Howland's Prospect is Good.

DESPERATE TACTICS OF THE RE-PORMERS - STIRRING UP RELIGIOUS STRIPE -MR. KILLACKEY IN SOUTH ESSEX.

Toronto, Nov. 24.—The official nom-inations for Centre Toronto took place here yesterday and O. A. Howland, Conservative, and George Bertram, Lib-eral, were formally placed in the field. The election will take place next Tuesday. Mr. Howland's resignation as M. P. P. for South Toronto, has been placed in the hands of Speaker Evanturel, and South Toronto is now vacant. Here is a splendid opportunity for Mr. Hardy to test the popularity of he will not take it. He is afraid of the result. The constituency will be allowed to remain vacant for the coming session as a tribute to Mr. Hardy's courage. With everything to gain and nothing to lose he is still afraid to test public feeling. Mr. Howland's majority in the Provincial general election was 2,067. It would be impossible to increase that majority and the Government would have every likelihood of pulling it down. But still Hardy is afraid.

BOTH SIDES CONFIDENT. In the present Dominion contest both sides are confident, but Howland is tolerably certain of winning. Center Toronto can absorb mere "boodle" than any other Toronto constituency province and by Canadians. We are and if the Liberals carry it it will only be by corrupt means. Two papers only at the expense of this province.

are supporting Mr. Bertram, the Globe and the Evening Star. The Evening Teingram, World, Mail and Evening News are all behind Howland, There have been no prominent defections from either side and as the constituency is naturally Conservative the Liberals realize the desperate fight they have before them. The Globe and Star with the object of capturing the ultra-Orange vote are introducing religious issues. They declare Mr. Howland never attacked separate schools, and after securing the vote of the P. P. A. did nothing for that organization in the house. By such appeals to the religious passions of the electors do the Grits hope to win.

MR. KILLACKEY MAY RUN.

London Free Press: In South Essex mother old time Conservative war borse, W. P. Killackey, of Windsor, whom the Laurier government dismised from the office of collector of customs, will probably be nominated. The convention will take place at Leamington on Dec 8. Other names to go before the convention are Louis Wigle ex-M. P., Capt. J. E. Johnston, of the Leamington News; J. A. Buchanan, Comber, Dr. W. J. Bryan, of Essex, and G. F. Cronk, of Learnington.

ROUGH ON HARDY'S POLICY.

She was Worth $4,000,000 - How the Estate is Di-posed of.

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 24.—It is understood that the Province of Ontario will receive about $400,000 death dues from the estate of the late Mrs. Cawthra Murray. The estate is valued at $4,000,000. Cawthra Mulock, son of Postmaster-General Mulock, is the heir. He is about 15 years of age. Among the bequests are: — Mrs. Mulock, wife of William Mulock, Postmaster-General, $50,000; Mrs. Ryerson, wife of Dr. G. S. Ryerson, $50,000; W. C. Crowther, $50,000; to be invested for the benefit of the children of James Crowther, $50,000; Mrs. William Murray, $2,000. Cawthra Mulock is to receive 10 per cent. of the income when he reaches the age of 21 years, and the whole of the income when he becomes 25 years of age. Should he die without issue before he becomes of age the estate is to be divided between Postmaster-General Mulock and his wife, Mrs. Ryerson and W. C. Crowther. Postmaster-General Mulock is appointed the sole executor and trustee.

Rt. Hon. Charles Ritchie, president of the board of trade, in an important speech before the Chamber of Commerce of Croydon, took as his themse the decline of British exports during the last ten months, upon which he, hung a grave warning against American competition, now "ousting British trade."

A deputation of cigar manufacturers and tobacco men interviewed members of the Dominion cabinet and asked that the allowance of diminution of the leaf imported, which usually loses 20 per cent, be changed. They also want a rebate of excise duty, when the artice is exported. They were not given much encouragement from the ministers.

That he Committed the Crimes for Morgan, Texas, Nov. 24.—In March last was noted the death of Joseph E. Blanther, alias Forbes, who suicided in the Meridian jail in this county on March 2. But developments of the past few days bring to light even a more startling crime, of which he is self-confessed, than was the murder of Mrs. Langfeldt, for which he was hunted. While Blanther was incarcerated in the Meridian jail, there was also a fellow prisoner named Pitts, who occupied the cell adjoining that of Blanther. In a letter to Word, Dillar & Word, attorneys, of Meridian, under date of Nov. 22, Pitts incloses a letter from Blanther, and says:

"I have been looking through some papers that I had on file in jail at Meridian, and I find the inclosed sheet which speaks for itself. The papers alluded to here worked through a hole in my pocket, hence the delay in not discovering them sooner. I well remember that Forbes or Blanther, asked me the evening he took the poison at night which coat was mine of several that were hanging in the cell he occupied. I never thought further of the question he asked until I found the letter he wrote. I send it to you for the reason you best know who to notify in Galifornia. I hope that it may be worth something to you in the way of saving Durrant of Cabifornia, who, I understand, is sentenced to death for killing Miss Lamont." Following is Blanther's letter:

MUDITING THAT DOESN'T AUDIT The inspector who investigated the books of the late treasurer of Frontenac has made a long report from which we make the following extract: "The whole system of municipal auditing is a farce. Men are selected to audit accounts who have no qualifications for the position. Selection for the office goes often by friendship or social or political favoritism. The competent man, who has no pull with the members of the council, hasn't the ghost of a show alongside the incompetent, who has the wires well laid. A man can't survey a field or pull a tooth or prescribe a dose of medicine, unless he holds a certificate of his capability to do the work. Why should any Tom, Dick, or Harry, whose knowledge of accountantship may be limited to his facility to make up a bill of goods and give the right change, be considered eligible to become the financial investigator and adviser of a municipality? Auditors must bear some hall mark of efficiency, or else

To say that the Hardy government is tottering to its fall, is to put it mildly. So unpopular is the aggregation that some of the ministers are experiencing difficulty in securing renominations from their own friends. In South Ontario, for instance, the Liberal party appears to want to get rid of Hon. John Dryden. The party organ, The Reformer, gently hints that "if the party acts wisely the riding can be held by a very substantial majority," a statement which means that if the visible supply in the United States, which is the largest in the history of trade, being more than 1,000,000 Mr. Dryden over, it will have a chance to hold the seat. In surveying the situation, the Oshawa Vindicator says: "The Reformer is not alone in holding the opinion that Mr. Dryden cannot be elected in South Ontario. He bas conducted his office to provide for his family at the public expense, and brought such discredit upon the party that only the partisan Grit who would vote for a yellow dog with the party tag will stand by him. Fortunately for the good of the country, such partisans are growing less in both political parties, and Mr. Dryden will find, even if he is able to pack the convenvention and get the nomination, that he cannot, as the Reformer intimates, control the votes of the free and independent electors. The hon, minister had better appoint himself custodian of the lone pig of the palatial piggery before his gift of patronage de-

AN INFORMAL VOTE.

