Volume X.

With this number GRIP enters upon his TENTH VOLUME, and in anticipation of kind enquiries from all quarters of the earth he would say, "First rate, thank you; never felt better in the whole course of my existence!"

The Depression, which has for so long a time been squeezing grumbler out of our business people—all along of that wretched Government—has only affected GRIP in an indirect manner. So far as his financial affairs are concerned he snaps his fingers at it—(if a Raven may be permitted to speak of his talons in that manner). It is in the political department that he has felt its effects. The dullness in trade has begotten a similar dullness in the minds of GRIP's special charge, the politicians, and their movements have for a long time been so sluggish and insignificant that it has put him to no little pains to find matter for his weekly comment—pictorial and otherwise. Fortune, the friend of the good, didn't entirely desert him, however, but sent him the Northern Railway Cow, and a few pic-nic extravagances, which tided him over a very trying time. But, perhaps he ought not to complain, especially as this is a Thanksgiving season; and after all, on looking over Volume IX, he sees that his mission of chastising wrongdoers has not been badly fulfilled. Those who would see and judge for themselves, are informed that Vol. IX (or any previous volume) can be obtained, neatly bound, at his office, for a very reasonable sum. Let the past go; the future is full of hope. Pretty soon this political Depression at all events will disappear, whatever the financial Depression may do. Parliament is to meet shortly, and we are promised a session that shall outstrip all its predecessors in violence, vituperation, scandal, and all the other qualities that delight the heart of the cartoon-maker. GRIP is sharpening his pencils for the fray, and the clever young men who furnish his literary good things every week, are cutting their quills in anticipation of a great harvest of fun. Let the reader make a note of this, and if he hasn't already done so, let him subscribe forthwith, and have the coming six months enlivened by regular visits from the numbers of VOLUME X.

A Wifely Query by Mrs. John Greenhorn.

I.

How often in the small hours' gloom,
When JOHN is snoring at my side,
Waking the echoes of the room,
I've sobbed, I've whimpered, and I've cried.

II.

He only winks his nether eye,
And tightly purses up his lips,
To my entreaties he'll reply
By silence, nothing from him slips.

III.

He will not tell the reason why
His waistcoats always closes contain ;
He will not answer when I cry,
"Oh JOHN ! beloved JOHN, explain !"

IV.

"And why ! Oh why these coffee-beans,
My tears should melt a heart of rock ;
Oh, tell your MARTHA what it means,
And why this little square of chalk ?"

V.

Oh dearest, kindest, Mister GRIP,
Take pity on a woman's tears,
Let not another moment slip,
But quiet a poor woman's fears !

VI.

Is JOHN a burglar or a thief?
Am I in truth a robber's misses ?
My heart is nearly cracked with grief,
Oh ! do I share a cracksmen's kisses ?

No—he only drinks and plays billiards.—ED.

What Grip Loves.

To watch a dance I love to sit
Against the wall on tilted chair,
And view the joy-flushed damsels fit
Around the room ; "Tis passing fair,
"Tis passing fair ! I love it well,
But ten times more the supper-bell,
Calling the hot and happy throng
To ice cream cool and champagne strong,
To lobster salad, chicken ; Stay,
No more of this I'll sing or say,
For ghosts of suppers, years digested,
Are from my memory resurrected !

I love to hear the hearty brats
Raising CAIN upon the street,—
Running hand-sleighs, stoning cats,
Or the people whom they meet ;
I also love the screams and yells
Which to my ear a story tells
Of angry father ; mother wild,
Licking that unsuspecting child !
My soul doth love these sounds bewildering,
Of angry parents whacking children.
I love to hear a traveler old
Tell of the places where he's been ;
To hear the hoary bar bold
Recount the things he's never seen ;
I like to overhear a lover
Telling oh, such yards of lies,
Swearing by the "heavens above her,"
Swearing by his sweetheart's eyes ;
I love a maiden's rippling laugh,
Like wavelets on a moonlit sea,
I love to see a thoughtful calf
Chewing a boot-top on the tea ;
And much I love a sailor bold,
No yachting fool in seamen's guise,
But true as steel or oak or gold,
I love his jovial "dash your eyes !"
I love to hear a parrot's talk,
Although its words might soil this page,
I like its clinging, clambering walk,
Head downwards all around the cage ;
I love the free and easy grace
With which he cocks his horny nose,
Consigns me to a torrid place,
And squares his light fantastic toes ;
And much I love an Indian grim,
Who'd stab and scalp you without fail,
All grand in war paint, huge of limb,
Like SITTING BULL or SPOTTED TAIL ;
Oh yes, I love an Indian well,
Of guttural "Ughs" and "Wahgs" so full,
With noble instincts, purpose fell,
Like SPOTTED TAIL or SITTING BULL.

The Trinity College Blow Out.

(By our rural Commissioner.)

