Do You Feel This Way?

Do you feel all tired out? Do you sometimes think you just can't work away at your profession or trade any longer? Do you have a poor appetite, and lay awake at nights unable to sleep? Are your nerves all gone, and your stomach too? Has ambition to forge ahead in the world left you? If so, you might as well put a stop to your misery. You can do it! It will make you a different individual. It will set your azy iver to work. It will set things right in your stomach, and your appetite will come back. It will purify your blood. If there is any tendency in your family toward consumption, it will keep that dread destroyer away. Even after consumption has almost gained a foothold, in the form of a lingering cough, bronchitis, or bleeding at the lungs, it will bring about a cure in 98 per cent. of all cases. It is a remedy prepared by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., whose advice is given free to all who wish to write him. His great success has come from his wide experience and varied practice. Don't be wheedled by a penny-grabbing dealer into taking inferior substitutes for Dr. Pierce's medicines, recommended to be "as good." Dr. Pierce's medicines are of known composition. Contain no harmful or wrapping. Made from roots without alcohol. Buffalo, N. Y. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

Battle Practice in the Army can Navy as an Example of Efficiency.

Probably the most marvelous and valuable example of standardized operations anywhere in the world is on our American fleets in the battle practice," so states Mr. H. Emmerson, the efficiency expert, in the Engineering Magazine. "The art of war has not changed as to its fundamentals since men first began to fight on land or sea. The purpose is with a stronger force to overwhelm a weaker opposing fleet, to strike first, hardest and quickest. It was Goliath's idea to pick off the Israelites one by one, and a modern pugilist could defeat a hundred men if they charged him singly, and he could down the first before the second came up. A 'dreadnought' makes all the navies of the world without 'dreadnoughts' obsolete, because such a battleship with its ten 12-inch guns can fire a broadside from all of them at once while steaming at 21 knots.

Such a battleship steaming as fast as its rivals, bringing more guns into action than any rival, hitting an enemy at seven miles, could destroy the whole of an opposing fleet one by one, even as the pugilist would take the lighter weights one by one. But the horse trotting, fire-fighting American stop watch practice is also in the navy, and it was realized that if these big guns could be fired four times as fast, it would be very nearly the same as having four times as many guns or four times as many 'dreadnoughts,' and also that if the skill of aim could be increased four-fold, if four shots would reach the target as compared to one in the older practice, one modern 'Arkansas' or 'Wyoming,' with twelve inch guns, firing four times as fast and hitting four times as often, will, for the time being at least, be sixteen times as effective. These big guns are loaded, aimed, and fired twice in a minute. The practice drill is only half this time, and this practice drill is of two kinds. There is the physical act of loading the heavy gun there is the more important act of pointing it. Two opposing ships are 10,000 yards apart (about six miles) steaming at 18 knots in diverging directions. The rate of charge of range may be 750 yards a minute. If the range is set for every 20 yards, it must be redetermined every 4 seconds. This is impossible, but it can be determined every 30 seconds and a salvo be fired every 30 seconds. Being able to determine the range twice a minute, to fire twice a minute, the remaining part is drill in pointing or aiming, and this is done by means of much practice with models.

"To hit a target 60 feet wide and 30 feet high at 30,000 feet with a big gun, when you can cover it twice over by the point of a lead pencil at arm's length, is considerably harder than to hit a target 1 inch high at 83 feet with a small gun; but it is much better and much cheaper to fire 1,000 shots with the small gun than to fire the big gun once; and when the big gun is fired four times in practice after training with small apparatus, it will do better than if firing 100 real shots without the model practice.

"In the battle I saw the first 12 inch range-finding shot, from a distance of 14,000 yards, go clean through a 30 by 60 target; and so accurate and secure was the aim of all the salvos that we calmly watched the shots splash all around the floating target only 400 yards away. The firing end was not less impressive. The team work was so perfect that the salvo from the same ship were redirected one after the other almost with the ease with which a child swings a garden hose.

"I have also watched diminutive and juvenile Igorot savages shoot dimes from a forked stick at 6 feet with bow and arrow. The Igorots show us the beginnings of offensive skill; modern American battleship target practice shows the highest speed, accuracy, and distance yet attained, and we may not doubt that our present achievement is but a step in man's ultimate achievement.

"The improvement in the effectiveness of the different ships of the navy in the last five years is very great, and is probably the greatest improvement both in importance and magnitude that has ever been accomplished. Think of the small degree to which the steam turbine is superior to the reciprocating engine, a questionable 5 per cent) or how very little faster the passenger trains are than the slowest of the same class (about 25 per cent). Think of the enormous expense in time and money spent in developing cities steam turbines or high-speed trains; then think of the sixteen-fold increased efficiency of our battleships as compared to five years ago, an increased efficiency due to the application of the principles of efficiency—all of them—Ideals, Common Sense, Competent Council, Discipline, the 'ain Deal, Reliable and Immediate Records, Schedules (of big shot at the rate of ten or twelve a minute) Standardized Condition, Standardized Operation (secured by constant and assiduous team drill), most minute Standard Practice Instructions (as to how fifths of seconds can be saved in time), finally, a joyful and much coveted Efficiency Reward, in both honor and emolument, when the tremendous results have been accomplished. And when this appears not only in the spectacular gunnery, but also in the more prosaic but continuously important operations of firing coal; of coaling ship (the record as to this having increased from 30 tons an hour to 360 tons an hour on some of the ships for the whole cruise around the world); of the maintenance of operation of machinery on board ship without going to navy yards, these accomplishments show that high efficiency requires neither great outlay nor protracted time but only the proper intelligence, spirit and organization. The sea going form of organization is admirably adapted to apply the principles, since a gun drill, a coal drill, a recoling drill, is but a practical and modern form of drill. The ideal is not a mere dress parade, but to hit accurately, fast, and furiously, at the greatest distance, an enemy's ship overtaken by better management throughout and this ideal has been accomplished stop watch in hand, refining all the conditions and operations, this refinement made possible by bringing to bear all the available knowledge in the universe. This navy work is a great game, not drudgery; it is pleasurable excitement and joyously hard work."

Exiled Shah Returns to Fight For Throne.

Gives Up $82,500 Pension and a Life of Ease for Chance of Again Ruling Persia. Teheran, Persia, July 18.—Molammed Ali Mirza, the exiled Shah of Persia, has returned from Russia to attempt to retain the throne. He is at Gumesch Tepe, a small port in the Caspian Sea in the northern part of Persia near the Russian border. It is said that a Russian vessel conveyed him to that place.

When he was dethroned in 1909 he went to Odessa and the Russian government undertook by protocol to keep him under strict surveillance and prevent him from intruding to regain the throne, notwithstanding his progress through Russia from Odessa to Gumesch Tepe, about 1,500 miles, was with molestation.

The government has ordered Sirdar Safar to proceed to Kurdistan with 2,000 horsemen and guns to crush the rebellion in that district, which has made considerable progress under the leadership of Salard Dowleh, brother of the deposed Shah.

By this attempt to capture the throne Mohammed Ali forfeits a pension of $82,500 yearly.

Mohammed Ali Mirza succeeded Muzul-far-el-din as Shah in January, 1907. He was dethroned July 16, 1909, and succeeded by Sultan Ahmed Mirza. When Mohammed Ali ascended the throne he allowed Parliament to meet, but soon got into with it. Two bombs were thrown at the Shah in February, 1908, supposedly by Nationalist members of Parliament. He called upon it to give up the guilty members, but was met with open defiance. Then with troops he dispersed Parliament and withdrew the constitution.

Later, after revolutionary successes, he granted a new constitution, but the Nationalists pushed their advantage, entered Teheran, captured his army and exiled him to Russia.

War on Undesirables Along the Frontier.

By Chas. L. Barker.

Half a century has elapsed since fleeing slaves found freedom and liberty on Canadian soil by taking clandestine passage on the "Underground Railway." Many romantic tales are related even to this day of how certain colored refugees entered this country via the U. G. R. R. in colored settlements at Amherstburg, Harrow Windsor, Sandwich, Chatham,

Dresden, Buxton and even in London, accounts of exciting adventures and the recitals of novelty in transportation have been told so often that they constitute a quasi-folklore of the "twilight race" that settled in the southwestern peninsula of the Province.

After all this period since the American civil war, the U. G. R. R. is in flourishing operation again, but there is a different clientele of patrons. The conductors who find profitable employment on this line that has no steel to lay, no maintenance-of-ways department, no charter even, and no recognized president, secure their passengers among the undesirable immigrants, "the great unwashed" of foreign birth against whom the Canadian portals are closed.

A few years ago Uncle Sam brought down his obnoxious alien labor law and had immigration officials placed along the international border to see that it was enforced, that foreigners were made to pay a head tax and that the stringent immigration regulations of the ocean ports were put into effect in the interior as well. It was not many months before Canada discovered that some steps were necessary also, and the unsatisfactory spectacle was seen of undesirables being chased back and forth from one country to the other, a human battleship and shuttlecock game being the result.

Those who have had occasion to cross frequently at Windsor, Sarnia or Niagara Falls have seen many a poor unfortunate riding from border to border but unable to land until either the Canadian or the American officers gave in after conducting an investigation.

