The all absorbing business of to-day

The all absorbing business of to-day (Tuesday) is the polling of votes for the election of our Dominion candidates. Each party seems quite sanguine as to the result. The storm of Sunday night was the severest storm of the season. Peal upon peal resounded, followed by such vivid lightning as to illuminate our dwellings. We have yet to learn of any serious damage being done.

The beautiful summer season is here, bringing many visitors to the bay.

The schooner Allie B. Dyer has just arrived. She will remain until after election, then go to Victoria Harbor to load wood for Reckland.

Mr. William Spicer, of this place, received a telegram on Wednesday telling him that his son Everett was drowned off the schooner Allie B. Duer.

IRONCLADS BEING SECURED IN CASE OF TROU BLE WITH UNITED STATES. London, June 22.-A despatch to the London, June 22.—A despatch to the Daily Mail from Madrid says: "The platform adopted in St. Louis causes great unasiness in Spain, and it is feared that a conflict with the United States has now almost a fixed date." The government has hasened to buy two 14,000 ton iron clads at leaves whose prices for days are west. Genoa, whose price a few days ago was thought to be excessive. A great part of the loan of 100,000,000 placetas made by Rothschilds on the Almiden quick silver mine will probably be immediately applied to such war ships as are for sale. The government, responding to the undoubted national sentiment, and trusting probably to the help of other powers, seems resolved to restrict American oppositions."

Cowboy Life in New Mexico.

(From the Pen of C. W. Ward.)

On no part of the continent can the cowboy, in these days of his degeneracy, be seen to better advantage than upon the broad messas and among the wide valleys and mountain slopes of New Mexico. Here vast herds of wild cattle roam at will, uncared for by unan; but during the summer months all the cattle of each section are gathered together into one immense round-up, and then hegins the cow-puncher's work.

Of the way in which his winter's are spent very often the less said the better, although many engage in honest and sober work. As soon as the spring opens the cowboy hastens to hire himself to one of the large cattle owners for the season, for once having had a taste of this wild, free, outdoor life, he will content himself with no other occupation.

When we consider the many disagreeable features, the exposure to pitiless heat or biting cold, riding all day, or sleeping on the ground all night in pouring rain, working from sixteen to twenty-three hours a day, the strong liking which the cowboy invariably has for his work seems remarkable. But to this roving son of the adventurous Saxon, who in all ages has loved danger when it took him out of doors, the exhilirating sweep of his fleet, iron-sinewed mustang, over precipitous sidehills, through forest and thicket, over fallen trees and boulders, through marshes and swollen streams, after cattle as swift and wild as the deer among which they have fed, is entrancing. It fires his blood as did the tournaments of old, that of his ancestors. The dangerous excitement of bucking bronchos, and the clashing horns of stampeding herds, not to mention occasional warlike encounters in which he must defend his life from the pistol shots of some skilful enemy, add only zest to the occupation of this leather-mailed knight of the nineteenth century. He is a stranger to fear, able to cheerfully bear any hardship, independent as an absolute king, quarrelsome (perhaps it must be admitted,) but withal generous, even to his fees, and entirely disinterested towards his friends.

by the American role in the metual hatred which exists.

Picturesque as the cow-boy in full regalia looks, nothing is added for show; every part of his equipment is of the utmost use. The boots, into which the leggins are thrust, must be high-heeled and reach to the knee, that the foot may never catch in the narrow stirrup, or the ankle or leg be bruised by contact; the murderous looking knife and revolver find their use only too often. The awkward looking chapparajos (chaps for short,) are indispensible where one must ride through mile upon mile of thorny mesquite and tarnillo and Spanish dagger, each bush armed with formidable spikes which would fearfully mangle the unprotected limb.

Each cow-boy is allowed a half-dozen or would fearfully mangle the unprotected limb.

