Editorial Topics.

MR. SYMOND'S LETTER. In another place we publish a letter from the Reverend Herbert Symonds, Rector of Ashburnham, and formerly Second Professor in Divinity at this University. The letter refers to the motion in favour of the federation of Trinity University with the Provincial University under the Federation Act of 1887. The motion was introduced by Mr. Cortez Fesenden, of Peterborough, and seconded by Mr. Symonds. It is needless to say that the case was presented by these two able and distinguished gentlemen with the greatest skill and the greatest force. Indeed, it is safe to add that the question could not have been better handled. Everything was said that could be said, and said, too, in the best possible way. The evident earnestness and sincerity of Mr. Symond's remarks made them all the more impressive. But, as everybody now knows, the motion was not only decidedly defeated, but defeated in such a manner that the question of federation is forever laid at rest. We do not pretend to deny that in theory the scheme may have some redeeming or even attractive features—it must be a precious bad theory that has not something good about it—but even here very little can be said in its favour which cannot be quickly and easily offset by a serious objection; whilst any consideration of details shows how impracticable the whole matter of federation becomes. This was abundantly and irresistibly shown in the splendid speeches of the Provost and Professor Clark. With respect to the conflicting cries at our annual dinner, to which Mr. Symonds seems to attach considerable importance, but which were really of very little significance, we have to state that any motion in favour of the obliteration of this University, the loss of its identity, the throwing away of its Charter, the abandonment of its buildings, its traditions and ideals,— any motion, we say, in favour of this, were it brought before our students to vote upon, would be as overwhelmingly defeated and as completely crushed as was the motion brought before Convocation at the recent general meeting.

TRINITY'S STRENGTH.

When we noticed that the subject of Federation was among the matters proposed for discussion at the Annual Meeting of Convocation, we were at first impressed with the uselessness of considering the question when the result was foreseen by everyone. It was doubtful whether the time could not be more profitably employed. But the value of the discussion is now apparent, though quite other than that intended by those who brought the matter before the meeting. It opened the eyes of all present to the power of the peculiar forces which lie behind our University. Instead of exposing any weakness in Trinity's position and educational work, the discussion brought into prominence every evidence of her strength, her increasing hold upon the country, the thoroughness with which her chief work is performed, and the steadfast way she clings to the aims and ideals of her illustrious founder. Trinity's strength is found in the great moral and religious purpose which underlies and animates her scheme of education,—the purpose which answers the question why Trinity was founded and why it lives to-day. This purpose appeals to the heart and to the imagination. It is irresistible. The country cannot afford to have Trinity's influence in any way curtailed or hampered. Not one of the links which unite her to the life of the nation must be severed. How close and how strong those links are will one day be seen and fully recognized. Meantime all Trinity men, "past and present"—and they are now a goodly number, must make the people feel that our Alma Mater has a controlling happy future opening before her, whose early morning twilights already kindle in the passing hour.

CHURCH JOURNALISM. Next to Federation the subject which gave rise to the most animated and interesting discussion at the Convocation meeting was THE REVIEW. It was curious to note how various were the opinions expressed, and how confused were some of the notions entertained respecting University journalism. We may say in confidence that it was really quite painful to think what a very bad paper THE REVIEW would become should some of these opinions and notions be carried out as desired. One or two of our critics were rather severe, but as they apologized for their "hasty remarks," and cheerfully admitted that they "didn't know very much about the matter," we did not gain much by their criticism. One thing was definite, however, and that was the desire on the part of several speakers to transform THE REVIEW into a Church Journal. Now such a thing is obviously impossible. But we quite sympathize with this desire. It is but one more sign of how greatly a good Church paper is needed in Canada,—a paper that should be a credit rather than a reproach to the Church; a paper broad as the Church is broad, reflecting all that is brightest, purest and best in the Communion; a paper that should be a help rather than a hindrance, a guide rather than a follower, a force making for unity and righteousness rather than discord and jealousy. There is no such paper in Canada to-day, and great is its need. There ought to be and therefore there can be such a journal. It is now that Churchmen throughout the Dominion should make a determined effort to establish a paper worthy of our country and worthy a clientele extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The consolidation of the Church in Canada makes this clientele now a possibility.

THE DANTE LECTURES. The public lectures on Dante given by Professor Clark on Saturday afternoons during the last six weeks call for more than ordinary mention in THE REVIEW. As the limited space at our disposal prevents even a resume of the lectures being printed in these columns, we are especially glad to note that our enterprising and excellent contemporary The Week has been fortunate enough to secure notes for publication from Dr. Clark himself. Good as these notes are, however, they give but a small part of what his audience enjoyed, for the lecturer's charm of manner and impressive reading of Dante cannot be reproduced in type. The men who are qualified to give a series of lectures on this great poet are few, but "our Professor" is easily among the number. It is a big task, and it was performed with that ease and grasp which mark all that Dr. Clark undertakes to do. That the audience each afternoon should have been so large and so attentive is not only a tribute to the lecturer's gifts, but a telling indication of the intellectuality of our citizens. For Dante is not an "easy" poet; the deepest questions of the then philosophy and theology are discussed in the "Divina Comedia." The lectures were delivered at the instance of S. Hilda's College, and the proceeds—a goodly sum—have been placed in its exchequer. The undergraduates of that College attended in full force. It is to be regretted that we cannot say the same of Trinity. But then, of course, Dante is as nothing when compared with football.

NOTES.

TRINITY'S public lectures, which for so long a time have been one of the chief events of the mid-winter term, should never have been allowed to cease even for one season. Another institution's actions does not concern Trinity. The constituencies are very different. We hope that steps have already been taken to provide a course of these lectures for next term, and that the best men available are on the list. As we suggested before, Professor Rigby should be asked to lecture on English Humourists.

A MEMBER of the staff of this paper, whilst in San Francisco recently, had the pleasure of meeting an old graduate of Trinity University in the person of Mr. C. W. Mortimer, now a barrister-at-law and the British Vice-Consul at Los Angeles. Mr. Mortimer is a man who has the courage of his convictions, and on one or two occasions has excited the wrath of the Californians by telling them what he thinks of the country and its affairs. The truth of his remarks was admitted, but that did not signify; "it was injudicious to publish the truth about California; it would prevent immigration and discourage the new arrivals." And so on. But Mr. Mortimer holds his own, and is very popular in spite of his criticism. He had many kind things to say about THE REVIEW, to which he has been a subscriber since its inception. We have to thank Mr. Mortimer for a late copy of the United States Consular Reports, containing some interesting articles on Australia.

UNCLE SAM AND THE HAWAIIANS.

BY CARTER TROOP, M.A.

A CERTAIN romantic interest has always surrounded the Kingdom of Hawaii. There is now added a decided political interest: the American Government has been asked to annex Hawaii, and after considerable delay has finally declined to do so. A brief consideration of the present state of the Islands and of the movement in favour of annexation may be of interest to some of the readers of THE REVIEW.

The steamer Miowera, by which I was returning from my recent visit to the Antipodes, ran on the reef near Honolulu on the night of October 2nd, where she has been a fixture for the past seven weeks. I am glad to say that she was successfully floated about the middle of this month, and has sustained no serious damage. Her passengers were detained at Honolulu for ten days, waiting for a chance to get to Vancouver or to San Francisco. I was fortunate enough to possess one or two letters of introduction to some Honolulu people, and my stay there proved most enjoyable. I took advantage of the opportunity thus afforded to gain some knowledge of the condition of the place and the people, and of the political complications brought about by the dethronement of Queen Liliuokalani and the establishment of the Provisional Government.

