets which the Indians frequently bring to the coast. Many efforts have been made to find the locality from which the quartz is taken, but so far all efforts have failed, the Indians refusing all inducements held out to them.

Three Men Drowned. The following message was received by the Inspector General from Const. Martin of Grand Falls:

"John St. John, aged 47, of Harbor Grace; John L. Wellman, aged 30, of Ladle Cove, and Adam Kane, aged 59, of Musgrave Hr. were drowned in Aspen Lake by the sinking of a small row boat on the 20th inst. Bodies recovered."

An Appreciation. June 20th, 1923.

The members of the St. John's District Meeting of the Methodist Church in session to-day desire to express their appreciation of the call of Dr. Fraser to his professional conferees to cease the reckless issuing of scripts. The District Meeting sincerely trusts that the members of a profession with so honorable a record will heed this splendid appeal.

Additional Ore Discovered. GALENA VEIN LOCATED AT OCHRE SCRAPE.

Mr. W. A. Mackay, who has just returned to the city from Argentina, brings the pleasing news that additional ore was discovered at Silver Cliff a few days ago. The new vein is of great width and the ore is very rich in galena. Ochre Scrape, which fronts the harbor at Argentina, was recently prospected and when the vein was located and uncovered it was found to be galena. For the last 50 years ochre from this place has been used by fishermen in the painting of their boats. It is understood that Ochre Scrape is part of Silver Cliff property.

Heavy Lightning Storm. NO DAMAGE REPORTED.

A heavy lightning storm raged over country last night and worked its way from Bishop's Falls to Notre Dame Junction, and later passed off in a South East direction. Up to press hour there was no damage reported, but the telegraph lines were slightly interrupted for some hours. The weather across country to-day is fine and warm.

In Passing.

The business in the House of Assembly to-day will be principally a debate on the railway agreements which will occupy the attention of the members for several sittings.

As to-morrow will be a public and government holiday the House will probably adjourn till Monday.

The Daily Mail of yesterday repudiated entirely the statement of the executive of the unemployed that the Prime Minister had agreed to allocate the sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars which they (the unemployed) asserted was to be spent on city improvements.

The suggestion that the city council should permit the motor sprinkler to run as far as Bowring Park on Wednesday and Sunday afternoons would receive the endorsement of the thousands of people who patronize this popular resort on holidays.

Whilst it is true the city council has no jurisdiction beyond Sme's Bridge yet where the interests of so many citizens are taken into view it is to be hoped an endeavor will be made to have the sprinkler make a trip or two during the afternoons mentioned.

It is generally thought two well known theatrical business men will shortly receive official remunerative appointments in connection with the Controller's Department.

A reorganization of the working system as previously stated is now receiving the attention of the controller and the authorities and soon we may learn of the changes in contemplation.

The War Veterans are to be complimented upon the improvements to that section of the city where the monument to their brother dead is erected. The placing of a concrete curb and gutter around the monument shows it to greater advantage and adds materially to the general appearance of this locality.

As the result of a legal action which a well known messenger in a government office is taking against the head of a public department some startling disclosures are promised the public.

Already many and varied are the reports circulated and an action for defamation of character is the outcome of what promises to be a sensational case.

The department of Controller's was recently entered after business hours and strange to say the culprit was not interested in any way with the stock in trade of this department or desired any material of a financial nature but confined his attention to the desks of the officials which contained papers and documents in connection with the departments business which were ransacked in a manner that makes the action of the burglar an unusually suspicious one.

Access to the offices is a complete mystery. The police are now working on the matter and an investigation which will probably reveal more facts in connection with the affair will be the likely result of same.

The Annual Regatta.

President Hiscock made another very popular move this year in requesting the New York Agents of the Red Cross Line to have their steamer, which is due here the week of the races, to so time her departure from New York that she will arrive in St. John's on the morning of the Regatta.

It is hoped his request will be acceded to, for it would be alike a source of much pleasure to the tourists, particularly those whose holiday might be limited to such a space of time as would enable them to make the trip back and forth within a fortnight.

