may of the sign	Institute has y available for be bibliographe images in the images in the images in the images in the chancked below.	r filming. phically ur he reprod	Features of nique, which uction, or w	this copy may alter hich may	which any			lui a exen bibli repro dans	été po aplaire ograpl oduite	ossible of qui sor hique, q , ou qui thode n	le se pro nt peut- ui peuv peuve	ocurer. -être uni vent mod nt exige	r exempla Les détail iques du p difier une r une moc age sont ir	s de ce oint de image lificati	et e vue on
	Coloured co		r							ured pag s de cou
	Covers dama Couverture	•	gée						_	damag endom		•
	Covers resto											or lamin ou pellic
	Cover title n Le titre de c	•	manque					V					r foxed/ ou piquée	s
	Coloured maps/ Cartes géographiques en couleur						Pages detached/ Pages détachées
	Coloured in Encre de cou							/		through parence	-
	Coloured pla Planches et/o							. / .		ty of pr té inéga		es/ mpressio	on
\checkmark	Bound with a Relié avec d'		-				į			nuous p
\checkmark	Tight binding along interior La reliure ser	r margin/ rée peut c	auser de l'o	mbre ou d					Comp	des inde rend un	(des) i
	distorsion le	iong de la	marge inter	rieure								n from:/ provient:
	Blank leaves within the te						r			age of i
	been omitted	l from filn	ning/				Į			le titre d		raison
	Il se peut que certaines pages blanches ajoutées lors d'une restauration apparaissent dans le texte, mais, lorsque cela était possible, ces pages n'ont pas été filmées.						Caption of issue/ Titre de départ de la livraison
								Masthead/ Générique (périodiques) de la livraison Additional co
	tem is filmed			ahaalaa 3.1
Ce do	cument est fil	mé au tau	x de réducti	cnecked b ion indiqui	elow/ é ci-dessou	s.
10X		14X	nomen and an article and a	18X		-	22X			2	6X		30)	(
															V
	12X		16X		20X			•	24X			28X	-		32 X

28X

32X

Vol. II.]

TORONTO, AUGUST 30, 1884.

[No. 18.

Homeland.

Again I walk through the valley And the old familiar lane, And I see on the verge of the woodland The homstead I love again.

Another year has departed, Since last I its threshhold crossed-Another year, yet we gather With none from our circle lost.

There are voices glad in the wildwood, And he sound of the mill is heard, Blent with the whisper and music Of leaf and river and bird.

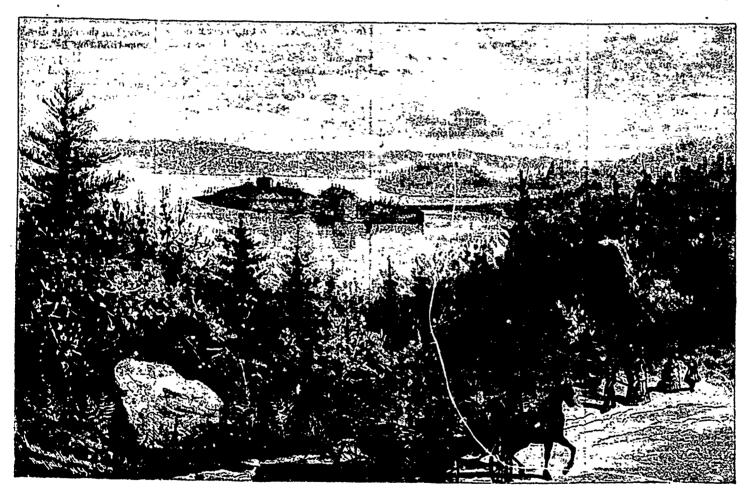

For my soul, like a bird that wanders Afar from its native shore, ls filled with the songs of the homeland, And shall be for evermore.

Halifax and its Surroundings.

HALIFAX is the most British city on the continent. Long associations with the army and navy have accomplished this. The Haligonians are, for once and for all, the faithful and liege subjects of Her Majesty, her heirs and nationality may be.

the guest-it matters not what his in the surf, he should go to where the sea rolls in with a magnificent sweep, The strong attractions for visitors at Cow Bay. This beautiful place is are so numerous that a city guide book ten miles from Halifax, on the Dartis necessary to explain them in their mouth side. The drive to it is through proper order. The drives can be varied a pretty piece of country. All around according to the taste and the time of Halifax are bays, coves, islands, and sojourn. To skirt the city one may lakes, any one of which is worthy of a drive down the Point Pleasant road, visit, so that the tourist may see as and up the North-west Arm. This much or as little as he pleases. Exgives a fire view of the harbour and its cursions to McNab's Island, at the objects of interest. The Arm is a mouth of the harbour, are also in

MELVILLE ISLAND-NORTH-WEST ARM-HALIFAX.

There is joy in this peaceful valley,
Which happiness e'er broods o'er,
I rejoice that I walk its pathways
With my kindred dear once more.

There is one who sits by the doorstep As the daylight's beauty dies: I know her hair has grown whiter, That dimness has veiled her eyes;

But her hand is as warm as ever, And her motherly smile is sweet, As I sat by her side in the twilight Where the loved and the loving meet.

'I'm now far from that pleasant valley, Yet in memory I daily stray Through its woodland and by its river, And each old, familiar way.

successors, and the fashions and tastes, beautiful place, and around it are many, order during the fine, warm days of of the people are largely governed elegant private residences, the homes summer. by the land beyond the sea. So the people have all that is admirable in English business circles and polite society. That is to say, they preserve their mercantile good names by integrity, and their homes are the scenes of good old-fashioned English hospitality. A stranger who was the hospitality. A stranger who was the legant private residences, the homes summer.

In the city itself there is a great deal to be seen. It is expected that strangers will visit the New Province Buildings, with its fine museum, open to the public; the churches, asylums, and all kinds of public institutions, which bear glowing tribute to the piety, hospitality. A stranger who was the entire into the best society will be sure to carry away the most kindly recollections of his visit. In no place will more studious efforts be made to minister to the enjoyment of mature. Another drive is which opening the the people, charity and philanthropy of the people. The Public Garden, belonging to the city, will be found a most pleasant retreat, with its trees and flowers, fountains, lakes, and cool and shady walks. Another drive is which bear glowing tribute to the piety,

One should have a sail on Bedford Basin, that fair expanse of waterbroad, deep, blue, and beautiful. was on the shore of this Basin that the Duke of Kent had his residence, and the remains of the music pavilion still stands on a height which overlooks the water. The "Prince's Lodge," as it is called, may be visited during the land drive to Bedford, but the place is sadly shorn of its former glory; and the rail-way, that destroyer of all sentiment, runs directly through the grounds. It was a famous place in its day, however, and the memory of the Queen's father will long continue to be held in honour by the Halifax people.

Halifax has communication with all parts of the world, by steamer and sailing vessel. Hither come the ocean steamships with mails and passengers, and numbers of others which make this a port to call on their way to and from other places. A large trade is carried on with Europe, the United States, and the West Indies, and from here, also, one may visit the fair Bermudas, or the rugged Newfoundland.

Methodism is strong in Halifax. It has six churches, with a membership of nearly a thousand, and large congregations. Here is the prosperous Methodist Book Room of the Maritime Provinces, which, under the faithful stewardship of the Rev. S. F. Huestis, has reached great success; and the office of the Wesleyan, which, under the accomplished Editorship of the Rev. T. Watson Smith, and worthy predecessors, has become one of the most influential journals of Maritime Canada.

Lincoln's Early Life.

BY MRS. ISADORE 8, BASH.

On a cold winter day many years ago a young boy ten years old and his sister two years older were all alone in a little log-cabin in the southern part of There was but a small space Indiana. of cleared land about this wretched cabin, which had neither floor, door, window. Three-legged stools served for chairs, poles driven into the wall and covered with boards, and the boards covered with a mattrass of leaves, formed the beds. Huge slabs supported by forked sticks driven into the earthen floor formed the table. There were a few pewter and tin dishes, but no knives or forks.

Both the brother and sister were shivering with cold, for they were miserably clad. There was a sorrowful, care-worn look on both these young faces. The good mother of these children had been dead for more than a year, and their father, who was none too kind at best, had left them weeks before to go back to his old home in Kentucky to visit.

The children were not only suffering of the necessaries of life, but were also suffering with fear for the father's

That young boy was Abraham Lincoln at the age of ten years. Such were his home and surroundings. By-and-bye Abraham and his sister heard a noise, and looking out they saw coming through the woods a four-horse waggon, containing their father, a woman, three children, and a variety of wonderful things such as they had never seen before. There was a bureau, a bed, a table, a clothes-chest, chairs, and cooking utensils. Their father had married again, and was bringing home a new mother for Abraham and his sister Nancy.

The new mother proved a true friend to these neglected children. She hastened to make them good warm clothing; and that night for the first time, Abraham Lincoln slept in a comfortable bed with covering enough to keep him warm on a winter night. This energetic woman made her husband put floors, windows, and doors in his cabin. She loved these children, and was a much better friend to them than their lazy, careless father. As soon as there was a school in the neighbourhood she sent them, being careful that they should be as well dressed as other children.

She was not educated herself, but she discovered the capacity of her stepson and helped him with all her might. With this encouragement, his own intelligence and ambition did the rest. He studied early and late. He used a wooden shovel for a slate and a piece of charcoal for a pencil. He was a great borrower of books because he could not buy any. He would memorize parts of his books and copy other parts. Once he borrowed a small Life of Washington. He laid it on a shelf in the cabin, and a storm coming up at night it got soaked with rain. He had to work three days to pay for it.