This establishment of protective measures along the frontier points is a comparatively new feature of immigration administration in Canada. It has been forced on the country, however, by the growing number of unwelcome candidates for citizenship.

From the port of Windsor alone there have been on the average, a hundred persons deported every week since the early spring. The officers have to be continually on their guard, as the U. G. R. R. conductors have displayed amazing ingenuity in evading the laws and the officials.

While the Michigan Central tunnel was being built at Windsor, it is estimated, there were scores of "backdoor" emigrants who succeeded in gaining admission to the country by walking and crawling through the slimy tubes before the tunnel was actually opened for traffic and the seepage pumped out.

A roadbed here and a launch there crossed the Detroit River at Sandwich, Windsor, Amherstburg from Belle Isle to the Walkerville shore and at any handy point on the St. Clair River in the vicinity of Sarnia.

Niagara Falls the scene of a crowning victory a hundred years ago against a horde of invaders, has not been so subject to attack by the undesirable element although sporadic attempts are reported as also efforts to run branch lines of the U. G. R. R. at the Soo and along the St. Lawrence.

The enormous traffic at Windsor makes the work of the immigration officers extremely difficult. There are the crowds to watch from the two ferryboats with their ten-minute service between Windsor and Detroit, which requires the constant attendance of immigration guards at the dock; there are the car ferries that are used by the Grand Trunk, the Wabash, Pere Marquette and the Canadian Pacific, and there is the Michigan Central tunnel, through which trains are electrically conveyed every few minutes.

Besides the ferry traffic, with its four million passenger trains to inspect every 24 hours at Windsor, so that this point is the most important and has the largest force of immigration officials of all the inland frontier ports. The Chief Inspector is Mr. Thomas Brian, who has seven assistants in his charge, the staff being recently increased to cope with the undesirable invasion that was assuming serious proportions. Then there is Mr. A. E. Dufour, who is acting as special officer, under Mr. H. Herbert the traveling inspector at Ottawa. It is his duty to capture and prosecute the "dark lantern brigade" that lands along the frontier between Amherstburg and Chatham a distance of seventy miles or more.

Numerous fines are being imposed almost daily as a result of the vigorous warfare that is being waged against the objectionable invaders. A party of nine Belgians who braved the dangers of capsizing in a frail craft on Lake St. Clair, but landed at Pike Creek, was fined $25 each for taking "indirect passage". One scheme that worked well for a time was nipped when it was discovered a Windsor "underground conductor" was being paid a fat fee for bringing over a body of "laborers." He claimed they were going into Northern Ontario to work in railway construction camps, but investigation soon uncovered the plot.

Another plan was exposed was to round up a band of a dozen undesirables at some rendezvous in Detroit and have them cross to Windsor during the early morning working hours, each being given explicit instructions to give the officers the information that they were working on a sewer contract. So many came across with this excuse, that the officers became suspicious, and found no foreigners were being employed on sewer work in the Canadian city.

A resident of Ohio, who had previously been rejected at the border, conceived the idea of purchasing a return ticket to an interior point in Ontario. He was allowed to pass at Windsor, but his presence was tipped off in some mysterious manner, and he was deported from Ridgeway. Now the whole force has been warned to be on the lookout for the "return ticket game."

"We have to be up to all sorts of tricks," one of the chief Windsor officials told me in referring to the artful dodgers, "and so our work is developing in to regular secret service. You would be surprised how close a watch is kept on train and ferry passengers. We have a list of names and dates to refer to when any dispute arises, and we have our blacklist pertaining to the white slave traffic, as this is really one of the most important branches of our duties.

"At first there was little dispute with Detroit immigration officials, but we have reached a more friendly basis now and we co-operate with each other. The Detroit men give us all the aid they can and we reciprocate with what assistance we can render when called upon to do so. You let an undesirable name be posted in the offices at Detroit and Windsor and I will wager that we will catch it at party nine times out of ten should an attempt be made to cross the boundary line.

"Since the immigration regulations have been enforced those itinerant philosophers who travel without visible means of support, commonly known as tramps and vagrants, have materially decreased in numbers in Ontario, and other Provinces for that matter. There was a time, especially in the spring of the year, when tramps crossed here from Detroit by the dozen. They don't come any more, and the few Canadian tramps there were either dying off or have at last made up their minds to go to work and earn a living.

"Yes, undoubtedly, there was an organized effort at one time to aid undesirables in entering Canada, more particularly at this point, but the business is now so risky that it has become unprofitable."

Misunderstood.

(London Ideas.)
The verger of a large church, seeing an old woman in one of the seats reserved for some important persons, beckoned to her to come out. But just at that moment the organ started playing.
The old woman, never having been in a church containing an organ, started him and the congregation by calling out, "Ha, man! get somebody younger; ma dancing days aye past!"

A St. John Man's Opinion.

Halifax Echo: A St. John man interested in shipping who was in the city a day or two ago, said it seemed to be conceded there that Swan and Hunter would get the Canadian naval shipbuilding contract and would likely locate their plant in Halifax. The tenders for this contract are in the hands of the British Admiralty and so far no advice has been received in Halifax of the contract, which will be awarded by the British Admiralty, being placed. It is known, however, there were seventeen tenders, of which six were thrown out, leaving eleven for consideration.

A Humiliated Monkey.

The following amusing story is told by Mr. J. L. Cpl. in his "Man and Beast in India," of the humiliation of a monkey whom physical disablement prevented from maintaining his despotic position as leading male of the troop—
"One morning there came a monkey chieftain, weak and limping, having been worsted in a severe fight with another one of his kind. One hand hung powerless, his face and eyes bore terrible traces of battle, and he hopped slowly along with a pathetic air of suffering, supporting himself on the shoulder of a female—a wife, the only member of his clan that had remained faithful to him after his defeat.
"We threw them bread and raisins, and the wounded warrior carefully stowed the greater part away in his cheek-pouch. The faithful wife, seeing her opportunity holding fast his one sound hand and opening his mouth, deftly scooped out the store of raisins. Then she sat and ate them calmly at a safe distance, while he mowed and chattered in impotent rage.

"He knew that without her help he could not reach home, and was fain to wait with what patience he might till the raisins were finished. This was probably her first chance of disobedience or of self assertion in her whole life, and I am afraid she thoroughly enjoyed it."

Black Regiments

The uses to which the United States military authorities are allowed to put the few colored regiments that are on the roster of the regular army are very circumscribed. Ever since the Brownsville affair it has been unsafe to station them at any one of the regular posts in the south; last summer it was found that the militia of New York objected strongly to being brigaded with them during manoeuvres; and not even the Mexican frontier demonstration, it now appears, is important enough to wipe out all causes of friction or to put the colored regiment on an equal basis with the rest of the regular army. The negroes have shown their mettle as soldiers many times since the experiment of making soldiers out of them was first attempted. They served cheerfully the desert forts where white regiments go reluctantly and with many complaints. They fought bravely in the Indian skirmishes which from time to time alarmed the west. They are well-drilled, loyal and efficient, but it takes the solvent of real war to amalgamate them with boundary affairs differs in many material respects from real war.—Montreal Star.

Pay $5,000 A Year For Facial Massage.

(New York Herald.)

After making a trip to London to defend himself in a suit brought by a complexion specialist, Mrs. Louise Winterfeldt, of this city, returned here Monday on board the steamship Carmania of the Canada line.

While in London last winter Mrs. Winterfeldt went to a specialist for facial massage treatment. She was so well satisfied with the services of a young woman who gave the treatments that she engaged her privately and testimony in the trial of the suit showed that Mrs. Winterfeldt paid the young woman more than $5,000 in less than a year. The woman who had employed the masseuse brought suit against Mrs. Winterfeldt, alleging that she had inveigled the employe into breaking a contract and had thereby damaged the business.
Mrs. Winterfeldt won the suit.

BACK BAY

A very pretty wedding took place July 26th at the home of Wm. Mitchell when his third daughter Elizabeth Adelale was united in marriage to Chas. F. Wright of Beaver Harbor. The bride was dressed in cream silk trimmed with all over lace and silk insertion, and carried a bouquet of white sweet peas and bridal flowers, the bridal veil was caught up with lilies of the valley, the bridesmaid, a sister of the bride (Estella) was dressed in white silk muslin trimmed with gold beads and carried pink and white sweet peas. The best man was a brother of the bride (Thomas). The home was beautifully trimmed in evergreens and pink and white roses. The bride stood under a large white floral bell and looked very pretty. The groom's present to the bride was a gold bracelet, to the bridesmaid a locket and chain, to the best man a pair of gold cuff links. There was 70 guests, all of whom partook of a bountiful supper. In the evening the amusements were games, singing, music and dancing, after a late hour all departed to their homes after wishing the bride and groom many happy years. They took the train Thursday for St. John, Fredericton, Montreal. They will reside at the groom's home at Beaver Harbor where he is a merchant of that place.

Woman Describes Balkan Atrocities.

Two thousand persons living in caves on Frontier to escape soldier's cruelty.

London, July 26.—The Balkan committee have received a letter from Miss Edith Durham, superintendent of the Podgoritz hospital, written at Zatrijevac village on the Montenogro, in which she gives a harrowing story of the plight of the Albanian refugees.

