LADY LEOLINE.

By May Agnes Fleming.

CHAPTER XIX.—CONTINUED.

No Hubert was there, but two figures were passing slowly along in the moonlight, and one of them he recognized, with an impulse to spring at him like a tiger, and a struggle him. But he had been so shocked and subdued by his recent discovery, that the impulse which, half an hour before, would have been unhesitatingly obeyed, went for nothing, now, and there was more of reproach, even, than anger in his voice, as he went over and laid his hand on the shoulder of one of them.

"To the ruin, where you have already been twice to-night." Sir Norman Stared. "And who told you this fact, Sir count?" "Never mind; I have heard it. Would you object to a third excursion there before morning?"

telegraph or balloon traveling; and in two seconds the whole state of things, with all the attendant surprises and dangers, danced before him like a panorama, and he comprehended the past, the present, and the future, before Hubert had uttered the last word of his whisper. He turned his eyes, with a very new and singular sensation, upon the quondam count, and found that gentleman looking very hard at him, with a preternaturally grave expression of countenance. Sir Norman knew well as anybody the varying moods of his royal countship, and notwithstanding his general good nature, it was not safe to trifle with him at times; so he repressed every outward sign of emotion whatever, and resolved to treat him as Count L'Estrange until he should choose to sail under his own proper colors.

And so you decline to go any further, Sir Norman? Hubert's eye was fixed with a warning glance upon him, and Sir Norman composedly answered: "Count; I do not absolutely decline; but before I do go any further, I should like to know by what right you bring at these men here, and what are your intentions in so doing." "And if I refuse to answer?" "Then I refuse to move a step further in the business," said Sir Norman, with decision.

ULSTER AND HOME RULE.

There is a general impression that the province of Ulster in Ireland is overwhelmingly Protestant in its sentiment but this is not a correct opinion, unless the statistics presented to the Imperial parliament are astray. The government census of 1851 gave the total population of Ulster as 1,791,479 of whom 830,795 were Protestants of all shades and 960,684, Roman Catholics. This shows a fair proportion of Catholic strength that outsiders were not prepared for. A return presented to parliament however in June of 1853 placed the Catholic population at 831,784 out of a total of 1,738,375 or a little less than one half. Take either of the statistics, and the result certainly does not bear out a claim that Ulster should be separated from the remainder of Ireland for legislative purposes; unless the people of Great Britain are prepared to see concentrated in Ulster the bitterness and turmoil which characterized the remainder of the island during the national agitation.

THE PINT OF ALE.

A Manchester (England) callio printer was on his wedding day asked by his wife to allow her two half pints of ale a day as her share of extra comforts. He made the bargain, but not cheerfully, for though a drinker himself (fancying, no doubt, that he could not well do without it) he would have preferred a perfectly sober wife, but he could not break away from his old associates at the ale house, and when not at the factory or at his meals he was with his boon companions. His wife, with the small allowance meet her housekeeping expenses—keeping her cottage neat and tidy, and he could not complain that she insisted upon her daily pint of ale, while he very likely drank two or three quarts. They had been married a year, and the morning of their wedding anniversary John looked with real pride upon the neat and comely person of his wife, and with a touch of remorse in his look and tone, he said: "Mary, we've had no holiday since we were wed, and only that I haven't a penny in the world we'd take a jaunt to see the mother."

A WARNING TO EMIGRANTS.

A correspondent of the Southern Cross follows up the article on Irish immigration, which was recently published in this journal, by a letter that puts in still clearer light the difficulties that beset the path of the Irish emigrant in the River Plate. He states that few Irishmen are successful, and these only in two provinces—Buenos Ayres and Santa Fe. They achieved their success, moreover, at a time when the road was not blocked as it is to-day. "All the great apparatus of finance, rings, booms, bulls and bears now hold the prospects of the settler from Bolivia to Cape Horn, and from the Cordillera de los Andes to the rugged peaks of the Sierras." The chances are all against an Irishman who tries his fortunes in the interior. The work to be done, as well as the habits and customs, are all strange. He is not able to compete with the Spaniard and Italian in the cultivation of the vine, or with the native in his silling grounds. The soil of the agricultural colonies in such a case, and no experience of, and the style of tillage is strange. In a word, before starting on the road to success he should serve along apprenticeship, and any but a young and unencumbered man is doomed to failure. Many have already lost their capital and sunk into the position of day laborers and others have fled to the United States.