Lincoln was almost wholly selftaught. He was a great and good man. How many, many people are better and happier to-day because he lived.

"Just as I am."

"Just as I am, without one plea
But that Thy blood was shed for me;
And that Thou bidd'st me come to Thee;
O, Lamb of God, I come."

'Twas thus a drunkard tried to pray, While bending o'er his baby's clay; His trembling fingers, anguished grasped The little hand that death had clasped, . But failed to change the sunny smile That rested on the face the while.

"Just as I am"—I yield the strife—
The record of my ruined life;
The curse that made my mind a wreck;
That neither prayer nor pride could check;
No other place have I to fleo—
"Oh! let me hide myself in Thee."

"Just as I am"—weak, weary, worn, The relic of a hope forlorn; A thing whose worthless actions tend To every weak and wicked end; Whose faltering footsteps daily trace The path of pain and deep disgrace.

"Just as I am"—a weary soul O'er which temptation's billows roll; The demon forms that round me creep, The horrid dreams that banish sleep, The craving fiends that o'er me ride, With calls that will not be denied.

"Just as I am"—remembering well
The wife that by my fury fell:
The little lips that daily cried
For bread their father's curse denied,
And daily begged with weary feet
That marked with blood the frozen street

"Just as I am"—O Saviour! come And save me from the rage of rum; By memories of this little form, That Thou hast taken from the storm, By all the hopes Thy Scriptures give, Support my vows and let me live.

The clouds were rent, the darkness fled, And fell upon the burdened bed A ray of sunshine, soft and warm, That glorified the little form, And shone in promise fondly there, as if in answer to his prayer.

And over since his feet have trod
In light and life and love of God,
Devoting ceaseless word to win
The wandering ones from paths of sin.
"Just as I am, without one plea
But that Thy blood was shed for me"—
These the grand words with which he came,—

Go, weary one, do thou the same.

Earth-Worms.

If you were to see a jar of earth in which a great many earth-worms had been placed, you would doubtless conclude that they had been gathered by some fisherman, and were to do duty as bait; but I wish to tell you of a jar of worms that belonged to a naturalist who had collected them that he might study their habits.

He soon found that they form for themselves little burrows in the earth, in which they rest quietly during the day, coming out to look for food by night. But how can they tell day from night? Have they eyes? Can they see? Mr. Darwin, after close study, concluded that they have no eyes, but that the front part of their bodies is sensitive to light; for, if he concentrated by a lens the rays of a candle upon their heads, they dashed into their burrows like rabbits; if, however, he shaded their heads and cast the light upon some other part of their bodies, they took no notice of it.

Can they smell? Mr. Darwin buried bits of onions and cabbage in the ground. These they soon found, guided to them, presumably, by the sense of smell. They showed that they liked the taste of some articles much better than that of others. Thus, when bits of green and red cabbage were placed side by side, they always chose the green, but would readily leave either for celery. Nor do they crave an exclusively vegetable diet. It was really amusing to see them striving to secure firmly in their jaws bits of meat which had been fastened by long pins. Night after night they would tug at them, in their struggle reaching half out of their burrows.

Can they hear? They seemed to pay no attention to any noises in the room, but if the jar in which they lived were placed upon the piano while the keys were struck, they seemed to be frightened by the vibrations thus felt, and soon retired to their burrows.

Are they of any use to man? If you will look into the garden around their burrows you will see little mounds of earth, not very high, but very fine. It is said that in India these mounds may sometimes be seen as high as six inches. This earth has been brought to the surface by the earth-worm; part of it he has removed while making his burrow. When we consider the numbers of earth-worms throughout the soil in all parts of the world, and the fact that each one is throwing up these earth castings, we will see that they are all busy in making the soil of our fields and gardens very fine and porous.

At one time Mr. Darwin, wishing to ascertain the amount of mold that would thus be worked over in a giving time, had lime spread upon a meadow, leaving it undisturbed for ten years. Immediately these little farmers began operations. Here and there they burrowed through the lime, leaving around their homes their little castings of fine soil. Gradually this pulverized soil covered the lime, and it disappeared from sight. At the end of ten years, holes were dug at various points through the meadow, and then it was discovered that the lime was three inches below the surface; those three inches representing the amount of fine mold brought up by the earth-worms. The castings thus thrown out on aloning hill-sides are washed down into the valleys by the rains; thus the little earth-worm may be laying bare the before.

surface of the mighty rocks as well as pulverizing the soil.

We have often heard of the coral insect—more properly coral animal, for he is no insect—which, out in the ocean, slowly builds up islands for men's habitation. We may now regard our familiar earth-worm as his fellow-worker, as a "planer of the mountainside, a maker of fertile, alluvial corn lands," and thus an unconscious friend to man in his agricultural operations.

Boy Inventors.

A Boy's elders are guilty of a foolish act when they snub him because he says or does something which they don't understand. A boy's personality is entitled to as much respect as a man's, so long as he behaves himself.

Some of the most important inventions have been the work of boys. The invention of the valve motion to the steam engine was made by a mere boy. Newcome's engine was in a very incomplete condition from the fact that there was no way to open or close the valves except by means of levers operated by the hand.

Newcome set up a large engine at one of the mines and a boy, Humphrey Potter, was hired to work these valve levers; and though this was not hard work, yet it required his constant attention. As he was working the levers he saw that parts of the engine moved in the right direction and at the same time that he had to open or close the valves. He procured a strong cord and made one end fast to the proper part of the engine and the other to the valve lever; and then had the satisfaction of seeing the engine move with perfect regularity of motion.

A short time after the for sman came around and saw the boy playing marbles at the door. Looking at the engine he saw the ingenuity of the boy and also the advantage of so great an invention. The idea suggested by the boy's inventive genius was put in a practical form and made the steam engine an automatic working machine.

The power-loom is the invention of a farmer's boy who had never seen or heard of such a thing. He whittled one out with his jack-knife and after he had got it all done he with great enthusiasm showed it to his father, who at once kicked it to pieces, saying that he would have no boy about him that would spend his time on such foolish things.

The boy was sent to a blacksmith to learn a trade and his master took a lively interest in him. He made a loom of what was left of the one his father had broken up and showed it to his master. The blacksmith saw that he had no common boy as an apprentice and that the invention was a valuable one. He had a loom constructed under the supervision of the boy. It worked to their perfect satisfaction, and the blacksmith furnished the means to manufacture the looms and the boy received half the profits.

In about a year the blacksmith wrote to the boy's father that he should bring with him a wealthy gentleman who was the inventor of the celebrated power-loom. You may be able to judge of the astonishment at the old home when his son was presented to him as the inventor, who told him that the loom was the same as the model that he had kicked to pieces but a year before

be the en

gls wi

the un

Christ at the Treasury.

BY MRS. W. T. BROWN.

coral

nimal.

n the

B for

egard

ellow-

ntain-

friend

tions.

oolish

se he

they

nality

elf.

nven-

e boy.

com. there

'alves

ed by phrey

valve

hard the pgine

t the close

o the isfac-

with

came ying the the great d by

et in ma-

ıtion i ever

He

cnife

his

eces,

boy

time

h to

k a ie a

his

cted

It

and

s to re-

aith

uld

nen

ıted

dge me

hat

Over against the treasury
The Master was sitting one day,
And His looks were wise and gentle
As the people passed that way.

Wise, and gentle, and human;
But nover on hearts of men
Had fallen such stern heart-searching
As wrought in the temple then.

For never man spake as this Man, And they who listened and saw, Heard and saw something more than a sermon, Learned something more than the law.

They had seen how He entered the city From Olivet's beautiful calm, Amidst the hosannas of triumph, The waving of garment and palm;

And from the far hills of Judæa,
Strange tidings had reached them ere
then,
Of One who had come from the lowly
To be the Great Healer of men;

And they knew that this simple Stranger, Who rebuked them again and again, Was something in wisdom and honour Surpassing the children of men.

And they felt as He looked upon them
With more of pity than scorn,
That He knew how they cast their money
Into the sounding horn.

And the scribes and the Pharisees saw it, And trod with a humbler mien, While the publican dropped his eyelids And reverently passed between.

And the rich cast in their abundance And never a hand did withhold, Till the trumpets clanged loudly and often With the tithings of silver and gold.

Then one came alone and unheeded,
So quiet and lonely her mien,
And dropped in her gift with the others,
Nor guessed that the Stranger had seen.

Through the gentle, sad face of the woman The Master looked down to her soul, And knew that of all her poor living She had given no tithe, but the whole.

More sweet than the words of an angel His blessed approval did fall: "I say unto you this poor woman Hath cast in more than ye all."

No record was left of the silver, Nor yet of the shekels of gold; But wherever the Lord has a temple The tale of the widow is told.

And the two little mites that out-valued
The gifts of the rich and the great
Have shown and have grown through the ages

To riches and royal estate.

Over against the treasury

The Master is sitting to-day,
And He counts the gain and the giving

Of all who pass that way.

O hearts that behold Him and know Him,
O hands that do scatter your hoard,
Be sure they have riches and honour
Who have given their all to the Lord. -Heathen Woman's Friend.

The Christian Martyr.

A STORY OF THE EARLY CHURCH.

THERE was a great stir in the city of Nicomedia, where Galerius the emperor lived. A band of Christians had been captured, and were to be sent to the lions on the morrow.