Miss Durham declares the Albanians in Montenegro are in a worse plight than were the Macedonians after the uprising of 1903. High Albania is now a desolate wilderness. "All the women and children," she writes, "with the exception of those burned to death in their homes, are here as refugees. They have escaped outrage, but are faced with starvation in their present plight."

"Over 2,000 in this neighborhood alone are scattered in caves and holes in the mountain sides, while the rest are crowded into any possible hut that promises shelter."

"All are wan and drawn by starvation and unless help is forthcoming quickly the mortality will be terrible."

"The Turks have wreaked vengeance on churches, which they have desecrated in every possible way. The object of their army seems to be to exterminate all Catholics from the land. As things stand the desperate insurgents declare death is preferable to further life under Turkish dominion."

"Every day the work of devastation is going on. I have just returned from seeing the refugees on the mountain. They are reduced to chopping asphodel leaves and stinging nettles and boiling them in petroleum cans to prolong life."

"Under the circumstances permit me to urge that help must come quickly or it will be late."

The letter of Miss Durham comes at the time that Turkish treatment of the Albanians is exciting considerable uneasiness in political and diplomatic circles in Great Britain and all the leading capitals of Europe.

Ungar's Laundry Opens an Agency in St. George.

The citizens of St. George and vicinity will be delighted to know that Mr. Stephen Kent has secured the agency for this town, for Ungar's Laundry, Dyeing and Cleaning Works of St. John, N. B. The name "Ungar's" is known in every part of the Maritime Provinces, and stands for all the best in laundry, dyeing and cleaning work. Patrons of Ungar's will be pleased to know that all their work while in the laundry is insured against fire, and Ungar's is the only laundry in the Provinces who carry insurance on their customers work. Ungar's have recently installed the famous "Press machines," i.e. ironing by pressure instead of friction, and they claim to have the best equipped laundry in the Provinces. They guarantee satisfaction. Mr. Kent will be pleased to supply price lists and solicit a trial bundle, as do Ungar's.

The following is the standing of our Correspondents for the July distribution of prizes, with points made by each. Our Wilson's Beach and Beaver Harbor correspondents were so close that we have decided to divide the first prize. Wilson's Beach 1st with 57 points; Beaver Harbor 2nd-35; Maces Bay 3rd-48; Back Bay 4th-32; Back Bay 5th-30; Mascarene 5th-27; Rolling Dam 7th-25; Seelvie's Cove 8th-22; Letette 9th-21; Loris Cove 10th-20; Letang 11th-19; New River Mills 12th-17; Pleasant Ridge 13th-15; Mascarene 14th-14; Dipper Harbor 15th-12; Leonardville 16th-11; Bonny River 17th-10; Lamberts Cove 18th-9 points. Besides there are a number of consolation prizes. Our correspondents will notice how very close the points run so that all with a little extra attention could very much better their standing. The prizes will shortly be distributed. We would take this opportunity to ask all our correspondents to start in now and make an extra effort during the next six months for the January distribution.

The great development of outdoor life is indicated by a recent rough estimate that over one hundred thousand boys and girls are in camp every summer, irrespective of semi-military organizations. That camping should be an exact science is indicated by the recent report of an outbreak of typhoid fever in a Boy Scout camp near Cincinnati.

Among the jewels Queen Mary of England most valued is a chain of pearls presented to her as a wedding present by the women of twenty-three English counties. Six thousand pounds was subscribed but only five thousand was spent on the necklace, and the other one thousand was divided among various charities chosen by her Majesty.

Seven years for bigamy and four years for fraud were the sentences passed in London on George W. Lucid, who was found guilty of the most heartless bigamy. It was proved he married several women, obtained all their money and then left them. At the prisoner's lodgings were found 2,700 letters from different women. The police stated that the prisoner's real name was Patrick Moraine, and he came from Tipperary.

FANS HAVE INJINGS.

Not all the fun at a ball game is in the diamond. The remarks hurled by fans at the umpire or players are often funny—very funny. The wif of the baseball fan in the bleachers is ever blooming. Here are some of the funny things that have occurred at ball games.

The crowd at Spokane, Wash., caught the umpire rotten. Yllo stepped up to the home base to sweep the dirt off so he could see more plainly as bleacherite he "trod out."

"Do you have to know much to 'trod out'?"

One of the fans in the bleachers at a Montreal-Baltimore game, after a rank play on the part of one of the Montreal players, cried: "Aw, hang 'ere on your nose 'four brains are dead."

The Toronto first baseman made an unsuccessful attempt to steal second. "Hey, Toronto," shrieked a fan "you're sold ivory from your shoulders up, and you breathe through your ears like a fish."

May Be Heirs To $82,000,000

Deeds in Bible 20 Years Old Counted on to Prove Claim.

Toronto, July 19.—Hidden between the pages of a Bible 20 years old were found documents which may be in the near future be used in the probate of the second largest will ever administered in British courts. It is known as the Baker estate and is believed to have grown to a close kin expect to share with about 150 others.

This afternoon there is to be a meeting of the hope-to-be heirs in St. George's Hall, Elm street, at which relatives from hundreds of miles around are expected to be present and divulge information they have acquired.

If hopes are being built upon the justly celebrated "Col. Baker estate" claimed on divers occasions, to comprise most of the downtown property in Philadelphia they will probably be shattered, as have the hopes of many another aspirant, but it is not stated that the fortune now being sought is the one which supposed descendants of the jovial colonel had been following up many years, in an ill-starred quest.

The Bible in which the deeds were found some years ago, was discovered by Burgess Baker of Birch, Ontario. This Bible was fully two hundred years old, and how long the precious papers had been there is unknown.

So much faith have the Philadelphia lawyers who are investigating the matter that they are working purely on a commission basis and have every confidence that within another two years will receive the largest cheque ever issued for securing money so long standing.

The Dominion government, it is said, has appointed a solicitor to make a thorough investigation and to report as soon as possible. This is just a recent move, and only one of many made during the past twelve years, during which time information has been silently gathered.

The fortune at the time of Col. Baker's death was between $50,000 and $100,000, and during the two centuries has multiplied to the magnificent sum of $82,000,000.

Should the will be administered as expected there will be wonderful transformation in Philadelphia. Property which is now supposed to belong to banks and other financial institutions, will revert to the proper owners, and this will necessitate many sales, as the will could hardly be settled without the sale of all the properties connected with it.

After the death of Col. Baker the family moved to Canada and settled in Oxford county, and to this day many of the descendants live in the same neighborhood.

Declaring she is the widow of five husbands, all of whom fought in the civil war, a woman of Walton county, Georgia, has applied for five state pensions amounting to $60 a month. She says that she was a Miss Malcolm before marriage and that her first husband was killed during the first year of the war, while her second soldier husband met a like fate toward the close of the conflict. She further asserts that the three men she married since the war were veterans of the Confederacy.

CAMEO KIRBY

By Booth Tarkington AND Harry Leon Wilson Adapted From the Play of the Same Name by W. B. M. Ferguson

Copyright 1909 by the Amalee Mitzgans Company

At your entrance and on no account to mention the word 'escape.' I know he will promise faithfully, and we can rely upon it. Meanwhile we must think of some plan. There must surely be some way." She stopped and assumed an unconcerned expression as Poirot, one of the servants, entered. The French man's face brightened and then, pointing straight at Kirby, inquired, "Shall I take the colonel gentleman's portmanteau to the carriage?" Adele turned, sudden inspiration in her eyes. "Yes, yes," she cried, breathless with excitement. "And Poirot, tell them to lift the top and get the carriage to the door."

MR. MADAM, COLONEL MOREAU WOULDN'T CHANGE HIS LAW AGAIN.

"Now I know! Now I have found the way!"

"But I don't understand," stammered Kirby. "I cannot permit you to breach the colonel's wishes, but according to my own one—was in another direction looking after his interests with unabated zeal, postponing his exposure and consequently prolonging his intimacy with the Randalls.

It must be remembered that only Tom Randall and his cousin Aaron had met Colonel Moreau, and this Kirby's exposure as an impostor could only come from these two. The hot-headed, vengeful boy was still busy scouring New Orleans for his supposed enemy, and this his presence at the plantation would be indefinitely postponed until he had either succeeded in tracking Kirby or had abandoned all hope of so doing.

On the other hand, however, Aaron, hearing his cousin's wishes, had accompanied Croup to the plantation, where he confidently expected to find Judge Pleydell, who had preceded him thither, but learning on his arrival that the latter had ridden over to his plantation, Aaron immediately followed. It so happened, however, that Judge Pleydell, completing his errand, had returned to the Randalls and, taking a short cut through a lane which connected the two estates, unwittingly passed Aaron, who had followed the highroad. Thus when Kirby and the ladies eventually arrived the old judge, supported by a jubilant crowd of negro field hands and domestic servants, was the only one to welcome them.

