VOL. XXI., NO. 10.

THE TRUE WITNESS AND CATHOLIC CHRONICLE, SEPTEMBER 30, 1891.

PRICE 5 CENTS.

THE GARDEN OF GOD.

THE HOSPICE OF MOUNT CARMEL. At Niagara Falls—A Historical Sketch of the Order—The Only Canadian House—An Appeal for Help.

Mount Carmel—the garden of God—rich in its growth of oaks, pines and olives, is in the imagery of the Prophets, and recorded in the history of the Jewish people...

COMPLETED BY A COW. Of similar material. In addition to this, these religious have also a white cloak, which is an imitation of the cloak of the Prophet Elias...

ELIAS—HE WAS with the title used by her brethren. In 1217 the Carmelites had a convent at Chester, England. They assumed their usual title of Brothers of the Blessed Virgin Mary of Mount Carmel.

APPEARED TO HIM, holding the holy Scapular in her hands, and said to him: "Receive, most beloved son, the Scapular of thy Order, a sign of my confraternity, a privilege both to thee and to all Carmelites, in which he that dieth shall not suffer eternal fire; behold the sign of salvation, a safeguard in danger, the covenant of peace and everlasting alliance."

Christian and he (Father James) concluded that as a recompense for his past excellent behavior God would confer on him the favor of a good, conscientious bride in the person of Miss Kennedy, a niece of Alderman P. Kennedy, and advised any other young gentleman of the society who would follow his example to prepare for the sacrament of matrimony as the young gentleman congratulated had done, by years of sobriety, morality and honesty.

In a Delicate State. A special cable from London to the World says: Great anxiety is felt as to whether Mr. Gladstone's feeble health will prove equal to the demand of the National Liberal Federation at Newcastle next week. It is many months since he appeared in public. His attack of influenza left him in a very low state. Sir Andrew Clarke positively forbids active participation in any partisan strife.

FATHER ELLIOT. Of the Paulist Fathers at St. Patrick's. —Will Return shortly. The Rev. Walter Elliot, once a soldier and lawyer in the U. S. A., now a priest and distinguished member of the Paulist Fathers of New York organized by Father Hecker, and the author of a new life of the founder, preached in St. Patrick's on Sunday last on the subject of "Anger."

C. Y. M. S. Opening of the Winter Season—A Promising Programme—Mr. Coleman's Wedding.

The Church and the Young. On Sunday morning in St. Mary's Cathedral, Kingston, Rev. Father Kelly read a document from Archbishop Cleary, which referred at some length to the responsibility of the Church in connection with the education of the young.

Man is like a bird which flies between the two eternities, and touches the earth with his wing. In the afternoon there was a large attendance at the laying of the cornerstone. The Archbishop was presented with an address and a beautiful silver trowel.

MISSIONS IN BURMAH. A PRIEST'S HARD EXPERIENCES. An Appeal for Aid—Millions in Need of the Presence of the Church's Missionaries.

Mr. R. Callahan, of this city, has received the following interesting and instructive letter from Father Peeters, Missionary Apostolic in Burmah:— I believe it is almost a year and a half since you have written to me, and you must have been uneasy in regard to my long delay in not writing to you sooner; but I have not forgotten you.

FROM ALL OVER ASIA. In my church here, in Akyab, I have Arrakanese, Burmese, Bengalese, Cingalese (Ceylon), Tamil, Chinese, English and Portuguese people. I assure you, to hear their confessions in their own language is no easy task for me. Our other priests in Bengal can help themselves with one language; but Burmah, standing in many points in the same relation to other parts of India as Canada to Europe, that is, the fertile fields for natives to make, is over-run with all sorts of endemics; the lowest and most ignorant are the Mahomedans, so that, as you see, I have to be a polyglot to deal with these people.

The Chicago Convention. The Memphis Journal is not in favor of the "National League Convention" to be held at Chicago, on the grounds that:—1. There is no such organization as the Irish National League legitimately in existence in this country; therefore they should not use this honored name in calling a convention.

An Agreeable Surprise. Catholic circles in France are surprised and pleased at the reported result of the first experiments under the new law compelling students for the priesthood to serve in the army.

STAGNANT WATER. In the rice-fields. 7th. The last, but not the least, of all our troubles are of a financial character. Our means here are so small and our expenses for travelling, catechists, etc., so high, and demands for building churches, schools, support of orphans, etc., so heavy upon our empty purse, that if Providence did not look after his servants, all would have miserably perished by this time.

OUR POOR MISSIONS. May the Sacred Heart of Jesus, who has never been deaf to my supplications, inspire Catholics with that generosity towards the heathen missions which this great work deserves. The least of so much industry and sin, and still he can do but little. God alone gives the increase. Pray, therefore, much for me and my poor people that God may show mercy to us all and bring us all to Heaven.

