ORD CASTLETON glan- | ces around the drawingroom with an expression of decided annoyance as he comes in. It is a dull December afternoon, and already the brief daylight is begining to fade. His daughter—Lady Gladys Monckton—is sitting in the glow of the firelight, her hands idly folded in her lap, and her big, grey eyes gazing wistfully into the heart of the fire. "Where is your stepmother?" he asks, his tones expressing keen displeasure.

Gladys looks up languidly. "She is in her boudoir with Mr.

Seaforth, I believe." Lord Castleton turns away with a barely suppressed exclamation of annoyance, but at this moment Lady Castleton herself enters the room. She is a tall, graceful woman, with well cut features and dark brilliant eyes. She might be any age between twenty and thirty-five, although per-haps the rich material which she invariably selects for her attire adds to, rather than detracts from, her apparent age. She has a low, caressing voice, and her smile is dangerously sweet. Altogether she is accounted a singularly fascinating woman, but there is a hard glitter in her eyes at times which belies her usual expression of smiling suavity, and which bodes no good for those who attempt to thwart her ladyship. She is accompanied by a man of medium height, with a good-looking somewhat expressionless face. George Seaforth is supposed to be a suitor for the hand of Lady Gladys, though the barely disguised antipathy with which the girl treats him does not induce him to cease his visits. Lord Castleton is far too proud to evince jealousy where his young wife is concerned, but he is none too well pleased to frequently discover Seaforth in Stella's boudoir, while Gladys is left to her own devices in the drawing-room. His greeting of the visitor is cold in the extreme, as the latter advances toward him with hand outstretched. "How do you do?" he says, curtly, then, crossing the room, he seats himself by his wife's side, a disturbed expression on his face.

Stella smiles archly up at him and lays a caressing hand upon his shoulder. "What a long time you have been away, dear. Were you detained? I

"I did not expect to return until about five o'clock," he answers moodily, "and at any rate you have had company to console you during my absence," with a displeased glance to-

"Oh, yes, Mr. Seaforth has brought

Lord Castleton rises and walks over to the mantlepiece. There he turns and regards Seaforth with cold displeasure.

"I regret I have already made an engagement for this evening," he says decidedly, "so that it will be impossible for you to accept Mr. Seaforth's kind invitation.

Lady Castleton frowns. She is not accustomed to having her plans thwarted by the usually indulgent husband, to whom she has only been married a few months.

She darts a glance of keenest resentment toward him.

"But that need not deter us from accepting," she answers, petulantly. "Gladys and I can surely go under Mr. Seaforth's escort?"

Lord Castleton glances at his daugh-

"Do you care to go, Gladys?"
"No thank you, papa," she replies. 'I have already made an engagement for this evening. I promised to spend a few hours with Lady Telfer."

Lady Castleton's face wears an evil expression as she darts a quick glance at her stepdaughter. Her resentment is swiftly subdued, however, and she says in her usual velvety tones:
"I think you might have consulted me, Gladys, before entering into any engagement. You will be unable to fulfil your promise upon this oc-

Lady Gladys makes no reply, though her beautiful face wears a weary, strained expression that has grown familiar to it during the last few months, ever since her father had married this unknown woman of whose antecedents no one seems cognizant, save that prior to her marriage she had occupied the position of companion to a cantankerous old maid.

Gladys endeavors at all costs to keep the peace with her stepmother, though the two women have nothing at all in common, and derive not the least pleasure from one another's society. Already the girl is beginning to tire of her enforced submission to her stepmother's whims, but for her father's sake she endeavors to avoid an open breach, and on this occasion she is quite prepared to forego her projected visit; but Lord Castleton takes up the cudgels on his daughter's behalf with unusual warmth. 'Pardon me, Stella, Gadys will keep he engagement she has made. Lady Telfer is her godmother, and far too influential a person to be neglected. I regret that we shall be unable to avail ourselves of your kindness, Mr.

Her ladyship bites her lip and her eyes gleam dangerously for a moment. She would dearly love to defy her husband's authority and announce her intention of accompanying George Seaforth to the theater; but convention must be observed, and she has I sition to which she has so recently attained, so she contrives to subdue her rising anger, and turns with a smile to greet some visitors who are at that moment shown into the room. Among them is the Duchess of Winterton, who is a social luminary of no mean order, and Stella colors with gratified pride, for her grace is recognized as a powerful factor in society, and her patronage tells heavily in favor to any aspirant for social success. The great lady's demeanor toward her hostess is, however, frigid in the extreme, and she makes no secret of the fact that her visit is paid to Gladys rather than to her stepmother, to whom she is coldly courteous and nothing more.

This was galling in the extreme to a woman of Lady Castleton's temper-ament. She had set herself to cultivate the best society, and it was anneying to be met by so chilly a reception at the outset.

Gladys greets her with evident pleasure, and the two are soon chatting gaily, while Lady Castleton finds herself somewhat neglected.

Her grace issues a warm invitation to Gladys to visit her at Winterton House, and expresses a hope that Lord and Lady Castleton will dine with her during their daughter's stay. George Seaforth takes his leave immediately after the duchess's depart-ure, and Gladys quits the room to

"Apparently Gladys is a highly important young person," she says, with a sneer. "The duchess appeared to barely recognize my existence."

"Don't talk nonsense, my dear," answers his lordship, somewhat testily, "the duchess has known Gladys since her babyhood, and she was an intimate friend of my late wife's; it is perfectly natural that she should interest herself in her daughter. I think you are making a great mistake in seeking to quarrel with Gladys. She is quite prepared to treat you with frendliness, but you incessantly at-tempt to annoy her."
"Frendliness!" echoes Lady Castleton, with a derisive laugh. "She looks upon me as an interloper, and is at no pains to conceal her aversion to me. If I were not to assert myself sometimes-

Lord Castleton waves his hand impatiently. "There, there, Stella, that will do. If you cannot agree with Gladys I am convinced it is not her fault. I always find her amiable enough myself.' Whereupon her ladyship breaks into a storm of weeping, which it takes his lordship some time to soothe, and at length he quits the room with a Already he is beginning to ask him- her self-control.

ance tonight. Will it not be delight- | no mind to relinquish the social po- | self whether his marriage is a mistake, for the new Lady Castleton is both impervious and extravagant, though he is still sufficiently under the spell of her beauty to be unable to gauge the true depths of her character.

The following afternoon Lady Castleton is driving in the Row with her smart victoria and pair of dantily stepping chestnuts. The air is mild for the time of year, although the wind is somewhat keen, and her ladyship leans back gracefully, enjoying to the full the evident interest her appearance excites. She bows to one or two people who she knows, and George Seaforth and one or two other men come up to speak to her when her dainty little equipage is drawn up by the rails for a few moments.

Her husband and stepdaughter are riding together, and as they canter past she turns to cast an envious glance at Gladys' girlish figure. The sun gleams upon her bright hair, which is gathered into a simple knot beneath her small riding hat, and turns it into gold, and intensifying the delicate purity of her complexion. Though Stella does not like the girl she is forced to admit that she is extremely beautiful.

After a few moments' conversation with Seaforth, she gives the signal to be driven home, and bows a graceful adieu to her cavaliers.

Just before she reaches her own door her glance falls upon a shabbilydressed woman who is threading her way wearily along, glancing neither to the right nor left, as she walks listlessly on; but Lady Castleton's cheeks are blanched with a sudden terror as she catches sight of the bent, dejected figure, and her eyes grow wide with Hastily she averts her gaze, iear. shrinking back in overwhelming dread lest the strange woman may have seen and recognized her. Apparently she is totally unconscious of the elegantlydressed lady who is driven past, but Stella's heart almost seems to cease beating until the danger is passed.

When she reaches her own door she springs out and up the steps. Entering the dining-room she sinks into a chair as though completely exhausted, and her maid who appears at that moment is alarmed at the ashy pallor of her face. Her pale lips can scarcely frame words, but the maid rightly interprets her request for brandy, which she administers, and in a few moments the color begins to creep back slowly into her mistress's pallid cheeks.

"It is nothing, Robson," she says, a few moments later, when the fierce pain at her heart had somewhat abated. "I am all right now, you needn't say anything about it to his lordship. I am subject to these attacks, but they soon pass.' She rises to her feet, though with evident effort, and slowly ascends the wide staircase to her own rooms; but her hands are clenched tightly and her sigh, sorely disturbed and ill at ease. lips set with the endeavor to retain The Subscription price to the Western Home Monthly is 50 cents per annum to any address in Canada, or British Isles. CHAPTER II. AT WINTERTON HOUSE.

A couple of days later the duchess comes to fetch Gladys to pay her promised visit at Winterton House. The girl is warmly attached to the elder woman, and always looks forward to her visits to her with genuine pleasure, which has certainly not di-minished since the advent of her step-

The duchess is giving a party on the night of her arrival, and Lady Gladys attires herself in one of her loveliest gowns for the occasion. It is composed of soft pink silk, the bodice lightly draped with choice old lace, and the girl presents a charming picture with her beautiful clear-cut face and exquisite coloring.

She is taken into dinner by Lord Ellerton, a young noble whose head has been somewhat turned by the adulations of society. He is the owner of several estates and a considerable fortune, and in consequence is much sought after by maneuvering mammas. He is very much attracted by the simple, unaffected charm of the beautiful girl beside him, and the two young people appear to be extremely appreciative of one another's society.

Later on, in the drawing-room, he goes across to the duchess and asks softly, "Who is that charming girl I took in to dinner? I did not catch her name.'

"Oh, that is Lady Gladys Monckton," his hostess replies; well pleased that her favorite has created so good an impression.

After a time Lord Ellerton contrives to make his way over to Gladys, but she is engaged in conversation with an elderly lady whom she appears to know intimately.

"I heard from my nephew—Eric Weston— today," says the elder lady. "I suppose you remember him, Gladys, do you not?"

"Why of course I do," answers the girl, laughing gaily. "Did I not meet him at a children's party at your house some few years ago? He was most attentive to me I remember." most attentive to me I remember.

Her companion smiles. "Well he appears to entertain a very pleasant recollection of you, and frequently asks after you in his letters.'

The color in Lady Gladys' cheeks deepens as she answers: "What fun those parties used to be, Mrs. Cuthbertson. I don't think we have anything half so delightful now. Do you give children's parties still?"

"Certainly I do. You shall come to the next one if you like. Eric will be home by that time, I expect. He has got on remarkably well in Australia, but has recently inherited a fortune from his uncle and intends to settle down again in the old country"

Lord Ellerton frowns and passes or He is not at all anxious for further news concerning the young man who always asks after Lady Gladys.

Apparently he is fated to meet with annoyance this evening, for a few mements later he encounters Lord Esdale-the Duke of Winterton's eldest son. "How do you like Lady Gladys Monckton?" he queries. "I saw that you took her in to dinner tonight." "Oh, very well. She's rather a nice sort of girl, isn't she?"

"Rather nice!" echoes Lord Esdale, indignantly. "She's one of the nicest girls I ever met, and quite one of the prettiest, too. I have known her all my life, and we're great chums."

Later in the evening Lord Ellerton is chatting to a dowager friend of his mother's, while his eyes incessantly follow Gladys, who just then is talking in an animated fashion to Lord Esdale. His companion does not fail to notice his abstraction, and following the direction of his eyes she says:
"Esdale and Lady Gladys appear to get on remarkably well together, don't they? I wonder if they intend to make a match of it? I suppose his mother approves, or she would not invite her here so frequently, though I daresay she is not particularly happy at home."

"Is she not?" queried his lordship.
He appears to take a deep interest in all that concerns Lady Gladys."

"Her father married a little while back, you know-some unknown woman whom no one visits. I don't know most of the society functions which anything of her antecedents, but she is a remarkably beautiful woman. I feel almost tempted to call upon her

'Why don't you?" he answers eager-"and allow me to accompany you. I am dying to see this extremely beautiful lady of unknown lineage."

Mrs. Stanhope laughs. "I will take you with me with pleasure if you wish.

I have known Lord Castleton for many years, and there is no reason why I should not call on his wife.' · A few days later Mrs. Stanhope fulfils her promise, and Lord Ellerton is taken to call upon the parents of the beautiful girl who has shed so potent a spell over him.

Lord and Lady Castleton are at home, but greatly to Lord Ellerton's chagrin Gladys is still absent at Winterton House. Lady Castleton rises gracefully to receive her visitors, and Lord Ellerton's eyes have a gleam of puzzled recognition in them as they rest upon his hostess' face. Where can he have seen this woman before, he wonders, As they drive away he asks abruptly of his companion: "What was Lady Castleton's maiden name. Do you

"Let me see-I did hear it. Oh, yes, of course, it was Courthorpe. Is it familiar to you?"

Ellerton shakes his head, the perplexity in his face deepening.

"I suppose you don't know anything of her people, do you?"

"Nothing at all," she answers. "She was companion to an old lady before Lord Castleton married her, and that is all I know-or anyone else either, I believe. However, she is an extremely beautiful woman.'

"Oh, undeniably,' responds her companion, but he cannot rid himself of the impression that he has met this woman before, somewhere, though he cannot recall time or place.

Next day he meets the duchess with Gladys in the park, and she stops her carriage to speak to him, in answer to his imploring look. She is highly amused at his evident infatuation for her young protege, though she appears oblivious to his manifest endeavors to ascertain their plans. through his maneuvers distinctly, and is not at all surprised when they meet him frequently at balls and dinner parties.

A few nights before Gladys' inten-ded departure from Winterton House the duchess invites her father and stepmother to dine with her. She dislikes Lady Castleton but she would not offend her for the girl's sake.

Her grace's spacious drawing-room is well filled when Lord and Lady Castleton make their appearance, but the buzz of conversation grows perceptibly less at her ladyship's entrance. She is looking superbly beautiful tonight, in a gorgeous gown of flamecolored velvet, which emphasizes her glowing southern beauty wonderfully. Her big dark eyes are alight with pleasure as she sails up the room toward her hostess, well aware of the many admiring glances which are being cast in her direction. Lord Esdale's eyes are fixed upon her with undisguised admiration, and he hastens forward eagerly to secure an introduction. Throughout the evening he pays Lady Castleton marked attenion, to her grace's unutterable annoyance, and his openly displayed infatuation is remarked upon by many peo-

Next day he calls to see Stella at her home in Mayfair, and upon many successive days he is also to be found there. Lord Castleton is anything but pleased at the young man's frequent visits. Very often he returns to find his wife singing love songs to Esdale in the gloaming, while the infatuated young man leans over the piano, his gaze fixed adoringly upon the beautiful face of the singer. He looks upon Esdale almost as though looks upon Esdale almost as though he were a son of his own, for he has known him all his life, but he extremely annoyed at the boy's infatuation for his beautiful wife.

Lord Ellerton meanwhile has contrived to see a great deal of Lady Gladys. He adroitly ascertains the intended movements of her grace, and she and her protese meet him at

The climax is reached at the Kennedy's ball, where, as usual, he makes his appearance immediately after the entrance of her grace and Gladys. The latter gives a smiling assent to his request for a dance, but he is much chargined to find that only one valse is available. He frowns darkly at the. row of straggling heiroglyphics, then glances up at the girl entreatingly. "Cannot you possibly manage to give me a second dance?" he asks, with an imploring glance.

"I am sorry, but you are too late. You see my card is quite filled." "But you can cancel one of these in my favor?" he asks, earnestly. She looks up at him in genuine sur-

"Oh, no that is out of the question." Ellerton is extremely annoyed at his failure to secure any sign of preference from Lady Gladys, but determines to make the best of his single opportunity.

The duchess meanwhile has listened to the little colloquy with infinite amusement. She considers Lord Ellerton a terribly spoilt young man, and is of opinion that a little snubbing will be highly beneficial to him.

The room is crowded and extremely warm, and Lord Ellerton has no difficulty in persuading his partner to sit out their dance in the cool of the conservatory adjoining the ballroom.

"Mrs. Stanhope took me to call upon Lady Castleton yesterday afternoon," he said tentatively, anxious to see if she would evince surprise or displeasure.

"Indeed," she responds, in some surprise, "Did you find her in?"
"Oh, yes; thanks. What a charming into other channels. Evidently she does not care to discuss her home life with him. "I suppose you will soon be leaving

"Oh, yes; papa is anxious for me to return. I shall be here only a few days longer." Just then, to his keen annoyance, the duchess approaches. "Why did you not bring Lady Gladys back to me?" she asks, reproachfully. I have been searching everywhere for you."

Her grace insists upon returning to the ballroom, where Gladys is instantly carried off by eager partners, and Lord Ellerton has no opportunity of care for?" further conversation with her that "No," sh evening. On his way home that night he decides that he will call upon Lord Castleton next morning, and ask his consent to his marriage with

The former is considerably astonished when the young man presents himself with a request to be allowed to propose to his daughter. He is not altogether prepossessed in this suitor's favor, for it is plain from his manner that he looks upon an alliance with himself as an indisputable honor.

"If my daughter chooses to accept your proposal, Lord Ellerton, I shall raise no objection, but the decision rests entirely in her own hands. Shall I acquaint her with your proposal?"

"Oh, no, thank you," replies the suitor, eagerly. "I merely wished to ask your permission before attempting to win Lady Gladys' heart. I dare not flatter myself that she would accept me were I to propose to her immediately.

Lord Castleton invites him to remain to luncheon, an invitation which is accepted with alacrity.

Although Lady Castleton treats her guest with extreme cordiality, his former unfavorable opinion of her is deepened upon this occasion, and again he is assailed by that inexplicable sense of familiarity. On leaving the house an hour later, he encounters Lord Esdale.
"Hullo!" exclaims his lordship.
"Where are you bound for?"

"Well, I was about to call on your mother, if it is not too early."

"Have you been to the Castletons?" Ellerton nods. "Yes, I have been unching there; but I was not at all sorry to quit her ladyship's society. What on earth possessed Castleton to marry her? I wonder where on earth he can have met her?"

"I don't know what you mean by that," cries Esdale, indignantly. "She is a woman any man might fall in love with. In my opinion, she's one of the most beautiful women I've ever met, and her singing is divine.

Ellerton utters an impatient exclama-

"Really, Esdale, you seem determined to make a fool of yourself. I must confess that I cannot understand your infatuation for a woman of that description."

Esdale flushes crimson as he extends his hand in farewell.

"As we're not likely to agree upon that subject, Ellerton, it isn't much use discussing it any further. Good-by."

The two men take leave of one another, and Ellerton is fully aware that Esdale will pay no heed to his words, but will pursue his way blindly in defiance of the advice of his friends, for the sake of the woman who appears to have so powerful a fascination for him. That afternoon Gladys finds herself left alone in the drawing-room with Lord Ellerton, and the unusually grave expression of his face warns her that he is about to speak upon some matter of moment. Instinctively she draws a little away from him, but her evident reluctance only serves to increase his ardor, for Ellerton is not used to being treated in this fashion.

His manner is perfection, as-having acquainted her with his interview with Lord Castleton—very courteously and deferentially he lays his proposal before her. He tells her that he does not presume to think that she already cares for him, but if she will allow him he hopes in time to be able to win her Gladys colors deeply. "I am extremely honored by your proposal, Lord Ellerton," she answers nervously, "but have known you such a short time,

"But there is no need for you to decide just yet," he cries, eagerly. "I know perfectly well that it is impossible you should care for me yet, but won't you give me an opportunity of endeavoring to gain your affection—that is all I ask."

"I think it would be better to let me answer in the negative now, Lord Ellerton; I could not guarantee that I should ever care for you; indeed, I think it is most unlikely. It would be far wiser for you to give up all thought

"But is there anyone else whom you

"No," she answers, reluctantly. "Then I am content to wait in the hope of gaining your love," he says. "May I?"

And although Gladys is greatly averse to his project, she cannot very well decline a suitor who pleads so humbly to be allowed to gain her hand.

The duchess is full of curiosity to hear how Ellerton's wooing has sped, for she gleans nothing from the expression of Gladys' face. His lordship does not look crestfallen, neither does he wear the aspect of radiant happiness which one expects of a man who has recently been accepted by the lady of his choice.

Gladys explains the situation, and her grace laughs. "I expect you will marry him in the end," she says, patting the girl's cheek affectionately.

"Oh, no, I really don't think so," says Gladys earnestly. "I would much rather have refused him definitely if he would have allowed me."

Ellerton is so constantly at her side after this that people begin to look upon their engagement as a matter of course. Two days later Gladys returns to her own home.

She is accompanied by the duchess, who is none too pleased to discover her son in Lady Castleton's drawingroom, though no inkling of the intimacy between them has reached her. Her visit is as brief as it consistent with the demands of etiquette, and when she rises to go she glances across sternly at her son.

Accept Substitutes

In this issue we have the advertisements of many of the largest and best - known business houses in America. Some of these firms have spent fortunes in advertising a trademarked line and in creating a demand for a particular class of goods which have stood the test of time.

We invite you to buy in this market in full confidence that you will be fairly treated.

But if, because of the announcements on these pages, you go to your dealer to make a purchase of some article recommended, we urge you to insist upon getting what you ask for. Do not accept substitutes for advertised articles, which, for purpose of his own, the dealer may offer. In fairness to yourself, as well as to the advertisers, when you are convinced that you want an article advertised in this magazine, do not accept something else, although it may be described as "just as good."

The advertised article has stood the test of time. The substitute, as a rule, is a cheap imitation. Don't be humbugged.

"She is Lord Castleton's wife," responds her grace frigidly.

"Unfortunately," answers her son. "If she were single, I should certainly ask her to become Lady Esdale.'

The duchess is too absolutely horrified to reply, and the rest of the drive home is passed in utter silence. Her grace is greatly disturbed by her son's unmistakable infatuation, and having communicated her fears to her husband, she entreats him to remonstrate with Esdale; but he laughs at her fears, and declares that there is not the least danger-the boy's infatuation will soon

FLIGHT.

Lord Castleton is unfeignedly delighted at his daughter's return, and even her stepmother appears glad to see her again. Lord Ellerton comes almost every day to visit them, and though he has taken a great dislike to Lady Castleton, he contrives to conceal his sentiments towards her for the sake of the girl he loves.

Lord Castleton and his wife are gradually drifting wider apart. Stella has never had any real affection for her middle-aged husband, but now she treats him with the cool frigidity bordering upon dislike, while the warm affection he had once entertained for her has merged into indifference, although he is still proud of the sensation created by her beauty, and grudges her nothing, though she is undeniably extravagant.

She has become strangely disturbed and restless during the last few weeks, often cause her to turn ghastly pale, while she trembles violently, and looks as if she were about to faint. Gladys and her father become greatly alarmed by these nervous attacks, which occur with increasing frequency, and one day she appears so very ill that a doctor is sent for. He looks very grave, and inquires if Lady Castleton has had any recent mental trouble.

"Oh, no," answers Lady Gladys. "She has had no anxiety that we are aware of. I came into the drawing-room this afternoon, and found her looking out of the window. Suddenly she turned and collapsed in a heap on the floor. We gave her some brandy, and she revived a little, but I really thought at first she was dying."

After a time Lady Castleton rises and declares herself to be completely recovered. "It is nothing, really," she says impatiently. "I have been subject to these attacks the whole of my life, and there is not the least need for

The cause of her illness had been nothing more than the casual glimpse of a woman's face, a shabby, wretchedlooking woman, who scanned the windows of Carnchester Terrace closely. She does not know in which of the houses her ladyship resides, but undoubtedly she is looking for her. Only a couple of days earlier she encountered her when she was out driving, and now she has evidently ascertained the whereabouts of Lady Castleton's home.

But a short period can elapse before she will have tracked her down, and the sight of that pale, haggard face peering so dangerously near has filled her ladyship with terror.

There is a rap at the door, and Stella starts to her feet, her heart beating fiercely in her ears, and a hectic color glowing in her cheeks.
"Who is it?" she asks, excitedly, as the maid enters.

"I beg your pardon, my lady, but his lordship was so anxious that I should give you this note I didn't like to re-Lady Castleton takes the note with quietly withdraws. The note is from Lord Esdale, and the contents do not surprise her in the least. He entreats her to leave her husband's roof and fly with him. He vows that if she consents he will marry her immediately she obtains a divorce. and concludes with a request that she will grant him an interview.

Stella is almost at the end of her resources, and is sorely tempted to accede to his plan, for the woman who is so diligently searching for her does not know her by her present title, and if she hears of the disappearance of Lady Castleton it will convey nothing to her. In any case she will be compelled to seek safety in flight very shortly, and the only thing to be decided is whether she will go alone or with Lord Esdale. Taking a pencil and a sheet of paper, she writes:

"The National Gallery, Florentine Room, Thursday, at three o'clock.' She attaches no signature, and places the message in a blank envelope, which she hands to the maid upon her return. She is still undecided whether she will accept Esdale's proposal, but, at any rate, she can meet him on Thursday, and by that time she will have decided upon a course of action.

She has arranged to give a dinner party that evening, and though she is still feeling ill and unnerved, she derides that she must enact the role of hostess, and receive her guests as though nothing has happened, otherwise she may be prevented from keeping her appointment with Esdale the following day.

She had already arranged an expedition to the National Gallery with Gladys and Ellerton, but she has no doubt that she will be able to slip away from them to meet her lover. She forces herself to rise and complete her toilet, and as she proceeds the color gradually returns to her cheeks and the brilliancy to her eyes. When she enters the drawing-room an hour later, attired in a gorgeous gown of rustic velvet emand an unexpected knock at the door or the sound of a passing footstep will broidered in orange, she looks wonder-fully beautiful, and her husband glances at her with unmistakable pleasure. Her guests are charmed by her beauty and vivacity, for if she does not intend to remain much longer beneath her husband's roof she is determined to win all the admiration she can before she goes.

It is a rainy, unpleasant night, and the dismal streets are wet. Under the brilliantly-lighted windows of the dining-room a bent, shabbily-dressed figure is standing, who, could the fair chatelaine see her, would swiftly banish the roses from her ladyship's cheeks. She dare not linger too long, for fear of the police, but she glances up at the lighted windows with an expression of concentrated malignity in her face. Undoubtedly, Lady Castleton's day of reckoning is close at hand. Next day it is hopelessly wet, and Lady Gladys, regarding the doleful vista of streaming pavements and mudencumbered road which is presented to her gaze, makes the suggestion that their expedition shall be postponed. Lady Castleton, however, negatives this proposition decidedly.

"I am not afraid of a little rain," she declares scornfully. "However wet it may be, I intend to go. Of course, you can please yourself."

But Lady Gladys assents wearily—she usually gives in to her imperious stepmother's wishes, and at two-thirty concerning corriage comes round, and the three of longer."

Gladys tells him that Mrs. Cuthbertthem set off together.

stream, and Lady Gladys sighs as she looks out at the dismal prospect. Already she is heartily tired of Lord Ellerton's devotion, and she is quite certain that she will never regard him with the least affection; but apparently it is impossible to convince him of the hopeless nature of his suit, which he continues to prosecute with unflagging ardor.

It is Stella who has planned the visit to the National Gallery, for Lady Gladys is not particularly interested in paintings, but she follows her stepmother listlessly from room to room. Their inspection of the pictures occupies some time, and it is almost half-past three ere they reached the room where Stella has arranged to meet Lord

He does not see Gladys and Ellerton as he advances eagerly, with an exclamation of pleasure.

"At last!" he says, impetuously. "How late you are!"

"Hush!" she says, with a warning glance, and his face clouds as he observes her companions.

Lord Ellerton frowns as he recognizes Esdale, for he has no doubt that the meeting has been prearranged. He greets the young man coldly, and calls Lady Gladys' attention to a picture at the farther end of the room. off together to inspect it, and when they return Lord Esdale and her stepmother have disappeared.

Lady Gladys evinces no surprise, nor does she feel that there is any need for alarm, and she and Ellerton complete the round of the galleries. Still, there is no sign of the missing couple, and Gladys' face grows a little anxious.

"Is there any need for us to wait for them?" asks Ellerton. "Perhaps they "Perhaps they have returned already?"

"Oh, no, I am quite sure Stella would not do that; but you might go and see if the carriage is still there, then we shall be quite sure."

He departs to fulfil her behest, and Lady Gladys is not at all sorry to be left, for she has had so much of Ellerton's society of late that she can well dispense with it for a time. She is thinking over the situation as she sits awaiting his return. She decides that it is impossible she should ever care for him sufficiently to become his wife, and that she must persuade her father to dismiss him. "Then," she says to herself, dreamily, "then I shall be free; how nice it will be." Suddenly she Suddenly she starts up with an exclamation of astonishment, as a tall blue-eyed man with a sun-burnt face advances eagerly towards her.

He extends his hand with a pleasant smile.

"Surely you are Lady Gladys Monckton?" he queries.

"Yes, indeed. And you are Eric Weston, are you not?" she answers, shaking hands with him cordially, her face reflecting the evident pleasure she

"I am indeed pleased to see you. I consider myself singularly fortunate to meet you again so soon. Do you know that I only landed in England yesterday, and have already been plaguing my aunt to bring me to call upon you. You have not changed a scrap," he declares, eyeing her with a glance of frank admiration. Just then Eric's aunt, Mrs. Cuthbertson, joins them, and Lady Gladys tells her that she is waiting for her stepmother and Lord Esdale.

Mrs. Cuthbertson utters an exclamation of astonishment.

"I am afraid you are waiting in vain," she says, with a puzzled expression upon her face. "I saw Lord Esdale just stepping into a hansom at the entrance as I came in, about an hour ago. A lady was with him, but I did not see her face. She wore a dark-blue dress and a blue toque with a bunch of cherries at the side."

Gladys starts as she recognizes the description of her stepmother's dress. What can be the meaning of her extraordinary behavior? Just then Lord Ellerton comes back, looking considerably annoyed.

"The carriage is still here," he exclaims, "and I cannot see Lady Castleton anywhere. The rain is coming down in sheets; it is no use to wait any

"Certainly," she answers, and the two men see them into the carriage. Lady Gladys feels strangely puzzled and alarmed. Lord Ellerton looks so grave, and Eric's pleasant face wears a decidedly anxious expression. She does not put her fears into words, and she leans back in the corner of the carriage, miserably anxious and silent, as they drive home.

A vague, intangible dread has taken possession of her, and she implores her companion to come with her to acquaint Lord Castleton with the news of Stella's disappearance.

"Of course, she may come back very soon" she says, though in her heart she feels the fallacy of her words; "but I should be so glad if you would explain to papa for me.'

The elder woman shakes her head. "I am afraid she doesn't intend to come back, my dear," she says, kindly, "but I will certainly acquaint your father with the circumstances, if you wish."

As they alight from the carriage, a haggard-looking woman approaches, and peers curiously into their faces; but it is neither of them whom she seeks, and she passes on in a weary dispirited fashion. Had they but known it, here is the cause of Lady Castleton's

Meantime, the fugitive pair are being driven swiftly toward Charing Cross station, en route for Dover and Calais, Paris being their ultimate destination. They reach Dover, and are about to proceed to the landing-stage, when Lord Esdale suddenly clutches his companion's arm, and points with shaking hand to the contents bill of a newspaper, which is displayed upon the railway bookstall.
"Look," he gasps, and Stella, following the direction of his eye in terrified amazement, reads:

"My father!" he murmurs under his breath. "Can it be possible? I saw him yesterday morning, and he was in perfect health then. Oh, Stella! what is to be done?" Stella's face darkens. This sudden contretemps is extremely annoying. How provoking that Esdale should have caught sight of that wretched news bill! Now he will insist upon returning home, she supposes.

She turns upon him angrily. "Well, what do you intend to do? I shall go on in any case."

He glances at her imploringly. "Darling, I have no choice matter. I am compelled to return to London, but I will join you at the earliest possible moment. You had better go on by this boat, and I will come to you as soon as possible." Stella demurs, but ultimately is forced to assent to his proposition, and half an hour later the big steamer is bearing her across the Channel, while Esdale is speeding back to London as fast as steam can carry him. Lord Castleton is furious when he is acquainted with the news of his wife's flight. She has brought disgrace upon a name which has hitherto been stainless, and he determines that he will free himself from her as soon as the law allows.

He rages and storms, and Lady Gladys, who has never before seen her father so terribly angry, is perfectly terrified. To her inexpressible relief, Mrs. Cuthbertson proposes that she should come on a visit to her immedi-

It is arranged that she shall go the following day, and, before she leaves, she asks her father to write to Lord Ellerton, telling him that she has come to the conclusion that she will never be able to marry him.

"You are quite in earnest about this?" he asks. "Remember, you would enjoy considerable advantages as Ellerton's wife. I don't care for the man myself, but I want you to fully realize what you are giving up."

Lady Gladys laughs. "Never fear, papa. I don't in the least mind renouncing the prospective glories of an alliance with Lord Ellerton. I don't care for him, and therefore will not marry him. Will you please write to him at once?"

The letter is despatched, and that afternoon Gladys departs upon her visit to Mrs. Cuthbertson, while the following day Lord Castleton quits the house to which he had brought Stella with such fond expectations of happiness.

Gladys is extremely happy with her friends. They treat her as if she were a daughter of their own, and Eric Weston, who makes his home with them, is unfeignedly delighted at her advent. The two young people spend a great deal of time in one another's society, and gradually the warm liking which already exists between them ripens into something deeper, and a very short time elapses ere Lady Gladys becomes Eric's promised wife.

CHAPTER IV.

RUN TO EARTH.

The wretched woman who had scrutinized Gladys and her companion so closely as they alighted from the carriage, passes on dejectedly, and bends her steps towards the nearest police station. She is drenched with rain and chilled to the bone. She has tasted no food since the preceding day, and she can scarcely drag herself along for the aching weariness of her limbs. Her numbed brain is pondering a problem that is difficult to solve. Shall she denounce the woman for whom she has been searching so long and fruitlessly, or shall she make yet another effort to find her and buy her silence? But her senses are beginning to reel and her head is strangely dizzy. She feels that she cannot possibly go any further, and she is absolutely penniless.