The Sandwich Islands, forming the Kingdom of Hawaii, are situated near the middle of the Pacific Ocean, about half the distance from Vancouver that they are from Sidney and from Canton. Seven islands of the group are inhabited, and the total population is nearly 100,000. Taken altogether, there are almost as many Chinese and Japanese as there are natives, the exact number being: Chinese, 15,300; Japanese, 12,360, and natives, 34,430. There are about 9,000 Portuguese. Add to these 6,000 half-castes and 7,000 Hawaiian-born foreigners, as well as 2,000 Americans and 1,000 Englishmen, together with a slight sprinkling of Frenchmen, Norwegians and Polynesians, and you get about as mixed a population as it is possible to find. Of this heterogeneous mass the Chinese and Japanese are alone excluded from the privilege of voting. There are only 13,600 voters in the Kingdom, of which 8,700 are natives and 2,000 are Portuguese. The American voters, who "run" the place, are only a little over 600, yet 74 per cent. of the sugar plantations are in their hands. The natives themselves do not possess one per cent. of the sugar estates. Neither are they participants to any appreciable extent in the coffee and rice traffic, nor in the fruit-growing industry. The land, too, is slipping from them, and they themselves are disappearing from off the face of the earth, for their numbers grow less and less every year.

Last January the Americans of Honolulu came to the conclusion that the annexation of the Hawaiian Kingdom to the United States would be greatly to their advantage. The American minister, one Stevens, agreed with his fellow countrymen, and thought this the opportunity of his life. But he discreetly remained in the distant background, visible only to the eyes of his compatriots.

The method of procedure agreed upon by a committee nominated to lead the revolution was that the Governmental machinery should first be seized upon, the Queen forced to abdicate, a Provisional Government formed, and a delegation despatched forthwith to Washington to invite Uncle Sam to take full possession for ever of the Hawaiian people and their country. The only obstacle to the carrying out of this nice little scheme was that not more than 600 voters out of the 13,500 wanted any change. "How are we to force our views on the 12,000 who oppose us?" anxiously enquired the would-be revolutionists of Stevens. That great man smiled. "Is not our ship of war the Boston in harbour? I shall land the marines and sailors. Go a-head. I'll protect you." Then the committee waxed exceedingly brave, and early one morning they marched to the Governmental buildings under the protection of the Boston's crew and turned out everybody there and put their own followers in the vacant chairs. The Queen was then forced to step down and out. She did so under protest and to avoid bloodshed, saying she would appeal to the American President. The officious Stevens pretended that he had the marines and sailors landed only to protect American property, and that it was not till the Provisional Government was formed and in possession of the Islands that he intimated his recognition of the new Government. It is quite clear, however, that the revolution was only successful because the revolutionists were supposed to be supported by the American Minister and his ship of war. It is quite clear, too, that the Committee knew beforehand that Stevens would at once recognize the Provisional Government as soon as it was formed. They knew more than this: they knew perfectly well why the marines and sailors were landed from the Boston. It is ridiculous for them to pretend otherwise. They would have been cut to pieces by the Queen's followers in ten minutes, were the natives not intimidated by the presence of Uncle Sam's warriors. It should be remembered, also, that had the Queen guessed that Stevens was acting without authority from Washington she would not have abdicated, and the revolution would have been only a rebellion. It was the fear that the man-of-war then in port would speedily be followed by others, and that it was useless for the tiny kingdom to fight against the big republic—it was this fear that took the heart out of the Queen and stayed the hand of her champions.

So much for the revolution. The Provisional Government has been strong and its administration successful. Its strength has been in its able President, Mr. Sanford Dole, and in the fact that two American ships of war have been at Honolulu ever since the revolution. The natives regard these ships as the protectors of the Government, and so they have been. There is no denying it. Had they left for a day the Provisional Government, and everything and everybody connected with it, would have been wiped out of existence in the twinkling of an eye.

Stevens has got the American Government into a very pretty mess over this matter, and though they have long since recalled him, and now openly and emphatically repudiate and disavow all his acts whilst in Honolulu, they are yet morally responsible for the present complications, and should do everything that is possible to compensate the Queen and her people for the humiliation and distress brought upon them by the acts of the American Minister. The news of Queen Liliuokalani's restoration to the throne and the dismissal of the present Ministers of State is now expected at any time. It has been the object of the Queen's enemies to magnify her political errors and to cast suspicion upon her morals, so as to make her hateful in the eyes of the people. But the Queen's character, whilst it may not be exactly spotless, is by no means as bad as her opposers would try to make out. This opinion I found corroborated by one of the most prominent citizens of Honolulu, who knew Her Majesty personally. I may add here that arrangements were in progress for me to have the privilege of an interview with the Queen, but our sudden departure from Honolulu four days earlier than expected made it impossible. The British Minister, an estimable old gentleman with a weakness for red tape, is closely connected with native royalty, his son having married one of the pretty maidens of the family. It will be at once seen that this marriage further complicates the political situation, for the British Minister's desire to have the Queen restored is thought to be far from disinterested.

THE BATTLE OF HIGH PARK.

(From our Special Correspondent.)

CERTAINLY 11 o'clock seemed a little late to start from College, but the Dragoons were not to leave till 10, so I was sure I should not lose much of the game.

I went along Bloor street, which was soft enough for galloping, and found the advanced posts of the defending force, Q.O.R., at the north of High Park. Riding on rapidly in the direction of Lambton Mills, I saw in the distance a gleam of red coats, and presently noticed a dragoon peering cautiously round the corner of a plantation, carbine in hand, which seemed to intimate that the advance was beginning, and in fact the red coats were just advancing along Dundas street in column. But here's a Q.O. 'cyclist whom a dragoon is bringing in captive: first blood for the attacking force! I watched the advance guard push on into Toronto Junction, and the Dragoons dropping back one by one, while one regiment marched southwards towards the lake, and then rode on to see what the defenders were about. Presently with the noise of an excited set of fire-irons, a couple of troopers of the Body Guards appeared; their blue uniforms shewed they were the scouts of the Q.O., and their horses seemed to have come lately from the plough. Meanwhile the foremost red coats were showing in the street, peering round houses and fences, and a couple of Dragoons and Body Guards gazed at one another at a distance of some 200 yards, but didn't waste any powder, which we could not understand, until the blue troopers, muttering that they were going to charge, turned and fled, and the Dragoons as they came by told us that what they wanted was to catch hold of their bridles. The bush was now filling with red coats, though they didn't shew much. They crept along the hollows very cleverly, as a Body Guard trooper found out. He was gazing into the bush across a little hollow when the shouts and jeers of the attendant small boys revealed to him the fact that he was being stalked by three Hamilton men who had reached a bush just below him. He put spurs to his horse and went. The two skirmishing lines came into action first in the bush just north of High Park. We could see the red coats—13th, I believe—creeping around and lying down to take cover, but the Q.O. exposed themselves most gallantly to their fire—standing up and blazing away openly, ably supported by a few small boys with crackers. The crowd was so thick that had it not been for the flashes of their rifles the defending force might have been unnoticed among the spectators; hence, perhaps, their reckless bravery. Under such circumstances it would require a wonderful stretch of imagination to reproduce the conditions of actual warfare. The Q.O.R. now fell back into the Park and began firing volleys, retiring from one ridge to another, all across the open ground, as the enemy came on in superior numbers.

