THE CADETS' TRUMPET.

An Amateur Monthly Devoted to Temperance.

Vol. 1. WINDSOR, NOVA SCOTIA, MAY, 1880. No. 4.

ORIGINAL POETRY.

[Written for the CADETS' TRUMPET.]
TO A RUM SELLER.

BY J. F. N.

Butt out your poison, what care you,
For the sailors, when it appears?
Whil' you keep your victims on the road,
Which the downward downward trade

What care you for their rage or filth?
For their hungry babes at home?
For the wife and her once so gay,
Who through rum must be pover'ty's slave?

What care you for the sin and death,
That come from the stuff you deal?
You see how you bend him the hateful glass,
For your heart is as no sense to feel.

Oh! wretched man, why thus do you help
To ruin both old men and youth?
But you hug close your gold and still keep on,
Though you draz' them to hell, forsooth.

Think of the hundreds brought low each year
That each have a soul to save,
But whose wretched bodies must yield at last,
To rest in a drunkard's grave.

Go base man! Pursue your trade,
Chase others in the rampant power,
And think not prayers or tears will stop
The woe that around you lower.

Here comes a day when you will stand
Before your Maker's face,
Who'n gathered with your comrades there,
Your sins will all retrieve.

The blasted form, the bloodshot eye,
The agonising shroud's scene,
Will haunt you, while your soul at once,
To torment, will be borne.

Halifax, Feb. 28th, 1880.

ORIGINAL STORY.

[Written for the CADETS' TRUMPET.]

SAVED.

BY H. F. J. O. W.

(CONCLUDED.)

the body of a man, lying in the middle of the road. He would have passed over it for a small drift, as it was covered with snow, if he had not accidentally tripped over it. As there was no sound or movement from the body, he advanced, and bending down brushed the snow away from the face, which was very white; the lips did not move and thinking the man was dead, he began to be a little frightened. Taking off his overcoat, he covered, as well as he could, the body and shoulders of the man, and ran off as fast as he could for his home.

Mr. and Mrs. Bently were seated by the fire, wondering what was keeping Dick so long at the Cadets, when he burst in upon them without his overcoat, his face flushed with excitement and completely out of breath from his running. Between his gasps, he related to his astonished parents, what he had seen.

Mr. Bently at once hurried off for help, telling Dick to go to the Doctor's.

He then, with the assistance of one of the neighbors, carried the seemingly lifeless body to his home, as it turned out to be Mr. Astly.

As they reached the door of his house, the doctor arrived with Dick and Tom Astly, in time to see Mrs. Astly fall fainting to the floor, when she saw who it was they were carrying.

On his way to the doctor's, Dick had met Tom Astly, and when he told what he had seen, the poor boy burst into tears, putting his hand on Dick's arm and saying "Oh! it is father I know it is. I have been looking for him these two hours, but could not find him anywhere. A man told me he was in the bar-room, and the bar-keeper had turned him out when he had spent all his money; and now he has fallen into the snow and frozen to death."

It was an awful sight dear reader, to see the unhappiness and misery in this house caused by that cursed poison rum. And it is not the only case; it is one in thousands that are occurring every day, and will continue to occur as long as our government sanctions the manufacture, sale and importation of intoxicating liquors in our country.

Yes!! Here is a man once respected and honored by all, now a common drunkard and found frozen in the street. A man once independent reduced to poverty so poor in fact that he had to pawn his children's shoes to buy rum. His respectable dwelling reduced to a shanty of one story, devoid of furniture, his family robbed of the necessaries of life, to keep up a lazy lot of fellows, who welcome you to their shops as long as your money lasts, but when that is gone they turn you out in the street to perish.

The men carried Mr. Astly into a small room followed by the Doctor, and after waiting some time he told them that Mr. Astly had been badly frozen, but, with careful treatment would come around all right. The news was received with joy by the wife, who expressed her gratitude to Dick and to those who assisted Mr. Bently in carrying Mr. Astly to his home. As there was nothing further to do they all returned to their homes. Dick, our hero, related to his father all that had occurred since his return from the Cadets.

