

106TH
OVERSEAS BATTALION
C.E.F.
NOVA SCOTIA RIFLES

To the
N.C.O's and men
106th "Nova Scotia Rifles"

This book is forwarded to you at your home addresses by the Regimental Institutes of this Unit, with the sanction of the Commanding Officer, Lieut.-Col. R. Innes, as a small token of the Battalion's appreciation of your hearty co-operation and good services in developing and maintaining the enviable reputation of the 106th "Nova Scotia Rifles."

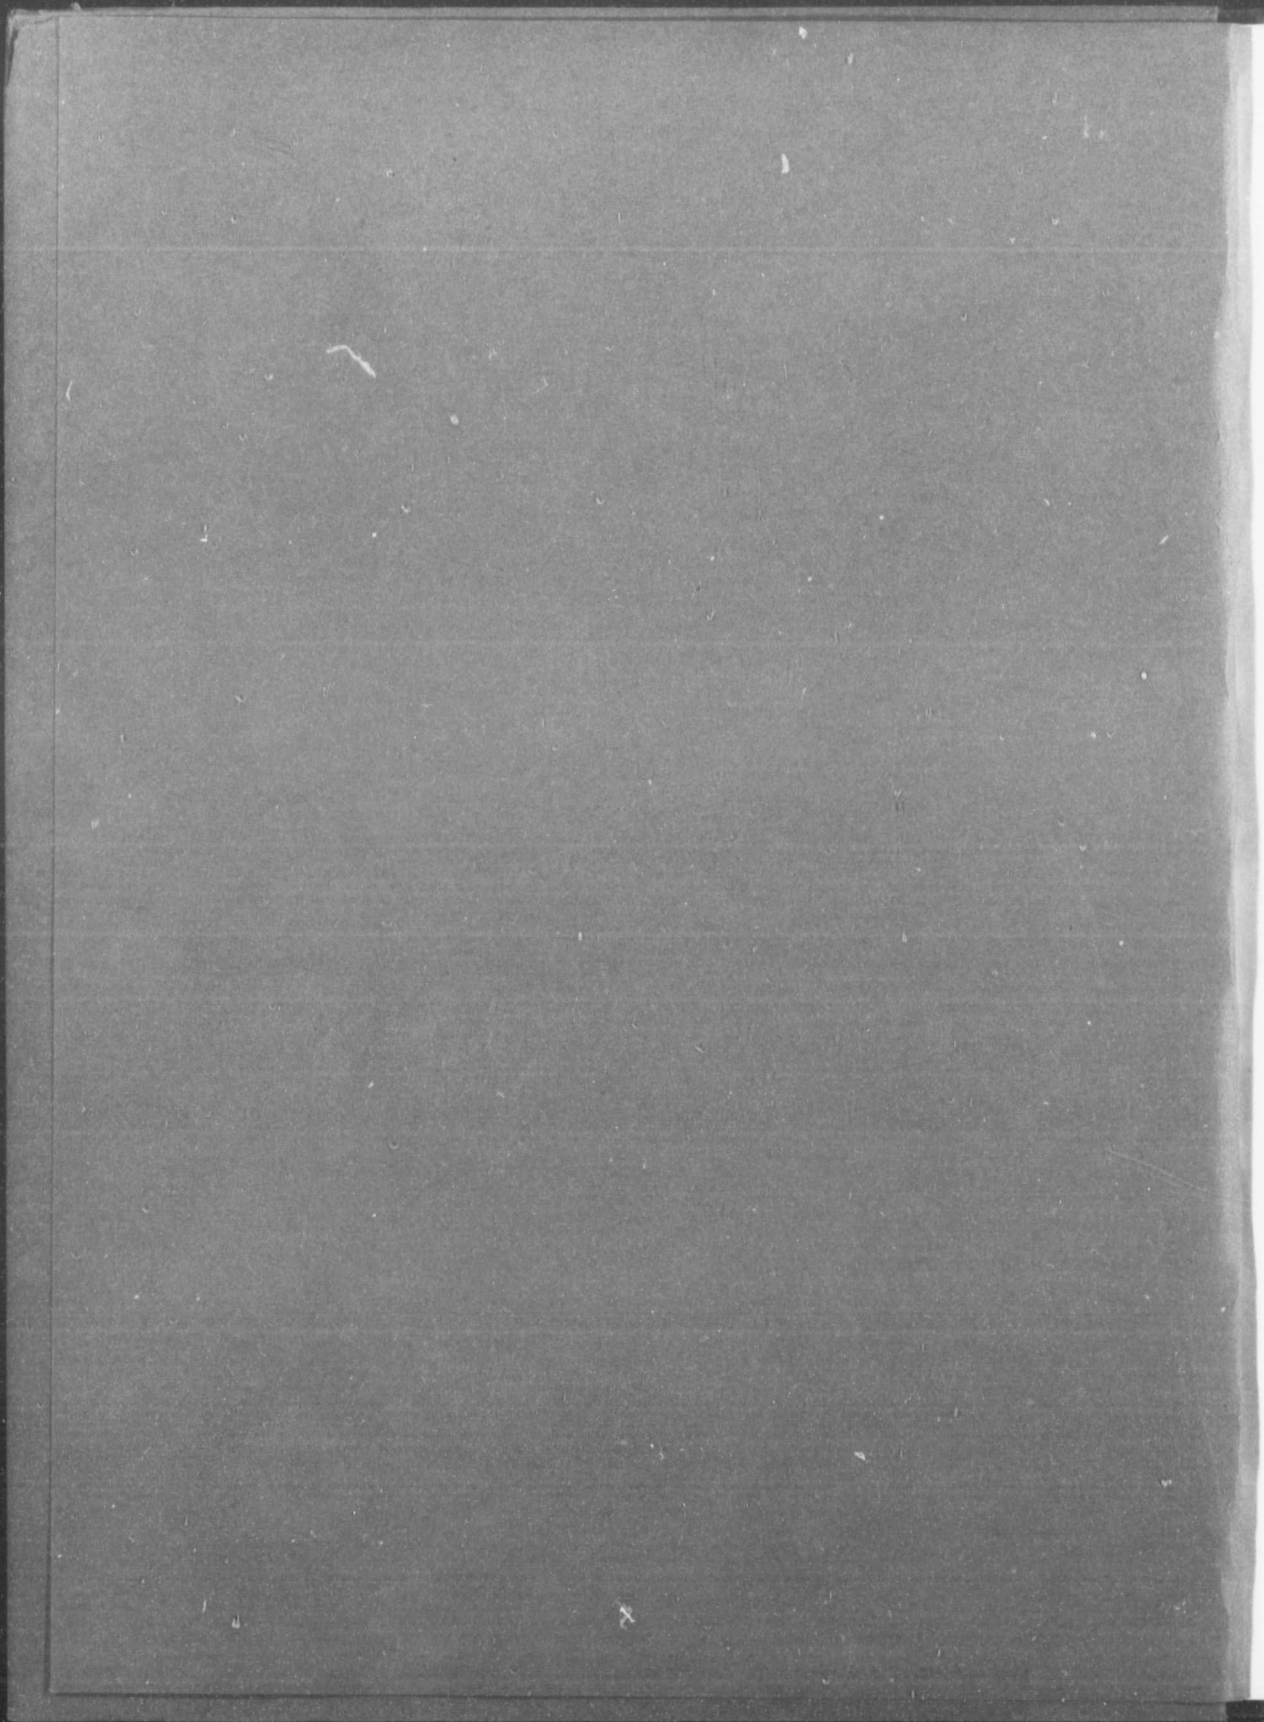

While the exigencies of the Service did not permit us going to the firing line as a unit, the Commanding Officer and your other Officers have every confidence in your individual ability and determination to firmly establish on the field of battle your old Battalion motto of "NONE SO RELIABLE."

Your family and friends as well as yourself should indeed be proud of the fact that you were once a member of a Battalion that was always ready to do, and did, its duty, irrespective of its fate as a unit.

"Pax Vobiscum"

"Nova Scotia Rifles"

"NOVA SCOTIA RIFLES"

THE 106TH BATTALION C.E.F., "NOVA SCOTIA RIFLES," was authorized on November 8th, 1915, and recruiting commenced at once. Being the first rifle regiment recruited in the Maritime Provinces, it appealed strongly to the members of the various rifle clubs in the Eastern Provinces, and the Battalion was soon up to strength.

The standards of the 106th Battalion have been high. Regimental schools for the training of Non-Commissioned Officers have been established. The motto of the Battalion is "NONE SO RELIABLE" and Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers, and men have sought to make their Battalion worthy to bear such a name.

Headquarters were established in Truro, Nova Scotia, where two companies were stationed, the other two companies being stationed at Springhill and Pictou, respectively.

The Battalion left Canada July 15th, 1916, and is at the moment of writing, encamped at Lower Dillgate, Shorncliffe, England, where the Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers, and men are training energetically for the arduous tasks of the front line trenches "Somewhere in France."