The bright light of the station lamp gleams out above her head, and stumblingly, gropingly, she enters the build-

She advances towards the inspector's desk, and in answer to his query: "I am Jane Robson, who is wanted for the Staplefield mystery!" she said, in tremulous tones. "Oh, you needn't look so astonished. I'm not mad. You'll find t perfectly true

The inspector commences to question her and ascertains that her story is correct.

Five years have elapsed since the Staplefield murder case set all London agog, and the affair had remained unsolved until the present day. An elderly man named Blake, who was married to a woman very much younger than himself, died suddenly, leaving the whole of his fortune to his wife unreservedly. Subsequently a second will was found, which had been drawn up a few days prior to his death, by which he bequeathed all his money to a distant relative. Foul play was suspected, and the widow was arrested upon a charge of having poisoned him, but the crime could not be clearly proved against her, for the maid, who was alleged to have bought the poison for her mistress, had disappeared, and all efforts to trace her proved fruit-

The case had almost entirely slipped from the memory of the public when Tane Robson, the missing maidservant, surrenders herself at the police court in a destitute condition.

The papers are full of the latest police court sensation, and widespread interest is excited by the case, but Lady Castleton, who is waiting in a small country place outside Paris for her lover to join her, does not chance to see a London newspaper, and so is unaware of the danger which menaces

A couple of days later she is seated in the window gazing down the slong white road which leads to the rai way station.

Esdale has written to say that his father is now happily out of danger, and that he will be with her immediately. "He may arrive at any moment now," she tells herself, and as she sits scanning the long, straight road a little cloud of dust arises in the distance.
"At last!" she says to herself, joyfully, as she rises to glance at her reflection in the long mirror. Her dress is in perfect order, and she regards her-self with some satisfaction, for her gown of reseda velvet becomes her admirably. Her hand goes stealthily towards her bosom, where lies concealed a tiny phial containing some dark liquid, for Stella has gone in fear and trembling for so many years that she has never been quite able to rid herself of the haunting fear which still dogs her footsteps.

The small closed vehicle turns in at the gate and rumbles up the short, flagged approach to the house. Stella holds the window curtain aside, and glances out eagerly, but the next instant the curtain falls from her nerveless fingers, and she starts back with a terrified cry, her beautiful eyes dilated with horror. The approaching vehicle contains two men, neither of whom is Esdale, and as Stella's gaze falls upon the face of one of them her face grows gray, realizes that her hour has come.

The police officer who was employed at the time of her previous trial, accompanied by another man, stands upon the doorstep waiting to be admitted. She hears a resounding peal at the bell, and knows perfectly well that this man will recognize her the moment he sees her. Swiftly she draws the little bottle from its hiding-place, raises it to her lips, and swallows the contents.

The two men enter hurriedly the next moment, but are only just in time to catch her as she utters a groan and sways forward. They bend over her anxiously, but she is quite dead. Their victim has escaped them.

A few moments later the sound of wheels is again heard, and immediately afterwards Esdale dashes into the room. He is overwhelmed with horror at the sight which greets his eyes.

"You murderers!" he cries, turning upon the police officers fiercely. "She has suffered from heart disease for years, and you have killed her."

"No, no, my lord," says the man who is supporting Stella in his arms. "She has taken her own life without a doubt. Prussic acid is the cause of it."

Esdale is at first incredulous, but when the little phial is produced he is compelled to believe, and on hearing the details of Stella's crime he rushes out of the house in a distracted condition. He does not return, and a few days later his body is recovered from the lake where he has sought relief from his sorrows in death.

There went a man from home, and to his neighbours twain He gave to keep for him, two sacks of

The next morning at daylight our camp was astir. By nine o'clock we were moving from the village. With us were nine lean, spavined horses that should have been turned out to grass and left to end their days in some green pasture.

"No matter," said the chief; "you will see. In two months it will be different."

Parenthetically, I wish to say that it was truth the old man spoke, for when I left them a few weeks later, they had sixteen specimens of good horseflesh obtained by trading. First, a horse blind on one eye for one that visually was sound, but had the distemper. He was exchanged for one that was slightly lame, the gipsy taking the chance of his safe recovery. And so on, always bettering by the toms of the gipsy. They arise very early, and breakfast, as a meal at which all sit, is unknown to them. The women prepare the food as it is wanted. After breaking the fast the men, with the exception of the chief and one of the younger men, disperse to the country around, trading horses, stealing eatables, or if the camp be near a town, sending "gringoes" to the camp, where the older women, and oftentimes one or two of the younger ones, are waiting to tell fortunes if their palms are properly crossed. The old men are often employed in basket-making, constructing many beautiful articles of birchwood. The young women divide the outlaying country into districts, each to be traversed by one, and oc-casic ally two of them. They will ask for anything they happen to want with a guilelessness which seldom fails of bringing to them the coveted article. says:

"Will you wear this on your head for me?" If the young man is the favored one the answer is, "Yes, if you will tie it." This he proceeds to do, while the rest of the camp seem to notice nothing unusual. Then the couple disappear, coming back with arms interlocked and placid contentment on their faces. They go directly to the chief for the public announcement of their betrothal. Rings are interchanged. This ceremony is are interchanged. This ceremony is as binding as though it were spoken before a priest. After that, until the wedding day, the young couple are inseparable. Once married, and a change takes place. They are seldom seen together until after the birth of their first child. Then they are "lasgoes," old married folk, and their future actions are of little intheir future actions are of little interest to the tribe.

You may have seen a gipsy wedding. I can assure you that the real ceremony was performed some hours before the public one, which was arranged solely for the cash it would bring the pair. The real marriage was performed by the chief, and is seldom witnessed by any alien. I saw the wedding of the chief's own daughter to a member of a nearby clan, and I do not feel that I am betraying secrets if I tell the happenings. The groom was rich, as gipsy wealth is counted, owned many horses, and the furnishings of his house on wheels were above the workingman's average. All the

A procession of women, headed by the chief and the oldest woman of the tribe, approached. When within speaking distance of the tent the party halted, and the chief, in a loud voice, critd:

"Come forth, Vanega; it is thy wife who calls to thee." Parting the curtains, the bride-

"And may I enter, my children?" Receiving no consent, he, together with the rest of the tribe, passed through the entrance and came to the bride and groom, who stood hand in hand awaiting him. Lifting his hands above his head, he said:

"Vanega, I give thee Sanna for thy wife. She will cook thy dinner and bear thy children. As thou dealest with her, so will I deal with thee."

Turning to the mother, he said: "Our child has left us. Bye-and-bye morning he remained secluded in his I she will return, but not alone. Greet thou who comes with her."

Turning, he made some sign with his thumb and forefinger and passed from the house, followed by the onlookers.

That night there was another ceremony, at which a Justice of the Peace of the neighbourhood officiated. There was a feast, the giving of presents by everyone in the camp, including many visitors; and as the bride and groom left the fire and started toward their new home a shower of rice, mingled with barley, fell on them, and many wishes as to their future happy life were shouted after them.

The Romany too, have a thanksgiving celebration. It comes October 2nd, and is in the nature of a harvest festival rather than for the commemoration of any date in their history. And it is musical, their speech, full of soft gutturals, of sibilant phrasings. It is an admixevery known language, with all harshness omitted.

The American gipsy, if one may use that term, is a dweller in the towns when the snow lies thick upon the field, but with spring's first warm breath he takes to the open as a beaver builds his dam, naturally, and as a matter of course. Restrictions are not to his liking. Laws were made to be broken, to his way of thinking. Steal? Lie? Take advantage of the most unadvantageous circumstances? to be sure. But their women are chaste, despite all it is said to the contrary. Religion? A full expression of gipsy beliefs would require a big volume, but I may say that he believes in one Supreme Being. His code of life is extremely simple.

I might write a volume on the curious folk-songs of these people. Some day I may. Suffice it to say that some of the most beautiful music of the world is embodied in the songs the Zingaro sings to his sweetheart, or the gipsy mother croons to her young hopeful.

Muldoon has no suggestion of a foreign accent, and I will admit that a man by the name of Muldoon who has no brogue is a bit disappointing.

Every action of the man implies reserve; everything he does is well within his limit. When he sits he does not cross his legs, play the devil's tattoo with his hands, twirl his moustache, stroke his hair, scratch his nose, adjust his necktie, nor examine his finger nails. He completes his toilet in his room. Such control of nerves, such perfect self-possession, such absolute graceclothed or stripped—gives hope that the spirit of Athens may yet to us re-

"I think," said Professor Muldoon to me, "I think my success—such as it is as a trainer, has hinged on the fact that I have never worked for great muscular strength, simply for balance, or what you call mastery or control. Few men possess their bodies, rather the body bullies the mind all day long."

Please note the remark, and tell me if the colleges haven't something to In fact, why doesn't Harvard hire him?

And the answer is, the services of Muldoon are not for sale, save as you go to him and become a part of his system.

Muldoon is rich, and he works now simply because he is wise and knows that no man can afford to be idle—that retiring on your laurels is death-unless you are working for new laurels. So Muldoon works at the task he likes, and in the way that pleases him.

When a youth he began to train as a wrestler; he evolved an idea, and this idea is that the mind of a man should rule his body, that the body should obey the mind.

And after nearly fifty years of work n physical training, there is only one word which for him looms large, and that is the word obey.

Muldoon made his body obey, and he became perfectly ambi-dextrous. Wrestling requires more science than boxing, and so he specialized on the mat instead of the gloves.

Then he took to training prize-fight-

Members of the Society for Ethical Culture will recall that Muldoon trained Sullivan for his match with Kilrain, and acted as Sullivan's second at the ringside. John gave the sedative to every man he met as long as he was trained by Muldoon.

For a time the Solid Man succeeded probably does not, in making John L. obey, but finally and is born again.

Professor William Muldoon—Mul- John L. decided that in all the bright doon the Solid Man! Muldoon the lexicon of words there is no such word champion wrestler of the world! I as obedience. Then it was that John have taken a few falls out of him in days agone—in a literary way—and what I will now say, I will say.

are no longer the object of Muldoon's solicitude; his raw stock are business men, artists, lawyers, preachers and doctors who have gone the pace.

Muldoon has a system, a system never tried by any one else, because no else, because no other living man dare attempt it, knowing perfectly well it would fail.

And if you know a thing is going to! fail, it does.

Muldoon's system is not founded on love, kindness and good cheer. These are all secondary, and while they do exist in his mind they are kept carefully out of sight. The plan will die with him.

The key of the whole thing is obedience. It is necessary to subjugate the will of the patient. Paradoxically you have to kill a man's will in order to build it up.

The whip method of breaking horses is along the same line. The trainer goes into the box stall with a whip and terrorizes the animal until he absolutely submits, and yet the horse is never struck.

Muldoon is cruel only as nature is cruel—you obey Nature, co-operate with her and you find that she is kind. Obedience to Nature brings you everything you need, mental, spiritual, physical Obey Muldoon and cease buttingin with your stub end of a will and you succeed. The only way you can get the start of Muldoon is to obey and yet his body be a very wretch of a body, that gorges itself with bad food, swills strange drinks, refuses to go to bed at night, and declines to get up in the morning, wooing persistently the means of debility and disease.

A great poet may be swag-bellied, blear-eyed and have a title to a slouching, wilful, erratic, untrained digestive tract. The man has never forced his body to acquire good habits through the law of obedience, and after years of bodily back-talk things reach a point where this hoodlum of a physical cosmos is going down and dragging the mind with it. As long as the man can do business he submits to being bullied by his body. All sorts of vicious habits grow up un-The body demands cigars, rebuked. cigarettes, stimulants, strange dishes, novel sights, smells, sounds and sensations, and the mind of the man is powerless, being dragged hither and yon by this wilful, restless beast, which often grows more gross and inefficient and full of twitchings, twists and pain as the mind evolves, develops and refines. Thought goes on, and the man may do big work, but some day the hand that reached for the salt picks up the pepper, and the tongue that would say "pepper" says "salt."

Muldoon's treatment goes under the general term of "dope," and the formula is about as follows:-

You arrive at the long, plain, Quaker gray shingled house on the hill, after a pleasant drive of an hour from the station at White Plains.

Muldoon receives you with the quiet dignity of a Chesterfield. You are impressed by the man, only you wish he would thaw out and sympathize with you. Later you ascertain that Muldoon does not effuse over anybody, even over a member of the Supreme Court of the United States.

The Senator is startled, then he half laughs as it comes to him that it is a joke, and he replies "Oh, I prefer to stand, thank you."

low house on the hill-top, just as the clock in the kitchen is striking nine.

The Senator is told he can go to bed. No order is required. He finds his room, undresses without a light, puts on a woolen night-robe that he finds on the bedpost and tumbles into bed, subdued, tired and a bit resentful. He has decided to go home on the morrow-the system is too severe. But before he can really formulate his plans he is asleep, lulled by the lowing of distant cattle. "Six o'clock!" It is the mild voice of the athletic attendant.

At six-ten the attendant once more calls, this time in a chest-tone.

At six-fifteen, he returns with a bucket of water that he is told to douse on the victim of Mrs. Morpheus without ruth. It is not necessary, the victim is cosmic, and struggles out on the floor, making a dive for duds.

"Sleep is a privilege," says Muldoon, "and when this truth is once fixed in a man's mind he gets busy pounding his ear, the instant he gets a chance.'

Insomnia never comes to a man who has to get up exactly at six o'clock. Insomnia troubles only those who can sleep any time.

People who live on the banks of the Ganges never bathe, because they can bathe any time.

To go to bed at a certain hour and get up at a certain hour means the cultivation of a habit of the body. This habit puts you to bed, tucks you in, and softly sings you a lullaby that closes down your eyelids, bidding dull care begone.

Muldoon holds that it is just as necessary to get up in the morning as to go to bed at night.

Down below, the twenty-four men have gathered—for be it known that Muldoon takes one score and four, and no more.

There are light calisthenics, a march of a half mile and back, then the show-

All this with great deliberation. The victims are given bathrobes, and told to go upstairs, and clothe them in their right minds and citizens' clothes. Muldoon is a great believer in the psychology of duds. When we eat we should dress like gentlemen, just as if we were to meet expected guests. The act of dressing and undressing tends to stop brooding, and masticating the mental limit. The late Dr. Maurice Bucke once told me that he had blocked a fit of hysteria in a woman, by asking her to go and change her dress, and do up her hair, because he wanted her to meet a certain man from New York who was coming to tea. Muldoon says the gym. dress is only valuable as you discard it for clean, get dirty and stay so is no virtue. But people who are always clean are not much better than the other kind.

And note you this, Muldoon trains with his trainers. All that he asks them to do, he does. He, himself, is an immaculate dresser, without being extravagant. But he believes in a clean collar, cuffs, a fresh handkerchief and Breakfast comes after the gentle work, the bath, and the getting ready, as a gift of the gods. It is a simple meal of fruit, toast, poached eggs, and just one cup of coffee. I noticed that every man polished his plate, but no one asked for more.

Muldoon sits at the server's table in the middle of the room, and each plate is filled under his immediate watchful eye. Without being fussy, he yet knows what every man is doing-all of the

The eating is done with great delib-After breakfast, there is a rest for just an hour, and then the word is passed, "Boots and saddles!" You get into your riding clothes, and go to the barn a quarter of a mile away. If you are a horseman your animal is simply pointed out, but if the work is new, you are shown how.

Horseback riding is always a scientific treatment for the neurotic. He forgets himself in holding on-and most of Muldoon's horses, I saw, were selected with the idea of preventing introspection in the rider. It is a slow ride of two hours and a half. Occasionally, at the hills, you dismount and lead your horse.

One little pleasantry is occasionally indulged in when there are raw recruits who are prone to be gay. You leave your horses in charge of a groom and walk down a hill through the woods to get a drink at a famous medicinal spring.

begin to plead, to beg, to swear—the veterans laugh and start off on foot. When you get home it is strip again and a bath; then citizens' clothes and

After dinner there is a lolling time of an hour; then "the stroll," a long slow walk, over the meadow, through the woods, across the creek. Supper comes with the novitiate hungry as a bear, and tired. Exhaustion is something else.

Then it is that the deserters desert, They bribe a stable man to take them back to town—in a wheelbarrow—any way. The work is killing-Muldoon is a tyrant!

But if they remain two days, they stay two more and then nature begins to play through them. Tired, lame, sore, stupid—yes, but it is a delicious stupidity, not one of fear and cold feet. It is just a don't-give-a-dam feeling.

A certain amount of physical exercise excites mentality; follow up your out-door work, and mind hibernates. Exercise is an investment-you expend the energy only that you may get back more energy. You spend a hundred dollars to get back one hundred and

All this physical work is to get your body where it can rest and absorb.

The body is a strange battery-in order to replenish its cells with potential energy, you have to get it in a state of rest. This condition of perfect rest comes best after slow, moderate exercise in the open air.

Muldoon simply carries his men over the hill to a point where they are so tired they can rest and absorb. He knows exactly what he is doing-he nearly kills them, but strangely enough, none die on the premises. Those only die who lack the will to allow him to use his will to amend theirs, and these of course are the deserters.

It is so much easier to swallow something out of a bottle, and hire a man to give you massage.

But everything costs-if you would have health, cultivate your will and expend energy.

We know enough, and if we only had dainty linen, and appear before the world a new man. You get dirty in order that you may get clean, but to could all live a hundred years, unless run over by a benzine buggy. As it is, could all live a hundred years, unless run over by a benzine buggy. As it is, for lack of will and lack of a Muldoon, we die just when we should be getting ready to live. Great is Muldoon, trainer of men!

When Comp'ny Comes.

Some boys is mad when comp'ny comes to stay for meals. They hate
To have the other people eat, while boys must wait and wait; But I've about made up my mind I'm different from the rest,

For, as for me, I b'lieve I like the second table best.

To eat along with comp'ny is so trying.
For it's tough
To sit and watch the vituals when you dassent touch the stuff;
You see your father serving out the dark meat and the light,
Until a boy is sure he'll starve before he gets a bite.

When comp'ny is a-watching you, you've got to be polite,
And eat your victuals with a fork, and take a little bite;
You can't have nothing till you're asked, and 'cause a boy is small Folks think he isn't hungry, and he's never asked at all.

It worries boys like everything to have the comp'ny stay

A-setting 'round the table, like they couldn't get away;

A Bachelor's Lament.

A bachelor sat in his cabin door,
As the shades of evening fell,
The sunbeams fell on the dirty floor
Of the room he knew so well.
Weary and sad and lonely,
Heavy in heart and brain,
He hung his hat on his threadbare knee.
And chanted a sad refrain.

"Oh, little I thought it would be like this

When I came to Salmon Arm;
I thought the forest would disappear.
And soon I would have a farm;
I thought that some sweet maiden
Gladly would be my wife,
To soothe my sorrows and share my And comfort me all my life."

"But look at me now, and the life I lead, It would try an angel's soul, To toil all day and return at night To a dark and dirty hole; They say I keep things tidy, They say my cooking's good, But somehow it isn't like mother's was, Nor done as a good wife could."

"I wonder if ever my lonely lot Will change for a better state,
And if some sweet, compassionate maid
Will pity my cheerless fate;
Oh, for a woman's presence!
Oh, for a woman's bread!
Oh, could I sell my potato crop
And purchase a wife instead!"

"Sometimes when asleep in my bed I dream

That I'm coming home at night.
To find my wife with the table set
And the house all warmth and light;
There are my rosy children,
Climbing upon my knee,
Kissing and calling me, 'Papa, dear'.
Oh, sad that it cannot be."

"Now, I wonder if I should go back Could I find a partner there? They used to call me a handsome chap; I'm sure I'd be good to her."

"Life is beyond endurance,"
He said with a savage face;
"I'll have a woman before next fall,

Or I'll quit the bloomin' place."
"Rocky Mountain Goat."

A High Ball From Ontario.

Brantford, Ont., Oct. 25, 1907. Editor.—I would like to write a few lines and take my chance of getting acquainted with some nice looking girls. In didn't say handsome-of course, if she is handsome all the better, but I meant pleasant looking.

I am 5 feet 10 inches, weigh 180 lbs., dark brown eyes, Protestant. I would like to get acquainted with a nice looking girl, well built, weight from 130 to 170, must be tall, about 5 feet 7 or 8 inches—one that can cook pretty fair, is neat and can hold her own temper and is not chewing fat all the time. That drives a fellow loony and keeps your paper myself, my father is, and I always look forward to the correspondence column and should very much like to know a few of the circle that surround it.

I quite agree with "Blue Eyed Biddy" in all she says in the July number. It is not right to expect a woman to milk cows, carry wood and water, etc. A man doesn't want to come in at night and do half the housework, so why should he expect his wife to do half of his chores after working in the house all day?

As for bachelors having a hard time there is no doubt about that, because he has to do the housework as well as the outside work. As for coming home and finding a bare table, as Blue Eyed Biddy says, that is not quite right, as he more often comes home and finds the table piled up with dirty dishes which he has to slog into and wash before he can get his meals.

I quite agree with Blue Eyed Biddy's tastes and should like to make her acquaintance, though like her, I should not like to get married by correspond-"Bold and Brilliant British Bachelor,"

Thinks Women a Ruisance.

Crescent Lake, Sask., Sept. 20, 1907.

Editor.—I am following the letters in your paper with great interest. There are only two writers which I would like to shake hands with, "'The Devil" and "Old Sleuth." I think that corresponding with ladies is nonsense. And say, boys, I think some of you are good cooks, and what are women for; they are a nuisance, that's all. I think myself too good to go into matrimony with my eyes closed. Some young men marry and think they have struck it lucky, but I do not agree with them. "Old Phenomenal."

Strawberries and Cream.

Horse Hill, Alta., Sept. 25, 1907.
Editor.—I take great interest in reading the letters in your paper. I am all broke up on "Happy Hooligan;" he is just the one I want.

I am a young Canadian girl, just 18 years of age, and think it is time I was making a break.

I have brown hair, hazel eyes, fair complexion and always classed with the good looking ones. I have lived on a farm all my life; good housekeeper; like lots of fun; can play music and sing. If any young man would like to correspond with me I would be only too glad to answer their requests. I would like one under 25 years of age. would like one under 25 years of age.

Bellshill, Alta., Sept. 21, 1907.
Editor.—I have been following your correspondence column for some time and think that it is all right. I am a widower, with one child six years old, and would like to get acquainted with some nice girl or widow who wants a home. Will you please send me their address. I do not want her for a slave; I want her for a wife. I am not rich.

address. I do not want her for a slave; I want her for a wife. I am not rich. but I can make a good home for her. I am 45 years old. I would like to get one between 35 and 45 years old, kind hearted and pleasant, to make it homelike for me. I have a quarter section of land in Alberta and a team. You can send my address to such as you think would fill the bill, for if she can cook and do the house work, that is enough for her to do, but if she wants to do more I think she can be accommodated.

I love a good woman and like to see them enjoy life.

"Candy Boy" got the Fever.

Clearwater, Man., Sept. 28, 1907. Editor.—Have been taking great pleosure in reading your paper, espec-ially the correspondence page, but never until I saw "Silverheel's" letter did it occur to write one myself.

I am a town boy, 5 feet, 10 inches tall, 22 years of age, weighing about 150 pounds. Am rather dark and awfully funny at times.

I might say that I entirely agree with "Silverheels" about the requirements or rather about what a wife should be. I often wonder why some of our Canadian wives submit to the treatment that some do, viz: Cutting wood, carrying water and feeding stock, especially when the men folks are sitting around smoking and talking baseball.

Now, Mr. Editor, I am very anxious to begin a correpondence with "Silver-heels" or some young lady of her stamp who can write a nice lively, spicy letter like the one she wrote in the August issue.

"Candy Boy."

Pansy Likes "Canadian Jack." Clearwater, Man., Sept 20, 1907. Editor.—Would you kindly find room in your valuable column of correspondence for my few interesting lines?

I have taken great interest in reading your paper, especially the letters of the fair maids and youths of the Canadian West. It's my idea that some of them speak the truth in plain language, such as "Canadian Jack." That is the kind of a nusband to have.

I would like to correspond with "Canadian Jack," August issue. I have lived on a farm most of my life, can milk cows if I have to when the good man is away; can also make his even-ings pleasant for him.

I am 5 feet, 2 inches in height and have fair curly hair and laughing blue eyes. Look on the funny side of life. Hoping to gain admittance, also success in your circle.

Lumber Jack Furious at Times.

Mountain Mill, Alta., Oct. 9, 1907. Editor.—It has given me great please ure to read the different letters in your correspondence circle. I shall feel gratified if you will admit me into your club. I do not take your valuable paper, but my brother takes it and as I am staying with him at present I read his.

Some of the letters are very nice and interesting, while others have a sarcastic ring in them, written both by ladies and gentlemen. Some writers are very hard to please indeed, and I think those that are so very particular are pretty sure to be old maids or bachelors.

I am 5 feet, 8 inches in height, light hair and blue eyes. Have a peaceable and gentle disposition, though furious when aroused, but as I am naturally very slow to anger, this does not often hap-I am not altogther too bad looking, but I may say I am a moderate smoker. I have a pretty good educa-

I certainly do not expect a wife to milk cows or feed pigs or do any man's work. I would like her to be fairly well educated and be able to sing and play the piano or organ.

Broncho Gets Frisky.

Moose Jaw, Sask., Oct. 19, 1907.
Editor.—Will you kindly find enough space in your correspondence columns for a short letter as I am a subscriber to your most excellent paper and I must say I find the letters both interesting and instructive as they bring out people's traits.

people's traits.

I wrote you once before; I presume it found its way to the waste paper basket, as I did not see it in print. However, I thought I would try again. I think "Brown Eyed Lassie" strikes the right cord when she says a woman should help milk in a busy time if she is not overworked herself. Take where there is no family or even a family of is not overworked nerself. Take where there is no family or even a family of growing girls, I fail to see the objections to girls milking in clean dry weather or in a clean place in the summertime, but in wet weather or in the winter let the men do the milking. Women of the West do not do as much milking and choring as those of On-

I consider "Violet" a good sensible lassie, when she says she is willing to take things as they come for a year to take things as they come for a year or two; she should certainly make a good wife. I am enclosing two letters, one for "Violet," of Wapella, and one to "Estella," of Alberta. Will you kindly forward same. Hoping I am not using too much of your valuable space. "Broncho."

Wants to Correspond.

Winnipeg, Oct. 12, 1907.

Editor.—I am a reader of your interesting paper month by month; there is no doubt it is valuable in many ways to this Western people. I am not a farmer, but a carpenter, hoping in the near future to locate in one of the rising towns of the West.

With that in view, I would like to correspond with some of the fair maidens of the West in the hope of finding a suitable wife and possibly location too. I have a little money saved up, am temperate in habits, age 28, height 5 feet, 9 inches; dark, English by birth, beying been in this country, two 6 feet, 9 inches; dark, English by birth, having been in this country two years. If any of the lady correspondents would like to correspond, my address is with the editor. "Edgar."

Golden Plain, Sask., Oct. 14, 1907. Editor.—I take great pleasure in reading some of the letters in your correspondence column, especially the one who signs herself "Peggy McCarthy" in your August number. She says that she might grow a few flowers if the husband would plant the seeds and hoe the weeds out of them. Now, where would her part come in unless it would be picking them and pinning them to her bosom. I don't think that this girl would suit me at all, for when I come in after being in the fields all day I like to have some fun if there is any to be had, but instead of this she thinks that he should stick a pipe in his mouth so as to be quiet. I am glad to see that she has no use for the moderate drinker as I am a member of the R. F. of T. myself. God help the poor bachelors if all the girls are like this one; they would be better without a girl. I am not particular about driving double just yet, particular about driving double just yet, but would like to correspond with some nice young lady about eighteen or twenty, a farmer's daughter prefered. She must be good looking, kind, loving and true, fond of music and danc-

As for myself, I am a farmer's son, age twenty-two, good looking and fond of amusement of any kind. I will leave my address with the editor.

Milestone, Sask., Oct 10, 1907.
Editor.—I notice several of your correspondents simply want letters and are not in the matrimonial market, notably "Nouhika," with whom I should like to exchange a few letters as I have always enjoyed that amusement, having many relations in England.

I do not see anything about the regulations for this department, but do not want my name and address published. I presume you would send it to those who ask for it; which would be agreeable to me.

I am what some here call "getting old," but don't hold that opinion of myself. I notice one subscriber gives 34 as her age—a very good age, too. A woman begins to get woman's virtues then.

Of course, as "Nouhika" says, it is wise to look on the bright side of life, but I generally find the greatest fun and wit is to be found with the graver and silliness is often mistaken for humor.

I don't suppose anyone is interested in my personal appearance, but I am English, have been four years in Mani-toba and Saskatchewan, and am a bachelor and likely to remain so. Perhaps you won't insert this if I make it longer, so subscribe myself "Codger."

Will Marry for Love Only.

Macdonald, Man., Oct. 11, 1907.
Editor.—As I am a new arrival to your correspondence column, I hope you will welcome me. I derive much pleasure and interest from the letters to the Western Home Monthly.

Editor.—In the July number of your valuable magazine I read of an "Old Sleuth," saying: I should like to shake hands with "The Devil." It is a wonder the does so for his latter shows your sleuth," saying: I should like to shake hands with "The Devil." It is a wonder he does so, for his letter shows very plainly that he is the "Devil's" brother. If it wasn't for his age, I should think him to be the old fellow widower I used to know; he married a sea stewardess, and treating his first wife rough, he tried to do the same with the second, but he falled. She blackened his eyes with a bootjack at several occasions.

I, for my part, am one of those fellows who want to be taken in by some good little girl. I am a young farmer, about 5 feet, 4 inches, brown hair and gray eyes, like to drink, coffee or tea, and chew "youbet" three times a day and smoke—sure, with a big stove pipe. Am good looking and would like to hear from a girl that's the same and not over 25 years of age, and, if possible, can play the organ. I think just as much of you, girls, if you write first and send photo if convenient and I will send you mine. "Rolling Stone." send you mine.

How Will She Suit, Boys?

Glenboro, Man., Oct. 11, 1907.
Editor.—How would I suit some young man. Here I am, 5 feet, 4 inches tall, slight, dark brown hair, grey eyes, fair complexion, counted good looking, good cook, can milk and look after house.

Virden, Man., Oct. 15, 1907.

I think that ought to catch some of the young men. Some of the girls are rather hard on the boys, who are, taking them on the whole, just as good as the girls. Don't you think so, boys? I think that "Tommy No. 1" is a pretty good hearted fellow if he would take his wife out to a dance every night in the week. "Glenboro Beauty."

Handsome Widow Wants a Hubby.

Wetaskiwin, Alta., Oct. 24, 1907. Editor.-For some time I have been a reader of your interesting paper. I am a widow, 34 years of age, and wish to correspond with some gentleman near my own age and of good habits. I have brown eyes and hair, 5 feet, 2 inches tall, weigh 110 pounds and considered good looking, if one is not too particular. I prefer a Protestant with some means. Hoping you will favor me with an early reply.
"Handsome Widow."

The Waste Paper Basket Not for Yours.

Saskatchewau, Oct. 15, 1907. Editor.-For some time I have been an amused reader of your bright magaz.ne, especially the correspondence column.

I would like to know the object of this column; is it conducted simply with a view to matrimony or with a view to a jolly correspondence?

I am afraid we would hardly know some of the gentlemen, or ladies either, by their own description, should we happen to meet them. I, for one, cannot imagine any nice, sensible Christian girl advertising for a husband. How can anyone fall in love through corre-spondence? and who would wish to marry someone they did not love?

I have no wish to correspond with anyone with a view to matrimony, as I have plenty of gentlemen friends, and am in no hurry to change my present state of bliss. I live on a farm in a good wheat growing district and am fond of riding, driving, shooting, dancing and music, in fact, I like a good time. I will ring off and hope, Mr. Editor, you will not doom this to the waste paper basket. "Gladys."

Boys, Have You Got the Necessary?

Brierwood, Man., Oct 19, 1907. Editor.-I have been reading with interest the correspondence column of your paper, so I think I will try my luck at the game.

I would like to correspond with some nice temperate young man who is good looking and well cultured. He must be worth at least $12,500.

I am sweet sixteen 5 feet, 61/2 inches tall, weigh 130 pounds. Have brown hair, blue eyes, and am considered good looking. I am a real good cook, but will not milk cows or feed pigs for any man.

Hoping to hear from some nice young man and wishing the W. H. M. every success. "Pretty Polly."

for some time and very much liking the magazine, especially the correspondence column, which always gives me great pleasure to read.

I am a bachelor in the prime of life, 28 years of age, 5 feet, 8 inches in height, 150 pounds, am fairly well fixed and not bad looking; having had enough of baching it would like to correspond with some lady between the age of 21 to 28 who can look on both sides of life and be good tempered generally.

I do not want one as a slave but as a helpmate, who can look after the home. I do not drink, but smoke occasionally.

Hoping this will meet with your approval and not take up too much of your valuable space. "Sunny Jim."

Bill Bailey Takes Pen in Hand.

Ridgway, Man., Oct, 20, 1907. Editor.—I can never peruse your very interesting pages of correspondence without being filled with a desire to write. Until recently, however, sufficient personal interest has not been felt to warrant a place in your circle, but now I would like to thank "Blue Eyed Biddy" and several others for penning such sensible letters. Very interesting, too, are the sad tales of the lone batchers' lives. I hope they will accept my heart-felt sympathy for I expect to join their numbers very soon. If I were to say that the thought of batching it this winter is affording me considerable anticipated pleasure, I guess some of them would say, between puffs of smoke, "Poor greenhorn," or something equally complimentary. But it is more in the reflection that this batching is but a preliminary necessity which must be experienced and put up with in the case of most young homesteaders, and the sooner it is commenced, the sooner (let us hope) it will be ended. I think a little batching is a very good thing— a kind of tonic for his patience, temper and other ingredients of the compound

I don't think I shall kick much because I shall have to quit three times a day to get busy and put up some kind of a meal (to be named breakfast, dinner or supper when it gets on the table), also to do a little washing now and then and occasionally scrub the

I batched all through last winter, though not alone, and will be settling on my homestead for the first time this fall. I would be pleased to correspond with some fair reader about my own age (20) who is not too impatient to have the knot tied. It is a great pleasure to have some one to write to and from whom to hear, when you are living as a temporary hermit, but I believe in a fellow bending his efforts into erecting a comfortable, clean, and bright dwelling that shall be fit to be christened Home when his girlie comes to reside therein. Better stay awhile with "single blessedness" until one has a fit domicile for another, rather than take her from refined surroundings to shack which she might mistake for the hog pen. Hoping you will excuse the length of this, I will conclude by saying that I am 5 feet, 10 inches tall, dark, weigh 140 pounds and do not "Bill Bailey No. 2."