Possibly too, many of our countrymen, around New York and Boston, would be influenced to take a run down on the Red Cross liner to see this aquatic sport of ours, as well as the Committee and all patrons of the Regatta who would be glad to extend a cordial welcome to the lake-side to all such visitors from abroad.

There was always a tendency to see more boat racing than that furnished on the one great day, so that this extra exhibition the week after fills the bill. True, in the long ago, the races were kept up three or four days in succession, but this became too much of a good thing eventually, when the rate was made to conform the Regatta to the one holiday only.

For several years in succession, however, just before the fire of 1892, we had a group of regatta enthusiasts who gave us a double exhibition of cricket and boat racing about a fortnight after the big regular event. The majority of these genial sports are regrettably no longer in the flesh, but their memories are delightfully treasured by their companions who still survive.

They comprise an aggregation of the most popular young blood of that period and for the purposes of their sporting pastimes in cricket, horse racing, boat racing and festive gatherings of various kinds, classed themselves into two divisions, the one known as the Gogs, the other the Marogs.

Two of their leading members, however, are still to the good amongst us, namely Messrs. Samuel L. Ryall and Thos. B. Skinner, than whom no more enthusiastic regatta lovers were ever to the forefront in the encouragement of the races and the side show aftermaths of the Gogs and Marogs.

It was on the old historic grounds at Pleasantville where the cricket match was played by this aggregation of various shades, classed themselves into two divisions, the one known as the Gogs, the other the Marogs. Two of their leading members, however, are still to the good amongst us, namely Messrs. Samuel L. Ryall and Thos. B. Skinner, than whom no more enthusiastic regatta lovers were ever to the forefront in the encouragement of the races and the side show aftermaths of the Gogs and Marogs.

Among the notable amateurs who rowed in her were M. J. Kelly, P. J. Berrigan and Tom O'Neill, a trio who were regular professionals almost, and would do credit to the classic Oxford-Cambridge contest had they the opportunity to participate therein.

M. J. Kelly was one of the historic crew that won the amateur race in the Myrtle the year after, when as the Terra Nova in the first season of her race, the drowning accident occurred from a heavy log on the pond which overturned her and caused the loss of four young fishermen of Torbay.

Messrs. Berrigan and O'Neill were exceptionally reliable wielders of the oar, the former possessing well developed muscles because of his prowess as a "cricket batter, whilst Tom O'Neill's skill developed a proficiency with the oar because of a training therewith when, in his boyhood days, he rowed in the juvenile races with his youthful companions of the East End.

As these notes have occupied sufficient space for to-day, we must postpone any references to the T. A. Boat Club till next issue, but mean-while respectfully suggest to this year's Regatta Committee to hasten their activities so that we shall have an unusually successful Regatta this year; one that all shall be more than proud of.

like, which is there yet, and equipped it from time to time with all that was necessary in practice boats and new racers to keep pace with their rival organizations, and the members of the Boat Club freely and voluntarily contributed year after year towards the upkeep of all that was necessary.

Dr. Rendell, the late Dr. Stabb; Messrs. W. J. Martin, Chas. F. Taylor, Wm. H. Rennie and Fred H. Wood were amongst the most enthusiastic members thereof and all have many notable victories to their credit as aquatic sportsmen. Dr. Rendell as a sailing yacht steersman, when for several years this kind of racing had a place on the programme, and as a designer also of the modern car racing sif.

The late Dr. Stabb was about the most skilful as well as the lightest coxswain that ever handled the tiller ropes. Under his clever guidance and manoeuvring the City Club amateurs maintained for many years the first place in the initial race on the programme, tho' of course the oarsmen themselves were adept at their own work also.

Will Martin, Charley Taylor, Will Rennie and Fred Wood were about the four best oarsmen amongst the Amateurs who rowed from time to time in the City Club gigs, but their greatest rivals, and often successful ones also, were the amateurs who rowed in the boat owned by the members of the Academia Institute. This latter organization of local celebrities ceased to exist shortly after the fire of 1892 most of its members having joined up with the B.I.S., which Society about that time first opened the club rooms that are now in operation in St. Patrick's Hall, others joining up with the City Club.

