NO. 3.

JANUARY 1899.

Royal Descents.

THE ancestry referred to in our last number is as follows: Charles Martel, d. 741, was grandfather of the Emperor Charlemagne, who through his great granddaughter Judith, was ancestor of Baudouin the Bold, Count of Flanders and Artois, who married Elfreda, daughter of Alfred the Great, King of England, from which marriage was descended Matilda, Queen of William the Conqueror, ancestor of the Norman and Plantagenet kings. Alfred the Great was ancestor of Margaret, Queen of Malcolm Canmore, King of Scotland, and their daughter was Matilda, Queen of Henry I., of England.

Most English Royal descents are traced in female lines from Edward I. and Edward III. There are a very few families who derive from ultimate heiresses of Plantagenet princes, and are thus entitled to quarter the Royal Arms of the Plantagenet dynasty. One of these is represented in this province by Mr. Horace Wilson of Walkerton, and his brother Mr. Archdale Wilson of Hamilton, and others. Of the former class there are several families in Ontario.

Scottish Royal descents are probably numerous, in consequence of marriages of chiefs of clans with ladies of the Royal Family; this class is also represented in Ontario.

Descents from the kings of Ireland are perhaps numerous but rarely traceable. The O'Briens of Barrie and Toronto are descendants of the famous Brian Boromhe, King of Ireland. (See Ont. Fams, ii., 141.)

The family of Forsyth, well known in Quebec, and formerly also in Kingston, represented in Toronto by Capt. Forsyth Grant, claim descent from a son of Charlemagne. The senior representative of this descent is the Vicomte Forsyth de Fronsac, at present residing in Toronto.

MacLean.

A CORRESPONDENT, whose knowledge of military matters and reputation as an author and journalist entitle his remarks to respect, writes questioning the correctness of the statement in the Genealogist ii., 26, that Col. the Hon. Archibald McLean was present at the taking of Toronto and saved the colours of his regiment, on the ground that his name does not appear in the list of officers of his regiment at the capitulation. The statement was made by us on the authority of members of the family, who would be most unlikely to be mistaken or misinformed on such a matter, and on the authority of Read's Lives of the Judges, p. 163, and History of the County of York, ii., 100. On making further enquiry we have received the following account of the affair, written by a son of Col. McLean, which seems to us to leave no room for further doubt on the subject:

“Respecting the colours of the York Militia; we have all at different times heard my father narrate the circumstances, but he died thirty-four years ago, and it must be nearly forty-five years since I heard him speak on the subject, so that we can easily have forgotten things that he mentioned. My impression is that he was not with his regiment when the Americans made the attack. He was brought over after Queenston, wounded, and was a long time regaining his health and strength. After being wounded at Queenston he crawled from the field to the village, where his wound was hurriedly dressed. The next day he rode to Niagara on the limber of the gun that bore General Brock's remains, then by schooner to Toronto, where he nearly died, and was several months very ill, so that I judge he was just about convalescent when the American attack came. My recollection is that he told me that while the action was going on he crossed the Garrison creek, I think about the head of Adelaide street, but of this I am not certain. How he got the colours I have no recollection, but I remember his saying that he tore them off the staff and wrapped them round him under his clothing, and that he made his way to the McGill residence. My sisters remember his saying that while there an alarm was given that the enemy was approaching, that he went out through the back door of the house, retreated into the woods, and there buried the colours. They also remember his stating to them that he asked the Bishop's advice as to whether he was bound by the capitulation, and that the Bishop said no that he had not either surrendered or been taken prisoner, and advised him to make the best of his way to Kingston, which he did, with a horse lent him by some one at the McGill House. This accounts for his name not being in the list of officers."

The "Bishop" referred to in the above letter was the Rev. John Strachan, afterwards Bishop of Toronto, who had a leading part in arranging the capitulation. In going to Kingston, McLean was following General Sheaffe for the purpose of reporting for further duty.