During this operation the red troops must have been nearly annihilated if ball cartridges had been used, as they stood up most conspicuously over and over again at a range where it would have been hard to miss. At the hill where the swings and houses are a stand was made, and volley after volley was poured into the crowd mostly—from both sides.

Meanwhile the 48th had marched down to the lakeshore on the west of Grenadier Pond, and were trying to get possession of the road and take the position in the flank. Here a few of the Rifles were occupying the high ground inside the Park, while others had thrown up a shelter of sand bags commanding the road, from which they poured a destructive fire into the Kilties, who were lining the railroad and perfectly exposed to their aim, until the Umpire rode in and put them out of action. However, the beach was full of Highlanders, hidden behind the road fence, whose superior numbers, I suppose, told, as before long the sand bags and road were abandoned. The main body of the Rifles was now hotly engaged with the Grenadiers on the east of the Indian Road, with their ambulance tent pitched in a hollow behind the fight, and their bandmen similarly situated, keeping themselves warm with a bonfire. The rest were holding two or three hills near the Park gate, and the enemy, who had by this time occupied the ridge across the marsh, were popping at their flank, and while a strong force took possession of other ridges right in front of the defenders. Here the contending forces lay and poured volleys into one another for some time at marvellously short ranges until "cease firing" was sounded, and both sides formed up amicably in the Indian Road, preparatory to marching back to the Exhibition Grounds for the final march past. In actual warfare victory would have remained with the side who knew best how to take cover and exposed themselves least to the enemy's fire at long ranges, which was practically disregarded, as well as short. As it is, our soldiers showed that they were well in hand in spite of the artificial surroundings which must handicap them on a public holiday, and gave a fine display to the admiring crowds of their fellow-citizens.

*"THE HEAVENLY TWINS."

NOVELS written with a purpose are, as a rule, a nuisance when these are written by a woman they are almost always such, and when the purpose has anything to do with the movement for the so-called "emancipation of women" their publication should be subject to severe penalties; yet here we have a book containing all three objectionable features which we are not prepared to put under this condemnation. It may be taken as the exception which proves the rule. Few of our readers probably knew the name of Madame Sarah Grand, though she had been before the public already with her novel Ideala, until she leapt into sudden fame by writing one of the two novels of the year. We do not include Catriona.

The "Heavenly Twins" is long, and grows somewhat tedious towards the close, but we fancy no one will begin it without finishing it sooner or later.

That the writer has the utmost faith in the power and influence of women is clear from such passages as these:

"Women, after a hard battle, secured for themselves their own higher education." "Dear, how rapidly reforms are carried out when we take them in hand ourselves." "All the spiritual power is ours." Or, again, in answer to the question, "I want to know where the true spirit of God is?" "I can tell you," Ideala answered fearlessly. "It is in us women. We have preserved it and handed it down from one generation to another of our own sex unswayed." Generally throughout the work there is the idea that the world has gone altogether wrong while managed by men, and that it is time for the women to take it in hand and put it straight. The special object of the work, however, is to claim that in their own interests, and for the benefit of the race generally, women have the right to demand the same standard of purity in man that men require in women. With this object we are thoroughly at one, and also with the means suggested for bringing it about, namely, the development of public opinion among women on the subject. Time after time the writer denounces the proverb that "a reformed rake makes the best husband," and also the idea of a woman marrying a man "in order to reform him." "You find practically," says Colonel Colquhoun, "that women will marry anyone. If they were more particular, we should be more particular too." "Ah, that is our case," said Evadne; "yours and mine. If women had been more particular in the past, you would have been a good man, and I should have been a happy wife to-day."

There is very little love but a great deal of marriage in the book. There is the marriage of the pure and innocent Edith, brought up in ignorance of all that is evil, with its disastrous consequences. In this connection we have some very plain speaking—too plain, perhaps, some will think—on the physical results to wife and child from the previously immoral life of the husband. This marriage serves as the awful example. Then there is the marriage between Evadne and Colonel Colquhoun. Evadne, who is the real heroine of the book, is educated, or, rather, educates herself, differently to others, and amongst many other things gets more than a smattering of physiology. Consequently she has ideas, and very excellent ones, too, which she has an opportunity of putting into practice. She discovers on her wedding day, just as she is starting on her honeymoon, that her husband's past is not what it should have been; promptly deserts him, and when she does consent to live with him it is only as mistress of his household. She is represented as a pioneer making the long-needed protest. Readers of the book must decide whether they consider it a successful one or not. The third marriage is that of Angelica and Mr. Kilroy—arranged on the terms "Marry me and let me do as I like." This turns out better than might be expected; but then Angelica is not quite like other girls.

So far we have said nothing of the "Heavenly Twins" themselves—Angelica and Diavolo—and it is hard to know what to say. Beginning as two entirely and naughty children, for whose creation we cannot be too grateful to Madame Grand, they are with us throughout the book—Angelica especially. We should like to have quoted some of their sayings and doings, but space will not permit. The anthem of their own composition, which they sing in a brilliant company one evening, is perfect in its own way. They have their part to play in the development of the main idea of the book, a part which quite justifies the title being taken from them.

The portion of the whole work which we think the most striking is the episode of "The Tenor and the Boy." The character of the tenor is one of the most beautiful and pathetic we have found in fiction. Some of the minor characters are particularly well drawn, especially the old Duke—but we must say no more. Suffice it to say that no one can read the book without enjoyment, nor without finding material for serious thought.

**The Heavenly Twins*: A novel. By Madame Sarah Grand.

*DODO.

Is Dodo a rara avis in fiction, in life, and as a literary production? Such have been the queries upon the lips of thoughtful people, whilst the walls of London's smart set ring with applause at the book's advent, and the echo now reverberates from the less hollow environments of Canadian society.

Mr. Benson, the author of "Dodo," has undoubtedly, like his heroine, a dramatic tendency,—he has played to the gods, and won his laurel wreath, but will no other "genius snatch his quill, and save him on the brink from writing ill?"

As a fictitious character Dodo has grown familiar. Her inhuman, yet somewhat irresistible, type, such as Col. Enderby's Wife, and the "Lou" of Mrs. Ward's creation, seems to please and interest popular taste. Even women do not shrink from a heroine who has not even the common decency of maternal instincts, or the pretence of it. Even men delight in rapid conversation, and applaud with gusto a rhodomontade of bright nothings, interspersed with an occasional "swear," when represented as issuing from pretty lips wreathed in the smoke of perfumed cigarettes.

This bizarre taste, to use a mild term, has its forbidding aspect, and pessimists will talk with some truth of vitiated literature and social demoralization, but a reader fresh from Mr. Benson's novel has no inclination to criticize it from a moral, immoral, analytic or synthetic standpoint. Rather is it to be judged from the simple standard of its style as effective writing, worthy of its many commendations.

From the ringing up of the curtain to exit Her Serene Highness, the book seems to clamour for praise as a brilliant and amusing society novel. The heroine poses before you, being sustained at intervals by innumerable coffees and cigarettes, as an exhaustless magazine of sound, sans sense. The rose-colored lights are always turned on, and even the shadow of a tiny bier fails to soften the lines of the soulless face or stifle the everlasting flow of balderdash.

It is one great pyrotechnic display, without an interlude of darkness in which one's overstrained sight may be shaded from the glare. In true art the laws of Chiaro-Scuro must not be ignored. Mr. Benson's overbejeweled dialogues suggest that his next production will be less original, such conversational verbiage being indicative of observation rather than thought. It is also quite within the lines of probabilities that a voluble writer without depth often produces much original nonsense.