Standing on the steps of the veranda while she awaited the benediction of the house, Adele, smiling and flushing by turns, boldly introduced the pseudo Moreau to her family's old friend.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE journey to the Randall plantation, occupying a full day, marked an epoch in Eugene Kirby's life—a fact of which from its inception he was entirely unconscious. Without a single exception it was the first time in fifteen years that he had been received in a feeling of equality—even intimacy—with that high type of womanhood to which his birth entitled him and which had been forfeited when he had yielded to the lure of the river and the wiles of evil companions. And even though he did not forget that his present standing had been won by the grace of a girl's ready sympathy, the knowledge did not interfere with a thorough enjoyment and appreciation of the moment.

Under the impression that they were entertaining Colonel Moreau, benefactor and champion of the Randall family, Miss Pleydell and Miss Duvarez yielded the more readily to Kirby's charm of manner, while the General, conscious that he was acting in some mysterious way as the secret and trusted friend of his hairbreadth escape hero, hung on the latter's every word.

Indeed, a more impregnable audience would have found their entertainer irresistible, for Kirby put forth every effort to please, his payment a laugh from Adele or a flush in her pale cheek. Nor were his efforts prompted by egotism, any longing for self-exhibition; rather, in fact, they were spontaneous, a tribute to the goddess Fortune, which had graciously associated him with a type of femininity which he had longed to meet and desired of so doing.

Thus, with its four occupants in the happiest frame of mind, the close topped carriage, its sleepy negro driver automatically clucking at the horses, jogged steadily over the smooth road, while Anatole Veaudry, riding gleefully behind, winced whenever he heard Adele's fresh and rare free laughter. It was an unbroken sound, and more than once he caught himself commenting that it was an unweelcome.

Meanwhile Kirby's good angel—if a professional gambler may be permitted to own one—was in another direction looking after his interests with unabated zeal, postponing his exposure and consequently prolonging his intimacy with the Randalls.

It must be remembered that only Tom Randall and his cousin Aaron had met Colonel Moreau, and this Kirby's exposure as an impostor could only come from these two. The hot-headed, vengeful boy was still busy scouring New Orleans for his supposed enemy, and this his presence at the plantation would be indefinitely postponed until he had either succeeded in tracking Kirby or had abandoned all hope of so doing.

On the other hand, however, Aaron, hearing his cousin's wishes, had accompanied Croup to the plantation, where he confidently expected to find Judge Pleydell, who had preceded him thither, but learning on his arrival that the latter had ridden over to his plantation, Aaron immediately followed. It so happened, however, that Judge Pleydell, completing his errand, had returned to the Randalls and, taking a short cut through a lane which connected the two estates, unwittingly passed Aaron, who had followed the highroad. Thus when Kirby and the ladies eventually arrived the old judge, supported by a jubilant crowd of negro field hands and domestic servants, was the only one to welcome them.

Standing on the steps of the veranda while she awaited the benediction of the house, Adele, smiling and flushing by turns, boldly introduced the pseudo Moreau to her family's old friend.

"Colonel Moreau, this is indeed a happy and propitious occasion," warmly responded the judge, while he shook Kirby by the hand. "And never in my life have I seen so delightful and welcome an alteration as is apparent in the health and spirits of the young mistress of this plantation."

"Anatole," cried Adele as she passed, astonished, "we must ask you to give up your seat in the carriage. You see, our friend has come, after all."

"Our friend?" echoed Mrs. Duvarez, coming eagerly forward. "What is it possible? You mean, Adele, that this gentleman?"

"Yes," cried Adele, her eyes smoldering with excitement. "Quite possible, as you see. Aunt Duvarez, Miss Pleydell, Mr. Anatole Veaudry, I wish to present—Colonel Moreau. The colonel's plans have changed. He rides with us to the plantation."

"The colonel? Heigh-ho!" exclaimed Mrs. Duvarez, while the others expressed their astonishment and pleasure—"that is," she added, partially, with an arch glance at the pseudo Moreau. "If Colonel Moreau will not change his plans again."

Accustomed to such astounding turns of fortune, Kirby quickly recovered the composure shattered by the totally unexpected and amazing introduction of Adele. "No, madam," he replied gravely, bowing to the willfully smiling Mrs. Duvarez. "Colonel Moreau won't change his plans again."

And in this unbroken manner, up and down the carriage, he had been heard by the preceding, successful and ignorant hand of one who had known his identity would have been the next to set as his name, came Cameo Kirby to the house of his enemy.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE journey to the Randall plantation, occupying a full day, marked an epoch in Eugene Kirby's life—a fact of which from its inception he was entirely unconscious. Without a single exception it was the first time in fifteen years that he had been received in a feeling of equality—even intimacy—with that high type of womanhood to which his birth entitled him and which had been forfeited when he had yielded to the lure of the river and the wiles of evil companions. And even though he did not forget that his present standing had been won by the grace of a girl's ready sympathy, the knowledge did not interfere with a thorough enjoyment and appreciation of the moment.

Under the impression that they were best. Also it is that he would wish the ladies to know. I shall seek opportunity to congratulate him when he is not in their presence. I should not think it honor of me to be slow with my felicitations—Ah, I shall do it now."

He turned as Kirby emerged from the garden, Adele having halted some distance down the path.

"I have just learn, sir," began Anatole, with a bow, "of the great privilege you have had today. We know by the pleasure to see you alive that there is one great secret which is not."

"Who's that?" asked Kirby, lighting a cheroot.

"I offer you congratulation," pursued the young creole formally and rather stiffly, "that you have earned the gratitude of all good people."

"What for?"

"Because you have the honor to kill that Cameo Kirby."

The other with perfect composure gravely eyed his cheroot, while he successfully concealed all evidence of any other feeling.

"Well," he said coolly, "I at ways hoped that nobody but myself would kill that fellow. I suppose many have wished to, but they didn't have my luck."

"But most I congratulate you, M. le Colonel," finished Anatole, his voice tremulous with emotion, "is that you have earned so much gratitude here, making an eloquent gesture toward the house."

The time Kirby could conceal his astonishment. "And why should that have earned me so much gratitude—here?" he asked bluntly, imitating the other's posture.

Before M. Veaudry could reply Adele had joined the group.

"Anatole has presented you to the colonel," she inquired, turning to her cousin. Then, needless of his evident amazement, she gaily continued, turning to Kirby: "This is our good cousin Aaron. Aaron, you will be glad to know that this gentleman is Colonel Moreau. I have the honor to present you."

"Colonel Moreau?" gasped Aaron, agast. "Why—why—I met Colonel Moreau—this morning."

Adele started and paled as, too late, she fully realized the truth. But Kirby remained the same courteous, amiable and care-free gentleman of the carriage, while he eyed Aaron steadily.

"Does it seem to you that I have changed since we last met?" he blandly inquired. "I suppose you would hardly know me for the same man? In fact, if Miss Adele hadn't told you that I am Colonel Moreau you would not have believed it? But you take her word for it, don't you?"

After a long, tense silence the bewildered Aaron gravely inclined his head, saying, "Yes, I take her word."

"Ah, I thought so," gently commented Kirby, and, bowing, he joined Miss Pleydell and the General in the garden.

"Cousin Aaron," said Adele earnestly. "I did introduce that gentleman as Colonel Moreau. I know just what you do. I ask you to trust me until you come, because I ought to tell him first. Will you do it?" And, again, Aaron, after a momentary struggle, assented.

When the girl had rejoined Kirby in the garden, M. Veaudry, who had been an interested spectator of the little tableau, exchanged with his companion a significant glance of grave suspicion.

"He must have changed quickly, this colonel, since you saw him this morning," he commented dryly. "I think—but who is this gentleman?" turning to confront Larin Bunce, who, mopping his forehead with a dusty sleeve, had thrown himself from his weary horse and boldly entered the gate. In fact, he had ridden at a headsteeple back all the way from New Orleans.

"Your servant, sir," he greeted, bowing to Aaron. "I'm looking for the gentleman who came here in the carriage with the ladies."

"Ah," exclaimed Mr. Randall, closely scanning the other. "You're the

"BECAUSE YOU HATE THE THING TO KILL THAT CAMEO KIRBY."

the man who came to see Colonel Moreau this morning. Do you wish to see him now?"

Bunce started violently, turning as pale as his overcast condition permitted. "Good God, no!" he exclaimed.

"But it was Colonel Moreau who accompanied the ladies," explained Aaron. "And, sir, here he is now."

The gambler turned with a subdued exclamation of alarm, as if fully expecting to see the ghost of the late lamented Moreau. But instead his

Drove Wagon as a Man.

Young Woman Will Hereafter be Garbed Suitably to Her Sex.

Miss Hazel Hawley, young and handsome, who for two years has been masquerading as a man and driving one of the band wagons with a circus, passed through Cincinnati Wednesday on her way to West Virginia to learn from an aunt, Mrs. Sarah Hallaway of Parkersburg, the whereabouts of her parents.

Miss Hawley's identity was established last week when the circus wagon driver was recognized by a man in that city.

Miss Hawley disappeared from Newark three years ago, following a quarrel with her fiance, and her parents moved away last year, believing her dead. She had not been heard from and when identified admitted that she was masquerading and that she had intended to continue posing as a man and not her secret be found out.

Friends in Newark gave her the address of her aunt, and Manager John Robinson of Cincinnati showed her to seek her parents provided she would return to the circus when the aggregation appears in South Norwood, a suburb, on August 1. Miss Hawley will remain in the employ of the circus and will drive the sixteen horse band wagon garbed as a woman.