The office of the Missions Catholiques at Lyons has received advices from China to the effect that natives had attacked the monks at Northern Chanai. Fears are entertained for the safety of the monks and inmates of the Chanai orphanage. The French bishops have received instructions requiring them to report to Rome as to the growth of socialism in their dioceses. It is regarded as probable that the Vatican will summon in 1892 a universal council, the programme for which will include discussions on relations of capital and labor.

MERCIER'S ANSWER TO THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR.

In Reference to the Baie de Chaleurs Railway Charges—He Lays It all on Pacaud.

Mr. Mercier's answer to the Lieut. Governor's demand for explanations dated September 15, begins as follows:—I have the honor of replying to your Honor's communication of the 7th. My duty is to give you explanations with reference to the Baie de Chaleurs Railway, and, secondly, as regards the proposed royal commission.

Youths' Department.

WHY I LOST A RACE.

The Story of a Colours Boat-race. The whole thing started from a talk we had one night in my study. Trib, as usual, had come over after supper to spend the evening with me, smoking and talking over boating matters.

MY FRESHMAN YEAR. Thus Trib and I, while we have always gone in for everything else in college together, have always been opponents in the races, and as I had so far beaten him each season, I hated to refer to my victories for fear he would think I was crowing over him.

WINNING EVERY RACE. Why shouldn't the others have a chance? About this time, Trib, who hadn't for an instance ceased the rehearsal of his own wishes and his sister's aspirations for him, came to a sudden stop and aroused me from my reverie, with a "Look here, Dick: May I would be awfully pleased if I could see how intensely interested you are in listening to her wishes?"

NOT BE DISAPPOINTED. I could imagine how May would feel if Trib lost, now that she had set her heart upon his being victorious. I thought, perhaps, she would cry; I had never seen her in tears, and I did not want to, particularly if I were to be the cause of them.

and what I was to do, and I felt within me a return of the old excitement of the moments before a race. I thought I could actually hear the hurrahs of my classmates as I crossed the line a winner, but then I suddenly remembered that this was impossible; I was not going to be first.

occasion; and the balcony was filled with overflowing with a bevy of girls, sisters and friends of the fellows. I had not eyes but for one, and you can easily guess who that was. There she stood, the centre of a group of girls, talking eagerly to them and holding in her hands the bunch of colors which she had in her mind destined for the victor, her brother.

WHERE I WAS and what I was to do, and I felt within me a return of the old excitement of the moments before a race. I thought I could actually hear the hurrahs of my classmates as I crossed the line a winner, but then I suddenly remembered that this was impossible; I was not going to be first.

I ALWAYS WILL, for it seemed as indeed it did, to sound the death-knell to all my chances for the race. Our crew started off with an easy stroke, and, although for the first half-mile the boats all hung pretty closely together, then the superior training of our crew and 90's began to tell, and we slowly drew away from the rest.

Motions of the Stars. The ancients are visibly a group. Throughout ancient history they are represented as seven stars, wanting one. In our own day that small square of sky space over which this cluster of half a dozen stars is scattered has been found to be occupied by more than two thousand suns.

trial things, our sun is moving toward such and such a point in the heavens. This inference is drawn from the fact that thousands of variously situated stars are found to have a drift in the opposite direction.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[The columns of the TRUE WITNESS are open to correspondents writing on subjects of interest. But it must be understood that no letter inserted is to be regarded as representing the opinions of the paper. Anonymous letters will not be noticed, though the names of writers will be held strictly in confidence.]

C. M. B. A.

To the Editor of THE TRUE WITNESS:

Sir,—I consider Brother Coffey's lectures in the Catholic Record would be much more effective, in converting those hardened sinners who cannot view C. M. B. A. interests in the same brotherly spirit that he does, if he would try and put in practice some of those christian virtues he so ably advocates.

Brother Coffey held such a high opinion of my previous correspondence that he would willingly have published it but only on such conditions that I could not agree to, I believing it more straightforward, instead of firing around the target, to strike the bull's eye at once, and state what I considered were his reasons for such vigorous advocacy of separation.

Sir, it is well known to your numerous readers how ably Brother Coffey can advocate a cause, in the columns of his journal, in order the better to advance the interests of his relatives, and knowing this and what I have witnessed since I joined the association, and learned through the press, and otherwise, I am not all surprised, that such a shrewd, keen, business man, as Brother Coffey is reputed to be, voted for separation on the first favorable opportunity presenting itself.

Under these conditions, it would not do for Brother Coffey to show his hand too soon, but then it was his friends, as do, it is to be hoped, need delivering their opinions at the installing of officers of old and new branches, portraying glowing colors, the great benefits to be derived from separation, in order to prevent their being a dissenting voice when it would be brought forward at the convention in 1890, but Brother Coffey blocked the little game, then it was Brother Coffey got desperate in his demands for separation. Then it was that one of his friends expressed his deep regret for having taken part in the formation of Branch 81.

