There were a dozen other policy holders from different places who affirmed that they had paid in their money and received nothing in return.

Mr. Crerar, Q.C., who appeared for the prosecution, asked for an adjournment and said that he had plenty of witnesses to substantiate the charge. The case was adjourned until to-day, bail being refused.

The defence say that the association has had misfortunes, and could not pay all its debts, but that the money that was on hand would be divided equally among the policy holders.

This association was a great scheme for working money out of the people. They used to pay two or three policy holders in the different places the full amount of their policies when it became due, and this fact a preading they soon had others applying for a membership.

There may be catholics who are not christians. just as there are certainly protestants of all denominations who are in the same condition. It does not follow that all catho lics are fit subjects for protestant evangelization, and if any are to be treated in this way where is the line to be drawn? Unspeakable mischief has been done in this untry by baptists stealing proselytes from presbyterians, by presbyterians stealing from baptists, by anglicans filching from methodists and methodists from angli cans, and so on round the circle. Surely there are enough of heathens in our midst to operate on, not to speak of the scattered want of a policy. fragments of denominations in outlying districts, without the churches playing to each other the part of highway robbers, and browbeating and insulting each other.

One of the synons of the presbyterian church overtured the general assembly this year to deliberate on the best means of allaying the bitterness of political discussion. We do not deny for a moment that the language used by party politicians to each other is often unnecessarily coarse, but we venture to say that in no legislative assembly in this dominion is such language ever applied by one political party to each other as was applied, amid the plaudits of grave and reverend preachers, by several gentlemen the other evening in the presbyterian assembly to pro fessing fellow-christians of the Roman catholic church. The answer to this state ment will of course be, that the violent language made use of in the sanctuary was justified by the character of the people denounced; but is not that the standing plea of the truculent that the standing plea of the truculent political hack? The assembly, after setting such an example, showed a high degree of common sense in postponing in definitely the consideration of the overture. It is not a little peculiar that the latter came from the sum leculiar that the latter came from the same locality whence latter came from the same locality whence issued the strong language against another tions in Ireland in case of the dissolution christian church. However much the committees may work they must have the assistance of every resident, and we hope to see no one backward in the work. To the Editor of The World. SIR: In this letter I will deal some further statements made by some of the opponents of the Scott act to your reporter. One man says "It has ruined ousiness and has not lessened the sale of liquor." I suppose that when a man con tradicts himself and proves his own statements to be false, it seems superfluous to anyone else to reply to him; but to set the matter fully and truthfully before the public we must do so. What, according to the oracle quoted above, has ruined business? "The Scott act," says he. Let our reader pause and think over the above quotation a few moments and try to reconcile the two statements if he can. "There is just as much liquor sold, and still the act has ruined business." We do not know whether it is the mere name of the act that has ruined business, or the enforcement of the act. If it has ruined business because it has stopped the sale of liquor, then his statement that it has not lessened the sale of liquor must be false. If, on the other hand, it has not lessened the sale of liquor, if it is possible to get liquor now as easily as it was before, then how, in the name of higher because the hotels have decreased in value fifty per cent. I am sorry, Mr. Editor, that your reporter did not call on a few more anti-Scotts, for if he had, the probabilities are that they themselves would have proven conclusively the good effects of the act. So hotels have decreased in value 50 per cent! And still they sell as much liquor as before! And moreover have no license to pay! What wonderful reasoners these men are! If hotels have decreased in value 50 per cent, then the sale of liquor in them must be almost entirely stopped; for the hotels themselves are surely worth something as real estate, and the value attached to a hotel because of the money that can be made in as it was before, then how, in the name of common sense, can it have injured business? The two statements are directly contradictory. The fact is that this cry about business being ruined is a denier resort, one of the death throes of the anti-Scott party in Halton, and is too palpably absurd to be believed by even the most gullible, and in defence of which we have not yet heard one researchle average.

Lively Times Indeed.

From the Boston Post.

"Anything of importance happened

while you've been gone?" said a Vermont law.