To reduce the number of wards it is necessary for the council to pass a bylaw before July 15 in any one year and then secure the approval of the lieutenant-governor in council. A vote of the people is not necessary, and if taken at the coming munnipal election would have no effect. But it would test the feeling of the people. It would be an nitimatum to the council of 1898 to pass a by-law which would go into

The cost of taking that vote would amount to the price of the ballot pa-pers and nothing more. Now, is the city council going to give the electors an opportunity to express their opinion or not? The wards must go sooner

THE ENGLISHMAN'S "H."

The question is asked by "An Englishman," "Why is it that English people are such sinners in respect to the improper use of the letter 'h!' ' The writer goes on to say that the Scotch, Irish and Americans say that the Scotch, Irish and Americans are not given to this faultiness in speech. I believe philologists attribute the frequent disrespect with which the letter "whispered in heaven and muttered in hell" is treated is largely due to the influence of the French language on our own, and especially upon those of the English speaking race who live in England itself. As every one knows, the "h" is not aspirated in the French language, which was until the middle ages largely used in this sountry.

Then, for almost centuries at a time, in the days of the Plantagenets, our English soldiers, who were wandering about France, became, naturally enough, affected by its people's manner of speech and returned to their own country to infect their families and acquaintances with some influences which go to determine method of pronunciation. And at that time it was really an English—not British—army which did the bulk of the fighting. Again, from time to time various quarters of England have been used as settlements for French refugees—the Hugue.

ments for French refugees—the Hugue-nots, for example—and French prisoners. Even so late as the beginning of the pres-ent century, when we were in a chronic state of warfare with Napoleon Bonaparte, great numbers of Frenchmen settled, as prisoners on parels in Freihard—the great numbers of Frenchmen settled, as prisoners on parole, in England — the southern land midland counties especially, which, as we know, are the districts in which the aspirate is least observed.

Scotland, Ireland and Wales were not under these same influences, their greater distance from the continent being one of

But the constant "h" dropping among the working classes in England today is, the working classes in England today is, I am sure, largely due to the fact that the workingman who persists in speaking of his horse, his house and his home, instead of his 'orse, 'ouse and 'ome, is regarded by his companions as a pedant and one who "puts side on." I have often noticed that demestic sevents are quite account. domestic servants are quite accurate or nearly so in the use of the aspirate when speaking to their mistresses, etc., while, once back again in the kitchen among their fellows, there ceases to be an "h" in their composition.—London Tit-Bits.

posing Scotch Dialect Stories. One of the Scotchiest of the Scotch dialect story writers confesses in an artless interview, which he himself contributes to a periodical, that he thinks and plan slowly, "often keeping a story for months and years in his head without writing a single word." When the actual writing begins, he "works rapidly." The condi-tion of his head with the Scotch bur revolving in it "for months or years" need not here be considered. The astonishing not here be considered. The astonishing thing is what a friend of the Scotchman in question tells in addition. "Work rapidly!" he says. "I should think he does. He has two typewriting machines of unusual size and strength that he had made especially for his own use at a cost of $500 sach, and he works on these at lightning pace. But that is not all—he will carry on a general conversation with a roomful of people while he is writing out a story on the machine. Now, I have heard compositors talk while sticking type, but they on the machine. Now, I have heard com-positors talk while sticking type, but they were merely copying, whereas this author was writing out original matter. Usually be works alone, beginning at about 5 o'clock in the morning, and when he comes down to breakfast at 9 be has 500 words written out. I never saw such a man written out. I never saw such a man. He seems to be inexhaustible and is certainly indefatigable. He is 6 feet 4 inches tall, weighs 280 pounds and is as nimble as a cat." Thanks be to the gods it is only at such a prodigious rate. How terrible indeed to think of a man being forced to

A MUSICAL VICTORY.

In a respectable flat there lives Madeline McGregor and Algernon McCurry—Madeline at the first landing, Algernon at the second. Madeline, who is 20, fair haired and dreamy, had dragged out many moons in the respectable flat before Algernon had come to gladden her existence and to make life for her, not a weary, loveless waste, but a glad heyday of joy, illumined by the adoring looks of her new neighbor. When Algernon first saw the fair, sweet face and the soulful eyes of Madeline, his heart gave one wild, throb and then stood still. He, whose whole life was full; of ambition, who had heretofore existed mathematically and found most of his pleasure in having the balance sheet come right the first time, had at last surrendered to the tender passion—and at first sight. Stolid business ambition that had persistently refused to see aught of charm persistently refused to see aught of charm in duck skirted and shirt waisted femininity now dreamed solely of pink and white complexions and fluffy, sunny hair.

They met and loved.

Gladly had things progressed up to the time when a combination of circumstances came so near disappointing the fair dream of true love. It was on a Friday night toward the end of dog days. When Algernon McCurry came down to the flat on the first landing, his heart was full of joy. And Madeline, too, seemed to be in an unusually jubilant mood. How sweet then did it all seem and how little sweet then did it all seem and how little did they know of the dark days that were to follow. When they went out for a stroll along the residence streets, it seemed as if a night were never so full of love. The great, round, silvery, harvest moon flooded the earth with lovelight, the stars of the firmament, the great dome of heaven, seemed mad alone for the love of Algernon and Madeline. It was then that in the fuliness of her young life Madeline told why her heart was overflowing with

In years gone by she had lived alone for music. Reverses had come upon them, and she had been forced to give it up, to surrender what was then to her her whole life, but now fickle fortune had again smiled, and the very next week she was to have a new piano. Her lot was in very truth an enviable one. In her fresh young enthusiasm she poured out all her glad celings, and Algernon sympathized, and he, too, was glad.

bed it was to dream of sweetest music, of fair, white hands, dear hands, slender, tapering fingers, tenderly, lovingly wanering over a stretch of ivory keys. In fancy he could hear heavenly strains and a sweet young voice in tender, soulful love songs-and all for him. Ah. Algernon!