REVERED GRIP :

When my honoured parents brought me to the city and placed me under your guardianship, they probably did the best thing they could do, in view of all the dangers that surround a rural youth on commencing life ; and I am sure it was only your solicitude for my morals that induced you to take me upon your staff, and send me up to attend the Trinity College Dinner on Thursday of last week. "There, my boy," said you, as I was leaving the sanctum, "there you shall mingle among high dignitaries of the church, and the real gentlemen of the land ; there also you shall meet clever and exemplary young men ; perhaps the visit will do you good." The visit has done me good. It has opened before me all the pleasures of life. I regret that I am not yet sufficiently recovered from the effects of the dinner—jamboree the exemplary young men called it—to furnish you with a detailed account of the occasion. My nerves are yet unsteady ; my head is yet dull and aching, and I feel rather thirsty. But I expect in a few days to be able to tell you all about it. Meantime let me say I did my part nobly ; I drank almost as much as the rest of the boys, and did my share of making night hideous in and about the College. We got tin pans and horns, and tore through the corridors, kicking up the deuce along with some of the old fellows. SIR JOHN MACDONALD was there and made a speech, but unfortunately (like many more in the audience) I couldn't see or hear steadily, and so failed to catch the drift of it. I say Trinity College is a brick, and I want you to send me up to the next dinner they have. Nine Club be hanged, in the meantime.

YOUR REPRESENTATIVE.

SCARING THE MARITIME HORSE.

The Soliloquies of Fitznoodle of the ClubIII. CAWTWIGHT, AND OTHAW THINGS.

I AM—aw—wather sawpvised at WICHARD JOHN CAWTWIGHT. I don't know pweicely what to think about him. I don't appwove altogethaw, you see, of the Mail fellow pitching into him in such a weekless manaw, and calling him nawsty names, because I have gweat respect for WICHARD JOHN—that is, compawitively gweat, considering he is a Gwit. He was once a Consawwative, and he dwesses well even yet. He is the best dwessed fellow in the Gwit wanks, and I wespect any fellow who dwesses we!, whatevay may be his political opinions. I don't think twifles like polities or weligion ought to pweduce us against a fellow who dwesses well. Now, WICHARD JOHN dwesses like a gentleman, and I wespect him accawdingly ; he was once a membaw of the pawty of gentlemen, and what is bwed in the bone will come out in the weawing appawel. But, why did WICHARD JOHN leave his Pawty, and go over to the Gwits, wespectability and a'! This is what sawpises me most. The vewy idea of leaving the wight Hon. SIR JOHN, and going ovaw to SANDY MACKENZIE, it is almost too widiculous, down't you know. But Twuth is swanger than fiction, as some fellow once said, and WICHARD JOHN actually did do this vewy stwange and wretched thing. The question heaw awises : Why did he do so? Why should any fellow who has been bwought upto dwess wespectably, and has associated with fellows like the Wight Hon. SIR JOHN, who dwink wine in the Club, and conluct themselves in evwy othaw way as gentlemen,—I say, why should such a fellow dwop all this to take up with people like MACKENZIE, BLAKE, BROWN, and HUNTINGDON—pwoper enough people, of cawse, in one sense, but not a bit like the Wight Hon. SIR JOHN. Why should he do it? It does seem to me like a fellow selling his mess of pottage saw a mere borthwright. The Mail says that WICHARD JOHN did this vewy stwange thing fwoom selfish motives ; that he wanted to get a place in the Gwit Cabinet. I wegret to diffaw with my swifd of the Mail—with whom I have dwank so many bottles of champagne—but the twath is, WICHARD JOHN left the Consawwative wanks below the Gwits had any notion of coming into office. And as I have weawaked already, I don't appwove of the Mail calling WICHARD JOHN bad names about this; I don't think he did it fwoom selfish motives. My own pwivate theowdy—I havn't yet mentioned this to any othaw fellow—is that it was a case of tempowawy insawinity ; not so vewy tempowawy othaw, because it is going on yet. The vewy fact that any fellow with a pwopaw taste for dwess, could leave the Consawwative wanks and go to the Gwit wanks is peine face evidence of insawinity. Then, if you want any pwof to show that WICHARD JOHN is still wong in the head, look at his wecent speeches. Would any man attack the Wight Hon. and give him such twemelous cawstigations in public, if he were not cracked? The Wight Hon. knows poor WICHARD JOHN is demented ; he pities him so much that he hasn't said a word in reply to those speeches, and I wather think he will weemain silent. He don't wish to exaspwate the patient.

Maritime Meanderings.