The night before, a young soldier entered the house of Gallico, the chief gladiator. He was met by Gallico,

"Yes, nephew; I hope so, but greatly fear.

"Then fear not," replied the younger man. "You would not if you knew

"All what?"

"That Agustus is dying."
"No!"

"He is. I saw one from the palace to-day, and he told me other things besides. He told me that Galerius believes that the Christians' God hath sent this awful sickness upon him; and he will to-night sign a new order, that all the Christians be set free."

Gallico's face brightened at the news,

"Can it be true, think you?"
"Yes, it is true, uncle," the other answered. "And that will help me. The order will be published to-morrow. Now, let me tell you my plan. You know it was I who caused these Christians to be taken. As I brought away or applyed to me applyed. my captive, he spoke to me—spoke words about forgiving me, and said that he would ask his Lord, the Christ, to give me pardon. He gave me this book, and bade me read. There I found the story of the God they worship; and, uncle, I believe it all. Then I said, he shall not die; he is a mere youth, and I a soldier; so I mere youth, and I a soldier; so I resolved to seek your help, that to-morrow, dressed like him, I may leave his cell, step into the ring like the other Christians, and perish in his place."

"It is a noble resolve, my son, and I have not the heart to turn thee from it, but I will at least try to help thee to save thine own life. We will hide a sword for thee in the sand; take thou that, and attack the beast. If thou canst keep him at bay for a little while, may be the order of the emperor may reach us; and, trust me, thou shalt not want assistance. And now, let me tell thee a secret. Thine own father, my lad, was a Christian, and died in that very ring. The sorrow broke thy mother's heart, and she died, leaving thee to my over. leaving thee to my care. I kept the secret from thee lest thou shouldst feel shame to think thy father was a Nazar-ene; but now, I fancy, thou wilt be proud to know it. But away now. If thou art to die on the morrow, thou shouldst be alone to-night."

In the early dawn of the following day great crowds of people were seen hurrying to the amphitheatre.

At the same time Gallus the soldier, dressed like the young Christian whom he had made captive, went alone to one of the cells of the martyrs, and unlocked the door.

unlocked the door.

The morning light fell across the form of one lying on the straw. Gallus stopped a moment. The prisoner was sleeping, and the soldier entered, and locking the door passed the key through the bars. It fell upon the pavement cutside and the paise wakened the outside, and the noise wakened the sleeper.

"Is the time come?" he asked.

"Not for thee, brother," was the answer.

"Who calls me brother" he asked.
"One," replied Gallus, "who has learned to love thy Lord the Saviour."
"But thou art the man who arrested me!" "l am, and will be the man who shall set thee free."

These words were whispered in his ear by the man who stood at the door, and he bounded forward.

He found the sword lying as if dropped by chance on the sand, and grasped it. Twisting his light contround his arm he waited for the beast.

The people, at first astonished at his finding a weapon, seemed pleased at his bold bearing; and the officers in charge made no sign, so the lion was turned loose.

He sprang out with a roar and bounded toward Gallus. But the young soldier was ready, and after several times trying to seize him and only meeting the sharp sword instead, the lion held back, growling terribly and lashing the earth with his tail, but still frightened.

It was at that moment that an officer rode to the gate of the amphitheatre and delivered a message. Then a dozen men rushed into the ring, and slew the lion on the spot; while a great shout proclaimed that the battle was over, for the edict of Galerius was made public, that the persecution of Christians was to come to an end.

Gallus joined the Christians, and for years after people used to point to him as one who was willing to lay down his life for the brethren.

London Gin-Palaces.

More than one-fourth of the daily earnings of the denizens of the slums goes over the bars of the public-houses and gin-palaces. To study the phase of this burning question let us take the districts from which I have drawn the facts and figures I have submitted to your readers in previous articles.

your readers in previous articles.

On a Saturday night in a great thoroughfare adjacent, there are three corner public-houses which take as much money as the whole of the other shops on the other side of the way put together. Butchers, bakers, greengrocers, clothiers, furniture-dealers, all the esternes to the wents of the new contract of the period. the caterers to the wants of the populace, are open till a late hour; there are hundreds of them trading round and about, but the whole lot do not take in as much money as three publicans—that is a fact ghastly enough in all conscience. Enter the publichouses and you will see them crammed. Here are artizans and labourers drinking away the wages that ought to clothe their little ones. Here are the women squandering the money that would purchase food, for the lack of which their children are dying. One group rivets the eye of the observer at once. It consists of an old greyhaired dame, a woman of forty, and a girl of nineteen, with a baby in her arms. All these are in a state which is best described as "maudlin"—they have finished one lot of gin, and the youngest is ordering another round. It is a great grandmother, grandmother, and a mother and a baby four generations together—and they are dirty and dishevelled and drunk, except the baby, and even the poor little mite may have its first taste of alcohol presently. It is no uncommon sight in these places to see a mother wet a baby's lips with gin and water. The process is called "giving the young un a taste," and the baby's father will look on sometimes and enjoy the

One dilapidated, ragged wretch I met last Saturday night was gnawing a baked potato. By his side stood a thinly-clad woman bearing a baby in her arms, and in hideous language she reproached him for his selfishness. She had fetched him out of a publichouse with his last halfpenny in his house with his last halfpenny in his pocket. With that halfpenny he had bought the potato, which he refused to share with her. At every corner the police are ordering or coaxing men and women to "move on." Between twelve and one o'clock it is a long procession of drunken men and women, and the most drunken seem to be those whose outward appearance betokens the most abject poverty.

Turn out of the main thoroughfare and into the dimly-lighted back streets and you come upon scene after screens and you come upon scene after scene to the grim, grotesque horror of which only the pencil of a Dore could do justice. Women with hideous distorted faces are rolling from side to side, shricking loud snatches of popular songs plentifully interlarded with the vilest expressions. Men as drunk as themselves meet them, there is a short interchange of ribald jests and foul oaths then a quarrel and a shower of blows.

Down from one dark court rings a cry of murder, and a woman, her face hideously gashed, makes across the narrow road pursued by a howling madnan. It is only a drunken husband having a row with his wife. having a row with his wife.

A friend of mine who is never tired of trying to urge the people of this district to temperance, not long since found a man sitting up naked on a heap of rags, shivering with the death throes on him, and crying for water for his parched throat. His wife, in a maudlin state of intoxication, was sturing helplessly at her dying husband. A coat was given to wrap round the poor fellow. At night when my friend returned, he found the man cold and dead and naked, and the woman in and dead and naked, and the woman in a state of mad intoxication. She had torn the coat from the body of the dying man and pawned it for drink. In these districts men and women who In these districts men and women who are starving will get grants of bread, and some of them will even ask for the bread to be wrapped in clean paper. Do you know why? That they may sell one loaf to some one for a copper or two, and get drunk with the money. Men will come and buy a pair of boots in the morning out of their earnings, and pay seven shillings for them. At night they will return to the same shop and offer to sell them back for four shillings. They have started drinking, and want the money to finish the carouse with.—London Daily News.

Mr. Moony's greatest hindrances, so he said, is the number of church mem-bers who come to his meetings and kept out the unconverted and nonchurch goers whom he desires to reach. At his first great meeting recently in a new part of London he asked all who were Christians to rise. Not suspecting what was to follow, about three-fourths of the audience arose, when, quick as he could speak, Mr. Moody said, "Now do not sit down; pass out at once. Glad to know that you are Christians, who said:

"Welcome, my boy. I am glad thou art come. Thou art ready for the worst?"

"Ay, or the best, if you will, good uncle."

While they were talking some one came to the door and opened it. Gallus stepped out.

"Thy sword is yonder, in the very case uncle."

"Ay, or the best, if you will, good uncle."

"Ay, or the best, if you will, good uncle."

While they were talking some one will look on sometimes and enjoy the joke immensely.

But the time to see the result of a Saturday night's heavy drinking in a low neighbourhood is after the houses are closed.

Glad to know that you are Christians, and so you may go, as I want the sinners will look on sometimes and enjoy the joke immensely.

But the time to see the result of a Saturday night's heavy drinking in a low neighbourhood is after the houses are closed.

I Meant To.

- "I pip not rise at the breakfast bell, But was so sleepy—1 can't tell—1 meant to.
- "The wood's not carried in I know, But there's the school bell, I must go.
 I meant to.
- " My lesson, I forgot to write, But nuts and apples were so nice.
- "Forgot to walk in on tiptce: Oh, how the baby cries-oh, oh! I meant to.
- "There, I forgot to shut the gate And put away my book and slate. I meant to.
- "The cattle trampled down the corn.

Thus drawls poor, idle Jimmie Hite From morn till noon, from noon till night. I meant to.

And when he grows to be a man He'll heedlessly mar every plan With that poor plea: "I meant to." -Home and School Visitor.

OUR PERIODICALS.

PRE TRAB-POSTAGE PERS.

Christian Guardian, weekly	. 21 00
Methodist Maragine, 95 pp. monthly, illustrate	d 200
Magazine and Guardian, together
The Wesleyan, Halifax, weekly	: 120
Sunday-School Banner, 32 pp. 8vo., monthl	7 - 1
Under Copies, toc.; over 6 copies	. 0 60
Canadian Scholar's Quarterly
Quarterly Review Service. By the year, 24c,
- dosen; 82 per 100; per quarter, 6c, a dose
- government as her san! her drawner, oct w doser	• •
50c, per hundred,	_
- Home & School, S pp. 4to, semi-mouthly
- aingle copies	. 0 30
Less than 10 copies	. 0 25
Over 30 copies	. 0 22
Over $60 copies	. 0 30
Pleasant Hours, 2 pp. 4to., semi-monthly, sing	i
- copies
Less than 30 copies
Over the surface	. 0 22
Over 20 copies
Over $60 copies	. 0 90
- Borean Loaves, monthly, 100 copies per month	. 5 50
Sunbeam-Semi-monthly-when less than 1	10
- 00ptes	. 0 15
-Address: WILLIAM SKIGGS.
Methodist Book and Publishing Ho	100.