On Wednesday the people across the way saw a new piano, bright and beautiful, taken into the first floor entrance of the respectable flat.

Algernon was kept at his office that night by stress of business. From his high stool he cast up leng columns of dancing figures and his dull, tired eyes ached and grew weary. All the while a fairy vision hovered between him and the endless columns —a vision of a dear, sweet maid with golden hair, seated before a piano, from which, with the magic touch of her lily white hands, she brought dulcet strains of heavenly melody. At last the final danc-ing column is finished, the big pile of slips that seemed not to have an end is exhaus ed, and Algernon, with lagging footsteps, goes to the car and home. How welcome seems his little flat room! How pleasant seems his little flat room! How pleasant the folding bed! How eagerly does he woo sleep and the dreams of his true leve!

But what is this! What sound breaks in upon the rest that is about to come! Rudely the midnight silence is fractured, broken, severed, scattered to the four winds of heaven. There is a preliminary winkle a cilement introducer winds as the cilement of the state tinkle, a silvery, introductory ping, ping, a resonant, melodious pang, pang, and then a long, harmonious ping, ping, ping, ping, pang, pang, ending in a grand boom, boom, boom! Algernon starts up in affright.

"Can this be she? But, ab, it is over." Not yet. Again there is the tinkle and the ping ping and the pang pang and the boom, boom—boom! And then again and again, and then louder and louder—coaselessly, c. dlessly.

An hour passes, or is it a week? Restlessly Algernon McCurry tosses on his

"Oh, mother!" he cries. "Can this be true? Oh, father, forgive her! Apollo Calliope, hosts of high Olympus, what means this wild classor? Am I mad or is this but a weird, hoscible nightmare that will not be driven away?" But, hist! The din fessens. Something that was is not. The long, creeping cable beneath the car tracks has stopped. The witching hour is here. The city sleeps but not Madeline, not Algernon, not any ane in the respectable flat. Hours pass, and then—oh. joy—it ceases. "Silence. like a positive comes to heal the blows of A watchdog bays the moon. A distant suburban cock crows the waking ight and Algernon dreams. And he was a storm Great, black cloud-mount up the sky. Forked lightning, huge ongues of flame, darts hither and thithe in the blue black night. Mighty crashes of thunder test the strength of heaven's artil-Beginning at his very feet he sees a path of glistening keys, pale keys like the bue of death, and they stretch interminably into the distance, narrowing into a thin thread of white light that seems to pierce the blackness of the storm. Now come two long tapering armiess hands, whose severed wrists are foul with clotted blood, and as he looks the two hands are four, and the four are eight. Now there are a million, and as they dance upon the endless chain of keys the thunder grows in volume and the crash is soul harrowing. The white, tapering hands change to re-pulsive, horny talons, with long and fifthy nails. Now he seems himself in the midst of the storm, surrounded by the multitude.

of dancing, withered, blood beameared talons. Now they form themselves into ranks, and as they charge they become endless rows of figures. He fights desperately, with the courage born of despair, but they bear him down, down. Sewn. He is crushed suffocated. Gasping, he throws his arms wildly about, and—awakens. ens.

When Algernon went to the dingy office that morning, to the high stool and the dancing columns of figures, his head seem ed well nigh about to burst,

The day dragged endlessly, but at last was done. He felt better in the evening, and when he went to see his Madeline he was almost to the point of cheerfulness.
Yet there seemed to be a coldness that had not existed before. The frank, open, good fellowship seemed not to be so frank and fellowship seemed not to be so frank and open. When she spoke enthusiastically of harmony and of how impatiently she awaited the time when she could better know and appreciate the grand old masters, he only briefly assented. He could not enthuse. Algernon was truthful. His opinion of the grand old masters had suffered a serious relapse that might at any moment prove fatal. Sympathy, so far as he was concerned, was withered as the leaf of autumn, and he talked of the weather and away from music.

But let it be said the Algernon McCurry But let it be said the Algernon McCurry was a young man of resource. His expedients to reach a given end were great, and, though he still loved Madeline McGregor with an undiminished love, when he thought of the night past and of possible other nights yet to come his heart grew sick within him, his face took a hard, set look, and his handsome gray eyes seemed to fire with resolution. All next day from his high stool he thought, and his thoughts were those of youth—long, long thoughts. When Algernon McCurry went home that evening, he carried under his arm a mysterious looking stiff leather bag, large at one end, smaller at the other, while in his hand he grasped a short, round bundle. "Mother," he said. "ought you not stay with Mrs. Jones tonight?"

"I have been thinking of it, Algy, dear,

"I have been thinking of it, Algy, dear, but I had almost decided to stay at home and do some mending for you."
"Never mind the mending, mother. It'll worry along. Go stay with the poor

And then Algernon was alone with his thoughts, and his bag, and his short, round bundle.

The September night wore on. From the westward came the great, loud note of the curfew's warning. Lessening, fading, the last echo dies away to the east. Then out upon the air, hardly yet stilled, there creeps an indistinguishable, indefinable something. It is not natural of anything on earth, nor is it supernatural. Now it is a blast, clear and resonant, a penetrat ing, all pervading bugle note coming from space, ending in its birthplace. Now it is a moan, a low, dull monotone, telling of anguish and grief, of a hearthreaking sadness, and now fitfully dying away it becomes a slow, dragging, piereing note, like the cry of a wild beast in pain. It gathers strength, and now, in a weird minor, louder and ever louder, it tells of infinite suffering, of the rack and pinion and stake of martyrs and the wail of a soul eternally damned. Now it partakes of the melody of a rusted wire, and now of blunt steel scraping human bones. Now it is the din and crash, the cannonade, musketry, saber clashing, drum roll, charge, double quick, advance, retreat of a tho usand battlefields, and now it dies away into the feeble wail of a poor dying

Minutes grow into hours and hours into the lapse of ages. Again the long, creeping cable stops. Again the watchdog bays the moon. Again the distant, suburban cock crows the waking light. At last all is still. Algernon McCurry has finished his first music lesson.