But if the higher office of a novelist is to hand his contemporaries down to posterity, all living and "talking" representatives of their age, rather than to amuse them, then Mr. Benson's work is shorn of its dazzling effects.

It would, however, be narrow to believe the book to be a true glass to mirror the mind of the age, or to seriously suppose a social Dodo is capable of inspiring an average man with an honest devotion. Such a will-o'-the-wisp of evil impulse, alternately captivating and horrible, will not often arouse passion worth more than the nature deserved whose devices purchased it.

The limp though honest affection of the dull Jack, who knew her, in contrast to the ardent love of a duller Chesterford, who did not, proves that Mr. Benson had no strong desire to convince you on this point, and furnish material for a moralistic research. Still we would prefer, even in books, not to remodel the words of the marriage vows into "I promise to cajole, amuse and adorn your house until you bore me."

As a social type we hope Dodo is a rara avis, an elongated shadow of one of the smart set upon whom the author focussed the light of his genius,—a tenantless form, through which no soul's breath has passed,—a fact admitted with blasphemy and pathos by the heroine when an ideal thought is suggested by her lover.

The minor "persons" of the social drama are each representatives of the foibles of their class, and serve excellently well for Mr. Benson to illuminate by his search light of criticism. His art jargon is distinctly clever, and that noxious fungus, ennui, the rapid product of a rapid time, is caricatured with hideous fidelity in Miss Grantham, who even seeks a "sad little emotion." Mrs. Vivian, the chief embodiment of morality and commonsense, is clad in dull gray, and addicted to slums.

The name of Dodo is no misnomer. A simpleton, as far as her own happiness is concerned, a bird too hard for "human daily food," wingless, unable to rise above the lowest ideals of life.

We trust she is extinct in species socially, and that her only preserved record will be found in Mr. Benson's literary achievement, that having gone up as a rocket will come down as a stick.

To the EDITOR THE TRINITY UNIVERSITY REVIEW.

SIR,—Will you kindly allow me to make just one or two remarks in reference to the late General Meeting of Convocation.

The object that Mr. Cortez Fessenden and I had in view, in moving the resolution we did, was rather the expression of our opinions than the securing of a vote. We were in the position of sowers rather than of reapers, and one does not expect to sow and reap in the same day.

Unless I am labouring under a misapprehension, the loud applause that greeted the conclusion of Judge Macdonald's eloquent period in regard to Federation was due more to the clever way in which it was turned than to any particular point it contained. On his first reference the cries of "yes" and "no" were pretty evenly divided, and one knows how easy it is for an accustomed speaker to so appeal to the one side as to rouse such a response as shall appear unanimous.

However I do not deny the fact that the verdict was decidedly against—not the theory, which was pretty well conceded by Mr. Worrell—but the practicability of Federation at present. And this being the case, I desire to warmly thank all my old, and some new friends at Trinity for the kindly reception they have accorded me on the occasion of recent visits. It is not always easy to distinguish between being "agin the Government" and against the country.

THE LITERARY INSTITUTE.

THE meetings of the Literary Institute are more than usually interesting this term.

There seems to be a decided disposition on the part of the members to take the Institute seriously, and to do their best when they are asked to contribute to the literary programme.

We hope the disposition will grow in strength. The debate on strikes, which took place at the sixth meeting, Nov. 17th, showed what the men can do when they like. The discussion from the floor of the house was taken part in by seven or eight men, and was productive of no little information on the subject. The speeches, too, did the men credit.

The fourth regular meeting was held on Nov. 3rd, the 2nd vice-president, Mr. Mockridge, in the chair. The debate for the evening was—"Resolved, that a legislative union is to be preferred as a form of Government to a Federal."

Mr. Troop's speech was good, and showed that he had full command of his subject.

Mr. Cattanach should take every chance he can get to speak in public. He has some of the essentials of a good public speaker, but he needs practice.

Mr. Osborne has a copious vocabulary, which he uses lavishly (not only in the debates, be it remarked), and speaks brightly.

The affirmative side came off victorious.

Fifth meeting, Nov. 12th, Mr. Chappell, B.A., in the chair. The essayist was Mr. Gwyn, B.A. He read a carefully thought out paper on "Athletics and Exercise as a means of producing health, both of mind and body."

The debate was on the moot question of prohibition. Mr. Little and Mr. Robertson, for and against, respectively, made the best speeches.

The chief business of this meeting, however, was the reception of the resignation of the Secretary, Mr. C. H. Carleton, B.A.

It will be remembered that at the last election Mr. Carleton was unanimously elected to this office. His unfortunate illness in the summer has made it necessary for him to resign without ever having fulfilled the duties of his office. After his resignation had been accepted, a vote of thanks was moved and carried to Mr. DePencier, '95, for having performed the Secretary's duties since the term commenced.

Mr. E. C. Cattanach, '94, was nominated as a candidate for the office, and as there was no opposition, he was declared to be elected unanimously.

We are sure that this selection is wise. Mr. Cattanach has shown that he is thoroughly conscientious in his undertakings. The Dramatic Club will not soon forget his really stupendous labours last year, and the Dinner Committee feel that a great part of the success of this year's dinner is due to their energetic and painstaking convener.

Sixth meeting, Nov. 17th, the 2nd vice-president in the chair.

Mr. Carter Troop, M.A., read an essay which showed his command of graceful descriptive English. His "First Impressions of Australia" were most interesting and entertaining.

The debate was the one we referred to at the commencement of this little record.

"Resolved, that strikes are to the best interests of the community." On the affirmative, Mr. Seagar, '95, and Mr. Little; on the negative, Mr. Chappell, B.A., and Mr. Bell, '96.

All their speeches were good, and the interest taken in the debate was, as we have before noticed, shown by the fact that so many members took part in the discussion which always follows our debates.

THE ANNUAL DINNER.

It becomes increasingly difficult, as year after year of success goes by, to say anything about the annual dinner that will not have the stereotyped sound of a newspaper report written up beforehand. Nevertheless it is one's duty and pleasure to make the attempt; but the chronicler must plead, as an excuse for possible failure, the melancholy poverty of the vulgar tongue in the matter of adjectives.

Tuesday, the 14th, then, was the day, and Convocation Hall (surely the most versatile Convocation Hall in the world) the place. The guests numbered 120, and if the "Autocrat's" little couplet which appears on the menu card be true, then verily the dinner was a mighty feast. Says he—

"The true essentials of a feast
Are only fun and food."

These "true essentials" were the most conspicuous constituents of the dinner of 1893.

We will refrain from going into ecstasies over the "feed" itself. To do this might be vulgar; it would certainly be tantalizing to those of our readers who weren't there. Our chief business shall be to give some little account of the speeches, which always are a most important element.

The Chancellor's speech in proposing the Queen was just what it should have been, and exactly what we expected from an eloquent man, loyal from head to foot.

Our youngest Fellow, Mr. C. S. MacInnes, M.A., in a clever and witty speech, proved how happy was the chance which entrusted to him the toast of "The Ladies." Mr. J. C. H. Mockridge, B.A., replied, and his remarks had certainly the merit—if merit it be—of being brief.

Then the toast of the evening, that of Trinity, was proposed in a most happy speech by His Honour Judge MacDonald, of Brockville.

Archdeacon Evans, of Montreal, in replying, remarked that this was his first visit to his Alma Mater for 25 years. The Reverend the Provost also replied to this toast.

"The City of Toronto" was proposed by Mr. J. A. Worrell, Q.C., and Canon Cayley replied very cleverly.

