COUNTY ELEVENS.

A worthy object will be accomplished when better elevens than usually meet one another now can be brought together. We have not far to look for the reason why nine out of every ten teams are weak and fail to score well; it is chiefly because the field from which the men are gathered is so limited. As a step in the right direction, we would suggest playing County v. County, in preference to Town v. Town or City. We would not propose to make a universal practice of this, but rather to substitute in the generality of cases the proposed plan.

A little inspection of the condition of county cricket will at once make evident the possibility of this suggestion. Many counties have two or more, often a good many more, towns that boast of a club, and a very fair one too, as things go in this country. Now, we would not urge the concentration of these clubs into one, except for occasions, believing that nothing is so cramping in its effects as centralization. Let each exist separately and develop its men, but take the best of these and play them as county men. Take from each of four clubs the three best men, and you can bring together a pretty respectable eleven in most cases, while at the same time mermaid elevens, with decidedly more tail than body in them, will become defunct genera.

The Ontario Cricket Association might adopt this system in place of the present one. Many of the minor clubs in this organization cease to be heard from after the first tie, and it is only when the two or three last teams meet for the final contest that any interest comes to be attached to the result. The wider the area you draw your men from the more wide-spread the influence you gain and the greater the number of enthusiasts you enlist, and cricket without these latter is flat.

The main object, however, to be accomplished is to strengthen the present teams and bring stronger cricket on the field, so that the paltry thirties and forties that are knocked together as the score by the three crack men for their side may be multiplied by four, and a respectable total reached.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

It would be well if all the clubs belonging to the Association would follow the example of District No. 1, and get their first ties played off without delay. It should be borne in mind that these have to be played off before August 10th. Thamesville now stands at the head of that district, and will doubtless make a plucky stand for first place.

* * *
The Toronto-Hamilton match has been drawn once more. This time, we are happy to say, the blame can be transferred from the participating teams to Jupiter Pluvius, at once the friend and enemy of cricketers. As a reason for the small score of Hamilton was given the fact that the team had arrived the day before; but no excuse can be offered for Toronto. The latter's bowlers did their work well throughout, but the batsmen, when called upon to reach or overtop a ridiculously small score, proved themselves unworthy of the charge reposed in them, and had actually to trust to the three men who had done all the bowling for making one-half the total number of runs obtained.

* * *
No one will deny that Upper Canada College should have a professional, but very few will tell how his presence is to be brought about. Being a Government institution, the amount of red tape necessary to be handled before anything can be accomplished might catch on the opinion of some official and put a stop to its further progress; or possibly the very suggestion of making an additional salary a call on the public funds might serve as a signal for a hue and cry from all Ontario's high school masters, who have no good-will towards the college. So much the better if it did. Perhaps the example set might stimulate them to follow it. But failing this, or perhaps, better as a first step make the support of such a man incumbent on every scholar, as the maintenance of the cricket club is at Trinity School. A very small pittance from each of three hundred odd boys would secure the services of a professional.

CRICKET, AND HOW TO EXCEL IN IT.

BY DR. W. G. GRACE.

(Published by special permission.)

CHAPTER V.—PRACTICE.

In selecting an eleven it should be borne in mind that a team ought never to be made up entirely of men chosen for their batting proficiency. A batsman will frequently fail to come off; a bowler or fieldsman nearly always makes his mark in a match. Two or three good bats should be chosen first; then the bowlers, one fast and one slow. A good wicket-keeper is a necessity; and if possible two other bowlers should be put in, one right-handed and one left, and the rest of the team should be made up of men of fielding as well as batting ability, a good lob bowler being included if you have got him. A man who can field well and bat a little should always have the preference over one who can bat tolerably and is weak in the field.

In cricket, the object of every player should be the winning of the match, and not his own glorification, hence all should work as one man for the good of the side, and practise for matches as much as possible in each other's company. It is remarkable what a difference there is between the play and success of a team who are strangers to one another, and of an eleven who have been trained all together and are well acquainted with each other's whims and peculiarities.