The Academia's first President, was our old friend and fellow countryman, the present Lord Morris, then plain "E. P." and afterwards Sir Edward as he was so styled during the days of his greater prominence amongst us. He was not an oarsman himself, but as President of the Club he took a most earnest interest in its boat racing activities and gave much practical support to it as well.

The Academia Club's boathouse was one which stood for a long time near the head of the pond, on the north side, almost in a direct line with the starting posts. It was formerly known as Jimmy Walsh's boathouse, after being taken over from him by the Academia and within it, before it was taken down, the old rafters were well shaken on many an occasion when the incomparable and accomplished politician of a later time, President E. P. called for cheers for the winning crews of the Academia racers.

Two of the most historic race boats of the Academia Club were the mascot and the Lily. The former was designed and constructed by Phillip Mahoney, the celebrated boat builder of that period. She was a fairly good racing gig tho' a bit stiff on the turn, nevertheless she had a creditable record in her day, having had an average share of leading places in the races.

Health Inspector Lawler, who devotes considerable attention to the milk supply of the city, has met with considerable success in the methods he has employed for the improvement of the quality of this article of food so necessary to children. Practically every day he is out sampling the milk as it is being delivered. Of six samples taken yesterday all were found to be well up to the standard.

Rose Covered Island is Dispute at Lausanne.

Bucharest.—(A.P.)—On the agenda of the Lausanne conference is an item which has baffled the world's statesmen who are trying to re-establish peace in the Near East. It is the question of the "Kadi of Ada Kaleh." At first nobody knew whether Kadi of Ada Kaleh was the name of a man, a geographical term, a state of mind, a mystic Turkish phrase, or a species of banana. Inquiry by the peace delegates, however, showed that Ada Kaleh is a delightful little island in the Danube near the "Iron Gates," with only a few thousand Mohammedan inhabitants who grow roses and extract the essence from the leaves. The minister of the only mosque on the island is a well-known landmark on the Danube as boats pass through the Iron Gates.

Ismet Pasha claims Ada Kaleh for Turkey, while Rumania insists it is hers by reason of the Trianon treaty. Before the treaty Ada Kaleh was in Hungarian possession, although the Budapest government always recognized the nominal sovereignty of the Sultan over the island.

The victories of Kemal Pasha re-awakened Turkish nationalism among the peaceful rose and tobacco planters on the picturesque "Isle of Roses," and they sent a petition to Angora asking Kemal to re-establish the ancient Turkey sovereignty over the island.

Famous Fort Now Site of Modern Office Building.

CHICAGO, June 11.—Chicago in a space of less than three years, has broken the old confines of the elevated "loop" and is fast creating a new business centre about the very spot where the first white man's home was built, and where the first American fort stood.

The shift was made possible by the completion three years ago this summer of the boulevard link bridge, a double deck structure which opened Michigan Avenue across the Chicago river.

The boulevard link cost $16,000,000 to build, and already twice that amount is being invested in office buildings either completed, under construction or projected along its approaches.

Opposite the main Wrigley Building and between the Tribune location and the river, a soap factory occupies one of the most valuable sites in Chicago, and when the wind is in the right direction furnished a strong reminder of the old factory, warehouse and dock district which formerly clustered about the river mouth has not all disappeared.

The soap factory's site, by the way, is Chicago's most historic plot of land. It was here that Joliet, Marquette, LaSalle and Touhy first landed on Illinois soil in the years 1673 to 1685.

On the same spot the first white man's home was built and the first white child born. The log cabin was originally erected in 1779 by Jean Baptiste Pointe de Saible, a Santo Domingo negro, and was occupied from 1796 to 1804 by the Frenchman Le Mal, who sold it to John Kinzie, Chicago's "first-civilian" and father of the first white child. Kinzie fled before the Fort Dearborn massacre, but returned in 1818 and continued to occupy his cabin until his death in 1828.