THE GATHERING OF THE CLANSMEN

Last November word was passed along that a Rifle Regiment was to be organized in the North Shore counties of Nova Scotia—to be known as the "106th Nova Scotia Rifles." That word was received gladly. The echo of the pibroch had scarcely died away when, from the quiet lowlands of Cumberland to the rugged shores of Cape Breton, men began to answer its stirring call. From mine, forest, farm and office they came. The forest-sheltered hamlet bade God-speed to its stalwart youth. The busy industrial centre honored each son who went forth to represent it on the sterner fields of service. Saxon and Gael separated by Fortune's mysterious hand mingled together. The Fiery Cross had passed through the land, and its summons must be obeyed. True, they gathered not on heathered hills. No Roderick Dhu awaited their coming at the trysting place of the clan. Yet the same spirit which animated the ancient Gael, as, with claymore in hand he hastened to the side of his Chieftain, animated the men of the Nova Scotia Rifles as they gathered in preparation for training. The merchant forgot his counting house, the agriculturist the peaceful pursuit of his farm, and the student the books of his college course. Democrat and aristocrat, worker and capitalist, all turned their backs on their ambitions, their hopes and fears, hearing only the call of King and Country. And so from the loins of a civil population which many believed had turned their swords into ploughshares, the 106th Battalion has sprung. They are the sons of men who have harnessed the mighty forests and wildernesses to their needs and peopled a land in spite of its obstacles. That was the work of the pioneers and they did it well. But it cannot be said that the men of to-day are too absorbed in the pursuit of the material things to harken to the voice of the spirit and the cry from over the sea for Men, and more Men.