Now, as was naturally to be expected, and as was stated in the correspondence from Branch 81 and elsewhere, the death-rate of Canada is increasing, and Brother Coffey, who appealed so pathetically heretofore to the patriotism, sentiments and pockets of his Canadian brothers to cease paying the enormous sum of one dollar each annually to pay the extra death rate of the New York Grand Council, is now prepared to pay an extra amount to the Canada Grand Council (preparing to meet its extra death rate, may more he prepared to sacrifice the interests of his Canadian Brothers, who may be compelled by force of circumstances to get transfers to Yankee Grand Councils, that they may the better provide for themselves and families.)

Slowly, as slowness is counted in celestial things, our sun is moving toward such and such a point in the heavens. This inference is drawn from the fact that thousands of variously situated stars are found to have a drift in the opposite direction.

jects for which the association was established, a result to be deplored by all those desirous for the undivided Catholic, fraternal Unity of the same.

GERMAN TACTICS

As Carried Out in the Army—An Expert's Opinion on Them.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—An English officer, describing the German army manoeuvres, says: "The method of infantry attack called 'swarming' differs from the English style of advancing in extended lines. The method of the German is simpler. They advance line upon line and shoulder to shoulder. This formation gives great strength, though there is a heavy expense in life, which shows that infantry is still held cheaply and the victory goes to the biggest battalions."

In describing a flank attack on a strong position in the village of Simonshausen the same officer says that the defenders were strongly entrenched in cornfields, and that line after line of the attacking party seemed to spring out of the ground suddenly and in most unexpected positions, and in crowded masses were halted fifty yards distant from the defenders.

The officer thinks, however, that in the face of heavy rifle fire few of these attackers would have survived to cross bayonets with the defenders.

Instead of the English style of volley firing, the German practised independent firing, the officers judging the distances during the stages of the enemy's advance. Each man was supplied with 150 rounds of Mauser small bore cartridges. The recoil was exceedingly light. The expenditure of ammunition was large, and the officer thinks it would be difficult to keep men supplied with cartridges with such individual firing. Certainly in an open country the advantages would be on the side of the defenders.

Speaking of the three days forced march from Cassel to Erfurt, the officer expresses the strongest admiration for the wonderful endurance of the infantry, the men being deep chested, sturdy, easily fed and contented. In spite of sultry weather, clouds of dust and heavy accommodations, weighing fifty German pounds, each man maintained a swinging pace of four miles an hour for eight hour spells on hilly ground. On arriving at the end of the march they were bathed in sweat and dirt, but ready for a spirited performance of their exercises. At the end of the day's work they were still cheerful—singing in chorus.

The daily ration is composed of a handful of coffee beans, two pounds of black bread, half a pound of meat and a quarter of a pound of rice.

SHIPS AS BURIAL PLACES.

A Curious Scandinavian Method of Disposing of the Dead.

Burial ships have so far been discovered to the number of a dozen in Sweden and Norway. The bodies laid in them, burned or unburned, were equipped with pathetic care. Besides being elaborately armed and adorned, they had placed at their disposal means of employment and diversion, such as writing tablets, forging tools, whetting stones, scissors, cooking utensils, chessmen, draughtsmen and dice. In one of nine boats containing many bodies, disinterred in the church yard of Venbol in Upland, weapons and implements were associated with the remains of three horses, three dogs, a cow, a pig, ram, ewe and goose. Another sheltered the bones of a man, a duck, a falcon, a raven and crane.

The inference seems justified that all these birds were domesticated. Inside the ribs of the celebrated Gokstad ship some "parrots" feathers lay scattered with fragments of gold-embroidered silk-stuff, and the tunic near Sandefjord contained the skeletons of at least twelve horses and six dogs. But the treasures of the sepulchral chambers and ships had long ago fallen a prey to some of the numerous and nameless thieves who ransacked the graves of warriors old. Their riches were hidden from curious eyes. The vessel itself, which is of oak, clinked, painted and seventy-five feet long, is preserved in the Archaeological Museum at Christiania.

Life in the North, however humbly and homely, was attended in those days by accessories of considerable splendor. Geronimo's ornaments were indeed unknown. Beloved and counted as the "best of delicacies" roast pork, with wheaten bread, might also be provided for favored guests, in default of which delicacies cards and butter-milk were welcome, and the kind of fare during a royal visit comprised on alternate days, fish and milk, meat and ale. Yet the tables spread with such simple dainties were often gay with embroidered cloths and radiant with gilded vessels, dainty glass-beakers and repousse silver and bronze drinking horns. They were surrounded, too, by gorgeously clad revelers. Scaled cloaks, lined with fur and secured with magnificent bands of bronze inlaid with silver, of a silver gilt diversified with filigree work, garnets or walrus ivory, were flung over silk tunics or kirtles made of a kind of velvet called "pelt."