SIGNATURE OF THE CZAR.

The Czar spends very little time in his study, as he is more afraid of his stomach than of political plots, and is consequently in the habit of receiving his ministers in the grounds, walking up and down an avenue while listening to their reports. He frequently adds his initial "A" to an important document by holding it against a tree, and hence it is rather indistinct at times. He is not a signer of many of the cases of the Russian calligraphy are returned without signature, and then the "court calligraphers," who out do in their art the monks of old, have to do their work over again.—The Argonaut.

THE BLACKBIRD.

Mr. Wm. O'Brien, M. P., in a lecture delivered under the auspices of the Cork Young Ireland Society, referring to the influence of Irish poetry, said: "In the darkest hour of the penal night, when it was transportation to learn the alphabet, and when Irishmen were wrung outside the gates of Irish cities like lepers at sundown by the sound of the evening bell, it is not too much to say that one simple little treason song, 'The blackbird,' sung low around the water fire in the mountain shieling, had more influence in preserving the spirit of Irish nationality than all the enactments of the diabolical penal code, enforced by all the might of England, could counteract." This queer old bit is undoubtedly Irish, although it has appeared in a Scotch collection. In Ireland, "The Blackbird" was understood to mean Prince Charles Edward, and the flight or song of a bird was apocryphal for lamenting the exiled Stuart, common to Ireland and Scotland.

SPREADING THE LIGHT.

From the Dublin Nation: "The Eighty Club Circular" for January is an excellent compilation of facts from the current history of coercion, rackrenting and eviction. Mr. Balfour is followed calmly and carefully through his misrepresentations, and receives a meritorious exposure. Most of the facts are familiar to us, but the compilers point the contrast occasionally by an example drawn from English experience. A remarkable instance is that by which the atrocity of a sentence inflicted on John Maguire at Dundalk by Removables Kilkenny and Evanson is displayed. Maguire had been arrested, with a number of others, on the charge of singing the well known ballad, 'Who Fears to Speak of Ninety-eight?' When arrested he was in possession of a revolver. He was sent to goal for three months. On the 26th of December at Maryborough a man was charged with being drunk and presenting a five-chambered revolver at another. The charge was proved, and the magistrate in passing sentence declared that the prisoner had been guilty of the worst form of riotous conduct. He was sentenced to imprisonment for three weeks; but the magistrate subsequently changed the penalty into a fine of 40 shillings. If English and Irish are living under equal laws, the results to each are strangely unequal.

COMFORT IN SCHOOL.

1. A seat to be comfortable must be as high as the knee of the child is distant from the floor. 2. The top of the desk and the back of the chair should slant one inch to the foot. 3. The inside edge of a seat should be directly under the inside edge of the desk. 4. The inner edge of the desk, next to the pupil should be ten inches from the seat. 5. About four inches of the top of the desk should be flat, and furnished with a groove for holding pencils and holders, a hole for an ink well, and an opening for a slate and geography.

INFORMATION WANTED.

of one Ellen Elliggett, daughter of John Elliggett, deceased, who lived in the Parish of Kilkenny, County of Kerry, Ireland, Blacksmith. The party who desires this information is James Elliggett, a brother of Ellen. The late known Ellen Elliggett was that she left Ireland for Canada about twenty-six years ago. Parties having any knowledge of the whereabouts of Ellen Elliggett are requested to address JAMES ELLIGGETT, Fremont, Ohio.

THE EDUCATION QUESTION

Straitening the Law—No Time for French or Religious Teaching—Impairment of French Canadian.

BOSTON, Feb. 6.—Catholics all over the State of Massachusetts are up in arms over the determined efforts of the State school authorities to close up St. Joseph's parochial school at Haverhill.

THE FRENCH CATHOLICS ACQUITTED. BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 10.—The French Catholic school at Haverhill, which was ordered to be closed by the local School Board because its standard was not up to the public school standard, and six well-known French Canadian citizens arrested in consequence of sending their children to an illegal school, have come out of the contest with flying colors.