The Chicago Plan Commission has obtained approval of plans for the elimination of the famous South Water Street market, and the tearing down of all the buildings between South Water Street and the river from the boulevard bridge west to Market Street, a distance of seven blocks. A double deck boulevard with an ornamental river wall will be erected in Disturb one of these astonishing little chaps and he lights up in a most startling way with a strong yellowish-green ray which looks brilliant even in strong sunlight. The light comes from two tiny lanterns on his shoulders which look like glaring eyes. These lanterns are intensified by "reflectors" and protected by a horny transparent skin, and, as you hold one in your hand, the beams are powerful enough to cause a vivid reflection from the skin.

A naturalist who was observing the habits of night creatures once caught one in his pocket. Soon he was aware of a strange light illuminating his coat. He wrapped it in his handkerchief so as not to spoil his night's work, but found that the light still came through with an uncanny kind of X-rays-like quality.

Training a Derby Winner

Incidents in the Life of a Racehorse.

The career of a Derby winner, from the day when he leaves his mother's side to the great occasion when he is led back to the paddock by a proud owner or trainer, is both strenuous and interesting.

After changing hands as a yearling at the great September sales, where he is keenly criticized by trainers or their agents, the young horse is shod and schooled to the use of the bit. Then follows the exacting and often exciting breaking-in period, the result of which is to reduce his superfluous flesh and his coltish ungainliness, and to develop the rakish appearance of the true racing steed.

Careers ruined by carelessness.

The next step is to accustom him to the use of the saddle and to the weight of a rider. This period of a horse's training is a critical one, for unless great care is exercised bad habits may develop which can never be eradicated. The career of many a promising young animal has been ruined at this stage owing to careless handling. Very few horses are naturally bad-tempered; the fault is nearly always due to wrong treatment.

Kills Self When Unable to Put His Car Together.

New York, June 14.—Gustave Schutzenhofer, 4, hanged himself in his garage at Floral Park, on the outskirts of Somerville, N.J., yesterday because he had taken his automobile apart and couldn't put it together again. Schutzenhofer set his motor car up Sunday after cleaning all the parts. The engine would not start and he was greatly depressed, according to his mother. He rode into Somerville on his bicycle and it broke down and he had to wheel it home. Yesterday he went into his garage again and his mother thought he was working on the automobile. He was gone so long that she became alarmed and went in search of him. She found his body hanging from a beam by a rope.

Illness Not Inevitable Says London Specialist.

LONDON, June 12.—The normal span of life should approximate some of the ripe old biblical ages, according to Dr. Leonard Williams, a distinguished physician, who says a man should live not seventy years only but 120 or 140.

"To call a man a martyr to rheumatism is as fantastic as though we called a man a martyr to delirium tremens," he asserted. "If we get a disease we ought not to be pitted as victims but condemned as fools. There is nothing heaven sent or inevitable about illness." He blamed the Bible for any idea to the contrary, and also for the fact that "in matters psychological we are content with a very low level of mediocrity," and said man had acquired his mental superiority over other animals at the expense of his intuition, citing proof that "man is the only animal who doesn't know how to feed himself."

Violin Varnish Secret

The lost secret of the Cremonese varnish, used by Stradivarius, Guarnerius, and other famous violin-makers is revealed in an Italian manuscript dated 1716, found in a library by Luc Galliciano. According to Martin, the manuscript also contains a recipe for dissolving amber and resins—a process which has been known for two centuries.

Easy to Make Rain, But Costly.

Weather Bureau Official Scouts Idea That Rainmakers Can Achieve Success—Principles Involved Make Process so Costly That It Becomes Prohibitive.

(By CHARLES FITZHUGH TALMAN)
Western Canada has in the past had considerable experience with alleged "rainmakers," some of whom have done very handsomely financially at the expense of farmers in drought belts who were led to believe that these men could persuade the clouds to gather and distribute rain over their particular areas by certain secret "scientific processes."

While official science admits that precipitation may be induced under certain conditions, by artificial means, it at the same time insists that successful experiments have been so costly as to make them prohibitive.