These were belted with girches finely wrought of precious metals; gold rings encircling legs, arms and fingers; silk caps, adorned with lace, covered the head; shoes were of leather, covered with beaten gold and stitched with silk; a gold band like a diadem confined tawny and profuse locks flowing down to the shoulders. We hear, besides, of gloves made soft with down, of suits of "many-colored English cloth," rain and dust cloaks, and of fur-lined mantles with golden neck straps. Signal the Jarl figures in St. Olaus's saga as clad in a blue kirtle and blue hose, high shoes laced around his legs, a gray cloak and a gray broad-brimmed hat and a hood over his face, a staff in his hand, with a gilt silver mounting at the upper end, from which a silver ring hung.—Edinburgh Review.

In the 12th century, the original picture was brought from Mt. Carmel to Naples by the religious of the Carmelite order when fleeing from the rapacity of the Mohammedans to leave the peaceful solitude of their mystic mount by the sea...

General of the Dominicans.

Considerable interest is felt in European diplomatic and ecclesiastical circles in the approaching election of a general of the Dominicans. This will take place some time this month and especially on the part of Pope Leo it is earnestly desired that the choice may fall upon a foreigner, and if possible, a Frenchman...

He had two reasons for this course;

he has desired to mark in an emphatic manner the international character of Catholic institutions, and to prepare the way gradually for a foreign Pope, and he has also desired to give renewed vitality to the religious orders in Italy, where they are less well organized than in other countries...

Fresh and Vigorous.

On a fine morning and a fine road, what is more inviting than a spin on a cycle. When it comes to a race, the suggestion of Mr. George Phillips, Sec'y. Leinster Cycling Club, Dublin, Ireland, has force: "I have found St. Jacobs Oil an invaluable remedy for strains and bruises, and so have several members of our club."

TWO DAYS A NUN.

Death of Sister Victim of Jesus.

On Sunday morning, the 20th inst., the bells of the Cathedral of Nicolet tolled to announce the death of a lady who, only two days before, had made her final vows and entered the Order of the Sisters of the Assumption in her native town. Miss Katie McCaffrey, the young nun's name in the world, was for ten months a novice in the convent and a model of all that is good and devoted in a religious. Only a few weeks before her death the physicians ordered her to leave the institution and seek rest and medical care with her parents...

INTEMPERANCE.

The Archbishop's Official Organ Speaks on the Subject.

La Semaine Religieuse, the organ of the Archbishop, publishes the following in its last issue under the heading "Intemperance." What terms can we employ to condemn this shameful passion? It is, and we say so with shame, the plague of our society. The laws, the preaching of priests, the formation of temperance societies, the reiterated appeals to the noblest sentiments of the heart of man, all remain ineffective, and drunkenness increases; it invades all classes and drags down all ages. What is the remedy, Great God? Who will supply it? We lately had Labor Day in Montreal. In the morning there was a great procession of workmen. Alas, what was to be seen at night? Drunken men in every street. There are three times more saloons than there should be in the city. If one could witness all the disorders which occur in them! It is in those places that people go to destroy their health and lose their reason and their honor. It is there that fathers of families go to spend their money, the money which a wife and children so badly need. From the age of eighteen young men know the road leading to them; and friends lead them there and the fathers themselves drive them sometimes by the example they set them. On beautiful intelligence, what becomes of you in these saloons? Still, there are men who, for a little money, are ever ready to encourage vice and to supply passion with all it asks for. It may be a child who stands before you and who asks you for a drink. Have pity on his weakness; refuse him the terrible beverage. Why? He has paid and that is all that is required. It may be a half-drunken man who stands at your counter. He does not know what he is doing nor what he is saying. He wants to drink and drink again, and you comply with his wishes and you make a brute of him. You saloon keepers, who act thus against all the laws of charity, prudence and honor, what an account you will have to render to God, the family and society. And these saloons, we are assured by persons worthy of belief, remain open on Sundays as on other days. This is a grave infraction of the law, but they don't mind the law. Secret entrances are prepared, and people gamble and debauch themselves at the very hour of public prayers. See the numbers of families where discord, dishonor and misery reign. This plague of intemperance is committing terrible ravages among our people. What tears it causes wives and mothers? How many lives it shortens, and how many souls are lost by it. In writing these lines we wish to induce all to have it in horror, and we ask the priests, legislators, writers, Christian parents and all honest people to league themselves against it.

Nine Long Years.

Mrs. John McLean writes from Barrie Island, Ont., March 4, 1889, as follows: "I have been a great sufferer from neuralgia for the last nine years, but, being advised to try St. Jacobs Oil, can now heartily endorse it as being a most excellent remedy for this complaint, as I have been greatly benefited by its use."

A pillar of the church, to be of any service, should, like any other pillar, have capital.

Could scarcely see. Mrs. John Martin, of Montague Bridge, P. E. I., writes: "It was troubled last summer with very bad headaches and constipation and sometimes could scarcely see. One bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters made a complete cure of my case, and I wish you every success."

A spiritualistic seance is at best a medium performance.

You hardly realize that it is medicine, when taking Carter's Little Liver Pills; they are very small, no bad effects; all troubles from torpid liver are relieved by their use.

