SINGLE WICKET.

It is strange that single wicket metches are entirely unknown in Canada. One would think that in places where it is so difficult to get eleven men together for a game against a neighbouring town that single wicket matches would be resorted to in order to give the five or six, who in nearly every town are always ready for a game, a chance of having as much cricket as they want. English papers we see constant inquiries regarding the laws of single wicket; and this fact, taken with other indications, shows that the game is widely popular in the mother country. We ourselves consider the playing of single wicket matches of the greatest benefit to participants in them. When only two or three are on a side a man is obliged to rely more on his own personal exertions, and to trust less to collective action. His play will therefore be more careful, and anything which necessitates careful play is a boon to cricket.

Single wicket matches might be substituted for the ordinary practice at the net, which at the best is wearisome on one or two afternoons in the week. We are sure that a great deal of interest would be excited in them, and that they would be greatly enjoyed by the players. We shall be happy to publish the scores of any single wicket matches which may be played.

EDITORIAL NOTE.

We owe our subscribers an apology for the lateness of the present number.

Australians a match on their return from England. Such a match might possibly be arranged, and it would give Canadians a chance of seeing the famous 3rd Australian team.

Just in the very heyday of that pastime of which he was so fond, has Cuthbert William Shanly been removed from amongst us. Long as was our warning that he might be severed from us, yet longer still and stronger was our hope that it might be otherwise, and that once again, good fellow that he was, he might be with us as in days gone by, when, with his manly bearing and true, good qualities, he won from us our affections. But when, poor fellow, he had at last to go, the shock that burst the ties of those affections was ruder, as we loved him well.

It is more than likely that the initiative steps will be taken towards securing a professional for Trinity School, Port Hope. Among the past and present boys of that institution the idea is prevalent that it would be an excellent thing to have such a man. But this is mere theory, and the question must be brought before the authorities, and pressure brought to bear upon them from every legitimate quarter. At Upper Canada College the Government would have to be button-holed Better let the oracle be worked here by force of example. But let the boys of Trinity College School circulate a petition, get it well signed, and present it for acceptance to the heads. Follow up this by recommendations from old boys of good standing, and you will have a decision one way or other before next spring.

CRICKET, AND HOW TO EXCEL IN IT.

VII.—The side going in generally sees that the ground is swept and rolled. The rule says the ground shall not be colled except at the commencement of each innings, and this often gives one side a great advantage. If the side has been in all day, say up to twenty minutes of drawing the stumps, the ground is rolled before the other side go in, but it is not rolled in the morning when they continue their innings, though rain during the night may have entirely spoiled the pitch. The side that goes in first has thus all the best of it, and it would be much fairer if the ground was rolled each morning as well as between the innings. In preparing a wicket, the great thing is to have it as level as possible, and in the centre of a level area, and not on the side of a hill if it can be avoided. The space which is specially prepared for the pitch should be about ten or twelve feet wide, and extend for about twenty yards behind each of the wickets to allow of good long-stopping when the bowling is fast. The rolled space should thus measure about sixty yards by four.

VIII.—This does not say how long after rain, but it means that if the ground is wet and much cut up a change can be We should like to hear the public feeling about giving the effected. Sometimes the ground will get into such a state that it is absolutely necessary to take advantage of this rule, and owing to the inclement weather of the last few seasons many a day's cricket has had to be abandoned on account of the bad state of the ground, although the sun was shining overhead.

means his going to the other end to that from which he has been bowling, and then returning to it, and there is thus given to him the opportunity to bowl four overs out of five. He can deliver an over at one end, then change wickets and deliver touched it. from the other end, then wait while another over is being bowled, and then go on in turn with his over, change to his original end, and bowl the over following, thus in first-class matches sending in eight successive balls twice in an innings! I think it would be a very good thing if this rule were altered, so as to allow the bowler to change ends as often as he liked, provided that he never bowled two successive overs.

X.—This rule, about the understanding of which there is little difficulty, ought to be strictly enforced; but owing to the weak-mindedness of the umpires of the present day it rarely is, and many bowlers, or rather throwers, are allowed to infringe it with impunity. The umpires own that the men throw, but have not the courage to speak out and "no ball" them. The matter ought really to be taken up at head-quarters, and orders given to the umpires to enforce the law. A jerk can be detected by the blow of the arm against the side as it is made. "No ball" should be called the instant the ball leaves the bowler's hand.

XI .- "During the over " might be added with advantage to 'this rule. The bowler, to prevent the batsman getting in his way, may direct him to stand which side he pleases, so as to have room to bowl, but of course it would not be fair to make him change his place every ball. Law XXXVI. would meet such cases as this.