Tries to Rob Bank at 13, Girl in Cell.

Akron, Ohio, July 11.—Edna Peedles, thirteen years old, is in jail at The Falls charged with attempted bank robbery.

This afternoon she entered The Falls Saving Bank, the only bank in Cuyahoga Falls. She carried revolver. The cashier, J. N. Wolfinger, was out, and D. B. Gensinger was in charge. She sat in the outer office for a few moments, then approached Gensinger and levelled the revolver at his head.

"Give me the money in those vaults," she said.

Gensinger started, said the vaults were closed, and he could not open them. Disappointed, the girl hesitated, knocked the door and started down the street on the run. She was arrested later.

"I need the money" was her answer when the police asked her why she had prompted her act. She apparently does not realize the seriousness of her situation and rather enjoyed at first the notoriety she had achieved.

"Other girls had nice clothes and I didn't," she said in her cell to-night. "I thought that if I could get some money I could have nice things, and it seemed that it would be easy to get money from a bank. If the cashier had given the money I would have bought me a fine new outfit right away."

The hold-up was in true Wild West style. The girl held her gun steadily, and as she was fettered and backed to the door left this warning: "Don't move or my partner outside will get you."

The Cry of the Little Nations.

The cry of the little nations
Went up to the heart of God,
As they prayed, and toiled, and sorrowed
For a bit of earth's ancient sod.
They pleaded, but not for empire,
Nor rich ports on distant seas.
They left to the great, strong nations
Such destinies as these,
While they prayed and toiled and waited
Half hopeful and half in fear
As they heard the belching cannon
And the din of battle near.

"Oh, leave us," they cried, "our homelands,
Our rivers and pastures free,
Some trees to shadow our cattle,
And an end, maybe, of the sea.
Just sports, that the big, bold nations
Need for their greed; nor boast,
And where no ships of the mighty
Shall thunder along our coast.
Just a place to rear our children,
And a way to earn their bread,
To sow, to reap, and to garner,
Away from the battle's tread.

"Oh, leave us," they prayed, "our freedom,
And the right of our native speech
Oh, why should we weak ones suffer?
Sad lessons the strong ones teach.
They pride in their mighty armies,
And fleets on the great, high seas,
We ask to rest from the struggle,
From rivalries such as these,
And to dwell in peace, and labor,
And serve our fathers' God,
To sow, to reap, to garner,
On these bits of ancient sod."

Thus the cry of the little nations
Went up to the God of the earth,
Who doth still rule o'er his people,
And who knoweth each one's worth
And the ways of the great, strong nations
Were led by his wondrous hand,
And the God heart gave them wisdom,
And love to understand
That peace is the highest mission,
That love outlives all strife,
Are throbbing anew with life,
And they praise the God of their fathers,
Who doth still his people keep,
And men forget past burdens,
And women forget to weep,
There are sounds of mirth in the valleys
And songs of praise on the hills,
And the soul of the world is throbbing
With the vigor that love instills,
And they sow, and reap, and garner,
And rejoice in peace and rest,
Each one of the little nations
In the land that is loveliest best.

When the hair thins out on the top of the head the bald spot is getting ready to appear in public. Don't get discouraged or irritable. Just go to your druggist and ask for Parisian Sage Hair Tonic. He will charge you 50c for a large bottle but if it does not cause hair to grow where the hair is thinning out nothing on this earth will.

And we want to say to everybody, man, woman and child, that you can have your money back if Parisian Sage isn't the best hair grower, hair saver, hair beautifier and dandruff cure on the market to-day.

It stops itching scalp and falling hair and makes hair grow thick and abundantly. All druggists everywhere sell Parisian Sage or postpaid from the Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont. See that the girl with the Auburn hair is on every bottle. Sold and guaranteed by J. Sutton Clark.

Canadian runners carried off the honors of the Empire's Coronation games, and now a Canadian shot won both the King's prize and the Prince of Wales' prize at Bisley. We will have hard work for a few days to assume an air of humility. Ex.

Bent by the Sun.

The towering Washington monument solid as it is, cannot resist the heat of the sun, poured on its southern side on a midsummer's day, without a slight bending of the gigantic shaft which is rendered perceptible by means of a copper wire 174 feet long, hanging in the centre of the structure, and carrying a plummet suspended in a vessel of water. At noon in summer the apex of the monument, 550 feet above the ground, is shifted, by expansion of the stone, a few hundredths of an inch toward the north. High winds cause perceptible motions of the plummet, and in still weather delicate vibrations of the crust of the earth, otherwise unperceived, are registered by it.

Bearing Down Pains.

What woman at some time or other does not experience those dreadful bearing down pains. Mrs. E. Griffith of Main street, Hepworth, Ont. says: "A heavy bearing down pain had settled across my back and sides. I was often unable to stoop or straighten myself up. Many times each night I would have to leave my bed with the irregular and frequent secretions of the kidneys and just as done out in the morning as on retiring. I was languid and would have to let my household work stand. Nothing I had tried would benefit me. I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills and concluded I would try them, which I did, and soon found the long sought relief. My back strengthened and I began to feel better and stronger. I now enjoy my sleep without being disturbed and feel grateful to Booth's Kidney Pills for what they did for me."

Booth's Kidney Pills are a boon to women. She would know less of backaches if she took more of these wonderful pills. They are nature's greatest specific for all diseases of the kidneys and bladder. All druggists, soc. box, or postpaid from The R. T. Booth Co. Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont. Sold and guaranteed by J. Sutton Clark

To the Court of Appeal.

If government is to be made a farce, if the minority abuse the privileges of a minority, there are judges over us to judge between the Government and the Opposition." In these words Sir Wilfrid Laurier Monday served notice upon Mr. Borden and his followers that a continuation of the obstruction of the reciprocity agreement would inevitably result in an immediate appeal to the court of last resort.

No other course is open to the Government. The Opposition has cast aside all pretence of doing business at Ottawa. The chief Conservative organ of this city in its Ottawa correspondence boasts that during the past week the business of the House has been divided by the leader of the Opposition. Under the rule of unlimited debate that still prevails at Ottawa there is no means of ending a deliberately obstructive campaign except by dissolution. The Liberal party has no fear of the result of an appeal to the people. The reductions in the tariff on which the election must be fought will exalt the farmers, the lumbermen, and the fishermen of Canada to obtain free access for their products to the great consuming markets of the United States. Reciprocity means another free market added to that of Great Britain. It will not hurt the manufacturer in the remotest degree nor retard in the slightest the rising tide of national and Imperial sentiment. Before the electors the Conservative party must appear in the character of out-and-out opponents of reciprocity. They have made that plain. The issue is clear. It is ripe for final judgment.—*Tor. ### Clock of Louis XIV.

Marvellous Timepiece, Restored, Will Again be placed on View. (European Edition of N.Y. Herald.) "Les Amis de Versailles," whose zeal encouraged by the able work of Messieurs de Nollac and Dajardin-Beaumez, has already produced such happy results, for our national domain, have just, if not exhumed, at least resuscitated a historical curiosity which, thanks to them, has appeared again out of oblivion.

This long forgotten gem is the marvellous clock of Louis XIV., a mute now for more than a century in a corner of the Council Chamber, to which it had been relegated. Now, after patient and clever repairs, its sumptuous case and chiselled bronzes will have again a place of honor in broad daylight, in the centre of the Salon de Mars, where the public may admire it and wonder at its ingenious mechanism.

The history of this clock, the gorgeous face of which is ornamented with allegorical figures, but of which the pedestal, case and bronze work, in fine Regency style, date from an epoch later than that of its manufacture, is not known in its entirety. The obscure worker who conceived the plan and executed it by ten years of labor was just a simple, uneducated mechanic, who, on completing his tour of France after his apprenticeship, had the idea of making a masterpiece, the renown of which would reach the ears of the Grand Roi himself. And the most astounding thing about it is that he seems to have succeeded in his double design. He understood right at the start, and this is proof of his common sense, that only by adulation could he open to himself the gates of the palace of Versailles.

So he decided to construct something that would constitute a homage, in direct, and acquiescent fashion, to the god who reigned therein. In doing so he followed a high example, for it was precisely from a conception of the most notorious of court sycophants, the Duc de La Fayette, that he got the idea for his clock.

This time-piece, as a matter of fact, was very evidently inspired by the monument which that Marshal of France had erected at his own expense after the designs of Mansard in the Place des Victoires in Paris, and at the unveiling of which Louis XIV. presided in person on March 28, 1686. The figure of the monarch is seen crowned by Victory at the top of a pedestal, at the angles of which four slaves in chains represent conquered nations.

The revolution overturned the statue and the sons of the nation made cannon out of its bronze. But the clock made by Morand, that was the name of the bold though unlettered artisan who signed his work in a flowery but ill-spelled inscription—the clock has survived. And it is this curious time-piece which the Department of Fine Arts confided to the care of Mons. L. Leroy, the skillful clockmaker of the navy, who has just renewed its perieit though complicated organism.