In a very interesting article on this subject in The Outlook, Charles Fitzhugh Talman, of the United States weather bureau, an editor of Mentor and a Fellow of the American Meteorological society, has, in part, the following to say:—

We know how to mitigate the temperature out of doors on a large scale, but the cost of the process is at present prohibitive; and we also know how to produce, at enormous expense, a good-sized rain-storm. Our heaviest summer showers are due to the excessive heating of the ground under sunshine. The hot earth warms the adjacent air, which streams rapidly upward and cools by expansion. If the air contains an average amount of water vapor (an invisible gas, not to be confused with the visible droplets of fog and cloud), the cooling soon leads to condensation. Clouds gather and presently tower aloft in majestic thunderheads. Then comes the drenching downpour. Human beings have more than once imitated this process accidentally, and a super-Nero with no compunctions on the subject of conserving natural resources might do so deliberately. It is merely a question of starting a big enough fire. Forest fires in summer are generally capped with clouds of their own making and under favorable conditions produce showers which in some cases have put out the fires that caused them in the first place.

Likewise, a single bomb from the machine, he declares, could demoralize an entire community. Should such a projectile be dropped in the centre of a city, he says, a fifty-foot crater would be dug, all buildings in the vicinity completely destroyed and structures for a half mile or more around would be greatly damaged.

The planes will have no passenger carrying facilities and its value would rest entirely in its ability to transport large projectiles great distances.

Sweden Now Winks at Betting.

Stockholm—Betting in connection with horse racing was introduced in Sweden for the first time, May 7th, at Jagersro, the largest race-course in South Sweden.

For many years the question of betting has been before the Rigsdag at intervals, and many times it has been rejected as being immoral.

Every year the farmers of some drought stricken region pay money to plausible fakery for bringing rain on the crops. This nefarious business has become a scandal of such proportions that it would seem timely for the government to intervene, just as it has done in the case of various other frauds. If we have laws to protect the public from quack medicines and adulterated foods, why not laws against quack rainmaking? A law could be framed that would not interfere in the least with scientific experiments. Let it merely be provided that the man who undertakes to make rain for a price shall forfeit a substantial sum of money if the promised shower fails to arrive, and the out-and-out charlatan would be promptly put out of business.

The typical rain-maker is the exponent of time-worn superstitions. He is exactly on a par with the Indian rain wizards, who have been practicing their art for ages, and whose incantations in many cases bear a striking resemblance to the wizards' hocus-pocus of burning mysterious chemicals in freight cars or setting pans of alleged rain-making substances aloft on platforms.

Marvale Breaking up.

Salvaged mails from the wrecked G.P.O.S. liner, Marvale, were brought into port yesterday by the Montreal wrecking tug Lord Strathcona, which has been working at the wreck off St. John's, Newfoundland, for the past week. The Lord Strathcona's salvage also included three safes containing cash and other valuables from the purser's room, the ship's log, manifesto and other papers of value. It is probable that part of the mails were lost.

The work of salvaging the mails was carried on with extreme difficulty. All the deck structure of the ill-fated liner had been carried away and the gradual breaking-up of the hull owing to the action of the sea, continued during the salvage operations until the entire ship suddenly collapsed and a number of the wreckers had a very narrow escape from death.

The steamer is now considered a total loss and the wrecking experts believe that any attempt to save any part of the sunken steamer or its contents would be useless.

The salvaged mails were delivered to Sydney post office recently for disposal and the Lord Strathcona sailed at 10 o'clock for Montreal—Sydney Herald.

Beware of That Gun!

In the Hands of an Amateur Sporting Gun is a Very Dangerous Thing.

If you ever get the chance of a day's rough shooting, and you are not used to handling a gun, be careful! The first thing to remember is that wherever your gun happens to point there lies possible death. There are, in fact, only two safe positions for four gun-barrels.

One is pointing skyward, and the other pointing at the earth. Three-fourths of the gun accidents every year occur because people concentrate their attention upon the triggers instead of remembering where the gun is pointing.

For instance, if you are inexperienced you will probably make your first mistake in loading. Having opened the breech, you slip in two cartridges, and snap the gun to again by raising the barrels sharply with your left hand while holding the stock with your right.