Each cow-boy is allowed a half-dozen or more horses, and he usually changes his mount once during each day. The horses of the western plains are well worth more than a passing glance. They are descended from the stock which the early Spanish settlers turned free upon the plains of Mexico. For centuries they have led a precarious life, often during the dry season parching with thirst and quawing the leaves of the scrub oak and the scantiest of herbage, roaming wild in large droves over the well-nigh barren messs. Naturally, only the hardiest survived, and these were reduced in size and have lost much of their original beauty; but they are as tough as the granite rocks over which they roamed, and accustomed to defend themselves against attack, they resisted vigorously and long, the claim of man to be their master. The vicious nature of the western mustang has not died out. The young foals are allowed to roam at will over the plains, knowing fothing of the dominion, and feeling nothing of the superiority of the all controling biped, until they are old enough to break to the saddle. They are then run down, and caught by the lasso, their legs tied, while saddle and bridle are forced upon them; then when the fetters are removed a broncho breaker springs into the saddle and the frightened animal is allowed forced upon them; then when the fetters are removed a broncho breaker springs into the saddle and the frightened animal is allowed to do his worst. Small wonder that he strikes and rears and plunges, perhaps throw-ing himself on the ground in his efforts to rid himself of his unwelcome companion. But all such antics are as child's play to the real defense of the plains bred hor ing which I will have more to say in my next Los Cruces, New Mexico.

Horseless Carriages.

A RACE BETWEEN DIFFERENT MAKES AT NEV

New York, June 13—Six horseless carriages were started from the post office on the way to King's bridge, where they began a race to the Arsley county club house at Irvington, 13 miles and return, for prizes aggregating $3,000, at 1.50 to-day. Four of the horseless carriages belonged to the Duryea Motor Company, of Springfield, Mass. One was invented by C. W. Croch, of the Fredonia Manufacturing Company, and is owned by Dr. Carlos Booth, of Georgetown, Ohio, and was made in Paris. The judges were Gen. Nelson A. Miles, Chauncey M. Depew, Frank Thompson, vice-president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, Gen. Wm. P. Craig and John Jacob Astor. At thirteen minutes past seven this evening the first of the carriages returned to the starting point. It was one of the Duryea wagons. There was a large crowd in waiting as the vehicle came down Broadway at a smart rate of speed and turned into Mail street, north of the post office building. The victor stopped and remained there nearly a quarter of an hour. The second horseless wagon to arrive was also a Duryea. New York, June 13 -Six horseless car was also a Duryea.

In Cuba a battle of forty-two hours dura tion was fought recently at Najasa. According to a Havana report a rebel force of 5000 under Gomez tried a manœuvre, intended to make the Spanish troops retreat from the plains of Saratoga, but failed. The report says that the rebel loss is 500 and that of the troops slight.

The climatic condition of Cuba will for a few months be exceedingly trying upon the Spanish troops. Already considerable disease prevails. The Cubans on the other hand, being thoroughly climatized, do not suffer to any appreciable extent.

From all parts of the island generals and other officers are flocking to Havans. Some think that this is in response to a call from Weyler to make an organized attack on Macco, others that they are after money to pay the troops who have not received anything since February. Spain is in rather a precarious position, not being able to provide sufficient funds without considerable trouble.

Kitled in a Row. Campbellton, N. B., June 18.—A terrible row took place at Doherty's mill yesterday, resulting in the death of James Ritchie. It appears that Ritchie and a Frenchman named Provost quarrelled. Ritchie had Provist down and was choking him, when a brother of Provost struck Ritchie a terrible blow on the head with a peevie, which knocked him senseless. Drs. Lunam and Venner were called and the man taken to the hospital, where he died to-day. Both of the Provosts are in jail. Ritchie belongs to Regersville and leaves a wife and family.

[From the Baltimore (M.D.) Telegram.]

ANNAPOLIS ROYAL, NOVA SCOTIA.

MR. EDITOR,—Thinking that some of your many readers may not know we have a town down here by the sea named as one of your towns in Maryland, I will try with my pen to describe it to them, also, will right here give those that can come an invitation to call and see us when it gets so hot in your beautiful Monumental City that you wish for some cool spot. We will give you a warm and see us when it gets so hot in your beautiful Monumental City that you wish for some cool spot. We will give you a warm "Bluenose" welcome to one of the oldest towns in North America. When you are sweltering in the shade somewhere in your beautiful parks, with the thermometer at 100, imagine us here with a cool breeze fanning our brow, and the glass about 70, in this fair spot of God's cushioned footstool, with Nature's green carpet for your feet, surrounded by a life and health-giving, invigorating elixir. Why, sir, we have to wait here for some of our people who have emigrated to the United States to be brought home dead to start a cemetery. Another fact the I wish to bring before your readers is, we have not a colonel in our whole town, and only two captains, one the captain of our fire company, the other the captain of the Salvation Army.