Laurier on Dewdney.

How the Opposition Leader Scarcified, the Minister of the Interior.

In the House of Commons on the 6th inst., Sir John Macdonald rose to make the explanations demanded by Mr. Laurier of changes in the Ministry since last session.

what do we find? During all the time the hon. gentleman was in office he never sent a word of warning as to the state of affairs on the Saskatchewan. I have before me all the correspondence which has been given to the House on the cause and circumstances leading to the rebellion.

Mr. Laurier quoted from a letter of Mr. Grandin to the Minister of Public Works an account of a visit by Mr. Dewdney to the Saskatchewan, showing that though they had treated the Governor roughly they had made known their grievances to him.

THE BODY AND ITS HEALTH.

There are various reasons why people suffer from the different ailments of the feet. We know very well that the shoe of fashion is not the best one for comfort.

ST. THOMAS AQUINAS.

Dedication of the New Church at Billings Bridge—An Interesting Ceremony.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

It will be remembered that amongst the devastations caused by the cyclone of the 5th of June last was the blowing down and leaving in a heap of ruins the then recently erected Catholic Church of St. Thomas, Billings Bridge.

Yesterday, the fourth Sunday of the Epiphany and the Solemnity of the Purification of the Blessed Virgin, took place the dedication of the new edifice, under the invocation of the great Doctor of the Church, St. Thomas Aquinas.

After the first Gospel had been chanted, the Rev. Father Dentonville advanced to the sanctuary railing, and taking for his text the words of the psalm: "I rejected at the things that were said to me; we will go into his house of the Lord," preached an eloquent sermon.

During the chanting of the Credo a collection was taken up by Mr. C. F. Street, one of the trustees. Friends who may wish to augment either to that gentleman, in the Finance Department, or to the parish priest, Rev. Father Barry, Billings Bridge parsonage.

This Ointment affords the shortest, safest, and easiest path to soundness in all kinds of skin diseases, scrofulous affections, scrofulous malarial, ulcerations, eruptions, and inflammations.

PICTURESQUE SAMOANS.

From the Washington Star: The natives are a frank, simple race of people, possessed of undoubted courage and "guts." They go to war in their long canoes, always with a song, the melody of which is not unlike some of our old plantation songs.

Jonny, in the kitchen, waxes angry with the unaccountable and frequently remarks, "If there's anything I hate it is somebody I don't like."

THE CHRISTIAN BROTHERS' BILL.

Mr. David presented a petition signed by a large number of citizens of Montreal, asking for an annual grant to be given to the Christian Brothers, of that city, to aid them in carrying out a large enterprise which they are undertaking.

Mr. Leblanc said he understood all about the education given by the Brothers, and that they merited the esteem and the confidence of all who felt interested in the good of the country.

Mr. Hall concurred in all that was said by the former speakers on this important subject. He was acquainted with the Brothers' schools of Montreal and knew that they were all filled with scholars.

Mr. Desjardins spoke at some length in favor of the Christian Brothers and said that 325 of them were teaching in this province and that their support from the income was small so that they had to economize on a very meagre salary.

Mr. Tostier, spoke with enthusiasm of these men who sacrificed their time for the people. He said that he felt happy to hear his honorable colleague of the other side of the House speak in so favorable manner towards the bill.

WHIFFS.

The Thracians inhaled smoke by employing the aromatic seeds of certain plants for the titillation of their nostrils.

Herodotus says that the Babylonians used to eat bundles of herbs into the fire, and then stand around the flames and inhale their fragrance.

Cigars are now made all over the civilized world. They are produced very extensively in Bremen and Hamburg, and at Seville in Spain.

It is said that of all the various cook books published between 1800 and 1815, and books which treat of the pleasures and adjuncts of taste before the last named date, not one refers to the after dinner cigar, or to cigars at all.

It is curious how much faster the combustion goes when you are running for it than it does when you are riding on it.

FRATRES OF MALE ATTIRE.

MANY ODDITIES OFFERED TO ADAPTS OF THE LATEST FASHIONS.