Grip, my old Bird : Let me salute you on the occasion of a first letter as your occasional Correspondent. My errand to the Low Provinces, as we agreed, was, to find out the why and the wherefore of the chopping and changing of the weather, and everything else, where the Marines and Submarines flourish, and the storm drum of the political atmosphere is hoisted as often as the moon changes. To begin, I railed it at once to the Capital City of Halifax, which is a capital place to live and move and get grub in. My card presented for the admiration of Janitors and waiters of the hotels and club-houses, is the key for admission to the presence and conversation of the Bachelor Aristocracy, not to mention a sprinkling of Benedict society. At the Club we put in a stave for everything—Staves we talk about, and by their aid we walk about, and they enter into the manufacture of kegs, barrels, tubs, pipes, hogheads and puncheons, for the trade in cakes, crackers, shipbread, corned beef, fish or sugar, as the case may be, in cases where no case is used, but barrelshapes of all sizes are substituted. They talk of everything here, from the cost of Labrador herring to the Fishery Commission, but cannot tell me what either of them will cost at the year's end, and from a fish-wife's trouscan to an Admiral's nuptials they are equally at sea, or at fault, till one feels disposed to exclaim, a truce-o-truce to such gossip. Yet I only reply in such cases, "Tell it to the Marines!" The Marines they say are the P. E. Islanders, but Acadia is held to be the land of the Sub-marines, since the cables were stretched from Cape Rae to Cape North, and from Valentia to Torbay, and thence to Rye Beach, where the old rye obtains notoriety. These ropes connect us with the Buoys and Boys of brother JONATHAN, who come over like guys in the guise of fishermen of the Maine state, to reap the in-shore privileges of the Treaty, and post up the books of the Fishery Commission, still sitting and setting their respective nets, to catch the award, and finally distribute the net proceeds. If they don't kill me here with kindness, I shall hail from this (after dinner) Port, so long as Toronto shall how to the reign of GRIP, and Halifax shall correspond.

I am writing as the clubists say, fornenst the sanctum of the Baker, whose loafing consists not in the use of spring wheat flour, but in the abuse of a May-flower not native to, or sintered to, the taste of the community, but in this regard there are differing views according to the standpoint of the beholder, just as GRIP of late described them in pictorial cartoon, as a contribution to Marine History. Since that burlesque exhibition of one editor others of the editorial fraternity have displayed an itching to be similarly honoured! One of them exhibits a disposition to invite trials of skill with everybody on every disputable topic. This gentleman or co-editor has already enjoyed one trial in the Superior Court, and at a place named KENT, after the Duke of that Ville, and was invited to pay five hundred dollars for the promotion of courtesy in manner editorial! The man who did it for him is known as M. P. WOODWORTH. The aggrieved man of the press has since made war, in Turkish or rushing style, on every one bearing the appellative "WOODWORTH," between this town and Washington, until his mental perception is dazed, and he now goes maundering about the fuel yards alternately saying to himself and the forestallers of slabs, what is WOODWORTH? This same party offers to wager two to one in red cents, 1st That Sir JOHN A. never made Halifax the winter port of Canada ; 2nd That he never will make any winter port for Canada except Portland ! 3rd That nobody else can make a winter port, except Premier MACKENZIE, and he only after LAURIER's election is assured ! 4th That the Vailed and Coffined Ministry has been improperly blamed for protection in general, and protection of Portland versus Halifax in particular ; 5th That the Mail of Toronto declared that the government should not do anything more than appoint Halifax as the winter Mail-point ; and 6th That the summer port is quite unimportant or like the last resort of "any port in a storm!" Cannot you with old Boreas and the Weather Prophet, settle these port-able questions in a summary way? Pray do and send printed particulars, on the wings of your Press, for

ONE OF YOUR MARINE STAFF.

The Gladstonian Opinion.

Mr. GLADSTONE having been asked whether, if Canadian interest demanded differential duties in favor of American goods, Canada would be permitted to levy them, replies that no country but Britain would regard the question as an open one, and that the views of the Colonial Office and British Government of the day would settle the matter.—British News.

Sage WILLIAM, ever known so trebly wise,
As on each point to see three courses clear,
Let GRIP, who sees through plain Canadian eyes,
Inform you there are no three courses here.

These questions, and all question such as these,
Have been transferred to Canada alone ;
Great Britain's sovereignty holds ; but please
Know this : Canadians' commerce is their own.

You know full well, when Britain duties laid
On every cargo bought of foreign grain,
She favouring discrimination made
On each colonial ship which crossed the main.

But your Free Traders—an I some help they had
From you—repealed all customs such as these ;
"Who cares for colonists?" they cried, "Get mad ?
Why, let 'em, and cut off too if they please !"

It was a heavy blow ; and since that day
Your men—your money—built up Yankeeland.
You send them forty for one sent our way,
Now, WILLIAM, GRIP would make you understand.

It was your act—that day you cut the tie,
What you had loosened how could we unite ?
Yet leave us to ourselves, and by-and-by,
It may be we will make the matter right.

We do not wish the Empire great to leave,
Which better men once ruled—now overswayed
By money-makers ; but you may perceive
Keen friend, how narrow you our road have made.

Two courses and no more we have to-day :
We must have liberty to live, and make
Our living here by such commercial way
As our commercial interests bid us take ;

Or we must join the States : not with our will,
But forced by stern inexorable fate.
Drive us not thither, GLADSTONE, Britain still
Would mourn the action—and would mourn too late.

An Order Solicited.

If the Manitoba Free Press expresses the views of the general public of that Province on the subject of M. CAUCHON's appointment as Lieut. Governor, there is a likelihood that the gates of the North West will be shu against him. And if it is the intention of History to repeat itself, GRIP would notify M. CAUCHON that he has a very complete job office, and can get out a Pamphlet, like that written by Mr. MACDOUGALL, with neatness, cheapness and dispatch.