This is unsafe and wrong, because by snapping up the barrels you cause the gun to point in a very dangerous line—namely, on a level with the eyes of anyone who happens to be standing by. Guns have been known to go off when loaded in this way, and serious accidents have resulted.

"Safety First." Instead, therefore, of snapping up the barrels, hold them pointing at the ground, and raise the stock with your right hand. Thus, when you have closed your loaded gun it will be pointing downwards.

If you go shooting with other people, and climb a stile first, always stop to one side after you have got over, so as to be out of the next man's line of fire, in case of accidents.

The writer did this once, and the "gun" who followed him let his weapon off unintentionally in slipping down from the top of a gate. This would have meant death for a man who had remained standing in front of that gate after climbing it.

Of course, the safest method is for you to take out your cartridges before climbing any obstruction. If you do not unload, it is at least essential that you slip back your safety-catch, or put your hammers to rest, according to the make of gun you are carrying. But to unload is best.

If you are lent a gun with hammers, you will have to be very careful about putting it to half-cock, otherwise you will let it off by mistake.

Don't begin by pressing a trigger. First of all get your thumb firmly down upon the head of the hammer. Then, never relaxing the pressure of the thumb, press the trigger with your first finger. You will then feel the hammer start forward. Let it drop gently to half-cock, and afterwards repeat the process for your second barrel.

If a rabbit or bird gets up within shot do not "follow round" rashly after it with your gun. That is the way people get shot by accident.

Oddities.

Wash Superstition. For many years, Bethesda (North Wales) slate quarriers have refused to work on Ascension Day, because they think it is unlucky. Year after year accidents have occurred in the quarry on this day. A few years ago some of the men were persuaded to work, but the inevitable accident occurred, and again "down tools" became the rule.

Handcuffed Bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Percival Wilson set out on their honeymoon from Bridgeton, New Jersey, with the bridegroom's left hand shackled to the right hand of the bride. The key to the handcuffs was in Mr. Wilson's pocket. The explanation was the happy couple's fear that some of their friends might try to separate them after the wedding. It is considered a good joke in Bridgeton to start the bride away on a north-bound train and the bridegroom on one bound south.

Orchard Freak.

A curious horticultural freak is to be seen in a garden at Templeton, Pembrokeshire, where an apple tree has a black current bush growing out of the trunk. One of the branches of the apple tree was broken, and apparently a currant seed found its way into the socket. Both tree and bush are flourishing.

Line's Wireless Eye.

The latest in wireless direction finders has just been installed on the Cunard liner Mauretania. With this device it is possible to ascertain in a few seconds a ship's bearing towards any one land wireless station. If touch is secured with two or more stations, the exact position of the vessel is found by cross-bearings. The value of such a direction-finder in thick and hazy weather is obvious.

An Odd Lot.

Among the litigants in a London County Court on one day recently were a number of people with curious names, including Wool, Sugar, Farthing, Pressman, Bride, Rod, Crystal, and Polly.

France Forging Ahead in World-Wide Radio.

LONDON, May 20.—The British authorities have been criticised lately for their failure to promote radio communication on a world scale, and with permitting France, Germany and the United States to occupy this field to the exclusion of England.

It is pointed out that France is planning a great station at Pondicherry, India, and that in July she will open a high power station at Buenos Aires. Later in the year two other stations will be ready in South America. These will be in direct communication with the French station at Saint Assise, with Nauen in Germany, and with Long Island, New York.

From Saint Assise France by radio will reach India, China and Japan on the east, and North and South America on the west.

The Three Stages of Fear

To every one whose lot it is to be among the average and to experience the average trials of life, there are, says a writer in "Scriven's Magazine," three great stages of fear.

First is the fear of childhood; of the bogey man, of darkness of material objects. It is the time when mother is the only solace. It is the time when the shaggy dog and the queer-looking man send terror through their hearts. It is all imagination, but it is fear.

And second is the fear of youth. To many, this fear is varied, but to the average it is the same. But let me tell you the fear of youth—my fear—later in this article.