The Rev. G. H. Broughall, in behalf of Trinity College School, Port Hope, replied to the toast of affiliated colleges.

Dr. Edward Martin, Q.C., proposed the Faculties, nor did he say a word too much in their praise, as the applause which greeted his remarks showed.

The ever popular Registrar replied. His speech was brimful of fun and bubbling over with wit.

After the applause had subsided, cries of "Dean!" "Dean!" "Rigby!" came from all parts of the Hall, and were continued till the object of the cries arose with the remark that when Trinity men made up their minds to get anything they usually got it.

In many respects the Dean's speech, though impromptu, was the best of the evening.

That old time agitator and objector, the predecessor of our present manager, yclept the Reverend Charles H. Shutt, proposed College Institutions.

Henry Neville Sanders, '94, replied, and there was much point and wit in his remarks.

The toast of Sister Institutions was proposed by Mr. Carter Troop, M.A., in his happy and graceful style; and representatives from Toronto University, Queen's, Osgoode Hall and Wycliffe College responded.

Mr. Stewart Houston's speech in proposing the Freshmen was one of the cleverest that were made; the reply of Mr. Bell, '96, was, for a freshman, excellent.

Glionna's orchestra supplied the music, helped out by songs from Professor Huntingford and Mr. Carter Troop, to say nothing of numerous choruses from time to time interpolated.

After all this how can one sum up as one should do, to top off with, as it were?

Words fail. The dinner of '93 goes down now into the annals of College history, like each of its predecessors, as the greatest and the best.

THE CONVOCATION SERVICE.

ON Monday, November 13th, at 8 p.m., the annual service in connection with the meeting of Convocation was held in the Chapel. Of course the Chapel was crowded—it always is on these occasions.

The service, from a musical point of view, was the best we have had for years. The choir consisted of about twenty men, and they did themselves much credit.

The Revs. C. L. Worrell and Canon Mockridge read the first and second lessons respectively, and the Rev. John Ker, D.D., rector of Grace Church, Montreal, preached a most able and practical sermon. His subject was prayer, and he endeavoured to show how all too little was the attention given to this great help to the spiritual life.

THEOLOGICAL AND MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

A GENERAL meeting was held in the Divinity Class Lecture-Room on Friday, October 20th, at 2.30 p.m., the Rev. Professor Cayley in the chair. There were present the Rev. H. O. Tremayne, J. S. Broughall and H. H. Bedford-Jones and a fair number of students.

The chief business consisted in receiving reports of work done during the summer vacation. It is gratifying to note how the list increases year by year. The following gentlemen have been taking duty: Mr. DuMoulin, B.A., at Belleville; Mr. Francis, B.A., at Port Carling; Mr. Dwyer, B.A., at St. Jude's, Toronto; Mr. Chilcott, B.A., at Stonewall; Mr. Mockridge, B.A., at St. Matthias', Toronto; Rev. R. Seaborne, at St. Martin's, do.; Rev. G. W. De Pencers, at St. Alban's, do.; Mr. Baynes Reed, at West Toronto Junction; Mr. Little, at Humber Bay; Mr. Madill, at St. Clement's, Leslieville; Mr. Paine, at Simcoe Island; Mr. Spencer, at North Hastings; Mr. Card, at Warkworth; Mr. Swayne, at Warren; Mr. Buchland, at Norway; Mr. Laurence, at Minden; Mr. Fenning, at Claireville; Mr. Browne, at Dale; Mr. Rutherford, at Norval; Mr. Seager, at Goderich; Mr. McLennan, at Listowell; Mr. Davidson, at Fairbank.

Mr. Fenning presented a report of the work that was being done by Rev. J. G. Waller in Japan, together with a financial statement, from which it appeared that Trinity University had contributed quite a large sum towards the support of his native catechists, etc.

It was also decided at this meeting to send two delegates to represent the Association at the annual conference of the Church Students' Missionary Association, to be held in Montreal next January.

An open meeting of the Association was held in Convocation Hall on Monday, November 6th, when the chair was occupied by the Provost, and addresses were given by the Bishop of Japan and the Rev. Marazo Kakuzen. The Hall was well filled with an enthusiastic audience. Mr. Kakuzen alluded feelingly to his sojourn at Trinity, and stated that he had been led by his experience here and at Port Hope to decide to enter the ministry. He carries back to his native land the good wishes of all with whom he has ever come in contact.

Bishop Bickersteth's speech was deeply interesting. He pleaded for more clergy to go out and assist the Rev. J. G. Waller in his work at Nagano, and also enumerated the many works of usefulness which could be done in Japan by all sorts and conditions of churchmen and churchwomen. Trinity ought to be well to the fore in supporting Canadian missionaries in Japan, especially as the present interest which our Church takes in that portion of the mission field had its rise in a similar meeting to the above, which was held in the College five years ago. A substantial sum was collected for the Japan missions at the close of the meeting.

COLLEGE CUTS.

RIISING above the echo of rolling lemon-soda bottles in the Upper Western we hear a faint rumour of a new effort on the part of the Missionary and Theological Society. It is none other than that the growing strength of this Society may soon be able to support a paper of its own—that, indeed, the advance the Society has made almost needs some organ in which to express itself. For some time past it has been demanding more space in THE REVIEW, and the editors, trembling at the recollection of the reign of Professor S. on the staff, have not found space for that learned gentleman's reviews of theological books. A second paper would not be amiss for such reviews, as well as to define and chronicle the work of the Society, and to inform clergymen needing such assistance where they can obtain men for Sunday duty. Perhaps at first it would be better that the paper should come out as a supplement to THE REVIEW, but we feel sure that ere long it would be able to stand alone, and form a second University paper. We have long tickled our readers' ears with notes of College Spirit, but here we have something akin to University Spirit. It would be a great benefit to both parties that Divinity men and Arts' men should each have an organ to give expression to their facts and fancies. May this rumour materialise!

The Dramatic Club presented its annual report to its members on Friday, November 10th. The 'bus man being forced to retire by reason of his having left Trinity to gain fame at Osgoode, read his report, and proposed H. B. Gwyn, B.A., as business manager, who was unanimously elected. E. C. Cattanach was elected stage manager, H. C. Osborne assistant, J. C. H. Mockridge, B.A., musical director, J. D. McMurrich master of properties, E. P. O'Reilly assistant. It was decided to make the subscription 50c. to join and 50c. a year. The Club have $117.64 in the bank ($100 of which is to be given to the Gymnasium fund), and scenery, etc., to the value of $25. The Committee hope to give two performances—one in the Grand Opera House about the end of January in aid of the Athletic Association, and another in the Convocation Hall after Lent. The members are admitted free to all performances.

Jealous as we always are for the appearance of our College, we must protest against the material used for curtains in the Modern Language lecture-room. Why, even the Japanese creeper that the Authorities have at last consented to call to their aid in hiding the nakedness of the Western, blushes in all its leaves, and cowers down under the window-sill at the agony of colour depicted in Eaton's Best at 8c. the yard (on Fridays). Of course we are well aware that St. Hilda much prefers gazing enraptured on the wags disporting themselves on the Campus to listening to Racine or Heine, and therefore quite sympathise with M. Young in his endeavour to fix her attention, but we hope that more harmonious curtains will be forthcoming.

Lean and hungry from the prolonged tension of essaying a classical joke, a second year man called the other day at the sanctum of the Editor of Vulgarities. In his omnivorous reading he had come across the following couplet, in which he clearly saw a hidden reference to our worthy Dean :

“Cane Decane, canis ; sed ne cane, cane Decane, De cane—de canis, cane Decane, cane.”