On Friday night when dark haired Algernon calls on fair haired Madeline he ars something that makes his heart to beat faster in his bosom. Madeline has decided that after all she does not care to go in so much for music, and the new plano has been sent back to the installment house. She intends to buy a bicycle. And now when Algernon McCurry and Madeline McGregor coast down the asphalt streets they talk of bikes and bearings, of narrow treads and ram's born handle bars, while melody and the old masters are far, far off. Algernon is no longer limited to three nights in the week, for Madeline and Madeline's mamma have heard an old, old story.

Among Algernon McCurry's treasures there is a pale green ticket. Far down on North Main street, almost to ancient Battle row, there is a dingy window, over which hang three golden spheres. In the window is a silver bell cornet labeled "For ale."-Kansas City Times.

The Education of Marie Autoin Miss Anna L. Bicknell contributes to The Century an article on "Marie Antoi-nette as Dauphine," which contains much new matter drawn from the state paper at Vienna. Miss Bicknell says:

Marie Antoinette Josephe Jeanne of Hapsburg-Lorraine, archduchess of Austria and future queen of France, was bern on Nov. 2 (feast of All Souls), 1755—the day after the terrible catastrophe at Lis-bon, when that city was nearly destroyed by an earthquake. Maria Theresa's daugh-ter was taught the correct pronunciation of French by two actors of the Theatre Français, while the French Abbe de Vermond was appointed to direct her educa-tion, which, however, was unhappily very incomplete. The writers who glorify th maternal care and vigilance of Maria Theresa are contradicted by the most trust-worthy witnesses, the truth seeming to be that the great empress, engrossed by her political cares, left her children far too impletely to the discretion of governesses and subordinates, who were neither very capable nor perhaps very conscientious Drawings were shown to the empress as the work of Marie Antoinette which the latter afterward declared she had never touched, and this "make believe" system seems to have been carried on throughout The Abbe the Vermond directed only her French studies, but aithough a good and well meaning man, the results which he obtained were far from creditable to his efforts. He does not seem to have had the art either of interesting her in any seriou pursuit or of acquiring proper control over her mind and character. Her handwriting even, as proved by autographs, was utterly unformed and childish at the time of life actival at the court of France, and her spelling was defective. A Curious Superstiti Among the superstitions of the Sensea Indians was this most beautiful one: When a young maiden died, they impris-oned a young bird until it first began to try its powers of song, and then, loading it with caresses and messages, they loosed its bonds over her grave, in the belief that it would not fold its wing nor close its eye until it had flown to the spirit land and delivered its precious burden of affection to the leved and lost one .- St. Nicholas glowing cheeks, and sparkling eyes—we all covet genuine youth. The weakness or discase which ages people before their time, is not the result of accumulated years; it is the effect of wrong living and unhealthy blood. When the blood is pure and fresh the body will be full of youth.

Thousands of people who seemed to have lost their youth by disease and suffering have found it again through the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the most perfectly natural and scientific rejuvenator of the physical forces ever known to medical science.

It gives the blood-making organs power to make new blood, full of the life-giving red corpuscles which drive out disease, build up fresh tissue, solid muscular flesh and healthy nerve force. It gives constitutional power, deep and full and strong; rounds out hollow cheeks and emaciated forms; gives plumpness, color and animation.

It does not make flabby fat like cod liver oil. On this account, it is a perfect tonic for corpulent people.

It aids digestion and the natural action of the liver, and by feeding the nerves with highly vitalized blood barishes nervousness, neuralgia and insomnia.

Where a constipated condition exists, the "Discovery" should be used in conjunction with Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, which are the most perfect, mild and natural laxative in the world. There is nothing else "just as good." There is nothing that will do the work so thoroughly, surely and comfortably.

STRATFORD'S FIRE

City Hall, Free Library and Sev. Open Until 11 o'clock To-night eral Stores Burned.

Loss Very Heavy-Firemen Were Handicapped for Lack of Water.

Stratford, Ont., Nov. 24.-This city was visited early this morning by the most disastrous fire it has had in many years, involving the total loss of the city hall building, containing all the nunicipal offices, opera house, public library and stores, of three tenants, John McCauley and Ben Johnson, butchers, and W. R. Marshall, seeds. About 1a, m., the fire was discovered in the west end of the building by one of the night policemen. The firemen responded promptly, and twenty minutes later supposed they had the fire under control. A melted gas fixture, however, permitted the gas to escape and feed the flames until a great part of the interior of the building was ablaze. Even at this stage the brigade had hope of conquering until the water pressure weakened. By the time the steamer was brought Hy the time the steamer was brought on the scene, the building was doomed. The firemen continued their plucky fight under adverse circumstances, and fortunately none of the surrounding business structures were affected beyond a few windows cracked by the heat. The city hall building cost $40,000 forty years ago exactly. It was insured for only $6,000. The public lihrary of 5,000 volumns, worth $4,000, had only $2,000 insurance, and the number of books rescued was trifling, as was the amount of salvage generally. The tenants' losses are not excessive, Mr. Marshall's, at least, being covered by insurance.

Warren Conlan in the Role of Other

Warren Conlan scored a triumph at the Grand last night by his masterly representation of Othello. A man of magnificent physique and deep voice, he is eminently fitted for the difficult part so perfectly performed last evening and wave after wave of varying passion completely changes this man whose very identity seems for the time lost in his "Othello." The bedchamber siene in the last act was as strong a bit of impassioned acting as was ever put on at the Grand. More than in any other Shakespearian play strong talent is requisite in the support; and the entire company gave an excellent account of their stewardship; the piotting lago being particularly fine. In the scene where lago appears with Othello and Desdemona, the victims of his scheming, their full powers are called into play. The parts exact the acme of shinty and this trio rise to the occasion. The play throughout was a delight, and a further revelation of the beauties of Shakespeare. This afternoon The Merchant of Venice, staged on Monday evening, was repeated as a matinee and was greeted with round upon round of enthusiastic applause. This evening Warren Conlan, talented atudent and exponent of Skakespeare, and his strong support will present, by request, Damon and the Grand last night by his masterly Skakespeare, and his strong support will precent, by request, Damon and Pythias. The slim houses that have so greeted them must be looked upon as evidence of the questionable wisdom of a four play stand here even by the most deserving companies but Damon and Pythias this evening should be reeted by a bumper house.