During the debate on the Tarte-McGregory investigation Mr. J. J. Curran, M.P., made a powerful speech in support of the report of the Committee of Privileges and Elections on the subject.

As we wish to give what was admittedly an able and very impartial exposition of the case to our readers, we will reproduce Mr. Curran's speech in full from Hansard report next week.

The directors of St. Ann's Ward met today for the purpose of choosing a candidate to represent them in the City Council in the place of the late lamented Ald. Malone. According to all accounts, the contest seems to be narrowed down for practical purposes to two gentlemen, Messrs. M. Loughman and P. Mullin.

The claimantship of the Market Committee, vacant by Alderman Malone's death, ought to be conferred on Ald. Cunningham and we cannot understand why there should be the least hesitation in the naming that gentleman. There is now, as has been pointed out, but one English-speaking member of the council a chairman of committee.

The recent appointments to the Court of Queen's Bench of this Province have placed two very prominent lawyers in the ranks of the judiciary. It is not necessary to say anything in praise of the legal talents either of the Hon. Mr. LaCrosse or his new colleague the Hon. Jean Blanchet.

The public press has long been misled by the sensational falsehoods published under the name of a telegraphic agency called 'Dazibels.' This is a corporation, or something of the kind, professing to supply news from all quarters, and for this purpose has employed agents in all the great centres.

copy of the code and think that discoursing on it before the bench is all that is necessary." Perhaps this is not an unmixed evil, but petty litigation is, and the enormous dockets in the Magistrates Courts for small cases is not a good sign as regards the tendencies of a class of our people.

They do not seem to have many of the McCarthy type over in the United States, and the dual use of a language does not seem to act like a red rag on a bull to the people of that country in general.

The liberty, based on natural rights and guaranteed by the constitution, of educating our youth is a boon which we demand. Hence we most emphatically protest against every attempt at interfering with that liberty by unjust legislation.

And the people who oppose this use of the German tongue appear to be very few and insignificant. The spirit of Know-Nothingism, though not quite extinct in the Union, is not to-day a power to be feared any more than to be respected.

VERY manfully the Irish National party in the Imperial House of Commons are now entering into some close calculations as to the possible results of a general election, which they assume cannot be very much longer delayed.

As is usual in such cases, the committee was divided on party lines. The majority presented a report, of which the following is the conclusion:— Your Committee have the following general observations to make on the charges generally:— Having regard to various features which appear in the contracts which were the subject of this investigation, we feel bound to report that the members of the firm of Larkin, Connolly & Co., conspired to defraud the Government and the Harbour Commissioners.

The charges against Sir Hector Langevin, as already intimated, having been as above set forth, the Committee would observe that in the course of the investigation an effort was made to connect him with the wrongdoing of others who have been reported against as directly connected with fraudulent conduct.

Your Committee, therefore, report that the evidence does not justify them in concluding that the Minister knew of the conspiracy before mentioned, or that he willingly lent himself to its objects. The Committee recommend that, in addition to such action as may seem to be called for under the findings hereinbefore expressed, such legal proceedings as may be available be taken against those who are concerned in this conspiracy.

The public press has long been misled by the sensational falsehoods published under the name of a telegraphic agency called "Dazibels." This is a corporation, or something of the kind, professing to supply news from all quarters, and for this purpose has employed agents in all the great centres.

Ottawa manipulates the wires for the agency, though some may think that the reference of the honorable member to persons "in the gallery," who are not supposed to be there at all, was on a par with the conduct of members indulging in a comic song preceding an important division.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

The agony is over in the Tarte-McGregory investigation, and the Parliament of Canada has, by a majority of fifteen, adopted the report of the majority of the Committee of Privileges and Elections.

The task of the committee was Herculean, and owing to the attitude of the Hon. Sir John Thompson, Minister of Justice, who seemed determined that everything should be unearthed that could throw any light on the subject, the Government placed no obstacle in the way of the most thorough investigation.

As is usual in such cases, the committee was divided on party lines. The majority presented a report, of which the following is the conclusion:—

Your Committee have the following general observations to make on the charges generally:— Having regard to various features which appear in the contracts which were the subject of this investigation, we feel bound to report that the members of the firm of Larkin, Connolly & Co., conspired to defraud the Government and the Harbour Commissioners.

The charges against Sir Hector Langevin, as already intimated, having been as above set forth, the Committee would observe that in the course of the investigation an effort was made to connect him with the wrongdoing of others who have been reported against as directly connected with fraudulent conduct.

Your Committee, therefore, report that the evidence does not justify them in concluding that the Minister knew of the conspiracy before mentioned, or that he willingly lent himself to its objects. The Committee recommend that, in addition to such action as may seem to be called for under the findings hereinbefore expressed, such legal proceedings as may be available be taken against those who are concerned in this conspiracy.