The third fear of life is the fear of age. It is the fear of the business man for his business. It is the fear of a man for a more weighty concern. It is perhaps a more mature fear, a fear of more worldly worth, but it is not one degree more worthy than the fear of childhood or of youth.

The fear of youth is past, the fear of childhood, with its material and spiritual haunts; it has not yet reached the fear of age. The fear of nineteen is the fear that acquaintances will consider him a child or a "kid." Nineteen wishes to be considered a man with a youth's body. He dislikes to be called a boy; he wishes to be thought handsome; he wishes to be considered refined, cultured, and most of all, sophisticated. He wants to be thought wise and well informed of the shadowy part of the world. He wishes to be known as leading a double life, to be considered a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

That is the fear of youth. It is the fear that rests upon and overlaps the fears of younger and older life. It is more heart-rending than either of the others, and means as much to the individual's happiness as both of them together.

Majestic Beats Speed Record.

LONDON, May 26.—The liner Majestic made a record run recently up the Channel between Casquets and Cherbourg, travelling at one time at 29.7 knots an hour. The engines developed a speed of more than 26.5 knots and, with the tide running in her favor, at between four and five knots, the liner was able to accomplish a performance no other liner has ever equalled.

On a recent trip from New York the liner also beat her own previous record for a day's run, doing 603 miles in 23 hours.

Thoughtless Trick Caused Fire.

It is an old trick of mischievous boys to focus sunlight through a magnifying glass on the hand of an innocent comrade, and so cause an annoying burn; but a boy at Hull, England, has done a much worse thing. He threw concentrated sunlight from his lens through a shop-window until the blind burst into flames and did damage to $150 worth of stock in the shop.

Thinks like this would have been counted black magic in days when cause and effect were not understood. It is believed that great damage is done from time to time from fires caused accidentally by means not unlike this.

The thick glass of old cottage windows acts as a lens to enable the sun to burn curtains and other articles in houses; and pieces of broken bottles left on commons and woods are almost certainly the origin of many destructive fires.

The nearest application of this natural law to exceptional circumstances was furnished by means of Captain Scott's men when cast adrift on an ice floe.

Great heat caused the ice to break off and carry the little party seaward on what had now become a tiny island. There was no danger, of course, for men on shore saw what was happening; but there was inconvenience and delay before a rescue party could be organized.

In the meantime the men grew hungry and had no means of satisfying their appetite. Sailor-like, they turned to tobacco for a remedy, but though they had their pipes, they had no matches.

But there was a genius in the company. Taking up a sheet of ice, he focussed the sunlight through it and directed the beam on to his loaded pipe, and the "charm" worked. The concentrated sun-rays lighted the tobacco in the pipe, and all smoked in great content as the result of fire from ice.

They felt a little proud of themselves, and ceased for a moment to marvel that the two great volcanoes of Antarctic should belch fire and fury from incandescent hearts buried in ice and snow.

Hunting With Falcons.

Hunting with falcons was revived in Scotland some years ago by Sir Henry Bethune. A writer on field sports says: "The falconer had an old setter dog which hunted hill he found a covey of partridges. The falconer then threw off a hawk which rose in circles till very high, then hovered above the dog. The dog looked up to see if the hawk was ready and then ran in and roused the birds. Swoop went the hawk. If he missed, the birds generally went into a hedge and the hawk soared again and hovered over the birds. The old dog then went off after them and got another point. If the hawk killed its bird, the falconer went gently to it, and picked it up; if not, he had to fetch the bird with the lure, a dummy bird with a bit of pigeon on it. He called the hawk 'Killy, killy, Yotrook,' a sort of air halloo, and hurried the lure in the air. The hawk swooped at it and began to eat the pigeon, and he then succeeded in picking it up."

To Wash a Chamois Leather.

A chamois leather will last for quite a long period if it is never allowed to become very dirty. Frequent washing, if it is properly done, really improves the leather, because it renders it soft.

When Nearly Dry.

As soon as the leather feels almost dry, pass it through the hands again, stretching it out flat, and then put it on the table. This operation may be repeated several times, and, at last, the chamois will be very soft and dry.