Perhaps the maker of the clock had seen at Lyons the famous clock constructed by Nicholas Nippius, or he may have heard of the more celebrated clock in the cathedral of Strassburg, which in the fifteenth century, was looked upon as the third of the seven wonders of Germany. Morand's clock, as a matter of fact, reproduces certain details, the cock which crows at the moment the hours are about to strike, the eagle which spreads its wings, etc.

But the jacks are replaced by geni armed with hammers, who strike the quarters on the shells of little warriors who appear suddenly at regular intervals and as suddenly disappear. Finally, and this is the principal feature, when the hour strikes and the gong resounds the glazed doors of a tabernacle swing wide apart and the Sun King advances to the threshold, while, descending from a cloudy sky, a winged Victory places a crown upon his brow.

You Breathe It.

By the simple act of breathing, we inhale life and death. You breathe air crowded with disease germs. These lodge in the membrane and at once commence their deadly work. In a night you develop a cold and before long you are in the grip of Canada's deadliest enemy—Catarrh.

You also breathe Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me) and by so doing breathe in life—Hyomei is medicated and vaporized air. In its journey through the breathing organs it arrests and kills catarrh and cold germs soothes the inflamed membrane and commences the work of healing. Ask druggist J. Sutton. Clark what he knows about Hyomei. You will find that he not only sells it but guarantees it. A complete outfit will cost you $1.00 from your druggist or postpaid from the R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont. You will find it invaluable for coughs, colds, catarrh and all kindred diseases. Money refunded if it fails.

The Farmers Bank Case.

It has been supposed that the men who wrecked the Farmers Bank and were responsible for the loss and ruin that have overtaken its unhappy shareholders were its Manager, W. R. Travers, who now eats the bread of bitterness in Kingston Penitentiary, and Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, the sleek, unscrupulous Tory politician who was the nearest approach to a "boss" in this city has ever had. Travers became the scapegoat. Nesbitt, warned in a mysterious way that may some day be disclosed, escaped across the border. From a safe and secret retreat he flies signs of capitulation, and friends go about suggesting that he may return "if things are made easy for him." Many an honest Conservative in Toronto who has puffed a churchwarden or drunk a glass of beer at one of Beattie Nesbitt's famous ward smokers is ashamed to think that the money for some of those lavish affairs must have come from the till of the Farmers Bank. Conservatives remember how The Mail and Empire cheered them on a little over three years ago to make the boss Mayor. There was no suggestion then that he had helped to float a rotten bank.

"Vote for Nesbitt," The Mail and Empire cried. "He is the man that Toronto needs at the head of its affairs in 1908. . . . The liveliest, most vigorous character that has appeared in Toronto's municipal politics for years is Dr. Beattie Nesbitt. . . . We need a man of Dr. Nesbitt's forceful personality not only to push to realization the great undertakings that have been so long dreamt about, but also to protect the city from deals that are being promoted by interests of which The Globe is the journalistic spokesman."

Remembering these words, it might be supposed that The Mail and Empire would have little to say about the affairs of the Farmers Bank. But the former fuglemen for Nesbitt are in no way disconcerted by the fact that their hero has proved a scoundrel. The Mail and Empire is still convinced that it was the Government of Canada and not Travers and Nesbitt who committed the crime. It says that "when the courts have got through with the Farmers Bank business—when all the private falsifiers, looters, and wreckers are in penitentiary that ought to be there—something will have been done to clear up a very rascally and ruinous enterprise. But the men who carried out this adventure of plunder had full license for their operations, and though all the recklessness and scoundrelism from which innocent people suffered at their hands be punished, there will still remain the great culprit, the Government of Canada," it adds that "when the Government of Canada gave permission for the Farmers Bank to go into business it committed a crime against the public."

That the Finance Department was deceived as the result of the practices of the bank's officers is now quite apparent. But to be tricked by unscrupulous men is not a crime. If it were, Colonel Matheson, the Treasurer of Ontario, would be in dire peril. For if Mr. Fielding's department had "at least good reason" to suspect that the spirit of the law was not fully complied with in the preliminaries of the bank's organization, as The Mail and Empire alleges, Colonel Matheson, long after the bank had started on "a rotten basis," lent the money of the Province to it under circumstances that he has never explained, though invited on several occasions to do so.

The story of how the Treasurer of Ontario unwittingly and innocently helped the Farmers Bank along the road to ruin has importance as evidence that people in very close touch with Nesbitt and Travers were fully as apt to be victimized by them as the Minister of Finance and his officers, who knew them only in an official way. The public accounts of Ontario show that in 1908 the "special account" of the Province in the Farmers Bank was increased $10,000 to $35,000. Travers, it seems, hid a habit of using would-be borrowers of money as canvassers for deposits. "You get me a deposit and I'll give you a loan" seems to have been his position. In the early summer of 1908 The Toronto World wanted a loan. It was suggested, by whom does not appear, that the Province had a good deal of money on deposit here and there, and that by the application of judicious pressure on Col. Matheson the Farmers Bank could increase its "moneys on deposit," and its power of making loans. The World supplied some of the pressure. If Dr. Beattie Nesbitt supplied the balance locked in his own breast. The World got a loan of several thousand dollars and Beattie Nesbitt got $25,000. Travers asserts that the $25,000 by which Colonel Matheson increased the deposit of the Province that year provided him with the money to make the loan of $25,000 advanced to Beattie Nesbitt for the purpose of purchasing his share of the Kreeley mine.

If that can be established, then the people of Ontario through their Treasurer actually supplied a part of the money that enabled Travers and Beattie Nesbitt to enter upon the speculation that finally destroyed the bank. No reasonable man would hold Col. Matheson responsible for the uses to which Travers put his money. He probably did not know that in effect he was loaning the money of the people to The World and to Dr. Beattie Nesbitt. He was no doubt deceived alike as to the standing of the bank and the object of those who urged that the Provincial deposit should be increased. But why should Colonel Matheson have yielded to his solicitation of his political friends and increased the deposit of an institution that was beginning to be the subject of street gossip? He unquestionably regrets deeply that he permitted himself to be hoodwinked, but he is still an honorable and upright man. Yet if The Mail and Empire were on the opposite side of politics Colonel Matheson would be held up to scorn and ridicule, and the people would be asked to visit their indignation on a Minister of the Crown who, knowing Travers and Beattie Nesbitt and the sort of bank they operated, consented to increase the Provincial deposit, and by the force of example lure innocent private depositors to destruction. The Colonel, knowing all that he knows about the affairs of the Farmers Bank, must be heartily ashamed of the references of The Mail and Empire to Mr. Fielding, one of the most cleanest and honorable men who ever took high place in the public life of Canada.—Toronto Globe.

Precursor of Abolition.

Abolitionists existed even in the seventeenth century, a time when heavy drinking was common and looked upon as quite natural. Moreover, they practised when they preached, as the following will show: The notice consists of a printed leaflet, at the top of which appears the arms of France, a sign autograph, dated Feb. 5, 1683, bringing it to a close. "We forbid with great emphasis all sorts of persons, whatever be their quality and condition, as also the Magistrates of towns in which a garrison may be quartered to establish any canteen for the sale of brandy, and to sell that commodity to any horseman, dragoon, and soldier, at any price and under any pretext whatsoever, the penalty being a fine of 150 livres, as well as all expenses, damages, and interests, half of which shall go to the informer, and the other half to the Capucin Convents nearest situated to each town, citadel, or castle in which the present order shall have been contravened. Which order shall take force, be published and affixed in such places as there is need of it, to the end that nobody shall plead ignorance as a cause of its infraction."—The Hospital.

Peace has become the international vogue. (National Magazine for August)

The prevalent sentiment toward peace defies concrete analysis. Peace has become the international vogue, as it were, and though no one can explain just why the thoughts of the people are converging in the same direction, yet the peace sentiment has become so firmly established that it soon must become overwhelming. A desire for reciprocal arbitration and trade, and the appreciation of what industrially and commercially development means as a moral as well as an economic question—such sentiments are now in the minds of all the people of the earth. Tolerance and plain common-sense promise to supplant the impulsive ardor that heretofore has led to conflict and bloody wars. Month by month the belief becomes more pronounced in the economic advantages of peace as a vital factor in the permanent and enduring welfare of all nations in the progress of affairs as they exist today. An exhaustive survey of the world peace proposition throws out in strong relief the work of President Taft which enforces an appreciation aside from that impelled by ardent personal admirers.

Arnold Morley's Long Wooing Of Mrs. Chauncey.

London, July 15. Society is gossiping merrily over the marriage of Arnold Morley, formerly Postmaster-General of the United Kingdom, because of his prolonged decoction to Mrs. Samuel Sloan Chauncey, once of New York and previously of Louisville, Ky. He is sixty-one a millionaire and known to his club associates as "the butler" a questionable compliment at best and particularly offensive because it is based on his prim appearance and company manners.

The moment Mrs. Chauncey entered London Society Morley became her ardent admirer. Throughout her really brilliant career as a social leader, when her engagement to another man was reported every few months, he was most constant. Then the beautiful Mrs. Chauncey wedded Gen. Cecil Bingham.

Morley was not ready to become a recluse. When he saw Gen. Bingham enter the field he realized that his dream was fast ending, so he plunged into the social swirl as gaily as one of his years could be expected to do. Recently came the announcement of his marriage to Mrs. Elsie Waite Runyon, widow of James Runyon of New York.