But the Dean has not got grey hairs. How then shift the onus of such an epithet on Spot? This it was that puzzled this second year person, and, we may add, that in his attempts at re-editing he clearly showed the imprint of Cain on his brow by barbarously trying to murder the scansion.

Mr. Nicholas Flood, who was unfortunately plucked in his first year exams last July, has, we hear, taken unto himself a partner for better or for worse. What could not be achieved in Flood may be now perhaps taken by storm, and so we hope to see him back again. Formerly when a freshman got plucked he used gracefully to retire to his native village to teach others—presumably to get plucked, too. This new departure of Old Nick's will no doubt recommend itself to freshmen when the 'Xmas exams loom up.

While on the subject of freshmen, we beg to urge Class '96 not to commit the folly of having their year photographed at large. Of late, with the increasing numbers of each first year, their class photo is beginning to assume gigantic proportions. For goodness sake let the men get groups taken that will not be too cumbersome to take with them when they leave College.

Owing to a disagreement with 'Varsity in the matter of a payment of a fifteen dollar fine, we have now the pleasure of counting in '95 a former wearer of the blue and white. We applaud his business acumen. Fifteen dollars is a great deal to pay as a fifth share in the sack of an ancient building on Hallowe'en. Why, here, for $2 and three days' vacation you can have the Fellow in Classics swarm up the rain pipe into the upper western corridor with the Fellow in Divinity—or was he Professor then?—to search under every bed for malignants. For the benefit of our readers we may offer suggestions as to how Mr. Bruce can put in his time till 'Xmas : (1) Career down the lower western on the hose reel, $1 ; (2) Carry from Hall a plate of beef, presumably for vivisection, $2 ; (3) Help Harry to a bath, $2 ; (4) Syphonise the steward, when the doctor will allow such treatment, $4 ; (5) Kick the Provost's door in, 50c. This is a mild form of recreation that, we hope, will not allow Mr. Bruce's hair to turn grey with over-excitement, “What treasure, Uncle?” “Tennis-balls, my liege.” Thus might Mr. Cattanch, when presented with a certain bill from P. C. Allan's, have exclaimed with King Henry. It appears tennis balls were ordered and charged to the Club last July when none of the men were up. A matriculant would hardly have done such a thing ; who then could have had this astounding impudence?

Complaints are being raised on all sides against the men who will persist in knocking at sported oaks. The Divine Idler must surely be very confident of his popularity if he thinks a man will be so overjoyed at his visit as to forget the energy of a life time he has had to expend in getting his oak shut. Almost always such pleasant visits could bear postponing. Of course we allow that the cause of sporting is often trivial, but whether a card party, a supper or a grind are on hand, the men should see that this unwritten rule of the College be upheld, and anyone interfering with the privacy of an oak be suitably snubbed for his crude lack of manners.

Last week the Dean was awakened by an alarm at midnight. Groping his way to the Hall with Spot holding up one corner of his robe de nuit, he encountered the Porter with candle and face of ghastly white. The noise appeared to their heated imagination as of a fall of part of the College building, but we believe it was the Sarnese Hercules, who tried a rapid transit down the stairs on his heels.

There was a curious Individual haunting the Corridors about Convocation time. Such curious ideas had he, too, about THE REVIEW being the same as Rouge-et-Noir, about Episcopon not being able to cope with the freshmen, and other points of interest. What a Parliament of wit and intelligence must Trinity have been in his time, and how sadly has Time told on her—and on the Individual, too, for where was his vaunted wit? We cannot incline to his opinion ; we imagine he was Shutt Off.

Would it not be well if the Steward would institute an examination to be passed by all gyps upon the subject of “The Nomenclature of Food?” If this could be done, we should more frequently recognize the connection between the dainties set before us and the description previously given of them. Moreover, we should no longer be invited to partake of such doubtful delicacies as “friscoes” and “quinine jelly.” (Poor fellow! he meant “quince.”)

THE FOOTBALL DINNER.

On the 21st the Annual Football Dinner was held in the Hall, with A. F. R. Martin, M.A., '92, as President of the Association, in the chair. After disposing of the sumptuous repast, in which the Steward outdid his former efforts, the men began, 'mid the fumes of tobacco, to call on J. C. H. Mockridge, B.A., '93, to take his seat at the piano. Mr. Martin then arose for the distribution of the prizes, and after a neat speech on the new institution of Games, second only to their predecessors the “Olympics,” called on the lucky winners to present themselves. As each athlete stepped up he was greeted with his class yell—that paean which excels all others in bringing College Spirit to a fever heat. McMurrich then sang a topical song of his year, which the Dean afterwards described as a Poetic Fancy, savouring strongly of Fact. It was sung to the well-known tune of “We'll all go a-hunting to-day.”

Then to the Toast of the Divinity Class, the football champions of the inter-year league, Mr. Chadwick, B.A., '93, spoke appropriately, and was followed by a song by Ballard, who sang of the Divinities and Ninety-four, the champions of the race-track. Frank DuMoulin, B.A., then, in a lengthy and sparkling speech, proposed the Faculty, to which the Dean, in his inimitable and old familiar way, responded. The toast of Ninety-four was adequately replied to by the head of that year, Saunders, and Rev. A. M. De Pencier rose in answer to “'95.” Meanwhile the challenge cup, with its three handles, the presentation of A. F. R. Martin, was wending its way round the table. It is an interesting cup this, and we hope, when space admits, to give some account of its origin in tradition. Among the guests of the evening were conspicuous Dr. Warbrick, Tremayne, Pottenger, '93, Fletcher and Carter Troop, M.A. Of these Mr. Fletcher, of the Trinity Medical College, gave some fine renderings of songs during the evening, as did Dr. Warbrick and Mr. Troop. The toasts of Captain Southam and ex-Capt. Robertson, proposed deftly by Jess Hamilton, were responded to in speeches highly characteristic. 'Mid shouts of the chorus of Frogs in Aristophanes—which, by the way, seem to have lost their harmoniousness in endeavouring to rhyme with “'96”—Reed proposed the toast of the Freshmen, to which Rodgers replied with due meekness. Beecher's topical song of the Freshmen met with great applause, as did the similar football song of De Pencier. Conspicuous on the coats of '94 were bits of the ribbon carried to victory from start to finish in the inter-year Team Race. They form very desirable badges of honour. After drinking to the Queen, the ORMAOMETH was started up, and out filed the men to dance madly a farewell Auld Lang Syne in the Main Hall. This ended the finest supper of the term.

THE LOVING CUP.

THE custom of passing round the Loving Cup at the end of a banquet is a rule of mediæval courtesy, and one full worthy of being perpetuated in these prosaic times; and, indeed, it is kept up wherever there is a cup of sufficient dignity to warrant it. The latest development of it is the Inter-year Football Cup, which did its solemn duty for the first time at the Football Supper. Every butler has his own traditional recipe for its ingredients, which is heresy to vary, and, in our own case, perhaps, it is in keeping with circumstances that the liquor should be the humble beer, simple and undiluted. Tradition has laid down certain regulations with regard to the ceremony of drinking from it, which, though they may vary slightly in different houses, point to the conditions of society in times when they were necessary, and which by their observation are a picturesque connecting link between our festivities and those of our forefathers long ago. The cup either circles round the table, down one side and up the other, or else it passes down the table, being handed backwards and forwards from side to side. But this is invariable— that no one should drink from the Loving Cup sitting down. Courtesy to the company and the ceremony itself prompts each man to rise as the cup is passed to him. Nor does he stand up alone; the man on each side stands up, too, and, where the table is narrow, the man opposite as well, so that each man in turn may pledge the company without fear of a treacherous stab beneath the arm, as with both hands he raises the big cup to his lips. Then with the napkin which is attached he wipes the rim, and with a bow passes it to his neighbour. Such is the custom, and such the reason for it, taking us back for a moment to a bygone age of violence; but we who have adopted now the graceful customs of the Loving Cup can ill afford to use it shorn of its time-honoured forms of courtesy.