The minority report concludes as follows:— In concluding their report your Committee would observe that the manner in which the several contracts were obtained by Larkin, Connolly & Co. from the Public Harbour Department and the Quebec Harbour Commissioners, the modifications subsequently made in these contracts in the interests of the firm, the enormous sums of money paid and allowed to them out of the public funds for extras and for damages, indicate without any reasonable doubt that this firm had gained a controlling influence over the Minister and Department of Public Works.

but the closest examination of the books and the witnesses failed to disclose evidence of any improper payments having been made to Boyd, while the only one made to Perley was that in 1887 of the jewelry and diamonds—a time long after many of the contracts had been improperly awarded and moneys improperly paid.

Except the desire to please and obey the Minister at the head of the Department, we cannot discover any motives which would induce these engineers to assist in defrauding the public in order to put money in the pockets of Larkin, Connolly & Co.

It is true we find that Boyd is a party to the fraud connected with the awarding of the Cross-wall contract, and that Perley was a party to this and other frauds in the letting of the contracts and the payment of the moneys to Larkin, Connolly & Co., but the fruits of these frauds did not go into their pockets, but into the pockets of Thomas McGreevy, towards the support of the newspaper Le Monde, to which Sir Hector swore he himself financially contributed, so that he might have a controlling influence over it if and when required, and to the fund managed by Thomas McGreevy on behalf of the party in the District of Quebec in the political interest of Sir Hector Langevin.

Both reports condemn the action of Mr. Perley, Chief Engineer of Public Works.

The debate in the House of Commons was principally as to which report should be adopted. At the close of the discussion, Mr. Dalton McCarthy, M.P., for some reason which is not quite apparent, made a very effective speech, which seemed strongly to support the findings of the majority, but concluded his remarks by proposing an amendment altogether out of joint with the speech he had just delivered.

This heretofore formidable member for North Simcoe must have felt very galling. The debate was far less acrimonious than might have been expected. The Hon. Sir Hector Langevin has been adjudged not guilty of personal corruption, but the verdict of the House of Commons is to the effect that in his official position he was overreached by a band of conspirators who plundered the public for their own benefit, only a small percentage of their swag having gone to political purposes.

The remarkable charges made by Mr. Lister against Mr. Haggart and others in connection with "Section B" contract, were again before the House of Commons on Wednesday last week, and were comfortably disposed of by a party vote giving a majority of twenty-four against the opposition.

Mr. Haggart formally denied the charges and Sir John Thompson made one of his powerful speeches, in which he showed that even if there was anything in the charges the House could not now take the time to inquire into it, which government showed that it had decided that a matter of privilege should be some object which had recently arisen, involved the privileges of the House and involved its immediate intervention.

The House sat for the first and last Saturday session and Mr. Kaulbach drew attention to the necessity of something being done to protect the Canadian fishermen from the operations of the Newfoundland bait net.

The chief event of the final hours of the session was the expulsion from the House of Mr. Thomas McGreevy. This was carried in silence, on the motion of the Minister of Justice, and a new writ ordered for Quebec West.

THE PROVINCIAL COMMISSION.

The Provincial Commission to enquire into the charges in connection with the Baie des Chateaux Railway appropriation has now been appointed, and will meet, it is said, immediately. No one can question the wisdom shown in the selection of judges.

The President is noted as a keen lawyer, a judge of men and their dealings, and an able analyst of evidence. His colleagues are equally eminent, and pending the setting of the Commission it would be well for the whole affair to be considered as being sub-judice. The press may with propriety be, if not dumb, at least cautious in its dealings with the subject.

Although it lacks some of the venom which was exhibited at the time of the Letellier affair, and Mr. Angers is not described as a faribair, yet the evil intent displayed is probably as strong as ever. The issue is simple. A very serious matter of more than provincial import demands investigation. The local Government is interested in the dispute. A judicial Commission has been appointed to investigate.

It is surely the interest of the Government to have the matter fully investigated. Any opposition will indicate a wish to avoid enquiry and so be an apparent proof of conscious moral obliquity. It is to be hoped that there will be no attempt to shift enquiry when the Commission meets by refusing to answer questions on the ground that the province has no right to appoint a Commission of the kind.

AN APPEAL.

We beg to call attention to the following circular from the Treasurers of the O'Hart Testamental Fund, which we heartily commend to our readers, and others desirous of subscribing to it. Mr. O'Hart deserves well of his countrymen at home and abroad—in Canada as well as in "Old Country." His labours have been most arduous in tracing the Irish pedigrees—to their sources and thus throwing much light on the History of Ireland.

An Appeal to the Irish race for a Testamental Fund to the O'Hart Irish Pedigrees, by Sir James L. O'Hart, Bart., Barrister-at-Law, the Castle of Edinburgh, County Lothian, and James J. Murphy, Esq., Astoria, Oregon.

In recognition of the invaluable services of Mr. John O'Hart, of Kilger, Co. Clare (Ireland), in his capacity of Irish Pedigrees and Etymology; and in consideration of the great assistance he has rendered in the tracing of the Irish and Anglo-Irish genealogies, without subsisting sources of party.