A Coronation Hint.

(Manchester Guardian.)
The enthusiasm of a crowd of his subjects for the King as he passes in the streets is a real and spontaneous thing, quite direct and literal in its intention and its expression. We should take care not to impair it by restrictions, lest one professional morning we wake up to find that the barriers have been shut and the crowds are absent, and that only tiers of crimson-baited seats accommodating wealthy seat-holders remain to give a decorous symbolic expression to the reality that has departed. At the coronation of the Plantagenets and Tudor kings the populace had an immediate and important place, they and not the nobles only were the people to whom the Archbishop appealed. In King James I's coronation procession, all the trades and professions walked. At Queen Victoria's even, any body who put down his money could buy a seat in the Abbey. To-day the Abbey is filled differently, and the only popular representatives in it, the members of the House of Commons, have mostly seats from which they cannot see. The responsible ministers of the crown have no place in the ceremonies. Trades and professions walk only in those local processions by which the cities of the kingdom celebrate the occasion, and which are in their way impressive, too. The ingenuity of those who marshal and design our ceremonies seems to be bent on rendering them more remote—so at least King Edward's funeral and the coronation procession would force us to think.

Now the greatest lock on the globe is nearing completion in the United States new canal. Above the lock the new canal basin is 260 feet near the lock gates, widening away to a maximum of 200 feet with uniform depth of 25 feet, says the Chicago Tribune. The lock gates are 108 feet wide, and the canal and lock will go into commission this summer. The freight tonnage annually for the great lakes is 90,000,000, and is about one-sixth of the freight movement of the country. The significance of the canal lies in the statement that almost 70 per cent of this great lakes commerce passes through the several "Soo" canals, effecting a saving estimated at $250,000,000, over rail traffic.

A Lesson of the Temple.

(London Times.)
"Not the exploits of soldiers, not the intrepidity of seamen, not the loud wrangling of party, not the fumbling of statesmen with secular movements which they understand only after the event, has built up the British Empire. Not any of these alone, nor any of the material acquisitions they may have brought, can maintain the vitality of the Empire."

Austrian Red Tape.

At Kopist, near Brno, in January last a miner named Brezek, risked his life in saving a boy from drowning. His heroic action cost him a severe cold, resulting in a long sickness. On the advice of friends he appealed to authorities for some assistance. After a delay of several weeks he received an answer informing him that he had been fined one crown because he had omitted to place the proper stamp on his petition for help. Austrian red tape could scarcely go further.

Volcano Defrauds United States

Washington, July 26.—Bongo, a volcano in Japan, is defrauding the United States out of duties on raw sulphur every year. Customs officials after a long wrestle with Bongo's case, have decided they cannot do anything with it. Raw sulphur as most everyone knows, comes from the crater of a volcano. It is free of duty. Refined sulphur pays $4 a ton. But Bongo's crater is so hot that it refines the sulphur as fast as it makes it.

The shrewd gentlemen who own Bongo steadfastly refuse to pay duty on the sulphur, and the treasury knows of no way to make them do so.

Longest Canal Locks.

The longest canal lock in the world is under construction by the federal government at St. Mary's Falls at Sault Ste Marie, Mich. This longest lock in the world is in process, to measure 350 by 80 feet, with low water clearance of 25 feet.

This new canal, which is to parallel the old Soo canal from Lake Superior, lies to the north of the old St. Mary's Falls canal, which had its origin when the State of Michigan dug the first "Soo" canal in 1855. In the early 70's traffic through the Michigan built canal had increased to such an extent that the federal government took it over, and in 1881 had completed its enlargement to 160 ft. width and constructing the Wenzell lock still in use—515 feet long and 80 feet wide, with depth of 16 feet at low water. On the Canadian side are the Dominion government's canal and lock, but by far the greater tonnage has been using the American side, where the later Poe lock has had a length of 500 feet, width of 200 and depth of 20 feet.

Now the greatest lock on the globe is nearing completion in the United States new canal. Above the lock the new canal basin is 260 feet near the lock gates, widening away to a maximum of 200 feet with uniform depth of 25 feet, says the Chicago Tribune. We are glad to send another report from Bay View Division to let folks know we are still alive and trying our best to do much in the work of Temperance.

We have now 60 members. On Saturday evening July 29th we had a very profitable meeting which was carried on in the usual manner for the good of the order.

The following programme was rendered: Recitations by Brother Hinds, and sisters Mae Leslie and Johnson, Solo by Arthur Leslie, Speech by Flonso French, Duet by Sisters Joanna Hooper and M. Leslie, after which Brother French collected some loose change to purchase a treat for next Saturday evening which we trust will be some inducement to those who have been absent so long and who seem to have forgotten that Bay View Division exists.

Officers for the quarter ending Sept. 30th are as follows: Owen Hinds W. P., Sister Joanna Hooper W. A., Mae Johnson F. S., Mae Kinney, Treas., Clinton French Chap., H. McLeese Con., A. Leslie, A. C., John French I. S., O. L. Phinney O. S., Lillian McGee R. S., Mae Leslie, A. R. S., Thos. Johnson, P. W. P.

Mrs. Marshall Groom and daughter Vera spent a week with Mrs. Thos. Johnson.

Miss Ethel Spinney has returned to her home after spending two weeks with Mrs. Leander McGee.

Many friends of Jas. McGee are sorry to hear he is on the sick list.

Mrs. Cobden of St. John is visiting Mrs. Frank Leavitt.

Miss Winnifred Cook has returned home after an extended visit with friends in Maine.

CARD OF THANKS

I desire through this paper to thank all those who were so kind to me during my recent bereavement in the sickness and death of my beloved husband.

Mrs. Gooden Sparks.
July 28, 1911.

LETETE

Mrs. Sarah McMahon, Mrs. Nevin McMahon and sister, Miss Mabel Simpson and Mrs. Hubert Hoyt, were guests of Mrs. Judson Matthews, a few days last week.

Thursday morning, July 27, the community was saddened by the death of Mrs. Peter Hoyt, an aged resident at the age of seventy-six.

For some time Mrs. Hoyt has been a very great sufferer from heart trouble but she endured patiently until the end of her intense suffering. All was done for her that earthly friends could do, her wants were administered to by kind loving hands, but the time came when she was called from her earthly friends to go with those who had gone before.

Five daughters and two sons left to mourn the loss. Mrs. Rufus Seers, Mrs. A. M. Turner, Mrs. D. R. Hatch, Boston, Mrs. Randall Matthews, John Hoyt and Jar. Hoyt, Letete, and Mrs. Jas. Oliver, St. George, and three sisters and three brothers residing at Letete. The funeral services were held Saturday, (prayer was made at the house by the Baptist minister of St. George, Mr. [?Phee]), afternoon from the Baptist church at Mascarene, the hymns, Jesus Lover of My Soul and "Shall we meet beyond the river" were sung by a selected choir and after a few remarks by the pastor the body was laid to rest in the Mascarene cemetery. The pall-bearers were four grandsons of the deceased Harold McNichol, Norman Patcu, Hubert Hoyt and Bertram Hoyt. The floral offerings were very profuse. There was a wreath from Mrs. H. H. McLean and George Matthews, bouquet from Joseph Murphy, and Steven Dick, pillow, Mr. and Mrs. John Hoyt, James Hoyt and Mrs. D. R. Hatch, pillow with mother from Mrs. Randall Matthews.

CARD OF THANKS
We wish to express our sincere thanks and appreciation for the many kindnesses shown us during the long illness of our dear mother and late bereavement.

Mr. and Mrs. JOHN HOYT
JAMES HOYT
MRS. D. R. HATCH
MRS. RANDALL MATTHEWS

Edward Donnet returned Tuesday from Digby, leaving here Tuesday for St. John where he will have two engines installed in his vessel.

LORD'S COVE

The Ladies Aid Society entertained the Old Fellows and Rebecca Lodges of Eastport Me. to dinner and supper in the old church on Wednesday last.

Refreshments were served in the afternoon and a game of base ball between the Browns of Eastport and the Crescents of Lords Cove was played. The game resulted in a score of 22 to 2 in favour of the Crescents.

We notice that in last week's paper saying that the Crescents played a game of ball with the Eastport team at Leonardville. Now that was a mistake as the Crescents have only played one game on the Leonardville diamond this season and that was with the Leonardville team with the exceptions of one man, Ralph Ray, whom they had hired for the day. The game resulted in a score of 14 to 3 in favour of the Crescents.

Quite a number of friends from Lubec attended the Old Fellows here on Wednesday last.

Morton Lord, Chasney Stuart and Sarah Cook are ill with scarlet fever.

The storm of Friday night done a lot of damage along the shore.

Mark Lord has his new cottage almost completed, we expect to hear wedding bells in the near future.

Miss Flora Barker gave a party to her friends on Tuesday evening last, refreshments were served. It a very enjoyable evening was spent in games and music.

Kenneth Stuart, Edith Lambert, Sydney Lord, Perry Penlington and Edgar Butler are each building new houses.

Ray Lambert is giving his house a new coat of paint.

TABLE GIRLS AND ONE PANTRY GIRL AT Kenedy's Hotel

Good Wages Paid TELEPHONE W. F. Kenedy & Son St. Andrews, N. B.