The next morning before Dick had finished his breakfast, Tom Astly came over for him, as Mr. Astly wanted to see him. Upon arriving, they were met at the door by Mrs. Astly, who conducted him to the bedside of her husband and left them alone. In a few words Mr. Astly explained why he had sent for him, saying that he wanted to do more than merely thank him, for his bravery the night before. "Ask of me anything you wish, and if it is possible after I am well again, it shall be granted."

"Mr. Astly" said Dick "I have no wish for anything for myself, but I have two requests to make; one is that you will allow Tom to join the Cadets; the other that you will join the Sons of Temperance and never go into a rumshop again for liquor."

"Most willingly do I promise to do so, Dick," answered Mr. Astly. "I had decided before you came in, never to go into "the cursed holes" again."

The doctor came in just then, so Dick had to go. In the next room he told Tom all about Mr. Astly's promise.

A few months saw a great change in the Astly family. Tom was a member of the Cadets, while Mr. Astly was about to enter the Sons. He did not join however until he was once more properly started in business, and had become respectable, as in the olden time.

The old tumble down shanty was exchanged for a large and comfortable house with new furniture. (he had no furniture to exchange, because it all went for rum).

And now we bid adieu to Dick Bently, and you dear reader, hoping that you will all follow his example, and put your whole soul into the work. "Down with intemperance," let that be your motto, and never swerve from that purpose, until that which is causing more misery and unhappiness in this world than any other vice known, is banished forever from our country.

My friend if you are a Cadet of Temperance, be not ashamed to wear that little tricoloured badge, emblematical of Truth, Virtue and Temperance, and if not, join at once, and perhaps your presence will be the means of bringing others in, and saving them from the snares of intemperance.

PUBLISHERS AND PROPRIETORS.

Subscription, 15 cts. for 6 months. No subscription for longer than 6 mos. taken.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

This number being the beginning of the last half of our 6 months trial, and wishing to much increase our circulation, we have decided to offer to our agents the following premium: We will give 25 per cent CASH commission on all Clubs of 7 and over. That is any person sending us 80 CENTS will have forwarded 7 copies of the TRUMPET to one or to separate addresses as they see fit, for the 6 months.

All are requested to act as our agents.

EDITORIAL.

AN APPEAL.

If we are sufficiently encouraged by a great increase in the number of subscribers in view of the special inducements offered this month to agents, we will continue to publish this paper after our six months trial is up, and if to an advantage, will increase in size. Subscribers please state whether they wish their subscription to commence with the first issue.

Amateur writers take notice that this is a glorious opportunity to exercise your talent.

THE CANADA TEMPERANCE ACT.

The temperance cause is at present considered, by some, to be in a critical position. It is supposed by these that the recent decision of the Supreme Court of Canada in reference to the Scott Temperance Act will render void all the laws for the suppression of the liquor traffic which have been passed by the Local House during the past few years.

While temperance people are divided in opinion as to this matter, and the subject is discussed on both sides, by the leading papers of the day, it is our opinion that the Act in question should be put before the people without delay. In either case this is requisite, as in the former, if the Local License Law is invalid, then the sooner the act is passed in this county the better for the people. Or, in case this decision does not effect the Local Temperance Laws, then it must be decided whether this act is an improvement over the present license laws and action taken accordingly.

We are convinced that if Hants County were allowed to vote on this question, it would pass with an overwhelming majority. Then will not some of our enterprising townsmen take the leadership and prove to the world that, as for us, we will go in for TEMPERANCE.—ED.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

G. W. P., Thomas Hutchings went to Wolfville on Friday evening for the purpose of forming a Section of Cadets. Good! Wolfville, we wish you every success

Victoria Section, C. of T. is in a prosperous condition. Notwithstanding the near approach of the hot summer evenings, there are nightly additions to its ranks. Their Literary Entertainments which are given each night are very interesting and reflect great credit on the committee.

AVON DIVISION S. OF T.—We have the great pleasure of recording in this issue the accession to the ranks of Avon Division of 8 of our most promising young men. This we think is the forerunner to a great revival of old Avon, and we trust will be productive of much good in bringing in yet others.