Some people diet themselves in an elaborate manner for the practice of the game, but I am unaware of any regimen suited for cricketers that does not apply in other cases. The best system is that which renders it unnecessary to have recourse to any sudden methods of increasing muscular or mental power. Carefully diet yourselves always; keep regular hours; eat moderately. The great mistake of modern days is that we eat too much. Avoid late dinners and many courses. Take simple wholesome food. Drink but little. Never have to take refuge in doses and "pick-me-ups," and avoid excesses of all kinds, particularly in spirits and tobacco. In short, if you are wise you will never want to go into training, for you will always be in condition, and your powers and faculties will require no special treatment to improve them, for they will always be kept up in their highest state of healthy vigour.

To play cricket well, then, be careful in your diet, and constant in your practice. Practice is of two kinds—practice for the sake of killing time, and practice with a view to improvement. As regards the former variety I have nothing to say beyond hinting that though a man may amuse himself in many worse ways than swiping and slogging, and bawling "Thank you!" for hours at a time, it would be as well for him to cease imagining that he is in any way improving his cricket thereby. The common style of slashing away at half a dozen bowlers in front of a net is a main reason of the wholesale manufacture of duck's eggs amongst modern elevens.

COMMUNICATION.

HINTS TO CRICKETERS.

To the Editor of the Cricket Field.

DEAR SIR,—As you have been good enough to publish my "Hints to Cricketers," I have presumed they met with your approbation, and now offer you some more. I have endeavoured to point out the chief essentials required to make a finished batsman, name y, good form of defence, a straight bat, and correct hitting. In playing forward, I would add that care should be taken to time the ball. The bat should meet it just as it leaves the ground. If you play forward too slowly, it is nearly tantamount to not playing forward at all; the ball has time to rise, and may either pop over the handle of the bat and take the wicket, or may slightly touch it or your fingers and give a catch. If played too quickly, the ball hits the bat instead of the reverse, and the force of the blow is lost. If correctly timed the ball is driven, and by slightly turning the face towards the on or off side, you can place the ball out of reach of the field wherever you may see an opening. The forward play should also be adopted for straight balls or balls a little to the off, when either are slightly overpitched, for these the bat should be lunged forward rapidly and with a firm push. It is the fashion in these days to stand still and hit at these balls; if struck, they must go up in the air and become food for some good long field; if they shoot, they go under the bat and take the wicket. Many a good player has fallen a victim in trying to make these sensational hits. When a ball is slightly to the on side and a little underpitched, play forward, having the face of the bat slightly turned towards the on side; the ball will then glance off it, and go between short-leg and long-stop, and one if not more runs safely obtained. Whelen, of Chatham, whom many Canadians will remember, was very good at this—no one, in fact, better. Another way to play this ball is to stretch the leg forward and bring the bat down with a sharp chop on the ball with its face turned slightly to the "on" side; the ball will then go between your legs. By sloping the bat more or less you may place the bat out of short-leg's reach. Another way of playing is the "draw," now very seldom adopted, but there is nothing prettier or more effective when off fast bowling; this is done by patting the ball with a straight bat, and with a turn of the wrists.

In place of all these modes of play, a bad and dangerous style now generally obtains among players. It has been designated by various names. At one time it was called the "Cambridge poke," but I think it was originated by the Sussex professional player, Jemmy Dean; at any rate, he was the first man I saw play in that miserable manner, and I know it was not then adopted at Cambridge. It consists in standing full face to the bowler, and trying to pat the ball to the outside. The very position is bad and dangerous; all command of the ball is lost. If missed, the chances are that the player is seriously hurt by being struck by the ball in one of the tenderest parts of the person; if the ball rises or twists, the player cannot get out of the way of it, and most probably in consequence gives a catch to the slip, point or bowler. I earnestly hope all Canadian cricketers will give up this wretched misbegotten style of play.

Balls overpitched and well to the off are best played by throwing your front leg well forward and over to the off side, and striking hard and rapidly; this will send the ball either between long-off and point or square, according as the ball is more or less overpitched. This is sometimes called a "cut," but the true cut is in the slips. To cut well requires flexible wrists. You may help to obtain these by practice; keep raising the bat rapidly on to your shoulder and down again as fast as you can, also swing the bat round and round by moving your wrist without using your arms, first with one hand then with both; try every other way you may think of for working the wrists. Those I have mentioned I know are useful, especially the first, as that is the motion for the actual "cut," and the more you practise it the easier it becomes. Don't forget this essential—the shoulder well forward. This also is the great requisite in back play; bring the bat down with a sharp chop on the ball. Try and time the ball as much as you can; Canadians generally are very deficient in this mode of play. As a rule, they merely try to stop the ball, letting it hit the bat; they want more freedom of wrist, more shoulder forward, and better timing. I have endeavoured to show how these may be obtained; let them try to gain all these; it will simply repay them I am certain. The "Leviathan" is most wonderful in this respect; I have several times seen him come down on a "shooter," and send it for three or four. No one probably will ever succeed in equalling him; still, as every one may try to follow his example, and depend upon it, he who does will be the gainer by so doing. If he does not get runs, he will at any rate keep his wicket intact and play correctly, and like a finished batsman.