Following is the programme on the opening concert of the new band stand by St. George Band under the leadership of Geo. McCallum: March, Review, Selection, Electric Park; Wate, March, The Bragen Coin; Serenade, Savina; Selection, Guarantee; March, Auto Club; Serenade, Twinkling Stars; March, Old Black Joe. The collecting committee for the stand were James Watt, Horace Stewart and Joseph Spear who were very much encouraged by a generous subscription from the Red Granite Amateur Club, which so often are forward in the public affairs of the town. The building Committee were Geo. McCallum, Jos. McCue and Jas. Watt, and the work was done by J. B. Spear. It is expected one of the Rink lamps will be used for lighting in the future.

It is stated that London cabdrivers pay the various railway companies 1,000 pounds a week in station charges.

LOCALS

Schooner Margaret of St. Andrews, 49 tons, Capt. L. Simmons, was in port this week and landed a deck load of Hard coal for her owner J. Sutton Clark.

What promises to be a very interesting and exciting game of ball is scheduled for Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, between the Quaddy's of Eastport and the home team.

The Stur. Connors Bros. made her regular call here on Tuesday landing her freight and left on the same tide, as she left the Viking came in remaining over night and left early Wednesday morning.

A large Auxiliary Sloop, from Leonardville, came into the basin last Sunday about one o'clock, with eight or ten people aboard; they had a beautiful trip up the bay, the day and water being perfect. After enjoying a few hours calling on friends, half of the party left about five o'clock for their homes, the rest remaining.

To-night, Camp Utopia will hold its semi-annual dance in Drageorian Hall, for which quite a number of invitations have been issued and no doubt a very pleasant evening will be enjoyed by those attending as the boys are noted as entertainers. The charerones for the evening are, Madams Danl Gilmor, J. B. Frim, C. H. McGee, T. R. Kent and G. Fralce.

A. G. Brown, who went to St. John last week, has taken up the automobile business and is now employed in one of the Garages of that city; his wife left last Saturday for the same place and they will probably remain there as permanent residents. Their many friends, while regretting their loss to the town, wish them success in their change. St. George is losing quite a number of citizens which is an ill omen.

Mr. Maloney of Red Beach, who has been working for Epps, Dods Co. for the past 2 months, left, accompanied by his wife and child, for their home in Red Beach, on Thursday, Mr. Maloney being a member of the Granite Cutter Association of U. S. would incur a heavy penalty by working here now as the workmen have decided not to join the Association, otherwise he would have remained at least for the summer. Mr. Maloney was a valued member of the Cornet Band, both he and his wife will be missed from the town.

As expected the opposition in the Federal parliament by their obstruction tactics, and long winded speeches, for nothing but to kill time, have tired out the government, which on Saturday gave notice that the house was dissolved and elections would be held on Sept. 21st, with nomination on the 14th. Thus by foolish tactics the country is forced to the expense and bother of an election two years before necessary. It will be too bad if Canada, the only country which has a fully free parliament will be forced to adopt the closure measure and thus take a step backward.

The hand boys deserve great credit for their efforts to provide a band stand which has resulted so successfully and the town now have a very pretty one, which, while not expensive, is quite an ornament at the top of the hill and occupies a fine and convenient position for the purpose. As it was built by the contributions of the citizens, it has been made general property, and a committee of 3 will have charge of it, one member from each band and one from the town council. Wednesday evening it was used for the first time the brass band giving a very pleasing selection of music which was enjoyed by a very large number. The same evening the Cornet band went up to the lake in the large motor boat of Camp Utopia and played at the different camps taking a lunch with the Geo. Meeting party returning about 11 P. M., after a very pleasant evening.

On Saturday last a large party in two motor boats (one of them a large Auxiliary Schooner) came up from Lords Cove accompanying the ball team which came to play with the local team. Owing to the heavy wind and storm of the previous day all hope had been given up of their venturing out, and it was quite a surprise when they arrived between 2 and 3 o'clock.

On this account it was after 4 o'clock before the game was called on and about 6.30 before it ended. The visiting team went to bat first and the manner in which they batted Woodcock for a few minutes made things look blue for the home team but he pulled himself together and after they had got in 2 runs put his 3 men out in short order and administered 8 goose eggs to them for the succeeding innings, while the home team piled up a score of 14, with an inning to spare, mostly got on errors, overthrows and muffed balls.

It had been expected that they would have brought some outside players, but they were composed altogether of local boys of the island, and under the circumstances done exceedingly well and in this latter Lambert and Trearten have one that is capable of good work and better support in the field are able to give an excellent account of themselves, and are excelled by very few local batters, and in their spare pitcher they have a young fellow who with practice to get control of his ball will be able to puzzle most of the batters.

The Conservatives drew first fire in the campaign here by holding their first organization meeting in Conitts Hall on Monday evening, followed closely on Tuesday evening by the Liberal meeting which was held in O'Brien's hall, when Martin McGowan was elected as chairman and Senator Gilmor was asked to address the meeting, in commencing his address he referred to the cleared members who for long years had been with them in their meetings, one especially who had looked after their wants and saw that things were in order, and who had gone to his long home. In continuing he said he felt confident of victory and it would not be a victory of the Liberal party over the Tories but a victory of the people over the monied monopolists and manufacturer who had for many years taken an anti-rail toll from the people.

On the conclusion of the Senators speech Dr. Alexander moved that the chairman appoint a committee of 5 to nominate an executive committee, and after a short consultation the Com. Jas. O'Brien, Senator Gilmor, Jack McGrattan, C. B. Bids in and Patrick McLaughlin nominated the following as an Executive Committee for the Campaign, John O'Brien, Jr., Edward McGrattan, Dr. Alexander, John Devle, Edward McGerr, Thos. Armstrong and Stewart McAdam.

Barton Blundell was appointed initiator and the meeting adjourned till Tuesday evening, the regular meeting night, the hall to be opened continually from now to election.

Bassen here—the stock is now in the hands of the Lyons Sales Co. and is selling fast, get there as soon as you can. Everything in the store marked in plain sale prices, no reserve whatever.

On account of the late hour of the ball game finishing on Saturday the large Auxiliary schooner was unable to leave until about midnight when it was very dark and quite foggy, they however reached their home safely the smaller boat left immediately after the game, having a good run home.

A large and jolly party of 10 or 12 arrived in the basin about 1 o'clock Sunday by motor boat Geta from Eastport after enjoying themselves for a few hours after about 5 for their homes.

Get to the Going out of Business Sale of D. Bassen here, you can get some great bargains at this sale, the quicker you get there, the better for yourself and family.

"What're ye comin' home with your milk pail empty for?" demanded the farmer. "Didn't the old cow give anything?"

"Yes," replied his boy, "nine quarts and one kick."—The Sacred Heart Review.

Catarrh Conquered

You know the loathsome offensiveness of a bad case of catarrh. You know that catarrh very often works its way down to the lungs, ending, perhaps, in consumption. You know that, even before it becomes severe or chronic, catarrh is most disagreeable.

Why, then, let it run on, gradually getting worse? Possibly, like hundreds of others, you have been unable to find a cure that really cures. Then you haven't tried

Father Morrissey No. 26

This remarkably effective remedy, prescribed by the famous priest-physician, combines the advantages of both external and internal treatment. It includes tablets to purify the blood and a healing, strongly antiseptic salve to be applied inside the nostrils, directly to the affected parts.

Even chronic catarrh soon yields to this combined treatment. The discharge is stopped, the diseased membrane healed, and colds no longer follow one another with monotonous regularity. Don't let that catarrh run on—get Father Morrissey's No. 26 and cure it.

mouth, an old man was arraigned before Recorder Hauenstein, in Union Hill, N. J., yesterday charged with vagrancy.

"He's Augustine J. Major," a policeman told the Recorder. "He hangs out in a Bowery lodging-house and is a professional panhandler. He's been coming over here for years begging on the streets."

"Is that true?" asked the Recorder.

"Guess it is," replied the miser. "I am seventy-three years old and have been panhandling here longer than most of you have been alive."

"Well, I'll give you just one hour to leave town, said the Court. "If you don't go I'll send you to prison."

"That being the case," answered Major with a laugh, "I'll quit Jersey as befittin' a man of my means. Will some one please 'phone for the tax returning car in this section of the State? I want that car."

Some one to carry out what was believed to be a joke, telephoned for the car.

When it arrived, Major stalked forth and told the chauffeur to open the door.

"Who is going to pay for all this?" asked the chauffeur.

"I am," spoke up Major, as he pulled from a pocket of his tattered trousers a roll of bills that made policemen and court attendants gasp.

The roll was a $100 bill. Major climbed into the automobile, doffed his cap to the policemen and said to the chauffeur: "Now drive to the West Lihore ferry. Then you can take me to my mansion on the Bowers. If this isn't enough to pay you for your trouble I'll draw you a check on my bankers."

The United States shoemakers have announced in their annual convention at Boston that women's feet are becoming larger.

The number two size of women's shoes has practically gone out of use, and very few dealers keep them on sale. This is probably due to the greater prevalence of lawn tennis, hockey, and golf as women's recreations.—Ex.