A Chore Boy or Fast Girl not Wanted. Virden, Man., Oct. 9, 1907.

Editor.—Having been a reader of the Western Home Monthly for some time now and being one of the lonely bachelors in this district, I thought I should like to correspond with some nice girl. I came from the south a short time ago and find it very lonely here. I am 5 feet, 8 inches tall, weight 135 pounds, and do not drink, smoke or chew; am generally considered handsome. I am in no great hurry to get married but would like to correspond with a nice girl and exchange photos. She must be a good housekeeper, good looking and well educated and able to play and sing. I do not want a chore boy or a fast girl, but one that would make a good farmer's wife. If any ladies wish my address, which I hope they will, it is with the editor.

"The Boy from the South." A Girl with Means Preferred.

Calgary, Oct. 18, 1907. Editor.—Are there any young lady readers of your valuable and interesting paper desirous of corresponding with a young Englishman with a view to matrimony, providing, of course, that both parties are well suited to each other? I would prefer a young lady from 18 to 28 years of age, musically inclined and a lover of home life, and one who prefers town life to farm life. If she is possessed of any means of her own, so much the better, though this is by no means mecessary. I am sincere in my wishes and will treat all correspondence strictly confidential. Kindly forward photo if possible, which will be returned at once.

I am about 5 feet, 7 inches high. age 28, youthful appearance, musical. do not drink or smoke, am fond of a few outdoor sports and have been fairly successful in business. I enclose my card and the editor will forward any letters to yours sincerely.

"A Blooming Englishman."

Who Wants Gopher?

Hardisty, Oct. 21, 1907. Editor.—I have been reading your Western Home Monthly for two years and am greatly interested in the correspondence column.

I am a lonely homesteader in Eastern

Alberta and am getting tired of living alone. I agree with the girls in their letters and would like to correspond with Rosabella, Lady Betty or Yankee cirl of July number.

Jim, the Bachelor.

Cooperstown, N. D., Oct. 15, 1907. Editor.-Kindly excuse the liberty I am taking in writing to you, but being now a subscriber to your interesting paper and seeing the letters in your correspondence I thought I would write

Now, I noticed that a lot of young girls and men are inviting correspondence with each other; a good think, too, of becoming acquainted with each other and exchanging views.

Now, there are a great many young people or middle aged who would like to get a home for themselves. I do not blame them, but do not know the right

Now, I would suggest that a good way is to get married and both work, say on a farm; they would earn $45 to $50 a month and board, save their money and in a very short time they would have quite a little sum to start on their own.

A friend of mine two years ago did the same and now he has horses and machinery all paid for and in a good way to prosperity.

I would like to exchange views with some young widow about 30 years of age or lady as I might be able to put them in acquaintance with some young men of that age with the idea as expressed in view. Trusting I have not taken too much space and wishing your Saskatchewan, Oct. 3, 1907. Editor.—I have just lately subscribed for your magazine but I have been an interested reader for some time and the correspondence pages are fine.

I am a bachelor, 20 years of age, and an ordinary bachelor, like a lot of the boys, as we are not all lucky like, an "Old Sleuth" to have a Chinaman.

Staveley, Alta., Oct. 25, 1907. Editor.—I am not a subscriber to your valuable paper but get to see it often and thought maybe you could help me out of a difficulty as I am looking for a pretty little wife.

I am a Yankee, about 6 feet tall, rather dark, brown eyes and black hair. I don't consider myself an angel; but on the other hand, my hair is not singed.

If you will put me in communication with some young lady I will ever be your debtor. "Yankee Boy."

Would Give Wife Freedom.

Gladstone, Man., Oct. 27, 1907. Editor.—I am not a subscriber to your excellent magazine, but I get it from a friend, and find it good reading, especially the correspondence column.

I have often been amused at statements made by some of the girls. It seems they dislike pig feeding and milking cows more than anything else. Well, I don't blame them. for neither of those jobs are fit for a woman. I keep a Doukhobor for that. Of course, I believe every girl should know how to handle a broncho; also a shot gun or revolver, as the latter is often needed to soften a man's heart.

"Sweet Mell" Prefers a Farmer.

Wawanesa, Man., Oct. 25, 1907. . Editor.—I have been a reader of your valuable paper for a few months and I am writing to ask if you would, through your correspondence put me in correspondence with a respectable young farmer.

I am rather dark, 22 years of age, 5 feet 7 inches in height and weigh 140 pounds. I am told that I am good looking and I am well liked by a lot of young men around here but I want to get acquainted with a young farmer. A dark complexioned man preferred, one who does not chew and would not expect me to do chores around the farm. If he were busy I would not mind doing a few chores. I don't mind him taking beer, but when it comes to getting drunk I draw the line. I prefer the farm to the town, a farmer in Alberta preferred. If any young farmer will condescend to correspond with me I will glady answer his letter.

"Sweet Nell."

THIS MUSICAL ENTERTAINER

SHOULD BE IN EVERY HOME.

HERE are mighty few people to-day who do not appreciate good music as a relaxation in the evening. Formerly in order to enjoy good music at one's home, it was necessary to acquire, by long and tedious practices, a musical education. But within the last few years conditions have changed.

It is now possible, by means of the Victor-Berliner Gram-o-phone, to hear in your own home the finest vocal and instrumental music that has ever been produced.

Just think of the possibilities of enjoyment this marvellous invention brings to the homes of this country.

Think of spending the evening at your own home listening to the voices of the greatest singers of the world and of giving this sort of entertainment to your friends.

By means of the Gramo-phone you can hear, perfectly reproduced, the marvellous voices of Caruso, Scotti, Eames. Melba, Plancon, Calvé, and all the other famous singers.

Can you realise what this means and the thousands of dollars it would cost you in the ordinary way? The only other way to hear these voices would be to go to New York during the grand opera season.

The Victor-Berliner Gram-o-phone is not confined to reproducing vocal music.

With equal facility it reproduces Solos played by any musical instrument, Coon Songs, Funny Stories, Recitations, Hymns, Anthems, and other Sacred music, and without the unpleasant scraping heard in ordinary talking machines. For versatility and variety of entertainment there is nothing to equal the Victor-Berliner Gram-o-phone. Go any day to any store where the Victor-Berliner Gram-o-phones are sold and you will be astonished at the music they will turn out. Hundreds of new records from 40c. up. The records are round, flat discs (no cylinders) that take up little space and are practically indestructible,

Prices of Victor-Berliner Gram-o-phones $12.50 to $120

Send to-day for our literature and free catalogues of 3,000 records

JOHN McCLARY A GREAT CAPTAIN OF INDUSTRY.

Formerly Owner of a Small Tinshop, Now Head of the Largest. Stove and Tinware Concern Under the British Flag.

To very few men is the privilege given of witnessing such a celebration as that of which Mr. John McClary, of London. was the centre during the week that was the centre during the week that ended on July 13th. For during that week a series of splendid jubilations marked what was the sixtieth anniversary of the McClary

Manufacturing Company.

This sixtieth anniversary is noteworthy, not only because it relates to the largest concern, of its kind under the British flag, but because it has thrust before the attention of the concern, of the tion of the people of Canada a man whose very achievements make him one of the greatest captains of industry this country greatest captains of industry this country has yet produced.

To John McClary the past sixty years has meant a change from the control of a small tinshop to the possession of the largest establishment of its kind in Canada. The Company's plant in London now covers two enormous blocks of land, while there are also important establishments in Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Hamilton and St. John. Over 1,300 employees are on the Company's pay rolls, of whom over seven hundred are married men, supporting homes. More than $600,000 is paid in wages annually. These are a few figures which will give the reader an impression of the size of the plant as it is at present and of its importance to the community.

Mr. McClary has always been, and is still, the guiding head of this tremendous business. He remains even at his present age a man of remarkable ability sparing no ness. He remains even at his present age a man of remarkable ability sparing no money or pains to attain an endethat his judgment told him could be won. This is well illustrated in the magnificent advertision of the state of t tising campaigns this Company has entered into in all the Canadian papers, which have made the McClary products known in

Though the McClary Company is Mr. McClary's first care, it is not the only successful company that shares in the benefit of his business acumen and experience. He is also president of the London Life Insurance Company, and the Ontario Loan and Debenture Company, and a director of the London & Western Trusts Company.

Substitution.

It is presumption to say you haven't a mind of your own, yet that is what is practically said to you, when you ask for an advertised article and are offered a substitute by a dealer. He would give you what you made up your mind you wanted, but for the fact that a substitute pays him a larger percentage of profit. Such a dealer's interest lies only in making as much money out of you as possible. The first-class dealer would have given you what you asked for, by that course admitting that you had a mind of your own and were capable of exercising it. Show the substitutor that you have a mind of your own by getting what you ask for. The goods advertised in this magazine are recommended.

The Mystery of "The Lilies."

LY ESTHER SERLE KENNETH.

Why, that year. Henry Gayhart chose to occupy himself with teaching, I cannot say. Perhaps it was a mere fancy; perhaps because he decidedly preferred occupation to idleness. Then he had a decided telept for it which he had a decided talent for it, which had no scope until he went to The Fate had ever been kind to him. From boyhood legacies had showered upon him. He had a charming personal presence, agreeable manners.

He chose to present himself at The Lilies unauthorized save by his talents. Having come, it was no wonder, we think, that he stayed, such a paradise of fragrance and color as he encountered when he emerged from the winding avenue upon the mansion to which he had been directed.

His ring at the wide portals brought a mulatto servant, who showed him into an exquisite little ante-room and took up his card. In a very few minutes a lady entered the room.

She was dressed from head to foot in white. She was young, she was graceful. That she was mistress of herself, her tone and the first penetrating glance of her blue eyes confirmed.
"I am pleased to see you, Mr. Gay-hart. I am Mrs. Lorne. Will you be seated?"

"I have presented myself in person, Mrs. Lorne, as an applicant for the position of teacher to your son,' he said, and as briefly as possible he set forth his claims and qualifications.

"And you think you will like teaching?" she said, at last.
"I am quite sure of that," he answered.

"Your personal appearance, Mr. Gayhart, and the references you offer, make it impossible that I can have any hesitation in wishing to come to terms," said Mrs. Lorne, "but I must warn you that life here is most secluded and uneventful. I never entertain company. Yours is the first face outside the family that I have seen for many a year. In view of this you will, perhaps, wish to reconsider the matter. Not that I dislike social life or shall be indifferent how the time passes with you, but circumstances, over which I have no control, compel me to live a life of retirement. To me it is not unpleasant; and perhaps you may come to think that there are some advantages here. The climate is fine, my garden blooms nearly all the year through. I am very fond of music, and my library is quite a good one. There is some very nice boating on the lake, and you will find at the stables." Her evident earnest wish that he should accept the situation surprised him. Certain that it was a most exceptional one, and peculiarly fitted to his taste, he hastened to assure the lady that he was not only willing but decidedly wished to remain at The Lilies. "In that case," she said, with a daz-zling smile, "I will show you your pupil.

She rang a bell. "Send Arthur down," she said.

A moment after a manly little fellow of seven years, showing exquisite training, was in the room. The child manifested a grace and dig-

Gayhart.
"You may go, Arthur," said his mother, after a few moments. have taught and disciplined him almost alone so far," she said, turning to Gayhart, when the boy had passed out of the long French window into the garden. "But he has been without father's influence, and I have feared that I have been at fault in training him, and decided to put him in a man's care as soon as I should meet with a suitable person." In a few moments she rose. "Come up to the music-room, if you please; it is the hour for Arthur's lesson. I would like your judgment on his receptive singularly apt; but perhaps I am too

Gayhart obeyed. Mrs. Lorne gave the lesson herself. It was evident that the boy was unusually intelligent, and, also, that he was his mother's idol. When not referring to Arthur, her manner betrayed a slight weariness and sadness. Gayhart could not but look at her critically. She was exquisitely feminine, almost beautiful. In age she could not have been more than twentythree. Her delicacy and fairness of complexion gave her a look of being much younger.

It was evident to him that she thought him poor, but he said to himself that he could scarcely be so while in Mrs. Lorne's service. His salary was princely. The circumstances combined to make him a wonderfully good teacher. Arthur learned rapidly, admired, loved him, and in two months Henry Gayhart found himself a very happy man at The Lilies.

The habits of the house were very regular; the attendance, it seemed to him, large for the size and character of the family. There was Mrs. Dorothy, the housekeeper; two housemaids, butler, Arthur's nurse, a lad who waited on table, coachman and hostler; and, besides these, two large powerfully-built, civil-spoken men, whose office Gayhart could not determine. He often puzzled over this, because he frequently observed Mrs. Lorne in close conversation with them. and her manner at these times betrayed an unusual seriousness. But she never spoke of them to Gayhart, and he never thought of questioning the other servants.

Whatever her perplexities, she never spoke of any grievances or trouble. With Gayhart and Arthur she was ever gracious, affable; ready to join in conversation, or to play or sing for them. Usually she went to drive with them; often upon the lake. Arthur being unusually well-grown for his years, Gayhart taught him to row, drive and ride. Mrs. Lorne never rode, but it pleased her extreme-ly to be rowed across the water by Arthur.

It was a little cushioned, canopied boat, gay with flags and pennons. The surface of the lake was usually smooth as glass. No influence could be sweeter or more peaceful than that which surrounded them one summer evening as they floated on the limpid

Mrs. Lorne reclined among the blue cushions; Arthur was gently rowing, carefully observed by his tutor. On on they floated, as the sunset faded and the twilight gathered, until the terraced walls, bowery trees and twinkling lights of The Lilies were far in the distance.
"See, mamma," said Arthur,—"see

"Yes," she answered, lifting her eyes and looking shoreward.

happy I should be to float on and on like this, and never go back again!" Gayhart was too surprised to attempt an answer. Evidently she expected or wished none, and scarcely realized what she had said. She shivered soon, drew a fleecy white shawl about her shoulders and requested Arthur to row ashore. As Gayhart took the oars to bring the boat safely to the steps, he took advantage of the half light to look critically at this woman's slight figure and half-averted face.

"She is very lonesome," he said to himself. "May I not love her?"

Suddenly she leaned forward and grasped Arthur's arm. "There is some one waiting on the bank. Do you see who it is "It is Dave. No, it is Jake," answered Arthur. The men were evidently brothers, and looked much alike. Mrs. Lorne rose hastily as the boat touched the bank. In the halfdarkness she stumbled, and Gayhart, catching her in his arms, thrilled with faculties. he knew that it was not occupied by the family, and was not the servants' quarters.

"Some one must be mad or drunk there," he said to himself, in considerable wonder, which increased until he decided that the male servants must be engaged in orgies unknown to their mistress. Indignant that her kindness should be imposed upon, he decided to investigate the matter on his own responsibility in the morning. But the following day no opportunity occurred, and to his surprise he again. on listening at the window in the even-ing, heard the hideous sounds which had now grown familiar and were more quickly detected.

But on this evening they were soon discontinued. The moonlight faded; all was soon dark and silent.

During the night a chilly fall storm set in which continued for several But to a man of Gayhart's quiet tastes the confinement was not irksome. Arthur's lessons were given during the early part of the day. During the afternon and evening Mrs. Lorne, in the most gracious and charming mood, gave him her company. As they sat together around the light blaze behind the network of When Gayhart had gone to his the brass fenders, Gayhart talking of The his travels, or lunched impromptu, or

The sweet, daring thought prevented his closing his eyes until nearly morning. But the next day Mrs. Lorne was not visible. Only a little lace handkerchief, marked "Genevieve," substituted her graceful presence in the silent parlor. She was confined to her room by an indisposition. When Gayhart had parted from Arthur that evening he shut himself up in his room, and again gave way his thoughts. As he sat by the window, he became conscious of distant sounds exceedingly strange-mingled shouting and yelling. He recollected that he had often heard it as he sat there listening; but he had never given the matter any attention. Now his attention was held by the impression that the sounds were within the house, and, as they were unpleasant and intimidating in character, leaned from the window and located them at the west wing of the house, where he had lately seen the moving lights. It was an entirely un-known part of the house to him; but to win your esteem and regard; but—secure them forever. One evening Arthur having a headache had gone upstairs with his nurse. Gayhart was alone in the nurse. parlor, looking absently from the window out upon the hardy lilies which had survived the storm. Mrs. Lorne entered, more than usually gentle and sweet.

"I am afraid you are getting homesick, Mr. Gayhart. What can I do to make the evening pass pleasantly to you."

DIAMOND DYES HELP MOTHERS TO KEEP THEIR GIRLS WELL DRESSED.

"I have used Diamond Dyes before I was married, and since I have been in a home of my own I have used several packages every month for the coloring of dresses, skirts, waists, ribbons and childrens suits. I have four little girls who are always well dressed, thanks to your Diamond Dyes. When their suits, jackets, hats or stockings become dull or faded, I use some fashionable color of your Diamond Dyes, and at small cost, I produce garments and hats equal to new. Your Cotton and Wool colors are all perfect and so easy to use."

Mrs. J. E. Kellar, Toronto, Ont.

Mothers who would see their girls dressed nattily and well at a small cost, should begin to use Diamond Dyes. One ten cent package of Diamond Dye of some fashionable color will save the cost of a dress, suit or hat for the little one. Always be sure to get the real Diamond Dyes; never accept a substitute or the something called JUST AS GOOD as the Diamond.

Another very important thing is to be sure that you get the kind of DiamondDyes that is adapted to the article you intend to dye. If your materials are Cotton, Linen or Mixed Goods, ask for Diamond Dye for Cotton; if your materials are Wool or Silk, ask for DiamondDye for Wool.

GUARD AGAINST THEM. Refuse all package dyes that claim to color any material with one dye. Such dyes are deceptive and worthless.

Send us your full address and we will mail you free of cost the famous Diamond Dye Annual, New Teddy-Bear Booklet and Diamond Dye Direction Book.

but do you not know that I have a husband under this roof a raving maniac?"

"Good Heavens!"

The words broke in a low involuntary cry from Gayhart, who in turn stood tremblingly before her.

"You did not know?" she asked.
"I thought you must have learned long before this from the servants."

"I never gossip with servants," Gayhart said, scarcely knowing that he spoke.

She sank into her seat with such a look of trouble and despair that he was recalled from his tumult of emotion. She, in turn, looking up, saw his extreme pain and pallor.

"Surely I have not been to blame, Mr. Gayhart. Believe me, I never once thought it possible that you could think of this," she said. "I live only for Arthur. I never think of myself. And I have long been a wife. How could I dream—"

He started to see that she was bitterly crying.

"Oh, do not," he pleaded. "Genevieve—let me call you so once—I would not give you a moment's pain."
"Let me weep," she answered. "It

"Let me weep," she answered. "It is so seldom that I can shed tears."

But her streaming eyes wrung his

"Forgive me. I will go away and never trouble you again," he said.

"Yes; you must go away," she answered. "But let me tell you first my story. At sixteen I was a timid, yielding girl entirely controlled by my mother. She made my mar-riage for me with Mordaunt Lorne, a fierce, high-tempered, tyrannical man, twice my years and very wealthy. He simply married me; I never had any When he was rights as his wife. good-natured he called me Pussy, and I had no more influence or authority in his household than if I had been the kitten upon the rug. I never loved him, and he soon made me unhappy by his unkindness. Soon he would leave me for months and months together—I having no know-ledge where he was. I had a vague notion that he gambled, drank, wasted money, even then. My mother died and my child was born while he was absent. When Arthur was two months old he saw him for the first time, and seemed pleased, was a little kinder to me for a brief time. He remained at home a few months, but acted strangely, ordered unnecessary outbuildings erected, removed valuable trees and hedges. The family phy sician warned me that there was insanity in the Lorne family and he considered his mind affected. Finally he went away, was absent a few days. and came back a raving maniacstruck at me, abused the servants, and would have killed the child. male servants restrained him, generally considering him under the influence of liquor. But the physician, declaring that the malady of his race had been brought on by the excesses in which he had indulged ordered him closely and permanently con-fined. The doctor was right. My husband has never in the slightest de-gree recovered his mind. He is either sullen or silent, apparently uncomprehending, or, on moonlight nights, raving crazy. His shouts and maledictions so ifrequently fill the midnight air that I never invite visitors to The Lilies; although as much as possible he is restrained by his attendants, Jake and Dave, and the room in which he is confined is situated in the remote west wing of the house. Sometimes he makes a great deal of mischief, destroying clothing and furniture. On the night we came from boating last, Jake came to tell me that he had broken down a door which communicated with the hall, and that he would be obliged to keep him confined to his bed until the necessary repairs could be made. But for the physical strength and faithfulness of those men, this house would be destroyed and every inmate driven off. Nor would man, woman or child, encountering him, be safe. He is a being utterly destructive and brutal, and—he is my husband."

She rose then, and walked back and forth across the room.

If for a moment he were tempted to remain near her, to watch over her, to bless himself with the daily sight of her, the desolation of her look, as she stood in her robe of glistening silk upon the velvet carpet, forbade the possibility of his bringing upon her any further woe. But he came close to her side, with a look of love there was no mistaking, and gently raised her hands to his lips.

"Genevieve, you are not sorry that I love you?"

"I am sorry to give you pain, because you must see how utterly hopeless your loving me is," she answered, leaning wearily against a chair for

"Genevieve, I am going away. Tomorrow we shall be parted probably forever. Tell me this, if you had been free would you have married me?" "Yes," she said, simply.

He looked once into her pure eyes, turned and left the room.

Out of a dream of pain, Henry Gayhart started, battling with a strange oppression which made him strive for breath. The chamber was full of smoke. The room, the house was on fire.

Springing up, he opened the door upon a sheet of flame. Closing it, he hurriedly dressed, secured his valutables, and let himself lightly to the ground by the trellis which covered the window. Seeking an entrance again to the house, some of the servants rushed against him.

"The master has set the house on fire! It's all going! Nothing can save it!" they shouted.

Then he met Genevieve Lorne and Arthur coming out. Dave grasped her shoulder.

"The good Lord save us, Mrs. Lorne! We can't get him out!"

Slowly her eyes dilated with horror as she looked up at the man. Gayhart understood

"Come back with me. Which way?"

Dave plunged again into the smoke, and led the way to the west wing. Insane laughter and shouts greeted them. A horrible creature, with bloodshot eyes, turned threateningly as they stepped into the room. Before the madman could be made aware of his purpose, Gayhart with a single, low word of "Quick" to the attendant, had thrown himself upon the prisoner, and threw him, face downward, upon the ground. The men tried to secure his hands at the back, but the rope slipping, the chance was lost. Writhing from beneath Gayhart, Lorne raised a hand to the window sill, near which he lay, and, dragging himself up, suddenly forced himself from Gay-hart's hold and went headlong out.

"Lord!" breathed Jake. "It's twenty feet to the ground!"

With a sickening feeling, Gayhart turned from the room. When he reached the lawn below the window of the west wing, the servants were lifting up a motionless body. "Quite dead!" they said.

Gayhart went down the avenue and found Genevieve and Arthur sitting upon one of the rustic benches.

Wrapped from the chill night air, he bore her, in a close carriage, cityward. Arthur and his nurse accompanied them. And for weeks Genevieve Lorne lay very ill, but luxuriously cared for, at a hotel.

When Gayhart erected another and even more beautiful home for his wife, he desired to know if she wished it in that beauteous garden of lilies. But she silently shook her head. Every tree and shrub, every turn of the grounds and glimmer of the water, was associated with the sorrows of her wronged and blighted youth. So Gayhart bore his bride away to a home by the sea, where the bright waves, with their myriad voices, called sweet promises of peace and happiness which time fulfilled.

Seasonable Advice.

It might not be amiss to remind readers of the Western Home Monthly that we are within seven weeks from Christmas.

With the approach of this great festival, Christmas gifts are in order. It seems to be the custom, in this country at least, to put off buying the presents we intend to make until the last day or so before Christmas. This is a mistake, and quite a few of our shrewdest people are becoming alive to the mistake made in this respect in the past and now make it the rule to buy their Christmas presents well in advance.

Parents, what are you going to buy this year for that dear daughter of yours, just budding into womanhood? Why not present her with a good piano so that she may perfect her musical education and fit her for a better station in life.

The young woman of the present day is more less handicapped if her musical education be neglected in her youth. When she goes forth from the parental roof to mingle with polite company she is expected to be able to contribute her portion where a musical evening is being spent.

A Mason & Risch piano would make a most acceptable Christmas present. These instruments are sold direct from the factory to your own home through Mason & Risch employees thereby eliminating the large profits usually made by middlemen selling pianos. #### The Prime Minister's Ruse.

A good story is told of the manner in which Hon. Alfred Deakin, Prime Minister of the Commonwealth of Australia, and its representative at the Colonial Conference, managed to get a hearing at a hostile meeting. The a hearing at a hostile meeting. back of the hall was packed with his opponents, who had decided that he should not be heard, and the moment he stepped forward they began to shout and groan and effectually to drown his voice. Deakin quite unmoved went on addressing them, though not a word was audible. The deafening noise went on for some minutes; then the front rows began to laugh. The ripple of laughter went on until it reached the back benches. "Shut up you fools! He aint worryin'," said a strident voice, as a sudden silence fell. Deakin's mouth opened and his right hand went out, but there was no sound, and for one second you could have heard a pin drop. Then the speaker and audience joined in the laughter. He had only been making dumb show.

A Countess's Gipsey Lover.

The musicians of Vienna and Budapest must be very fascinating men. The world has not yet forgotten the romantic affair of Princess Chimay and the gipsy musician, Rigi, and now Australian society has again been startled by the betrothal of Countess Ilona Festetics to Rudi Nyari, the first violin in the Oldenburg Tzigane band, and the consequent jilting of Count Siegmund Sprezzi, to whom the Countess was formerly engaged. The latter belong to two of the oldest and wealthest families in Vienna, and when the count and countess became engaged some time ago the match was regarded as an ideal one. And probably it would have proved to be so if Countess Ilona had not attended one of the Tzigane concerts, and fell in love at first sight with the young violinist. At Nyari's house in the presence of all the gipsies of Oldenburg county, the people were recently bethrothed, in spite of the attempts of the Festetics family to prevent the engagement. In fact, Nyari was offered 20 000 kropen to bear off the ed 20,000 kronen to break off the engagement, but refused, for he fully reciprocates the countess' love.

Perhaps you are skeptical about GIN PILLS. So was Mr. Brown. He had tried so many things for his kidneys, without getting any better, that he had just about made up his mind that he couldn't get well.

When he first read about GIN PILLS he laughed. The second time, he thought. The third time, he said "he would write for a sample just to see if there was any chance of getting well."

He was pretty nearly tickled to death over that box of GIN PILLS. They did him so much good that he would have paid $5 a box for the second, if necessary. The dizziness, headaches and backaches stopped. Those shooting pains in hips and legs died away. Urine lost its high color. He slept through the night without being disturbed by bladder trouble. His appetite began to pick up and he felt better than he had been for years.

Being a sufferer from my Kidneys and Dizziness in the Head, and could get nothing to help me, I saw in the papers what good Gin Pills were doing. I got a sample box, and they did me so much good, I bought three boxes and am taking them. They have worked wonders for me, I can recommend them to any similar sufferer.

A Strenuous Vacation.

By Mrs. Mary A. Denison,

by dint of taking advantage of cir- ever a rich man Icumstances I was ready for my va-

My position was a good one and I was well paid, but I had climbed to the place over many a painful episode and swallowed abuse in large quantities from the sometime irate editors and journalists around the

> At last I was free for a few weeks, having decided to spend my vacation abroad. My name was already registered on one of the big steamers, second class. Why I had decided to go that way I could hardly tell, except that it was not from movives of economy. I also changed my name from Fred Spoffard to Ed. Johnson. It was perhaps due to the last snasm of false pride that ever found lodgment in my bosom.

Everything on shipboard seemed to be arranged to my satisfaction, and I came home to my two rooms. One of these was a bed-room, the merest closet, in which I had barely space to turn around, and in which I had my thoroughly packed case—a case of unusual dimensions. Having a bit of writing to do I sat down at

It struck me that Dan, the hallboy, a singularly clever little fellow, looked at me strangely, following me with his eyes. Presently he spoke.
"I say, Mr. Spoffard," he said, between a whine and a groan.

"Well, Dan, what is it?" I asked, looking up.

"I got your coat and brushed it, r. Here it is."

"All right," I said, pausing to look at him, for he did not act like himself. "Did you get my case?"

"Here it is, sir," he replied, designating the huge thing which stood on a chair by the window. But—but—" he stammered, a curious tremor in his voice and gesture.

"Well, be quick, Dan," I said, "I have only a few minutes to spare." "There's a woman in your bedroom!" he stammered.

"A woman in my bedroom!" I ejaculated. "Great heavens! how did she get there?"

I started to reconnoiter, but something in the boy's face held me back. "Don't go in there, sir; she's dead, sir, killed, murdered," said the boy, his eyes fairly black with terror. "But I haven't been home," I said.

"I know it, sir," said Dan, "an' if I was you, sir, I'd git out quick." "Haven't you given any information?" I asked, seizing my case.

"No, sir, I know'd you hadn't anything to do with it," he answered quickly, "and I knowed you was going away, so I held my tongue." "Dan, you're a brick," I exclaimed. "I'd like to take you with me."

"I'll carry the suit case," he said, and I followed him.

In passing the bed-room I threw a glance over my shoulder. Heavens! the pillow was dabbled with long, light hair, and across the bed I could see the outlines of a huddled-up figure. The sight nearly froze the blood in my veins. I grew sick, but I followed the boy, who I grew locked the door after him and pocketed the key. For the first time I seemed to recall the power to think.

A woman in my bed-room, murdered! The fact was a scare of the grimmest order, when I began to hink seriously about it; it might meant so much; detention, trial, weeks and weeks of uncertainty, the horror of a prison—for a moment I had the own. sensation of being in a vacuum, and I could scarcely draw my breath. woman murdered in my room! The tables were filled with newspapers, all words kept ringing in my ears.
"I know nothing about it," I said, half aloud, half to myself.

"Of course you don't," said Dan, "but all the same I'm glad you're going away."

It had been a hard day's work, but won't forget your kindness. If I'm "Don't you worry, sir," sald Dan,

"You're going away; don't bravely. you come back in a hurry." "Indeed I won't," I said to myself, but the uproar in the streets, which was abnormal, and the distraction in my brain, were almost too much for me. I could make no definite plans in the whirl of a confusion that envel-

"Say, Dan," I said confidentially, "I may as well have my whiskers taken

"Yes, sir, I thought of that," said Dan. "Here's a barber. You just go in alone. I'll watch the case."

So I went in and submitted to the mercies of a strange barber, who soon deprived me of a pair of adorable siders that had long lent grace and dignity to my rather hard-featured face. It was not long before I had said "good-bye" to Dan, put a dollar bill in his honest hand, and was busy finding my berth in the second class

During all the hurly burly that ensued there had been an undefined sensation that I was by this time being sought for by a bevy of uniformed mountebanks who had learned the terrible secret and had begun the search for me. A woman in my bedroom, murdered! Who could the woman be? I had kept myself tolerably clear of the wiles of the gentler sex. I knew Miss Hasbrook of the office, but only by her exuberant pompadour of a queer yellow hue, and her rather shifty blue eyes. My acquaintance had not extended beyond a nod and a "good morning," and now I remembered I had not seen her for the last three days. If she had been discharged, gone wrong in her mind and sought me out for the purpose of inducing me to act as arbiter and affect a reconciliation; then, not finding me, her brain had given way and she had killed herself in my room! Well, any way, I was safe for a time. I thought, as the huge steamer started from her moorings and we dropped down the the bay.

I cannot say I had drawn a comfortable breath. Every new face I had seen, every policeman, and there were several of them, I could have sworn were looking for me and thirsting for my blood. Each morning when I awoke I could see that murdered woman on my bed, although I could not have told what she looked like. Every night I had a sort of a dread that ful that I had changed my name and shaved off my whiskers, although when I did both I was conscious of a distinct impression of shame.

But time went on and nothing happened out of the ordinary, although I was looking for a denouement of some sort every hour. The matter by this time was probably bruited abroad by the press—was, likely, in all the papers with appropriate head lines.

A woman murdered, and the murderer had escaped—was on his way to England, in all probability. played with my fancy and with my fears. It might even be that I should be arrested as soon as the ship landed. Wonderful to relate, as it seemed to me, nothing of the kind happened.

As soon as I reached London I went to the Strand, where my friend Frank Summers lived, and soon found his number. He was not in, but his landlady, a robust, fresh-colored English woman, told me that he had left word that I was to come in and use the apartments as if they were my

They were pleasant, almost familiarlooking rooms, and the chairs and of which I went through with feverish anxiety. I saw nothing, however, pointing to the murder by so much as a paragraph, and breathed easier when my friend came in though he probably saw by my countenance that "Thank you, Dan," I responded. "I | I was both anxious and depressed.

"Hello, old friend," he cried for greeting, "welcome to the shores of the finest country in the world! How has time used you? You look as if you had hardly enjoyed the trip. Sea-

"Not in the least," I said, "but I feel as if I had been away a year already.

"Oh, bother Yankeeland," he said, laughing. "Don't let's talk or think about it. This is your vacation, and I'm going to give you a high old time.