SPORTS.

On Friday, Oct. 27th, a mixed team was put in the field against Trinity College School, and succeeded in scoring a victory.

The school boys worked hard, but the superior weight of the University team told heavily on them at the last, the final score being 10-0.

On Saturday, the 28th, an interesting game took place on the Campus between Trinity College School and Bishop Ridley College. The Port Hope boys were the heavier, and the effect of their weight was felt all through the match.

The T. C. S. scrimmage worked well, but shewed a disposition to break through and dribble rather than to heel out. Tucker's rushing, however, was very effective at times. Gamble and Andrews distinguished themselves at half-back, the former by his beautiful drop and place kicking, but their passing was not good. The weakness of the team is in their wings, which are not fast and do not hold at all well.

For B. R. C., Benson played a good game at half, and the forward line worked splendidly against superior weight, the wings on several occasions proving themselves too fast for their opponents.

In the first round of the inter-year series, the Divines, under Capt. Chadwick, defeated Capt. Hamilton's team of '94 by 10 points - 0.

After several postponements the teams finally lined up on Oct. 30th at 3 p.m. The game proved to be hard and well-contested, and although '94 failed to score, they were often very near their opponents' goal line. Mr. Bedford-Jones and Gwyn played excellently for the Divinity class, while in '94's ranks Hamilton, Robertson and Nelles were prominent.

Through an oversight we neglected to mention in the last number of THE REVIEW Mr. G. C. Heward's success in the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club's handicap tournament. With a small allowance of points Mr. Heward succeeded in gaining the victory over some of Ontario's foremost players. This is but one of many distinctions that Trinity's sons gain on the field of sport throughout the country.

The Executive Committee of the Athletic Association has certainly every reason to congratulate itself on the success which has attended the initiation of Trinity's annual sports.

Heretofore the steeplechase has been the only medium through which those who were fleet of foot might win the laurel wreath, and the establishing of a regular series of events is but another proof of the benefits which have accrued from the formation of the Athletic Association; in fact this is a fitting occasion on which to recognize how amply the predictions of those who foretold for it success, have been fulfilled. Dating from its organization every branch of sport at Trinity started a new life, and has continued in steadily growing prosperity.

The annual sports of 1893 were an unqualified success, the interest keen and the events well contested. It would be hard indeed to imagine a better race than the mile, and the other events were also close and fought out to the bitter end. The neat programmes which Prof. Huntingford had prepared showed six events, all of which went off without a hitch, and here again the committee shewed their good sense in deciding to have a small number of events and suitable prizes for every race.

Below is a list of the events and the times. Considering the strong wind that was blowing the length of the course, the various times will bear comparison with those of similar institutions.

100 yards—Campbell, 1st; Cattanaeh and Nelles (equal), 2nd; time, 10 4-5 secs.

Half-mile—Wadsworth, Chadwick; 2 mins. 18 secs.

Long jump—Wadsworth, Madill; 16 ft.

Mile—Chadwick, Wadsworth; 5 mins. 29 secs.

Quarter-mile—Campbell, Nelles; 58½ secs.

Steeplechase, 1¼ miles over rough country—Wadsworth, 1st; Chadwick, 2nd; Heaven, 3rd.

The championship medal for the winner of the greatest number of events was won by Wadsworth, '94, who captured three firsts and one second.

The team-race, one of the most interesting numbers on the programme, was won after a struggle by the representatives of '94, the respective quarters being run by Nelles, Cattanaeh, Wadsworth and Johnson.

The hockey rink is at last completed, and Trinity's followers of the elusive puck may now hope to have a sheet of ice suited in every particular to the game. The rink is now 52 x 26 yards, with side cushions two feet high and four foot ones at either end. Hockey at Trinity should certainly boom this winter.

We wish to give expression to the general appreciation of the tangible way in which two gentlemen have shewn their interest in the cause of College sports. Mr. A. F. R. Marten has kindly presented a beautiful cup to be contested for annually by the Divinity Class and the three years in Arts. The excellent football which has been displayed during the last few weeks in these inter-year matches is a sufficient demonstration of the benefits which must accrue from them, and the worthy president of our Athletic Association could not have hit upon a more suitable way in which to shew his interest in College institutions.

Prof. Huntingford has before this given practical illustration of his lively interest in all things Trinitarian by offering up, as it were, his body upon the field of battle, and the handsome prizes that he has presented serve but to fasten in our memories the many other services which he has rendered to the good cause.

Mr. Windrum, the well-known jeweller of King Street, also was kind and generous enough to present a prize, as well as Messrs. H. P. Davies & Co. and Mr. P. C. Allan.

THE REVIEW falls short of its duty if it does not use its influence to maintain that standard of esprit de corps of which we are so proud. We had lately occasion to take note of the non-appearance of several men of the second XV. on the occasion of an important match. A similar lapse of duty has occurred again. Whether or not the man who failed to put in an appearance at the team race on Saturday, the 18th, had a satisfactory excuse for not running, the fact remains that although he was one of the chosen four, and quite aware of the fact, he failed to give any official notice of his intended absence. Should such a thing happen again, the offender or offenders must be summarily dealt with.

For some years past it has been the custom for Trinity to play an annual game with the Toronto Football Club, and as the fates would have it, we have generally come out at the small end of the stick. This year's match proved no exception to the rule, although at half-time from the smallness of the score, 10-4, and from the excellent work of Trinity's forward line, there were numerous predictions that we would win. In the second half, however, "the scene was changed," and Toronto, through the excellent work and speed of its half-backs, piled up 21 points, while Trinity scored a lonely single. The final score thus stood 31-5. We may make special notice of the good work done for Trinity by Carter, Osler, Gwyn and Nelles.

The second match between '95 and '96 proved to be a little more one-sided than the former one had been. '95 rushed the game from the start, and although the freshmen played a hard game they were unable to avert defeat. In the last half '96 scored a try, the second year increasing their score to 29 points.

On Wednesday, Nov. 7th, before a large crowd of spectators, the Toronto University XV. defeated Trinity by 22 points to 5.

In the first half our men were treated to a series of old-time 'Varsity rushes, and tries were scored by White, Laidlaw, N. Lash and Barr. Trinity now woke up and rushed the game for a few minutes, and Butler, from a penalty kick, scored a beautiful goal at about forty yards. The score at half-time stood 20-4. Trinity started the second half savagely, and till the call of time pressed their opponents very hard, 'Varsity in this half scoring only 2 points from a safety touch. Had two three-quarters instead of two half-hours been played, the score might not have been so one-sided.

The final game of the inter-year series was played on Tuesday, the 21st, and proved to be one of the most exciting games that has ever taken place on our campus. In the first half '95 rushed matters and scored 11 points, so that they were looked upon as sure winners. However, in the second half the Divinity Class played with more determination, and finally scored a victory by 12 points-11.

It is only fair to mention that the victors were helped towards the end of the second half by a strong wind which had suddenly sprung up, and against which it was impossible to kick; but all credit should be given them for the plucky way in which they overcame such formidable odds.