Always cure Bladder Troubles.

Quackery is always discovering remedies which will act upon the germs of disease directly and kill them. But no discovery has ever yet been approved by doctors which will cure consumption that way. Germs can only be killed by making the body strong enough to overcome them, and the early use of such a remedy as Scott's Emulsion is one of the helps. In the daily warfare man keeps up, he wins best, who is provided with the needed strength, such as Scott's Emulsion supplies.

Mr. Brice Says he can do it Quite Easily.

Capitalists have Built an Expensive Plant for him in Chicago.

A few weeks ago The Planet publishd an interview with an American named Brice, regarding the manufacture of gold. At that time Mr. Brice was in Canada trying to secure a sup-ply of antimony, lead and tin, which he claimed he could turn into gold by about a condition favorable to the desired transmutation.

Mr. Brice, avowedly not a chemist, excepting by practice, says he had caused the formation of gold. Dr. Emmens, of New York, a man of established scientific reputation, claims to be making gold from silver, and sells a product to the mint that is accepted as such and paid for.

The Chicago man claims that Dr.

The Chicago man claims that Dr. Emmens knowledge came from an unfaithful employee, who divulged something of the secret. But the New Yorker says—in effect, if not in so many words—that he compresses silver by a mighty force engine invented by himself, institutes a molecular change, the re-arrangement of the ultimate parts of the matter treated resulting in something that answers to sulting in something that unswers to the tests for the yellow instead of the

Here is a divergence, for Emmens treats silver as an element, exposing it to force alone, making it a problem of physics, while Brice's method is of the essence of chemistry. on Those They Vouch For. The theory of the big security com-panies who derive their profits from guar inteeing the honesty of young men who hold responsible positions in the mercan tile world, that an ounce of prevention i worth a pound of cure, does not only ap ply to those who have a penchant for bet ang their own and frequently their em ployers' cash on the races, but is a prover that works all the year round. While the frequent prosecution of defaulters is a powerful aid in assisting others to resist temptation, yet the security companies are not satisfied with resting there. They find it cheaper to pay detectives to be continually on the watch than to lock the door, as it were, after the horse has gone. The sleuths are St. Louis men of long residence who know by sight the majority of their employers' clients, and the watch they keep over them is far strict-er than the watched imagine. For instance, during the theatrical season, two men are detailed to spend their evenings in frequenting the all night restaurants that are favored by ambitious young men who want to live 24 hours of the 24. Particularly do they direct their attention to youths who have a penchant for things theatrical. The spies—for spies they are—do not look like the ideal thief catch-In fact, they would rather be taken for men about town who are out for a night's fruit and "hang the expense." One of the most active of the corps of detectives is to be found most frequently in one of the big all night resorts that is almost entirely given over to the feminine contingent of stageland after the midnight hour. With their local acquaintar they sip their champagne until the early hours, and their escorts are in the major-ity of cases young fellows who hold sal-aried positions of responsibility. Little Mr. Sleuth, sitting querty over in one corner, is apparently paying all his atten-tion to his ale and rabbit, but in reality he is making mental notes of how many bot-tles of wine his prey is opening and the general drift of the conversation, if he touches upon his business life. The next morning the security company which has vouched for the young man's honesty is in full possession of the facts.

so afraid of as religious enthusiasm. I do not quite understand it. If there is an election pending, all those who have any interest in the election set to work to cre ate enthusiasm. They write articles in the newspapers, make speeches on the platform, organize military and semimilitary companies, plan barbecues, scatter tracts. Their aim is to make one half the people believe that if the other half of the people carry the election the United States will go to pieces. They want to create an enhope, and for the three or four days before the election if you read the papers on either side you are sure the other side has no cliance, for the aim in politics is to create political enthusiam. It is so in business For my own part, in my business rela-tions I would a great deal rather have a man who is enthusiastic and not sound b indement than a man who is sound in judgment and has not any enthusiasm. And I will tell you why. If he has en-husiasm, I can educate his judgment, but if he has only judgment I have never yet found a way of kindling his enthusiasm. We want enthusiasm in politics. We want enthusiasm in business, but we are afraid of it in religion.-Lyman Abbott in Out-

Atmospheric Warmth. The sun does not impart heat to the atosphere directly. If it did, it would be ariy as warm on the top of a high mountain as it is at the sea level. Its rays warm the earth, and the earth radiates, or throws off, the heat thus received into the surrounding air. The density of the air Bear the earth's surface prevents the heat from escaping into space. The rarity of the air at high altitudes permits it to escape. That is why mountain peaks are clothed in perpetual ice and snow, while the temperature at the foot of the moun-tain may be quite warm. The atmosphere, others, he encountered Martin of Galway, the Rev. Richard Bate and Captain Har-vey Ashton, afterward killed at Madras in by thus holding the heat radiated from the earth, is kept about warmer than outer space.—Philadelphia

A moment later I heard the captain and the pilot on the bridge over my stateroom engaged in a very lively colloquy.

"I tell you it's right there, said one of them excitedly. 'It must be or we'll be on the rocks in a minute!"

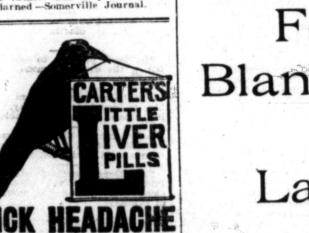

"That was enough for me. I tumbled out of my berth and, half dressed, rushed out on deck just as the whistle gave another unearthy screech. It seemed to be answered immediately by another whistle near by, and I imagined we were meeting a steamer.

"After waiting ten minutes or more, hoping to be able to catch a glimpse of the strange craft, I accosted the captain and asked him where the other steamer was. My question nearly gave him an epileptic fit. We had run into a dense fog and our pilot was guiding us in that crooked channel and among those treacherous rocks by the echoes sent back from the mountains which here and there rise precipitously which here and there rise precipitously from the water's edge."—Chicago Times

THRICE DROWNED.

A MAN WHO MADE THAT RECORD TELLS HIS EXPERIENCES.