'Nothing special has happened since I started from home, I suppose," I said, "no fires, no murders, no-

"Oh, plenty of both," was his laughing answer. "Nothing, however, that specially attracted my attention, but you can judge for yourself. Here are all the latest papers; suit yourself; revel in paragraphs, short, snappy, witty, bombastic; there are your specials; cram yourself with editorials stupid, witty, wise or otherwise," and he handed me the papers for which I was general news gatherer when at home. I looked them through; there was nothing there in which I found myself implicated, not even in the latest editions. I breathed easier-yet what did it mean? Nor could I throw off the horrible nightmare of doubt and fear, try as I would, that had for so long enveloped me, that I should yet be hunted, tried, and perhaps hung for a murderer. For a time, however, I strove to put aside my fears and accompanied my friend to all the places of note, yet, occasionally, when I saw a stranger looking at me, or passed too close to a policeman, I found myself shuddering and eager to get out of the way.

The months passed and my vacation drew near to an end. Strange though it may seem, the old fears began to assail me and the old tremors to rasp at my nerves! Could I go Lack? My chum could not but notice my uneasiness, and one day I unbosomed myself to him and told him the whole story. For a time he was very serious, for he saw how the thing had got on my nerves, and that there was an element of uncertainty about it; that it hovered, like some vague cloud that never lifted, over my mind, and until the truth was known never would lift. We discussed several plans. among them was that we should both remain in London, where we could gotten the past. But the truth was that with all my fears and weakness, if you might call it that, I was homesick. London had never seemed like home to me, and at last I felt that rather than stay I would face and dare the worst.

"Of course, it might have got into the papers and neither of us have seen it," he said, "but I incline to the supposition that the whole thing was a ruse-a hoax confined to the circle of the few who originated it. My advice is that you go right on as though nothing had happened, seeking out carefully your old associations and tions, and watching for a chance word or action that will betray them."

I did so, after keeping incognito for a couple of weeks. The first place I visited, where I was known, was the home of Dan's mother. It was not altered, only the woman, a high-cheeked. high-colored dame, looked a trifle more comfortable, and so did her children. She received me as if I had left but yesterday, and began talking volubly of Dan.

"But Dan! I would have staked my salvation on Dan, he seemed so honest, so true to his friends."

"The boy was tempted; they gave him big money, very likely, and we are not sure how much or how little he knew about it. They could have pulled the wool over his eyes, as I am confident they did. Don't blame him too severely yet. Of course, he was a little rascal, but he seems to be suffering for his unfaithfulness, if unfaithful he has been. Well, I haven't got through my story vet. The Pole was the possessor of a mannikin, a first rate affair. This they dressed up and had conveyed to your bedroom in the guise of a woman, and so apparently mutilated that it would seem as if a deed of volence had been perpetrated. It was well planned. They only wanted to send you out of the country properly scared, and they knew your extreme views about circumstantial evidence.

True, everybody, both friends and enemies, knew my opinions in regard to that. "The Pole," Frank continued, "tells me that there was quite a little commotion concerning the matter in not a few private circles, and that it was mentioned in a few of the weekly papers. I reckon you'll have to forgive them."

A Sure Cure for Headache.—Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

Enormous Fortunes in Coal.

November, 1907

Few small investors have a true conception of the great profits that may be made from a small investment in stock in a coal property. To illustrate what we have in mind, we will reproduce here a portion of the official report upon the International Coal and Coke Company, Limited, Coleman, Alberta. This Company paid dividend No. 3, August 1st, 1907, amounting to 429 000 000.

The International Coal and Coke Company, Ltd., has a capital of $3,000-000, shares having a par value of $1.00 per share. The total amount of shares outstanding are 2,800,000, there being 200,000 shares in the treasury.

Dividends are being paid quarterly at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, the last one paid being August 1st, making a total of about $98,000,000 paid to shareholders this year.

The latest report from the secretary of the company to the shareholders shows a surplus on hand of $393,469,84. Out of all the organizations which have operated coal mines in the Crow's Nest Pass district, none, perhaps, have achieved as speedy or more wonderful results than the International Coal and Coke Co., which only three years ago opened its mines at Coleman. In the brief period since that time the management has established a great plant, and have lately entered into a three years' contract with the Canadian Pacific Railway for the total output at an advanced price. The output has also been doubled, and the above has naturally had an effect upon the stock, and shares of the corporation have sold above par.

The engineer of the company gives an estimate of the coal developed and now on hand ready to be broken down from the rooms, as being 1,600,283

The International Coal and Coke Company, Limited, shares are now selling on exchanges at 90 to 92 cents per share. Three years ago they could have been bought at 10 cents per

Today the British Columbia Amalgamated Coal Company's stock can be bought at 15 cents a share which, if all predictions come true, will equal the Irternational Coal and Coke Company as a money maker. The par value of the shares is one dollar.

Should the B. C. Amalgated prove as remunerative to investors as the International Coal and Coke Co. did, every dollar invested in this property now will be worth six dollars to the investor in three years' time. Shrewd investors in financial centres have been making heavy purchases in British Columbia Amalgated stock lately, and it is only a question of a very short while before the price of the stock will be advanced.

Those who are fortunate enough to secure even a few hundred shares at 15 cents a share, and then lay it aside and forget all about it for a short time, will suddenly realize in the near future what a sensible and profitable investment they have made.

How Dr. Jameson Received His Instructions.

While Dr. Jameson, who will act for Cape Colony at the Colonial Conference, was engaged as Administrator of Mashonaland, 1891-95, he considered it was essential to break the power of Lobengula, King of the Matabeles, who threatened to get out of hand. He wired to Cecil Rhodes, "Shall I go in?" and received the mysterious telegram, "Read Luke xiv., 31." A Testament was with some difficulty procured, and he read, "Or what king, going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first and consulteth whether he able with 10,000 to meet him that cometh against him with was: "All right; have read Luke xiv., Dr. Jameson had but 1,000 men and some machine guns; but he overcame Lobengula and his 15,000 splendid fighting men with ease and dispatch, at a cost which was trivial as compared with the advantages secured.

Property—17,500 acres of Valuable Coal Lands in the famous Nicola Valley, B.C.

Five Seams of Coal, from 5 ft. to 11ft. thick, underlie this vast area. Estimated quantity of coal in these reserves is ONE BILLION FOUR HUNDRED MILLION TONS.

2,000 Acres lie beside the Nicola Branch of the C.P.R. This property is to be immediately developed.

Coal will be Shipped before Christmas, so the Company's Engineer states.

Stock will go up when production commences, and before that.

As production increases stock should go steadily higher, and eventually reach a high value.

This has been the experience of nearly all Western Coal Companies, whose stocks at first sold at only a few cents per share.

An Investment for very Great Profits.

The Coal is there. It is proved by diamond drilling.
It is a question of time and money only to start it coming out.

At the Company's Annual Meeting, in February, 1907, the Treasurer reported Cash in Bank, $33,794.70. Plenty of money with which to commence operations.

The Directors are all capable, substantial business men, able to carry the Company to success. The

R. L. Durham (Vice-President Merchants' National Bank, of Portland, Oregon).

Profits—Coal can be mined at $1.00 per ton profit. A production of 3,000 tons per day would produce $1,000,000 profits per annum. Enough to pay 18c. per share on the present amount of stock that has been issued, viz, 5,400,000 shares. These shares cost only 15 cents now. The Company's aim is to produce 3,000 tons per day as early as possible. In time the production should still further increase. 1,000 shares. when stock goes up to par value, will be worth $1,000. They cost only $150 NOW. PROFIT IS $850, or 5662 PER CENT ON THE INVESTMENT IN THE RISE IN THE STOCK ALONE. TO THIS MUST BE ADDED THE DIVIDENDS.

We Recommend This Investment, we believe it will make Big Money for the Stockholders.

DO NOT DELAY, but send in your order AT ONCE, with remittance, and write us for full particulars.

We will sell stock on the instalment plan. Send 25 per cent of price with order. You can pay balance in one, two and three months, if you wish. In this way a larger block can be secured.

N.B.—In some of our former advertisements an error occurred. The profits accruing through the rise of shares to par value was stated to be 1,133 per cent. It should have been only 5662/2 per cent. This, however, would satisfy any reasonable person. We do not know where we could look for a more profitable investment. Your money in the Savings Bank will only earn you 31/2 per cent.

Every man and woman earning wages can invest in at least One Hundred Shares of this GOOD STOCK. Four monthly payments of $3.75 secures them. Take more if you can.

The Young Man and His Problem

By JAMES L. GORDON

A sad accident occurred a few A POOR EXCUSE days ago on a Southern railway at Auburn, N. C. which resulted in the loss of three lives and the injury of a number of other persons. When the conductor was called before the Coroner's jury for examination, he said "I simply forgot my orders—that's all" "That's all", as one writer has said, "That's all, is all too much". "I forgot it" is a poor excuse, but an exceedingly popular one. A young man in business has no business to forget. Every man ought to have a memory system of his own by which the forgetting of certain things would be an absolute impossibility. Successs in life often pivots on a good memory. in life often pivots on a good memory.

The mind of man is in-THE MIND OF MAN exhaustible. There is no limit to its capacity. The mind which can originate one invention may project a thousand. The author who can pen one chapter can furnish characters sufficient for fifty volumes. The mind of man is the immortal part of him. That which is so prolific must have in it some eternal principle. John Ruskin in his researches in the National Gallery found wonderful evidences of the boundless character of the mind of Joseph Turner, the famous painter. Here are his words:—"In seven tin boxes, in the lower rooms of the National Gallery, I found upwards of 19,000 pieces of paper drawn upon by Turner. Many on both sides, some with four, five, or six subjects on each side; some in chalk which a touch of the finger would sweep away, some in ink rotted into holes, others eaten by mildew, some worm-eaten, some mouse eaten, many torn half-way through. Dust of thirty years accumulated upon all."

WORRY—THE GREAT and the Commonwealth Bulstrode Whitelest the English Ambassador to the Hague, was waiting one night at Harwich until a storm abated. As he lay awake unable to sleep through the howling of the wind outside the house and tossed from side to side on his bed thinking of the sad condition of his country, an old and faithful servant lying in the same room addressed him saying "Sir, may I ask a question?" "Certainly" replied the Ambassador. "Sir, did not God govern the world well before you came into it?" Undoubtedly!" "And will he rule the world well when you have gone out of it?" "Undoubtedly!" "Then sir, can you not trust Him to rule it while you are in it?" To such questioning there was but one answer and the tired Ambassador rolled over and fell asleep. Why not learn to trust. Do your best and leave the rest, allow a margin for God to work upon. Believe that God is in your life and trust Him where you cannot race Him. Worry is slow suicide, it rusts the hinges f the body. Away with worry. Do your best, and two-fold capacity. He may be your best friend or he may be your worst enemy. The chances are that if he is not one he is the other. There is a Northern legend which informs us that a certain man believed himself to be followed by an evil being. One misfortune followed him after another. He lost his property. Then his beloved first born died. After that his wife entered upon a physical decline. One calamity followed another until the man became convinced that some evil monster was following him from day to day. With an awful determination he began a search for the unknown enemy. Day and night he watched for him. At every turning in the road he lay in wait for him. At last he saw him and in fierce anger rushed upon him. A terrible struggle ensued. It seemed as though the man must perish. But gathering up his strength he seized the monster and turned back his head to gash his throat-when behold!-instead of the face of a fiend he beheld his own face! The monster he feared and dreaded was-himself.

Be generous. Be kind. BE GENEROUS thoughtful. Do not expect the impossible from your fellow creatures. Every man may not equal you in strength and talent and, then, too, you may see a day in your own history when even your strength and ability will not equal your present power or attainments. I like the spirit and words of Charles Kingsley. He says in one of his letters to Mrs. Kingsley "I sometimes doubt and distrust myself but I see some hope for everybody else." That sentiment is a rich and rare one. It recalls the incident in the life of Arnold of Rugby :- "Once, at Laleham, when teaching a rather dull boy, he spoke rather sharply to him, when the pupil looked up in his face and said, "Why do you speak angrily, sir? Indeed I am doing the best that I Years afterwards he used to tell the story to his children, and said, "I never felt so much in my life,—that look and that speech I have never forgotten" All we can reasonably expect of men and women is their "best." One man's best is not equal to another man's best. Your preacher would doubt-less preach brilliant sermons if he were equal to the task. He is doubtless giving you the very best in his possession. Another preacher, fifty miles away, may seem so much more desirable. Doubtless on close range he might appear to have certain disadvantages. Great charity is greater than great faith or great prayer. Ask for sincerity in life and, being sure of that, believe that your slow plodding neighbor is doing his very best. Twenty years from now he may be in advance of your more brilliant friends whom you worship to-day.

HAND WELL

You have heard of the first PLAYING A POOR funeral at Wolfville and you have read of the inscription which Doc. Peets inscribed on the head-board which stood over the grave of Jack

King. "JACK KING, DECEASED. "Life ain't the holding of a good hand,

The playing of a poor hand well."

Here is the revelation of a great fact. Most successful men have battled against adverse circumstances. I am amazed at the number of men who succeed with the odds against them. Dwarfed in figure, poor in health, or limited in the matter of mental equipment certain men seem to have the strange ability to forge ahead. "Life ain't the holding of a good hand, but the playing of a poor hand well."

There is an old preacher in Brook-SMALL lyn, New York, who is nearly eighty five years old. For 30 years he was pastor of the La Fayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, When he retired because of old age they presented him with $30,000—a thousand dellars for every year of his ministry. He has recently dollars for every year of his ministry. He has recently written his own biography under the title of "Recolections of a Long Life." "It has not been my practice to invite the labors of an evangelist; but in January, 1872, Mr. Dwight L. Moody, with whom I had as yet but a slight acquaintance, but whom I since have honored and loved with my whole heart, said to the superintendent of our Mission Chapel: "What a nice place this is to hold some meetings in." He was cordially invited: and at the end of a week about twenty persons had been gathered together on the sharp winter evenings. "This seems slow work," I said to him. "Very true," replied my sagacious brother. "It is slow, but if you want to kindle a fire, you collect a handful of sticks, light them with a match, and keep on blowing till they blaze. Then you may heap on the wood. I am working here with a handful of Christians, endeavoring to warm them up with love for Christ; and, if they keep well kindled, a general revival will come, and outside sinners will be converted.'. He was right, the revival did come. It spread into the parent church, and over one hundred converts made their public confession of Christ before our communion table. It was in those little chapel meetings that my beloved brother, Moody, prepared his first "Bible Readings."

Do you study the faces of the SPEAK A WORD men with whom you come in contact? Can you read character well enough to discover, now and then, a cloud behind the eyes? Does it ever occur to you that there are men who would open up their hearts to you if you would only say a word or give them a glance of encouragement? A man formerly prominent in social and political circles, the cashier of a certain bank when he was discovered to be a defaulter, took his own life and left a letter for his wife in which he said: - "Oh, if somebody had only spoken to me when I so much needed help, all this might have been differ-Just a word to rest a tired soul. Just a glance which reveals the fact that you are interested. Just an act which tells your neighbor that you are willing to make a sacrifice in order to help him through a difficulty or assist over an obstacle in his pathway. It means so little for you, and yet it means so much for him.

MAKEAN INVESTMENT

ing a noble act of public charity in which he had indulged, that "for doing this noble office I desire to be thankful that I have lived though nothing else good should ever come into my life." Every true soul can appreciate the sentiment. To have made an investment of influence for the sake of our fellowmen and to be assured that no change or combination of circumstances can ever make void the fact must be a source of genuine satisfaction to every true soul. A man who had once been worth half a million dollars and lost it all informed me that in the days of his prosperity he had made a donation of $10,000 toward the Young Men's Christian Association. Said he, "All I have left is my investment in the Y. M. C. A. I can never lose that." Into every day there ought to be brought some kind word, some noble deed, some contribution of substance—something which shall be worthy of being registered by the recording angel. Something of which we can say with Dr. Holmes, "If I never do anything else I am glad I have lived."

O. W. Holmes remarked concern-

Is the fault in the who is always complaining. "The weather is wrong. The season is backward. The location is poor. The government is off color. The times are hard. The neighborhood is degenerating. The crops are unsatisfactory. Money is tight. Friends are false. People are peculiar. Servants are unreliable. Labor unions are despotic. Emigration is demoralizing. Trusts are domineering. Things are on the down grade. Everything is wrong." Listen, my friends, to the words of Shakespeare "The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, but in ourselves that we are underlings."

PUT YOUR HEART INTO IT cier once said that a bank was sure to be a success when the president took it home with him at night. In other words every institution needs the undivided attention of one clear brain focused upon it continually. There is a beautiful legend in a book written by Miss Olive Schreiner—the story of an artist whose pictures were remarkable for one particular color—crimson. His efforts won the admiration of all. His fellow artists attempted to vie with him but all in vain. There was a certain tone and atmosphere and depth of color which seemed to be unapproachable. But they never found the secret of it until the artist died. The legend says that when he died they discovered over his heart an old wound. They discovered then the secret of the marvelous beauty and powers of his painting. He had inwrought his very blood into the fall ric of his pictures. In other words he had put his very life into the marteniage of his panis. into the masterpieces of his genius. This is the story of all true success. All sublime achievements are secured at the cost of blood. It is heart work that

THE VALUE OF TEMPER A strong temper in splendid control is ness life. Temper stands for energy and energy is to the commercial world what steam is to the boiler. The man who can move things is always in demand and he is always the incarnation of energy, vitality and temper. A skilful driver asks for the spirited animal and a strong rein. It is said of Stephen Gerard, a Frenchman, who pursued a remarkably successful commercial career in the United States, at the beginning of the history of the republic, that when he heard of a clerk with a strong temper he would immediately, if opportunity offered, take him into his employment, and set him to work in a room to himself. Gerard was of the opinion that such persons were the best workmen and their energy would expend itself in the proper channels of achievements, if the workman could be removed from all temptations to quarrel. Doubtless he was right. Energy, when properly directed means success. A strong temper is not an unqualified disadvantage. Let the man of strong spirit learn how to handle himself.

THE DEMOCRACY OF SKILL.

When Cardinal Du Bois, the great Prime Minister of France, was about to undergo a serious operation, he said to the noted surgeon Dr. Boudon, "Doctor, be care-ful! Be careful! Don't treat me like one of those poor miserable wretches at your hospital of Hotel Dieu." When the famous surgeon and physician heard this remark he proudly lifted his head and replied, "My Lord, every one of those miserable wretches, as your eminence has been pleased to call them, is a prime minister in my eyes." Splendid sentiment! Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might. Let quality be the sign and seal of your work whether the instrument you forge is for the use of a private of a pri forge is for the use of a prince or a peasant. Your work is the expression of yourself, your character, and your individuality. The contractor who builds a fine block on the main avenue has as true and lasting a monument as the soldier whose noble form is to be found in brass or bronze in the public square.

Why Don't You Send For It And give it a chance to prove to show you how it works? It is easy to get. A short note, giving your name and address, saying, "I want to try it," will bring it to you by next mail, all charges paid. You don't need to fill out any blanks, don't need to give any references, don't need to answer any questions. You don't need to send any money. It is yours to try, simply for the asking WHY DON'T YOU? We don't care where you are, what your nationality, sex, religion or politics may be. We care only to know that you are sick, that you need it and will try it. That is all. We are glad to send it to you without a penny. We don't even care what your trouble is. We are willing to take our chance on it helping YOU, as it has helped thousands with all diseases, and on you paying us after it has helped you. Why don't you send for it? Why not write today?

It Costs You Nothing To Try! Why Don't You?

One Million Sick People have accepted our offer and tried Vitae-Ore at our risk. Why don't you follow their example? One million sick people have written "Send me a package on trial," and they got it. One million One million sick people have written "Send me a package on trial," and they got it. One million sick people have tested Vitae-Ore without a penny's risk, have judged it, have seen for themselves what Vitae-Ore is and what it can do, as we ask you to see and judge. Hundreds of ailing, sickly, bodily weak, worn-out people are sending for it every day in the year. Perhaps at this very moment some one a short distance from your home is writing us for a package on trial, taking the first step to health we ask you to take. Month after month our trial offer has appeared and has been accepted by thousands of people who needed the health Vitae-Ore offers. We keep on advertising this offer, because Vitae-Ore cures and satisfies, because people judge it honestly and gladly pay for the trial treatment when they are benefited. Why don't you send for it? You have everything to gain and nothing to lose. You are to be the judge. Read our trial offer, read the good work Vitæ-Ore has done for others, and write for a package today.

Sufferer For Ten Years

Was Unable to Work--Could Get No Rest Nights.

One Dose of Vitae-Ore other remedies—different from other remedies—different in appearance, in smell, in taste. A hundred doses tone month's treatment prove it different in its curative action, a difference that explains its efficacy where ordinary medicines failed, a difference that has won praise from thousands—a difference that cures. It contains substances which, when the body is in ill health, are needed for the work of recuperation, and in supplying such materials it promotes health in those organs upon which health in the entire body is dependen. Whenever there exists an abnormal symptom, Vitas-Ore assists nature to remedy the disturbance which causes it. It is a vitalising, tonic, healing, corrective and strengthening force that arouses nature to correct action in vital functions. It acts always in a natural way, by assisting nature to properly perform functions which always are properly performed in good health, and thus helps to establish good health in all parts.

Found it a Genuine Cure

GOLDEN STREAM, MAN.—I was very sick when I first began the Vitas-Ore treatment. I had been steadily under the doctor's care without improvement and left off his medicine and begun with Vitas-Ore. I found it a really genuine cure. I was bad with my Kidneys and Stomach, had the LaGrippe and when my heart missed a beat I thought I would die. Now I am out of bed, am able to do light work and feel that I am gaining more strength day by day.

MRS. T. THOMSON.

Kidney Trouble Disappeared

Soda Creek, B. O.—I cannot praise Vitæ-Ore too highly. Before using it I was very badly troubled with my Kidneys and had to get up five or six times during the night, but after using only two packages of V.—O. this trouble has entirely disappeared. I would not believe that so much good could result in so short a time were it not my own experience.

has done for me. It has certainly proven a God-send to me. I suf-fered for years with Rheumatism and was led to think from repeated failure to cure that there failure to cure that there was no hope for a cure. Today I am cured and all through this efficient remedy. It drove it all out of my system and there has been no return. I recommend it most highly for the great good it has done me and want everybody who suffers the terrible torture of Rheumatism to know how it cures this disease. I believe it will help any Rheumatic case and cannot find words to say enough good in its praise. Mrs. Hannah Werley.

WHAT VITAE-ORE IS

Vitæ-Ore is a mineral remedy, a combination of substances from which many world's noted curative springs derive medicinal power and healing virtue. These properties of the springs come from the natural deposits of mineral in the earth through which water forces its way, only a very small proportion of the medicinal substances in these mineral deposits being thus taken up by the liquid. Vitæ-Ore consists of compounds of Iron, Sulphur and Magnesium, elements which are among the chief curative agents in nearly every healing mineral spring, and are necessary for the creation and retention of health. One package of this mineral substance, mixed with a quart of water, equals in medicinal strength and curative healing value many gallons of the world's powerful mineral waters, drunk fresh at the springs.

EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR

We get letters from people in all parts of the United States and Canada, testifying to the efficacy of Vitæ-Ore in relieving and curing such diseases as Rheumatism, Kidney, Eladder and Liver Diseases, Dropsy, Stomach Disorders, Female Allments, Functional Heart Trouble, Catarrh of any part, Norwous Prostration, Adamia, Sores and Ulcers, and worn occadebilitated conditions. Why shouldn't it cure you?

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS There is only one genuine Vica-Ore, the original which counterfeiters imitate. It contains the signature of THEO. NOEL to prove its genuineness. We have only one office in Canada, which is located in Toronto, Ont. We have no office in Winnipeg and the compound advertised by the imitators operating as "The Vita-Ore Co." at Winnipeg is a counterfeit.

HAD DROPSY FROM A FEVER

Feet and Limbs Were Badly Swollen-Had Kidney and Heart Trouble.

ABALINE, ARE.—I was taken down with a Fever a year ago, which resulted in Dropsy and Kidney Troubles, and aftor a time I became afflicted with Tonsilitis and Heart Trouble. My feet and limbs were so swollen I thought they would burst; there seeme to be an ulcer in my Stomach, and I had no appoint the whatever. I was treated by two of the best doctors in this country, but they did me no good. One of them said that I would have to go to Hot Springs and have an operation performed on my throat before I could be cured. I was in a horrible condition, and did not think I could live to see another winter. I sent for a package of Vitæ-Ore, but had small hopee of it helping me, for I thought I was beyond the reach of medicine. I began taking Vitæ-Ore and after three weeks' use the swelling was disappearing and my throat was well; my heart was beating normally and the color had returned to my face; the fever had left me and I had regained my apportite. After taking two packages of Vitæ-Ore I was in botter health than I had been for ten years; I felt like a di orent woman entirely. I cannot praise V.-O. enough, and even though I were to write for a week I could not tell all it did for me. It has sayed my life, and I tell all my friends, as well as the doctors, who are surprised at my improvement, that Vitæ-Ore has cured me. I also adviso those who are alling and wish to get well to take it as I did. I have since used it for Piles and three applications affected a cure. I have used it in my family for Colds, Fever, Cramp and Ulcers, and I find it good for all; in fact, we cannot do without it.

GEETRUDE JOHNSON.

Its cures are Permanent Like a house built on a rock in their positiveness and completeness. First is created a structure of health in the blood, a substantial basis for all else to rest upon. Then the edifice is built naturally, stone after stone, day after day, nerve, tissue, muscle and ligament are placed in a normal, healthy, natural condition, drains put in thorough working order, parts cleansed, healed and purified, and the completed work is then turned over to the tenant's hands. The foundation is right, the work is right, and it lasts. Dosing stops—there is nothing to require it. Suffering ends—there is nothing to cause it. Vitæ-Ore strikes the disease at its root. Its cures are permanent and for this reason it itself is a permanent remedy, one that has come to stay, that is growing in popularity and selling more rapidly from year to year, curing with permanent cures, satisfying with permanent satisfaction.

YOU DON'T Pay For Promises, you pay only for the health it brings you. You pay for the work, not words, and if the work has not been done to your satisfaction, you don't pay for it—No, not a penny! You are to be the judge, and you can easily done to your satisfaction, you don't pay for it—No, not a penny! You are to be the judge, and you can easily ladge. is remarkable that the exodus from this country year was the largest for twenty years. In all, 000 people left the shores of the United Kingdom ettle in other countries. Canada, whose attractive has developed so remarkably of late years, med the majority of the emigrants, 91,263 going her against 85,941 to the United States. Compared h this enormous volume of emigration, the fact tonly 9,920 went to Australia and New Zealand is inficant. Distance may operate to some extent, but mance alone is not enough to account for this tarkable contrast. The fact is that while Canada ses with life and energy and is filled with youthful husiasm about its future and its possibilities, stralia gives the impression of a country which has is remarkable that the exodus from this country ralia gives the impression of a country which has vn effete without ever having had a vigorous ne. It makes no appeal to the imagination. It ceased to increase and multiply itself, and it its no increase from the external world. Its attie is cold and exclusive. Its population is only a fringe to a vast continent, but it would rather remained so than increase itself or run the risk of ultimate crowding from over the seas. It is not a pleasant picture. It is the picture of a people grown too suddenly comfortable, immersed too much in material satisfaction, wholly indifferent to that richer life which is the basic note of great and enduring States. It has produced no wife a plice which ing States. It has produced no voice, no literature, no art. It is a dumb and uninspired people, faced with one of the supreme problems of the Twentieth Century—the effective occupation of a great continent with a population small and stationary. Australia is a country without a past; at present it seems to be also a country without a future. Hence while nearly two hundred thousand people are leaving these shores for the North American continent, less than ten thousand go to Australasia.—Manchester Guardian.

To Delay the Approach of Old Age

Mrs. Russell Sage's endowment of a research laboratory in connection with the City Hospital, on Black-well's Island, is a distinct novelty in the line of philanthropy. Unlike the Rockefeller Institute for medical research it has a twofold purpose. The fund will not only be used indirectly for the amelioration of disease by the research for new medical knowledge, but directly in improving the conditions under which the city's aged poor now live, in two of its largest institutions. Another unique feature of the endowment is the special attention to be given the study of diseases associated with old age. Dr. T. C. Janeway quoted the statement from a recent speech by Dr. Welch of Johns Hopkins that, while more children grew to adult life now than formerly, the expectation of life for those over forty had been little if at all increased by the great advances of modern medicine. The reason for this was, he thought, that preventive medicine had consisted chiefly of a study of infectious diseases and devoted little attention to work on the diseases and devoted little attention to work on the degeneration of organs and tissues resulting in old age. Following this suggestion, Mrs. Sage in presenting her generous gift to the city, particularly mentions the latter aspect of the work, and hopes that the fund will be productive of much new knowledge as to the causes and prevention of early senility. While therefore the work done under the fund will be by no means limited to this interesting field, old age will receive particular attention, and possibly a new branch of preventive medicine developed, having for branch of preventive medicine developed, having for its purpose the prevention or at least postponement of those degenerative changes in bones, arteries, kidneys, heart, and other vital organs and tissues which constitute the process of growing old.—New York Times.

Lo, The Poor Indian

The government still finds it necessary to protect the Indian in every commercial transaction with the pale faces. The despatches from Guthrie state that the United States attorney has just brought mandamus proceedings against a number of speculators who have leased valuable lands from the Oklahoma tribesmen for a song when the land is estimated to be worth hundreds of dollars. It is not difficult to understand why the Oklahoma promoters should heartily approve of removing the restrictions from the Indians' property, and it is even less difficult to predict what will happen to the noble red man when the government leaves him to the tender mercies of the pale face civilization.—Kansas City Times.

The Genius of Kipling

What the people like and go back to and read over again, is what they will not suffer to die, and what is not allowed to die is immortal. In this happy state is Rudyard Kipling, whose works a hundred years from now will be as sure of their place on the shelves of every good library as Scott or Dickens or Thackeray, or George Eliot, or any of the masters of fiction. Kipling has done more to dignify labor than any other writer living, Most of his stories concern themselves with men who work with their brains or their hands, the men who build bridges, dam rivers, lay railways, run engines, manage steamships, and such. In this kind of story, as in the jungle story, Mr. Kipling set the fashion, and he set it so high and so perfect that all the other little fellows can follow only at a great distance. Mr. Kipling's style is the object of much imitation by magazine writers, who have industriously copied his eccentricities, thinking that these were the man. The net result of their efforts must have been to convince them that the Kipling manner is possible only to such as have a Kipling mind.—Toronto Star.

Scaring a Lord Chancellor

The lord chancellor is going to Canada for a holiday, and he will be away for about five weeks. The lord chancellorship is to be placed in commission during Lord Loreburn's absence from England. This is believed to be the first time that a lord chancellor has left Great Britain, as it is forbidden to take the Great Seal out of the country, so if its holder contemplates a sea voyage he must make an elaborate arrangement for its safe custody during his absence. William IV considered that Lord Chancellor Brougham had been guilty of high treason in even conveying the Great Seal to Scotland during the autumn of 1834. At Rothiemurchus, in Inverness-shire, when Brougham was the guest of the Duke and Duchess of Bedford, the ladies of the house amused themselves by stealing the Great Seal, which they hid in a tea-caddy in the drawing-room, and the chancellor, who was frantic with anxiety, was required to discover it blindfolded, guided by the piano, the music rising and sinking according as he was nearer or further away.—London

Local Option in the States

In 1888 the prohibitionist candidate for President polled 249,907 votes; in 1892 the vote was 264,133; in 1904 it was 258,847. The decline may be due to a growing feeling that no practical gain can result from like to have a prohibitionist in the White House. It is not due to any weakening in temperance sentiment. The Springfield Republican points out that by the working of local option laws half the area of the United States is now under prohibition. Ohio has 1,140 dry towns out of a total of 1,376. Massachusetts has 250 dry out of 350. Vermont is wholly dry except 24 towns and cities. Kentucky, the home of whisky distilling, has 97 dry counties out of 119. Connecticut has 96 dry to 72 wet, or did have prior to the latest town elections. There are 200 dry towns in Illinois, and in Iowa 65 out of 99 counties are without saloons. Maryland has 14 counties dry out of 23. There are 300 dry towns in New York State. Indiana, out of 1,016 townships, has 710 on the arid list. Passing to the Pacific coast one finds four dry counties in California, and "much dry territory in other counties." while Oregon reports 12 dry counties, and 170 dry towns and cities in other counties. In the Southern States prohibition has made such gains as to attract general attention. More people are now living in an atmosphere from which the saloon is outlawed than in any previous period of American history.-Springfield Republican.

Drink and German Railroads.

Doctor Ennis, of the University of Heidelberg, has declared that over 50 per cent. of all accidents occurring on the German railroads are due to the bewilderment of the operatives who have used stimulants, and that, if total abstainers only were employed, the expense of managing the road could, be reduced very greatly. Such action is fundamental and far-reaching since, for generations, the German has conscientiously be-lieved that his beer was advantageous in the development and strengthening of both his mental and physical powers.—Missionary Review.

The West has had a hard winter. Weather conditions were unusually severe and with the opening spring came the alarming situation in regard to the coal mining industry. At the beginning of last week, without a regular strike having been declared, four thousand miners had quit work and thousands more were idle as a result. Under the auspices of the Dominion Department of Labor a conference was held between the employers and employees at which it was not found possible to reach an agreement. But afterwards an arrangement was made by which the miners agreed to return to work pending a reference of their dispute to an Investigation Board, consisting of Mr. Eckstein, representing the men, Mr. Parker, representing the operators and Sir William Mulock representing the Government. The failure of the railway companies to grapple with the matter of transportation in the West during the past winter has also been a serious matter and one to which the attention of the Minister of Railways was called by the western Members of Parliament. All these things are drawbacks whose re-occurrence as far as possibe must be guarded against. But they cannot check the West. Its future is assured.—Presbyterian.

The Mystery of the Unrest in India.

