THE CATALOGUE

In presenting this Catalogue of the first Black and White Exhibition given by the Association, the Committee regret that the time allowed for its preparation has not been sufficient for more than a mere List of the Works exhibited; and this must also be their excuse for any errors in arrangement, or in the Catalogue. It has been thought desirable to enter the Engravings and Etchings under the names of the artists who translated the painters' effects of colour into Black and White, rather than under the names of the artists who created the original designs.

The readiness with which possessors of Works of Art have contributed from their collections at the first request of the Committee will encourage the Association in undertaking a like exhibition in the future. The Committee have been surprised at the number of excellent specimens of both Engravings and Drawings yet remaining in the hands of collectors, and which have never been seen by the public; and they feel sure that any future exhibition can be made quite as attractive as they hope the present one may prove to be.

Found in the same binding on which the St. Christopher was pasted, and supposed to be of the same date. A reduced copy.

4. Fac-similes of Two Pages from a Block Book.

The initial letters at the foot are possibly those intended for the spaces left above.

5. The Nuremberg Chronicle.

The Nürnberg (or Nuremberg) Chronicle was published in that city in 1493. One of the artists, Wolgemut, was the master of Albert Durer. "The peculiarity of the cuts.....is that they generally contain more of what engravers term 'color' than any which had previously appeared."—Jackson, 212.

6. Imago Mortis.

From the Nuremberg Chronicle. The print was originally uncoloured.

7. Sebastian Munster's Cosmography.

The plates of the edition of 1559. The maps are engraved on wood, and the names of places are printed from metal type inserted in holes pierced in the block.—(See Jackson, pp. 413 et seq.)

8. A Monk Preaching, 1474. (?) Fac-simile.

This and the two following specimens are examples of la manière criblée. A very pure example, being composed entirely of holes punched out of the wood or metal,

9. Christ's Agony in the Garden. Fac-simile.

10. De Imitatione Christi, 1507.

The printers mark of Jehan Petit. The background is in la manière criblée, and the figures are white on a black surface.

11. Thomas Bewick, 1853-1828.

- (a) A View of the Cape of Good Hope.
- (b) History of British Birds.
- (c) History of Quadrupeds.

The most striking features in the specimens shewn are the absence of cross hatching, and the use of the white lines.

ENGRAVING ON METAL.

12. Orlando Furioso, London, 1591.

These plates are engraved on brass, and in the preface the translator (Harrington) says that it is the second book with such plates engraved in England.

13. Niello Work.

Facsimile of a Pax in Niello by Maso Finiguerra. The Virgin surrounded by Angels and Saints. This is probably the one mentioned by Dr. Willshire as having sold for 300 gs.

14. Engraver's Tracing.

Portrait of "General Thomas Dalyell," signed D. Patton, delin : P. Vandrebanc, sculp.

15. King Lear in the Storm.

By Sharp. After Benjamin West.

- (a) Trial proof, shewing the first work of the engraver.
- (b) The finished plate.

16. Head of Christ.

Reduced copy, engraved in a single line by Claude Mellan. The line begins at the tip of the nose.

17. The Dying Gladiator.

Engraved by Andrea Rossi, in parallel lines drawn diagonally from left to right.

18. Etching by J. C. Gaal.

Shewing the effect of a second biting.

19. Mr. Jefferson as Bob Acres (Copy).

A pen and ink drawing in the style of an etching : a comparison with the following will shew the difference.

20. View at Haarlem.

Etching by Lalanne.

21. Mezzo-tint.

Sir Joshua Reynolds, by S. W. Reynolds. A perfect example of this manner of engraving.