Some Old Notions Exploded-Events of His Life Didn't Pass Before Him Scarcely Thought of Death-Just Struggled to

"I've been drowned three times (which "I've been drowned three times (which means that I will die only by hanging, according to waterman lore)," says an experienced bather, "and in each case the sensations have been different. They agreed in only one characteristic—I can lay my hand on my heart and swear that they never were funny.

"The first time I was drowned was when I was small. Perhaps that is why the events of my life didn't pass before me in rapid review as I sank. At any rate, I simply rolled into the Hackensack river in simply rolled into the Hackensack river in front of my father, who was fishing, went to the bottom like a stone, was found after much diving, brought to land an apparent corpse and revived only after hours of hard work. All I knew of it was striking the water, swallowing a young Niagara and then waking up in bed; also a good licking, which followed. Not even did I have the terrible pains of coming back to life which some writers have portrayed so vividly that really no self respecting person hould get revived without them.

"The second time was in the Harlem. I had some reputation among my fellows as a diver, and one tay I swam to a fence as a diver, and one day I swam to a trace that ran far into the river to divide two estates and dived under it. There was just space enough between the fence and the bottom to wriggle through. I wriggled and my bathing hose caught in a nail. In twisting to free myself the string around my waist got snarled hopelessly around my waist got snarled hopelessly around the nail and I hung there. Not until the breath began to leave me and to bubble out of my nose did I feel alarmed. Then I stretched and fought to get my nose above water, but couldn't get my face more than best to feet from the surface. sbout a foot from the surface

"I could see the sun shining through The green water and the synbeams rippling on the fence where it was submerged, but I couldn't get to the air that was so near. Finally my chest seemed to collapse and my remaining breath left me with what seemed the roar of a tugboat blowing off

When I came to, I was on the shore with people kneading mc. The nail had broken and I had floated into view, face down. I gagged a little, swallowed whisky, womited it and was all right, sound as a trivet, with the exception of a deep cut along my back where the nail had dug in-to me. I hadn't felt a bit of pain from this, nor did I feel any pain on recovering consciousness. Frequently have I felt worse after being doused by a big roller and swallowing too much of it. Sensa-tions? If I had any, I can't remember them. Positively all I am conscious them. Positively all I am conscious of is that just before I lost my senses I thought

rith much vigor, 'D—n that nail.'
"The third time I drowned more delib rately, and perhaps having become accuserately, and perhaps having become accus-terned to the operation was more in the proper mood to take notes. We had brought a sloop into Jamaica bay through Rocksway inlet before a whole gale and had anchored off a shanty on one of the big channels. The sloop swung so that all aboard were able to step ashore from her stern. L, with hip rubber boots, climbed out to the bowsprit to adjust the remaining goar. A big wave rolled the craft. running gear. A big wave rolled the craft, the bobstay on which I was standing broke, and down I went. Instantly my boots filled and anchored me to the bottom as firmly as if I had two pails filled with water tied to my feet. "I hadn't lost my head, and even before I souched bottom had realized that I must get the boots off. But the task proved impossible. I was hardly able to fight to reach them, and when I lifted one leg the swift current whirled me around like a top. Quicker than it takes to tell I had tried and abandoned the attempt. I stood up straight and looked toward the surface Fifteen feet above me in the bright green, thin water I could see the sharp black keel of the sloop, but I couldn't move. "Suddenly a shadowy, twisting some-thing came between me and the dim light that came from the surface. I thought it was an eel, but it came again and again with a regularity in its movement that penvinced me it was a rope dangling from somewhere and swirling in the current. I tried to grasp it, but couldn't reach it. Every time it came it evaded me. I was far gone then; my breath was leaving me sobbingly and every heart beat made a dreadful crashing in my head, with mad-dening pain in the ears. The last I redening pain in the cars. The hast re-finember is that I was crying, not because I was going to die, but pettishly because I couldn't grasp the rope. Somehow I seized it just as I lost consciousness and was pulled up by the captain, who had seen me go down, but had been unable to do anything because he couldn't swim. He had thrown the rope over as I sank. I came up just far enough to be seen; then came up just far enough to be seen; then I went down again, but the captain managed to catch me with the boathook. He had to get help before he could lift the waterlogged boots and me, and it took an hour or more this time to bring life back. As a matter of fact, all who worked over me did so merely in desperation, feeling sure that it was useless.

"When I came to, the whole world, heaven, ocean and hand, whirled and recied madly around me, the sky in particular darting to and fro like a crasy thing. I got inexpressibly siek—so sick that I wanted to get back to insensibility. This stage, ed to get back to insensibility. This stage, I conjecture, must have been the time when those who were working over me saw the first flutter of life. Then darkness and light came in great flashes, each flash like a blow on my sychalis. Then I opened my cycla this saw the sun, and, thank heaven, it was steady in the sky and the sea was where it belonged. After that I simply was very seasick. Then I was all right."—New York Pross.

HER INTERESTING STORY. own Brighton lady tells what he regarding Seart Trouble, and how to ours it.

Mrs. Stephen P. Clapp tells what Mil-burn's Heart and Nerve Pills did for her. Mrs. Clapp says, "I have been a sufferer from extreme nervousness for years, and for the last two years my heart has troubled me greatly I could not sleep soundly, and would often awaken with a start, together with a curious feeling as if my heart had stopped beating, and it would be some time before I could recover myself. At times I became very dizzy, and a mist gathered before my eyes. I have taken many kinds of patent medicines, but could get nothing to relieve me. Finally I received a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and am glad to say that they gave me relief in a very short time. I now sleep well, my nerves are steady and strong, and I am better in every way than I have been for years.

I can recommend Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills very highly to those suffering from any trouble affecting the heart and nerves, for I know that they have been a great boon to me."

Healthy, happy children make better men and women of us all. A little care and a little planning before birth is often more important than anything that can be done after. On the mother's health and strength depend the life and the future of the children. A er's health and strength depend the life and the future of the children. A weak and sickly woman cannot bear strong and healthy children. Most of the weakness of women is utterly inexcusable. Proper care and proper medicine will cure almost any disorder of the feminine organism. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has been tested in thirty years' practice. It is healing, soothing, strengthening. It is perfectly natural in its operation and effect. By its use, thousands of weak women have been made strong and healthy—have been made strong and healthy—have been made the mothers of strong and healthy children. Taken during gestation ,it makes childbirth easy and almost painless and insures the well-being of both mother and child. Kelleher Begged Piteously for a Cigarette and Became Violent when 'Twas Refused Hurled a Stone and it Struck a Child.