The most mysterious question in the whole movement, which puzzles, and to a great extent dismays, the most experienced Anglo-Indians, is why it should have occurred at the present moment. An electric vibration is evidently passing over the peninsula, but its cause is absolutely invisible. The government has done nothing good or bad that should rouse the people to resistance. There have, perhaps, been blunders in the collection of the land tax in the Punjab; but the movement is not confined to the Punjab, and Bengal is under the perpetual settlement. In-deed, one most remarkal is feature of the whole movement is the absence of any definite grievance, the removal of which would at once conciliate opinion. That India shared in the mental shock produced throughout Asia by the victories of the Japanese is undoubtedly true, and is acknowledged by every experienced official; but the Japanese are bound to the British government by the strongest of all ties—a necessity for assistance if they are attacked by sea in their home waters, and by a combination of powers. The discontent has, in fact, manifested itself like a. subterranean force which suddenly shatters cities, yet leaves the citizens powerless to explain or even to understand, the commotion. In 1857 the insurgents in their letters to each other made much of the fact that the British garrison had been reduced to its lowest point; but the garrison in India in 1907 never was so strong. There will be an explanation by and by; but for the present we have only to acknowledge a grave danger, and face it as our countrymen faced it 50 years ago, without fear, without cruelty, and without hesitation as to the rectitude of our decision to continue ruling.—London Spectator.

Unpunished Murders in the States.

In the twelve years that I have known the United States at all intimately, I only recollect one instance in which the criminal law worked with anything approaching the English standard of swiftness and precision. That was in the case of the man who shot President McKinley. Public opinion insisted on a speedy trial and a speedy execution, and public opinion had its way. Had the victim been a man of less prominence, the odds would have been over 70 to 1 against his assassin ever being brought to the chair. The odds I have quoted are not to be taken as a mere figure of speech. They are a literal and appalling fact. Since 1885 there have been 131,951 murders and homicides in the United States, and but 2286 executions. In 1885 the number of murders was 1808; in 1904 it had -- n to 8482. In 1885 the number of executions was 108; in 1904 it was 116. There was nothing that I am aware of to make. 1904 a year of peculiar riminality. Indeed, the figures for 1905 and 1906 tell an even more sinister tale-Americans seem now to be killing one another at the rate of more than 9000 a year. Looking over the statistics of the last 20 years, one finds, roughly speaking, that while executions have remained virtually stationary, much homicides have multiplied fivefold. There are over five times as many murders committed in tne United States per million inhabitants as in Australia, more than 14 times as many as in England and Wales, 8 times as many as in Japan, nearly 10 times as many as in Canada, and about 25 times as many as in Germany. Only one European country, Italy, has even shown in this respect a worse record; only one country in the world today, Mexico, exceeds the American average; and the United States has the further distinction of being the sub-country where the distinction of being the only country where the proportion of murders to population is positively on the increase.—Anglo-American in the London Daily Mail.

RETROSPECT newspapers in both this country and the United States, ocis entering the Twentieth Century under far more favorable circumstances than those which surrounded the young Republic a hundred years ago. With what hopes then must the Canadian of to-day look into the future!" This idea of comparing the Canada of the beginning of the Twentieth Century with the United States of the beginning of the Nineteenth is a suggestive one, and is worth following up. The United States a hundred years ago possessed no territory west of the Alleghanies and north of the Ohio was in dispute. The area of the young Republic was then 8:27, 911 square miles, whereas the area of Canada to-day is 3,723,005 square miles, and only a fraction of our vast resources of field, forest and mine have been developed. The population of the United States in 1800 was 5,38,000; the population of the Dominion in 1901 was $540,000,000. Without carrying the statistical comparison farther, it is plain that the immense resources of our country, its geographical extent and tistical comparison farther, it is plain that the immense resources of our country, its geographical extent and position, and the character of its people give ample ground for the declaration that as the Nineteenth Century on this continent belonged to the United States, the Twentieth Century will belong to Canada.

The first rumors of the seriousness of the illness of the Emperor Francis Joseph drew the world's attention to the question of the succession to the dual throne of Austriu-Hungary. Since the Act of Union in 1867 Francis Joseph has acted with unfailing sagacity in holding together the heterholding together the heterogeneous races and religions of his Empire, and has deserved his great popularity with them all; but it has been recognized all along that his successor's task will be no easy one. Successive tragedies cast a shadow over the private life of Fruncis Joseph, and incidentally over his public life. The first was the fate of his brother Maximilian, Emperor of Mexico by grace of Napoleon III. The suicide of his son, Crown Prince Rudolph, left his naphew, the Archiluke Francis Ferdinand, heir presumptive. This heir to the crown of the Dual Monarchy, instead of consulting the interests of his archy, instead of consulting the interests of his complex realm, married in 1900 the Countess Chotek. As the lady was not of royal blood, it had to be a "morganatic" marriage"; the husband had to take an oath that the children born of the union should have no claim to the succession! The future Empress was after her marriage created Princess of Hohenberg; but because her birth though noble, was not royal, fate has decreed, in the form of the rigid law governing the succession, that the children of the Emperor succeeding Francis Joseph shall be as aliens in their

What happened was like what had happened a couple of centuries earlier in England, when the Saxon invaders draws the continuous transfer of the saxon invaders draws the saxing draws the saxon invaders draws the saxon invaders draws the vaders drove the original Britons into Wales and Coruwall, retaining however, a certain proportion of them for slaves and wives. Missionaries in Yezo surprised the scientific world years ago by declaring that the people of Yezo were of Caucasian origin—that the washed Aino was a white man. The scientific world now agrees that the missionaries were right, and that the Ainos are "genuine white men." as Rev. Dr. Griffis pronounced them, for a thousand years and more the Ainos have been practically as remote from the Japanese as the Eskimos are from the people of this country. But the claim is now advanced for the Japanese that they possess an admixture of white blood from the Ainos absorbed into the mass of their aucestors. It is probably no more than one per cent, if it is that; and can hardly be expected to be regarded seriously by people on this side of the Pacific who are a hundred per cent white and havefamilies to support. We no more object to a poet's word picture of a Canadian snowfall, than the Londoner objects to a novelist's description of his hero groping his way along the Thames Embankment in a fog. A London fog is much more unpleasant than a Canadian snowstorm. But the Englishman does not demand that the novelist should say nothing of London fogs and devote himself to describing the places in England where they do not have fogs, and to dwelling on the lovely weather that the Englishman frequently enjoys in his native land. Nor do Scotchmen find fault with Scott for having addressed Scotland, in a poem breathing the very spirit of patriotism, as of patriotism, as

"Land of brown heath and shaggy wood.

Land of the mountain and the flood."

The st advertisement this country can have is the trut out its climate, its soil, its people, and its institutions. Much more harm than good is done a country by exaggerating the advantages of its climate and glossing over its defects than by proclaiming abroad just the plain truth. Misrepresentation leads to disappointment. The best immigrants are those who come to this country knowing exactly what to expect, and prepared to enjoy this climate in all its moods.

Bishop Lofthouse, of the diocese of Keewatin, in an address before the Canadian Club at Hamilton, has made a convincing presentation of the entire practibility as well as the necessity to Western Canada, of the development of the Hudson Bay outlet. His address and the blue

ting forth at length the facts so forcibly summarized by the Bishop, have aroused anew the discussion in the Eastern press of the Hudson Bay route to the European market from the wheatfields of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Says the Montreal Gazette: "The typical Western man, with a rather swollen idea of his importance to the world, is inclined to assume that the East will object to anything likely, as he puts it, to free him from the thraldom of the railways Easterners built to make Western land valuable." With these preliminary remarks, the Gazette proceeds to announce that if the Hudson Bay route were really needed by the West, the East would have no objection; "but the commercial practicability of the project is not well shown." The Gazette is as much astray in this declaration as it is in its idea that the West is the creation of the East, which went down into its pocket to start the West in business and still benevolently supports the West. An entirely mistaken idea. In regard to the Hudson Bay route, it is noteworthy that the objections urged against it have dwindled down to the assertion that the volume of Western grain production does not yet demand it. Even if this were true, it does not constitute a valid objection engines the building of the railway to the Bay without Saskatchewan and Alberta. Says the Montreal were true, it does not constitute a valid objection against the building of the railway to the Bay without any delay that can be avoided. The objectors do not pretend to assert that by the earliest date the route can be made available the volume of grain traffic will be made available to execution would be not the not demand it. Such an assertion would be, on the face of it, absurd.

During the past month the hundredth anniversary. of the founding of the Geological Society has been celebrated in London. One of the learned papers read at one of the meetings in connection with the celebration dealt with the slow up-tilting of the north-eastern portion of this continent, which in many thousand years might make the Mississippi instead of the St. Lawrence the outlet of the sissippi, instead of the St. Lawrence the outlet of the entire Great Lakes system. The water level at Chicago is rising at the rate of nine feet in a hundred years. Geologists cannot, however, predict with certainty the doom of the St. Lawrence route, because they do not know that the tilting will continue. Even if it does continue, many dozens of centuries will pass before Canada's most important river runs dry and its bed becomes a fertile truit belt, just as the best part of Manitoba was once the lowest bottom of that prehistoric inland sea, which the geologists have named Lake Agassiz. Tennyson's words come to

The stillness of the central sea."

Legislation for the regulation of automobiles on the roads throughout the Province is being prepared, it is announced, for introduction at the next session of the Manitoba Legislature by Mr. A. H. Carroll, member for South Brandon. This qu stion is one that has provoked in the Ontario Legislature from representatives of rural constituencies some of the most heeted some of the most heated utterances ever heard within the four walls of the utterances ever heard within the four walls of the Assembly chamber at Toronto. Automobilists who are duly mindful of the rights of other people and careful not to make their machines a menace to the safety of the public thoroughfarts are the first to condemn their reckless brethren, and cannot but admit the necessity of stringent legislation designed to check that recklessness and teach in a manner that will make it remembered the necessary lesson that a country road is not, any more than a city street, a speedway where an automobilist can cut loose in reckless disregard of all rights of others.

During the past summer, on permission granted by the Dominion Government, through the British Foreigh Office, to the United States Government, there has been brought through the St. Lawrence and our canal system the gunboat Don Juan de Austria, a prize of the Spanish-American PEACEFUL war, to be used as a schoolship of NEIGHBORS. the United States Naval Militia training station near Chicago. The request was for the waiving of a treaty right, and it was granted as a matter of course, without so much as a ruffling of the surface of diplomacy. There are no fighting craft on the great Lakes—only some revenue Canadian and United States cutters. At Halifar and at Vancouver, the ocean gateways of the Dominion, there are formulable fortifications; and the United States has within twenty years constructed an elaborate and costly system of modern defence works along the entire Atlantic and Pacific assboards. But along the chain of the Great Lakes, as along the entire boundary line that divides this country from the States, no money has been spent in fortifications on either side. There are some old forts along the Great Lakes; they are relics of old wars, or rather the fears of old wars that never came. The Dominion and the Republic have long since settled down to being peaceful ueighbors.

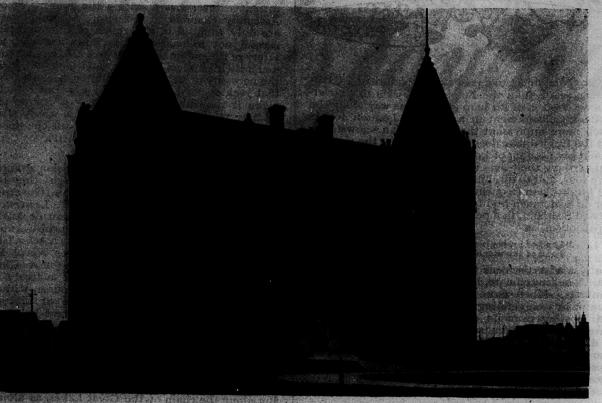

We Canadians have been accustomed for many years to congratulate ourselves on the smallness of the national drink bill as compared with the United States or Great Britain. Occasionally it is said that intemperance is increasing, but these assertions are certainly not borne out by study of the NEW AIDS TO available information. If we TEMPERANCE, look over a long period, say fifty or sixty years, there has been unquestionably an immense improvement over the days when in Eastern Canada a jug of whiskey was bought with the family groceries. And the advance goes steadily on. In the past intemperance had two strong allies: the one was the social glamor that was thrown over drinking customs, and the other was a notion that alcohol was a source of power and mental inspiration. The latter delusion has been pretty completely exploded. In business, the trades, the professions, and every walk of life the use of alcohol is now generally regarded as a means of diminishing energy and impairing judgment, The man who drinks is regarded not as a wicked, though brilliant, fellow, but as a man who is doing something that impairs his efficiency. The social glamor has also departed from drinking. The immense weight of business institutions is cast against intemperance, and the growth of tions is cast against intemperance, and the growth of right opinion in regard to this great evil is a fact from which all workers for the betterment of humanity should take encouragement in moments when on a narrower view they may be tempted to think that the cause of temperance is not progressing.

PROVING BY ACTUAL EXPERIMENT

The effect of the anti-toxin treatments for Diphtheria is noticeable within a few hours, so that everyone must believe in its virtue. In a similar way, the treatment known as ORANGE Lilly gives a practical proof of the progress it is making in curing women's disorders, and that, too, within a few days after commencing its use.

All authorities agree that in every case of women's disorders there exists a congested condition of the womanly organs. The circulation in these parts is sluggish or stagnant, and the result is that the broken-down tissue or waste matter which should be carried off if the blood was circulating freely, remains in these parts, causing inflammation irritation, oppress ion of the nerves, etc. ORANGE LILLY is not taken internally, but is applied direct to the suffering organs. It is absorbed into the circulation, and its antiseptic properties at once act on the waste matter referred to above. The consequence is that this waste matter, which is causing the inflammation, ulcers, nervous trouble, etc., begins to be discharged and it continues to be discharged until all the foreign matter is removed from the circulation. At the same time the blood vessels and nerves are toned and strengthened, the nervous trouble dis appears, the circulation is restored, and good health follows.

Doar Mrs. Currah: I wish to tell you that ORANGE LILY is doing me a great deal of good. Those ulcers come away one or two every week, and I have less pain and fewer headaches. I feel sure I will be perfectly cured in a little longer time.—Mrs. D. S. T.

The explanation of the wonderful cures performed by ORANGE LILY is very simple. It is a scientific remedy, based on the discoveries of Pasteur and Lister. The conditions existing in all female troubles are alike in character, differing in degree and development only, so that a positive remedy as ORANGE LILY is, acts with all the certainty of a chemical experiment. In order to convince every suffering woman that ORANGE LILY will cure her, I make the following

FREE TRIAL OFFER

I will send without charge, to every reader of this notice who suffers in any way from any of the troubles peculiar to women, if she will send me her address, enough of the ORANGE LILY treatment to last her ten days. In many cases this trial treatment is all that is necessary to effect a complete cure, and in every instance it will give very noticeable relief. If you are a sufferer you owe it to yourself, to your family and to your friends to take advantage of this offer and get cured in the privacy of your own home, without doctor's bills or expense of any kind.

Should any lady desire medical advice or information on any special feature of her case, I will be happy to refer her letter to the eminent specialist in women's diseases, Dr. D. M. Coonley. President of the Coonley Medical Institute, Detroit, Mich., and he will answer her direct. Dr. Coonley is the discoverer of ORANGE LILY and has had over 30 years' experience in the treatment of these diseases. No charge will be made for this medical advice. Address, inclosing 3 cent stamps. Mrs. FRANCES Q. CURRAH, Windsor, Ont.

Electric These perhaps, seem a far Stoves. cry for the woman in the country home, but this little paragraph is for the benefit of the woman in the rural town where electricity has been installed and who has her house lighted in that way. There are all kinds of stove arrangements, some of them very elaborate and not needful to the household where other fuel has to be burned for the sake of warmth, but I have looked into these stoves a little and I believe an electric cereal cooker and an electric iron will pay in any household where the wires are already installed. These appliances would have to be bought and installed through your local electrician to insure that the current from your light wire is just right, but this would be a very cheap and simple matter, the cooking appliances themselves are not dear and the ease and convenience of them is beyond description.

The cereal cooker would be a great boon as whoever got up to shake the furnace and start up the heat on a winter morning, whether it be furnace or stove, could switch the current on to the cooker and the porridge would cook while the house is warming, without danger of burning and at very small cost and would be thoroughly done. More indigestion is directly traceable to half cooked porridge than many people dream of.

Little books with illustrations of these stoves can be got on writing to the Winnipeg Electric and Gaslight Company, Winnipeg. They do not make the goods but handle them for the Canadian Electric Co. of Toronto and could, and would, give all particulars. I do not make a practice of mentioning addresses of firms in this column. ing addresses of firms in this column, but this is a matter of real convenience to the readers and I have no hesitation in doing so.

Local With many others, I regret Option. to learn that the town of Neepawa has returned the license system for her hotels. While I regret it, I am not in the least surprised. One of the lessons that temperance people have yet to learn is, that if they want to make their hotels without license popular and profitable they will have to put up

The cry so frequently made, that hotels cannot be successfully run without a bar, is not true, but it is true that hotels without bars will never pay the dividends of hotels with bars, and they require more careful and competent handling in order to make them pav. The trouble at Neepawa arose out of the building of two splendid hotels in a town that was only large enough to support one. One house was built largely by private enterprise and the other by a company com-prised of local citizens. There was not room for two hotels, the one owned by a private individual was opened first, and in a great measure held the ground, and although there were a number of prominent temperance people interested in the other hotel, the lack of revenue from the investment discouraged them, and while a few stuck manfully to the job, others got (pardon the slang) "cold feet" and their temperance sentiment weakened to such a degree that a number who did not actually vote for license let it be known that they were no longer opposed to it. The shutting up of the hotels and the consequent loss of business to the town was too much for their faith in the local option principle.

To the honor of the women voters, be it said, they stuck to their principles | so evidently a true helpmate to a very and voted local option. Of course, a great man. Dainty, pretty and yet good many of the men excused their seen in repose her face was strong action on the ground that there was as much liquor sold in Neepawa and as much drunkenness as if there was an open bar, more in fact. This may be true, but it is just a little odd that although I have visited Neepawa frequently I have never seen a drunken boy or man on the streets of that town. I do not say there was no drinking in Neepawa, but I do say that I never saw any results of it.

That hotels without bars can be made to pay and made popular with the public is quite easy to prove. Old timers remember with regret Macdougall's at Birtle, one of the most comfortable and homelike hotels ever known in the West. Commercial men used to drive the twenty miles from Binscarth to Birtle in order that they might spend Sunday at Macdougall's. It did not make a grand fortune for its owners but it paid its way and something over and furnished better accommodation to the travelling public than 99 out of 100 of the licensed

The best evidence I have ever had of a bar not being needful to make a house pay, was that of Mr. Peter Payne, of Brandon, who for so many years ran the Beaubeir. When the vote was on for abolition of the liquor traffic in Manitoba, Mr. Payne openly voted with the temperance people, and when questioned as to why he did so said, he would prefer to run a house without a bar, as he could make it pay all right.

Those who were in the habit of staying at the Beaubeir will remember how little the bar was in evidence, in fact, you could have been in the house a week without knowing there was a bar unless you went to look for it. It was a well appointed house, clean, good beds, good meals and most courteous service.

Good hotels without bars and showing a reasonable profit are the best possible argument in favor of local option, and the temperance people of any community are unwise to attempt local option unless they are prepared to see that good accommodation will be provided for the travelling public once the bars are closed.

Rudyard Since last writing for the Kipling. Monthly I have had the pleasure of seeing, hear-ing and talking to the man who has done so much to bind the Empire together. When I ventured to say to him that I thought his doctrine that work well done is its own reward, had inspired and helped many a woman on the western plains, he spoke so kindly of the hard lot and the hard work of the women pioneers and said, "It is not even as if it was anything big and great, but to be all frazzled out because she cannot get a servant.'

That expression "frazzled out" struck home and I thought how many thousands of women here in our glorious west were just frazzled out with the daily grind of petty things. It is the small worries that eat into the very soul.

There will be many admirers of Kipling who will like to learn something of his personal appearance and style-well he is just like his pictures, you could pick him out anywhere from one of them. His voice is strong and clear, slightly high pitched and he speaks with a very decided English accent. He paid his hearers in Winnipeg the very great compliment of taking them seriously and speaking of the great responsibility which was a necessary part of the great opportunity of the West. The close of his speech will never be forgotten by the men and women who heard it—"anyone, even I, may remind you that of those to whom much has been given, much shall be required.'

Kipling pronounced his Winnipeg reception the greatest ovation he had ever received. It is whispered that what he thought may possibly appear in print before long.

A Word of There will be hard times Warning. in some of the farm homes this winter and this will no doubt increase the tendency for girls to leave the farms and come into the city to seek employment. In this connection let me utter a word of warning. In many lines of work in Winnipeg the staffs are being curtailed and in not a few instances already, employees, both men and women, have been laid off, and there will be further curtailments after employment as clerk in a store, cashier, stenographer, or in biscuit or candy factories. Any girl who feels she must come would be wise to try and secure a position before coming, as living in Winnipeg is a most costly affair and two or three weeks idleness at a high rate for board would speedily eat up any money a girl might bring with her and in any case would be a serious drain on the profits of a winter's work.

Again let me urge, as I have so often urged before, that girls coming into the city to seek employment will communicate with the secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association, either before they come or immediately upon arrival, so that they may be well advised as to safe and suitable boarding houses to go to. Winnipeg is no worse, perhaps not as bad, as other cities, but it is not without its constant tragedy of the young girl ing this never ending subject in a gone astray through going, in sheer fascinating form.

The Return

And flitted down the churchyard path

I crossed the street and paused again

I pushed the tangled grass away

I halted at my mother's door
And shook the rusty catch—
The wind is rising fast," she said,
"It rattles at the latch."

Before my husband's house,

I pulled the muslin curtain by,

He rose, the blinds to draw-

I met a man who loved me well

He did not hear, he did not see, As silently I fled. But when I found my poor old dog,

And feeble with his many years,

He turned and followed me.

Though blind and deaf was he,

In days ere I was wed.

My baby sat upon his knee

In addition to advising as to boarding houses, etc., the parlors of the Y. W. C. A. are open every day and evening to the girl who has no comfortable place in which to sit, and during the winter there are a number of educational classes for those who wish to push their education further, and there is also good provision for social

Eggs are Let me say to the woman who has a few hens and any means of keeping them warm through the winter to see to it that all the grain suitable for chicken feed is not sold off the farm.

Already it is almost impossible to get new laid eggs in Winnipeg and any that can be obtained cost 45c. per doz-en, a pretty stiff price for October. Last winter new laid eggs were 65c. per dozen, and this winter they will be higher. There is a growing demand for them and apparently a constantly shrinking supply, so that eggs that are strictly new laid should be money makers this winter. I know of one or two grocers who are anxious to increase their receipts of really fancy new laid eggs and I will be very pleased to give names and addresses to any woman who cares to write me, care of this column.

Like the "Bookman" of the Free Press I was haunted all the time I read it with Gordon of Khartoum, though the time is supposed to be fifty years ago. The Quaker who tried to redeem Egypt had certainly much, very much in com-mon with Chinese Gordon, and the dalliance of the British Foreign Office, while men's lives were in the balance, is strongly suggestive of Gladstone's treatment of Gordon. Parker, however, declares that his book is fiction and none of the characters are historical, and with such good fiction it is quite easy to leave the fitting of caps historical alone. From cover to cover it is a wholesome book, full of human struggle after the highest and the best, and though Gilbert Parker cannot be ranked with the great fiction writers he certainly has a genius for portray-

J. PALMER & SON, LTD. 105 NOTRE DAME STREET WEST

This Sleigh is made specially for us by a leading Canadian manufacturer nd we recommend it, for we know that the material is of the best quality, rock elm, carefully selected, and thoroughly seasoned.

The workmanship throughout will stand the closest inspection, for no part of these excellent Sleighs has been neglected. For general purpose work or heavy hauling of any description, none better can be bought at

To all who desire a Sleigh that can be relied upon for service and durability we confidently recommend our 1908 Heavy Bob-Sleighs.

As the cut indicates, this is a heavy Sleigh, heavily built for heavy purposes. The runners are low set, and the bolsters are securely batted to stout standards. The runners are also long, the sliding surface being five feet, while their width is two inches. The distance between the runners is thirty-four inches, and they are joined by a good strong reach.

The Sleigh, ready for shipping, weighs 400 lbs. If you want to find out what the freight will be to your nearest station, ask the station agent. Do not judge the quality of the Sleighs by our price, for our price is the cost of manufacture with our one very small profit added.

One ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion;
One ounce Compound Salatone;

Four ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla;

Mixed and taken in teaspoonful doses

Mixed and taken in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime, is 1 ronounced by a prominent physician to be the best mixture for the cure of the kidney, bladder, and all urinary troubles.

This, says the doctor, is the most simple though remarkable prescription ever written to cleanse the system of impurities and waste matter. It acts as a powerful tonic to the kidneys, forcing them to filter out the acids and poisons, overcoming rheumatism, lame back, sciatica, and other afflictions arising from sour, impure blood.

The ingredients can be procured at any good drug store, and being purely vegetable and entirely harmless, can easily be mixed at home.

If you have a suffering friend show this to him, as he will undoubtedly be pleased to learn of so simple and highly recommended a remedy.

Short As the season advances Skirts. it is possible to judge more correctly of the hold the short skirt has obtained on the feminine fancy.

All skirts are short, even those of dinner and dance gowns, and though the latter fashion is one that personally I do not admire, it is certainly more sensible than attempting to dance in a gown that has to be held up. For dinners, however, a gown with a good sweep is certainly more artistic. The short skirt for the street cannot be too highly praised though, of course, there is always the short stout woman who wears the extreme and looks like a tub. Even that is not so objectionable as the stout woman in a long skirt which she attempts without success to carry.

The ordinary walking skirt is now 5 to 6 inches from the ground and fits very snugly over the hips and is not over four yards in width at the bottom. All skirts are plain and trimmed only with straps or a little braid laid on very flat. In the chiffon velvets many of the skirts are kilted the kilts being held in place by tapes down to about the knee. These velvet skirts are lined through with thin silk before being kilted and this gives a peculiarly soft appearance to the pleats. The velvet suit, with its short kilted skirt and smart semi-fitting coat, is one of the prettiest dresses of the season, and when worn over a dainty lace or lingerie blouse is dressy enough for almost any occasion.

Velvet hats with long plumes are much affected with these suits but equally fashionable and much more serviceable for rural wear is a fluffy beaver dinted into almost any becoming shape and decorated with one or two clusters of velvet roses. Greenhats with cerise roses, brown with any or, for that matter, half a dozen of the wallflower shades in roses, black with any color, red with roses shading from faint pink to deep crimson, and white hats with the same, purple hats are more often decorated with velvet iris or orchids than they are with roses.

Gaiters. The short skirt has revived the wearing of gaiters, and they are to be had in nearly every shade to match the gown. There is a fad among a certain set to wear red gowns and red gaiters but it is questionable taste. A girl of 12 in a red frock, coat, hat and gaiters looks all right, but a girl from 18 to 20 looks just a little fast in such a costume and an older woman looks either fast or vulgar. Red dresses and red hats are all right in their place but black gaiters should be worn with them. The dark greens, browns, fawns, pearl greys, and dark purple and plum colors are both neat and effective when they match the gown.

The short skirts prohibit the wearing of wool tights to the ankle and gaiters fitting closely and buttoning to the knee take the place of these garments very well indeed.

Knickers and The black wool knickers Underskirts. fitting closely below the knee are more in evidence than the wide bottomed bloomers and are more comfortable. Black is the prevailing color, I have seen them though this season for the first time in colors.

To the woman who is spending her first winter in the West, let me say again, as I have often said before, put your extra clothing on in the form of bloomers or knickers rather than skirts. From 25 years' experience in the west, and many experiments, I can confidently say the best possible costume for winter is drawers and vest of wool, worn next the skin if possible, if not, over thin woven cotton; knickers or bloomers of heavy black wool or lightweight cloth, one thin underskirt, silk or moreen, anything that will slip on the wool or cloth knickers, and over all the cloth walking skirt, quite five inches from the ground.

GOODS DELIVERED * * WITHOUT CHARGE

N order to put Mail Order Customers on precisely the same footing as City Shoppers and give them every advantage of Toronto styles and prices, we will pay all the cost of sending goods from the Store to their nearest Railway Station in Ontario and the Eastern Provinces and as far West as Winnipeg, on all orders of $25.00 or over. There are one or two necessary exceptions in the case of extra heavy goods, of which our catalogue gives full particulars. This free delivery offer wipes out the last difference between shopping by mail and shopping in person, and gives wide selection of goods that are the fashion of the hour at the time they are bought.

Whatever advantage there is to enormously big stocks, exclusive styles, and close prices, is at the service of every family the country over, with freight or express charges fully prepaid anywhere this side of Winnipeg. The further fact that we handle only reliable goods gives every assurance of satisfaction, and Toronto's reputation for style adds to the attractiveness of our special delivery offer. We give ample choice of the best the world affords at no extra expense on account of distance, with every facility for prompt shipments and less to pay here than anywhere for goods of equal quality.

These two items illustrated and described below are samples of value to be found in our

to buy the woven wool knickers, let me advise making them of any thin cloth you may have at hand. Very often an old skirt can be washed and utilized in this way, and where there are small girls and no boys in the family I have more than once seen the thrifty mother rip up a pair of father's summer pants, grown too shabby for further wear by him, wash and press them nicely and make the girlies smart and comfortable knickers from

As these garments never touch the skin they can be kept free of dust by brushing and shaking, the same as you would do with a cloth skirt.

The great object in clothing for winter is to have warmth with as little weight as possible, and this is why the knickers fastened to the bodice are so much safer and better for the growing girl than skirts fastened round the waist and always dragging on the hips and the soft parts of the body.

coat, that is one down to the bottom of her skirt for the schoolgirl. There are few country school houses with cloak rooms where girls can remove their knickers and if they do not have long coats they practically have no more on their lower limbs when they go out than they have indoors. Many colds and much bad health is occasioned in this way. If a girl has a long coat and gaiters to her there is nothing to prevent her taking both off in the school house and having a complete change when she has to face the weather again. Those who have been here a few years know all these things, but I hope this will be of service to the newcomers. So much of a girl's future health and wellbeing depends on her being kept

Buy Light A mistake often made by Underwear, the newcomer is to buy heavy underwear for both men and women. This is quite unnecessary, and means very much additional labor in the washing. Medium weight underwear of pure wool, or with a very small admixture of cotton, is far better and less liable to shrink than very heavy vests and drawers.

I am a woman's sufferings.
I know woman's sufferings.
I know woman's sufferings.
I will mail, free of any charge, my home treasures with full instructions to any sufferer from women's ailments. I want to tell all women about this cure—you, my reader, for yourself, your daughter, your mother, or your sister. I want to tell you how to cure yourselves at home without he help of a doctor. Men cannot understand women's sufferings What we women know from experience, we know better than any doctor. I know hat my home treatment is a safe and sure cure for Lescorrhoea or Whitish discharges, Ulceration, Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Profuse, Scanty or Painful Periods, Uterine or Ovarian Tumors or Browths, also pains in the head; back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, but hashes, weariness, kidney and bladder troubles bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, but flashes, weariness, kidney and bladder troubles where caused by weaknesses peculiar to our sex. I want to send you a complete 10 days' treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember, that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free treatment for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book—"WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER" with explanatory illustrations showning why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it, and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says—"You must have an operation," you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all, old or young. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually cures Leucorrhoxa, Green Sickness and Painful of Irregular Menstruation in Young Ladies. Plumpness and health always result from its use Wherever you live, I can refer you to ladies of your own locality who know and will gladly tell any sufferer that this Home Treatment really cures all woman's diseases and makes women well, strong, plump and robust Just send me your address, and the free ten days' treatment is yours, also the book. Write to-day, as you may not see this offer again. Address:

MRS. M. SUMMERS, Box H. 86 — WINDSOR, Oct.

She: "Mr. Bloom does not pay his wife much attention, does he?" He: "No; the only time I ever knew of his going out with her was once when the gas exploded."

Fare (just alighted): "As you are impudent, I must ask you for your name and your number."

Cabby: "Ere's my number, miss;

but I can't offer you my name, as that is promised to another young lady."

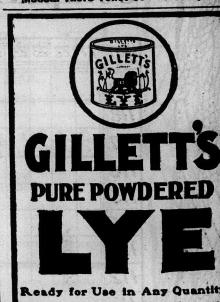

A little girl who had often heard her father refer to the bothersome sparrows as d—sparrows, followed the example. Thinking to break her of the habit they told the pastor of the church about it and he in turn would advise the child. Taking the little one on his knee, he said, "Do you know I heard something about you?" She eagerly asked who told him and he eagerly asked who told him and he replied, "It was a little bird," when she excitedly answered, "Oh, I'll bet it was one of those d— sparrows." The lesson was postponed!

Never, or hardly ever, are piano-organs to be heard on the streets of Paris, but in their place one has the barrel-organ, a dilapidated-looking affair, which gives tuneless, husky rendering of old-fashioned songs. Better, one has the ditties of the street singers of Paris, who accompany themselves either on the violin, guitar, mandoline or harp. The street singers have not only increased, but become more lively within the last ten years. They still sing sentimental ballads, descriptive of moonlight nights, of blondes and brunettes, of vain romantic ambitions and cruelly shattered ideals, but they also give us the latest music hall ditty and cake walk. One popular singer is an old man with white hair, who invariably begins his performance by crying "Vive la France!" "Vive la Russia!" "Vive l'Entente Cordiale!" 'Vive tout le monde!' His instrument is a mandoline, and his songs, delivered in a quavering voice, are French, English, Russian and Italian. Italian boys scraping fiddles and innumerable men and women with string instruments make a fair livelihood by singing in the streets and courtyards of Paris, but perhaps the most interesting of them all is a white-headed Frenchman of 85, known familiarly as "Le Bon Vieillard," who accompanies himself on the harp.

With the exception of the summer vacation the stock company has occu-pied the boards of the Winnipeg theatre continuously since that time, presenting an imposing series of re-vivals of the world's best plays and making a run for themselves and the playgoers of this city, the brilliancy of which has been rarely equalled anywhere on this continent. Most of the company of players who participated in their first performance over a year ago, are still here, and the season ago, are still here, and the season that they have lately inaugurated gives promise, by every token, of fairly outshining the last. During the past month "The Second In Command"; "Trilby," "Why Smith Left Home" and "The Little Minister" have been presented with enormous success, and their repertoire for November is being looked forward to with keen interest.