PERSONAL.

WE regret exceedingly that we have to record the severe illness of Mrs. Clark, but we are glad, indeed, that she is getting better. Professor Clark has the sympathy of the whole College in his anxiety.

MR. STEWART HOUSTON, B.A., has entered into partnership with Mr. H. J. Scott, Q.C. All success to the new firm! Mr. Houston is one of our cleverest graduates, and always keeps up a close connection with his Alma Mater.

ONE of our graduates, Mr. N. F. Davidson—a hardworker for Convocation and a supporter of everything which goes to advance Trinity's interests—has been taken into partnership by Mr. Eelmes Henderson, the well-known barrister-at-law. We wish the new firm every prosperity.

BROWNED by Antipodean suns, full of strange stories of the men who stand on their heads, covered with honours, Mr. Carter Troop, M.A., is with us once more. Again we may listen to "Dandy Pat," and, again, THE REVIEW feels the hand of its master.

WELCOME home, Patsy!

THE Steward, after a distressing illness, is again presiding at the carving table. (We get our viands on time now.) A good many of us call the poor Steward everything that is bad when, sometimes, we get tired of a particular dish, or when the tart is "all off," but there is not one among us who is not honestly glad to see him back at his post in restored health.

WE are glad to welcome among us, from University College, Mr. Harry Bruce. He has quickly become acclimatized, and was playing with great gusto for '95 in the finals the other day.

THE Rev. H. V. Thompson, M.A., and the Rev. Walter Creswick, L.T., have been at the College during the last few days.

THE Rev. Prof. Clark lectured in Ottawa before the Literary and Historical Society on November 23rd.

Convocation.

THE annual general meeting of Convocation was held on the 14th inst. at Trinity, and was remarkable for being the best attended and the one which caused greatest interest among those present of all we have hitherto had. The business meeting was called to order by the Chancellor shortly after 11 a.m., the Rev. Mr. Symonds being by his side in his accustomed place as Clerk. The list of members present at the meeting was as follows : The Professors and Lecturers of the College, Drs. Mockridge, Ker and Langtry, Archdeacons Bedford-Jones and Evans, the Revs. A. J. Broughall, Canon Cayley, Canon DuMoulin, C. H. Shutt, G. H. Broughall, S. Tighe, R. Seaborne, W. B. Carey, Prof. Worrell (R.M.C.), J. C. Farthing, J. S. Broughall, Canon Tremayne, H. O. Tremayne, A. Carswell, H. S. Thompson, J. C. Roper, J. Davidson, A. Williams, T. Aborn, and Messrs. J. Worrell, R. T. Walkem, N. F. Davidson, Dr. Spilsbury, E. Martin, Cortez Fessenden, K. Martin, J. C. Mockridge, G. F. Harman, Carter Troop, Barlow Cumberland, Warren Burton, G. A. Mackenzie, Elmes Henderson, DeLaFosse, Mrs. Body and Miss Patten.

The following nominations were made of candidates for corporation :

Law—Messrs. J. Kingsmill and D. T. Symons.

Medicine—Drs. Spilsbury and Ryerson.

Arts and Divinity—Revs. Dr. Davies, A. Williams, Prof. Worrell, Messrs. G. A. Mackenzie and N. F. Davidson.

Associated Members—Judge Macdonald, Dr. Montizambert, Rev. J. C. Farthing.

The election of the officers of Convocation for the ensuing year was then proceeded with, and the following were elected :

Chairman—Mr. J. Worrell.

Clerk—Rev. H. H. Bedford-Jones.

Committee—Revs. Prof. Clark, H. Symonds, J. S. Broughall ; Messrs. Cumberland, Dr. Spilsbury and Kirwan Martin.

The report of the Executive Committee was then adopted with some discussion, not very prolonged, on several of the clauses. The most important paragraphs will be found below. Reports from the various local branches at Kingston, Hamilton and Peterborough were read and referred to the Executive Committee. After various slight changes in the constitution, made to suit some needs which have arisen, the meeting took up the subject of Federation, on a motion by Mr. Cortez Fessenden, seconded by the Rev. Mr. Symonds, the discussion of which was continued till after six o'clock, when the motion was withdrawn and the meeting adjourned.

THE following is a selection of extracts from The Report of the Executive Committee, laid before Convocation and adopted at the General Meeting :—

The Executive Committee, in presenting their sixth annual report, have pleasure in stating that the total number of members on the roll is 306. Your committee would again earnestly impress on members the necessity of doing all in their power to add to the roll of membership. It is suggested that an organized effort be made to more largely secure, in the future, the enrolment of graduates immediately after taking their degree.

The Provost and Professor Cayley attended a meeting held in Kingston on the occasion of the last session of the synod of the diocese of Ontario. At this meeting a diocesan branch of Convocation was formed and arrangements were made for setting apart one evening during the meeting of every synod for holding the annual meeting of the branch. Arrangements were also made for the formation of local branches in a number of parishes in the diocese. In accordance with the resolution passed at the last annual meeting of Convocation, your committee has approved of the constitution adopted by the Ontario diocesan branch.

Your committee would respectfully request that members of Convocation should take an active interest in the affairs of the UNIVERSITY REVIEW. Convocation makes an annual grant for the purpose, but individual members could render very material assistance by keeping their subscriptions regularly paid, and occasionally contributing to the columns of the paper.

In accordance with the directions of Convocation your committee have brought before the corporation the proposal to add to the accommodation for resident students, and the erection of a gymnasium. The matter has been taken up by the corporation, and plans have been prepared, on which your committee have learned tenders are now being made. These plans will be laid on the table at the annual meeting for inspection by members of Convocation, and it is hoped that the buildings will be completed before the annual meeting of 1894.

At the earnest request of members of Convocation who are also members of the corporation, your committee has taken the responsibility of deferring the meeting of Convocation until the second week in November. It was found impossible to obtain the attendance of gentlemen from a distance at two meetings in two successive months, and as the annual meeting of the corporation was generally deemed of more importance than that of Convocation, the latter suffered by the loss of the presence of many valued members at its deliberations. Under the present arrangement the annual service will be held on Monday evening, the annual meeting of Convocation on Tuesday, the dinner on the evening of that day, and the annual meeting of the corporation on Wednesday.

Your committee feel sure that all members of the Convocation will join with them in sincere regret at the intimation which has been received from the Reverend Herbert Symonds, that he will no longer be able to discharge the duties of clerk. His many years' service in this capacity has merited the deepest gratitude of Convocation. Your committee have much pleasure in recommending as his successor the Reverend H. H. Bedford-Jones.

The financial statement of the year is presented herewith. There are also a number of subscriptions in arrears which will probably be paid before the annual meeting. Your committee would therefore recommend Convocation to renew the appropriations made last year to the Modern Language Department, History Department and Fellowships in Classics and Theology.

B B B CURES BAD BLOOD

This complaint often arises from Dyspepsia as well as from Constipation, Hereditary Taint, etc. Good blood cannot be made by the Dyspeptic, and Bad Blood is a most prolific source of suffering, causing

BOILS, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES,
Eruptions, Sores, Skin Diseases, Scrofula, etc. Burdock Blood Bitters really cures bad blood and drives out every vestige of impure matter from a common pimple to the worst scrofulous sore. H. M. Lockwood, of Lindsay, Ont., had 53 Boils in 8 months, but was entirely cured by 3 bottles of B.B.B., and is now strong and well. Write to him.