New York World. Still in his teens, with his face work-

Still in his teens, with his face working painfully, asking all callers for "just one cigarette," Thomas Keleher was a prisoner in Jersey City police headquarters.

It was this craving for cigarettes that brought Keleher to the care of the police. He had not smoked for an hour or more when he entered the store of Mrs. Dora Lefferman, at No. 130 Morris street, Jersey City. Mrs. Lefferman, from experience, was cautious when he entered. He had, she said, neglected to pay her for former packages of cigarettes.

Keleher demanded cigarettes, when asked what he wanted. Mrs. Lefferman in reoly asked him if he had money. He did not answer and she refused to give him the cigarettes.

The young fellow was highly enraged. On the shelf behind Mrs. Lefferman, were boxes of cigarettes. He upbraided her for her refusal to trust him.

Then he rushed out of the little store and soon returned with a club Mr. Lefferman and his little son, Henry, Lefferman and his little son, Henry, cams out of the back room on hearing the noise. Mr. Lefferman rushed to protect his wife, and Keleher ran out of the store. He soon returned, however, with a large stone, and, upon being again refused cigarettes, he hurled it with all his might at the man.

Mr. Lefferman dodged and the stone struck little Henry. The child fell to the floor in convulsions.

Keleher tried to escape and ran into the arms of Patrolman Oxley, who took him to the police station. In the first criminal court yesterday Keleher was held to await the result of the injuries he inflicted upon the little fellow.

Keleher is a picture of a young man whose nerves are shattered. His neighbors say he was formerly a rosy-cheeked, healthy lad. Nobody would think so now. The neighbors say he sleeps in trucks and gets his meals wherever he can, but cigarettes he must have. Keleher told his story to a World reporter in a halting way, laying much stress on the fact that he had recently worked a whole week. He had no excuse to offer for the assault on the little Lefferman boy. He had no recollection of it, and thought he must have been interiested at the time. He did not think the 40 or more cigarettes he smoked daily had anything to do with the case. His hands trembled and his mouth twitched as he talked, and he twirled his hat in a nervous manner. Keleher was led away by the police man to the cells downstairs. He did not ask about the condition of his little victim. a little bed back of the store kept by Mrs. Lefferman, her 9-year-old son lay in pain. The doctors fear that he is injured internally.

THE BURRO AS AN ACTOR.

How He Fooled a Tenderfoot In Ascent of Pike's Penk.

While making the scent of Pike's peak, before the completion of the cogwheel railroad, a traveler had an amusing experience—amusing after it was over.

Speaking of that experience, the mountaineer said: "I hired a burre at the Half Way house, stating that I would not return until next day, as I was ambitious to sleep, if just one night, on the highest inhabited spot in the United States—the summit of Pike's peak. The liveryman assured me that the burre was all right. 'All you're to do is to hold on, and he'll earry you through, he said.

pseured me that the burro was all right. 'All you've to do is to hold on, and he'll carry you through, he said.

'In about half a mile the burro stopped short, puffed out his sides as if he was very tired, and looked around at me with such a sornowful expression that I thought he was surely broken down and sick near unto death. I dismounted and led him about half a mile, sympathizing for him and reserving my opinion of the liveryman who would with malice aforethought kirs to a tourist a broken down burro. Finally I remounted, and had not proceeded a quarter of a mile when the burro again stopped, began blowing like a bellows, and looked around at me with his sleepy, blinking eyes, mutely asking me if I was not ashamed to impose upon a sick mule. I was, and dismounted. Coming to an almost level part of the road I remounted, and in less than 1,100 yards he stopped and gave toe amother mule speed. I shen thought that the burro was really about to yield up the ghost and was fearful that he would not last until the summit was reached. I walked along up the remaining two miles of very steep grade, the burro trudging along after me with apparent difficulty. On arriving at the summit I gave the reins to the liveryman, relating the circumstance, and after expressing my opinion of the keeper who rented to me the sick mule suggested that the burro be not fed for at least a few hours.

'The liveryman's face wore a broad grin, and he gave me a look which seemed to express sympathy for my overkindness or greenness. He gave the burro a thump in the side, saying: That's one of his old tricks. This burro ain't no more sick than you are—not as much.

'The burro kicked up his heels and you are—not as much."

"The burro kicked up his heels and scampered away as if enjoying his bunks zone."—Los Angeles Times. Minard's Liniment is the Best.

The Interior is Grand in its Simplicity

Nearly forty years ago the Ursuline The little town was still a youngster and not large for its age; and the flight of years, carrying us ever onward to our present prosperous city-hood, has seen this religious and educational institution steadily grow in fame and importance until now it is known, and its name held high in honor, in the length and breadth of two continents; and households thousands of miles apart are here represented by the young ladies being educated within its walls. Nor does that education begin and end with the common curriculum of schools; but rather does it direct and mildly govern the fair scholars' every act, and so moulds both mind and manner that the habits here formed cannot but exercise a benign and ennobling influence over all the years yet before them.

Forty years of cesseless energy and unflagging zeal upon the part of the devoted ladies at its head—the noble Sisterhood of St. Ursula—have brought "The Pines" to the proud and enviable position it now occupies. To glance back upon the record of these, years of work well done, of best efforts crowned with the laurels of success, must be indeed, a pleasing retrospect. And yet, even into a cloister pleasure and pain, the true sunshine and shadow of life, must come. And here, as elsewhere. Death pays his uncertain visits; but when weary hands are folded for the last, long dreamless sleep, the tasks so left are taken up by others who meekly bow before high heaven's decree and permit no change in personel to interfere with the work, nor with the manner of its doing.

A Planet reporter, a caller at The Pines, was very kindly taken in hand by the Mother Superior and shown through the academy, starting with the thoroughly equipped laboratory and its neightpr across the corridor, the "Blue Room."

One of the things that first impresses the visitor is that the ceilings are very high, the rooms spacious and admirably appointed. Before he leaves he is forced to wonder at the number of these rooms and marvels more to hear the Mother say, "We find it searcely large enough." Nowhere is to be seen a sign of luxury, but ally enjoy such delightful treats at the commencement exercises.