Miss Lever's recent concert in Portage la Prairie:

Part I.—Unison Song, "Four Jolly Sailors" (Ed. German), Messrs. Burley, Hagel, Burk and Marshall; song, "O Dry Those Tears" (Teresa del Riego), Mr. Craig; song, "Sing, Break into Song" (Albert Matison), Miss Edythe Lever; pianoforte solo, (a) "Serenade" (Op. 91, No. 4) (A. Strelezki), (b) "La Papillon" (C. Lavallec), Miss Thornton; song, "In the Heather, My Lads" (Hermann Lohr), Mr. Burley; 'cello solo, (a) "Dedication" (Popper), (b) "Romance San Paroles" (Davidoff), Herr Hagel; song, "A Woodland Madrigal" (Robert Batten), Miss Edythe Lever. Part II.—Pianoforte duet, (a) "Rhapsody March" (from Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2) (Listz), (b) "Scarf Dance" (Chaminade), Miss Thornton and Mr. Openshaw; song, "The Admiral's Broom" (Fredric Bevan), Mr. Craig; song, "Daffodills a-Blowing" (Ed. German), Miss Edythe Lever; 'cello solo, "Traumbilder" (Dream Picture) (Goltarmann), Herr Hagel; song, "Will o' the Wisp" (Cherry), Mr. Burley; song, "Waiting" (H. Millard), Miss Edythe Lever. God Save the King.

If rapt attention and spontaneous la Prairie:

If rapt attention and spontaneous applause may be taken as a criterion of the public's opinion, then Fraulein Heinrich's recital at Brandon must be voted a triumphant success.

There is an insouciance about her playing that is charming in the extreme, and yet at the same time it is impossible to get away from the fact that she is absolutely master of her instrument. Interspersed with Heinrich's numbers vocal selections were rendered by Miss Edythe Lever, and here again perfection was dominant. Miss Lever is gifted with an enchanting voice, that held her listeners spellbound, and the applause that greeted each effort was well merited. Mr. C. W. Openshaw is deserving of all credit for his sympathetic renderall credit for his sympathetic rendering of the accompaniments to Miss Lever's songs. Fraulein Heinrich may give another recital in Brandon at a later date, when all devotees of music should make a point of attending.

Mrs. Stanley Adams, professionally known as Mme. Lillian Adams, and her little daughter Beryl, gave a very successful musical and dramatic recital at the Walker theory. Winning vocal solo, Aria and Recitative from "Heriode" Massenet "My Laddie," Mrs. Chisholm; vocal solo, "The Sword of Farrer," Mr. Harold Redfern; sketch, "The End of the Fairy Tale," Mr. P. Skuse and Beryl Adams; vocal solo, "Killarney," Mrs. Chisholm. "God Save the King."

The first of the Portage la Prairie Sunday concerts took place in Pratt's Theatre on October 6th and met with great success. The musical features highly pleased the audience.
The first solo "The Holy City" by J. A. Craig was rendered in fine voice, Mrs. C. Colebroke Patterson sang Mrs. C. Colebroke Patterson sang "There is a Green Hill" and had to respond to an enthusiastic encore. Mrs. Patterson possesses a voice of exquisite sweetness and was in fine form. Herr Hagel in his 'cello selections also made a decided hit and was loudly encored. The hymns rendered included such popular old melodies as "Onward Christian Soldiers," "Tell me the old, old Story," Sun of my Soul," etc. Mr. Burley led in these in excellent style. Before adjourning Major Brown asked the feeling of the audience as to continuing the concerts and a unanto continuing the concerts and a unanimous vote in favor indicated the general appreciation. C. W. Openshaw gave satisfaction as accompanist.
The collection totalled $14.

"The Egyptian of Pompeii" dramatized from Bulwer Lytton's "The Last Days of Pompeii" was played in the Opera Hall, Indian Head, in the middle of October. The evening was anything but favorable and the advertising period was short, but still the citizens turned out very well, and those who braved the dark and wet night were not disappointed. The leading characters Jone and Arbaces, were taken by Miss Helene Scott and Joseph de Stephani who proved their mastery of the histrionic art, and these two were ably supported by competent assistants. The scenery was very realistic and appropriate. and appropriate.

Those responsible for the concert held in the Methodist church, Grenfell, on Monday, evening Sept. 30, are to be congratulated on the success which attended their work. The affair was a treat to the large audience which attended. The soles by Miss Fournier. a treat to the large audience which attended. The solos by Miss Fournier, Mrs. Prust, Mrs. McClellan, Mrs. Pease and Mr. King, delighted everyone. So did the duet by Mrs. Prust and Dr. Washington. So also the quartette by Mesdames Prust and Pease, and Messrs. Claxton and Thompson. The instrumental numbers by the orchestra, Messrs. Claxton, Yorston, Thompson and Ruffles were much appreciated. The chorus by the full choir was fine. Mr. D. S. Williams, of Indian Head, "brought down the house" by his humorous recitations. Mr. Alfred Yiorston presided at the piano with his accustomed skill and ability. Rev. Mr. Goodwin presided. We are sorry we cannot give a fuller account of the pleasant evening just now but may just add that Grenfell is to be congratulated. evening just now but may just add that Grenfell is to be congratulated on the number of excellent vocalists living in the town. #### An Interesting Study.

Among our readers are a great many men and boys who are interested in hunting, trapping, etc. We wish to ask all such readers if they know how to properly mount and stuff the fine birds and animals which they secure. The art of Taxidermy is one that every sportsman should be thoroughly acquainted with. It is really easy to learn this work if one goes at it in the right way, and there is no end to the pleasure and satisfaction which can be derived from mounting one's own trophies. There is also a great deal of money in selling mounted specimens or mounting for others. If you would like to learn this interesting and profitable art, write to the Northwestern School of Taxidermy, Omaha, Nebr., U. S. A. This school teaches all branches of the art by mail and they have a large number of students in Canada. Their advertisement appears on another page.

The high rate of interest prevailing in Western Canada where the resources of the company are carefully invested is responsible in a large measure for the Great-West Life making a better showing in the matter of profits over most of its older competitors.

As there is no indication whatever of any diminution in the rate of interest earnings on investments and as there is no falling off in the other feature that has occasioned these results, viz., strict economy of management, it is reasonable to expect that similarly gratifying results will continue to be accomplished for many years to come. It would be well for our readers who are interested in life assurance, to write The Great-West Life Company, Winnipeg, and request that a copy of their pamphlet entitled, "Actual Results to Policyholders" be mailed you. #### Good Because It Does Good.

Good Because It Does Good.

The common ailments, while few, are liable to arise at any time. The best kept horses, and those receiving the least care, are alike liable to the ordinary troubles as spavins, ringbone, splint, curb, lameness, cuts and bruises.

It is well for horse-owners, that these diseases all yield to the same treatment, and can all be cured completely with the same remedy. This dependable remedy—which is very inexpensive—is Kendall's Spavin Cure. Even the most stubborn cases, which veterinaries have failed to relieve, yield to Kendall's Spavin Cure.

In the thirty years in which this reliable remedy has been used by farmers, stockmen, liverymen, and in private and racing stables, it has given complete satisfaction.

Certainly, those who own horses, are not consulting their own best interests, if they do not keep a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure in the barn.

Dr. B. J. Kendall Co., makers of this famous preparation, publish a bock entitled "A Treatise on the Horse and His Diseases," which is invaluable to those who want to keep their horses well and save veterinaries' bills. A copy may be obtained at most dealers or will be sent free by addressing the above company at Enosberg Falls, U. S.

Oxydonor and Panaxora and Doctor Sauche's Other Instruments.

Dear Sirs,—I have been selling Oxydonor and Panaxora for some ten years, and cannot speak too highly of the work they have done in curing all kinds of diseases. It was through being cured myself when the doctors gave me up, that I accepted your offer to handle them. Any good, live man in whatever country he is in will have the satisfaction of benefitting his fellowbeings as well as himself financially, who handles them.

beings as well as himself financially, who handles them.

As to what diseases Oxydonor will not cure, I am at a loss to say, for I do not know of one case where the Oxydonor was taken in time and handled according to directions, that the party did not receive benefit. I have repeatedly been told by those to whom I have sold them that they were new men and women, and this was after the doctors had given them up, like myself.—Yours truly, Wm. T. Gibbins.

A Letter to the Public.

The following letter came to hand too late for a place in our October number. The letter speaks for itself.

for a place in our October number. The letter speaks for itself.

Dear Sirs,—In recent issues of the Dally and Weekly Free Press, under the heading "Notes and Comments—on Farm Matters," there appeared an article referring to the hail osses of this season, in which the following statement was made: "Every insurance company has been hard hit by this succession of tornadoes, and it is already quite manifest that full payment of the losses adjusted is simply impossible. What they will do in the circumstances remains to be seen, etc."

Some of the insurance companies doing hail insurance in Manitoba may be in the unenviable position of not being able to pay their losses this season, but we do not want any misapprehension to exist on that point so for as The Central Canada Insurance Company is concerned, and would deem it a favor if you would make it known to the readers of your paper that we have already paid in full all the losses adjusted by our inspectors, and furthermore, all-losses of which we receive proper notice and for which the company had any liability have been adjusted.

Men and Women from All Parts of the World Seek His Advice About Leve Affairs, Business, Health, Journeys, Marriage, Legacies, Changes, Speculation, Etc.

From the great city of New York, where scientists and investigators are eagerly watching the progress of inventions and spending millions of dollars in the perfection of methods by which the masses may be benefited, comes the startling asnouncment that Professor Albert Postel, the great Astrologer, has perfected a system by which he can foretell the principal events of a life, forewarn people of danger, point out the road to success and explain the cause of failure in so many lives.

The professor says that he can explain who The professor says that he can explain who your enemies are, tell you those persons in whom you can place confidence and from whom you may expect favors, name your lucky days, tell what pitfalls to avoid, what opportunities to grasp, advise you about your business and how to improve your condition physically, financially and socially. His method is unlike that of any other astrologer, and from the expressions of gratitude contained in the many thankful letters from his patrons, it is evident that much good is being accomplished by his work. The following are samples of the letters received by professor Postel, and go far toward showing that his Life Horoscopes are not only accurate, but are prepaired with a view to guiding and benefiting those who apply to him for council.

Effa M. Tryon writes: "You are certainly the most wonderful astrologer living. Every one of your predictions came true."

Mr. Broad, real estate agent of Bandon, Can., in a recent letter to Mr. Postel, says: "My horoscope is the best instrument of guidance that I have ever had put in mv hands. I would not take a hundred dollars for the information you have given me."

Another letter, from Miss Bergliot Horne reads as follows: "I followed your advise and succeeded in securing a position at a much higher salary than I anticipated. I consider the horoscope worth hundreds of dollars to me."

"Home of the Hat Beautiful."

A Charming Hat for only $5.00

This is a special offering to readers of this paper by one of the largest wholesale and retail Millinery Stores on the Continent, known all over Canada for the past quarter of a century.

The cut is an exact reproduction of one of the prettiest hats received from Paris this season. The body is of the mest imported felt, soft and glossy, wired into a most becoming shape, with the new dash at side. The cabbage rosette is most artistically made of twotone satin liberty ribbon, of which material strappings at the back are formed. Proceeding from the rosette is a lovely mount of genuine French coque; a large nob pin completes this chic design. Nothing but the highest grade materials are used, and nowhere can such à hat be produced for less than $8.50 to

Upon receipt of P.O.O. or Money Order, we shall send this hat in any shade or black. If you do not declare it to be the most wonderful value you've ever seen, return it at our expense and the amount paid will be returned by next mail. We shall only sell one hat in each town, so that the wearer will have an exclusive model.

And Handsome Premiums Given Away

In view of the tremendous interest which has recently been created in England and the United States through the issuing of Limerick Competitions, we have decided to give away the sum of $200.00 in cash and many valuable premiums to persons who can supply the best last line to the unfinished verse that is written below. This money and the premiums are given for the purpose of advertising our Red Cross Fills.

In order that everyone may have an equal opportunity to earn the cash prizes we give below an example of Limerick verse:

There was a sick young man named Dent, Whose money was nearly all spent; Oh, Doctor come quick,

For I am so sick, But the doctor, to him, our pills sent.

N.B.—Please note that the last line should rhyme with the first two lines.

Below will be found the Limerick WITH A MISSING LINE, which line we expect our competitors to supply;

There was a young girl who took chills, She was told to use Red Cross Pills; Said the Druggist who knew her: "I know they are pure

Fill in the line above. As a last WORD for the missing line, we would suggest the use of any one of the following words, 'ILLS,' 'BILLS,' 'PILLS,' 'THRILLS,'' 'WILLS,' 'MILLS,' 'KILLS.' These all rhyme with the endings of the first two lines in the verse.

CONDITIONS

To the person who supplies the best and most appropriate last line, we will give the sum of $50,00 in cash; to the second best we will give $40.00 in cash; to the third best, we will give $30.00 in cash; to the fourth best, we will give $20.00 in cash; to the fifth best, we will give $15.00 in cash; and to the sixth best, we will give $10.00 in cash; to the persons who supply the next best seven answers, we will give seven prizes of $5.00 each. We will also give watches, bracelets, rings, pins, etc., in order of merit.

There is another simple condition attached to this contest about which we will write you as soon as we have received your answer to the above. THIS CONDITION DOES NOT INVOLVE THE SPENDING OF ANY OF YOUR MONEY.

The judging of the Limericks will be in the hands of a committee of three gentlemen of undoubted integrity who have no connection with this office. No employee of ours nor any of their relations will be allowed to compete, and the committee's judgment must be accepted as final.

I agree to abide by the decision of the committee of three appointed by the Sawyer Medicine Co., and enter this competition on that distinct understanding.

SIGNATURE ..

State whether we are to address you as Mr. Mrs. or Miss.

Please write very plainly. Cut out this advt. and send it to us after filling in the blank line. The filling in of the missing line may take a little thought and time, but it is time and energy well spent. We guarantee that if you send in ANY KIND of an an-wer you will receive one of the above prizes, provided you comply with the simple condition about which we will write you. DO NOT SEND ANY MONEY.

6928—A Pretty Style for Dressing Jacket.

When a woman dons a dressing sack it is either because she wants relief from close-fitting garments or wants to make herself presentable in the least possible time. Time saving is a very important feature of the dressing sack and that sack which can be donned and fastened with the least time and labor is not to be over-looked?

Here is sketched a sack suitable to development in washing stuffs or challis as well as many other materials which is slipped on over the head and requires no fastening. The sack is also surprisingly becoming to all wearers and does not require much time or expense for the making. The prettily shaped yoke supports the full front and back, while the sleeves are loose and may be finished in any length desired. For the medium size 3 yards of 36 inch material are needed.

6228—6 sizes, 32 to 42 inches bust measure. The price of this pattern is 15 cents.

6005—A Practical Sack Nightdress.

A plain, well-fitting model for a night-dress, which may be developed either in longcloth or flannel, is a welcome acquisition to the woman who prefers home-made garments to those which may be bought ready for wear. The design here illustrated is an extremely practical one, the voke insuring extremely practical one, the yoke insuring a comfortable fit about the neck and shoulders, while the sack shaping of the gown effectually does away with the uncomfortable bulkiness that so often distinguishes flannel garments. If desired the gown may be made in the square neck effect shown in the smaller sketch, in which development it is cut without the yoke. If muslin or cambric is used for making, lace or embroidery may be used for garniture, but for a flamel development all the trimming necessary is a little fancy stitchery, worked in silk. For the medium size 6 yards of 36 inch material will be needed for making.

The price of this pattern is 15 cents.

6946-A Becoming Tucked Waist.

A charming model for a tucked waist with either full length or three-quarter sheves is shown in the accompanying sketch. A unique feature is the extension of the center front box pleat to the lower edge of the belt, while the vandyked decoration of the well-fitting yoke is equally distinctive. The latter, while serving to secure the small tuck pleats in position, at the same time gives a becoming effect of width across the chest. The waist as shown is made of Nattier blue rajah, with yoke and collar of Irish crochet; but it may also be made with equal success of any thin, soft draping material, including foulard, chambray, batists or mercerized gingham, while allover lace or embroidered lawn may be emover lace or embroidered lawn may be em-ployed for the yoke. To develop the medium size. 22 yardsroft 27 inch goods will be needed. 6946—6 sizes, 32 to 42.

The price of this pattern is 15 cents.

4279—Toy Elephant and Dog.

In making the set of animals for the youngster who has his lesson yet to learn in this part of nature's school, the patterns given here will be of no small assistance.

The elephant and dog shown are unusually true to life and not difficult to construct. They are extremely practical for the severe use generally given such creatures by the small boy or girl as they are not breakable and will endure a vast amount of hardship. The elephant should be made of gray canton fiannel or cloth and have a blanket of red. Beads or buttons are used for the eyes and white celluloid hair pins for the tusks. One yard of material is needed.

For the dog 5-8 yard of canton fiannel is required and buttons are used for eyes while the nose and mouth are outlined with thread. The price of this pattern is 15 cents.

A smart little coat for wearing whenever a lightweight outdoor garment is needed is always an acceptable addition to the feminine wardrobe, and the design illustrated is especially desirable because of its simple but effective modelling, which is well within the scope of the home dressmaker. The coat, which is modelled in one of the new striped broadcloths, is semi-fitting, and owes its jauntiness mainly to its excellent shaping, which is expressly intended to emphasize the best lines of the figure. It is an especially good model for the slender type of woman, to whom neither a tight-fitting jacket nor a loose wrap is wholly becoming. It is finished in tailored style, with stitched seams and a mannish collar and sleeve, all of which are in close accord with the latest approved designs. The medium size requires 2½ yards of 54 inch cloth to make. ment.

which skillfully combines a unique suggestion of the Japanese in the waist with the most modern ideas of shaping in the 7-gored skirt. The waist owes much of its distinction to the fact that the body and sleeve caps are cut in one, while in the skirt the circular side and back gores, lapped over the straight gores, provide precisely the graceful effect which is sought after in gowns for developing girlhood. This dress is suitable for modelling in any of the popular soft-draping fabrics, including nuns's veiling, voile, and colienne; while it may either be decorated as pictured or trimmed with ribbon, embroidery or braid. #### 4282-The Doll's Underwear.

Making doll clothes is a real delight when one thinks of the unbounded enjoyment all of these "real clothes" will afford the little maiden for whom the doll is intended. There is no joy in life that is much more real than that felt by the little girl in dressing and undressing the doll-baby which shares so large a part of her affections. In dressing Miss Dolly properly, however, it is necessary to have duplicates in miniature of the clothes which her small mother wears—even to the underwear. Thus we have here sketched models for underwaist and petticoat, drawers and nightdress—for as everyone knows, doll-babies should go to bed and to sleep just as regularly as little girls. These little clothes may be trimmed prettily with lace or embroidery, or they may be made quite plain. To make the whole set requires 12 yards of 36 inch material.

4282-Sizes, 12, 18, 24 and 30 inch dolls. The price of this pattern is 15 cents.

4248-A Pretty Frock For Cool Weather. The novel feature of this little dress is the pretty blouse, the fullness of which is arranged in wide tucks and box-pleats, which are secured in front under an applied yoke of jaunty shaping, and at the back in the collar and belt. Two box-pleats also ornament the front of the straight skirt, which is attached to the blouse under the gracefully shaped belt. The waist is made high in the neck and the sleeves are of full length, thus rendering the frock particularly acceptable for wearing in cool weather. Navy blue serge of fine quality is the material employed for making, turkey-red silk being used for the pipings. Any seasonable woollen goods, however, is suitable for developing by this mode, or, for wearing in a mild climate, linen might be used, 43 yards 27 inches wide being required for the medium sig-2

Waiting.

"Serene I fold my arms and wait, Nor care for wind, or tide, or sea; I rave no more 'gainst time or fate, For lo! my own shall come to me.

stay my haste, I make delays, For what avails this eager pace?

I stand amid the eternal ways,
And what is mine shall know my face.

Asleep, awake, by night or day,
The friends I seek are seeking me;
No wind can drive my bark astray,
Nor change the tide of destiny.

What matter if I stand alone?
I wait with joy the coming years;
My heart shall reap where it has sown,
And garner up its fruit of tears.

The waters know their own, and draw
The brook that springs in yonder height; So flows the good with equal law Unto the soul of pure delight.

The floweret nodding in the wind
Is ready plighted to the bee;
And, maiden, why that look unkind?
For lo! they lover seeketh thee.

The stars come nightly to the sky: The tidal wave unto the sea; Nor time, nor space, nor deep, nor high; Can keep my own away from me."

WINTER HOUSE PLANTS.

To a lover of flowers, there is nothing more gratifying than the raising of plants by one's own efforts. And as knowledge is gained, those same efforts become a pleasure. Select varieties that are easily grown, and have only a few. Study each plant and if it does not thrive on one kind of treatment experiment until you find out the kind of soil, the amount of sun and water and the temperature, which that particular plant needs to make it healthy and vigorous.

Soil.

Plants which have large, strong roots will do better in a loam containing less sand, while those with thin hairy roots must have a fine light soil.

To obtain good loam use rich earth from the garden or leaf mould from the woods. It may be necessary to heat it in the oven to kill all animal life. Mix this with sand until the earth is crumbly. Fill a small pot with the mixture and wet it thoroughly. If the water runs right through and leaves the soil mealy and wet, it is in the proper condition, but if muddy and smooth it needs a greater amount of sand. Mix more than you need and keep it in reserve for the time when the plants require shifting into larger pots.

Potting.

Always select pots in proportion to the size of the plant, as it is as weak-ening to the plant to have too much earth as to have too little; young plants can be started in pots three or four inches in diameter.

and second ingers on each side of the plant, turn the pot upside down, give it a quick rap, then lift off the pot. If the soil is covered with a fine network of roots, place in another perfectly clean pot one or two sizes larger. Do not disturb the root ball. Simply put fresh soil under and around it, shaking the new certify into place rather than fresh soil under and around it, shaking the new earth into place rather than pressing it down. Water well and protect from the sun for a few days.

If plants are old and a larger pot would be out of proportion to the size of the plant—once or twice a year crumble away some of the old earth around the roots, taking great care not to bruise them, wash the pets out and replace with fresh soil.

When potting plants, it is most im-when potting plants, it is most important to provide drainage. The best material to use for drainage is an old pot or bricks broken into pieces the size of pebbles. Put about an inch of this into four or five inch pots, a little more in larger pots, over this put a thin layer of sod, then the soil prepared from loam and sand.

Watering Plants.

When watering, pour on enough to thoroughly saturate all the earth in the pot, or until a little runs out into the saucer. Then do not water again until the earth begins to look dry. Keep the earth at the top of the pot loose, so that air may circulate. This is especially important with ferns and other plants which do not have sunlight, as the roots sometimes sour. Wash the the roots sometimes sour. Wash the leaves frequently with a soft sponge, as Wash the the leaves are the plant's lungs. Besides, they are so much more attractive sides, they are so much more attractive if clean. Change the air of the room every day, taking care to open a window away from the flower window. Where the atmosphere is dry, keep a pan of water on the stove or near the flower stand. Spraying the plants with a regular florist's syringe is also helpful to them. Moist air is not only beneficial to the plants, but will keep away various insects which multiply in a dry atmosphere.

Plant Parasites.

One of the most destructive insects is the red spider. He will be found on the under side of a leaf, a very minute speck, but capable of doing plants great harm. Directly the red spiders appear the leaves turn yellow and fall off. Water makes this little fellow take his departure. Wash the plants carefully and frequently and there will be no further trouble. A solution of fir tree oil is even more effective.

For the green apple aphis which appear on the tender growing shoots, dipping the plants into a tea made of tobacco stems or leaves is best. Florists fumigate their greenhouses, but this is objectionable in the house.

The only way to rout the white mealy bugs is to pick them off with a stiff bristle brush or pointed stick.

Temperature.

In arranging plants about the house, place them in rooms where they will have as even temperature as possible, in the kitchen, dining, or living rooms. In the bedroom, where the windows would be open at night, plants might be frosted. Next assort them according to the sun they require. Rose, geraniums, carnations, helioptrope and nearly all flowers with rich coloring thrive best with southern or western exposures.

Fuchsias, begonias, marguerites and lilies will do well in windows facing east. Ferns and palms require no sun at all and add much to the attractive appearance of a room. Every now and then turn the plants around so that they will not grow one sided. If they grow straggling and send up only one tall stalk, cut the stalk back or pinch off the bud until the plant has acquired the desired bushy shape.

Bulbs.

October and November are the best months in which to plant bulbs. Dig up the ground for the bulb beds and mix through the soil a liberal amount of well rotted manure. Set the bulbs at least three inches deep; they should be set in regard to color and height of flowers, as a promiscuous setting of bulbs is a great mistake. Bedded tulips three years old should be reset. Separate the bulbs, and set them in a bed by themselves, arranging the colors to form a star or some other artistic design. Narcissus make a lovely border for a hyacinth bed. They, with the daffodil and jonquil, thrive best in a partly shaded place.

The crocuses being so early should be planted by themselves. Placed in a trench as a border along walks they are very pretty, as their blossoms beckon a welcome to all who approach.

After the bulbs are planted, cover the soil with a mulch of dead leaves, and over these lay a few boards, raising them at one side, by placing a few stones under each board, to allow a current of air to pass through. Remove the covering when winter is past, not too early, as the flovers will be fuller and more beautiful when not touched by snow.

Pansies—and lilies need good protec-

Growing Violets.

Growing Violets.

A correspondent writes: I received an unrooted runner from a friend. by mail, that readily took roots and made a good growth; the next spring I transplanted it into a box containing soil to the depth of eight inches. (This box had a slanting top with a glass frame for frosty nights in the fall.) I then set it on the north side of a building where it got the sunlight toward evening, watering freely, and in the fall it was filled with strong young plants of immense growth that produced some blossoms in October. Later the box of violets was placed in an east window in the cellar, where it had the sun part of the forenoon. In February buds began to appear and grow rapidly, and now at this writing, March 20, there are more buds and bloom than I have time to count. I water now with warm water only when the soil appears dry, and the box is a perfect mass of foliage and buds.—J. Treadwell.

Medicinal Uses of Pruit.

Fruit is a perfect food when fully ripe, and if it were in daily use from youth to old age there would be less of the many minor aliments that are so common these days.

Encourage the children to eat more fruit and less candy. The skins are the protection of the delicate fruit from the dust and germs and are not intended to be eaten.

The apple is one of the best of fruits and the most generally useful. But it is so common that very few persons are familiar with its remarkable medicinal properties. An old Scandinavian legend has it that the apple was the favorite food of the gods; that to it they owed their perpetual youth. Whenever they found themselves growing old and infirm in body and mind they ate of the apple and were once again strong, young and active. The apple is excellent brain food because it has more phosphoric acid in easily digested shape than any other fruits. It excites the action of the liver, promotes sound and healthy sleep, and thoroughly disinfects the mouth. This is not all; the apple prevents indigestion and throat diseases, and is valuable in rheumatism, insomnia, liver troubles and nervous dyspepsia. Baked or stewed apples will generally agree with the most delicate person, and are an excellent medicine in many cases of sickness. Green or half-ripe apples stewed and sweetened are pleasant to the taste, cooling, nourishing and medicinal. An apple contains as much nutriment as a potato.

The lemon is to.

The lemon is to.

The lemon is to.

Lemonade is the best drink in fevers, and when thickened with sugar is better than syrup of squills and other nauseous drugs in many cases of cough. Hot lemonade is one of the best remedies for a cold. It is also excellent in case of biliousness. The juice of half a lemon in a teacupful of strong, black coffee, without sugar, will often cure a headache.

They are also of great value in cases of rheumatism and gout. The old Roman remedy for malaria is to cut a lemon into a pint of water, peel and all, boil down to one-half. Take one teaspoonful before

Oranges are invaluable as complexion beautifiers. The women of Italy and Spain are said to have the finest complexions in the world and they live largely on coarse grained food, nuts, oranges, and other fruits. Sour oranges are said to be good in cases of rheumatism. Oranges and pineapple make fine drinks. Use saccharine in place of sugar for sweetening them. The juice of pineapple is good in cases of sore throat.

Grape fruit is an admirable tonic and a most appetizing breakfast or luncheon relish. Its medicinal value is better obtained without much sugar.

Watermelons are useful in epilepsy and in yellow fever. The banana is one of the most nourishing of all fruits, and is recommended as a useful food.

one of the most nourishing of all fruits, and is recommended as a useful food for typhoid fever patients, inasmuch as though a solid food for all practical purposes, containing as it does some 95 per cent. of nutritive matter, it does not possess sufficient waste to irritate the ulcerated mucous membrane. Nearly the whole amount taken into the stomach is absorbed.

The banana is the daily bread of the inhabitants of the tropics, providing an abundance of nutrition. It is said that a given space of ground planted to bananas would produce one hundred and thirty-three times as much food substance as the same area sowed to wheat

Peaches are both meat and medicine. They are good for the digestion and the blood, and are almost as good as the orange for beautifying the complexion.

Pears in some cases are more easily digested than apples.

Plums are of special hygienic value and even a preventive of gout and some forms of rheumatism.

Figs are aperient and wholesome. They are said to be valuable as food for those suffering from cancer; they are used externally as well as internally. Green figs are excellent food.

Prunes supply the highest nerve or brain food, and dried figs contain heat, nerve and muscle food, so both are good in cold weather.

Dates can be obtained in every place; they are cheap, delicious, healthy and most excellent for the children's lunch. They can be made into puddings, sandwiches, jam, cake, candy, or eaten as they come from the store. Figs can be used in the same way.

Raisins are stimulating in proportion to their quality. An easy way to keep raisins, figs and dates away from inquisitive little ants and roaches is accomplished by putting them in paper bags that have been well brushed over with strong borax water and dried before the fruit is put in. The little pests do not like borax and will not gnaw through the sack when thus prepared. Try cranberries for malaria and nervous prostration. Cranberries are

The small seeded fruits, such as blackberries, figs, raspberries, currants and strawberries, may be classed among the best foods and medicines. The sugar in them is nutritious, the acid is cooling and purifying. It is sweet, ripe fruit in prime condition only, that is recommended.

Some doctors are ardent advocates of what in Europe is called the grape cure. In this cure grapes form the exclusive diet for several days. The patient commences with the consumption of from one to two pounds daily, with a gradual increase to eight or ten pounds. After a few days of this diet, a marked improvement in the general health is noticeable. The appetite improves, the digestion becomes easy and rapid, and increased capacity to withstand the fatigue of outdoor exercise is noticeable. The grape cure is particularly recommended to the anaemic, dyspeptic, consumptive, and in cases of liver trouble and gout.

The Care of the Child Through the Second Summer.

The second summer is looked upon by most mothers as a dreadful season for babies. Often, during this heated term, double teeth are making their appearance, and the pain and feverishness induced by this process, even though a natural one, may be the cause of stomach and bowel trouble, through the ignorance or neglect of those in charge of the children.

To be forewarned is to be forearmed and with a little special care much suffering can be avoided and many lives saved.

As the diseases are principally of the digestive tract, the diet of the child is of the utmost importance. A child one or two years old should have eight to twelve or fourteen teeth. He has passed twelve or fourteen teeth. He has passed the period where the mother's milk supplies nourishment enough for his rapidly growing body, and yet the glands and juices of the stomach and bowels are not sufficiently developed to digest the solid food used by adults. so that the diet throughout the second summer should be semi-solid, plain and easily digested.

Children at this age should have a regularly prepared meal about every four hours, and nothing at all between meals.

Bread and butter and a glass of milk, or a bowl of bread and milk, thoroughly cooked rice, or any of the cereals found to agree with the child, soft boiled eggs, beef juice, apple sauce, orange juice, the pulp of cooked prunes, make a good list from which to select. If candy is given it should be at the meal, a little peppermint or chocolate, the best and purest meal, a little peppermint or chocolate, the best and purest.

Be sure that all the food is wholesome and pure. Stale or slightly sour milk can cause an attack of dysentery or cholera infantum which may prove fatal. Keep all indigestible food out of the reach of these irresponsible little people, who find the way to their mouths with everything that comes into their hands.

Clothing.

Children should be dressed to suit the changes in temperature. As few garments as possible during the heat of the day, with the addition of a sack or a thin wool shirt which will cover the abdomen during the cool mornings and evenings will be a necessary precaution. Children disposed to diarrhoea should wear a soft flannel band around the abdomen all through this critical period as a preventive measure against the rapid changes of our climate.

Hives is an affection of the skin usually coming as a symptom of a run down condition of the sys.m and indigestion. Use strong salt water to quiet the intolerable itching. Sulphur and cream of tartar are considered specifics to purify the blood after wich a tonic of iron or some vegetable bitter, taken after meals, will build unthe system. It will be very necessary to diet rigidly until the bives disappear. Take no meat, rich pastry, spices nor any food difficult to digest pear. #### The Little Bird Prisoner.

He fluttered against the bars of his cell and begged to be let out. All his little feathers were getting crumpled and torn so soon. That troubled Teresa most of all. The poor little peep-peep-peeping she could stand quite well, now that she was getting used to

"You won't be homesick very long, birdie mine," she said consolingly. "You'll get 'customed to it. I did. First I s'posed I'd die; but, when I didn't, I kept getting cureder 'n' cureder until I was all well. If you only keep still long arough."

The little prisoner had been in his beautiful gilded prison only a very short time. Just the timest bit of a while ago he had been at home in the long-handled elm with the rest of the children. He had never dreamed of going to jail—oh, no, no! How could he know that Teresa had the little prison door all open, ready, the minute Felix should catch him? "I've got him!" at last Felix had shouted in triumph, and then the prison door had shut. It had stayed shut ever since.

Teresa's window was sunny and full of bright flowers. It seemed like a beautiful place to swing, in a golden cage; but the little captive oriole was homebut the little captive oriole was home-sick. He kept right on beating his tiny wings against the bars, and calling piteously to the oriole mother in the long-handled elm. And at last she came. She brought him juicy worms, and sat on the outside of the cage and talked little encouraging talks to him, as other mothers do. She came again and again. One day Teresa sat in the window, and listened drowsily to the conversation.