Against slow bowling (whether under or over) the player should make good use of his legs. A bowler is always trying to dodge, find out his batsman's weak points, and tempt him to hit. The player's object is to finesse against the bowler; this he can do by sometimes playing back and inducing the bowler to pitch the ball up, if this object is gained, he can go in at the ball and drive it, making it bowling for the field. Sometimes, by pretending to jump forward, the bowler will be induced to pitch the ball short, and so give him an easy ball to play; in this way he may so puzzle the bowler that he will hardly know what kind of ball to bowl. The player may sometimes also go in at a good ball by taking a rapid stride out of his ground, and then lunging forward in the way I have mentioned; this may be safely done where there is no wicket keeper, but only a bastard sort of one, as is so generally the fashion in this country; great care, however, is required that you don't miss the ball or get before your wicket.

I have now gone through the various kinds of playing or hitting, and given the essentials for making a finished batsman. My object is to get Canadians to study the game more carefully and try to play correctly. There is plenty of stuff in the country for making good cricketers, but it wants working up. Unfortunately there are no professionals or persons to teach; much, however, may be learned by each individual himself; and if these "hints" will tend to assist any one in his endeavours, it will, I assure you, give the greatest pleasure and satisfaction to

Yours truly,

W. PICKERING.

TORONTO v. HAMILTON.

The commencement of this match was delayed from Friday afternoon until Saturday morning on account of the rain. Play was begun at 11 o'clock by the Hamiltonians taking the innings. Gillespie got 2 for a cut, but was soon bowled with a shooter, 1 for 2. Parks slipped a ball into Daly's hands after scoring 4 singles, 2 for 9. Hope, who had just arrived, opened his score with a low drive for 2 off Foy; he skied the same bowler for 1, but in attempting a like hit in his next over, was taken prettily by Burns on the run in his left hand, 3 for 13. Rogers put Wright high in the air for 1, cut Foy twice for 2; put him over his head for 1, and was bowled off his pads, 4 for 23. Hebert went in first, and remained playing carefully until he hit at Wright and paid the penalty; he got 5 singles—5 for 24. Sayers, who is out of practice, got 1 in the slips past Foy; the latter in revenge bowled him the first chance he got, 6 for 26. Ferris played more carefully than usual, and got 5 singles before Daly fielded a ball sharply and ran him out, 7 for 33. Kennedy began as usual by touching the first ball and running; had Foy fielded the ball well Wolverton would have been out. He got 2—3 for 35. Harvey's wicket was the ninth to fall. Milligan, the last man, got three good ones to leg for 2 each, he was easily taken at mid on. Wolverton was left not out; he had played steadily, but his poky style more than counterbalanced any merit which his innings had. He got some good ones to leg, one of which he hit with one hand. He was missed at point after scoring three.

During this innings little or no cricket was shown, the exhibition was not that of a strong batting team. Wright, from the pavilion end, bowled remarkably well, considering the time which has elapsed since he played before, and Foy and Helmcken added to their reputation as bowlers. The fielding was good on the whole, although some mistakes occurred in throwing in. Morrison performed admirably at the wickets, and Daly showed that his fielding was as good as his batting.