And the chapel! Costlier and more pretentious houses of prayer can be found on every hand; but the very atmosphere of this quiet spot, rigidly simple in its beauty, seems to breathe its purpose, and that purpose, worship. On either side of the altaris a beautiful oil painting; but, beyond this, the walls are broken only by ten engravings in modest frames—the stations of the cross.

ing standing until motioned to resume their labors, was a sight to be remem-bered and one seldom seen beyond the convent walls. Then on, to where musicians in varying degrees of perfec-tion sought mastery of the piano. And it must be added that if their efforts it must be added that if their errors are as successful as those of numerous graduates of "The Pines" their time could not be better spent, and they will some day bless the hours of practice in the Alma Mater.

Dormitories, with their long rows of distribute curtained beds, were passed.

Dormitories, with their long rows of daintily curtained beds, were passed through; and here, in common with the entire vast establishment, everything was in most perfect order. And experience teaches that here, if anywhere, disorder makes its presence felt.

Thence the courteous cicerone led the way to the studio, and it seemed that of the pleasures of this visit the dearest delight had been reserved to the last. Mesdames Heath and Fisher and Misses Crow and Stringer were here discovered at work, three of the ladies engaged in painting on china; Turning trom these fadies and their work the writer found himself surrounded upon every hand by paintings of much more than agerage merit, the work of those still at the academy and of many who are gone. And there are of many who are gone. And there are cuphoards laden with most delicately decorated china, proving to what a pitch of perfection this branch of art has been brought at "The Pines." Through the kindness of the artist in Through the kindness of the artist in charge the scribe was permitted to follow the fragile ware from its entrance, plain and white, until, beautified with a tracery of harmoniously blending colors inlaid with gold, it it ready to leave the studio—a bit of hand-painted china. Those who lightly value hand-painted china should, at their earliest opportunity, visit some such studio as that of the Ursuline Academy. Such a visit would show them something of the painstaking labor necessary to its evolution, and would at the same time convince them that work done here can nowhere be surpassed.

Regretfully leaving this room where in is so much to admire, the reporter followed his guide, through more high-continged rooms, more stairs, more corridors, and ended where he had seguing a visit that will linger long in pleasant memory.

TO WHOM IT MAY CUNCERN

I am fifty years or age and have been troubled with the spinal complaint more or less since the war. I had to resort to opiates to stop pain and in that way I formed the habit of taking morphine. I had taken it for eleven years when I entered the Monroe Improved Gold Cure at Windsor. I was taking twenty grains of morphine and thirty grains of quinine per day. Had slept in a chair for five years. I can say I am free from opiates and do not even have any desire for anything of the kind. I advise all who are adicted to the use of the drug not to hesitate about going to the Cure and improve the first opportunity afforded to receive treatment at this Institution. All those concerned with the Institution are gentlemen in every respect, and it seems more like home than it does like a Sanitarium. Am ready to answer letters on the subject.

Toronto, Nov. 22.—A well known retired real estate broker, J. McPherson, 440 King Street West, this city, makes known another victory for. Dodd's Kidney Pills, having received a new lease of life by their use. He states that he suffered greatly from the effects of a sluggish liver, and its long train of attendant miseries. For months he doctored, using one so-called remedy after another, but getting no relief. At length he turned to Dodd's Kidney Pills. One box cured him. That is the story—the invariable story where these health-giving pills are used. They never fail. They are the one unfailing conqueror of kidney and liver disease.

Dear Sirs.—A few days ago I was taken with a severe pain and contraction of the cords of my leg, and had to be taken home in a rig. I could not sleep for the pain, and was disable to put my foot to the floor. A friend told me of your MINARD'S LINIMENT, and one hour from the first application I was able to walk, and the pain entirely disappeared.

You can use my name as I reely as you like, as I consider it the best remedy I have ever used.

A CITY BATTALION

Sir,—It has often occurred to me that this city should have a city battalion, and, as a late member of the old 24th, I will endeavor to make a few sugges-tions should a corps be formed here. tions should a corps be formed here. Get men of good and respectable appearance, and have the standard of height strictly adhered to. There are plenty of young men and good ones, too, who would join the ranks. Have a uniform style of dress for men on parade, not as in some battalions we have seen, one man appearing with a helmet and another with a Turkish cap, minus the tail, nothing looks, to my mind, more hideous. We have in Col. J. B. Rankin one of the best drilled men in this district, who would make an excellent commanding offied men in this district, who would make an excellent commanding offi-cer, as he is well liked personally. Then we have Dr. T. K. Holmes, as sur-geon to the old 24th; also Quarter-master T. H. Nelson, Paymaster H. G. Reed, Major Coogan, Capts. S. M. Smith, G. K. Atkinson, and Lieuts. Ryall, Bell and McKeand. In fact, we have are could have a full complement Ryall, Bell and McKeand. In fact, we have or could have a full complement of officers right here in the city. If the drill could be arranged to be done in the evenings it would be an incentive to good men to join. As it is, many will not go to camp, because they cannot neglect their business. Then one of the city's bands could be enlisted in the same way. There are many

The oyster will be service in the own way. There are many crack shots in this city and vicinity works in this city and vicinity works in this city and vicinity works have savely in Canada sompany of sharp-shooters. Several of Tilbury's crack rifle sliots who went to Teronto and Ottawa, and came out so well, I am assured would also come in with us. Target practice could be one of the features, together with the manual and skirmishing exercises, etc. Mr. Ramkin, no doubt, has a good deal of influence with the powers that he at Ottawa, and if backed by the proposed officers and men the formation of a crack regiment would be the result. Every city in Canada has a corps of some kind. Surely the Maple City is not going to be behind in this respect. We have the men, an excellent drill hall, a fine parade ground, and can make an excellent choice of officers for the new battalion. Some years ago Kent had one of the best drilled corps in the district, especially two companies, Nos. 2 and 4, captained by Capts. G. K. Atkinson and Coogan, respectively, who were highly complirespectively, who were highly compli-mented by Col. Aylmer, senior officer of the district. Why not have a good battalion now? A new rifle-range and new arms and accourrements, etc., could easily be secured by efforts on the part of our member, Mr. Campbell, backed by Mr. Rankin and others in this city