XII.—It is on the batsman that the fact of a ball being wide principally depends; what is wide to one may not be so to another. It sometimes pays to bowl wides to entice the striker to hit at them and give catches. Wides can be run for the same as byes, but of course there is no object in running a single unless to change the batsmen, as one is scored without quitting the wicket.

XIII.—Running for wides and no balls is optional, and there is seldom an object in crossing if there is only a chance of a single. Should, however, a no ball be hit, and a run made, the run counts to the striker. A man can only be out by running out from a no ball, but I once witnessed a curious incident in which a man bowled a no ball and the striker ran man was out—"run out." A hard case for the striker, for had time. The question often arises, "If a man can be put out he simply missed the ball he could not have been stumped. It without extracting a stump, should one bail be off?" Of course being out only in the event of his attempting a run.

muscles, but that a bowler should not bowl down on the wicket.

XV.—This rule is rather vague. For instance, supposing the bails are blown off (as occasionally occurs if playing goes on in a boisterous wind), and are off just as the bowler delivers the ball, and the ball hits the wicket but does not take the stump out of the ground, the man, owing to the bails not being on the stumps, is "not out." Rule XXXVI. gives the umpire power to act sensibly in the matter, though I have known a case where the man was given in, and correctly so according to the strict letter of this rule, there being nothing mentioned to meet the case, which is by no means exceptional. The rule could easily be worded so as to be applicable under all circumstances-its intention is obvious enough.

XVI.—If a ball is caught off a tree, or a house, or such like, the striker is out unless it has previously been agreed that such tree, etc., is not in the ground. The rule was never meant to imply that the batsman should be out owing to the ball lodging in a tree or a gutter and being fetched down by a fieldsman.

IX.—The bowler changing wickets twice during an innings, to man hits a ball and it only toucher a leaf or so, and its progress is not impeded thereby, he is of course out if caught. If the hand in catching the ball touches the ground it makes no difference, the man being out so long as the ball itself has not > XVII.—Part of your foot or the bat should be grounded within the popping-crease; the striker is out if he is on the line and no part of his foot or bat inside it. Should a man in making a run jump in the air just before he reaches the crease, in order to avoid being hit by the ball, and the ball hits the wicket before he touches the ground, although he may be well over the crease, he is out. Again, should he reach his ground and then jump up, and the ball hit the wicket while he is in the air, he is out, although some umpires would decide to the contrary. The rule was not made to meet such a case, but as it stands it leaves no doubt in the matter; giving the man out would, however, be against the spirit of the law.

> XVIII.—'a... rule says the man is out if he hits down his wicket, but says nothing about the bails, though, of course, if a bail is dislodged the man is out. If the striker hits the ball into his partner's wicket, the latter is not out unless he is out of his ground and the ball is touched by one of the field on its road from the bat. It is only in striking at the ball, not in running, that a man can be out for hitting the wicket.

> XIX. This rule is not generally understood. I have known an umpire give the man out who ran against a fieldsman and prevented him catching a ball which his partner had This was a wrong decision; the rule says distinctly the striker" is out, the reason being that had the fielder not been interfered with he would have probably caught the ball, and the striker would have been out—caught out. The rule is, of course, against wilful obstruction, and not only includes knocking up against the fieldsman, but yelling and hooting so as to confuse him. In all such cases let it be borne in mind that the "striker" is out.

> XX.—Wilfully striking the ball again does not mean preventing its rebounding into his wicket, but hitting it so as to score off it.

XXI.—The wicket-keeper must knock down the wicket with the hand that the ball is in. It matters not if the bat is dropped so long as the batsman gets into his ground. There is no advantage in dropping the bat, for though you may run out of his ground, and just touched the ball, which went into lighter you have to run farther, as, instead of reaching out and the wicket-keeper's hand, who put down the wicket, and the touching the ground, you have to run over the crease each would be well if something was said in the rule about the man he can, as the rule says if both bails are off. If a stump is pulled up to make a man out after the bails are off, it must be XIV .- The words "trial ball" in this rule do not mean done by the hands or hand in which the ball is, and it does not that a man should not bowl a ball to get the stiffness off his do to pull up the stump with one hand while the ball is in the other, and then knock them together—a thing which has been done, though no one would think so, in a first-class match.

ENGLAND

In a match Yorkshire v. Gloucester, the former made 112 and 148, the latter 120 and 109. Peate bowled E. M. and W. G. Grace for 0 the first innings; the second they made 13 and 56 respectively.