72 & 80 King Street East, Toro

ome & School:

Rev. W. H. WITHROW, D.D. -

TORONTO, AUGUST 30, 1884.

Educational Earning Wages.

THE commencement season is over, and the institutions of learning are already calling for new recruits in the army of learning. —We desire to second-the appeal which is being made in our press, and ought to be made in all our pulpits, for a larger patronage of all Methodist schools, especially for the colleges. Education has two uses; one is the prime necessities of life and its higher physical well-being, the other is the inner values of life and its relations to immortal destiny. The use of liberal learning in the second, or spiritual, department is nowhere denied. prime necessities are met by the public school. The region of doubt is the higher physical well-being. The popular mind is still wrangling with the college respecting the usefulness of college study, and the point of antagonism is this matter of physical well-being. A college president gives us a hard nut for objectors to crack. He has just conferred the A.B. degree on twenty young men whose past he knows, and whose pursuits and prospects he has investigated. His statement is, in substance, this: Four years ago the wage-value of the twenty young men to earn their wages by three. Thev will at once earn, in the aggregate, three times as much as they could earn when they entered the freshman class. They go into various occupations; some have engagements at $1,000 a year, others get lower wages, but none less than $600. The president further believes that in ten years these twenty men if they live will be earning $30,-000, or an average of $1,500 each, and that without the college they would never have reached an average of $750. The class has been lifted to a higher level of productive power-measured in the practical man's half-bushel, has the power to advance to a much higher productiveness.

A TURKISH SCHOOL.

Our authority for the foregoing also gives the following: Ten years ago insist that it is the best, two brothers had the opportunity of going to college. One of them, the younger, embraced the opportunity; the other, more eager to make money, went into business. Both have had friends to help them, and fairly even chances. The result is a lesson in the economical value of college education. The graduate is earning a salary of $1,-800; the other a $700 salary. Both are in business, and their father has been heard to say recently that each of these soms of his receives about what he is worth.

In this matter of the wage-carning power of an education, we are too apt to consider exceptions and not rules. Here and there a man rises without education. But many men rise by means of education, though they them-selves do not know it. In the great newspaper offices, great railroad offices, city banks, and other large corporations, the majority of the men are graduates of colleges. Our high schools demand for college-bred men in schools at saluries from $1,000 to $1,500 is was in the aggregate less than $5,000. passed the stage in our growth as a To-day it is not less than $15,000. The people where the professions monopolize college course has multiplied their power, the graduates. The boys coming from colleges are filling business positions to an extent which is not realized by the general public. All these facts prove that the competition for attractive wages is now on a level with the general education furnished by the college and counts for much more than it used to do. We were struck with the story told by a principal in a high school. "Eight years ago," he said, "I was a coal miner, earning precariously from $6 to $12 a week. I seldom got $400 a year in all. I spent six cars working my way through college. My education cost me nothing. I lived while getting it, and I merely lived bewhich is the nation's dollar-and it fore. I am now earning $1,200 a year, and have the satisfaction of believing that I am more useful." This man's education was classical. We shall not We can conceive of an education which would be better; but it probably does not yet exist, and it is not wise for boys to offer themselves as victims of experiments in "the new education."

The college president to whom we have referred tells us that the worst symptom in college life is that the new courses are asked for and pursued because they are easier than the old, and he adds that the results are unsatisfactory. He reports, however, that the most successful graduates are those who specialize in science. Such students are in demand as soon as they graduate. For physicists, naturalists, and chemists the demand is far beyond the supply. He gives the example of a poor boy who got through college by self-help, rendering himself useful in the laboratory, and getting enough to keep soul and body together for this service. The "poor boy" is now receiving $5,-000 a year as chemist. This boy's scientific education was based on a are more and more in the hands of classical one, and the large result is college men. We are told that the attributed to that fact, though that basis may not be necessary.

A safe view to take of education is steadily growing. We have distinctly that it is a kind of goods for which there is an enlarging market, and that the best goods command the best prices; but the best goods are not necessarily to be had only at the largest shops and the most famous shops. Good educational wares are turned out, not by machines, but by men; and the best college for any lad is the one where he will come into contact with the best teachers. The middle range of colleges -old enough to have formed a character, strong enough in students to graduate from fifteen to thirty a year are probably the best places in which to obtain a good education. In the north-west our colleges are all within these limits; and, for the matter of that, Methodism has not yet much exceeded the upper limit in the arts courses. We advise, then, the bright boys and girls to get a college educa-tion—we have said "boys" in this article for the sake of brevity. There is an increasing number of places for educated women in the world, and there is no reason why girls should not have the best possible education.—N. W. Christian Advocate.

Turkish School.

A QUEER-looking school this is, but it is just such a one as you may see in any Turkish or Arab town where there is a school at all, as for instance, in Beyrut, Cairo, or Alexandria. The boys all sit on the ground—girls are not thought worth sending to schooland repeat altogether with a deafening din passages from the Koran, or Mohammedan Bible. The grave old Turk listens undisturbed, occasionally administering correction or advice as the circumstances of the case may demand. Such is the unchanging character of customs and usages in the East, that it is altogether probable that in just such a school the youthful Jesus at Nazareth loarned to read the Scriptures, out of which He was able to teach and as utonish the doctors of the law at Jerusalem in His twelfth year. Indeed, the schools in the East, as a general thing, are much inferior now to what they were in Palestine in the time of our Lord.

A SEAL SITTING ON A CHAIR.

The Fairy Lesson.

HER hair was so soft and curly,
Her eyes were so sweet and blue
(A dear little, queer little girlie
That looked very much like you),
And—she wanted to go on a mission
To China or Timbuctoo!

es;

ily

nd

ca-

by est

he

est

zes

ac-

to

ar

ich

he

in

of

ıch

rts

ght

ca-his

910 for

 $\mathbf{n}\mathbf{d}$

N.

ut in ere

in

he

re

ng

o k

d-

he

d.

çf

it

ch ch

of

h

n

ls

h

She wanted, somehow or other, She wanted, somenow or other,
To be a philanthropist,
(Just say that hig word to mother
And see if you don't get kissed;
It means to help people out of Each troublesome tangle and twist.)

She wanted the lamp of Aladdin—What wonders she'd do with that!
Not a soul should ever look sad in
The house—not even the cat,
She wished she'd the purse of a princess,
Or, maybe, a cardinal's hat.

"Or, if only I were a fairy—
What couldn't a fairy do!—
If I had her wand to carry
And knew how to use it, too!"
Said this dear little, queer httle girlie
That looked .ery much like you.

Up popped a fairy. "Surely I must have a fairy's wand,"
Said this dear little, queer little girlic,
"To carry over the land
And help all the poor Cinderellas, Or whatever comes to hand.

But he carried no wand nor crown; he Was coming on work intent,

Twas a dear little household brownie, And straight to his work he went. Wherever he stepped there was sunshine-Patches of heart-content.

He put away cup, spoon, and ladle;
He polished the silver from rust;
He shook up the comfortless cradle
Where the baby had crumbled a crust;
He swept up the room by enchantment,
And gave things a magical "dust."

Then off with a twinkle of laughter
That told her his lesson was done,
And my little Kittykins after
As fast as she could run,
She never will follow or find him
Till the seas dry up in the sun.

But couldn't she put away tunings.
While mamma wondering sat,
She picked up the baby's playthings,
A cardinal couldn't do that— Nor a sweet mother's kiss come under The brim of a cardinal hat.

They won't let her go on a mission
To China or Timbuctoo;
But she's found a sweeter ambition,
"That wouldn't hurt me or you—
Just doing her best to brighten
The corner where she grew."

Canadian Methodism.

In view of the consummation of the union of the Methodist Churches, the following statistics showing the strength of the united Church are given.

MEMBERSHIP.

Methodist Church of Canada, 128,-644; Methodist Episcopal, 25,671; Primitive Methodist, 8,090; Bible Christians, 7,398. Total, 169,803.

NUMBER OF MINISTERS

(of all classes, including students) Canada Methodist, 1,216; Methodist Episcopal, 259; Primitive Methodist, 89; Bible Christians, 79. Total, 1,643.

CHURCHES AND THEIR VALUE.

churches, 2,202; value, $4,438,435; offerings.

number of parsonages, 646, value, $712,096; parsonage furniture, $102,933; total value of church property, $6,-809,817. Methodist Episcopal -545churches, value, $1,314,-204; and 126 parsonages, value, $113,110; total value, $1,523,514. Primitive Methodist—231 churches and 50 parsonages; total value, $40,-260. Bible Christians - 59 churches, value, $395,210. Total, 3,159 churches, $77 parsonages; value, $9,130,807.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

The number of Sundayschools in the four branches of the Church is 2,707, with 22,434 teachers, and 185,052 scholars.

A Message on a Bank-Note.