"Peep! peep!" Why, no, it was in words, like other people- Teresa held her breath in wonder, and listened harder than ever. The oriole mother was saying something. Hark!

"Cheer-up, cheer-up Things will clear-up, clear-up," she sang in her sweet, plaintive voice. Teresa thought it sounded as if there were tears in it, as Mother Annette's voice did when she felt sorrowful.

"Never-mind, never-mind, dear. Some-body-will-be-kind, dear," trilled on the little voice, comfortingly. The little mother pressed close to the prison bars, and her bright feathers mingled with the little captive's. For a while they seemed to be whispering, and Teresa could not hear what they said. Then the mother kissed her child good-bye-it truly looked so! Teresa could hardly believe it; but didn't she see it with her own eyes, and hear the queer, chirpy little "smack?"

"Cheer-up, cheer-up, dear. Things will clear-up, clear-up, dear. Somebody will be kind. Never mind. Somebody'll open the gate, dear. Somebody will be kind," the little bird mother sang all the way home. Then Teresa opened her eyes. She had been asleep! To be sure, the little bird mother was there, but she wasn't talking in words at all. The tears were in her voice, though. Teresa was sure of

"Cheep! cheep!" coaxed the little pris-

"Che-ep! che-ep!" answered the oriole mother wistfully. And how very much it did sound like "Cheer up, cheer up!"

The little girl sat in sober thought for a long time. Then she sprang, to her feet, and ran to the window. The mother bird had flown back to her other babies, in the long-handled elm, and her clear song came floating across to them on a special little breeze-a kind little breeze.

"Somebody will be kind," murmured Teresa; and she was not thinking of a little breeze just then. She put up her hand and gently opened the door of the golden-barred prison. "Things will clear-up, clear-up, dear. Somebody-will-be-kind."

And with one shrill, glad note the free little fellow hurried home.

Ah, there he goes, my manly boy,
The dearest lad of all;
Some little one's in trouble now,
Has had a blow or fall.
But Fred is sure to be on hand,
When trouble is in the air;
Where wrongs rise up or right deeds aid,
My manly boy is there.

He never sees a weak one hurt
Whate'er the game may be;
Strong and brave as his blue eyes light,
True hearted, too, is he.
He is trusty as a man could be
Whatever he has said
Be sure his promise he will keep;
My honest boy is Fred.

He is always gentle in his ways, As if his tender heart
Holding some love for everyone
Of each act formed a part.
A fault with him is soon forgot,
Or trifles that annoy;
His bright face meets full many smiles—
My thoughtful, loving boy.

An' 'en I put my tongue 'way out,
An' he says, "H-m-m! Nurse get son Warm water, please." An' in about
A minute, w'y, she did, an' 'en
He put a glass thing into it
An' 'en he wiped it off again
An' put it in my mouth a bit.

'En after w'ile he took it out
An' held it up w'ere he could see,
An' 'en he says, "H-m-m! 'Ist about Too high a half of a degree."
An' 'en ma asked him if I'm bad
An' he says "Nope!" 'ist gruff and cross
An' says, "W'y, you can't kill a lad,
An' if you do, it ain't much loss!"

An' 'en she's mad an' he 'ist bust
Out laughin' an' he says "Don't fret,
He's goin' t' be all right, I trust.
W'y, he ain't even half dead yet."
An' 'en he felt my pulse, 'at way,
An' patted me on my head
An' says, "There ain't no school to-day,
'Cuz one of th' trustees is dead!"

An' my, I'm awful sorry w'en
He told me that. An' 'en he said
"He'll be ail right by noon," an' 'en
He went away. An' ma says "Ned.
How do you feel?" An' en, you know.
Since doctor told me that, somehow,
I'm awful sick a while ago,
But, my! I'm almost well right now!

So Say We All of Us.

When I was just a little boy,
My gran'ther used to say:
"Just keep on growing, sonny, and You'll be a man some day."
Ah, would my gran'ther could decree
Another kind of joy,
And I would grow the other way
Until I was a boy!

Pastening Up the Waist.

ribbon, or a lace collar, knows that with a little thought she can give many a magical new touch to her frocks that need freshening.

Let us begin with the mainstay of her wardrobe—the separate waists—There is much that can be done to change their effect. Take, for instance, a white radium silk waist, trimmed with cluny lace, the lace being inserted in a V-shaped chemisette at the neck and in two bands arranged in suspender fashion. The sleeves were long, and the deep cuffs were both soiled and worn. The young woman who was determined to transform this waist first gave it a naphtha bath, followed with a good sun bath and a day's airing. Then she cut off the deep cuffs, leaving the sleeves quarter length. As a finish for the sleeves she designed slashed gauntlet cuffs. For these cuffs she considered many materials, but at last decided upon cloth of silver, and to give it a new French touch she appliqued upon the glistening silver fabric separate motifs of gold lace. She was so delighted with these cuffs and the very festive air they gave her separate waist that she went a step further and made a shaped girdle of the same silver cloth, with an applique of the lace as its decoration. The girdle fastened invisibly at the left side, and over the fastening she arranged one of the very new shaped bows of silver cloth, the ends of which she stitched in gold thread, just to suggest the gold note. The waist, when worn with this girdle, belt and cuffs, really looked like an imported model. No one but the girl who accomplished the transformation would have recognized the waist.

This same waist could be worn with other less elaborate cuffs and girdle, if one preferred. It would look very fetching and quite different if, in the place of the cloth of silver, these accessories were made of white satin, with an appliqued cut-out design in pale brown leather.

Patience With Children.

If we are notable housekeepers we are in danger of putting our carpets and curtains, our well-kept furniture and our things in general before our children. I have known a mother to pass by without notice a rude and boorish act on the part of a child, when she came down like a veritable Day of she came down like a veritable Day of Judgment on the same little culprit if his ball happened to break a pane of glass. There are mothers who can pardon anything except an ink spot on the front of a frock, or a rent in a garment. Ink spots on character and rents in behavior are a thousand times more injurious than a transient damage to clothing or furniture.

Mothers need to discriminate. Harshness and severity should never be meted out to the child who is the victim of an accident. With the utmost admiration I remember the perfect poise and unbroken calm of a sweet woman whose little girl had the misfortune to knock over a very costly vase which had for her mother precious associations connected with her wedding in the Far Fast. The vase which had for her mother precious associations connected with her wedding journey in the Far East. The vase stood on the table where it had been placed after having been shown to guests, who had gazed at it almost with envy. In came little Barbara, her doll in her arms, her foot caught on a rug, slipped along the polished floor; she threw out a hand to save herself from falling, and lo! the vase lay in fragments at our feet. "Never mind, Barbara," said the mother, gently, "you did not mean to do it. I am so glad you are not hurt, and that even Dolly has not a scratch."

The object lesson in self-control was

The object lesson in self-control was worth going far to see, and its effect would never be lost on the character formation of the little daughter.

The Decadence of Pamily Life.

The Decadence of Pamily Life.

That noted American divine, the Rev. Lyman Abbott, observes: "Along with this decadence of the pastoral relation, and possibly responsible for it, has gone a decadence of family life. Not only in the great cities, but in many of the smaller cities, the apartment house, the boarding house and the family hotel have taken the place of the home. The little children go earlier to the kindergarten, the boys and girls earlier and in greater numbers to boarding schools. The family has sometimes two homes or even three or four, and the greater the number of homes the less home. I do not know what the statistics show, but the impression on my mind is that divorce and domestic separations are ominously frequent now and were very rare then. And whatever weakens the family tie weakens the foundations not only of all social order but of individual morality.

I am glad to put myself on record as in hearty agreement with the note of warning on this general subject which ex-President Cleveland has recently sounded. Whatever turns women away from the sacred offices of the home to seek "careers," whatever leads children to think that clubs and associations, sacred or secular, are more sacred or more dear than the home, whatever drives or draws fathers away from the personal fellowship of the home circle to attend to the duties of business or the pleasures of a club, is perilous, and, if not recognized and resisted, may be disastrous, not only to the happiness of the individual but to the future of society. Far more important than the endowment of libraries or colleges, the purification of politics, or the reinvigoration of the churches, because fundamental to them all, is the housing, the defending, and the maintaining of the home."

Laugh and Get Well.

Whether this be absolutely true or not, there are no doubt great advantages in the way of health that come to the person who is buoyant and happy, seeing the bright, even the ludicrous side of the affairs of life. In western New York there resided, until a few years ago, a physician who was known as the "Laughing Doctor." Doctor Burdick was always full of smiles, presenting the happiest kind of a face, so much so as to have given to him the name quoted, and it is said that his good humor was contagious and that his presence and his cheerful, hopeful advice brought all that was necessary for his patients: he dealt sparingly in drugs, if at all. and still he was very successful. A man in a neighboring city was recently given up to die; his family was sent for and gathered at the bedside; one called to see him who assured him smilingly that he was all right, would soon be well, and talked in such a strain that the sick man was forced to laugh, and the effort roused his energies and his system; he rallied and was soon well again. It may be stated as a general principle that the person who laughs much will be sick but little, and it is the experience of many that when a life of hilarious freedom is adopted, there is an increase in bodily strength, vigor and vitality.

Laughter is contagious, and it is vigor and vitality.

Laughter is contagious, and it is often found that the presence of one jovial spirit will affect a whole company. Invalids are always helped by a call from a smiling, hopeful friend, and depressed by the presence of "Aunty Doleful."—Independent.

The old lamp wick is a good thing to throw away, or to use in starting the next fire. Few single articles of house-bold use cost less than a lamp wick, next fire. Few single articles of household use cost less than a lamp wick, and few are so persistently held on to. Once in a well-to-do home we saw two old wicks sewed together to make a wick long enough for use. No economy in that. Old wicks become clogged and fail to give good light often before they are too short for use.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

COOKING RECIPES.

Egg Salad.—Slice one dozen hard-boiled eggs, add one dozen small on-ions chopped fine, season with salt and pepper and cover with salad dressing.

waffles .- One quart of sour or buttermilk, two eggs, one quart of flour, one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter. Bake in hot and well greased waffle iron.

Cottage Cake.—One and one-half cupfuls of sugar, one-half cupful of butter, one-half teaspoonful of sola, one teaspoonful of cream tartar, two cupfuls of flour, two-thirds cupful of milk; flavor to suit taste.

chicken Tea.—Cut in small pieces a chicken from which the skin and fat have been removed. Boil the pieces in one quart of water with a little salt for twenty minutes. The tea should be poured from the chicken before the meat is quite cold.

Buttered Apples.—Take six large apples, core and cut in halves. Place them in a buttered pie-dish, and sprinkle over them sugar and a little cinnamon. Place a piece of butter the size of a walnut on each apple. Bake till apples are tender Love Apple Salad.—Wipe perfect to-matoes and begin at the blossom end to cut into petals toward the stem end. pressing carefully; open so as to leave the seeds in a ball of pulp. Pour over each a spoonful of mayonnaise and serve.

mew England Salad.—Chop together enough cold boiled beets and carrots to make a pint. With a fork mix in one-half cupful of thick cream, to which has been added one tablespoonful of vinegar. Serve with little balls of cottage cheese.

Green Apple Jelly.—Early apples picked in September before fully ripe make a nice-flavored, light-colored jelly. Wipe and cut up without peeling, stew in a little water, and drain through a jelly bag the same as other jelly. Allow three-quarters of a pound of sugar to each pint of juice.

Tomato Salad.—For a pretty and most delicious salad use solid ripe tomatoes (as many as persons to be served), wash the tomatoes and scoop out a portion of the centres, filling with crisp chopped cucumbers, then place each tomato on three or four crisp lettuce leaves. Serve with either mayonnaise or French dressing.

Browned Rice.—Spread a cupful of rice on a shallow baking tin and put into a moderately hot oven to brown. It will need to be stirred frequently. Each rice kernel when sufficiently browned should be of a yellowish brown, about the color of ripe wheat. Cook in boiling water. Serve with fruit juice or Codfish Puff.—Make a mixture as for codfish balls. Add the whites of two eggs beaten stiff. folding these in lightly. Butter a stoneware platter, spread the puff upon it and bake in a hot oven till well puffed and brown. Or cook in a buttered frying-pan till a brown crust has formed, then fold like an omelet.

Parsnip Croquettes.—Scrape and wash five medium-sized parsnips; cut into oblong pieces, place in boiling water and boil till tender. When done mash and salt to taste, add a tablespoonful of butter! Make them into oval balls the size of an egg and a half-an-inch thick. Fry in a little butter to a nice brown and serve hot.

Stuffed Apples.—Select large sour apples and core but do not peel them. Chop some cold meat of any kind very fine and season highly with salt and pepper and a pinch of summer savory or other sweet herb, or, if chicken is used, season with celery salt. Fill the apples with the meat, put a dot of butter on each, and bake.

Roast Ham.—Get a nice ham and boil on Saturday. Then on Sunday take off the thick skin and put in a roasting pan. Cover the top with confectioner's sugar and enough water to baste. Roast until the tentile secondly. until top is brown, basting occasionally. When boiled on Saturday, Saturday night's dinner can also be had of boiled ham, if it is a good sized one.

Hot Potato Salad .- Boil seven or eight potatoes and use before they are cold. Chop half an onion and put into a pan with enough water to cover the bottom. Season with pepper and salt, cooking until the water simmers; add three tablespoonfuls of butter, and, when it is melted, a tablespoonful of vinegar. Slice the potatoes and pour the dressing on them, serving hot.

Eggs with Spaghetti.—Take one cupful of plain boiled spaghetti (or macaroni) and cut or chop quite fine. Melt one large tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan; when in the season add one scant cupful of fresh mushrooms and cook first for five minutes. Pour in one cupful of milk and the spaghetti, and heat slowly. When beginning to simmer add six well-beaten eggs, one scant teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper. Stir until the eggs have thickened, then add one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, and turn into a hot dish, garnishing with toast points.

French Gingerbread.—Blanch and chop fine one quarter pound of sweet almonds. Add one-quarter teaspoonful of grated nutmeg, the same amount of anise seed. one-half cupful of sugar, and one-half pound of strained honey. Mix well together, then add the flour, four cupfuls, and knead the mixture thoroughly for thirty minutes. Work into a ball, cover with a napkin and set aside for twenty-four hours. Roll out in a thin sheet, cut into fancy shapes, and bake in a moderate oven. When cold glaze with a glaze a l'eau.

Prench Omelet.—Into a bowl put four eggs, season with salt. Into chafing dish put one tablespoonful of butter; when heated, pour into chafing dish the well-beaten eggs. Take spoon or fork and draw from the edge of the dish to the centre, which will give the layer-like composition noticed in French omelets. Instead of folding in half, fold each edge to the centre, then fold again, or begin at the edge and roll up, making first fold about an inch and a half. Have parsley garniture for plain omelet, or mince parsley and sprinkle the omelet before folding.

cream of Potato Soup.—Pare four small potatoes, cover with boiling water, boil rapidly for five minutes. Throw the water away and cover with one and one-half pints of boiling water. Add a slice of onion, a bay leaf and a few celery tops chopped fine—the green leaves of the celery will answer the purpose; cover and boil fifteen minutes, or until the potatoes are soft. While these are boiling put one pint of milk in the double boiler, add one tablespoonful of butter and one of flour rubbed together; press the potatoes through a fine sieve, using the water in which they were boiled; add this mixture to the hot milk in the double boiler. Stir until thoroughly heated and serve. until thoroughly heated and serve.

Crab Salad.—Boil three dozen hardshell crabs, let them cool gradually; remove the upper shell and the tail, break the remainder apart and pick out the meat carefully. The large claws should not be forgotten, for they contain a dainty morsel, and the creamy fat attached to the upper shell should mot be overlooked. Line a salad bowl with the small white leaves of two heads of lettuce, add the crab meat, pour over it a mayonnaise, garnish with clab claws, hard boiled eggs and little moulds of cress leaves, which may be mixed with the salad when served.

Stuffed Banavas.—Peel the skin from one side of large bananas, and with a teaspoon scoop out a furrow three-quarters of an inch deep. Chop fine some candied pineapple and cherries; mix with them granulated sugar. Put the mixture in the prepared bananas, heaping it up; place them in a baking pan, and bake it in a moderate oven for twenty-minutes. Serve them in the skins very hot, and pour one table-spoonful of orange juice over each banana. For one-half dozen bananas allow two ounces of pineapple, the same amount of cherries, and two tablespoonfuls of sugar. fuls of sugar.

Potato and Apple Salad.—Cut in small cubes four cold boiled potatoes and mix tart apples that have been peeled and parboiled without sugar for five minutes. Dress in the order given with one-quarter of a teaspoonful of paprika, two teaspoonfuls of salt, six tablespoonfuls of olive oil, one tablespoonful of onion juice, a drop or two of tabasco sauce and six tablespoonfuls of white vinegar, allow the ingredients to marinate in the dressing for ten minutes, and then serve in individual lettuce nests, garnished with stuffed olives and rings of apples sprinkled with lemon juice to preserve their whiteness.

About the Farm.

The Old Barn.

Low, swallow-swept and gray; Between the orchard and the spring, And its wide windows overflowing hay. And crannied doors a-swing, The old barn stands to-day.

Deep in its hay the Leghorn hides A round, white nest. And, humming

On roof and rafter, or its log-rude sides, Black in the sun-shot loft, The building hornet glides.

Along its corn-crib, cautiously As thieving fingers, skulks the rat.
Or, in warped stalls of fragrant timothy,
Gnaws at some loosened slat,
Or passes shadowy.

A dream of drouth made audible Before its door, hot, smooth, and shrill, All day the locust sings. What other

Night and the moon and katydid, And leaf-list of the wind-touched

And mazy shadows that the fireflies thrid; And sweet breath of the cows; And the lone owl here hid.

In the Dairy.

The best grade of oil is the cheapest kind to use in running the separator.

Air slaked lime is a fine thing to sprinkle over the floor of the cow barn.

Do not change the feed suddenly as anything that upsets the digestive capacity upsets the milk flow.

Ample ventilating is a fine thing in the cow barn. It wards off bad odors and disease.

An easy way to salt dairy cows regularly is with a chunk of rock salt in each manger or a salt box in the yard.

There never has been a time when good dairy cows have been as scarce or as valuable as at the present time.

When the cows are out during the cold, rainy nights in the fall, it means just so much knocked off the milk

Sunlight is very essential in keeping the cow barn clean and sweet. Put in some windows before cold weather

The first milk that is drawn from the teats usually contains more or less dirt and germs and little fat. Keep that out of the milk pail.

Do not let the milk get too cold be-fore separating. The sooner it can be separated after milking the more satis-factory will be the results.

Milk is not usually fit for human food until the ninth milking after calving. Neither should a cow be milked later than three weeks before calving.

Is the separator on a good firm foundation, or do you have to stop every little while to change its position? It cannot do good work unless it has a

It is uncertain and unsatisfactory to depend on the instinct to know when it is the right time to churn cream. Get a good dairy thermometer and you will not regret it.

Keep an eye on the herd before they go into winter quarters and if ther are any sickly animals, dispose of them. Especially look out for tuberculosis for it spreads rapidly when the herd is confined.

There are various preservatives such as salicylic acid, boracic acid and formaldehyde that will preserve milk indefinitely if used in large quantities. but which are poisonous and very dangerous to health. We trust that none of our readers are using such preservatives as it is a violation of law, both statutory and morally. The only right way to preserve milk and cream is to use clean methods and plenty of ice or cold water.

From the present shortage of storage butter we must expect high prices for dairy products next winter. See that you give your cows good care and good feed and you need not worry about the profits, provided you have the right kind of cows.

Poultry.

Ducks do not require water to swim in, but they need plenty to drink. It must be before them when they are eating for they first require a mouthful of food and then sufficient water to wash it down.

Fatten and kill the surplus cockerels this month. From now forward the price will decrease and there is more profit in selling this stock now than in keeping it longer at the present high price of grain.

The turkeys, which have been getting free living about the farm, principally by foraging, should now receive one good feed a day of whole grains; for example, oats, wheat or corn, or all three, fed mixed or alternately.

Geese will find most of their living about the farm if allowed to range. They eat grass, roots, bugs and worms, beside such grain as they find about the barns. They are, therefore, inexpensive fowls to keep.

Now is the time to use lice killers vigorously. Don't allow the fowls or chicks to go into winter quarters infested with these pests, which not only torture the birds but prevent them from being as profitable as they would be otherwise.

It is the practice of some poultrymen to close the coops and poultry houses quite tight as soon as the first cool nights arrive. This prevents the fowls from getting the required amount of fresh air, weakens them and makes them susceptible to colds and catarrh. Make sure there are no drafts in the coops and houses, then leave the windows open. The oxygen of fresh air will do the fowls dollars' worth of good.

The Irish Potato.

The Irish potato is one of the most profitable crops that can be grown on a northern farm. The percentages of starch, the material for which comes from the air, makes the potato crop comparatively light on the soil. The tops, which contain a large part of the fertilizer elements, rot on the ground and so render back to the soil the fertility collected in them.

Get Beady for Winter.

The time to prepare for cold weather is before cold weather comes. Every poultryman should thoroughly clean his poultry houses and whitewash them before the first of November. All dirt should be removed from the floors and the walls should be swept free from dust and cobwebs. Two inches or more of fresh, clean sand should be placed on the floor and the interior of the building should be thoroughly whitewashed. If the house is a small one, a broom or an old whitewash brush is sufficient for the work, but if the house is a large one, or if there are many houses, a sprayer furnishes the best method of applying the wash. To every four gallons of whitewash there should be added an ounce of carbolic acid. This will give the wash greater purifying properties and assist to exterminate vermin.

Although modern ideas of poultry keeping calls for very thorough ventilation of the poultry house, that does not mean that the house must not be tightly built at all points where it is not intended to admit the air. A house full of cracks which admit the air in such a manner as to cause drafts, although well ventilated, is by no means healthful. With the many brands of prepared roofing and siding now on the market, there is no excuse for not having tight houses, for such may be built without much expense. Old buildings, too, may be made waterproof by the ing tight houses, for such may be built without much expense. Old buildings, too, may be made waterproof by the use of these wind and waterproof fabrics at comparatively light expense. Broken lights in windows should be replaced, doors which sag should be trued up and broken hinges made to give place to new ones.

All these things should be done during October so that when the cold weather and possible snows of the following month arrive the poultryman's fowls will be well protected and able to produce eggs when the price is high.

The continuous raising of wheat on any land will exhaust that land unless means are taken to keep up the fertility of the soil by putting back on it the elements that are taken off. Wheat naturally requires a rich soil and this led to the growing of wheat on the prairies were brought under the plow. Wheat, too, was not bulky for the-price it brought and could be easily transported. It could be kept for a long time and would not easily heat in the bin, as its starch content was not very high. This led to the putting in of wheat on all the land that could be cleared for it. The land was so rich at first that the farmers got the idea into their heads that it was impossible to ever exhaust the soil.

But it did not take more than two generations of farmers to take out of the land some of the elements that were not in too great abundance. On some soils the element present in least abundance was phosphorous, while in other soils it was potassium, more commonly spoken of as potash. All the prairie states began a generation ago to show the impoverishment of their soils, due to continuous wheat raising, and within twenty years after that some localities abandoned altogether the raising of wheat, while others had reduced the area. Gradually the wheat growing area has been shifting, first west and then northwest. Now the most productive regions are in the Canadian northwest, where the farmers have, become firmly fixed in the idea that their soil is too rich ever to give small yields of wheat. But those that have watched the progress of wheat growing in other sections of North America know that exhaustion is inevitable.

Some day the farmers will be fully convinced of the necessity for following a fixed system of agriculture, such as is recommended by Professor Hopkins, of the Illinois Agricultural College. When that time comes, wheat raising may be again profitably carried on even on our high-priced lands. This rule should be followed, after the land has been brought back to a good state of fertility: For every pound of phosphorous, nitrogen and potassium taken off, put back a like amount. Some will say that perhaps it will pay to reduce the nitrogen and the potassium a good deal before beginning the process of putting back. But most of our farmers are not scientists, and the rule given is a safe one to follow. A man may indeed have in his land more potassium or nitrogen than will be taken out in many years, but he may not know how much he has. In fact, most men have only the vaguest conception on this matter. If for every ten pounds of such elements taken out, ten pounds are put back, the land will never decrease in fertility, though it may in humus. The supply of humus can be kept up by occasionally putting the land into clover and turning the clover sod. This will give not only humus, but also nitrogen.—Farmers' Review. Some day the farmers will be fully

The Saving of Time.

The saving in cost of hauling loads to market over good roads compared with the same haul over bad roads has been strikingly illustrated again and again and with a fair degree of accuracy. But the saving of time in driving over good roads as compared with poor ones has not been given the consideration it merits. This saving of good roads applies with equal force whether they be used by merits. This saving of good roads applies with equal force whether they be used by the farmer in going to town in his light carriage, the automobilist or the bicyclist. It has been estimated that a half hour's time can be saved in passing over every five miles of good road as compared with the same length of bad road. As time has never been more valuable than it is in these days of the twentieth century here is another argument for the good roads movement that is often overlooked. is often overlooked.

Selling by the Pound.

Selling by the Pound.

The custom of retailing such produce as fruits and vegetables by weight instead of by measure makes slow headway. In portions of the west, particularly on the Pacific coast, this method is very much in vogue; but east of the Rocky Mountains the housekeeper who buys a half peck of spinach will get a couple of double handfuls loosely thrown in, or thrice that amount snugly packed, as it happens. In some eastern cities families in the crowded districts are now paying as high as 8 cents a quart for potatoes, the equivalent of fully $2.50 a bushel, while the producer gets only a quarter of that. Similar conditions prevail in the central west. Selling at retail by weight is common in Europe, and the custom is a good one. It is fair to all parties, and from the standpoint of the producer would mean a larger consumption, and this in turn a bigger outlet for the output of farm and garden. It is a subject worth agitating.

THE HERD. Development of the Dairy Cow.

The present dairy cow with her wonderful capacity for giving milk has wonderful capacity for giving milk has been developed from an ancestor that gave milk during only a few months of the year and then gave it in small quantities. The original cow compelled her calf to begin eating grass at an early age and gradually decreased her flow of milk till, when the winds of autumn blew, the calf was making his own living from the dry grasses. Man has taken this animal and has developed in her a capacity for milk giving several times as great as was found in her in the wild state. People talk about letting nature take her own methods, but what would have happened to the diary cow if she had been left to nature We know by what is now the condition of cows in lands where no effort has been made to develop them. They give a pint or a quart of milk per day, except in the flush of milk-giving after the birth of a calf. The development of the dairy cow shows what can be done and points to still greater possibilities.

Value of Pedigree.

A pedigree is worth something, but not so much as some people seem to imagine. It indicates that the animal belongs to one of the established breeds. It is merely a guarantee of pure breeding but it is not a guarantee of any particular performance as to the production of milk or butter-fat. Its real value lies in the fact that it insures a good foundation on which to build the development of a herd. There are poor animals among the pure-bred animals, but the good animals among the pure-breds do not have in them strains of blood that are constantly pulling them off in some direction opposite to the one in which the cow owner is wishing to go, When a man buys a dairy cow with a pedigree he knows he is buying an animal with tendencies in the right direction so far as her ancestry is concerned.

Composition of Milk.

Milk varies widely in composition depending upon the breed and individuality of the cow, stage of lactation and weather conditions. Food, as a rule, has little effect in permanently changing the proportion on the several ingredients. One hundred pounds of milk of good average quality should contain about the following amounts of the different constituents: Water, 87; fat, 4; albuminoids, casein, 3; albumin, 50; milk sugar, 4.80; ash, .70, total, 100. The total solids include all of the ingredients excepting the water.

Buying by Mail.

Buying by Mail.

A Subscriber writes: Some people do not believe that money can be saved in buying goods by mail. But I wish to state from my own experience that within the last few years I have saved many dollars in buying by mail such goods as farming implements, household furniture, clothing, etc. Such goods can be shipped by freight, and as the mail order dealer offers them at a much lower figure than the local dealer, and as the charges on them do not amount to half the profit that is made by the local dealer, I can hardly understand why some had rather pay a few dollars more for goods at home when the same articles could be purchased by mail at a lower price and these extra dollars saved. Recently I was in conversation with a man who stated that we should patronize our local merchant and not buy goods by mail, even if we did lose a few dollars each year. Perhaps this man can afford to lose this extra money, but with me money is not too plentiful and for this reason I always try to make every dollar go as far as possible.

Long Hours on the Farm.

On many of our farms long hours are still the practice, in spite of the fact that improved machinery has made it possible for one man to do the work of several. During the greater part of the year the work required should not be more than what can be done in ten hours. In the rush seasons it is different. Occasionally the work is so pressing that extra hours must be put in, but that is not a hardship to anyone, so long as it does not become the general rule.

There is nothing more pleasing to the eye than a Ruberoid Red or Brown Roof on a country home lying in the green setting of Spring and Summer. Equally effective is its harmony with the beautiful colors of Autumn and the slumbering whiteness of Winter.

In all seasons they are a positive protection from weather severities. They combine the demonstrated durability of the Ruberoid Roofing which has been for fifteen years the standard of roofing quality with the additional feature of a permanent ornamental color. This color is not a painted coat, but is impregnated in the roofing during process of manufacture. ANY HANDY MAN CAN APPLY THESE ROOFINGS.
All the necessary fixtures for application are supplied free with every roll.

Do not buy any roofing until you have sent for samples of the Colored Ruberoids. We carry them in stock

Three fellow-travellers in the smoking-room of a fast train were discussing the speed of trains.
"I was in a train once," said the first man, "that beat everything I rode in for speed. Why, it went so fast that the telegraph poles at the side of the track looked like an immense fine-toothed comb."

"That's nothing," said the second traveller; "I remember riding in an express on the — and — that went at such a gait that the telegraph poles looked like a solid board fence."

The third man made an exclamation of impatience

Anecdotal.

The late Channing Clapp of Boston was for some years after the Civil War a cotton planter in the South. Mr. Clapp had on his plantation a little boy in buttons called "Sam." Sam one afternoon pointed to a bottle on his master's bureau, and said: "Mars Channing, am dat hair oil?" "Mercy, no. Sam, that's glue," said Mr. Clapp. "I guess dass why I can't git mah cap off," said Sam, thoughtfully.

There are few places that have given birth to more humor and wit than the court-room. Many have heard of the famous Lord Ellenborough. One day a young member of the bar rose to advantage of the court in a greye criming. young member of the bar rose to address the Court in a grave criminal case. "My unfortunate client"—he began; repeated it two or three times, and then stopped short. "Go on, sir, go on!" said Ellenborough. "So far the Court is with you."

In The Town Topics criminal libel suit there was much to contribute to metropolitan galety. In examining the talesmen for the jury to try the case against Norman Hapgood, who was charged with libeling Colonel Mann, they were all asked if they had ever read Town Topics. Three of them said they had glanced over it in a barbershop. The next talesman had never heard of the publication. "I shave myself," he said.

A colored preacher took some candidates for immersion down to a river in Louisiana. Seeing some alligators in the stream, one of them objected. "Why, brother," urged the pastor, "can't you trust the Lord? He took care of Jonah, didn't he?" "Y-a-a-s," admitted the darky, "but a whale's diffrent. A whale's got a mem'ry, but ef one o' dem 'gators wus ter swaller dis nigger, he'd jes' go ter sleep dar in de sun an' fergit all 'bout me.'

An English gentleman had occasion to go often to an eminent physician, and said to Jeames: "You will be tired of opening the door for me." "Not at" all, sir," was the gracious reply; "you are but a hunit in the hocean." Another Jeames was accustomed to say during his master's occasional absences: "You had better try hopposite. There's a very respectable man hopposite as we often sends to when Sir William is habsent. His name is Jenner."

James the First of England and Sixth of Scotland, was, every one knows, deficient in vigor and steadiness. The highest grade of negro is the private car porter. It was such a negro, young and with many fine mannerisms and some money, who decided to take a trip to Europe. In London he made the acquaintance of several English-bred negroes. By these he was shown the sights and introduced into society. One evening he was invited to "sit in" a little poker game. He was well acquainted with the same as played at home, and did not hesitate to play. His limited acquaintance with English money cost him several good pots. At last he got four aces and knew exactly where he was, for four aces have their value the world over. His opponent "skinned" his hand carefully after cards had been "doled" and The highest grade of negro is the fully after cards had been "doled" and said: "Ah'll just bet yo' a pound, Mistah Johnsing." #### Notes on Whistletoot.

"What is it?" inquired Major Dodge.
"An underground pipe." replied the Judge.

"Personally I was not aware," returned the Major, "that the common municipal underground pipe was expected to get up and hustle. I never saw a mounted policeman trying to catch an underground pipe."

The Judge ignored the interruption. "You know three years ago I went up Kasson.

"I did go to Skeeterhurst-by-the-Gulf-Stream first," retorted the Judge, with a touch of indignation. "Saw the leading real estate agent: told him I must have, of all things, a dry cellar. Said he had just what I wanted. Ten minutes' walk from his office. Spent the half-hour it took us to walk there telling me how dry the cellar was. So dry they had to keep a wet sponge in it, like a cigar-case. to prevent the potatoes from shrivelling up. Got there. it, like a cigar-case, to prevent the potatoes from shrivelling up. Got there. Still raving about dry cellar. Rather dark—suddenly disappeared—great splash. I got down on my hands and knees, and made out the man floundering around in six feet of water and clinging to the cellar stairs, which were floating about and holmobbing with the refrigerator and a school of kindling-wood. Called the life-saving crew from the beach, and they saved him."