The use of the diamond solitaire as a full dress stud is confined to the "lower stratum."

Black buttons in semi-globe shape are worn on white pique vests by men in half-mourning.

Mustache combs of solid silver, daintily flowered, are a recent caprice of the metal workers' art.

All the colors of the rainbow are seen in the silk stripes that run through negligee shirts intended for next summer.

Many of the new smoking jackets are altogether too elegant to be worn for the purposes for which they are intended.

The same materials and patterns that will be seen next summer in ladies' blouses will also appear in men's tennis and lounging shirts.

Black and steel gray are effectively combined in silk mufflers. The result produced is a happy medium between the "foul" and the sober.

The attempt to revive scarf rings is a failure. Puff scarfs of extreme size in white ribbed silk are a decided "go" for afternoon wedding wear.

An observer of fashion's whims predicted an early revival of the old-time ruffled shirt bosom. As a prophet he is, we are bound to say, a failure.

Here is a suggestion for a ladies' gift umbrella. Let the donor have his photograph, postage stamp &c., set in the handle and covered with glass.

A cutaway coat in fine wale cloth, with the vest of some fancy figured material, is considered a dressy combination for business wear.

Ties of plain white pique which go twice around the collar and are folded into a bow by the wearer are accepted by high dressers as correct for full dress.

New pajamas ordered out by New York importers are in zephyr (a cabweb sort of woolen goods), spun silk, and a new flannel which is almost as delicate as silk.

Woolen gloves in dark, solid colors and fancy mixtures have almost entirely superseded white kid gloves. They are cheaper, keep cleaner and are just as warm.

It is likely that tan-colored gloves will continue to be accepted for some time. Tans run into so many shades that they afford a good variety from which to make a selection.

One and two strands of silk-stitching are seen on the lavender gloves shown by high class furnishees whose customers favor less width than is seen in the embroidery commonly used.

Beautiful effects are obtained by reproducing the bright postage stamps of the various countries, and combining them for decorative purposes on ash trays, cigar cases, card cases, &c.

A shirt seen at a recent fancy dress ball had a dead black bosom, and the collar and cuffs and tie were also black. It was worn in conjunction with trousers, vest and coat in plain white silk.

Double breasted vests with extra large lapels, and buttoned medium high, have been taken up by the patron of a well known Fifth avenue tailor as a welcome change from the single breasted affairs so long in vogue.

OLD SAYINGS AND THEIR AUTHORS.

"A thing of beauty is a joy forever" is from Keats.

Dean Swift thought that "Bread was the staff of life."

Franklin said "God helps those who help themselves."

"All cry and no wool" is found in Butler's "Hudibras."

Thomas Southern reminds us that "Fity's akin to love."

Washington Irving gives us "The almighty dollar."

"Man proposes, but God disposes" is from Thomas A. Kempis.

Edward Coke was of the opinion that "A man's house is his castle."

"Variety's the spice of life" and "Not much the worse for wear" —Copper.

"When Greek joins Greek then was the thing of war." —Nathaniel Lee, 1602.

THOSE WHO HAVE REIGNED LONG.

Among the living sovereigns mentioned in the new "Almanach de Gotha" those who have reigned longest are the Emperor of Brazil, who ascended the throne in 1831, and the age of six; Queen Victoria, in 1837, and Duke Ernest of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, crowned in 1844.

The Vienna School Board, in their efforts to prevent the sale of strong drinks to children, have appealed to the Government urging the immediate passage of a bill prohibiting such sale to boys and girls fifteen years of age.

It requires push to succeed in business, whether it be running a newspaper, keeping a country store, or wheeling a baby carriage.

What is the difference between a dog's tail and a rich man? One keeps a wagging and the other keeps a carriage.

An old tutor being requested to define hard drinking, said, "It is sitting on a rock and sipping salt water."

What is the difference between a belle and a burglar? The belle carries false locks and the burglar carries false keys.

Don't you beat your carpets. Try kindness and firmness, and if that doesn't keep them down send for a policeman and have them taken up.

If a church be on fire why has the organ the smallest chance of escape? Because the engine cannot play on it.