A MERCHANT in Liverpool got a five-pound Bank-of-England note, and holding it up toward the light he saw some interlineations in what seemed red ink. He finally deciphered the letters, and found out that the writing had been made by a slave in Algiers, taying in substance: "Whoever gets this bank-note will please to inform my brother, John Dean, living near Carlisle, that I am a slave of the Bey of Algiers." The merchant sent word, employed government officers, and found who this man was spoken of in this bank bill. After some time the man was rescued, who for eleven years had been a slave of the Bey of Algiers. He was immediately emancipated, but was so worn out by hardship and exposure that he soon after died. Of, if some of the bank bills that come through your hands could tell all the scenes through which they have passed, it would be a tragedy eclipsing any drama of Shakespeare, mightier than King Lear or Macbeth.

Number One; And How to Take Care of Him. By Joseph J. Pope, M.R.C.S., L.S.A. Published in Funk & Wagnalls' (10 and 12 Dey Street, N. Y.) Standard Library. Paper, 15 cents. William Briggs, sole agent for Canada.

A series of talks on the art of preserving health. They are marked by sterling common sense and an evident mastery of sanitary science. These "talks" are meant for the people, and are on every day matters of the very utmost consequence to all, and regard to which ignorance is almost a crime. Such subjects as Diet, Dress, Ventilation, Exercise, are handled in a manner at once pleasing and full of instruction that is vitally important. A wide circulation of this little book is bound to insure three things: better bodies, better dispositions, better minds, and, we might add, better religion. author does not mince matters in discussing alcoholic drinks and tobacco.

WE beg to acknowledge the receipt, from an unknown benefactor, of $2.00 for Mr. Crosby's mission boat—a thank-offering. Mr. Crosby will be Canada Methodist - Number of happy to receive many such thankA Story of a Seal.

"THE seal is an amphibious quadruped.'

"Oh, come now, Aunt Emily, do not puzzle us with your hard names," cries Johnny.

"But, Johnny, a lad seven years old ought to know that amphibious means 'capable of living on land or water;' and that quadruped means 'having four feet.'"

"Oh, now I understand," said Johnny. "But does the seal have feet?"

"It has a sort of feet; but they are so wrapped up in the skin, that they are not of much use on land, except to help it to creep, after a fashion. So the seal passes most of its time in the sea, coming on shore only to bask and sleep in the sun, or to suckle its young ones. It is covered with a close thick fur and is a very good awimmer."

"But let us have the story," said Jane.

"The story is this: Once a fisherman, after harporning an old seal, found one of its young ones on the sand, and took it home. Here it became the playmate of the children, whom it seemed to love very much. They named it Blue-eyes. It would play with them from morning till night, would lick their hands, and call them with a gentle little cry, not unlike the human voice in its tone.

"It would look at them tenderly with its large blue eyes, shaded by long black lashes. It was very fond of music. It would follow its master to fish, swimming around the boat, and taking a great many fish, which it would give up without even biting them. No dog could have been more faithful, or more quick to learn what was wanted.

"But the fisherman's half-sister was a silly old woman. She had come to help nurse his wife, who was ill. This half-sister took it into her head that the poor seal would bring bad luck to the family. She told her brother that he must get rid of it.

"Weary of her teasing, he at last took the poor seal, rowed with it out into the open sea, and there, more than seven miles from the shore, threw it into the water, and then hurried home as fast as sails would carry him.

"But when he entered his cottage the first thing he saw was the faithful seal lying close beside the cradle of one of his children. As soon as it saw its master, it showed great joy and tried to caress him. But he took the seal and gave it away to a sailor, who was going on a long voyage. Two weeks afterward, as the fisherman came back from his boat, he saw the seal at play with the children.

"'If you do not kill that seal, I will kill it myself,' said the old aunt. The children began to cry. 'No, no, you shall not kill it!' cried Hans with flashing eyes. 'You shall kill me first,' cried little Jane. 'You have no right to kill it,' cried Mary, the eldest girl.
"'Am I to be ruled by these children?' said the silly aunt, turning to her brother.

"'The seal shall live,' said he: 'the children shall have their way. Your notion that the poor seal brings bad luck is a very silly notion. You ought to be ashamed of it.'

"'Hurrah!' cried Hans. 'Blueeyes, the vote is taken; you are to live, and all this nonsense about your bringing bad luck is blown away.'

"The seal began to flop about as if in great joy.

"'I shall leave the house at once," said the silly aunt.

"'Do as you please,' said the fisher-

"And so it turned out, that the only ill luck brought to the family by the seal was the departure of the cross and silly old aunt. And, if the truth were known, this was found to be a very good thing for all. The fisherman prospered, the mother of the children got well at once; and all were happier than ever before, including Blue-eyes, who now was the jolliest seal that ever played with children." *

We Shall Be Like Him.

WE shall be like Him, Oh, how rich the promise; What greater could our Father's love prepare? Few are the words, and softly are they spoken, But who shall tell the blessings hidden there?

We shall be like Him, for He took our nature, To lift us up and with His glory bless; He took our sin—Oh, wondrous condescen-

That He might clothe us in His rightcous-

He bore our sickness, fainted with our weakness,
That He might give us perfect strength

and health;
He walked with us in poverty and hunger,
To make us sharers in His boundless wealth.

We shall be like Him; pure in heart and

sinless,
But Oh, His great salvation ends not
there;
These bodies shall like unto His be fashioned,

And we His resurrection glory share.

While now in gracious love He calls us

children,
And we the royal robes in gladness wear,
Faith grasps the promise of the glorious ĭuture

"We shall be like Him when He shall appear.

We shall be like Him; raised above all

weakness,
Forever past all weariness and pain;
Even death itself shall have no power to reach us, When like our risen Lord with Him we reign.

Oh, what has earth our thirsting souls to offer, Compared with that abundant life to

How poor its pleasures and how dim its brightness,

Beside the glory of our Father's home.

Now looking forth beyond time's misty shadows,

With seers of far off ages we may sing—
I shall be satisfied when I awaken
With Thine own likeness, Oh, my God
and King."

So in the hope of bearing His dear image, Rejoicing in His precious gift of peace, His love shall keep our hearts in patient waiting,

Till we in righteousness behold His face.

Letter from Mr. Crosby, Port Simpson, B. C.

DEAR young friends, a few weeks ago I wished to make a visit to Port Essington, about fifty miles away. This was the season of the year when most of our people are away at the Naas, fishing the colachan. From this fish they make grease which they use as we would butter, only much more lavishly. Others of the people had gone to the island west of us to hunt for seal; they have often to go out of sight of land to catch them, and are much exposed to danger.

So, there being no young men home to form a crew for me, I had to paddle my own canoe with but one man with me. We had only gone ubout three miles when we were attracted to the shore by the barking of dogs, and we found two dogs with a fine large buck. I suppose they had driven him down to the water, as they often do, then kept him there. He was much exhausted, and my young friend soon had him killed and put into the cance, and as we met some parties who had been for wood, we sent part of the meat back to the folks at home as a treat, for we had not had any fresh meat for some time. On we went, the day being fine. About sixteen miles from home we met a large number of people from another village out fishing. There were myriads of fish about; they were so thick that the women walked out and took them up in basketfuls. My boy William sat in the bow of the cance and took up with his hands in a short time about two bushels. After having such fine sport and a luncheon on the beach, we went on; called at Nietlah Rotlah, where there were two of our friends sick. After visiting them we went on till dark and then camped for the night, and after a good supper and prayer we laid down for rest, for which we were ready, and no thought of bears or wolves would keep us from a good sleep that night.

Next morning at four we were up and off for a good pull before breakfast —camped by a mountain stream for breakfast—by noon we reached Inverness. This is a salmon cannery; visited some then, and off with the tide up the river; got to Essington time enough for the evening service; was warmly met by Brother Jennings and the reople; a good prayer-meeting. Saturday, spent the day visiting and meeting some candidates for baptism. Sabbath, we had a good day; preached and baptized a number of adults and children; after the evening service we went with some friends over to Aberdeen, where our little church, the frame of which was put up last fall, had blown down in a

Monday morning early, by the assistance of Mr. Dempster, we got a number of men to work, and before I left at 2 p.m. we had the wall plates up. I left in our little canoe for home; we had hard work getting down the river against a strong, headwind, but we worked on, gave a short call at Inverness, and off again; paddled all night as it was calm and we expected a headwind next day; worked till I fell asleep about 4 a.m., and my faithful boy worked on till he met a strong tide, and then got a stone and anchored the canoe near shore. Long after the sun rose we waked to find the tide had left us high and dry on the top of a rock. We had now to pay for our slumber by taking all the things out and dragging the cance down to the water, and then we got on the way again, but only to meet a strong headwind, and were obliged to put in at 8 a.m., and here we remained till afternoon. We got on again against a heavy wind and sea, about three miles further, when met the people at the herring wn again. After resting awhile spawn again. we put round the point, but the wind was so strong we had to camp for the night. The wind blew nearly all

we got into our little craft and off in a rough heavy swell.

A pull of four miles and we took breakfast, and here William nearly half filled our cance with herring spawn, for it was so thick and plentiful.

We now had to pull hard, for a strong wind came up against us, but by hard work we got home by 3 p.m., all well and glad we had made the trip.

So you see what we have to do in the way of paddling our own cance; yet it is now more difficult than it was years ago to get a crew, but still our merciful Father is so kind to us.

Dying With and Without Christ.

BY THE REV. W. B. SECCOMBE, BRITISH COLUMBIA.