A noteworthy fact for cricket coincidencists is that precisely the same large score, namely 117, was made in two places on July 31st —by Mr. W. W. Read, at the Oval for Surrey, and by Flowers at Cambridge for M.C.C.

The Australian cricketers propose to journey home by way of America, and in all probability matches will be arranged on their behalf at Philadelphia and New York, as well as perhaps at Detroit. On their return to Australia they will play the Hon. Ivo. Bligh's It is much the best plan, where there are trees or other obstacles | English Eleven twice, at Melbourne on January 1, and at Adelaide in the ground, for the two sides to agree before the match commences that cases such as we have noted should be not out. If any Fifteen of South Australia at Adelaide.

Another ingenious paragraph manufacturer has discovered an extraordinary piece of intelligence, that the possibility of a fourth Australian team to visit England in 1844 is already under discussion. I fancy that if Murdoch were asked his views on the matter, he would repeat the general opinion of the colonial press, in commenting on the preparations for the present tour, that some years will clapse before we see another Australian team of cricketers in England. Murdoch, Massie and Garrett, in any case, would hardly be likely to make the journey again, and unless a chance could be seen of sending an almost entirely new team, the prospects of another visit before at least 1836 or 1837 are very remote. — Cricket.

I ZINGARI v. HAMILTON.

This match took place at Hamilton on Friday 4th inst., and resulted in a draw. The wandering tribe were unfortunate in losing Logan and Hall, who both failed to put in an appearance on the ground. Montgomery kindly filled one place, but the other was left vacant. I Zingari won the toss, and took the innings. Merritt only lasted a few overs, but when Ray and Morrison entered into partnership runs came quickly, and 76 was on the telegraph when the former unfortunately ran himself out. He had played a useful innings, but owing to want of practice showed scarcely his old form. Allan got a good 3 to leg, a double, and two singles, but his impatience led him (unwisely) to hit at Cillespie. Morrison played much more carefully than usual—a decided compliment to Hamilton's bowling; he had no lives. Kirchhoffer played a good innings; he hit out several times, but got half his runs by placing his his. The rear stand was made by Brown and Macdonell, the former of whom got his runs all to leg. Howard and Montgomery quickly retired. The Hamilton bowling and fielding was as good as usual, but the batting conquered it. This match took placeat Hamilton on Friday 4th inst., and resulted but the batting conquered it.

Hamilton began with her usual men, and 37 had been put up be-Hamilton began with her usual men, and 37 had been put up before they could be induced to part company. Morrison was bowling, and noticing the Doctor's disposition to go out of his ground, he baulked and put down the wicket. Hope in the meantime had been missed by Merritt, and an easy chance of running him out was refused by Brown. He was finally captured by Morrison. Although his score was large and some of his hits safe, half were skied, and many were the times the ball shaved his wickets. Blomeley played in really good form. Montgomery bowled Sayers and Mulligan on very good length balls. Cummings contributed a useful 9. The others were run out foolishly. The Zingari fielding was loose, although allowance should be made for having only ten men while Hamilton fielded eleven. The full score and bowling analyses follow:

I ZINGARI v. MONTREAL

Played at Montreal on the 10th and 11th inst. Zingari won the toss, and chose the bat for the fourth time. Fraser disposed of Brune!, Smith and the ex-phenomenon for a total of 3, and it became evident, unless the team was going to let out with its tail, that the innings would be a small one. Merritt was let off twice, but otherwise played well. He got four low drives for 3. Lindsey played a safe innings, he was taken at the wickets. Macdonell Saturday under the most unfavourable circumstances yet. A showed fine form while he was at the wickets. Jones played a beautiful wicket was prepared, but hardly had the Zingari men pokey innings. The fielding during this innings was the best seen appeared on the field after batting when a heavy storm of rain came. in Canada this year, and, as it proved, the Zingari men showed the on, accompanied by gusts of wind. Play, however, was resumed best fielding form they have yet exhibited. Smythe and Hamilton played very steadily for about twenty overs. Fraser got some good hits am Browning made several good cuts. The latter was finely taken by Lindsey on the rum. Smith dismissed Muir on an equally good one at long field in. The second immings of this math was finished on the second day. I Zingari again failed to come off at the bat. Good form was shown by Merritt and Brunel. The majority, however, were unable to resist Fraser's shooters, although his other balls were not difficult. Montreal had only 33 runs to make in order to win, and mad not the captain lost heart and mismaged the bowling, the game might have been pulled out of the fire. The dismissal of the reputationist who went in first to win get their eyes in and the game was lost. The Zingari fielding was their eyes in and the game was lost.