As a temporary recognition of his literary services, Mr. O'Hart in February of last year received from the First Lord of the Treasury a grant of £200 from the Royal Bounty Fund in recognition of his services.

THE O'HART TESTAMENTAL FUND. Subscriptions may be sent to the Treasurers direct, as above, or to the Hon. Edward Murphy of this city, who has kindly consented to take charge of the same.

Justices of the Peace. The following new Justices of the Peace have been appointed: District of Arthabaska—Mr. Arthur Talbot, merchant and postmaster of the municipality, District of Gaspe—Mr. James Jessup, jr., merchant, of the township of New-Antoine-Du-harve and Joseph Enguette, of the parish of Saint Etienne de Gres, St. Maurice.

The degree of success of Laine I may often be ascertained by the amount of sea-saw which it induces.

MERCIER'S ANSWER.

Mr. Garneau says he was then acting Premier, acting Treasurer and Commissioner of Public Works and that he had a treble responsibility which tried him all the more; that he was then ill, and that on the whole he was disinclined to agree to the transaction, notwithstanding the strong efforts which were being made to close it until he had obtained a guarantee satisfactory to himself and colleagues and the advice of the Attorney-General, but so soon as he obtained that and the deposit of half a million of bonds secured by first mortgage on the road he felt more at ease and without danger.

Your Honor says that there seems to exist a toll gate between the Government and the creditors of the Province, where tribute must be paid by claimants for justice. I am certain that your Honor has not made this assertion without weighing the gravity of it, and if your Honor was convinced that such a toll gate exists, it would not only be your right but also your duty to help me in discovering where that toll gate is—where it is located and to punish those who have established it and who make use of it for personal ends to the detriment of the public interest.

Regarding the Governor's assertion that the Government did not owe anything and that the company's debt to Armstrong was not due until the work had been finished and payable in bonds, Mr. Mercier remarks that the Government has paid nothing to Armstrong, had never anything to do with him, has never been called on to admit his claim or discuss it and that Armstrong himself never claimed anything from the Government. This is proved, he says, by the evidence. Armstrong's contract was changed by the new syndicate, who took over Armstrong's work in order to get possession of the road.

With reference to the illegality of issuing letters of credit, Mr. Mercier says he believes that as soon as the system can be abandoned the better. He adds, however, that these could hardly be called letters of credit, but formal recognition of a claim. Respecting the alleged promise of Hon. Charles Langlois to deposit $50,000 in the Banque du Peuple if the bank discounted the Valliere note, Mr. Mercier says Mr. Langlois denies making such a promise.

On September 15 the Lieut. Governor replied stating that the explanations were not of a character to dispense with the immediate consideration of the appointment of a royal commission. In reply to this Mr. Mercier wrote that he still believed that an inquiry by the Legislature would be preferable to a royal commission.

On September 16 Mr. Mercier replied that one commissioner would be better than three, and requests the Governor to agree to this view. He quoted as precedents for this course the Pacific scandal and the North Shore inquiry.

On September 17 the Lieutenant-Governor replied that if Judge Davidson was objectionable he would replace him by Judge Johnson, but he preferred three judges. As to inquiring into Federal subsidies granted to the Baie des Chateaux Railway, the Lieut. Governor declined, it would be unconstitutional.

On the same day Mr. Mercier replied, agreeing to limit the enquiry to Provincial subsidies. He had no formal objection to Judge Davidson, except that he was a young judge, was many times a candidate against his political friends and was president of the Junior Conservative Association.

On September 17 Mr. Mercier wrote protesting against Mr. Abbott putting his Honor's letter before the public alone without the reply, and the Lieut. Governor promised to transmit the reply to the Governor-General. This concludes the correspondence.

MARY MAGDALENE.

Generally Understood to Have Been the "Sinful Woman"—The Traditional History of the saint.

Of all the women, save one, who figure in the Old or New Testament, perhaps, Mary Magdalen has the most thrilling and eventful history. It is in ecclesiastical history that she was of a noble and wealthy Jewish family, and, therefore, the child of respectable parents.

that rarest type of female beauty. When dressed in the latest and best style known, she walked abroad, somewhat above the medium height, no wonder that the admiring eyes of men followed her, and that she fell a prey to their wiles and adulation.

A JEWISH ALIBI.

shooked the moral sense of her acquaintances, but ever in the most infamous depths of her retained traces of that grace and loveliness of person which were so prominently hers. She became, to the great dishonour of her sex, a prey to the cravings of lust, and receded far from being "a holy and shame-faced woman, who is grace upon grace." (Ecc. 31, 18.)

WEEP BITTER TEARS.