On my first mission in Newfoundland, I was requested one afternoon to call and see a woman who was said to be dying. I hastened to the place and found that she had already entered upon "the valley of the shadow of death." She was a widow, about thirty years of age, and had lived all these years without a saving interest in the blood of Jesus. To her the future looked dark, dreary and hopeless. I could see that there was a terrible con flict going on within; her eyes rolled wildly in their sockets, and for a moment fixing her gaze upon me, she said, with a look of despair and in tones which I shall never forget, "Ah! it's too late now, sir; its too late!" I sat by her side, took her hand in mine and spoke to her of Him who is "mighty to save," "able to save to the uttermost," and urged her to look to Jesus as her only Saviour. Again she turned her eyes upon me and once more repeated the awful words, "It's too late now, sir, too late!" The sands of time were rapidly passing away, and soon her spirit returned to God.

Often, as I have recalled that scene. I have put up the petition:

"Lest that my fearful case should be, Each moment knit my soul to Thee; And lead me to the mount above, Through the low vale of humble love."

On my last mission in that country, I was called to witness another deathbed scene. But how different from the former. A widow about the same age lay dying of consumption; but her faith in Christ was strong, and she was not afraid to die. She had fled to Christ for refuge and laid hold upon Him as the hope set before her, and now she felt that this hope proved as "an anchor to the soul both sure and steadfast." A short time before her death she said, "O! what shall I do to praise so kind and loving a Saviour?" "Out of all the Lord hath brought me through." "I am waiting, waiting." "Jesus! Jesus!" A friend bent over her to wipe away the cold perspiration which had accumulated on her brow; and looking up, she said with an emphasis:

"I say, now the death-dew lies cold on my If ever I loved Thoc, my Jesus, 'tis now.'

Shortly after, without either a sigh or struggle, she sweetly fell asleep in Jesus. "For so He giveth His beloved sleep."

Reader, would you die as triumphantly make Christ your friend. While young in life give your heart to the Saviour. Do not put off your soul's salvation from time to time, but accept the Saviour now! "Behold, night, but towards morning it lulled, so | now is the accepted time; behold, now | village for some months.

"To-day, if is the day of salvation," ye will hear His voice, harden not your

"But if you still His call refuse, And all His wondrous love abuse, And all fils wondrous love abuse, Soon will He sadly from you turn, Your bitter prayer for pardon spurn. Too late I too late I' will be the cry-Jesus of Nazareth has passed by.'"

Saugeen Indian Sabbath-School Picnic.

An invitation having been given for all interested in having a Sabbathschool picnic to meet in the church, a large number, old and young, came, and in regular form, by resolutions moved, seconded, and carried, it was decided to have a picnic, time and place fixed on, committees appointed, and that each family should bring a basket of provisions—tea, sugar, and lemons to be provided for by a ten-cent collection.

Accordingly, we had our picnic yesterday. The weather was beautiful. The scholars, accompanied by the brass band, marched in procession from the church to the woods, where tables were erected, covered with tablecloths, ornamented with flowers, and loaded with an abundant supply of good things of various kinds. Cups, saucers, plates, knives, etc., were loaned by the Indian band for the occasion. young men and women of the Sabbathschool, assisted by some of the women, prepared and waited on the tables. Men, women, children, and babies turned out well, and being dressed in holiday attire, presented a fine appearance. The tables were filled four times, and the best of good order and good humour prevailed. The children, in regard to whom some had their fears, behaved themselves in a very creditable manner.

The band enlivened the gathering with good music. Swings were provided for the children, who made a good use of them; the young men amused themselves at football, addresses were delivered by Chief Henry, Chief John, the Superintendent of the school, and the Interpreter. The children of the Sabbath-school sung between each address. God was acknowledged in opening and closing the entertainment, by hymns of praise, prayer, and benediction. All seemed to have had a pleasent time, enjoyed themselves very much, and went home well satisfied with the picnic.

THOS. CULBERT.

Saugeen, July 22nd, 1884.

"HURRY, mamma," said a little innocent with his cut finger, "it's leaking."

Our neighbour of the Times suggests that Orillia, as well as Toronto, should hold a semi-centennial celebration this year, as it was about 1833-4 that the first white settlers made their way here. A ter-centennary celebration, however, would be more appropriate and do better justice to the early historical associations of the place. Mr. A. King, Mr. Gill, Mr. Bailey, Mr. Quinn, and others were early settlers, but their coming was antedated by another illustrious white man, by more than two hundred years. Champlain, the first pale-face to set foot on the shores of Lake Couchiching, was here in 1615. And he may fairly be said to have been a settler, for he dwelt with the Indians in their beautiful B il A Li T

S

S

A

Aı Bu Th Oh

W

An Che T An An And

A t In a The A Oh, A But W

My V That Ar And Th I hav An

The I a And On Jo

stain

he w times his h as it strick to, bu little house

" N anoth in my mothe have 1 "W whom you lil don't takean "Su

sure.

Yes, mind t anyone him to strong

persuac overcor else of craving ∞uld n

^{*} We have often seen a seal climb up into a chair, as shown in the picture, and stretch out its neck to catch fish thrown to it by its

The Ebb and Flow of the Tide.

BY MARIANNE FARNINGHAM.

I STAND on the edge of the boundless sea
Whose waters are vast and deep;
Sometimes the billows fight furiously,
And sometimes caln'y sleep;
Sometimes in their generous wealth they rise
Up to my very feet;
And now they are stretching so far away,
That I scarcely hear them beat;
But pleasures and troubles are coming thus
On the breast of the waters wide,
And I wait to see what shall be to me
With the ebb and the flow of the tide. I STAND on the edge of the boundless sea

Like a boat that is stranded I lie awhile
On the tide-forsaken shore;
The hot sun beats on the barren strand,
And, oh, that the day were o'er;
Where are my waters of blessing now?
I ask of my lonely heart,
And the joyous movement and glow of life,
In which I once had part?
But a lesson in patience is given to me
While the waters from me glide;
Though the time be long, I can wait with song song
For the flow of the freshening tide.

Oh, merry and free is the sunlit sea
When the bounding waters play,
And the rhythmic leaps of the gentle waves
Keep time to my gladsome lay;
Cheerily dancing the bright hours through,
The waters rise and fall,
And the beautiful skies in their cloudless
Look down and bless us all;
And every change is an added bliss,
While gently the waters glide,
And hope laughs out with a happy shout
On the ebb and the flow of the tide.

A terrible storm beats down on me,
And the waves are mountain-high,
In a tempest of anger they rise and shriek
To the black and frowning sky;
And I am out in the whirl and rush,
Helpless, alone, afraid.
The waves and the billows sweep over me
And how is my soul dismayed!
Oh, for a helper—a saving ark,
A haven in which to hide;
But after the storm a calm will come
With the ebb or the flow of the tide. A terrible storm beats down on m

My home is away across the sea,
Where the skies and the waters meet;
That is the land where the summers last,
And the tempests never beat.
And what of the voyage that lies between
This and the other shore?
I have a boat that is safe and strong,
And a Pilot to take me o'er;
The water is low, but soon I know
I shall see the face of my Guide,
And sail away to the happy day
On the joyous glow of the tide.

Kitty's Question.

JOHN VINCENT had been a total abstainer for nearly a year, and he knew he was the better for it. In former times, before he had signed the pledge, his home had not been so comfortable as it might; not that it was a povertystricken home like some we could point to, but there was a lack of many of the little comforts that tend to make a house cheerful and its inmates happy.

"Never," said John, "will I take another drop. I feel so much better in myself; then the children and their mother are better clothed, and yet I have managed to put something by."

"Well," answered Harry Jones, to whom John was speaking, "you do as you like, it doesn't matter to me; but don't be so sure that you will never takeany more."

"Sure?" exclaimed John; "I am sure. I have made up my mind to it."
Yes, John had quite made up his mind to it, and he did not think that anyone or anything could ever tempt him to break his resolution; he fel; strong and confident about that. He persuaded himself that he had quite overcome the liking for ale, or anything else of the kind, and that the old craving, the almost need for stimulants, could never return.

Alas! he little knew how weak he was, and how little he could depend upon himself.

Hardly a week had passed after his conversation with Harry Jones before he broke his resolution and his pledge together.

It was very wrong of his shopmates, but they, some of them at any rate, had made up their minds to persuade John to forget his pledge. They had tried it many times without success, but on the morning in question something had put him a little out of temper, and when they coaxed him to take just one glass, he took it and drank it. Poor fellow it was a bad glass for him, for it did not end with the one. As a tiger which has once tasted human blood continually thirsts for it, so John longed for another glass, and from one he went to two, and from two to more. It was a sad time for John's wife when she saw how he was, on his return home in the evening. She thought of the old days which she had hoped were gone forever. Was she to have a repetition of them? Her heart sunk within her; but she was too wise to say anything at the time. She tried to make her husband as comfortable as she could, and when he had gone to bed, which he soon did, she went into the next room where her children slept, and kneeling down, prayed to God, that He would help her husband to keep from drink in the future. And the prayer then offered in secret was rewarded openly.

When she rose from her knees, Mrs. Vincent was surprised to see her little girl Kitty looking at her with wideopen eyes.

"What were you doing, mother?" asked the little one. "Were you saying your prayers?"
"I was praying to God. Kitty."

"I was praying to God, Kitty."
"What about?" asked the little one.
"I was asking Him to give me strength," answered Mrs. Vincent, who felt that strength would be needed if her husband returned to his old courses.

Kitty said no more, but laid her head on her pillow, and was soon fast asleep. She did not, however, forget her mother's words.

A week or more passed by, and every night, notwithstanding his wife's expostulations, John Vincent came home the worse for drink.