"I suppose so," replied the Judge. "No doubt I could have got used to the excessive dryness of that cellar, but I was afraid of sharks. So I went up to Whistletoot. The only cloud I noted hanging over it was a village improvement society. I knew it had a village improvement society. I knew it had a village improvement society as soon as I saw that the fences were gone and the rocks along the back streets whitewashed. You know. a village improvement society always pools the fences and sells 'em to buy whitewash. Still, I've nothing to say against Whistletoot-on-Hudson—far from it. I've seen some of the prettiest sprinting for the 3.57 train there that I ever saw anywhere. I never encountered such esprit de corps as exists in the ranks of the Whistletoot commuters. I one morning saw a Whistletooter, a strong Republican and a Baptist, cast a galoche while racing down the north sidewalk for this train. Another commuter, a life-long Democrat and an Episcopallan, who was making the run on the south walk, saw the shoe go up, turned into the street with one bound, caught it on the fly without stopping, and restored it to its owner on the train. The first man never stopped nor looked back when he threw the galoche, because he knew some one would get it and bring it along.

"On arriving at Whistletoot I announced that I wanted to buy a house, and an agent took charge of me. Itold him that I must have all modern improvements. He led me to a very pretty cottage. It was just what I wanted. The fence had escaped the Improvement Society, though one could see where they had worn the bark off by lifting on the posts. Personally I think that suburban improvement societies would do better to let the fences and rocks alone, and establish good cinder paths to the station for the commuters.

"The cottage was new and apparently well built. I asked concer

I insisted upon knowing about the improvements.

"'Oh,' he said, 'they're all right. Range in the kitchen, hard-wood floors, electric door-bell, speaking-tubes, clothes-reel in the back yard. Just come around and see that clothes-reel!"

"'Gas, I suppose, of course?' I said, and I fixed him with my glittering eye.

"'Well—er—you see—oh, yes, gas, of course—practically,' he replied. 'Gasmain down on the next block, sir; going to be extended through this street next week.'

"'And city water?' I continued, nailing him to the side of the house with ing him to the side of the house with my gaze.

"The same as here, sir, the same as here, he answered. 'See that man working with the shovel?'

"Yes,' I said.

"Breaking ground for the extension of the city water-main,' he answered, with enthusiasm. 'That water-main is going ahead like greased lightning. Be through this street before you can move into the house.'

"So I bought the cottage. This was three years ago. And the Judge paused.

three years ago. And the ladge paused.

"Surely they have both gone through before this," said Kasson.

"If they have, they've done it in the night," replied the Judge. "And I've been up a good deal nights, too, protecting my fence from the Improvement Society. No, these pipes have not moved an inch in three years. The man I saw digging was the president of the Improvement Society smoothing off another spot on which to place a stone for the secretary to whitewash, the report at the meeting the night before having shown that there were two quarts of whitewash in the treasury."

There's a ribbon for a collar;
There are ribbons in her hair;
'Tis a ribbon forms a girdle
Which she folds with greatest care.
She has frocks all trimmed with ribbons
Of attractive kinds and hues;
Decks her hats with ribbons jaunty,
And with ribbons ties her shoes.
And her lingerie is lovely,
With its ribbons run in lace;
And rosettes of dainty ribbon
Silken hose supporters grace.
'And this girl so fond of ribbons
Surely will be fond of beaux;
She will marry and be happy—
Well, she may; one never knows.
She will carry bridal roses
With their yards of ribbon tied;
In a coach all white beribboned
To the train in state she'll ride.
When the honeymoon is over,
Then the artful little thing
Will proceed to tie her husband
To her ribbon apron string.

This apparent demonstration of the lightness of his wares has, however, been upset by the discovery that ever, been upset by the discovery that the feather is a piece of steel, skillfully cut and painted.

Mr. Frederick Sixt, a resident of New Jersey, lately advertised for a pretty and well-brought up wife. Among the numerous replies was one in a very familiar hand. It came (he had, of course, not advertised under his own name) from his former wife. During the period that they had been separated Mr. Sixt had married a rich woman who had left him a fortune, and time had had left him a fortune, and time had perhaps aided prosperity in softening his disposition. At any rate, he found himself yearning for number one, and she is now Mrs. Sixt number three.

An escaped convict was on trial before a French court, and the question turned upon his identity with a prisoner known to have been tattooed. There was no appearance of colored marks upon his arm, and the question submitted to M. Leroy, the medico-legal expert, was whether the man had ever been tattooed. M. Leroy applied strong friction to the skin of the man's arm. This had the effect of bringing out white lines as cicatrices, with a slight bluish tint. By this means the word "Sophie" was plainly legible in white marks on a reddened skin. This proved the identity of the convict.

Few of those who, at the laying of the corner stone of a new public building, place a coin in the cavity reserved for the purpose, are acquainted with the origin of the custom. This harmless practice is the shadow of an older tragic custom. The money stands, theoretically, for the ransom of the human beings who, by ancient superstition, should have been buried in its place. Otherwise, it was held, the building would not stand firm and endure. There was a time when this particular kind of human sacrifice had a vogue extending to most parts of the world. Even in England skeletons have been found embedded in the bases of castle walls and there is record ef one German fortress at the building of which a child was bought from the mother with hard cash and walled in the donjon tower—the unnatural mother, according to the story, looking on the while. Effigies of human beings are still used in some parts of Europe as harmless substitutes and in remoter and more ruthless places the old custom crops out from time to time in all its grim reality.

Odds and Ends.

Gold in Soot.—The chimney of a gold-smelting furnace at Vallejo Junction California, was cleaned recently, and the soot was chemically treated in the gold-dust room. It contained dust worth £1,400.

Litigation Over £12 Costs £10,000 .-For over three years litigation has been going on in the Irish High Court over a sum of only £12. The litigation has resulted in the expenditure of over £10,000 in costs.

Creatures That Never Sleep.—There are several species of fish, reptile, and insects which never sleep in the whole of their existence. Among fish it is positively known that pike, salmon, and goldfish never sleep at all, also that there are several others in the fish family that never sleep more than a few minutes a month. There are dozens of species of flies which never indulge in slumber.

Terrific Shock.—In the simultaneous discharge of eight of the ten 12-inch guns of the Dreadnought, a shock was given that vessel of 400,000 tons, more than double that of any broadside ever before fired. The vessel of 18,500 tons skidded sideways several yards, listing many degrees. The guns are 53 feet long, and each shell of 850 pounds is discharged by 265 pounds of cordite, with a muzzle velocity of 2,000 miles an hour. miles an hour.

No Stage Murders Allowed in Turkey.—On one point the Turkish censor of the drama is inflexible—there shall be no murder committed on the stage. This is in order to prevent corruption by evil example. Consequently the dramatic effect of many plays is somewhat marred by the manner in which the principals destined to be murdered are rushed off the stage, and, after receiving the fatal thrust out—of sight of the audience, stagger back from the wings to sing their death-songs.

Strange Case from Norfolk.—"Our inspector at Diss, Norfolk," says the 'Animals' World," "reported a strange case which seems contrary to all the laws of Nature. A man in that neighborhood had a hen hatching out some ducks' eggs, and at the time when they chould have come off he found some of ducks' eggs, and at the time when they should have come off the found some of the shells were cracked. Thinking they were useless, he put them into a box containing ferrets, for them to eat, and, to his astonishment, he found. a few days after, the ducklings running about with the ferrets!"

"Charity," said Miss S. O. Ciety, "consists in giving away to someone who does not need it, something you who does not need it, something you want to get rid of."

"And economy," said her mother, "consists in eating hash for breakfast, and dry bread for dinner, thereby saving $2 a month on groceries so as to be able to buy a $15 hat to parade at Easter time with."

An Ancient Custom.—An odd custom of great antiquity still prevails in the town of Oakham, in Rutlandshire. Every peer of the realm passing near the castle, which was built by Walkelin de Ferrers, is expected to deliver a shoe from the foot of one of his horses, or to pay a fine in default. The fine usually takes the form of an ornamental horseshoe, often surmounted by the coronet of the peer presenting it. The total number of shoes at present in possession of the local authorities is 300, and among the most valued are those presented by Queen Elizabeth, King George IV., Queen Victoria and Queen Alexandra.

Novel Sea-Pie Banquet.—The M. P. for Yarmouth has been entertained at a novel feast in the Gorleston portion of his constituency, where a huge seaple was served to a party of fifty guests. It was made by an old trawlskipper, and weighed a hundredweight and a half. It was a four-decker, and was boiled in a vast cauldron for several hours. The keel was laid with beef-bones, and there was a triple bulkhead of short-crust, the bunkers being filled with beafsteak and ox kidneys. There were holds also, stored with meat, onlons, carrots, turnips, and potatoes, and the hull was constructed of a substantial short-crust that alone took a stone and a half of flour.

Pants was the Word.

A college president, noted for the extreme correctness of his language and his closeness in money matters, once bought a pair of ready-made trousers and had them sent home. The bill read: "To J. A. Thompson, debtor, one pair pants, five dollars." The pedagogue called on Mr. Thompson and said "pants" was incorrect; it should be "trousers." Said the clothler: "Twe been in the clothing business twenty years and I've always sold two grades years and I've always sold two grades of goods, pants and trousers. Trousers are everything over five dollars in price, pants everything five dollars and under. It's pants I sold you, and it's pants you'll pay for."

Wealthy Ignoramuses.

I was recently talking with a business man who is in the midst of the great activities of New York, dresses well, and lives well, but who, every time he opens his mouth, condemns himself, betrays his shocking ignorance of almost everything outside of his own little specialty. He knows almost nothing about the great men and great women who figure prominently in current history. It is painful to try and carry on a conversation with such a man. Think of the splendid opportunities for education, enjoyment and culture which that man, with thousands of others, is throwing away! #### Mine Days' Dancing Party.

Indian women in the quaint little village of Orabai, among the Pueblos, have a curious religious celebration during the season of the year corresponding to our Thanksgiving, says a writer in the New York Herald. This celebration. Or ceremony continues writer in the New York Herald. This celebration, or ceremony, continues through nine days and is participated in by members of the Oagol Society, which is the largest as well as the latest of the women's fraternities.

A chief priest and chief priestess are chosen to officiate during the ceremony, though the former plays an unimportant role in the spectacle. It is the priestess who is really the head of the order.

After the opening exercises of the Oagol, and during the pauses between the rites, the Indian women of the village busy themselves with weaving beautiful baskets, to be used in the dance on the final day of the fete and to be given away as prizes.

Races, religious observances and minor dances mark the first eight days of this curious thanksgiving ceremony, but on the ninth a picturesque dance, in which the entire village gives vent to its religious fervor and enthusiasm, brings the Oagol to a fitting close.

For this dance two maidens are chosen to act as leaders. They are arrayed in fine costumes with costly turquoises, abalones, embroidered moccasins and fanciful headdresses. Their blankets, or ceremonial robes, are handsomely embroidered and fasten around the shoulders by cords attached to the corners. the shoulders by cords attached to the

Their faces are thickly covered with the yellow powder from sunflower petals. Each maiden carries a buzzard's feather, a bone whistle and a netted gourd, while the young women of the village, also arrayed in their handsomest blankets and ornaments, carry basket trays. All form in single file and march out of the riva, or underground chamber, to the plaza, where an altar has been erected on the first day of the fete.

Here the women form in a circle around bundles of trays which are to be given out as prizes at the conclusion of the dance. As soon as the chant is heard the circle of female forms begins to sway toward the center of the plaza, and then each one begins that curious, rhythmic motion which is the Indian conception of dancing. They bend the body slightly forward, still carrying the trays in a concave position, and with the figure moving from right to left.

After a wild jumping, dancing and singing have been indulged in, at a signal from the priestess, the circle is charged fiercely by the male spectators, who attempt to secure the prize baskets. When all have been seized the dancing ends and the quaint Indian religious ceremony of thanksgiving is over for that year.

The founder of the Stanfield mills did more than anyone else to develop the wool industry throughout the Maritime Provinces. For half a century, the farmers of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island have saved their best wool for the Stanfields-first for C. E. Stanfield-and now for his sons, John and Frank, the President and Treasurer of Stanfields Limited. The wear of a garment depends on the quality of wool from which it is made. Underwear may be PURE WOOL, and ALL WOOL-and still shrink, ravel and wear out in a single season. Because the underwear is not made of good wool in the first place.

There are seven grades of wool in the fleece when clipped from Nova Scotia sheep. Only the first three grades of this best wool are used in making Stanfield's Unshrinkable Underwear for men and women.

There are no weak spots in the fibre to break in the garments.

There can be no unraveling, because every stitch is locked. Garments can't shrink, because of our perfected process of treating the wool BEFORE garments are woven, thus insuring absolutely Unshrinkable Underwear.

Use All Methods to Destroy the Power of Whiskey.

The drink question has become one of

The drink question has become one of the most important questions of the age. It is a factor in all social and economic problems. It has passed through various stages of sentiment and experiment and may be said to be fairly launched on an age of reason.

At a time when practical measures are at a premium and directness is a fundamental law, the subject is receiving the most careful attention. The best efforts of some of the best minds are directed towards plans to throttle the demon that has brought degradation and ruin to so many who, but for the blight of whiskey, would have been respected and useful citizens.

Science has declared against the use of alcohol, either as a beverage or medicine. It is a poison, and as such is injurious in both its immediate and remote effects. The man who drinks is gradually but surely undermining his health and paving the way for acute or chronic ailments.

Business men have declared against the use of alcoholic drink. They will not countenance it among their employees. It makes men unreliable and irresponsible. Competition is too close and margins are too small to warrant a possible loss through careless workmen, and there are too many good men out of employment to put up with unnecessary inconvenience. The man who holds his job must deserve it, or he will be discharged to make room for some one who will prove his fitness.

Even fashion, which has been slow to recognize the danger of certain forms of tippling, is gradually yielding to the growing influence, and liquors are tabooed in many homes where choice brands were once dispensed with lavish hospitality.

With Science and Industry both warring against alcohol there remains but hospitality With Science and Industry both warring against alcohol, there remains but one cause for its use, and that is found in the pleasure it is supposed to bein the pleasure it is supposed to be stow, and which, at best, is fictitious. But whether pleasure or stimulation for increased labor is the object sought, the result is always disappointing.

The man who drinks fixes a limit to his achievement. Whatever his natural ability may be, he is dommed to failure if he carries a whiskey handicap. Whiskey and prosperity are enemies. They do not control the same individual. Everything that makes for advancement is built on some power or faculty that whiskey destroys. that whiskey destroys.

The man who succeeds must have

The man who succeeds must have quick perception, clear judgment and tireless energy. Strong drink dims the perception, clouds the judgment and paralyzes the energies.

The man who drinks not only loses his place in the financial world, but he jeopardizes his social position as well. Nothing is more fatal to a man's standing among his fellow men than a reputation for drunkenness.

ing among his fellow men than a reputation for drunkenness.

The man who drinks pays a ruinous pice for his so-called pleasure. But he does not pay all that, it costs in misery and suffering. His wife and children are the ones who are taxed most heavily. They feel the burden of his wrong-doing more keenly than it is possible for him to do. His sensibilities are blunted by liquor. Their faculties are blunted by suffering.

They realize the cruel injustice of their condition. They have a right to the best care and the best support which a sober husband and father can possibly bestow. But instead of protection and plenty they are neglected and destitute. Instead of looking up to him with pride and fondness they are ashamed of him and dread his coming. If he is one of those whom liquor infurlates, they are afraid of bodily injury, and hide away at his approach.

Drinking men are not invariably poor.

Drinking men are not invariably poor. Sometimes inherited wealth withstands the onslaught of years of inebriety, and occasionally money earned before the unfortunate addiction had developed furnishes means for its continuance. But, rich or poor, the drunkard's home is the abode of wretchedness. In one case there is the ever-present fear, the constant humiliation, the sickening terror lest something worse may happen. In the other case there is all of these tortures, intensified by insufficient food and lack of comfortable clothing.

clothing.

The drunkard's home is a place of bitter disappointment. He had certain duties toward his family; but apparently he has shirked every duty and turned a deaf ear to the anguished pleading of those, who loved him. We say that apparently he has done this. In reality it was not the man but the whiskey that caused the trouble. He has been controlled by a power stronger than love for family or friends, stronger than ambition, and as relentless as it was insidious. was insidious.

Some of the most hopeless drunkards are, when not in their cups, among the most devoted husbands and fathers. They loathe the bondage that makes them forget their obligations, and many of them make stronger efforts to conquer their addiction than those who censure them would deem possible. But such men fall—not through lack of determination, but through lack of strength to accomplish their purpose. They have been poisoned, and no effort of a weakened will can overcome the effects of the continued use of poison.

Do Your Best To-Day.

To-day! To-day! It is ours, with all its magic possibilities of being and doing. Yesterday, with its mistakes, misdeeds, lost opportunities and failures, is gone forever. With the morrow we are not immediately concerned. It is but a promise yet to be fulfilled. Hidden behind the veil of the future, it may dimly beckon us, but it is yet a shadowy, unsubstantial vision, one that we, perhaps, never may realize. But to-day, here and now, that dawned upon us with the first golden hour of the morn, is a reality, a precious possession upon the right use of which may depend all our future of happiness and success, or of misery and failure.

Lest he should forget that Time's wings are swift and noiseless and so rapidly bear our to-days to the Land of Yesterday, John Ruskin, philosopher, philanthropist, and tireless worker though he was, kept constantly before his eyes, on his study table, a large, handsome block of chalcedony, on which was gaven the single word, "To-day." Every moment of his noble life was enriched—as it enriched the lives of others—by the right use of each passing moment.

John Wanamaker, the successful merchant, upright citizen, and helpful, happy man, very tersely sums up the means by which true success may be attained. "It is just this," he says: "Do your best every day, whatever you have in hand."

This simple rule, if followed in sunshine and in storm, in days of sadness as well as in days of gladness, will rear for the builder a "Palear Beautiful" shine and in storm, in days of sadness as well as in days of gladness, will rear for the builder a "Palace Beautiful" more precious than pearls of great price, more enduring than time. If it is your misfortune to be a victim of strong drink, take steps to have the whiskey appetite removed at once, to-day, if possible.

Inebriety is a disease and can be considered.

Let me offer you a creed: the creed of work. Young men, work! Life has no other reason for being, and each of us is here only to perform his task. I have always distrusted chimeras. Illusion is bad for a man or a people. The only strong men are the men who work. Work alone gives courage and faith.-Zola.

He that would live happily must neither trust to good fortune nor submit to bad; he must stand upon his guard against all assaults, he must stick to himself without any dependence upon other pepole.—Seneca.

The mind can only deal with small numbers. The sufferings of a million move us no more than those of a thousand, and those not so much as the suffering of one.-Walter Besant.

"If ever we are in doubt what to do it is a good rule to ask ourselves what we shall wish on the morrow that we had done.'

A weak Stomach, causing dyspepsia, a weak Heart with palpitation or inter-mittent pulse, always means weak weak Heart with palpitation or intermittent pulse, always means weak Stomach nerves or weak Heart nerves. ### PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause. Pain is congestion, pain is blood pressure—nothing else usually. At least, so says Dr. Shoop, and to prove it he has created a little pink tablet. That tablet—coaxes blood pressure away from pain centers. Its effect is charming, pleasingly delightful. Gently, though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.

If it's painful periods with women, same cause.

If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. That surely is a certainty, for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unnatural blood pressure.

Bruise your finger, and doesn't it get red, and swell, and pain you? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain is—always. It's simply Common Sense.

Charcoal Stops Gas On Your Stomach.

Wonderful Absorbing Power of Charcoal When Taken in the Form of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Trial Package Sent Pres.

Charcoal, pure, simple charcoal, absorbs to times its own volume of gas. Where does the gas go to? It is just absorbed by the charcoal—the gas disappears and there left a pure, fresh, sweet atmosphere, free from all impurities and germs.

That's what happens in your stomach when you take one or two of Stuart's Charcoal lozenges, the most powerful purifiers acience has yet discovered.

losenges, the most powerful purifiers science has yet discovered.

You belch gas in company, sometimes, by accident, greatly to your own humiliation. That is because there is a great amount of gas being formed in your stomach by fermenting food. Your stomach is not digesting your food properly. Gas is inevitable whenever this happens, just take one or two of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges right after eating, and you will be surprised how quickly they will act. No more belchings; no more sour risings. Eat all you want and what you want, and then if there is any gas going to be formed, one of these wonderful little absorbers, a Stuart Charcoal Lozenge, will take care of all the gas.

And it will do more than that. Every particle of impurity in your stomach and your intestines is going to be carried away by the charcoal. No one seems to know why it does this, but it does, and does it wonderfully. You notice the difference in your appetite, general good feeling, and in the purity of your blood, right away.

You'll have no more bad taste in your mouth or bad breath, either from drinking, eating or smoking. Other prople will notice your bad breath quicker than you will yourself. Make your breath pure, fresh and sweet, so when you talk to others you won't disgust them. Just one or two Stuart Charcoal Lozenges will make your breath sweet, and make you feel better all over for it. You can eat all the onions and odorous foods you want, and no one can tell the difference.

Besides, charcoal is the best laxative known. You can take a whole boxful and no harm will result. It is a wonderfully easy regulator.

And then, too, it filters the blood—every particle of poison or impurity in your blood is destroyed, and you begin to notice the difference in your face first thing—your clear complexion.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made from rure willow charcoal, and just a little honey is put in to make them palatable, but not too sweet.

They will work wonders in your stomach, and make you feel fine and fresh. Your blood and breath w

They will work wonders in your stomach, and make you feel fine and fresh. Your blood and breath will be purified.

We want to prove all this to you, so just send for a free sample today. Then after you get it and use it, you will like them so well that you will go to your druggist and get a 25c. box of these Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Building, Marshall, Mich.

"We has a heap o' things to be thankful foh dis year," said Uncle Eben, "but I feels it in my bones dat de price o' turkey ain' gwinter be one of 'em."

Mrs. Skimkins—"How do you like your new boarding house?" Mr. Job-kins—"Oh! the rooms are fair, the table is tolerable, but the gossip is excellent."

"I am very sorry, Victor, to think you were such a glutton. Are you not sorry yourself that you ate so much turkey?"
"Yes, mother, 'cause I hadn't any room left for the mince pie."

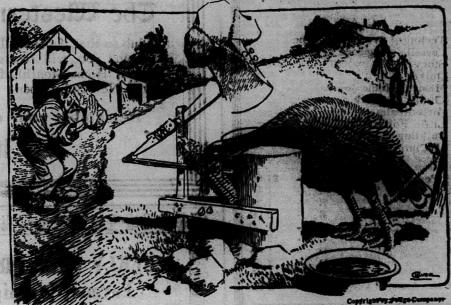

Cockerel—"You have become remarkably puffed up since Thanksgiving Day." Gobbler—"Yes, but not from pride. It is with appropriate thankfulness for not being stuffed up to be stuffed down others on Thanksgiving day."

Teacher—"Johnny, can you tell me anything you have to be thankful for in the past year?" Johnny (without hesitation)— "Yessi:" Teacher—"Well, Johnny, what is it?" Johnny—"Why, when you broke your arm you couldn't cane us for two months."

"De good things er dis life is hard ter come by," said Brother Williams. "De fattest 'possum always roosts de highest, but he's all de mo' jucier, w'en he's cooked on de table, fer de trouble you had in makin' his acquaintance."

"It's bad enough to have him executed," sobbed Mrs. Gobbler. "But—oh, did you see what he did a whole minute after his head was off?" "No," replied Miss Turk, sympathetically. "What?" "He winked his eye at that hussy, Miss Guinea Hen."

The Landlady (during the Thanksgiving dinner)—"My Uncle Uriah, who

TENDER-HEARTED IKE'S INVENTION. FARMER ISAAC—"I riz him from a speckled aig. Ben jest like one o' the family goin' on thirteen year, an' somehow I hain't got the heart to kill him with my own hands. This here way is bad enough." (Bing / Curtain /)

"Johnny," said the teacher, kindly, "you must not bury your talent in a napkin." "Huh! I guess not. Maw wouldn't do a thing to me if she caught me using one of her'n that way.

First Turkey—"Now that Thanksgiving is over I suppose we may as well enjoy ourselves." Second Turkey—"By all means. I propose to organize the Barnyard Survivors' Association and give a reception."

The Drake—"Your politeness to your wife's mother is remarkable. I notice that at meal time you give her all the choicest bits." The Turkey.—"You bet I look forward with great expectation to Thanksgiving."

"No, chillun," says Deacon Snowball; "we isn't gwine ter hab no tukkey dis Thanksgivin' day. Dey's bin too high fo' yo'r po' old daddy ter git one." "Why, poppy," says one of the children, "yo' all has made plenty of money dis month ter buy one, no mattah how high de price." "Dey roos' too high, chile. Who evah heerd ob buyin' a tukkey?"

The Dog (dismally)—"What have we to be thankful for? Ten people to dinner and only one small turkey!" The Cat—"Well, we ought to be thankful we are not the turkey."

Gyer—"We certainly have ample proof that money talks." Myer—"Ample proof?" Gyer—"Yes. Isn't there a woman's head on the greater part of our national coinage?"

Tatter de Malion—"Thanksgivin' day? Bah! Wot hev we to be thankful fer?" Hungry Hooker—"Dat it's de only day in de year dat folks ain't got nothin' ter offer us but turkey."

The Intelligent Goat.

Three colored men were discussing the intelligence of different animals. One favored the dog; another, the horse; but old Peter Jackson said, "In my opinion de goat am de 'telligentest critter livin.' De goat kin read, I saw him do it. Once I wuz walkin' down street dressed in mah best suit, an' wearin' mah new plug hat. When I got down on de main street, I seed a bill-bo'ad on which it said: 'Chew Jackson's Plug.' A goat wuz standin' thar when I passed an' when I wuz about ten feet away he must hab recognized me, for the next thing I knew, I went sailin' in de mud. When I looked 'roun' dat goat wuz chewin' mah plug hat for all he wuz worth. Gem'men, da is no question in mah mind about de 'telligence ob de goat. He am a wondah."

Explicit.

A Dutch woman kept a toll-gate. One foggy day a traveler asked, "Madam, how far is it to A—?"
"Shoost a leetle ways," was the reply.
"Yes, but how far?" again asked the traveler.
"Shoost a leetle ways," more employed.

"Madam, is it one, two, three, four or five miles?"

The good woman ingenuously replied, "I dink it is."

There is no medicine on the market that can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumption Syrup in expelling from the system the irritating germs that colds engender in the air passages. It is suicide to neglect your cold. Try the cheap experiment of ridding yourself of it by using Bickle's Syrup, which is a simple remedy, easily taken, and once used it will always be prized as a sovereign medicine.

OXYDONOR is neither a remedy nor electrical appliance. It belongs to Disduction—the new science, the result of fifty years' investigation of the Laws and Principles of Life.

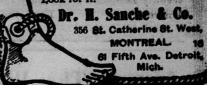

"My husband had a paralytic stroke. For four months doctors did all they could for him but nothing could help him. He could not move his legs but soon after applying OXYDONOR he could move his legs and toes. He had a clot on the brain and doctors said nothing could help him but an operation. The Oxydonor cured that. My little boy had Rezems for over four years—his face, cars and hands covered with sores. We sent him to the hospital all last summer and he was sent home worse than ever and pronounced incurable. We then applied Oxydonor and now his flesh is quite clear, a wonder to everybody.

A WORD IN YOUR EAR Mr. FARMER.

For twenty years there has been a newspaper in the West

The Weekly Tribune,

that has fought your battles. Here is a partial list of the struggles carried on in your behalf:—Emancipation from railway monopoly; the lands for the settler; taxation to be shared by the corporations; the farmers' implements and urgent necessities to be duty free; abolition of the elevator monopoly; freedom to load grain and market it; the lumber combine; the beef combine, etc., etc.

Where would you have been without such a champion, and no other paper dared do it. Most of them stand in with the corporations.

Did it ever strike you that you should reward and stand by your champion?

There is only one way to do it. You should subscribe for the paper. Just give it a trial and see for yourself.

To give all a special chance to test The Farmers' Tribune we have made arrangements with

Hints for the Housewife.

The ruddy blaze of the sumac
Flares wide through the hazy gloom.
And the goldenrod flaunts proudly
Her glimmering yellow plume.

The tall rudbeckia opens
Her disc like a glowing sun
Where the Indian turnip blaz
A path to the meadow run.

The dogwoods are gowned in crimson.
The maples are splashed with red;
And the ivy swings her lantern
From a blighted bough o'erhead.

Then ho! for the partridge, calling
His mate in the cornfield sere!
And ho! for the woodcock drumming
On a log by the limpid mere!

And ho! for Jack Frost, the Midas Who touches the oaken wold, Transmuting its simple verdure To mountings of gleaming gold!

Remove the foot plate from the sewing machine occasionally (after taking out the needle), and clean the feeder with gasoline, using a darning needle to lift out the fluff.

Old window shades can be greatly improved in appearance by removing from the roller, stitching a new hem on the roller end with a long stitch on the sewing machine, then tack the old hem (ripped out) on the roller.

If not the fortunate possessor of curtain stretchers, a good substitute is found in quilt frames. Fasten a pair of curtains at a time, pinning every scallop in place, and set where the sun and wind will quickly dry.

Brass or copper preserving kettles are in great demand to serve as jardin-ieres. If discolored, scour with a strong solution of oxalic acid, using a swab (as the acid eats into the flesh like lime), and burnish with a chamois pad.

The dainty housekeeper has "silence" cloths on sideboard and serving table as well as under the table cloth, and you may be sure she has them fitted to dressing-table, chiffonier and wash-stand as well, even if they are made of only thick canton flannel.

An artistic receptacle for holding a small amount of kindling and shavings is made from two squares of fine Japanese matting laced together on three sides with raffia, and having raffia covered rings on the open side, through which a heavy fiber cord is run to hang by

Why not keep up writing desk supplies just as conscientiously as those for the pantry? Few households would get along a week without sugar, salt or soap, yet how many letters are unan-swered for the lack of a good pen, a stamp, or an envelope. It is not the expense, but lack of thought, that keeps an insufficient or meager supply of the necessary articles on hand necessary articles on hand.

When dressmaking or much sewing when dressmaking or much sewing is done in the house it is a great convienence to have a denim rug to spread over the carpet to prevent delicate fabrics coming in contact with the carpet, and also to keep all threads and litter off the carpet. Sixteen yards of denim will make a rug four yards square, which should be stitched on the machine with a two-inch hem to finish machine with a two-inch hem to finish.

An article of furniture too seldom used is the clothes "tree." resembling the posts of our grandmother's fourpost bedstead. It stands on three feet, and has half a dozen prongs or hooks. It takes up so little floor space and holds so many garments, it is an invaluable article. In a small hall or vestibule it takes the place of the hat rack, and in a larger hall it complements the table on which gentlemen's hats are laid. For the necessary airing of one's clothes overnight it is preferable to chairs, as it can so easily be set out of the sleeping-room. In the bathroom it is especially convenient.

If the edge and medallions of old Irish point curtains are in good condition, though the net is much broken, they can be transferred to new net without much trouble. Get enough bobbinette or Brussels net for the new curtains, cut the desired length, allowing for however and put into curtain. stretchers. Baste the border of Irish point onto the net, then the medallions, and stitch on by the machine, using the longest stitch and a loose tension. Cut away the net close to the stitching.

It was a quick-witted bachelor girl who discovered that bamboo porch curtains made an ideal partition in the large room she was obliged to use for both sitting-room and sleeping apartment. Two upright curtain poles secured to the floor and half a dozen screw-eyes in the floor helped to hold them secure, and a doorway was constructed out of Oriental cotton cloth. The screens allowed of better ventilation than was possible with drapery.

Hot water and soda will usually remove stains from wood, such as the floor, table, etc.

A simple method of cleaning lamp chimneys—hold in the steam of a kettle and polish with a newspaper.

An old refrigerator which has a lining of tin may be made to look cleaner by applying coats of white enamel.

Put a few grains of rice in the salt cellars to keep the salt from caking; as the cellar is shaken the rice will keep the salt moving.

To clean a fishy frying pan, fill with cold water and place on the fire to boil. When boiling, put a red-hot cinder in, and then wash in the usual way.

When washing glassware do not put it in hot water bottom first, as it will be liable to crack from sudden expan-sion. Even delicate glass can be safely washed in very hot water if slipped in Peppermint sprigs laid around shelves and places which mice frequent will drive them away. Chloride of lime sprinkled around places that rats or mice frequent will also drive them away. Keep it in a bottle, corked.

Gin is the best thing to use to remove the stains from a white dress. Place the stained part in a saucer, with enough gin to cover the stain, rub with a piece of the same material, press on the wrong side with a moderately hot iron till dry.

Rubbed well into yellowed knife handles of ivory, turpentine restores the color. Gilt frames can be cleaned by wiping with a small sponge dipped lightly in oil of turpentine. Wet the sponge just enough to take off the soil and dry marks. Let the frame dry itself.

To Make Colors Fast.—To preserve the colors of ginghams, printed lawns, etc., and before washing almost any colored fabrics, it is recommended to soak them for some time in water to every gallon of which is added a spoonful of ox gall. A strong, clear tea of common hay will preserve the color of French linens. Vinegar in the rinsing water for pink and green fabrics will brighten these colors, and soda answers the same purpose for both purple and blue. The colors of the above fabrics may be preserved by using a strong, milk-warm lather of white soap, putting the dress into it instead of rubbing it on the material, and stirring into a it on the material, and stirring into a first and second tub of rinsing water a large tablespoonful of ox gall. To prepare ox gall for washing colored articles empty it into a bottle, put in it a handful of salt and keep it closely corked. A teaspoonful to five gallons of the rinsing water will suffice.

Household Helps.

Heat the milk to be used in custards, pies or puddings, and they may be baked much quicker.

Add a little cream to icing for cake to prevent its cracking when cut.

Clean mica in heating stoves by washing with hot vinegar and salt.

Wash woolen blankets in strong suds. not too hot, rubbing on as little soap as possible, rinse always in warm water, dry where they will not freeze, and they will not shrink. Pull them into shape and fold neatly—do not iron.

Hang up woolen blankets lengthwise,

Hang up woolen blankets lengthwise, so that if the colors in the striped ends are inclined to run they will run down the stripe and not discolor the rest of the blanket.

An appetizing soup may be made by cooking together for an hour or two all left-overs of meat and vegetables, to thoroughly incorporate them, strain, season nicely and serve with croutons—stale bread toasted, buttered and cut into small squares.