On the occasion of the supper given by them to Jesus after the raising from the dead of their brother Lazarus. Her sister Martha served. "Mary therefore took a pound of ointment of right spikenard, of great price, and anointed the feet of Jesus and wiped his feet with her hair, and the house was filled with the odour of the ointment." (St. John 12, 3.)

of any ordinary man. Holy writ has it (Proverbs 11, 30) that "favour is deceitful and beauty is vain: the woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised." Through the favour that is deceitful and the beauty that is vain, Mary Magdalen was a source of temptation to others, and these qualities aggravated her fall, which prove that they are dangerous possessions. She lost every grace, "sat down by every hedge, and opened her quiver against every arrow" (Ecc. 36, 15) and grew callous in wickedness.

forting words. [St. Luke 7, 47]: "Wherefore I say to thee: Many sins are forgiven her because she hath loved much." After her unhappy and blighted life, the capacity of loving God remained, and, touched by grace and pierced through and cleansed by the penetrating glance of the Man-God, Mary Magdalen was no longer the same person. If hitherto vain, now she is modest; if hitherto in the villa of sin, now she is to be found in the Temple of God; if in the past she was lowly, now she is chaste; if formerly she was frivolous and easily led into mischief, and would suffer herself to be torn to bits rather than offend God mortally; if hitherto a stranger to God's love, now she is in it, and will for her life daily grow more and more in charity; if formerly she did no penance, now 'twas to be as her daily food; in a word, if in the past she was lowly, now she is good. Once she saw Jesus, and was blessed and pardoned by Him, and his love became the passion of her life. What an encouragement to abandoned men and women is the story of her conversion! Her contrition was sincere, permanent, and real. Was she favoured in any way (as things go in the world) to merit and receive such a complete and entire pardon? Was she a friend or relative of any of the chosen Twelve? Possibly she was, but 'twas enough for her to have determined on a radical change of life. When Jesus saw this his graces were showered on her. She was admitted to his love, "and He said to the woman, thy faith hath made thee safe, go in peace." Thenceforward modesty, retirement, daily mortification, the flight of the occasions of sin, the resisting of temptations, prayer, and charity with God and man were of her life. Sinners that want a thorough re-conciliation with God must adopt the same methods. Would she persevere might have been asked by both herself and her friends? This was to be the truest test of her conversion were real. She did persevere. As a penitent she was rarely if ever excelled. She knew enough of the hollowness, villainy, and baseness of men ever to return to her former course of life. The graces she received were preventive, effectual and solid; her resolutions to abandon sin were taken once for all, even if it cost her martyrdom. Surely this is and was and could not but be the change of the right hand of the Most High. She that was known as a sinful woman, that is, in the city a sinner, fell at the feet of Jesus, and rose up a justified soul. As sanctifying grace entered her soul her self-respect returned, her physical beauty was enhanced, and withal, a keen yearning to be where Jesus was took possession of her. This we see that in the home of the Pharisee, where Jesus was invited to eat, she with a pious daring drew near the Lord and adored him. [St. Luke 7, 37.] "And behold, a woman that was in the city a sinner, when she heard that he sat at meat in the Pharisee's house, brought an alabaster box of ointment (Lk. 7, 38), and standing behind at his feet she began to wash his feet with tears and wipe them with the hairs of her head, and kissed his feet and anointed them with the ointment." A similar scene happened at

on the occasion of the supper given by them to Jesus after the raising from the dead of their brother Lazarus. Her sister Martha served. "Mary therefore took a pound of ointment of right spikenard, of great price, and anointed the feet of Jesus and wiped his feet with her hair, and the house was filled with the odour of the ointment." [St. John 12, 3.] She merited the privilege of following the Saviour through his passion, and was present at the crucifixion with Mary of Cleophas and the Blessed Virgin Mary, his mother, and, therefore, in their company and in that of the Apostles, was in the best society of the world. At that awful tragic scene she comforted the Virgin Mother, who to this day is represented as leaning on her for support and encouragement. She merited also to be among the first to behold the Lord after his glorious resurrection, after having watched all night at his tomb. She was privileged to have a special apparition of the Lord before his ascension. And there is a pious tradition that when she and Lazarus and her sister Martha and others were in days of persecution watched on the deep without sail or out to the shores of the modern Marseilles, she retired to a cave, near the site of that city, and that she did penance before a Cross, by the orders of the Saviour. She did so, all the rest of her days, penitent to the last. For thirty years, away from all the society of men, she daily heard the celestial praises and was finally carried on high by the angels.

NAPOLEON'S CRADLE. WHAT A STRANGER SEES AT CORSICA.

The Charm of Ajaccio—Romantic Tales and Weird Stories of the Corsican Isles.

AJACCIO, Aug. 1891.—In the salt freshness of a bright morning on the sea, we notice in the distance either clouds or mountains—we cannot tell precisely which. They prove to be both clouds and mountains, the latter dark and sombre, with jagged peaks and immense slopes: the former heavy and moist, floating about aimlessly.

poetry, and the sincerity of the stories of bandits and vendettas. All these grandmother tales, those superstitions of the "bad eye," those strange rocks that they show you as divine visitations of wrath suddenly petrifying men, beasts or vessels, those legends of the devil, of trees, of lakes and rivers—all these old stories take their origin in connection with places most likely in the minds of the people, to substantiate the weird fictions.