It was Sunday morning; the church bells were ringing for service; the chapels were becoming filled, but John Vincent sat by his fireside gazing into the glowing coals.

"Aren't you coming, John?" inquired his wife. Never since he had taken the pledge had he missed going to a place of worship on Sunday.

"No," he answered; "I don't feel up to it. You go, and take the children; I shall stay at home to-day."

"Oh! John," exclaimed Mrs. Vincent, "I am sorry; shall I stay with you? I will if you are not well."

"No," said John, shortly. "I don't feel ill; but I don't feel exactly strong enough to go this morning."

Little Kitty laid her hand on her father's knee, and looking innocently into his eyes, inquired, "Did you ask God to give you strength, daddy?" John started as if he had been bitten by a serpent, but he answered his little half-gallon jar of ale. He had brought it home the night before, and had meant drinking it when he was alone, but he did not feel as if he could enjoy it now. Every time he looked at the jar, and then at the glass he had brought in, little Kitty's inquiring eyes seemed to be before him, and her question, "Did you ask God to give you strength?" came to his mind.

"Dear little thing," he said to himself, "she doesn't know I have broken the pledge. I wish I hadn't; but now I must have a little." "Ask God to give you strength" rang in his ears; the little childish voice sounded over and over again and the bright eyes haunted him.

For some time he sat; but at last he started up, and speaking out as loud as if answering a question, he said, "No, I didn't, but I will now," and fell on his knees.

For some time John remained kneeling, and when he rose he took the stone jar with a firm hand, and carried it into the kitchen and emptied its contents into the sink.

"God be tranked!" he exclaimed as the last drop disappeared. "He has given me strength, and He will again if I ask Him. And God bless little Kitty, too, for asking the question." That day was a turning-point in John Vincent's life.

It is years since this occurred, but he has never returned to his old habits. Whenever he has been tempted to break the temperance pledge, he has thought of his little one's question, "Did you ask God to give you strength?" and then he has sent up a secret prayer to God for help, and God has heard the prayer and answered it.

There are many who try to resist temptation in their own strongth. They are sure to fail; without the help of God we can do nothing.—Selected.

Cracked.

Twas a set of Resolutions,
As fine as fine could be,
And signed in painstaking fashion,
By Nettie and Joe and Bee.
And last in the list was written,
In letters broad and dark,
(To look as grand as the others),
"Miss Baby Grace, X her mark!"

We'll try all ways to help our mother; We won't be selfish to each other; We'll say kind words to every one; We won't tie Pussy's feet for fun; We won't be cross and snarly, too; And all the good we can, we'll do."

"It's just as easy to keep them,"
The children gaily cried;
But Mamma, with a smile, made answer,
"Wait, darlings, till you are tried."
And truly, the glad, bright New Year Wasn't his birthday old;—
When three little sorrowful faces
A sorrowful story told.

"And how are your resolutions?"
We asked of the baby, Grace,
Who stood with a smile of wonder
On her dear little dimpled face,
Quick came the merry answer
She never an instant lacked,—
"I don't fink much of 'em's broken,
But I dess 'em's 'bout all cracked!"

Ir is now twenty-two years since the Wesleyan Missionary Society began work in Italy. In the Rome District there are now 14 circuits and 19 Italian girl kindly—

"All right, Kitty, you go with mother; I shall be better by-and by."

When Mrs. Vincent and the children were gone, John opened a cupboard, and from a hiding-place took out a serious 10 of 1

Brevities.

"What makes the sea salt?" asked Johnny's teacher. "Because there are so many salt fish in it, ma'am," said Johnny.

"PLEASE, I want to buy a shilling's worth of hay." "Is it for your father?"
"Oh, no, it's for the horse; father doesn't eat hay !"

School Mistress: "You see, my love, if I puncture this indiarubber ball, it will collapse. Do you understand?" Child: "Oh, yes, I understand; if you prick it, it will go squash."

A POOR Irishman offered an old saucepan for sale. Some children gathered around him and inquired why he parted with it. "Ah, my honeys," answered he, "I would not be after parting with it but for a little money to buy something to put in it!"

Modest persons are not the soonest frightened. "I wonder what they will think of me," is not the inquiry of humility, but of vanity.

"How could you think of calling auntie stupid? Go to her immediately and tell her you are sorry." Freddie goes to auntie and says: "Auntie, I am sorry you are so stupid."

ONE morning one of the horses got loose Marcy came running to grandina in great excitement. "O gramma," she cried, "Nellie's going off up the road bare-headed / "Nellie hadn't any harness on.

LITTLE George, aged four, saw and heard a violin for the first time. He thought it very funny, and this is the way he described it.: "Why, mamma, I couldn't help laughing. The man had the funniest little nine. the funniest little piano you ever saw, and he held it up to his neck and pulled the music out with a stick."

"You just take a bottle of my medicine," said a quack doctor to a consumptive, "and you'll never cough again." "Is it as fatal as that?" gasped the consumptive.

Student (reciting): And — er—then he — er — went — er and — er — "
The class laugh. Professor: "Don't laugh, gentlemen. To err is human."

"YES," said Miss Cossin, "I always congratulated myself that I should improve my name when I married, and here I'm going to become Mrs. Tombs."

Bridget: "Wot's the most genteel thing for a lady as is a lady to carry in the street, Nora?" Cook: "Sure, thin, some prefers a three-volume book, but I prefers a roll of music mesilf, quite careless and easy-like.".

THERE is something exquisitely cool in a Yankee's reply to the European traveller, when he asked him if he had just crossed the Alps: "Wall, now you call my attention to the fact, I guess I did pass risin' ground."

AMY BELL, a little girl seven years old, entered the Savings Bank of Manchester, N.H., and timidly said that she would like very much to be shown around the institution as generally as was convenient. As Amy is a very attractive little maid, her request was complied with. It was a dull time of the day, and the treasurer, ex-governor Smyth, escorted her all over it, exhibited the workings of the big locks, and laughingly introduced all the gentlemen to her. When going out Miss Amy thanked them, and said: "You see, my papa has 'posited five dollars here for me, and I wanted to be sure it was in a real safe place. Thank you"—and out she marched, radiant with relief.

y, if your

ol for athrch, me, ions

ted, and cent iful. raar

the vero ded boo the ${f The}$

ıen, les. bies in earnes,

in ars, ediing proe a

nen the hileen ged

a ba fied ERT.

and

ıg.' uld his the 787

ion,

his-

no-

Mr. Mr. ers. by the

ifal

LESSON NOTES.

THIRD OF ARTER.

THEIR L MONTHS WITH DAVID AND THE to uns

B C. 1023.1 LESSON X. ISent. 7.

CONTIDENCT IN COD.

18, 3 1 14 Car Clomest, es. 4, 5.

GOLDEN TENT.

The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? Ps. 27: 1.

CENTRAL TRUTAL

God is the Salvation of all who put their tenst in Him.

DAILY READINGS.

True.-The date when this Psalm was written is uncertain. Either B.C. 1062-56 or B.C. 1623,

APTHOR. - Divid, according to the Inscrip-

Occusios, -Either when David was persecuted by Saul (B.C. 1062 1056), or before secured by said (BC, 1962) from the became king, or when David was fleeing from his son Absalom, who had rebelled against him (BC, 1923). The Psalm well expresses David steerings on efficience coasion.

HELES OVER HARD PLACES -1, Th. Lord is $u = l \cdot n^{h} t = (1 \cdot l \cdot n)$. With way to righteousis no Infibe-(1-1) is, with way to righteomers and heaven; (2) to show dangers that the might avoid them; (3) to being confort, brightness, and health. 4. The I may similar the however to Level Abide under holy and redigious inducedes, continue in worship of bod, and in communion with Him. The level of the Level The attractiveness of His character and of His works. tiveness of the character and of the works. To import — To seek to light, help, guidance. 5. Hole me at the periodon — The royal pavilion was in the centre of the army, and hence well defended. The section His of race is—The innermost recesses, the Holy of Holies, into which nothing evil can come. 10.

Who my incomed the enough me Even if this strongest and Lodiest love should From it this strong stand look love should fail. God's love win never fail. H. Track me tax ran -A prover for gui lance in the many difficult questions that arise 14. Writer to Lie - On to Him for what you need, bring your cross and trouble to Him, and then await His time for help.

SUBMETS TOR SPECIAL REPORT-27th Padm.—The Lord our light. Trouble and burdens leading us to God.—When troubles are be sauge.—How far God delivers us.—Dwelling in the house of the Lord. "The beauty of the Lord.—God's pavilion.
—Verse 10.—God's guidance in difficult questions. Past experience and assurance for the future.

QUESTIONS.

Introductory -What is a Psalm? Who wrote the 27th Psalm? Under what circumstances? About what date? What is the Golden Text? What is the Central Truth? How can hymas written so long ago be of help to us?

SUBJECT: GOD IS OUR SALVATION.

1. God is OUR SALVATION IN TIMES OF TROUBLE (vs. 1-3).—Who is the Lord? What two things is He to His people? How is the Lord our Eight? From what is God our salvation? What great enemies have we? (Eph. 6: 12). What injury would they do us? How does God save us from temp-sations? 19 Car. 19: 9.4. From the parameters. do us? How does God save us from temptations? (2 Cor. 12: 9.) From the powers of evil? (Eph. 6: 13:18) In what two ways does He save us from troubles? (Ps. 107: 6, 13: Rom. 8: 28) Is the Christian always safe? Is all this a reason for becoming Challeting. Christians?