We have green fields beneath, the blue sky above, and plenty to spare of Heaven's pure air everywhere. The tired, overworked body and brain may throw the cares that whither life and waste its little hours to the winds for we have just enough of them to blow the microbes into the Bay of Funday.

Halifax Summer Carnival. Halifax is making great preparations for the summer carnival to be held July 28th to 31st, which promises to be a most attractive affair in every respect. The chief feature will be the regatta, in which the crack oar men of the world and the champions of Can ada, England, United States and Australia are expected to compete in single and double scull and four oared races for large prizes; there will also be men of war races. The harbor illumination with warships electrically illuminated, procession of boats, fire-work display, bon fires on shore, search lights from forts, etc., will be a grand sight. Among monster bicycle meet, trotting and running races, including a $500 free for all, pole matches, athletic and bicycle sports by elec tric light, garden concerts with music by military bands and numerous other attractions. ## The Rousehold.

At the present day the first charm of a woman is the sense of cleanliness about her the bloom on her sweet skin, the lustre in her hair, the sparkle of her teeth. This cleanliness it is her wise effort to maintain, and if the least particle of what is known as "making-up" should become apparent about-her, she knows her charm is lost. The rougepot, the hare's foot, the pencil for the eye brows, the coral lip-salve—if there is a sus picion of the use of any of these, there will be left a hint or suggestion of uncleanliness in the beholders mind, which utterly destroys anything accomplished by skill in the pictorial line; for no one who is not virtually an artist can use these articles so that she covered bears not only the stigms of having failed in her purpose, of the vanity of caring too much for her appearance, but of having tried to cheat and been unsuccessful in that also. For the woman who makes up in her ressing room never knows exactly what of out-doors, and she who powders and paints and pencils in the daylight has no notion of the effect of her work by candle light; and she who puts on her bismuth and her antimony, and goes to a ball or theatre does not know at what moment the gas from the chandelier, or from other sources, is to streak her with mouldy green and bistre-brown and

The good grooming of the bath, the brisk rubbing of the brush, is really all sufficient wherever there is any good degree of health. Those whom that does not make lovely will never look lovely in false colors; and it will ake every one who is at all wholesome and nealthy look more so; and in the long run the wholesome look is the greatest attraction of faded, the perfectly healthy woman who never had beauty is bound to be more attractive than she who has neither beauty nor health, health itself being a beauty, and continuing a beauty into old age.

-" Dressmaking should be just as muc the part of a liberal education for a girl as manual training is for a boy. If a boy can't use a tool intelligently, he is a poor specimen of a Yankee, and if a girl can't mend her lress neatly, she is not fit to take upon her self the care of her own children later in life. In these days of ephemeral fortunes, what young woman is sure, though she may marry a millionaire, that her circumstances will always allow her to pay for the sewing of delight and an easy matter." to ketch the two o'clock thrain?' Why One Feels Chilly When Lying Down. "Yes!" and there was a sound of the man The reason is simply this. Nature takes the time when one is lying down to give the heart rest, and that organ consequently makes ten strokes less a minute than when one is in an upright posture. Multiply that by sixty minutes, and it is six hundred strokes. Therefore in eight hours spent in parture of Pat; but soon all was quiet again; by sixty minutes, and it is six hundred lying down the heart is saved nearly five and the few occupants of the hotel were lef thousand strokes, and as the heart pumps ing the sky Pat once more made his presence known and, in terms giving unmistakable evidence of recent and heavy slumber, relifts thirty thousand ounces less of blood in a night of eight hours spent in bed than when one is in an upright position. As the blood flows so much more slowly through the veins marked: when one is lying down, one must supply then with extra coverings the warmth usually furnished by circulation.

The constant use of smelling salts and strong perfumes has been known to destroy the sense of smell. Many women are in the habit of snifting at smelling bottles whenever they enter a railway carriage or a crowded place of entertainment, and the constant irritation of the nerve endings leads to their injury, which may even be permanent. Headaches and red noses are also said to be due to the abuse of the smelling-bottle.