On Tuesday evening, 20th ult., the usual programme of the temperance meeting was conducted by the ladies with D. P. Allison, Esq., presiding. The meeting consisted of readings by Misses Archibald, Geldert and Burgoyne and Mrs. B. F. Chandler, a recitation by F. B. Wood, Speeches by Messrs Burnham, G. P. Smith and Sheriff Curry, and some excellent music by the choir. Altogether the meeting was a good one and the ladies deserve great praise.

SOCIABLE.—On Tuesday evening the 27th ult., the Windsor Temperance Reform Club, entertained the members of the different temperance societies with a grand sociable. The chief attractions were a rich and bounteous tea, some excellent clam chowder prepared by the master hand of Capt. B. N. Banks, and a first rate literary programme. After tea, the Rev. J. McMurray took the chair and announced that the object in having this meeting was to promote greater unison among the temperance orders, and we think that to a great degree this was accomplished. All entered heartily into the common cause of putting down chowder and other edibles. F. B. Wood, Esq., delivered a stirring address returning most hearty thanks to the Reform Club in the name of Avon Division of which Society he is W. P. Addresses were also delivered by Messrs. Hobart, Allison, Herbin, and G. P. Smith, also an original Poem, by Mrs. L. K. Bennett, entitled a Flea. The choir consisting of nine male voices, did splendidly, and really excelled themselves. The two little girls, Miss Fannie Smith and Miss Lillie Dakin, sang two or three pieces in a very sweet and effective manner and elicited rounds of applause. "God Save the Queen" closed up the fun and all departed feeling that they had enjoyed a good time.

AMATEURDOM.

—Detroit you are doing well for the dom. You deserve credit.

—The Miscellany of Spencerville, Ont., is out for April. It has greatly improved and will be a success in our opinion.

—The Pastime is one of our best exchanges, and we must congratulate the editors on the creditable appearance of their sheet.

—Boys Folio from New Glasgow, came to hand this month, dated January, with a slip inside dated March. We might say that it looks awfully like dead march to us. Now, Grant we own that we are cheeky in presuming to criticize our elder brother, but really you are setting us a bad example and you can never expect to aid the cause of amateurdom in Canada until you issue your paper more regularly.

—The Spectator is also on our table. It presumes to be the largest amateur paper in the Dominion, but we must say we would like it better if it were smaller and more original. It is bad enough for professional papers to use patent, without 8x10 amateurs doing so. The outside, however, is fully up to the average, and if better paper were used, the Spectator would be a model journal.

—We have lots of other papers which deserve notice, but our space is limited.

THE CADETS' TRUMPET.

ITEM—GRAPHS.

Those articles promised by some of our Halifax friends have not yet come to hand.

We would refer our friends in Wolfville and vicinity, to A. K. DeBlois who has consented to act as our agent there.

A young member of Cadets considerably electrified the whole section by declaring in a scrap debate that "Eloquence—has tisks and that's all I know about it."

—A young lady was overheard by a TRUMPET reporter to make the following remark to her young man: They had been walking along in silence, when suddenly she sighed very deeply, "My dear," said he, "why do you sigh so? You almost melt my heart." "Yes," she replied, "you look soft enough to melt." He melted.

Good.—G. P. Smith, our ever alert jailor, detected a boy in the act of bringing liquor to his father who had been imprisoned on last Saturday evening. Mr. Smith promptly took the bottle from the boy and smashed it to pieces, allowing the liquor to flow freely. He then arrested the boy and placed him in a cell to await trial. The affair is being investigated.

An exchange says the "injun play" is the latest thing out. Six young ladies go into a room together and one of them bites an onion. Then a young man is admitted who is to kiss all of them to find out who the onion biter was, if he fails they all kiss him, and this is kept up until the discovery is made. Then another young gent is introduced, and the game is kept up until the stock of onions is exhausted. My! but ain't it a nice play!

QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.—Victoria Section No. 13 C. of T., intend celebrating the Queen's Birthday (24th May), by a grand procession through the principal streets, with bands, flags and banners, in the afternoon, and in the evening by a Amateur, Literary and Musical entertainment, such as Victoria Section knows so well how to conduct. The programme is being prepared with unusual care, and all should avail themselves of this great treat. Some of our Halifax brethren are expected to take part in the programme.