Mr. J. Boon said that our taxes are heavier than before because of the loss of $600 license fees, and the depreciation in the value of our hotels. The loss of the $600 license fees is a very doubtful evil. $600 license fees is a very doubtful evil. Every good man, every man who has any feeling of charity towards his neighbor, should rejoice that these temptations to drink are removed from before our young men. But the average anti-Scott is not that kind of a man. He views everything selfishly, and measures every attempted reform, not as to how it effects the moral or physical welfare of his follow-citizens. or physical welfare of his fellow-citizens, but as to how it affects his own pocket or but as to how it affects his own pocket or appetite. So on that ground we must argue it. If Mr. Boon will look at our last letter he will see our answer. The increased value of other property, consequent on so many who formerly spent most of their wages at the flotels, now spending them in supplying their families and improving their lots, more than makes up for the license fees. And just here we might correct Mr. Boon's figures. The last year before the act came in torce, which is a fair criterion, was $376, not $600, as he states, a mistake of only about one-half. But then sticking close to facts and figures is not one of the predominating qualities of an anti-Scott, as see E. K. Dodds. We will here call Mr. Boon's attention to another fact that slipped his memory, probably because it is the kind that he and his friends do not care to hear or reflect on. During the days of "whiskey for the million" the town spent from $200 to $300 a year for the maintenance of the poor. Now, spite of hard times, they $200 to $300 a year for the maintenance of $200 to $300 a year for the maintenance of the poor. Now, spite of hard times, they spend scarcely a tithe of that amount. Another proof of the benefits of the act. Subtract that amount from the $376 above mentioned and see the enormous extent to which this devestating act robs our town treasury. And just here let me mention another significant fact. Under the benificent and enriching license laws our town had run in arrears in taxes to the tune of had run in arrears in taxes to the tune of man to his neighbor just back from a jour-ney. "I should say there had: I've had two hens die, my dog killed a woodchuck and Deacon Tidd swapped horses with a Frenchman; oh, this town has been lively." $6,000 to $8,000, in some cases because of neglect, in others because those owing them were notable to pay them. But this year another effort has been made and nearly the whole amount has been paid, and that too with scarcely a demurrer. That is, under the Scott act the people are not only able to pay their, regular taxes but to pay thousands of dollars that had not, and in many cases could not be paid under whiskey rule; and still they say that the act has ruined business and is impoverishing the people. Is it not an incidental proof, a pretty strong one, that, so far from the act injuring business, it has actually made it more prosperous." $6,000 to $8,000, in some cases because of Just Tall Enough. She took my coat—I'm rather tall,

And she is not so very;
The steps led upward from the hall;
She stood, the little fairy,
Just balanced on the second stair,
My great coat's burden holding,
And then her hands—tile kindest pair—The collar down were folding.
There never was an eye so clear,
Nor lips so red in moving.
"Just tall enough, now, ain't I dear!—See how I've grown from loving!"
Just tall enough! From eye to eye
Ran horizontal light,
"Just tall enough to—let me try!—Yes, tall enough—Good night!" actually made it more prosperous."

Mr. Boon further says that our taxes are

The Engine Question. EDITOR WORLD, SIR,-In reply to Mr. Linneen's characteristic letter in this morning's papers we would say that we versy with that veracious (?) gentleman, and will, in consequence, make our reply short and we think to the point.

On the 6th instant the following letter appeared in the columns of The World:— To the Editor of The World.

Martin, C E., on the pumping engines he says: 'I am informed that ing engines he says: 'I am informed that Mr. Fensom knows how they executed this contract, referring to Messrs. Sisterhood of St. John the Divine. The garden party given in the Granite rink on Church street yesterday in aid of the Sisterhood of St. John the Divine was a successful affair. During the afternoon large numbers of people visited the rink, but it was not until the evening that the number of visitors began to swell rapidly. The "high tea" was well patronized, after which refreshments of different kinds were offered by beautiful young ladies in white offered by beautiful young ladies in white caps and aprons whose fascinating smiles it was impossible to resist. There was also for sale a large assortment of useful and fancy articles, and the visitors invested freely in all these departments; but perhaps the feature which was the "nost interesting and successful of all was the "fish pond," and it was marvelous with what rapidity the fish, which consisted of packages at delicious which consisted of packages of delicious candy, seemed to "bite." The rink was elegantly decorated with flags and other ornamental drapery, and the large and brilliantly attired assemblage presented quite a pleasing appearance as they promenaded to the soothing music of the band of the 10th Royal Grenadiers. The uterest was kept up until after 10 o'clock, I the weather being particularly favorable the affair was a most enjoyable one.

To the Editor of The World. SIR: My letter in your Thursday morn ing's issue, or at least that portion of it re ferring to the worthlessness of the pumps furnished by our competitors, Messrs. Inglis & Hunter, for the city of Guelph, forces them to a brief reply in their organ, your

They do not deny that the pumps were an absolute failure. But they say that the designs were faulty, and assert that the drawings furnished them were the designs of a Holly pump. All right if they can get out of the question of responsibility with the corporation of Guelph by claiming that the designs was not theirs, and that they were taulty.

This is just what I wanted to know. How about the designs of the geared engines tendered for by this firm? Who furnishes these designs? If Inglis & Hunter are no better judges of designs now than when they built the Guelph pumps, Toronto can anticipate another failure in the event of the council adopting the geared engine.

Good mechanics would not build pump A new amusement enterprise is being introduced into Toronto. that the workmanship was excellent. Moral—Avoid experiments.

They assert that the Holly manufacturing company never furnished any designs, drawings or patterns for the Guelph pumps or any others now in use in the Deminion unless said pumps were built by themselves. Now, a word with the editor of the Inglis & Hunter organ. I said nothing in my letter that was in any way discourteous to Mr. Tully. Certainly I intended no discourtesy to that gentleman. That some of the conclusions in his report should be inspired by interested parties in discussing their engines is natural, and not discreditable to Mr. Tully; you can't make a mountain out of natural, and not discreditable to Mr.