We asked a chap who bought a new car why he did not teach his wife to drive. "That is not necessary," he replied. "She always drives from the back seat."

All people acting foolishly are not always acting.

From Poilu to War Minister.

EVERY MINISTER SHOULD CARRY A BATONET IN HIS PORTFOLIO THIS IN THE CONTENTION OF ANDRE MAGINOT.

Andre Maginot, the French Minister of War, a colossal figure standing six feet in height, is a believer in force—says a writer in Current Opinion. "Carry a batonet in your portfolio," is his doctrine. It was probably the doctrine that made the one-time poilu minister of war. Maginot began life as a lawyer. As politician, he accompanied M. Jonnard, the Governor-General of Algeria. He also served before 1914, as deputy in the French Chamber and as Under Secretary of War. From the conscription he was thus exempt but, none the less, he volunteered as a private soldier of the second class. At the blood-drenched village of Douaumont, near Verdun, a huge poilu meekly approached his captain and asked for leave of absence. There was a sharp inquiry for the reason. "I am Andre Maginot," was the reply. "Formerly Minister, also Deputy for the Department of the Meuse and now President of the General Council which is about to meet." The leave was granted.

At Maginot there was a fight, already a legend among the heroic deeds of war, in which Maginot, promoted to a sergenty, had both legs shattered. There he won the Military Medal and had to retire from active service. He returned to politics and at a secret session in Paris exposed the weakness of the position at Verdun. In 1917, Prime Minister Ribot appointed him to be Minister of the Colonies and later he was Mr. Briand's Minister of Pensions. When Poincare rose to power again, Maginot became his Minister of war. He thus belongs to that type of soldier-statesman of which Tardieu is an example well known to the United States where he served as High Commissioner.

Maginot frankly believes in force. One day, we read of him prosecuting Humanita, the socialist newspaper, for lack of patriotism. Another day, he will be proposing in the Chamber a separate Air Ministry. Then, again, he will defend as necessary a French army of 600,000 men and the employment of African troops. And, ever clairvoyant, he reviews the United States defenses as they leave the Rhine and unrolls in Paris a statue to the English, Edith, Cavell, which stands side by side with the monument of Joan of Arc. He is ready to reduce the term of service in the French army from 3 years to 18 months, but he insists that, in any such reduction of military reserve, France must take into account whatever may be the nature of her compact with Britain.

When it was decided to occupy the Ruhr, a supreme test came to Maginot. It was the poilu, promoted to be Minister. Was the Minister, who had served as poilu, to manage a marshal called Foch or to manage a marshal called Foch to manage the Minister? There was a severe struggle and the Minister won it. While soldiers were sent to the Ruhr, they were kept under civilian and not military control. Constitutionally, Maginot was right. He would have no Boulanger endangering the Republic—not even the revered Foch himself.

What the future has in store for Maginot, it is impossible to say. The man who wrestled with Germans limb to limb, who recently quelled a riot in the Chamber itself, who can hold his own in the turmoil of France against the successor of Vendome and Bonaparte. Amid him there is a certain splendid simplicity which lends a touch of greatness to his physical courage. According to Napoleon, every soldier should carry in his knapsack a marshal's baton. Andre Maginot is of the opinion that every minister, especially in France, should carry in his portfolio a soldier's batonet—Current Opinion.

Communists Awed by Hoax of Swiss Students.

GENEVA, May 21.—The recent assassination of the Russian diplomat Vorovsky, at Lausanne, had a rather curious aftermath here, not without its humorous aspect. The day after the murder the communists of Geneva organized a meeting of protest at the Apollo Theatre. A group of university students had it in mind to break up the meeting by force, when one of their number conceived the idea of playing a practical joke, designed to alleviate the possibility of bloodshed and gain the desired end at the same time.

Just as the communists were about to assemble, the student with the idea telephoned to the theatre and asked for the communist leader. "Chief of police speaking," said the student in a stern voice. "I'll give you exactly one hour to finish your meeting. There must be no procession, no communication to the press, otherwise you all go to jail." An hour later a band of students from a neighboring cafe watched the communists disperse quietly, with no sign of a demonstration.