II. GOD IS OUR SALVATION BY KEEPING US NEAR TO HIMSLIP (vs. 4-6). What one thing did Dayed desire of the Lord? What thing did David desire of the Lord? What is it to dwell in the house of the Lord? What is communion with God? How may we have it? How does trouble lead us to it? How do prayer and worship help us to commune with God? What is it to "inquire in His temple?" What is meant here by God's pavilion? By "the secret of His tabernacle?" How did David show his gratitude for God's salvation? How should we? (Rev. 5: 9-14.) we? (Rev. 5 : 9-14.)

III. 'A PRAYER FOR SALVATION (vs. 7-12). Was David conscions of his unworthiness in God's sight? What is it to seek the face of the Lord? What is the meaning of verse 10? What is meant by the Lord's way? Who will show it to us? (John 14: 6.) Why should we pray for salvation? How should we pray if we would be answered? (Heb. 11: 6; Jann. 1: 5-7.) Had former prayers been answered? (v. 13.) How would this help him to have faith for the future? What advice does he give to all? What is it to wait on the Lord? Was David conscious of his unworthiness

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

1. The first need of the soul is light.

2. We are surrounded by enemies, -temptations from without, temptations from within, evil influences,—evil men, trouble, and softons.

3 God gives salvation (1) by saving us from them, or (2) by making them work our spiritual good.

4. We are saved only when we are brought

The value of church, Sabbath school, and all worship, is to bring us into communion with God. 6. Our past deliverances give us faith for the future. David knew God would help him in his contest with Goliath, because He had helped him overcome the lion and the bear.

REVIEW EXERCISE. (For the whole School in concert.)

6. Who wrote the 27th Psalm? Ass. King David after some great trial. 7. For what did he pray? Ass. To be delivered from his enemies. 8. What did he call the Lord? (Repeat the Gelden Text.) 9. What did he greatly desire? (Repeat v. 4.) What did his experience encourage others to do? (Repeat v. 14.)

B.C. -- A LESSON XI. [Sept 14.

WAITING FOR THE LORD.

Ps. 49 1-17 Committo mem. vs. 1-4.

GOLDEN TEXT.

I delight to do thy will, O my God. -Ps.

CENTRAL TRUTH.

They that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength.

Daily Readings,

Time. U David's life. Uncertain; but probably late in TITLE .- To chief musician or leader of David's great vocal and instrumental choir. Hence to be used in public worship.

PALALLE SCRIPTURE.—The last five verses are the same as the 70th Psalm. Vs. 6-8 are quoted in Heb. 10: 5-9.

Support -This has been called a Mossi, anic Palm. Three verses are applied to Christ in Hebrews — It was true of David, at its highest fulfilment was in Jesus Christ, HERES OVER HARD PLACES.—1. I waited pritently—With intense desire and longing.

2. Out of a horeible pit—Of trouble and of sin—dark, dismal, defiling, slippery, like miry clay, from which he could not escape. Established may goings—Enabled me to step firmly.

3. See it—His salvation from the horrible pit—And fear—It will lead them to reverence the God who so saves.

4. Blessed—"Oh, the blessedness," for they are many and various. Respecteth not the proud—Does not look to him for help.

6. Sucrifice and offer my—These four kinds mentioned here include all the kinds of sacrifice required of the Jews. Thou dost not desire—Thou dost not care for the outward form, but only HELES OVER HARD PLACES .- 1. I waited here include all the kinds of scerilice required of the Jews. Thom dost not desire—Thom dost not are for the outward form, but only for the love and obedience they should lead to. More cors lost thou opened—Made them ready to listen to God's word, and able to understand. 7. The Book—Of the law. It is increase—prescribed, commanded to me. 11. Withhold not—Rather thou will not withhold. hold. 14. Let them be ashamed and con-jounded—He would have all who work against God to fail in their purposes. Only by the failure, and sometimes by the des-truction, of the wicked can the world be made good and happy.

SUBJECTS FOR SPECIAL REPORTS .- The 4th SUBJECTS FOR SPECIAL REPORTS,—The 4th Pashn,—Does it apply to Christ?—The horrible pit of sin,—Waiting for the Lord.—The joy of conversion,—God's numberless mercies towards us,—The four kinds of sacrifice.—The law of God in the heart.—Speaking of God's goodness.—Wishing failure for the wicked.

QUESTIC VS.

Introductory.—Who wrote this Psalm? At what period of his life? What other Psalm is the same as the last five verses of this? Which verses are quoted in the New Testament?

Subject: The Story of a Christian Lafe.

I. Conversion (vs. 1-3).—What is it to wait for the Lord? Why do we have to wait for him? Does the Lord always help those who go to him and wait? To what does the "horrible pit and miry clay" refer? In what respects is the impenitent sinner like one in such a pit? What did God do for him? What was the new song? What do you know of the hampings of the coming a do you know of the happiness of becoming a Christian? How did the experience of one help others to become servants of God?

H. An Experience of God's Loving II. AN EXPERIENCE OF GOD'S LOVING KINDNESS (vs. 4, 5).—Who are blessed? In what respects? Name some of God's wonderful works to us. What are "His thoughts to us-ward?" What is said of their number? Why does a Christian think more of God's mercies than of his own troubles?

III. Consecration to God (vs. 6-8) What four kinds of sacrifice are named here? What is meant by God's not desiring them? What does lie desire for us? What is the What does He desire for us? What is the meaning of verse 7? What is it to have God's law within the heart?

1V. LEADING OTHERS TO THE SAVIOUR (vs. 9, 10).—Of what did the psalmist speak to others? Why do those who have experienced God's salvation desire to speak to others about it? How does this speaking

V. FAITH STRENGTHENED BY TRIALS (vs. 11, 12).—What confidence had the psalmist in God? How many and great were his troubles? How had God shown his loving-kindness and truth in them?

VI. A PRAYER FOR HELP IN THE VARIED VI. A PHAYER FOR HELF IN THE VARIED EXPERIENCES OF LIFE (vs. 13-17).—Who below could help him? What did he wish for God's enemies? Was this right? What did he wish for God's people? How did he express his own humility? Will God help all who go to Him?

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

1. Sin is like a horrible pit, -dark, dreary, narrow, terrible, unclean, hard to escape from.

2. Waiting for the Lord implies carnest persentation partient persentation.

2. Waiting for the Lord implies carnest seeking, using every means, patient perseverance, till we find Him.

3. The new song expresses new happiness, a new experience of God's love, new perception of the danger escaped, new vision of the blessedness of holiness and heaven, new joy in prayer and in the Word.

4. God's mercies are more in number, new various in kind than we can conscient more various in kind, than we can conceive.

5. God's law in our hearts makes it natural to do right.

al to do right.

6. Those who have experienced God's salvation should speak of it to others.

7. Compare the experience in this Psalm with that of Christian in Bunyan's Filgrim's Progress.

REVIEW EXERCISE. (For the whole School in concert.)

11. What is the state of sin like? Ass. A horrible pit and miry clay. 12. What is the first step in the Christian life? Ass. To be converted and saved from sin. 13. What is the second step? Ans. A new song of praise and joy? 14. What is the third step? Ans. Renewed consecration to God. step? ANS. Renewed consecration to God. 15. What is the fourth step? ANS. Leading others to the Saviour. 16. What is the lifth step? ANS. Faith, praise, prayer, and help, in the varied experiences of life.

A MAN went home the other night and found his house locked up. After infinite trouble he managed to gain an entrance through a back window, and then he discovered on the parlour table a note from his wife, reading "I have gone out. You will find the key on the side of the step."

An Entirely New List!

Books for Boys & Girls.

Famous Boys and How they Became Great Men.

12mo, cloth. Illustrated. Pp. 290. $1,25.

Fifty Famous Women and the Lessons of their Lives.

Illustrated with numerous Wood Engravings. 12mo, cloth. Pp. 312. 90 cents.

An Endless Chain.

A New Book by "Pansy." 12mo, cloth. Pp. 497. Illustrated. $1.25.

Who Won at Last; or, Every-day Progress.

By J. T. Trowbridge. With Illustrations, 12mo, cloth. $1.25.

Adah: The Jewish Maiden.

A Story of the Siege of Jerusalem. By Agnes M. Gray. 12mo, cloth. Illustrated. $1,50.

Great Britain for Little Britons.

A Book for Children to Read to Themselves, By Eleanor Bulley. With numerous Illustrations. 12mo, cloth. Pp. 284. 81.25.

Gathered Clusters from Scripture Pages.

A Book for Parents, Teachers, and Children. By Lady Hope. Cloth. Illustrated. Pp. 182. $1.00.

Clever Boys of our Time, and How they Became Famous Men.

Dedicated to Youths and Young Men Anxious to Rise in the World. By Joseph 5
Johnson. 12mo, cloth, gilt edges.
Illustrated. $1.20.

Clever Girls of our Time, and How they Became Famous Women.

By Joseph Johnson. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, gilt edges. $1.20.

Talks With the Bairns About Bairn

By Ruth Elliott. Illustrated, 16mo. cloth. 50 cents.

Mister Horn and his Friends.

Or, Givers and Giving. By Mark Ger. Pearse. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth.

Short Stories and other Papers

By Mark Guy Pearse. 12mo, cloth. Illie-trated. 75 cents.

Any Book in this List mailed post-fine on receipt of Retail Price.

WILLIAM BRIGGS

78 & 80 King Street East, TORONTO.

C. W. COATES, S. P. HUESTIS

Montreal, Que. Halifax, N.