Toronto, after a very short interval, took the bat. Clarke's bails were soon taken off, 1 for 4. Sproule got four runs in the slips; was missed by Ferrie, and finally bowled by the same man—2 for 4. Burns did nothing, 3 for 6. Morrison was "funky" and returned Gillespie's first ball to him—4 for 6. Behan got a couple of singles in the slips, but was reached by Gillespie at that place—5 for 15. Gosling made a slip and a leg hit for 1 each; he was given out to a catch at the wickets—6 for 20. Daly, who showed the best form for his side, played Ferrie 1 to the on for 1; got 2 for a high square leg; hit Ferrie grandly to leg for 2, and Gillespie for 3; he received only a few balls after lunch—7 for 21. Keefer was yorkered—8 for 21. Foy got a good one to leg for 3, and another for 1, but Gillespie was too much for him—9 for 30. Helmcken and Wright played pluckily at the end, and succeeded in getting 13 of the 24 runs required. The former made 4 slips and 1 draw. Wright made 3 nice drives for a total of 4, a slip for 1, a cut and a fine leg hit for 2 each.

The bowling of Gillespie was of the highest order, and created quite a "funk" among some Toronto batsmen. Ferrie did not show such good form as usual.

In their second innings the Hamiltonians were not more successful than in their first essay. Rogers got into double figures by free play, but his hits were a little dangerous. Gillespie, when time was called at 5 o'clock, was well set; he is undoubtedly the best man in the eleven; his hits to leg were much admired. Score:

GUELPH v. WATERLOO COUNTY.

On Tuesday last Guelph played a team composed of players from New Hamburg, Berlin, Waterloo, Galt and Brantford, which, for want of a better name, they called an eleven, or rather ten, of the County of Waterloo. The bowling of the visitors was excellent. Simpson (Galt) was destructive as ever, and he was well seconded by Draper (Waterloo), Hughes (Berlin), and Cook (New Hamburg). Hutchinson, for Guelph, did some very good work with the ball, as his analysis will show. The batting of neither team was good. Cook and Woodcock made a good stand at the beginning of the first innings, and their runs were obtained by careful play. Score:

PENINSULAR (DETROIT) v. GUELPH.

Notwithstanding the wretched weather, a very good game was played at Guelph on Dominion Day between these clubs—good, in that thoroughly true cricket was played—though the game was very one-sided. The miserably bad fielding of the latter team was the chief cause of its disastrous defeat, but their visitors outplayed them in every department of the game. The Guelph men must improve their play all round before they can hope to tackle such another team with any chance of success.

The bowling of Detroit of course was, as expected, excellent ; Dale more than sustained his reputation, and Irvine in the second innings was very destructive.

The rain of the previous day greatly spoiled the excellent wicket prepared, and though Dale's pace was thereby somewhat lessened, the bad light counteracted any advantage the batsman might otherwise have had.

The 1st innings began very inauspiciously for Guelph, two wickets falling before a run was made ; but Lemmon and Hanson getting set, raised the score by careful play, and each having got 21, the fourth wicket fell for 52. After their separation the rest of the innings was a mere procession—the remaining batsmen only bringing the total up to 62.

The Peninsulars, commencing with Dodds and Bamford, soon showed that they were determined to make the most of the weak bowling pitted against them. Dodds and Irvine were the most successful batsmen, but all scored, earning their runs well, and for the most part hitting hard. Hutchinson bowled steadily and well, and though the ground did not suit him, his analysis, all things considered, is very good.

Guelph's second was even worse than their first attempt ; no one, except Lockwood, who played really well for his 15, made anything of a stand ; and it was soon apparent that a one innings' defeat could not be averted, and thus Detroit won by an innings and 38 runs. Score :

PARKDALE v. SONS OF ENGLAND AND AURORA.

The cricketers of Toronto's western suburb are evidently determined to have cricket. On Saturday, the 1st July, they put two teams in the field, an eleven and a twelve. The home team were rather sat upon by the visitors from Aurora, but pulled off a stubbornly-contested match with the Sons of England. In the Aurora match, for the home team Montgomery and Anderson bowled well. For the visitors, Tracey, assisted by a high wind and helped by the ground, played havoc with the Parkdale wickets, and his 15 not out was a carefully played innings. Beyond this, the less said of the batting of either team the better.

In the match with the Sons of England, for the Englishmen Beasley and H. Poulter led in batting, while the bowling honours were about equally divided between Beasley, Griffith and Johnstone, the latter labouring under the disadvantage of a broken finger in the second innings. For Parkdale, Mackenzie, Chambers, Land and A. Black were most successful with the willow, Land showing particularly good judgment in sharp runs. The lion's share of the wickets fell to E. Wright. The score of both matches follow:
