Though unable to commence those extensive permanent works contemplated by the Legislature, the Board of Directors lost no time in securing the services of Mr. Killaly, and an Assistant—both of whom have been, and yet are, actively employed making those more minute surveys, required for the preparation of working plans; drawing up specifications; and making all those preliminary preparations, which will enable the Engineer to devote his entire attention to the execution of the work, when the means of proceeding therewith shall be forthcoming. These primary labours are already far advanced; it is therefore greatly to be desired, that no unnecessary delay in commencing the permanent works before-mentioned should be permitted: for though the repairs of the past year have not been very extensive, and it is confidently anticipated that those of the coming season will be of like character, yet it may be reasonably apprehended that the cost of repairs in the ensuing years will be of great amount—and will therefore materially increase the ultimate expenditures on the Canal.

The Directors regret, that through the lack of means, they have been prevented making any preparations for building a ship-lock at Dunnville—a work of paramount importance to the inhabitants on the bank of the Grand River.

A difference of opinion as to the intent and meaning of the 17th clause of the 7th Wm. IV. chap. 92, having arisen among the Directors, as shewn in Appendix A. they have declined declaring a dividend under that clause, in order that the interest of the private stockholders may not be compromised by a premature decision of the question at issue. In deference to the opinion of Her Majesty's Attorney General, communicated to the Board by the Honourable John Macaulay, the Directors have caused statements B. and C. to be prepared, shewing what, under the view taken by that Officer, would be the amount of the dividends to be declared for the years 1837 and 1838. By those statements, Your Excellency will perceive that had the permanent works of the Canal been proceeded with, the interest on the additional capital which would have been expended during the two past seasons, would have absorbed the entire nett income of those years, and would have rendered the operation of the 17th clause before-mentioned nugatory.

The Legislature, doubtless, intended the clause in question as a boon to the private stockholders; but when it is borne in mind, that if the Canal is completed on the scale contemplated, in three or four years from this date, at least, £300,000 of additional capital will be expended—the interest on which must be paid out of the tolls, it is vain to anticipate any present advantage to the private stockholders therefrom.

The amount of private stock is £117,800, and £398,000 of public money have been expended—which will make the ultimate cost of the Canal not less than £815,800. The relative proportions of private and public investment will then be nearly as 1 to 6.

This great disproportion in the interest of the two parties, coupled with the inconvenience of having future private interests constantly operating against those of the public, in a work so entirely of a public character, would seem imperatively to require that the interest of the private stockholders should be purchased by the public; the Board of Directors beg therefore most earnestly to recommend, that this subject may be brought under the notice of the Legislature at an early date.

During the past summer, the Board of Directors have caused a report on the navigation of the Grand River from Dunnville to Cayuga, with an estimate of the expense of completing the same, to be prepared, the which letters D. and E., are herewith forwarded for Your Excellency's information.

In drawing Your Excellency's attention to the concluding paragraph of that report, the Board are desirous of expressing their opinion, that the union of the Grand River Navigation and Welland Canal Companies, under one direction, would be a public benefit.

By order of the Board.

APPENDIX A.

At the first meeting the undersigned had an opportunity of attending the past season, 4th May, 1838, they were of opinion the private Shareholders were entitled to a dividend under the provisions of 17th clause 7th Wm. 4, chap. 92, wherein it is enacted, “that the tolls received upon the Canal, after deducting the amount required for the charge made thereon by law, or so much thereof as shall be necessary, shall be first annually applied to discharge the interest on the sums borrowed, and the remainder of the income received by the said Company shall be divided among the private Shareholders, until it shall equal six per cent. on the amount of their investment.”

After ascertaining the only charge made thereon by law, to which this clause refers, was 10th Geo. 4, chap. 9, sec. 1, to secure the interest on a loan from the British Government; and ascertaining by the return of the Secretary that the income for 1837 was £6461 4 4 and that the amount of interest on Debentures due Government during same year, was .....

Leaving a balance due the private Shareholders, of..... £5134 14 2

They decided on declaring a dividend on the sum of £117,800—the amount held by private Stockholders, of at least 2 per cent.—equal to £2,356, which would have left a reserve fund of £2,738 14s. 2d. to be hereafter applied.

Two of the Directors took a different view, maintaining that the cost of Administration should be first deducted from the proceeds of tolls; and in consequence of other reasons assigned by them, the majority consented to defer declaring the dividend, until the subject was referred to the Executive Government, for the opinion of Her Majesty’s Attorney General. This opinion was withheld until the meeting of the Board in November, and is as follows:

(Copy.)

ATTORNEY GENERAL’S OFFICE,
Toronto, 2nd November, 1838.

I am clearly of opinion, that the construction placed upon the Act referred to by the minority of the Directors, is the legal construction, and that it would be contrary to the meaning and intent of the Act to appropriate any portion of the money granted for the permanent construction of the Canal, to the current expense of the Company.

(Signed) C. A. HAGERMAN,
Attorney General.

Not one farthing of the money yet granted has been expended in the permanent construction of the Canal—therefore, the entire expenditure made is illegal, or the Attorney General’s opinion incorrect. Again, the undersigned wholly object to that part of the Report alluding to Statements B. and C. because all the items there charged do not arise from collecting tolls, or cost of Administration, and the Attorney General's opinion does not allude to any particular item, but to the current expenses of the entire work. The cost of Administration is not alluded to in the Act, and cannot be defined, without an arbitrary selection of items, by which means any future Board may name any amount they please to balance the income.

This opinion was so decidedly at variance with the opinion of the undersigned, they determined on consulting other professional Gentlemen, and accordingly applied to the Company's Solicitor, James Boulton, Roland Macdonald, B. Y. McKeys, L. Raymond, Esquires, also, the late Solicitor, Alexander McDonell, by F. Burnap, as per Appendix. The unanimous concurrence of every legal Gentleman to whom they have appealed, gives them additional confidence in adhering to their previous opinions, and regret that so many obstacles have ensued to prevent the private Shareholders from receiving the dividend to which they are so justly entitled. If this Canal had been commenced when this grant was made, the current expenses, or cost of administration, as it is termed, would, as in all similar works, have been sustained out of the Capital to be expended, for which, in most estimates, a certain percentage is provided; the same current expenses and cost of administration must be incurred in its permanent construction. It is evident, the entire income was intended to be applied to two specific objects—the payment of interest on public debt, and a dividend to private Shareholders. The first relieves the public revenue, and the last, the private Shareholders, who in the first place incurred the entire risk, at different times sustained the work by individual responsibility, and have never, up to the present moment, received any remuneration whatever, whereas the public have derived all the direct and indirect advantages incident to all similar improvements, by increase in value of property, trade, revenue, &c. If the progressive income derived from the Canal be realized, the wisdom of this provision will be made apparent. Prompt payment on future loans from Government will satisfy the public, and a dividend on the private shares from year to year, will satisfy the private Shareholders; also, the undersigned are of the opinion, that the clause referred to will attain that object: which opinion is founded on the following data:—

It will be observed, the above admits of an increase of expenditure of £100,000: and the progressive increase of income is founded on the progressive increase of the Erie and other Canals in the United States—on which every Stockholder, as well as the public at large, may form their own opinion. It is supposed that if no interruption in business had taken place this year, the tolls would have increased to £8000 at least; and we can see no good reason why the geographical situation of this Canal should not ensure the same result realized by similar undertakings. It may be a subject worthy of enquiry, how far the different interests embarked in the same undertaking may be liable to come in collision: and thereby, in some measure, disturb or impede the one great interest—the advancement of the public good; and whether, in view of the possibility of such difficulties arising, it would not be advisable that so great and stupendous a public enterprise should at once become wholly the property of the public, by purchasing all the private stock, in order that the whole management may be placed under the control and direction of the Government.

NIAGARA, 29th December, 1838.

I am of opinion, that the legal construction of the Act of 7th William IV. chap. 92, is in favour of the views taken by the majority of the Directors, and that it would be quite at variance with the spirit and intention of the Act, to construe the words “after deducting the amount required for the charges now made thereon by law," in the 17th clause of the Act, to mean any thing other than a direct incumbrance, such as that mentioned and provided for in the Act 10th Geo. IV. chap. 9, sec. 1, or some other charges than those incident to the formation of a Company, such as the payment of the salaries to most of the Officers, and current expenses for overseeing the work, is as much necessary for the permanent completion of it as any other expense attending the same.

(Signed) JAMES BOULTON,
SOLICITOR,
Welland Canal Company.

I am clearly of opinion, that when the Legislature, by the Act of 7th Wm. IV. chap. 42, availed themselves of what the private stockholders in the Welland Canal had already done in the completion of that great work, they intended, as in common honesty they should, to grant them some remuneration for their outlay: such remuneration not to exceed 6 per cent on their investments, derivable out of the income of the Company, "after" what?—Why after deducting the amount required for the charges now made thereon by law, or so much thereof as shall be necessary, (meaning the interest on the £50,000 borrowed,) and the interest accruing upon the sum of £245,000, or so much thereof as shall have been advanced—clearly, then, all that can be deducted before making the dividend are these charges, and this interest, (nothing said of costs of administration, &c. &c.) Again, what is a man's income?—Surely not what he may save at the end of the year, after paying the expenses of his family, &c.: for peradventure, he may save nothing, let his income be never so great—no, it is literally his comings-in, without reference to his out-going. I therefore, after maturely weighing the whole Act, coincide with the majority of the Directors, in their opinion. I might give many other reasons for doing so, but shall content myself at present with giving one more, and that only because I consider it a new one—Why was the dividend limited to 6 per cent, if it was not intended that it should be made out of the income before, in fact, a profit should have accrued. If the minority are correct in their view, and that the private stockholders are not to receive a dividend until there is, in fact, a profit after costs of administration, &c.—why, then, it follows, that let the Company make never so much—say a million a year—yet the poor stockholders are never to get more than 6 per cent for their money, which would be absurd.

(Signed) ROLLAND MACDONALD, COUNSEL.

ST. CATHARINES, 28th December, 1838.

ST. CATHARINES, 31st December, 1838.

With reference to the question under discussion among the Directors of the Welland Canal Company, whether the costs of administration, or current expenses of the Company, are chargeable upon the tolls, before any dividend of such tolls can be declared—I have to state, that time has not been allowed me to give the subject that full and careful consideration which its intricacy and importance require, but I am inclined to concur in the opinion entertained by a majority of the Directors, for the following, among other reasons:

1st.—That the fund out of which these expenses are to be paid, is not pointed out in any of the Acts relative to the Welland Canal Company, leaving it to be inferred that they are to be paid in the same manner as the ordinary charges and expenses of the work.

2nd.—That no other definite charges are made by law upon the tolls of the Canal, except the payment of the interest of sums previously borrowed from Government, and for which the work and its profits were pledged, and the interest of the sum of £245,000, mentioned in the Act 7th Wm. IV. chap. 92.

3rd.—That in the commencement of the work, the costs of administration, &c. were necessarily defrayed out of the general fund or capital, there being no tolls, or income of any description derived from the work itself, from which they could be paid, and nothing has transpired, or appears in any Act of the Legislature, to shew that they ever intended any alteration in this respect.

4th.—That the cost of administration may with propriety be included in the expenses of the permanent construction of the work, as without incurring such costs the work could not be constructed at all.

5th.—That in the absence of any further specific direction in the Act, of the purposes to which the tolls are to be applied, the Directors have a right to apply them to the purposes mentioned in the 17th clause, subject to the only specific charges previously made, viz.—the payment of the interest above-mentioned.

(Signed) B. Y. McKEYS,
Barrister at Law.

In discussing the question which has arisen between the Directors of the Welland Canal Company, as to the application of tolls, &c. we shall be assisted in coming to a correct conclusion, by laying down distinctly, in the first place, the leading notes of construction which govern such cases.

1st.—Vested rights are always favoured in law, whether in the interpretation of a statute, the construction of a contract, or the application of the common law.

In tracing out the provisions of the Act 7th Wm. IV. chap. 92, under which the above question has arisen, this rule is to be kept steadily in view, as the land-mark, for there can be no doubt that before the passing of that Act, the right of the private Stockholders to an equal participation in the tolls, “after deducting the amount required for the charges ‘then’ made thereon by law,” was a vested right.

2nd.—Or to repeat part of the above rule in another form—Acts of Parliament which take away vested rights, are to receive a strict construction, every intendment being made in favour of the party suffering the loss or penalty.

3rd.—Every Act of Parliament is to be interpreted, if possible, in favour of right and justice. Cases are not wanting, in which the Courts have rejected the literal construction of Acts of Parliament, when such construction would work out manifest injustice, resorting to every, and the most subtle expedients, to avoid such operation, short of denying the power of Parliament to pass such Acts; and this is on the alledged ground that it is disrespectful and undutiful to the Legislature, to suppose that they ever intended any thing wrong or absurd.

The Act 7th Wm. IV. chap. 92, secs. 2 and 3, convert the loans of £102,000, formerly made by the Provincial Government, into stock, and authorize the subscribing of £245,000 additional stock, by the Provincial Government, and provide that the Government, as the holder of such stock, shall be subject to the same conditions, and have the same advantages and privileges, as the other Stockholders. If the Act had stopped here, the Government would have paid the £245,000, and this sum would have become equally the property of the holder of each share, and each would have been entitled to an equal division of profits. The 14th section, however, makes the interest of the Debentures issued to raise the £245,000, a charge on the tolls of the Company. This is an exertion of arbitrary power, dealing with the property of others according to the will of one party; and every countervailing circumstance is to be taken hold of, to prevent such an enactment from operating unjustly. The 17th clause provides seemingly, by way of set-off to the advantages given to Government by the 14th section, that after deducting from the tolls the amount of the charges then made thereon by law, (that is specific charges) shall be first annually applied to discharge the interest of the £245,000, and the remainder divided among the private Stockholders, until it shall amount to 6 per cent, &c.

The Act thus specifically appropriates the whole income of the Company, (not mentioning the outgoings) to three objects, and no more—1st. The tolls to pay the charges then made thereon by law, which can mean no other than charges specifically made by some previous statute; and,

2nd. To pay the annual interest on £245,000.

3rd. The remainder of the income, including tolls, rent, and other profits, to pay a dividend to the Stockholders.

If any subtlety of construction is to be allowed against the literal meaning of such a statute, it must be to prevent some manifest wrong and injustice, which is not the case here.

If the incidental expenses of the Company are to be paid out of the income apparently appropriated to the private Stockholders, what becomes of the provision, not only of natural justice, but of the Act in question,—that the Government, as the holders of stock, shall be subject to the same conditions, and have the same advantages and privileges as other Stockholders? The company may, and probably will, within a few years, expend some thousands of pounds in improving and bringing into market their extensive lands, besides other expenses, ordinary and extraordinary, and according to the construction in question, all this must be paid, in effect, by the private Stockholders, and the benefit received equally by the Government; and the Government, by owning the greater part of the shares, and having, by the appointment of a majority of the Directors, indirectly the control of the Company, may for many years deprive the private Stockholders of all benefit of their investments. To suppose that the Legislature intended such a result, would be to attribute to them the intention to form a sort of leonine partnership with the Company,—like the lion in the fable, who took what of right belonged to him, and as much more as pleased him.

It seems to be assumed, that the £245,000 were granted to the Company specifically for the “permanent construction of the Canal,” but on referring to the Act, no such thing appears. Nor is it in any sense a grant to the Company, but a grant to enable the Government to become extensive Stockholders, on equal terms with the other Stockholders. It is true, the preamble, (at best an uncertain guide in the exposition of a statute, and only to be resorted to when other means of discovering the intention of the law-maker fail) recites that it is expedient to extend the public aid to the Company, so as to effect the completion of the Canal in a substantial and permanent manner; but this does not indicate any thing more than a general assistance, to put the aided party in a condition to effect a desirable object. And besides that, the £245,000 were a specific appropriation for the permanent construction of the Canal, is contradicted by the fifth section, which authorizes a part of this money to be appropriated to another purpose. The sixth section merely restricts the amount of the above sum which might be laid out during the present year, in the permanent construction of the Canal. The seventh section does indeed seem to afford, by implication, some countenance to the idea that the £245,000 were appropriated for the sole purpose of permanently constructing the Canal, by directing that no more of it than before mentioned should be laid out till after the end of the then next session of Parliament. The purpose of this section was to prevent the expenditure of money on that part of the Canal which might be condemned by the Engineers to be appointed in pursuance of the Act. But the casual expression used in it might bear some weight, if it were in case of a mere grant of money to the Company, or if they were only agents in its expenditure.

This section affords the only indication to be found in the Act, that the £245,000 were intended as a specific appropriation for the permanent construction of the Canal; and the implication contained in the section is as strongly contradicted by the 11th section, which enacts “that in order to provide more effectually for the proper expenditure of the monies to be granted by this Act,” and other purposes, a Superintendent should be appointed “to have the care and superintendence of the work, (meaning the Canal,) and to take all necessary measures for keeping the same in good repair, and rendering the use thereof convenient to persons navigating the Canal.”

From these reasons, we are of opinion, that the position assumed by the majority of the Board of Directors is correct.

Per F. BURNAP.

ST. CATHARINES, 31st December, 1838.

With respect to the question as to the mode of appropriation of the income of the Welland Canal Company, I am of opinion, that the Statutes will not justify its appropriation in any other way, and that it cannot, by law, be applied to any other purpose than to the payment of the sum of £50,000, and interest thereon, as the Statute 10th Geo. IV. chap. 9, directs; and to the discharge of the interest which has accrued, and will accrue upon the sum of £245,000, advanced to the Company by authority of the Statute 7th Wm. IV. chap. 92; and that the remainder of the income should be divided among the private stockholders, until it shall equal 6 per cent on the amount of the interest.

ST. CATHARINES, 16th November, 1838.

To JOHN S. MACAULAY, Esquire, President of the Welland Canal Company.

SIR,

I have the honour to acquaint you, that in compliance with the wish of the Board, I proceeded up the Grand River to Cayuga, for the purpose of ascertaining the practicability of clearing a direct boat channel along the verge of the marshes; of forming a towing-path thereto; and how far the plans and estimates furnished by Mr. Murray for these objects were applicable and just.

Mr. Murray's idea was to follow the Dunnville side of the river, from that village to Downey's Point, about one and a half miles: there to cross over to the south side, and follow along the verge of the main land to Cayuga; sinking, chopping and grubbing, were necessary, and forming a towing-path throughout—in the principle of which I agree. But in our estimates there will be perceived a wide difference—owing chiefly, I apprehend, to his calculations being founded on the lowest summer prices; mine on the increased expense of executing such work in winter, which is the season this must necessarily be done in.

The objection to crossing the river at Downey's Point, where it is both wide and deep, will at once strike the Board; but the advantages are—a curtailment of some miles in the distance is effected: some bends in the river are avoided, where, from the exposed situation, and the prevalence of westerly and south-westerly winds, boats and rafts get wind-bound frequently for days: and the sheltered shore becomes the line of the channel thence to Cayuga. At present a boat or scow coming down with wheat, plaister, &c. and from the interior of the country, after having probably waited for some days for calm weather, must be poled down the entire of the distance—crossing the river at several places in upwards of 20 feet water, and often (as mentioned before) delayed a considerable time in the exposed bends of the river.

It would be unnecessary for me to dilate upon the vast importance of affording every practicable facility to the carriage down, by water, of the agricultural and mineral produce of the great and fertile vale of the Grand River, and of the adjacent (especially the western) tracts, as well as for the accommodation of the merchants of that District, in getting up their merchandize. It is still less necessary to point out the immediate advantages which will accrue therefrom to the Welland Canal Company. Under this impression, and conceiving that one of the first steps of the Board (when the fiscal circumstances of the Company enabled them) would be to improve the portion of the river under their control—namely, from Dunnville to Cayuga—I made a minute estimate, embracing all the work necessary ultimately to open a good and direct boat channel, 24 feet wide at bottom, and with 4 feet depth of water in the shoalest part, together with a towing-path of 8 feet in width—properly formed throughout, and having sufficient bridges over all the creeks in its course; but seeing how much the trade would be encouraged at present, even by the clearing of the channel, I have estimated that portion of the work distinctly.

By reference to the accompanying estimate, you will perceive, that to open this channel properly I calculate would cost $4,477 80 cents; and the expense afterwards of completing the entire, towing-path, bridges, &c. $5,491 33 cents—total, $9,969 13 cents. I have put down liberal prices, and probably such as will exceed what the work may be done for. The estimates are founded upon the principle of obtaining the required depth, without rising the dam at Dunnville.

I trust the Board will not consider it irrelevant, my drawing their attention to the strong and natural ties which connect the Grand River navigation and the Welland Canal. The vast importance of which latter work, whether considered in a provincial or national, a civil or military, point of view, every succeeding hour more fully establishes; that the best policy points to the immediate assumption by Government of the entire control over and completion of this Canal, with its terminating harbours, docks, &c. no one can doubt—the reasons for so doing are many and unanswerable, and equally applicable to the obtaining the command over, and amalgamating with it, the Grand River navigation: which, in fact, is but a continuation of the former, for 50 miles into the heart of the country; by so doing, the entire could be easily under our management—the tolls and expenses thereby much reduced.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

With great respect,

Your very obedient Servant,

WELLAND CANAL OFFICE,
St. Catharines, 20th December, 1838.

SIR,

I have to report, for the information of the Board, that the navigation of the Canal ceased, in consequence of the severe weather, about the 1st instant, and that during the past season no delay or interruption to the passage of vessels through it has occurred, worth mentioning. This is the more satisfactory, as the summer was unusually dry; and though on most of the American Canals a difficulty was experienced in keeping the levels full, I felt none here, beyond enforcing strictly the rules respecting the water used by mills, and seeing that the dam and waste-weirs at Dunnville were kept as tight as possible. I have thought it proper to mention this, because it is the first time since the Canal was in use, that during a very dry season the levels have been kept up to their proper height, and many persons have argued in consequence, that the Grand River could not be relied on to supply a sufficiency of water at all times.

The Secretary's returns will shew an increase of income over that of last year, and this increase would have been considerably greater, had it not been for the affair at the Short Hills, which took place in the busiest time of the season. Indeed it was only by repeated assurances on my part, of the perfect safety of this route, notwithstanding that event, that the Forwarders in Oswego and Cleveland continued to send their property and vessels by it;—and I am now assured by my correspondents at those places, that if no similar cause for alarm exists next year, and the Canal is in order to open early in the spring, the business we may expect from them will be greater than in any former year.

Of the expenditure on the Canal during the past year, a very large portion was applied to repair the damage done to the piers at Port Colborne and at Port Dalhousie, by a severe gale, early in 1837, the cost of which was heavy, in consequence of having to do the work partly during the winter, and without any previous preparation. The sum of £2188 7s. 3d. was expended at Port Colborne, principally on the piers, 573 feet of which had to be re-built—most of it 16 feet in height. The light-house also was much injured by the same gale, and has been repaired. At Port Dalhousie, the whole of the east pier was more or less injured;—1,245 feet in length was re-built, to a depth varying from 8½ feet to 3. The west pier required 685 feet in length, by four in depth. The light-house was entirely destroyed, and has been replaced by a frame one, that will answer the purpose for many years. The lock and waste-weir at this place, (No. 1,) have also been thoroughly repaired, so that all our work at this end of the Canal and at Port Colborne, are in better order than they have ever been, and will, I trust, remain so without any further expense for several years. The piers have been covered with three inch plank, well fastened—which, besides adding much to their strength, will prevent the stones from washing out as they did heretofore. At this port the Steam-Dredge was employed from the 4th June to 1st November, at a great expense certainly; but there was no other way of removing the vast quantity of stone and timber washed into the channel by the gale in December, as before mentioned. The whole space between the piers, from the lock to their outer end, was also deepened—leaving two feet of water more than we had before, an improvement that has been long necessary. There have been used in repairing the piers and lock at this place, 44,000 feet of square timber; 22,000 feet of three-inch plank; and 820 cords stone, (besides those recovered by the Dredge.) The sum expended in these works, and on the towing-path between locks No. 1 and 2, amounts to £3,285.

At Dunnville, the expenditure for the past year amounts to £817 16s. 5d.; this includes the cost of a new waste-weir, of 150 feet in length, built substantially, and capable of discharging a much greater quantity of water than any of the others. A flume for regulating the head of water has also been framed, and partly finished; and 186 cords of stone delivered for repairing the dam and waste-weir. Thus, of the sum of £9,114 13s. 4d. expended in repairs during the past year, £6,291 3s. 8d. has been applied to the repair and construction of works that may be considered as permanent, and not likely to require any further outlay for some years.

The expense of keeping the locks generally in repair, has been less than in former years, though inevitably, very considerable. Thirty-three new gates have been hung during the past season, and seventeen more built, and on hand for future use; these will replace nearly all those which are likely to fail, and lessen this item of expense for some years to come.

The towing-path on such parts of the Canal as are not to be abandoned, has been put in good order, and 5,000 feet of square timber used in facing it, where most exposed to the action of the water; at present, I see nothing to prevent the Canal opening next spring, as early as vessels can come to it. The only repair required, of any magnitude, is at lock No. 17, the lower end of which must be re-built; this we are now doing and will finish in March. Some of the other locks may require more trifling repairs, and will be attended to in good season.

I think it proper to inform the Board, that I have been repeatedly asked by persons living on the Grand River, when the lock at Dunnville will be commenced and finished; it is certainly of great importance to them, and I assure them it will be the first work undertaken when the funds are obtained.

It is unnecessary, I am aware, to remind the Board of the importance of replacing the fast-failing wooden locks with substantial stone ones, as contemplated by the Legislature; but witnessing, as I constantly do, the absolute waste of money in re-building parts of locks with the same perishable material, I feel it my duty to take every opportunity of expressing the hope, that you will impress on the Executive and Legislature, the urgent necessity of obtaining money to commence the new work, with the least possible delay.

The Secretary's statement, which accompany the accounts, will shew minutely what has been the business of the past season. I will therefore merely mention, that 686 vessels have passed through the Canal, (27 more than last year,) besides 89 others of a large class, which took in cargoes of timber and stones at Port Dalhousie, for the lower ports; that some of the American vessels have made no less than nine trips from Oswego to Cleveland, and back, which is more than was ever done during any former season; and that a British vessel, with a detachment of troops on board, made the passage from Amherstburgh to Toronto in three days and a half. These facts, and the repeated assurances that I have had from my correspondents in Cleveland and Oswego, of their perfect satisfaction with the state of repair in which the Canal has been kept, are the best proofs I can offer that nothing has been omitted on my part, or those acting under me, which could tend to promote the prosperity of this great public work, since it was committed to my charge.

Yours, &c.

REPORT OF THE COMMISSIONERS
FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF THE NAVIGATION OF THE RIVER TRENT.

---

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, Major General Commanding the Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

THE Commissioners for the improvement of the Navigation of the River Trent, in the Newcastle District—

RESPECTFULLY REPORT :

That your Commissioners are much gratified to state to your Excellency, that since their first report the Contractors for the sections of the works under their superintendence have proceeded with much vigor, and advanced towards the completion of their undertaking in a very creditable manner, notwithstanding many difficulties they have had to contend with.

The most important of these difficulties and the most injurious to the Contractors, as well as perplexing to the Commissioners, is the great delay and uncertainty in obtaining the necessary funds for the purposes of the works.

The Legislature authorised a sum of £77,000 to be raised by debentures for this improvement, and the Commercial Bank took £28,000 of such debentures, and paid for the same; but your Commissioners regret to find that part of this money has been appropriated to other objects. In consequence your Commissioners have found very great difficulty in obtaining money to meet their engagements with the Contractors, and lately they have been unable to pay for work that has been performed, and from the number of men employed, serious loss and inconvenience have occurred to the Contractors, who will doubtless expect to be indemnified by the Province for the same at some future period.

Your Commissioners contracted upwards of a year ago for work to be done to the extent of £20,000, having understood that the sum of £28,000 had been obtained by the sale of debentures, and your Commissioners represented what they had done last year to your Excellency's predecessor, Sir Francis Bond Head, who communicated the same to the House of Assembly.

The work at Chisholm's rapids has arrived at a very advanced state; but this work, as well as that at Meyers' Island, must shortly stop, if further funds are not immediately furnished to enable the Contractors to pay their labourers.

Your Commissioners have scarcely received one-third of the £28,000 on account of this work, and trust that they may, at all events, be supplied with means to fulfil the contracts they have entered into on behalf of the public.

It is a matter of regret, that the whole of the sections from the mouth of the Trent to Percy Landing, could not be contracted for at once, as the works could then unquestionably have been performed on more advantageous terms.

Your Commissioners also regret, that from the disturbed state of the country, a less quantity of timber has gone down the River Trent than usual, on which tolls are authorised to be collected, under the Act under which your Commissioners are appointed.

The tolls collected this year, exclusive of the expenses of collection, amount to £130 17s. 10½d.; and when it is considered that the works at present afford no additional facility of transport, and so much uncertainty exists as to their speedy completion, the Commissioners deem it inexpedient to encrease the tolls which otherwise might be done.

Your Commissioners respectfully suggest that the subject of the improvement of the navigation of the River Trent, be submitted to the early consideration of the Legislature at its next Session.

All which is respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF THE COMMISSIONERS FOR THE
IMPROVEMENT OF THE NAVIGATION
OF THE
INLAND WATERS OF THE DISTRICT OF NEWCASTLE.

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major General commanding the Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

The Commissioners for the improvement of the navigation of the inland waters of the District of Newcastle;—respectfully Report.

That since last year the works under their superintendence have advanced so far towards completion, as to afford satisfactory proof that they will be of great benefit to the surrounding country.

The work has been performed on the different sections in such a substantial manner, as the Commissioners trust will ensure its permanency.

The lock and canal at Bobcaygean, affording a communication for boats between Sturgeon and Pigeon Lakes, are completed, and the Commissioners anticipate the collection of some tolls there next autumn, which in succeeding years, must increase very considerably. At this place, very great additional expense has been occasioned by the necessity which seems to exist, of having a much greater proportion of the Canal lined with plank than was at first deemed absolutely requisite.

Your Commissioners however, on all occasions, have deemed it advisable to have the work done in such a way as to ensure its permanency.

Your Commissioners are aware that, in framing the Act by which £16,000 was granted, for the improvement of the navigation of the inland waters of the District of Newcastle, several inaccuracies and omissions occurred, by which a sufficient sum has not been placed at the disposal of your Commissioners, to carry into effect the objects of that Act.

Your Commissioners find that the estimate of the Engineer has been misunderstood or disregarded, because, from his report prior to the passing of the Act, a larger sum was stated to be requisite to complete the works than has been granted.

Your Commissioners now learn that a further grant of £2,394 17s. 10d. will be necessary to ensure the completion of the works, as will appear by the accompanying report of the Engineer, which your Commissioners trust the Legislature will not fail to provide. Your Commissioners have laboured under much difficulty in the discharge of their duty, in consequence of the delay and uncertainty which have frequently attended their application for money to meet their engagements with the Contractors. Your Commissioners trust this will be remedied in future, as only about one-third of the sum granted remains to be paid.

Your Commissioners regret that one of the Contractors, William Hartwell, has failed in his contract for the completion of the work at Whitla's rapids, although Your Commissioners are inclined to think it will still be completed without any ultimate loss, if means can be procured to get it finished by some other person. The Contractors certainly had very great obstacles to contend with in this work, in not having found a quarry of fit stone until he had made many fruitless attempts, and incurred a very great expense for the purpose. The work at Scugog River is going on well; but Mr. Purdy, who owns the mill there, has exhibited no inclination to come to a speedy settlement of any supposed recompense he may claim for the removal of his mill, and legal measures may be necessary to be resorted to for effecting it.

Your Commissioners are very sanguine in the belief that, after the completion of all the sections of the work provided for by the said Act, it will be found that the same has been done within the sum originally estimated by the Engineer.

All which is respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF THE DIRECTORS

OF THE

COMPANY'S OFFICE,
SENECA, 19th January, 1839.

The Directors when making their last report in February 1835, confidently expected, that long before the present period, they would have been enabled to report the successful completion of the important works under their management, and a permanent and uninterrupted navigation between lakes Erie and Ontario, and the village of Brantford, by way of the Welland Canal, by means of the contemplated lock at Dunnville, and the improvement of the Grand River. Although at that period no apparent obstacle presented itself, they regret to state that subsequent circumstances and difficulties beyond their control, prevented its accomplishment.

The Directors were much gratified to find that the Board of Directors of the Welland Canal Company, had in the fall of 1836, ordered the construction of a lock at Dunnville, with the view of opening a direct communication to lake Erie from that point, and which was commenced with a spirit that warranted a belief in its early and successful completion. The work however was suddenly discontinued in 1837, and has not up to the present moment been recommenced.

Although the navigation of the Grand River is greatly improved, and has been partially used, and tolls collected thereon for the last three seasons, it is not yet permanently completed throughout. An apron at dam No. 3; raising the embankment at the Indiana Cut from one to two feet; making a towing path from lock No. 5, upwards; removing some bars in the bed of the river, and other minor improvements, are still required to render the navigation from Cayuga to Peter Green's, perfect and permanently useful to the public.

The lateral cut from Peter Green's to Brantford, has not been commenced, and the Directors deem it imprudent to undertake that part of the work in the present state of the finances of the Company, nor would it be just to do so, until their creditors are paid, many of whom have suffered much from the unavoidable delay in paying the amounts due them.

In the Session of 1836 and 1837, the Legislature authorised a loan of £12,500 for the completion of this work, on the security of the six nation Indians and private individuals; those securities were duly entered into, and debentures were issued to the amount of £6,500 on the credit of the Province; nevertheless, all the effects to induce the Banks or any other monied institutions within the Province, to purchase those debentures have utterly failed, with the single exception of £500 taken by the Gore Bank, which enabled the Directors to liquidate a part of the most pressing debts.

On the opening of the navigation several of the dams and embankments had settled, and were in imminent danger of being swept away, and no available means at the disposal of the Company to secure them. The only alternative that presented itself to the Directors, under these pressing circumstances, was either to abandon the work or issue the Company's notes payable in one year after date with interest, with the hope and expectation that the Legislature would at the ensuing session adopt some more effectual means to make their debentures available. The latter was adopted, and about £1,250 of those notes have been paid out, and the work by that means is placed out of immediate danger.

The receipts and expenditures of the Company up to the present time are as follows:—

Current expenses, including Collectors and Lock Tenders,.....	2,430	0	0
Receipt of 50 per cent. on Stock called in,.....	£24,044	0	0
Do. for Village and Park Lots sold,.....	333	0	0
Do. for tolls collected,.....	835	0	0
Leaving a balance yet due from the Company, of.....	£ 5,718	0	0

There is due the Company,—

There will, however, be some reduction in this sum : for lands sold which are not occupied nor improved—for mill-rent remitted for certain reasons—and on stock, part of which will doubtless be forfeited to the Company ; besides, the balance which may be actually due after such reduction is made, cannot be made available for present purposes, owing chiefly to the embarrassed state of the country.

The Company will consequently have to provide means to pay the debts actually due, as above stated, amounting to..... £5,718 0 0

And the amount required to complete the navigation to Peter Green's, as per Engineer's estimate,..... 2,091 0 0

Making a total amount of ..... £7,809 0 0
to be immediately provided for by the Company.

From the above statement, it will be seen that the cost of the improvement of the navigation of the Grand River from Dunnville, up to within two miles of Brantford, a distance of 57 miles, will not, when fully completed, exceed £33,000—a sum comparatively trifling, when compared with the great advantages which will be derived by the public from its outlay.

The Directors are aware that the magnitude and importance of this work are not sufficiently understood and appreciated. There are already erected upon this navigation, three grist-mills, and one plaister-mill, with six run of stone in operation ; fourteen saw-mills, one of which has a gang of seventeen saws ; and other lesser machinery. On completion of the towing-path by the Welland Canal Company, from Dunnville to Cayuga, (which has been surveyed,) and that part above lock No. 5, a part of which is now under contract, a continued and uninterrupted navigation will be made from Port Dalhousie, on Lake Ontario, to Bunnel's landing, near Brantford road.

The Directors are unanimously of the opinion that the public interest would be best promoted by making this a provincial work, which would in connection with the Welland Canal reduce the costs of management, and as a necessary consequence the amount of tolls. The means required to effect this important object, so far as the Company is concerned, cannot be considered a matter of much moment or as presenting any serious obstacle in the way, when it is known that the number of shares held by private individuals is only 1815, on which the whole of the fifty per cent. called in amounts to no more than £5671 17s. 6d., of which sum a little less than £5000 has been paid in.

This latter sum of £5000 is the only amount requiring immediate liquidation, in case of a transfer of the works to the Welland Canal Company or the Government. The balance of the stock being owned exclusively by the Indian Department, for the Six Nations Indians, they would doubtless be willing to accept of legal interest on the amount paid in by them, or retain an interest in the work equivalent to the amount of their stock.

All which is respectfully submitted.

President, G. R. N. C.

REPORT OF THE COMMISSIONERS
OF THE
PROVINCIAL STEAM-DREDGE.

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, Knight Commander of the Royal Hanoverian Guelphic Order, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, Major General Commanding Her Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY :

In conformity with the provisions of an Act of the Parliament of this Province, 5th Wm. 4 : chap. 30, entitled "An Act granting to His Majesty a sum of money for the purchase of a Steam Dredging Machine," and of a subsequent Act, entitled "An Act to raise a sum of money for the purpose of completing a Steam Dredge for deepening the Harbors in this Province;"—the undersigned, as the only remaining Commissioner of the Steam Dredge, begs leave to present the following as his annual Report:—

The Machine with its scows were during the winter months, put in an efficient state of repair at Port Oakville, at which harbor she again commenced dredging on the first day of May, and finished in that harbor on the last day of that month;—she left there the same day for Port Dalhousie, and continued to dredge from the first day of June to the 31st of October,—when the Welland Canal Company, by a note from its Secretary marked A, informing the Commissioner that the Company did not wish a further use of the Machine at that time, it was then towed to the dry dock on the Welland Canal, and there underwent an examination and repairs, particularly the boat, and was afterwards laid up with the scows and machinery in a suitable place in the Canal for the winter.

A copy of a report of the services of the Machine, and the sum necessary to be charged for such, is hereunto appended marked B, with the reply of the Secretary of the Board of the Welland Canal Company, marked C, and a copy of the response of the Commissioner, marked D; from all which it will appear that the sum of £166 17s. 6d. to be paid to the Commissioner, is left, by agreement of the parties, to the decision of the House of Assembly.

The accounts of the receipts and expenditure are herewith transmitted.

The undersigned begs leave to report to your Excellency, that he is the only remaining Commissioner of the Steam Dredge; one, Dr. Charles Duncombe, being attainted of High Treason, and the other, Mr. Manual Overfield, being deceased.

All which is most respectfully submitted.

DAVID THORBURN,
Commissioner, P. S. D.

DAVID THORBURN, Esquire,
Queenston:

DEAR SIR,

I have this day written to Mr. Beaton, at Port Dalhousie, by order of the President of the Welland Canal Company, to inform the Master of the Steam-Dredge, that the work must stop for this season; and I beg you will take such steps as you may think necessary for putting the Dredge into winter quarters. I have desired the Master to arrange his accounts, so as to be able to come to a settlement for the year's work.

QUEENSTON, 23rd November, 1839.

SIR,

I herein enclose for the information of the President and Directors of the Company, a report and account of the services of the Provincial Steam-Dredge, in the harbour of Port Dalhousie, from 1st June to the 31st October last, both days inclusive. Will you please to lay the same before the Board, with a copy from the authenticated adopted report of the House of Assembly, on its Commissioners' duties, &c. &c. which you made therefrom;

And oblige,

Sir,

Your obedient Servant,

(Signed) DAVID THORBURN.

GEORGE PRESCOTT, Esquire,

Secretary, Welland Canal,

St. Catharines.

(Copy.)

To the President and Directors of the Welland Canal Company.

GENTLEMEN,

Your requisition on the Commissioners of the Provincial Steam-Dredge, for the services of the machine in the harbour at Port Dalhousie, having been complied with, the undersigned, Acting Commissioner, begs to submit for the information of the Board of Directors, the following report:—

On the first day of June last, the Dredge entered the harbour of Port Dalhousie, and immediately began to act, continuing operations to the 31st October, when ordered by your President to desist, a period of 153 days, less 22 Sundays, leaving 131 working days, and for repairs 38½ days, making 92½ days actually employed.

The Commissioners being authorised to charge a sum sufficiently to keep the machine and scows in good working condition, as will appear by the annexed adopted report of the House of Assembly, for the guidance and authority of the Commissioners;—by which it will appear that the Commissioners are authorised and required to assess a sum proportionate to keeping the machine in good working order, and in conformity with this rule and authority the acting Commissioner, after a careful examination of the accounts incident to keeping the dredge and boats in repair for the past season, at the harbor of Port Dalhousie, amounting to the sum of £144 15s. 9d., and the sum required to enable the Commissioners to put the machine in a proper state to renew operations by the ensuing spring, and to pay off a proportion of a debt due by the machine, they find that the sum of six pounds five shillings currency, per diem., for one hundred and thirty-one and a half days, be charged against the Welland Canal Company; an exhibit of the necessity of this charge is hereunto appended, which shews a balance of £74 0s. 11½d. unprovided for. The acting Commissioner deems the sum of £6 5s. currency, per day, of 131½ days, that the dredge has been at Port Dalhousie, a just and equitable sum to be charged, and payable by the Welland Canal Company, for the benefit derived by the Company from the operations of the machine.

When the extent of the piers are considered, and the nature of the materials they were composed of, that is to say, stone, timber and brush, for a length of nearly 2,000 feet, which piers, by the stormy weather during last winter, were demolished and thrown into the harbor, thereby precluding the free entrance of vessels to and from the Canal; such unusual obstacles as ridges of stone, timber and brush, in removal of which the dredge and machinery were greatly injured, besides the necessary loss of time in making repairs, and when it is considered that it could only work with one side independent of the suspension of all operations, when vessels required to pass to and from the lake,—the peculiar nature of the services will be better understood. From the above statement, the acting Commissioner is led to believe that the President and Directors will acquiesce in the views of the foregoing Report.

I have the honor to be,

Your obedient, and

Humble Servant,

(Signed.) DAVID THORBURN.

COPY OF REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE, on Report of Commissioners of Provincial Steam-Dredge, with the adoption of the House of said Report, 16th February, 1838.

“TO THE HONOURABLE THE COMMONS HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY:

“The Select Committee to which was referred the Message of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, transmitting the Report of the Commissioners for purchasing a Steam-Dredge, together with the accounts and documents accompanying the same, beg leave to report:

“That they have examined the said report, accounts and documents, and are satisfied that the Commissioners have done every thing in their power in the execution of the object of their Commission. The reason assigned for the non-delivery of the Dredge and Scows before the 20th of July, by the Contractors, are satisfactorily shewn by John Jackson, Esquire, Engineer of the Grand River Navigation Company, in his letter to David Thorburn, and Manuel Overfield, Esquires, two of the Commissioners, bearing date 25th August, 1837.

“The arrangement of the Acting Commissioner with the Building Contractors, and the Desjardins' Canal Company, at the time of the delivery of the Dredge and appurtenances, was, in the opinion of your Committee, in every respect, proper and judicious. The materials taken from the Contractors, Messrs. Lyon and Howard, and brought into account by the Commissioners, amount to £125—to be paid (without interest) when funds are produced by the operation of the Dredge; also the sum of £74 11s. 5½d. as per the accounts shewn to be owing, has been audited and arranged with care. It would appear, by a letter from the Secretary of the Desjardins' Canal Company, that that Company are not disposed to recognize the whole amount charged by the Acting Commissioner, in the account current against them; and if the amount which that Company acknowledge to owe is all that in justice they ought to pay, the difference, amounting to £14 15s. 7½d. added to the amount set forth in the said account, will make the sum of £214 6s. 1d. now owing on account of the Dredge.

“Your Committee forbear to remark further on this matter, having full confidence that the Acting Commissioner will, on his part, do what will be proper and just with the Desjardins' Canal Company, in settling the same—and not doubting that the Company will, on their part, do likewise.

“Your Committee find, in Mr. Hall's report to the Commissioners, dated 26th October, 1837, much valuable information relative to an efficient management of the Dredge; but would recommend, that the Commissioners should not exact so large a sum per day as is estimated by Mr. Hall—conceiving that a sum adequate to keep the machine and its scows in proper working order, and to pay the necessary incidental expenses accruing from time to time in superintending and directing its operations, ought to be considered sufficient: as the benefit to be derived from the opening of the creeks, harbours and canals, by dredging, is manifestly more a general than a local advantage. With this view, they cannot recommend that the project of a sinking fund, for the renewal of the Dredge in ten years, should be acted upon; however, the discretion of the Commissioners must, in all cases be used, as no particular data can be laid down as a fixed rule by which to charge for the services of the machine—the work in some places being more severe for it than in others. There ought, however, always to be a sufficient fund at the command of the Commissioners, to meet unexpected breakages or necessary improvements, so that the machine may at all times be in good working order: as any interruption of its service would be attended with a heavy expense, by losing the labour of the men necessarily employed in conducting its operations.

“All which is respectfully submitted.

“E. W. THOMSON,

“CHAIRMAN.

DAVID THORBURN, Esquire,
Queenston :

SIR,

Your account for the service of the Steam-Dredge, at Port Dalhousie, was laid before the Board of Directors on the 21st; and I was desired to inform you, that they consider the sum of five pounds per day, for one hundred and thirty-one days, (which you originally mentioned as the sum you would charge,) to be amply sufficient for the work performed—and in case you do not agree to that proposition, that the matter should be left to the Legislature to settle.

An answer will oblige,
Your most obedient Servant,

GEORGE PRESCOTT,
Secretary, W. C. C.

D.

QUEENSTON, 1st January, 1839.

DEAR SIR,

I have your letter of the 22nd ultimo, which informs me of the decision of the Board of Directors, on the account I rendered against the Company, for the services of the Provincial Steam-Dredge, at Port Dalhousie; that the sum of five pounds per day, for one hundred and thirty-one days, the Board considers amply sufficient for the work performed, and cannot agree to the amount—"but that the matter should be left to the Legislature to settle."

I have no alternative but to submit to have the difference between us left to be decided by the Legislature; my report, accompanying the account, contains the reasons, and shews the necessity for my making the charge I have done. I do not admit of having given any assurance that I would not charge over five pounds per day; in some works, such a sum would doubtless be ample—the charge must obviously depend upon the result of the wear and tear incident to the performance of the job. However, the difference can be settled by the Legislature, and to this arbitrament I am content; in the mean time, will you inform me if you are prepared to pay the sum admitted—or when you will, or can do so, as the money is wanted to pay off debts that will not admit of a delay: you will oblige me by informing me of this, so that I may know how to regulate the promises of payment to parties concerned.

I am,

Dear Sir,

Your obedient Servant,

DEAR SIR,

Yours of 2nd instant, was duly received, but delayed in replying to, from the want of a meeting of the Board of Directors; I am desired by the President to say, that the amount of your claim against the Company, with interest, will be remitted you from funds to be collected latter end of next month, or early in March, by the Company's Law Agent. The amount of tolls, &c. collected by me, for last season, I found it necessary, with the advice of the Directors, to lay out in making such improvements in the Canal navigation as was absolutely wanted.

REPORT AND ESTIMATE, OF ENGINEER ON THE SURVEY OF PORT DALHOUSIE.

HEAD QUARTERS,
MONTREAL, 21st January, 1839.

SIR,

I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, the accompanying copy of a communication from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, requesting the General Commanding-in-Chief, in compliance with a joint Address of the Legislative Council, and House of Assembly of Upper Canada, to issue the necessary instructions, that a duly qualified Officer may be ordered to make a survey of the Harbour at Port Dalhousie, on Lake Ontario—and an estimate of the expense of improving that Harbour, so as to render it safe and commodious for steam-boats and vessels of war; and I am directed to acquaint you, that His Excellency the Commander of the Forces having selected Captain McKenzie, of the Royal Engineers, for this service, that Officer has, with considerable labour and assiduity, completed the accompanying survey and estimate, which I am commanded to forward to you, for the purpose of being submitted to the Legislature of Upper Canada.

With reference to the annexed extract of a letter from Captain McKenzie, requesting that the sum of £57 5s. 5d. Sterling, (item 4, of the estimate,) may be paid to the Ordnance Store-keeper, at Kingston, to defray the expense of the survey, I am desired to state, that as this service has been performed in compliance with the wishes of the Legislature, the Commander of the Forces does not doubt, that Your Excellency will feel authorised to advance the above sum from the Provincial funds.

I have the honour, &c.

(Signed) WILLIAM ROWAN,
M. S.

P. S.—A copy of Captain McKenzie's letter, of the 12th December, is enclosed for Your Excellency's perusal.

His Excellency Major General

SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H.

MY LORD,

The Legislative Council, and House of Assembly of Upper Canada, having concurred in a joint Address to the Throne, praying that the Commander in Chief of Her Majesty's Forces in Canada, may be instructed to despatch a duly qualified Officer to make a survey of the Harbour at Port Dalhousie, on Lake Ontario, and an estimate of the expense of improving that Harbour, so as to make it safe and commodious for steam-boats and vessels of war; I have to request, that Your Lordship will issue the necessary instructions to Lieutenant General Sir J. Colborne, for complying with the wishes of the Legislature of Upper Canada.

I have, &c.

*Extract of a letter from Captain McKenzie, Royal Engineers, to Colonel Rowan, C.B.
Military Secretary, dated Fort George, 1st January, 1839.*

"I will thank you to obtain authority of His Excellency, for the sum of £57 5s. 5d. Sterling, (item 4, of the estimate,) being paid to the Ordnance Store-keeper, at Kingston, or his Deputy at this Post, being to defray the expense of the survey."

ROYAL ENGINEER OFFICE,
FORT GEORGE, U. C. 12th December, 1838.

SIR,

In obedience to the instructions of His Excellency Sir John Colborne, the Commander of the Forces, communicated in September last, I do myself the honour to transmit herewith an estimate for constructing, at Port Dalhousie, on Lake Ontario, a safe and commodious harbour for steam-vessels and ships of war, amounting to the sum of £58,599 17s. 3½d. Sterling.

After a lapse of seven or eight years, an additional outlay would be required to render this work durable and creditable of (possibly) £27,253 18s. 7¾d. Sterling.

In laying this estimate before His Excellency, I beg you will have the goodness to explain, that the urgency of the special service in the Western District, has prevented my submitting duly the estimate for this service; fully aware of the great responsibility, and deeply impressed with a grateful feeling for the high honour conferred in being called upon on this occasion. I have been anxious to bestow every care to acquit myself to the satisfaction of the Commander of the Forces.

The amount of this estimate will, possibly, appear higher than expected; I have gone into every detail on each step on the spot, and made myself acquainted with all the particulars of each item of labour and material: and although under the eye of a responsible executive office, very considerable savings might be realized, still, taking into consideration the many contingencies, and accidents liable to hydraulic operations, the amounts are such as I would feel myself justified to execute upon—and in my report is stated the several items whereby a due conversion of materials savings are to be made for guidance of the executive.

In conclusion, as regards this estimate, I will only add, that frequently called to direct and execute other services, from the inexperience of the engineer's establishment, and on many occasions called to distant parts of the country, the orders of His Excellency on this service have not been executed with that promptitude, that on first being charged with them, I had fully resolved to manifest.

A complete survey of the harbour has been made, and of the country to a distance judged expedient; on this is laid down the soundings as taken by myself. In this operation, as well as the land survey, I have availed myself of the co-operation of a respectable Deputy Surveyor, recommended from Toronto, to enable me, by delegating to him certain details, to carry on at the same time the duties of my own department. The survey is packed in a tin case for transmission to you, but I beg to consult on the safest mode of forwarding it to Montreal, lest it should, as has been much the case, go astray or be long detained.

Awaiting your orders on this point, whether a careful person should be sent to take charge of the survey,

I have, &c.

(Signed) C. McKENZIE,
CAPTAIN,
Royal Engineers.

Colonel ROWAN,

Military Secretary,

ROYAL ENGINEER OFFICE,
FORT GEORGE, 1st December, 1838.

ESTIMATE, for constructing at Port Dalhousie, on Lake Ontario, in Upper Canada, a safe and commodious Harbour, for Her Majesty's Steam-vessels and Ships of War, pursuant to a communication from the Secretary of War, conveyed through Lord Hill to His Excellency Sir John Colborne, Bart. K.C.B. Commander of the Forces in the Canadas, and His Excellency's authority to Captain McKenzie, Royal Engineers, dated Kingston, 29th August, 1838, to survey the Harbour, and frame an estimate of the expense.—Amounting to £58,599 17s. 3½d. Sterling.

REPORT.

Item 1.—Dredging to form the Harbour.

The price of 1s. per cubic yard for Dredging is here inserted—after having maturely weighed and considered the various means that have been adopted for this item in the formation of the present Welland Canal.

The material to be got up is, we are informed by the persons on the spot who performed the work, of a three-fold description, viz.—1st, and the most formidable, a stiff old deposit of blue clay, resembling in appearance a smooth level stratum of rock, and of an indurated texture. Piles have been driven 3 feet through this substance—the hammer of the machine weighing 1,300 lbs.; it is worked by 1 horse and 3 men, and belongs to the Welland Canal Company, who have entered into a contract with a person, who engages to furnish and drive the piles 3 feet into this stratum, for 2½ dollars, or 12s. 6d. each.

A bar crossing the harbour in a line from Reid's Point, on the west side, to a similar projecting point on the east, and at about a like distance from the mouth of the Creek, is much spoken of, and said to be composed of the stiff clay in question; being desirous to judge myself of the existence of this bar, as well as to ascertain the actual state of the bottom of the Lake, I had a probe made of round iron, with a wooden handle, which was let down at every sounding. In this manner, in conjunction with the soundings, my field-book showed the probings: from which a result was obtained, differing widely from the "on dits" of the place. In almost every instance, the iron probe went down from 12 to 15 feet deep, through the mud or gravel, as the case might be—and in many instances so deep, as to require the greatest efforts of a very powerful man, who was employed, to draw it out. So far as the proposed outer harbour is concerned, I look upon the bar to be a bug-bear; possibly one foot may have to be dredged towards the outer passage, in some few parts of this stiff clay—and towards the shore, on approaching to the entrance to the inner harbour, after removing the mud and gravel superincumbent, there may be here also a portion of the stiff clay to be removed, although my poles went deep into the mud here. To remove this stiff clay there are two modes: that used in forming the present entrance to the Canal was by means of an instrument called a Bull-plough, worked by two capstans and horses—one at each end of a large scow; the two dredges are much in the shape of a common plough, working at angles, very slightly inclined to the horizon, or nearly parallel with a trough behind, to collect the ploughings of the instruments, which, when filled, is brought up through a well in the scow. The first cost of this apparatus complete, with capstans, windlass, cables and scow complete, is £125; it is worked with two horses, 5s.; 1 driver, 5s.; and 5 men, 25s.—or at a rate per diem of 35s.: excavating from 20 to 25 cubic yards per diem—being at a cost of 1s. 7½d. per yard. A dredge is at present employed clearing the channel of a delta of sand, but not of sufficient power to dredge the stiff clay in question: it is between 15 and 22 horse power.

The hire of this dredge, including master, engineer and fire-man, is per diem . . .	£ 5	0	0
When in full operation, will require 13 men, of whom 5 at 5s. . . . .	£1	5	0
	13 at 4s. 4½d.	2	16 10½
		4	1 10½
In full operation, she will consume 4 cords of wood per day: pine is the best, and may cost 10s. . . . .		2	0 0
Daily expense . . . . .	£11	1	10½

She has dredged 240 yards per day, so that each yard cost 11d.; but  $\frac{1}{3}$  may be deducted for stoppage, to repair machinery, casualties of the weather, &c. in which case the quantity excavated would be only 160 yards, at 1s. 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. per yard.

A machine of greater power, say 10 horse more, would excavate, it is supposed, full  $\frac{1}{3}$  more, or 320 yards. Such a machine could be worked at the same expense—therefore the cost of each yard would be 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; making the same allowance for repair of machinery, and casual stoppages, each yard would cost 1s. 0 $\frac{1}{4}$ d. The machine being supposed to be new, it is thought  $\frac{1}{4}$  would be sufficient for stoppages—thus the cost per yard would be 11d.

The result.—an average by the present machine of 1s. 1 $\frac{3}{4}$ d. per yard.

By a new machine and of greater power, 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; looking forward, however, to the following probabilities:

- 1.—That but little of this stiff stratum will turn up in excavating for the harbour.
- 2.—That all the stone dredged will be available for loading the cribs of the piers.

3.—That the mud will be alike available, in forming the great embankment for the first lock, proposed to be constructed so much higher up than the present, by the Canal Company. I have been induced to estimate the cost of dredging throughout at an average of 1s. per yard. It is ascertained, on the undisputed authority of all the masters of schooners I have consulted, and (many of whom have frequented the Canal from its opening,) that for many years back no difference is visible on the bar, as to position or soundings. The banks of the lake are composed of a similar substance, and so hard as to splinter like rock, under the smart blow of a hammer.

Deducting the space occupied by the oak cribs, the quantity estimated will be required; and the price is that at which it can be delivered into the cribs coming from the quarries of the Canal Company, 2 miles above St. Catharines, on the banks, duty free.

Although I have taken this as data for framing my estimate, I do not recommend that description of stone for this service. I see it has been used this year in reforming the pier at Port Dalhousie, which was carried away last year; but as it is a flat slaty stone, (lamellar prature,) not packing well, I would infinitely prefer bolders, could they be found in sufficient quantity, and the system I would propose would be this: to range the stones in long piles—the largest at one end, gradually diminishing, till at the other end the smaller stones are found; so that in loading the cribs, the boats shall bring the large stones first, and the smaller following, to roll into the spaces left between: leaving thus no openings at the top which may be almost gravel, which it might be well to render with a good thick coat of Concrete, of which the elements are to be found in this country, viz. good lime-stone is abundant in the country—the shores of the Lake furnish good ballast in abundance. At Lockport, in the United States, a water-lime is manufactured and sold: delivered, including Custom-house duty, at 15s. Currency, per barrel, of 300 to 350 lbs. I am informed, this lime possesses considerable hydraulic properties; I have moreover reason to believe, that in this neighbourhood cement stone may be found. I have had no leisure to explore the vicinity as yet, but the mud of the Lake at Port Dalhousie, resembles so much that of the Medway and the Thames, in Great Britain, and like the clay in the bed of those Rivers, is also impregnated with lime; passing, as do the waters of this creek, over a lime-stone District in the interior, I have little doubt but cement could be manufactured here, as by Colonel Pasley, on the Medway, and by Messrs. Francis & White, of Nine-Elms, Vauxhall, at their new establishment, near Gravesend, from Dorking lime and River mud, kiln dried and ground, and mixed in a Pugg-mill with the Dorking or Halling lime, in certain proportions. Could the presence of oxide of iron be detected in the clay at Port Dalhousie, I have little doubt but the manufacture of artificial cement could be successfully effected here, as in England—where it undersells the Harwich cement by a great deal. In the few cases of building on the Welland Canal, I have seen the want of hydraulic lime has been a great source of failure; the waste water weir lately constructed near St. Catharines, promises in like manner not to be durable, from not having used water-cement in its construction. The surface of the new pier might thus, instead of a covering of 3 inch plank, be finished as a walk of Concrete, and I think it would stand the climate and the washing of the Lake sufficiently.

OAK CRIBS.—The price estimated for hewed timber is taken from the books of the Welland Canal Company, as paid this year for renewing their eastern pier, carried away the preceding winter; it was not charged toll for coming down the Canal—and for 9d. per foot cube, pine and oak hewed timber was supplied, averaging from 14" × 12" to 18" × 14"—the smaller sizes for ties, the larger for face timbers. This price includes all materials and labour of rafting, framing into cribs, and laying down in their places on the pier, ready to receive the stone, including tree-nails—but spikes and iron tree-nails were charged extra: 1s. will cover all expenses. The mode I would suggest would be to enter into a contract with the lumberers upon the Grand River, for the supply at Port Dalhousie, (duty free,) of the hewed timbers.

At Caledonia, on that River, 28 miles above Dunnville, I am informed, of a Government reserve, well stocked with good timber. A contract for felling, hewing and delivery, on the banks of the River, should be made with competent parties, and a second for rafting it to Port Dalhousie, where the framing would be performed.

In the section submitted, 4 feet 6 inches is allowed above the water line, to allow for taking in fuel and stores, &c. as well as for the rise and fall of the Lake, whose level varies from 3 to 4 feet.

According to the report of Mr. Barrett, of Lockport, who was sent by the Government of the United States for the purpose last autumn, the water on the lower mitre sill of the lock at Port Dalhousie, was 12 feet in 1827, as measured by him—(he was Engineer to the Welland Canal.) In August, 1838, it was 15 feet 9 inches; on the 3rd of October, I found it to be 14 feet 8 inches. The Canal Company, in renewing their eastern pier this summer, have raised it 5 feet above the water line.

Item 4,

Provides for the wages of a Surveyor, and his attendants; the prices are sanctioned in the Surveyor General's Department of the Province. Their employment on this occasion was resorted to, on account of the urgent special services ordered to be done by the Engineer Department. The soundings of the harbour, and probings, required strong hands—and several duplicate plans were necessarily made by the Surveyor, in addition to the survey transmitted herewith, which it became necessary to take anew, owing to the inaccuracy of those taken heretofore, and a desire that this should be final.

Addenda to Page 10, of Estimate,

Provides for saturating, by submersion in Ryan's Patent Liquid, the timbers of the piers where exposed to alternations of air and water; the Board of Ordnance have so far approved of this late discovery, as to have entered into contracts with the Patentee, for a supply of the article, at the principal Engineer Yards in England: at Woolwich, a tank has been constructed in the Engineer Yard, and regularly supplied by the Patentee, in which all the timber of the Department, used for outside work, is submersed. The only objection to the employment of this acid is its property of promoting, as it does, the corrosive decay of nails and iron. As oak tree-nails are chiefly used in the work estimated for Port Dalhousie, this objection will not operate; and I now recommend that the timbers from the tier below the surface of the water upwards, be submitted to the process of Ryan's Patent. And this being the great outlet from the Grand River, a more eligible place for an ante dry-rot tank cannot well offer than Port Dalhousie, where the rafts are launched into Lake Ontario; but if the process of Ryan's Patent should add five years to the durability of the work, it will be a point gained of more value—and afford moreover a very interesting experiment, on a large scale, of a discovery that has occupied much the attention of Parliament of late years. The most favourable experiments have been made, and its utility admitted by the first scientific men of the day; possibly a tank of larger dimensions will be required at Port Dalhousie, to expedite a work promising the most beneficial results to the Province. The very great patronage of the Welland Canal by the United States, speaks much in favour of the live, in a commercial light; and the comfortable shelter afforded to crafts by the present wretched pier, in a gale, I have witnessed sufficiently to give fair promise from a proper harbour being constructed, with sufficient space between the piers for ships entering with much way and a side wind, the want of which in the present pier is an universal cause of complaint by the masters of crafts—all of whom speak favourably of the harbour generally; I have spoken to many who have frequented it since the first opening the Canal.

This estimate may be under the mark, as it provides only for saturating the side pieces, or great outside frame of the piers: the cost of the whole process at the Company's tanks is, in England, 20s. per load of 50 cubic feet; but as  $1\frac{1}{2}$  lbs. is requisite of the corrosive sublimate at 4s. per lb. (to 15 gallons of water) for a load—and the Company is willing to grant licenses to the Government to any extent in England, at the rate of 5s. per cubic foot, measured in the clear of the tank, I will adopt this mode of estimating the cost, and make no doubt the Company will extend to an eligible opening in this country the full benefit of their patent, on the most favourable terms.

In eight or nine years the decay of the timbers exposed to the alternate vicissitudes of water and air, may be looked for; good seasoned oak might last longer, but many side pieces will perish in this time. The Welland Canal affords a good case in point, faced with oak as are the locks. This Canal has been seven years in operation—and although in some instances decay between water and air is visible, the lock-gates at Port Dalhousie exhibit many sound pieces of the original timbers. In submitting the piers constructed as proposed of oak cribs, I have been influenced by the following considerations:

1st—The practice of the country affords every facility, as regards workmen and materials, for a pier of this description; in fact, no stone pier (so far as I can learn) has yet been built, with the exception of that at Buffalo, so much vaunted, but unjustly—and it may be well to give a slight description of this national work:

The pier at Buffalo was first constructed with cribs by Mr. Adam Smith, an inhabitant of the place, according to the only practice of the country; exposed, however, as it is to gales from the south-west, or from Long Point, driving waves against it with an impetus scarcely to be imagined by those who have not witnessed it, the inefficiency of such a pier was soon felt: all manner of expedients were resorted to—ranges of piles, inside and outside, were driven; they only acted as a lever, with the ice, to breach the pier. The bottom here was sand, which was dredged out before building: and shifting deltas, constantly forming, required to be as often removed—it was at length resolved to astonish the New World with a stone pier, and Mr. Adam Smith was charged with this public undertaking. I visited the work in September last, and the following seems to be the section:

There is a circular horizontal platform at the outer extremity, on which stands an octagonal light-house, of wrought stone, 100 feet high; perceiving a list on this building, I was led to a closer examination, and discovered that already settlements have taken place, and with such violence, that the sill at the entrance is transversely cracked—and almost every angle of the octagon shews cracks in the masonry, evidently from settlements in the foundations. My first care was to discover, if possible, the cause of this: and on examination of the extreme outer end, led to a supposition, which I afterwards ascertained to be the case, that the stone pier had been erected upon the remains of the old crib pier, which, having been enlarged at different periods, different settlements ensued; that a considerable widening had been necessary at the outer end, to afford space for erecting the stone light-house, which we are now told at Buffalo, is to bid eternal defiance to the elements!

The section the pier has now attained was, by Mr. Adam Smith, deemed proof against the violence of the elements: but, like the light-house, has proved fallacious—for a considerable portion of the sea-pavement, through to the parapet, had been violently carried away transversely the last spring, and it was undergoing a repair whilst I was there. The same storm breaking over the high parapet also, with such violence as to have ejected many of the large lime-stone flags of the pier-walk, by which I was enabled to make a further discovery, that the whole masonry and flagging had been built by handy-men, and no journeyman's work is visible on the pier. The whole masonry is built with lime-stone, (of which very extensive quarries have been opened in the vicinity, with promise of an abundant supply of very fine stone, to answer all the purposes of building and burning,) from the State's quarry, at Black Rock; but the edges of the flags not being wrought, the openings admit the water, as a powerful lever, to dislodge them.

Another expedient has now been resorted to at Buffalo, and is in progress, viz. the construction of a sea wall, extending along the shore a great length to windward. It is well to see the effects of the elements on this pier, although they are not apprehended at Port Dalhousie, to the extent, by a great deal: indeed the oldest residents and mechanics acquainted with the inroads of the lake at this Port, pronounce a pier of 20 feet wide, with a sea pavement of one and a half base, would be quite sufficient to resist the violence of the storms.

As a national undertaking, a stone pier, regularly built by the diving bell, would be more consonant with European practice. The paucity of mechanics, the quarries yet unopened, beyond surface rubble stone, (whereas for sea pavement stones of great size are essential,) the great expense of conveyance,—all conduce to give a preference to the plan here proposed, in the infantine state of this section of the peninsula; the expense will be more within the means of the Province, and will at once afford full benefit of the harbour to the shipping of the lake, until after a lapse of time the resources of the country shall be more fully developed. The quarries on the mountain opened to afford proper materials, which by the re-construction of the Canal, will also be more readily transported, and an increased population will have produced contractors and workmen in proportion. One journeyman to five handy-men will suffice to construct the pier proposed, and the framing would progress in the winter, whereas artisans of the first class would be required to build a stone pier, and at very high wages, as the mason cannot work for five months during the winter, and his wages during the other seven, are proportionably high. The decayed face timber might then be replaced with wrought stone, laid in cement upward from the water line, and the sea pavement being finished with a low parapet, as shewn in this sketch, the settlements ere this having taken place as far as to be apprehended; there is a hard bottom of stiff clay under the superincumbent gravel and mud. The cost of this reform and repair is here estimated, exhibiting thus the final expense of the whole work proposed. It is deemed probable that by a due regard to the appropriation of the debtais from dredging, some saving may arise; but on the other hand, the estimate of 1s. low—1s. 3d. is more likely to be the cost of dredging mud and gravel, and 2s. 6d. that of stiff clay, per yard.

A due regard by the Executive to the tenders for lumber, and a good system in maintaining a salutary check on the Contractors, as regards materials, and workmen also, will go far to keep under the estimate; but in water works, where the contingencies of damage by gales; delays from causes beyond controul; the uncertainty of the upshot of the nature of the substratum—all tend to induce the Engineer to look forward to economise in progress of the execution, rather than under estimate.

An estimate framed under such circumstances—secing also in this young country, the fluctuating price of every article in the market—must ever be submitted with much diffidence, even after every inquiry has been made.

It might be well here to record a few of the current prices not quoted.

SECOND REPORT OF COMMISSIONERS

YONGE-STREET MACADAMIZED ROAD,

FOR THE YEAR 1838.

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H. Lieutenant Governor of Upper Canada, Major General Commanding, &c. &c. &c.

The Trustees appointed for the improvement of Yonge-street, under the Act of 7th Wm. IV. respectfully report to your Excellency, for the consideration of the Legislature, as by law required :

That when they made their last report, the sum of two thousand nine hundred and eighty pounds, eight shillings and eight pence, remained at their credit in the Bank of Upper Canada, on the 1st January, 1838, as will appear by their balance sheet—since which, they have received from the Receiver General, three thousand three hundred and thirty-three pounds, six shillings and eight pence. They applied to the Executive for further aid, but in consequence of the Government having thought it expedient for the public interest to suspend the issue of Debentures, they found themselves, as the summer advanced, without the necessary funds to prosecute the work, and with a large number of labourers, (many of whom had been discharged from the Provincial Corps,) whom they could not well discharge; add to which, much of the road was in a half finished state, that could not be left, without much damage to the work, and impediment to the public. In this state of things, they had no other alternative than borrowing money upon their personal security; they therefore obtained in this way, from the Bank of Upper Canada, the sum of three thousand nine hundred and fifty pounds, for which sum they have become personally liable, by notes of hand to that institution, and from which they now beg to be relieved, by a credit for that amount with the Receiver General. The receipts from tolls, amount to one thousand and thirty-five pounds, fourteen shillings and three pence; and from statute labour, one hundred and thirty-four pounds, twelve shillings and eight pence; and for balance due from the west road, fifty-one pounds.

The total of these various sums, amounting to £11,494 2s. 3d.—which, with a debt due to Mr. McArthur, for mason-work, of £245 16s. 9d., have been expended in the following manner:—£8,515 6s. in making and draining the road a quarter of a mile south of Sheppard's Tavern, to Thornhill, (with the exception of about three quarters of a mile, called Morgan's hill.) In this distance of road, four substantial stone bridges, and several culverts, have been built, and the south hill at Thornhill, and Morgan's hill, have been reduced—the former, so as to lay on the stone, and the latter requiring but little to be done previous to laying on the metal bed.

They have the satisfaction to report, that the road made by them the past season, is sixteen feet wide, well drained, and made in the most permanent manner, notwithstanding they had much difficulty to contend with in obtaining the material, much of it having been carted from three to four miles, from the back concession, with an untoward season, from the continued rains in the early part of it. This section of the road is more destitute of stone than any upon the whole line—so much so, that they almost despaired at one time of obtaining it. It was only by perseverance and great exertion in getting the material, (which they estimate must have cost ten dollars per toise,) that they have succeeded. They estimate that one thousand pounds more will complete the road to Thornhill, which will make the whole cost of four miles and a half of road, (through a country almost without material near the work,) £9,500, including bridges, and taking down two considerable hills. As stone is more abundant, and will consequently be obtained at a cheaper rate, as they advance to the north, they are of opinion that the road will not cost over two thousand pounds per mile, and some sections less; they therefore feel confident that the last grant will be sufficient to continue the road to its termination. They also feel confident that the tolls, without being oppressive upon the farmer, will be adequate to the payment of interest and repairs, and they hope will provide a sinking fund. But they would observe, that keeping the road in a good state, by a judicious expenditure in timely repairs, is most essential, as they consider that a permanent work like a stone road, will always be worth the money expended in its construction, and like other species of fixed property, will advance in value and increase in revenue with the prosperity and settlement of the country. It has none of those casualties which belong to many in this Province. In an agricultural country, a well made road can scarcely fail, as its income must be devolved with the resources of the country that surrounds it.

The statute labour on a well settled line of road, is considerable, and being gradually on the increase, may ultimately prove sufficient for the repairs.

It will be seen by our balance sheet, that our income derived from this source, is £134 12s. 8d. whilst our expenditure is £199 2s. 11d. Some more summary way than the present law affords, of collecting the statute labour, is necessary to enable the Trustees to avail themselves fully of this branch of income.

From the very imperfect way in which the bridge at the blue hill was originally constructed, the Trustees regret to say that the arch fell in last spring, together with the abutments, and that in re-building them, they were obliged to incur an expense of £623 1s. 3d. and a further expenditure of £172 2s. 2d. to secure the foundation of the bridge at Mr. Hogg's, the mill-dam having given way in a great freshet, and lowered the water below the level at which it was when the bridge was built. The sum of £34 4s. 6d. has been expended in fencing.

We beg leave to call the attention of Government to the debased state of the Copper Currency, by which we have this year sustained a loss of £21 10s. as will appear by the balance sheet.

The sum of £243 5s. 3d. has been expended in repairing the road south of the first toll-gate, within the liberties of the City, the Corporation having refused, after repeated applications, to make good the road; and the interest of the public, and the state of the road from the neglect of the City Corporation, rendering such expenditure indispensable.

The Trustees desire some relief on this matter, and that the City may be compelled to do what is just and right.

The sum of £1,660 12s. 10d. has been expended in the payment of interest, whilst the receipts for tolls are one thousand and thirty-five pounds, fourteen shillings and three-pence; and the sum of six hundred pounds is due to the Trustees for toll-gate at the entrance of the City, which was let up to 1st May, to John Marsh—which sum is secured by the bond of Jacob Snider, against whom they instituted a suit to recover the same.

The whole amount of money obtained for this road, and for which it is liable for interest to the Government and Bank of Upper Canada, is about £36,770—the interest of which, at six per cent, is about £2,200. The tolls at the present rate of four-pence at each gate, may be estimated at—

Second Gate .....	450	0	0

By raising the tolls to six-pence at each gate, or fifty per cent upon the present rates, which the Trustees consider will eventually be necessary, and which they think would be moderate for the advantages the public derive from this work, an income of £2,550 would be produced; and the Trustees are of opinion, that it will go on to increase. With such prospects before them, they trust that they will experience every facility in obtaining the necessary funds to carry on the work; the uncertainty of obtaining which, has prevented their entering into favourable contracts for materials, and of availing themselves of the winter roads. When it is considered that the road under their charge is composed of granite boulders, collected from the surface of the earth, and these brought a considerable distance from the back concessions, the loss of the sleighing season is attended with much inconvenience and delay, besides adding to the cost of the material, as few farmers can be induced in the summer season to turn their attention to the procuring it. The Trustees estimate that a saving of between two and three hundred pounds per mile might be effected, could they at all times be sure of money for the purchase of stone.

All which is most respectfully submitted.

CHAIRMAN.

YONGE-STREET, 1st January, 1839.

REPORT OF TRUSTEES,
OF THE
WEST TORONTO MACADAMIZED ROAD.
FOR THE YEAR 1838.

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

THE Trustees appointed by an Act of the Provincial Parliament, to Macadamize, and otherwise improve the Dundas Road, from the City of Toronto to the western limit of the Home District, beg leave to report:

That having obtained a further sum of money, a portion of that granted by Parliament, they last summer commenced their improvements upon that road, by Macadamizing that part of it lying between the Mimico and Etobicoke Creeks, in the Township of Etobicoke: a piece of road heretofore the most impassable in bad weather upon the whole route, and which they have succeeded in completing this season, though not without having been compelled to effect a loan of £1,500, upon their own individual responsibility, to enable them to do so. The Trustees however would, at the same time, impress upon Your Excellency their earnest desire, that Your Excellency would be pleased to take into your earliest consideration such steps as would tend to relieve them from this personal responsibility imposed upon themselves, through a sincere desire to complete a work which they were aware would be of such infinite benefit to the western part of the District generally.

This, with a few other improvements made in the Township of Toronto, in turnpiking and graveling the old road, and making a good substantial foundation for a stone road hereafter, now affords an excellent route, fit for any description of travelling, for the distance of about sixteen miles west from the City.

They have also made considerable improvements upon the Lake road, pursuant to the Act passed last Session of Parliament, for completing the improvements commenced during the summer of 1837.

The Trustees have of late had but one toll-gate, for collecting tolls upon the road, and that within the City of Toronto; they however now have three other gates, in order to meet the demands upon them for interest by the Receiver General, to which the tolls collected at the one gate during the last summer are inadequate.

The amount of money expended in improvements this season is £3,927 14s. 2d.: which amount (with the exception of £1,477 6s. 4d.—the proceeds upon the £1,500 raised by the Trustees,) was received from the Receiver General, on account of Debentures.

The amount of tolls collected at the gate near the City, from the 14th day of November, 1837, to the 14th day of November, 1838, is £805 19s. 1d. (though the collection was smaller than usual on account of the rebellion,) and the interest upon the total sum expended upon the whole line of road since the commencement, for that period, is £1,400: making the tolls received unequal to the interest due, which will be remedied by putting into operation the other two gates.

The following is a statement of the manner in which the sum of £3,927 14s. 2d. received this season, as above-mentioned, has been expended:

For repairing the road previously made, and making the new road between the Etobicoke and Mimico Creeks .....	£ 2,116 16 1 $\frac{1}{2}$
For graveling and improving the road in the Township of Toronto .....	596 10 10 $\frac{1}{4}$
For completing the Lake road .....	656 13 8 $\frac{1}{2}$
For damages done to private property by the public, when road repairing; for purchasing gravel, &c.; and all charges not included under the heads of labour, stone breaking and stone hauling .....	557 13 5 $\frac{1}{2}$
Total.....	£ 3,927 14 2

The Trustees would beg to say, before closing this report, that all interest, and arrears of interest, are now paid, and that nothing is now due for interest to the Receiver General.

All which is respectfully submitted.

(Signed) THOMAS FISHER,
CHAIRMAN.

THIRD REPORT OF THE TRUSTEES
OF THE
EAST TORONTO MACADAMIZED ROAD,
FOR THE YEAR 1838.

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major General Commanding Her Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

The Trustees appointed by the 6th Wm. IV, for continuing the improvement upon the Eastern Road, in submitting their third report, have much pleasure in stating that the contracts entered into last year, for straightening, leveling and turnpiking several miles of road, have, with few exceptions, been satisfactorily completed. That they have been enabled to complete five and a quarter miles and fifty-one links, of the plank road, and have sufficient material upon the ground, and contracted for, for finishing three additional miles, so soon as the frost is out of the ground the ensuing spring. The dangerous, and almost impassible state of the Highland Creek bridge and hill, has unavoidably attracted the attention of the Trustees, with a view to their improvement, when, upon examination, it was found expedient to erect a new bridge across the Creek, and to contract for cutting down and levelling the eastern hill. The bridge constructed of timber, upon cedar abutments, twenty-six feet above the level of the water, to correspond with the rise of the hill, has been satisfactorily completed.

That in consequence of the Legislature having granted a large sum of money for cutting a straight road through the eastern hill at the Rouge, and which was expended under the superintendence of Mr. Weller, the Trustees deemed it prudent not to deviate from that line, from whence they have removed several hundred yards of earth, which the action of the frost upon the side banks, (having been left in too perpendicular a state,) had caused to cave in. They proceeded nearly half through the hill, when, from the early frosts in the month of November, they were compelled to discontinue for the season. They feel assured, however, that the expense of lowering that hill in order to make it passable, will be more than they shall feel themselves justified in withdrawing from the funds at their disposal, appropriated for the general improvement of the main road, and would therefore respectfully suggest the propriety of the Legislature providing by special grant for the improvement of that hill, and the erecting of a bridge over the river, as the one partially erected by Mr Weller will be of no avail to the public, further than to facilitate the removing of the earth when excavated, to the west side, where it will be required, to raise the necessary embankment. The Trustees would further suggest, that any bridge to be erected over the Rouge, should rest upon stone foundations, with projecting wings or abutments of the same material, which, from reports and estimates received, they are of opinion will cost, together with excavation required to make the hill passable, and to finish the whole in a substantial and lasting manner, not less than £2,000.

The Trustees further beg leave to state, that from the many defects in the Act of Parliament by which they are appointed, they have been unwillingly compelled to establish another toll-gate within a short distance of the one erected in 1836, in order to enable them to collect the tolls during the winter months, which would otherwise be lost, the travel being altogether upon the ice. To remedy this evil, and to avoid the defects existing in the present laws, the Trustees are preparing a bill, to be submitted to the Legislature at its next session, for its consideration.

Exhibits No. 1 and 2, show the amount of money received, and expenditure of the past year; the amount of tolls collected; and the expense incurred in keeping that part of the road which has been Macadamized in repair. The latter charge has exceeded what the Trustees could have anticipated, and has mainly arisen, we are inclined to believe, from there not having been a sufficient quantity of metal laid down in the first instance, to resist the injurious actions of the narrow wheels universally used in this country.

For any further information respecting the relative cost between a Macadamized and a planked road, the Trustees beg to refer your Excellency to their former reports.

(Signed)

SECOND REPORT OF COMMISSIONERS
OF
KINGSTON AND NAPANEE MACADAMIZED ROAD,
FOR THE YEAR 1838.

SIR,

NAPANEE, April 1st, 1839.

I have the honour of enclosing to you, the Report of the Commissioners of the Macadamized Road from Kingston to Napanee, as drawn up by their Engineer, James Cull, Esq. The cause of its not being sent sooner, arose from the circumstance of Mr. Cull being at Brockville doing duty, and it seems he could not complete it at an earlier period.

We have four toll-bars on the road. The one next Kingston is rented at £500 per annum—and the others are doing better of late: but I am not exactly prepared to say what they yield.

I have the honour to be,
SIR,
Your obedient Servant,
(Signed)

ALLAN MACPHERSON,
CHAIRMAN OF THE TRUSTEES.

The Hon. JOHN MACAULAY, &c.
Toronto.

ENGINEER'S SECOND REPORT.

THE first report of the Engineer was made up to the 18th of November, 1837, at which time the works on the road generally ended for the season. It was found however that it was practicable, without any sacrifice as to expense, to continue removing the hills, which led to the contemplated swamp road, during the winter—where a few more men were employed, with equal, if not greater advantage, than they could have worked in the summer months.

As soon as the ice was strong enough, which, from the mildness of the season, was very late, a close examination was made of Mr. McGuin's swamp, which it had been determined the road should cross: and which, when accomplished, would be a great public improvement—shortening the distance nearly one-fifth between Powley's and Daley's; would render unnecessary the building two expensive bridges: avoiding a right angle in the road, which led by the Widow Adzit's—making nearly a straight road, or so slight an angle as to be of no consequence whatever as to any increased distance by it.

On examining the swamp, however, it proved to be of a very different character than common report had given it; instead of being, as had been represented, occasionally so firm that heavy cattle might be driven over it, it turned out, on examination, to be a swamp of unusual depth, and such as is rarely to be met with in Upper Canada.

A difference of opinion having existed as to the necessity of piling, a description of the swamp, with the Engineer's view of it, were laid before Colonel Bonycastle, R.E. with a request that he would be pleased to give his opinion, which he was good enough to do; and which recommended, under the circumstances, the adoption of piling as a foundation. A pile engine was immediately constructed; but it was late in February before the ice was strong enough to support it—which left barely time to finish the work, as the ice broke up early in March. The piles were driven by a ram of 1,500 lbs. weight, falling from a height of 45 feet; and some of them went to a depth of 70 feet—and on an average, from 35 to 50 feet. Above 500 piles were driven: and had it been possible, a greater number would have been still better.

Upon the piles were laid strong string-pieces, with cross-timbers of equal dimensions; the openings between them were filled in with logs resting on the ice, and across the whole were laid logs notched down upon the frame-work, which was mortised on the head of the piles. Above this, and in the contrary direction, was laid brush-wood, well plaited, about 18 inches in thickness—and on the whole was laid a bed of clay, from the hills leading to the swamp, about 12 inches in depth: thus raising the surface of the bed of the road full 3 feet above the high water mark of the swamp. To prevent the clay (which forms the sides and abutments of the road) from washing off by heavy storms, a fence of stout wattling has been made, mostly of cedar, which will afford an opportunity of planting willows, which will form a living protection to the abutments when the wattling decays.

The piles on the side of the river went down 70 feet—and it was impossible to have obtained a foundation which would have supported a stone bridge, but at a very heavy expense, and at a great sacrifice of time. It was therefore determined to substitute an arched cedar bridge, which is supported on piles, the logs of which are hewed to a pattern: and being of large dimensions and well dowelled, forms a cheap, though substantial substitute for a stone bridge, which it is believed will last for many years to come. Cribs, however, have been sunk on each side of the bridge, and loaded with stone, which will form sufficient abutments for a stone bridge, should it be found desirable to substitute one for the cedar bridge at any future time. This piece of road is considered generally as a great public improvement: and notwithstanding the difficulties of its construction, has not cost more (if so much) as it would have cost to have made it on the site of the old road, considering the extra distance, and the two bridges which would have been indispensable in that direction, and the lowering two hills, both of which were chiefly formed of solid rock.

A substantial stone bridge has been erected over the Marsh Creek, and from the excellent quality of the stone found in the immediate vicinity, is a handsome piece of masonry, adapted to stand for ages; and although of much larger dimensions than the bridge at Mill Creek, which was built by contract, has not cost so much by upwards of £40.

A bridge about 3 miles from Napanee, is also completed, consisting of 2 arches. This bridge is built of rubble stone, but will prove a substantial and permanent erection.

Five bridges are already built on this line of road, together with a capacious culvert at Warner's hill. It will be seen by a reference to the annexed accounts, that these bridges, with their approaches, including the dry and wing walls, have cost £1,957 6s. 5d.—certainly a large item in the general outlay; but in a great public work intended for posterity, it is presumed that it would have been very mistaken economy to have built such bridges as would have been disreputable in point of appearance, or wanting in stability or permanence. All the hills on this line of road, between Kingston and Napanee, a distance of 24 miles, are lowered, and the greatest average ascent does not exceed 1 in 25. The entire cost, as will be seen by the general statement, has been £3,881 12s. 1d.; and it is believed, large as this item of expenditure is, that the advantages will be considered by the public as fully commensurate—because however good the road may be, the benefit to the public would be greatly circumscribed, if any of the intervening hills were so steep as to prevent animals from dragging up the load they had conveyed on level ground, except by an exhaustion of strength more than equal to that expended in the whole journey; nor is it yet generally known in this country, how injurious it is to the feet of horses to descend steep hills, on a hard road, with a heavy load behind them. The system of draining which has been adopted, has been attended with considerable benefit to the occupiers of the land through which the road passes, and it is believed, meets with the entire approbation of the public. Not only do the wide ditches on the sides of the roads completely take off the water from them, but they afford great facility for winter travelling: they become filled with snow so soon as any falls, and will remain filled so long as any snow remains, so as greatly to extend the sleighing season. Several very deep, and as it was believed, irreclaimable swamps have been drained effectually—and at so small an expense, compared with the advantage derived, that it is believed the system will be generally adopted, to the great benefit of the agricultural interest of the Province.

There are now something above 15 miles of road completed out of 24, being the entire distance between Kingston and Napanee. It will be seen by a reference to the general statement, that independently of bridges, hills and lateral draining, the entire 15 miles have cost, on an average, about £1,420 per mile; and when it is recollected, that on upwards of 3 miles the metal was laid 20 feet wide: that the expense of all tools and implements is included in this sum: and also that, except to the Engineer, the work was new to every one on the road: that by far the most difficult part of the line is done, including that across Mr. McGuin's swamp, it is presumed that it will bear comparison, on the score of expense, with any similar work in the Province.

Under the head "Engineering," it will be seen that the sum expended is £521 9s. 2d. which is probably less than has ever accompanied the expenditure of £30,000 in a public work, it being only about 1½ per cent: and this is the whole cost of running lines, drawing plans and sections, drawing specifications, as well as drawing every contract which has been entered into, together with travelling expenses, (except a sum of about £26, charged as incidentals)—a subject to which your Engineer is the more desirous of referring, because it is believed that an impression exists, that the charge of this department has been extravagant: whereas the contrary is the fact, 5 per cent being usually considered the lowest rate of charge for Engineering.

It is satisfactory to be able to state, that during the last winter, not the smallest part of the road was affected by the frost. For several miles, where it was first made, it is become compact and firm, and in high estimation; but until the sides of the road are ground down, so that the traveling will not be confined to the centre, it will require occasional raking in, to fill the slight ruts which are thereby made.

Many persons having expressed their wishes that a quantity of clay or other material should be laid on the metal, for the purpose of making the road more agreeable and easy to travel upon when first made, and such applications having been in all cases resisted, your Engineer gladly avails himself of the opportunity which this report affords him, of giving publicity to his reasons for objecting to the measure.

The essential difference between Macadamized and all other stone roads is, that the stones of which the former are composed, are designed to form a solid and impenetrable body, by uniting by their own angles. Now it is obvious, that if sand or clay be put on the stones, it will pass between them and keep them apart, instead of allowing them to unite; and although for the time it will make the road more agreeable to travel upon, yet as the material used is affected by both wet and dry weather, it is obvious that the road cannot become settled till all such materials have found their way to the bottom of the bed, which, in all cases, is the part of the road which first becomes solid—the road, therefore, in dry weather, is loose:

and in wet, shifting and muddy. Nor is this all; all soils have, especially in Canada, more or less of argilicious or clayey matter in them—clay has a great affinity for water, which it retains with considerable tenacity. If clay be placed between the stones of a Macadamized road, the frost seizes the water contained in the clay, and causes it to expand with a force irresistible, which is observable in roads made of a mixture of clay and stones. The road necessarily “lifts,” and when the thaw comes is a shaking, shifting, mass of mud and stones: the specific gravity of the stone being greater than that of the clay or the water, they descend to the bottom, and the clay, in the character of mud, remains at the top. No doubt, cements may be advantageously used, but the expense would be large. The refuse of gas manufactories would form an excellent cement, but that in this country, at this present time, cannot be obtained; the best substitute would be a thin layer of stones, broken very small—the largest to pass through an inch ring. This would make a smooth road almost immediately, and be wholly free from the foregoing objections.

The amount of the item “Compensation,” is smaller than is usual, in so extended a line of road—especially when it is recollected that its original width was only 40 feet: whereas, the Trustees have now, by the provisions of the Act, taken 60 feet—consequently, all the fences had to be removed, and that frequently on both sides of the road; and it must be obvious that the removal of 15 miles of fence alone, and where on both sides, at the rate of 30 miles, (less than £10 per mile,) is exceedingly moderate: besides which, several buildings which stood in the road have been removed, the expense of which is also included in this amount. It is considered that the small amount of compensation claimed, is a proof of the estimation in which the road is held, and that the proprietors of property generally are aware that the advantages greatly overbalance the disadvantages.

It is also observable, that where in one or two cases large compensation has been demanded, it has been claimed, and appeals to juries threatened, by persons whose property is the most increased in value by the Macadamized road. This circumstance, it is imagined, will be considered worthy the attention of the Legislature in passing any new road Acts, or in amending old ones. As the law now stands, persons consider themselves entitled, (by what is called the jury clause) to compensation for land taken for the use of the road, or any injury done, although the advantages are far greater in amount than the disadvantages. For instance, if a person through whose land the road passes, sustains a loss of two or three acres of land, which have cost the proprietor four dollars per acre, but may now be worth twenty dollars per acre, he claims the amount, whereas it is probable that his whole estate is doubled in value, in consequence of the road. It is submitted as a remedy, that in all cases where an appeal to a jury is made, they shall be directed to take into account any increased value of the estate, in consequence of the formation of the road; and if it shall appear that the benefit derived exceeds the disadvantage, a decision shall be given accordingly.

In pursuance with the resolution of the last Board, a survey has been made of that part of the road which yet remains to be completed. The shortness of the time allowed, together with other necessary avocations, has prevented its being so minute as could be desired.

There remain about nine miles to be Macadamized; the first two miles, commencing at Mill Creek bridge, have nothing difficult in them. The country is nearly a dead level, and the draining therefore more important, and in unskilful hands, more difficult, yet can be easily effected by persons properly qualified, and at little expense. If it should be found expedient to use Brulé gravel, instead of broken stone, these two miles of road may be made for two hundred pounds per mile less than any mile of road hitherto made;—and it is believed, that if that material is properly selected, and well screened from earth or mould, it will make a permanent road. The adjoining three miles will cost more, because if lime-stone is used, it is not to be got within from half to three-quarters of a mile of the line of road; the surface of the ground, however, is covered with granite boulders, like those used in the construction of the Yonge-street road, and which are decidedly better than lime-stone, and which it is presumed the farmers will readily collect, on being paid the price of collecting, which may be estimated at from one to two dollars per toise, and placed in heaps by the side of the road, where they may be thrown on by the labourers when broken. These boulders cost about twenty-five shillings the toise to break them, so that the cost will not exceed the average price which has been paid for broken lime-stone upon the part of the road already completed.

It would, however, be very desirable, if the Trustees intend to finish the road next season, that both the Brulé gravel and the boulder should be collected this winter, before the frost sets in or the snow falls; and it is believed there will be little difficulty in obtaining contractors who will engage to do so, and agree to be paid out of the proceeds of the Debentures to be obtained during the coming session of Parliament.

The remaining four miles are over formations of lime-stone near the surface, which can be supplied on the sides of the road at a moderate price.

The only part of the road which will require an extra outlay for cartage, is about the sixth mile board, and this can be advantageously avoided, by changing the direction of the road a few degrees south, instead of north, as at first proposed, and which will be an improvement, as well as a saving of expense.

A bridge will be required, to cross the stream near Mr. Fralick's, and if a short cut is made, to direct the two streams which now cross the road into one channel, on the north side, one bridge only will be necessary. Arched culverts will be all that will be necessary, besides the bridge just alluded to at Mr. Lewis Fralick's, and a short piece of under-ground draining may be necessary near Mr. John Fralick's.

It is believed that there is no intention on the part of the persons through whose lands the road will pass, to claim any compensation, except for removing fences, and two or three wooden buildings. It is believed that a Contractor may be found who will complete the whole for TEN THOUSAND POUNDS, or if the broken metal be provided by the Trustees, which considering the circumstances of the country, and the importance of giving persons living on the line the advantages of carting, &c. which could not be controlled if in the hands of a Contractor, independently of broken stone, the work may be completed for six thousand five hundred pounds.

It will be necessary, in a very few years, to build a new bridge over the Napanee River, and this item, with unforeseen contingencies, may render it expedient to apply for a further sum of twelve thousand pounds.

Third, or Napanee Section.

The road on this section is fully completed to very nearly three miles of distance from the village.

The hill near Napanee, which was composed of solid rock, presenting an acclivity in some parts of one in eight, is now reduced, on the average, to one in twenty-two, and although attended with a heavy expense, yet it is believed that less ought not to have been done. The road for nearly two miles beyond the hill, ran through a deep swamp, which is effectually drained; proper culverts are made with the necessary side ditches: all the logs and large stumps are removed, and the bed raised sufficiently high to ensure stability and permanence to the road.

A bridge with two arches has been built across the Spring Creek, about three miles from the village; a considerable rise near Dempsey's tavern, has been lowered, and the earth taken into the swamp below, by which the bed of the road has been raised.

It is satisfactory to be able to add, that the difficulties upon this section of the road are now surmounted. The succeeding mile will be made for full £300 less than any that has preceded it, and there is no other hill of any consequence to lower, or bridge to build in this section. It is also believed that the following two miles are very favourably situated for obtaining stone of a good quality at a reasonable price—certainly as low, if not lower than the lowest price hitherto paid upon the line.

The road is highly valued by the public in general, and may be truly said to have removed all the prejudices which had existed against the work, before the road was commenced; and probably a better proof of this could scarcely be given, than the very small amounts which have been claimed for compensation.

A toll-gate has been erected about a quarter of a mile from the village, but for so short a time as to prevent giving any detail of its receipts.

Toll-Gates.

Upon the whole line of 24 miles, there will be six toll-gates. Four are already erected, and in the receipt of tolls. The gate near Kingston has been in the receipt of tolls for above a year, and has been lately let by tender for the coming year, for above five hundred pounds, with proper securities for the payment of the money. The rate of tolls is exceedingly moderate, being only—

- 7½d. for a Double Team.
- 4d. for a Single do.
- 2d. for a Horse.

The tolls are paid with cheerfulness, and the public are generally convinced of the general utility of the road. The whole line of road will cost about £40,000. The repairs will be trifling for some years to come; and when it is recollected that the tolls on good roads will not only not be diminishing, but on the contrary, constantly increasing with the improved state of the country, it is believed that there will be little difficulty in making the receipts equal to the expenditure, without calling upon the District for assistance. But should this be necessary, the high value set upon the road, and the advantages derived from it, will prevent its being considered a grievance.

As application to Parliament must, of necessity, be made, it is respectfully suggested that the present Act should be amended in the following particulars:

First—As before alluded to, requiring Juries, in cases of claims for damage done, to take into their consideration, evidence as to the increased value of the property of the claimant, which increase has arisen out of the construction of the road.

Second—A power to be granted to the Trustees to take earth, stone or other materials, as they may require for the formation of the road, from adjacent properties, on the payment of damage done, or the value thereof: such value to be ascertained by Commissioners to be afterwards named, similar to the power given to the Trustees in the Act for making a road from Brockville to St. Francis, &c.

Third—To make it compulsory on persons whose property adjoins the road, to construct proper drains or culverts across the ditches or water-courses leading to their fields or houses, made by the Trustees to drain the road, after they are made by the Trustees, or if not, to make them, in the first instance, to keep them in repair.

Fourth—To prevent persons from doing injury to the road, by driving on foot-paths, or in the water-courses, except in the sleighing season; by driving off the metal bed in muddy weather; by dragging timber, or other materials, on the road; requiring all carriages to take their proper side of the road; and requiring slower vehicles to allow lighter and swifter ones to pass, by breaking out of the road; preventing racing on the public roads, either with horses or carriages, with a penalty for wilfully or carelessly driving against another horse or carriage, as well as for removing such guards as the Trustees may think proper to place upon the roads, or otherwise obstructing or doing injury to the Macadamized road.

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major General Commanding Her Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

THE Trustees appointed under the Act authorizing the construction of a Macadamized road, from Brockville to St. Francis, and other places in the District of Johnstown, beg leave to report for the information of Your Excellency—

That in the autumn of 1837, they received a check upon the President, Directors and Company, of the Bank of Upper Canada, for £1,000, upon which a premium of £25 was received, making the sum of £1,025; but owing to the unsettled state of the country, they proceeded no further in the work, at that time, than the survey of the first section, from Brockville to Unionville, about 11 miles. In the spring following, a further sum was received, which, after deducting the interest to be paid thereon for six months, amounts to £5379 13s. 3d. A further sum of £9 17s. 6d. commutation of statute labour, has also been received. An Engineer was employed, and during the last summer, a distance of 5 miles was finished, at an expense of £6,573 10s. 10d. A toll-gate has been erected, and since the first day of January last, when tolls were first exacted, the sum of £42 5s. 7d. has been received. It is, however, to be observed, from the excellence of the roads in every part of the District in the winter, the inhabitants who do not reside immediately upon the road, have been induced to avoid it, which will not be the case at any other season.

There is now due by the Trustees, to different persons, the sum of £158 19s. 8d.; and as the tolls received can be applied to no other purpose than paying the interest on the principal sum borrowed, and towards the liquidation of that principal, a further sum, to the amount last mentioned, will be required, to settle all demands against the Trustees for that part of the road finished. The road is opened sixty feet wide, and the metal to the depth of ten inches, and sixteen feet wide, has been laid upon it. No claims for damages have been taken into consideration, the Trustees deeming it better to defer the investigation of this subject until the road be finished, as in all probability the advantages arising from the road will then be sufficient to counterbalance any inconvenience caused by it to the claimants.

A considerable sum was expended in purchasing utensils for the use of the labourers, which, together with the fact that obstacles, such as filling up and draining swamps, and blasting rocks, were encountered in the section finished, (which the Trustees are led to believe will not be met with to any serious extent hereafter,) induces the Trustees to think that the remaining part of the road between this place and St. Francis can be constructed at a less expense per mile.

It gives the Trustees great pleasure to state, that the road is highly popular, and their conviction, that when it is completed as far as St. Francis, so as to afford an easy communication between the River St. Lawrence and the Rideau Canal, a sum by way of tolls will be received, sufficient not only to pay yearly interest on the money borrowed, but effect a yearly decrease in the principal.

CHAIRMAN.

ANNUAL REPORT OF TRUSTEES,
OF
QUEENSTON AND GRIMSBY MACADAMIZED ROAD,
FOR THE YEAR 1838.

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, Major General Commanding Her Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

THE Trustees appointed to carry into effect the provisions of the Act 7th William IV. chap. 82, entitled, "An Act to raise a sum of money to Macadamize the Main-road from Queenston to the West Boundary-line of Grimsby, in the Niagara District, and for other purposes therein-mentioned," in conformity with the 15th section thereof, respectfully beg to make the Second Annual Report of their proceedings.

Since the last report, on the 18th April last, a further issue of Debentures, to the extent of £7,500, Sterling, has been made, and the money has been advanced by, and received from the Gore Bank. This seasonable supply enabled the Trustees nearly to complete the road from Queenston to St. David's, (a distance of 3 miles,) and also to place under contract a further distance of 4½ miles, extending from St. David's to the Ten-mile Creek Hills, (1 mile each)—the 3 worst on the entire route. All these the Contractors were bound to finish and complete by the 1st day of June next.

The present state of the several sections of work under contract, will be seen from the report of the Engineer hereto appended, and marked A. It will appear from that report, that a sum of £6,212 7s. 8½d. will be required to finish the work now in progress.

The Trustees beg reference to their balance-sheet, and accompanying abstract of the same, marked B. They are ready, at all times, to lay before Your Excellency the vouchers for the payments made, and give every explanation which may be required.

The document marked C. shews the sums due by the Trustees, and amounts to £1,201 3s. 10½d. It will also appear from this document, that the Treasurer has advanced £27 4s. 3½d. beyond what he has received.

From the several documents referred to, it will appear that the Trustees are liable for the sum required to complete the contracts . . . . . £6,212 7 8½
And for the debts due . . . . . 1,201 3 10½

Making together the sum of . . . . . £7,413 11 7

For which amount the Trustees earnestly and confidently hope Your Excellency will issue your Warrant to the Receiver General, in order that the necessary steps may be taken to realize the funds, so that the works may be completed.

The Trustees beg respectfully to urge Your Excellency, to issue your Warrant to the Receiver General, for the remainder of the sum voted by the Provincial Parliament, in order that they may proceed, during the ensuing season, to carry into effect the duty imposed upon them.

It appears to the Trustees almost unnecessary to remark, that the large amount already expended, will be of little or no avail to the public, unless the amount required to complete the contracts is placed at their disposal. The sum of £1,715 14s. 6d. for stone delivered along the line of road, from the Ten-mile Creek to Grimsby, will be altogether lost. The inconvenience to which the public is subjected, by the present incomplete and dangerous state of the road, is very generally complained of; of this Your Excellency has had an opportunity of judging, in Your Excellency's recent journey along the line of road.

The Trustees would wish to call your Excellency's attention to the fact that, by the contracts into which they have entered, they are liable to an action for breach of contract, as well as for the balances now remaining due.

In conclusion, the Trustees are gratified to be able to state, that the part of the road which has been nearly completed, gives satisfaction to the public.

All which is respectfully submitted.

GEORGE ADAMS,

CHAIRMAN.

ST. CATHARINES, 7th March, 1839.

To the President and Board of Trustees for making and maintaining a Road from Queenston to Saltfleet, District of Niagara.

GENTLEMEN :

Upon the close of road operations for the season, I beg leave to submit the following report :—

It appears that early in April last, that portion of the road between Queenston and St. David's was placed under the direction of one of your Trustees, as an experiment, to test by labour and superintendence, the actual expense of road making, in all its parts, in which office he continued until the first of August.

Upon the first day of July, the reporter was placed by the Board in charge of this part of the work, as also of the several divisions to be placed under contract, from St. Davids to the southern bank of the Sixteen-mile Creek, as follows :—

Section 1.—From Front-street, Queenston, to concession south of St. David's, by labour and superintendence, length.....	3 miles.
“ 2 & 3.—From St. David's concession to Ten-mile Creek—to Messrs. Tucker & Duffen, by contract, .....	4 $\frac{1}{4}$ “
“ 4.—Across valley of Twelve-mile Creek—to B. H. Boyle, by contract, ...	1 “
“ 5.—Across valley of Fifteen-mile Creek—to Daniel Beamer, by contract, ..	1 “
“ 6.—Across valley of Sixteen-mile Creek—to Abraham Lampman, by contract, .....	1 “
Extent in all equal to about.....	10 <math>\frac{1}{4}</math> miles.

Work done upon those Divisions.

SECTION No. 1.—From Queenston to St. David's concession may be considered nearly finished in all its parts, including or comprehending bridges, culverts, cross and side drains, excavation, embankment, and metal bed.

When this division, 40 bridges and culverts, have been constructed, and thirty-five hills reduced from inclinations varying from 1 foot in 6, 8, 9 and 10, to 1 foot in 25, 30, 35, &c. to one in 140, minor inclinations have been so arranged that all surface water must pass to the nearest cross drain, at declivities from one in 140 to one in 180, diminishing thereby unnecessary encroachment of floods upon the formed side-paths.

Upon the whole extent of this section, 3 miles, the metal bed has been kept full in dimensions, viz. 14 feet width of metal bed, and ten inches deep, as determined by the Board, and has required seven cords of broken stone per lineal chain, or at the rate of 560 cords per mile. The total expense of this division, including superintendence, iron, tools and fencing, is at the rate of £2,488 per mile.

To account, in part, for this unusual expenditure, it may here be remarked, that during the commencement and part of the progress of the work, stone-breaking by the day cost six dollars per cord—four dollars by contract; and lately the same could be done, either by the day or by contract, from \$2 to \$2  $\frac{1}{2}$  per cord.

SECTIONS No. 2 & 3.—Extending from St. David's concession to the Ten-mile Creek, was contracted for on 21st July; at present, one-half the grading, cutting and embankment, is done, including bridges and prepared road metal—excessive drought during the latter part of the season preventing the completion of several of the largest bridges upon these sections: water for lime mortar could not be obtained within a reasonable distance, for prosecuting the works. Expense of work done, £1,975 5s.

SECTION No. 4.—Extending from Market-square, St. Catharines, across the valley of Twelve-mile Creek, to Haining's concession, was let by contract upon the 9th August. The quantity of work executed amounts to £1,696 11s. 1d.; inclinations across the valley of the Twelve-mile Creek and Welland Canal, are reduced from 1 in 6, 7, 8 and 10, to 1 in 16.

SECTION No. 5.—Contract commenced upon the 9th August, and extends from the right bank of Fifteen-mile Creek, at Mr. McCarty's well, and across the valley of Fifteen, to Mr. Johnston's tavern; upon this section a bridge of solid masonry is three-fourths completed—span 25 feet, and height above surface of stream, 22 feet. The cuttings and embankments of this valley are far advanced; inclinations of former road, 1 foot in 6, 7 and 8—present improvement, 1 foot in 18 and 20. Estimate of work done is £1,214 1s. 10d.

SECTION No. 6.—Contract commenced 9th August, extending across valley of the Sixteen-mile Creek, besides deep cutting and embankment. A bridge of solid masonry, 20 feet span, and 22 feet rise, has been executed to within two-thirds of finish; inclinations by present road, across this valley, 1 foot in 6, 7 and 10—present, 1 foot in 18, upon one side, and 1 foot in 22, upon the opposite. Estimated work done upon this section is £988 4s. 3d.

ABSTRACT of work done upon all the foregoing Sections, and money required for their completion, according to contract.

Total amounts ....	£13,309 14 11	£13,947 7 8½	£1,133 0 10	£6,212 7 8½

By the above statement, it appears that work to the amount of £13,309 4s. 11d. has been performed during the year, and £13,947 7s. 8½d. has been paid to contractors and labourers; that the sum of £6,212 7s. 8½d. will be required to finish all the sections now in operation, according to the contract rates.

In conclusion, it may be satisfactory to remark, that the above sections, although the most expensive, and in execution the most difficult upon the line, have all been contracted for by competent individuals, considerably below my estimated price; and I have no doubt they will be successfully executed in all parts, should funds be duly provided.

Respectfully submitted, by

FRANCIS HALL,
CIVIL ENGINEER.

DUNDAS AND WATERLOO MACADAMIZED ROAD,

FOR THE YEAR 1838.

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

The Trustees for superintending the construction of the Dundas and Waterloo Macadamized road—

RESPECTFULLY REPORT :

That notwithstanding the distracted state of the Province since they commenced operations, the work under their superintendance has progressed beyond what might have been reasonably expected,—fourteen and one-fourth miles being, with a trifling exception finished, and open to public travel; and two and three-fourth miles more in a state of forwardness,—making a distance of seventeen miles that will be finished early in the ensuing summer, and on which toll-gates will be established as soon as the spring opens.

The Trustees finding at the commencement of the work that the loan authorized would not be sufficient to complete the whole route, were induced to select a part of the road—a distance of six miles, to be left until a future loan might be obtained, for which purpose they petitioned the Legislature at its last session, which loan, they regret to say, was not authorized; but they trust an application at its next session, may be more successful.

The Trustees feel more confidence in urging a further loan, as it is their opinion that no similar work in the Province will so soon repay the original cost, or be of more public benefit.

The Trustees, in their last report, suggested the necessity of their being empowered to cause the trees, for a distance of one hundred feet on each side of the road, through uncultivated lands, to be cut down;—this they would still recommend to be done.

With this report, the Trustees beg to submit, for the information of the Legislature, an abstract of receipts and disbursements, and an estimate of the work done, contracted for, and not yet contracted for.

REPORT OF COMMISSIONERS,
OF
WEST GWILLIMBURY ROAD AND BRIDGE,
FOR THE YEAR 1838.

SIR,

The Commissioners appointed under the authority of an Act passed in the sixth year of the reign of His Majesty William the Fourth, for the improvement of the West Gwillimbury Road and Bridge, of the County of Simcoe, report as follows:

The Commissioners met at George Playter's Inn, in the Township of West Gwillimbury, on the twelfth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-six, and William Laughton, Esquire, was appointed Chairman. The Commissioners, by their Chairman, lost no time in making arrangements to carry the intention of the Act into effect, but met with much difficulty in obtaining money to enable them to do so; indeed it was only effected by the Chairman and the Commissioners becoming personally responsible to the Bank of Upper Canada, for the first five hundred pounds which they obtained.

The Commissioners have great satisfaction in now being able to state, that the work has been done in the best manner, under the superintendence of Mr. Richard T. Willson; and that the public have, for the last year and a half, had the benefit of the improvement, on paying a toll so moderate, as to cause dissatisfaction to no one.

The sum of one thousand pounds has been expended on the above work; the interest on the whole amount expended has been paid punctually—and the sum of ninety-seven pounds, one shilling and three farthings, deposited with the Receiver General, towards the liquidation of the principal.

The accounts herewith transmitted, will show, in detail, the manner in which the money has been expended.

Your obedient Servants,

W. LAUGHTON,
CHAIRMAN.
GEORGE PLAYTER,
COMMISSIONER.
JOHN FLETCHER,
COMMISSIONER.

REPORT,
OF THE
BOARD OF INSPECTORS
OF
THE PROVINCIAL PENITENTIARY,

THE Board of Inspectors of the Provincial Penitentiary, near Kingston, in submitting herewith, for the information of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, the annual returns of its proceedings during the fiscal year, ending October, 1838, and which many unavoidable circumstances have heretofore delayed, would most respectfully beg leave to observe, that the various documents marked from A. to K. together with the Warden's report, and those of the Chaplain and Surgeon, embrace so ample a statement, in detail, of the several matters connected with its management, as to need but little comment at their hands. There are, however, some questions bearing on its finances, that require something more than a passing remark—as the Board have had some difficulty in meeting the demands, from the circumstance of the last annual grant falling so far short of the amount estimated for its support. It may seem from document G. that the estimate for the support of the establishment for the present year is unusually large; but when the present state of the institution is duly considered, with reference to documents L. and M. it will be at once seen that the gain to the Province, in the actual value of the buildings now in the course of erection, and absolutely necessary to its success, does not fall far short of the several grants made by the Legislature for its support—and the Inspectors are of opinion, that if the like work had been done by contract, it would have cost a much greater sum. It is moreover essentially necessary, that whilst so large a portion of the available labour of the convicts is applied in the erection of the buildings required by the improved system of arrangement, that the annual appropriations should at least be commensurate with the unavoidable expenses of materials and superintendence, with the salaries of the officers of the institution.

The erection of an outer wall around the establishment is also an object of the greatest importance, and which the events of the last twelve months have brought prominently forward, shewing that it must not only embrace security against the escape of the convict from within, but sufficient to repel danger from without—the Inspectors having reason to believe, that the liberation of the convicts formed a part of the plans of the disturbers of the peace of the country. The fear of this has been a cause of the greatest anxiety to the officers in the immediate charge of the Penitentiary—calling for their utmost vigilance; increasing very materially their ordinary duties; and the relief afforded by extra night guards has added considerably to the general expense. An especial appropriation would appear to be required to meet this emergency—seeing, by the Warden's report, that by convict labour it could not be effected under a period of two years at least.

The Inspectors, keeping in view the spirit of the resolution of the Honourable the House of Assembly, that in the employment of the convicts, their labour might not be brought into injurious competition with the artizan and tradesman, have had under their consideration the propriety of establishing a rope work and duck factory—manufactures which they conceive can be carried on to an advantage by convict labour; would interfere with no present vested interests; and might be made subservient to the agriculturist, by promoting the cultivation of hemp in the country.

The Board would most respectfully ask the attention of His Excellency to that part of the Warden's report, soliciting a supply of the printed documents of the proceedings of the Institution, to enable them, by an exchange with similar establishments in other countries, to ask for the results of their experience, in the management of the great objects sought to be obtained by Penitentiary discipline.

All of which is most respectfully submitted.

JAMES NICKALLS,
PRESIDENT OF THE BOARD OF INSPECTORS.

TO THE INSPECTORS OF THE PROVINCIAL PENITENTIARY.

GENTLEMEN :

SINCE my last annual report, 105 male and 6 female convicts have been received into the Penitentiary, being an increase of 40 above the number of prisoners received in the preceding year. Of these, 7 male convicts are under second convictions, whose previous sentences did not average more than 17 months—a term that has been found by experience too short, in which to effect any lasting improvement in the habits of men who have lived in the commission of crime.

The return marked A. will shew the number of convicts received into the establishment from the several Districts during the last fiscal year, together with a statement of the crimes of which they have been found guilty, and the terms of their respective sentences.

The number of prisoners discharged from the Penitentiary during the preceding year is 80, of whom—

	66	were	by	expiration	of	sentence,
	10	“	“	“	“	pardon,
	4	“	“	“	“	death:

A statement of which is given in the return marked B. containing a full description of their persons; the Districts in which they were tried; the crimes for which they were convicted; and the terms of time for which they were severally committed.

In my last report, I stated that the prisoners on their liberation, were subjected to certain questions, in order to ascertain from them (so far as dependence can be placed in their statement) the advantages derived from the system of Penitentiary discipline in the punishment and reformation of convicts.

This practice has been continued, and with the like results.

In the return marked C. will be found a statement of the convicts in confinement on the 30th September last, with an account of their crimes; date of sentence; term of imprisonment; and the District from which they were sent. From this it appears there has been an increase of 36 convicts above the number stated in my last report, of whom 19 were for the crime of high treason. The average number of prisoners for the last year was 105, and that during the present is 153—being an increase of rather more than 45 per cent. over the year preceding. The total number of prisoners received into the institution since the prison was opened, in the year 1835, is 230—of which 8 are under sentence of second convictions.

During the past year the conduct of the prisoners has been generally good; and notwithstanding the great increase in the number of convicts received, the punishment which it has been necessary to inflict has not exceeded the average proportion of last year, when the number of prisoners received was far less: a sufficient proof that the discipline of the institution is still in a state of improvement, as it is generally found that a greater share of punishment is unavoidably inflicted upon those recently received into confinement, than upon convicts who have been longer in prison. There have been some few attempts to escape, the idea of which has no doubt been suggested by the apparent insecurity of the fence—the scaling of which would be of easy accomplishment, were there not other precautions taken, as well for their safe keeping, as for discovering their absence.

The labour of the convicts since last spring has been principally devoted to the erection of the east wing, and the completion of the roof and front of the north wing. The walls of the former, which were only commenced in the month of May last, are now carried to their proper height, with the exception of the cornice, which it is intended to complete next year—the stone for which will be prepared during the present fall and ensuing winter. As the number of cells in the south wing will, in a very short time, become too limited for the reception of the convicts who may be sent here, it was absolutely necessary that the building of the east wing should be commenced; for had it been longer delayed, it would have been impossible, with the small number of prisoners whose labour could be appropriated to this purpose, to complete it before it would be required for the reception of convicts.

In the statements of work done by the convicts since my last report, it will be seen, that as much as possible has been devoted to the support of the institution, although but a small amount in proportion to the annual expenditure of the establishment. The building operations and other works carried on at the Penitentiary, during the present year, have been performed altogether by the labour of the convicts, whose proficiency in their several trades is such that the work performed by them is of the best description.

The return marked D. contains an account of the value of the labour of the convicts during the past year, describing what amount has been devoted to the building and support of the prison, and how much has been earned by the convicts who have been employed in the manufacture of articles made for sale. From this statement, it appears that the labour of the prisoners during the last year exceeds that of the preceding by  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. per man.

The Board having directed that the labour of a certain number of convicts should be set apart for making shoes and boots for sale, a large quantity of these articles has been manufactured, which will, no doubt, meet a ready demand during the ensuing winter—as they are of a description more properly suited to that season.

The principal work to be performed during the present fall, should the season continue long open, will be the excavation for and building of the main drain, a work which is much required, as it is so essentially necessary to the health and cleanliness of the prison.

Much of the labour of the convicts during the ensuing year, will be required in fitting up the north wing, the lower floor of which is particularly required for the kitchen and dining hall, the present use of the areas in the south wing, for the latter purpose, being found to be extremely inconvenient, and the positions of the convicts at the dinner-table, as at present arranged, do not afford that facility of oversight which is desirable.

The cells of the east wing, the building of which it is proposed shall form part of the work of the convicts next year, will not probably be fit for occupation until the summer of the year after next, by which time, should the number of convicts increase in the same proportion as they have done during the past year, the south wing, which at present is the only one fit for the reception of prisoners, will not be sufficient to contain those that may be sent to the Penitentiary.

The gradual decay of the present wooden fence, as well as the safe keeping of an increased number of prisoners, will soon render it necessary to commence the building of the boundary wall, a work which, if performed by the labour of convicts, will require at least two years in its performance, as the number of men who can be employed as masons will be too few to complete it in a shorter period.

Before the labour of the convicts can be rendered available for the maintenance of the Penitentiary, it will become necessary to build the shops as originally designed, in order that the various branches of trade in which the convicts are to be employed may be successfully carried on. The only buildings so used at present, exclusive of the stone-shed, are the carpenter's, blacksmith's, and shoemaker's shops, which are put up in a slight, temporary manner, and the two latter will soon go to decay.

Some proportion of the labour of the convicts is continually required, for the immediate purposes of the prison. Several are employed in sweeping and cleaning the buildings, and providing the daily meals, besides those who are engaged in making and washing the clothing. The occasional making and repairing of prison furniture and utensils, also requires the employment of several of the prisoners during the year.

Until the buildings which are now in progress of completion, and the shops which it is intended to be built, can be finished, no amount of the labour of the convicts of any consequence can be devoted to the support of the Institution. To accomplish so desirable an end, it would require the constant labour of at least two hundred convicts to be set apart for that purpose.

The increased price of the necessaries of life, has caused a corresponding advance on the cost at which the provisions are now furnished for the support of the convicts.

The rations are divided into three classes, two of which are supplied at the rate of  $8\frac{1}{2}$ d. each, and the third at  $7\frac{3}{4}$ d. making an average of seven and twenty-seven twenty-eights of a penny per day. A diet-table agreeable to the scale recently adopted by the Board, is hereunto appended.

The disturbed state of the country during the last winter having required increased watchfulness for the protection of the Penitentiary, every precaution was taken to put the establishment in as fit a state of defence as the means placed at my disposal would admit.

The duty on the part of the Officers, for several weeks, was such as to require their services by night and by day; but this duty becoming too burthensome, and of a nature to unfit them for the proper discharge of their more appropriate services during the day, it was deemed advisable by the Board to employ an extra guard for the special purpose of attending to the outward protection of the Penitentiary by night. The number of men employed in this particular duty has been latterly reduced, and it would not perhaps be prudent to discontinue their services until a military guard be stationed in this neighbourhood, which it is to be hoped will soon be the case, as a guard-house, and barracks sufficient for the accommodation of forty men, have recently been erected on the Penitentiary ground, by direction of the Commander of the Forces. The presence of the small detachment of Militia, which was for a short time placed here, was found to be particularly serviceable, and had it been continued from the time the guard-house was completed, it would have saved the expense necessarily incurred in continuing the extra night guard.

By reference to the inventory of goods, materials, and other property on hand, it will be seen that the greater part of the tools and other articles in use at the Penitentiary, have been made by convict labour.

The statement marked G, describes the particulars of the estimate of the sum required for the support of the Penitentiary for the ensuing year. This amount appears larger than that of former years, but is not greater than is necessary to complete the buildings at present in an unfinished state, as well as to maintain the convicts and pay the officers and others engaged in carrying on the discipline of the Institution. The sum voted by the Legislature at its last session, was £1,377 2s. 1d. less than the estimate laid before Parliament.

This deficiency, together with the additional expense of building the east wing this year, for which no estimate was made, and the extra disbursements arising out of the disturbed state of the country, have created a debt against the institution amounting to £1,794 1s. 7d. including three months pay to the officers and guard of the establishment, which at present there are no means of discharging, as the funds of the Penitentiary are exhausted.

By the statute 4th Wm. IV. c. 37, I am directed to preserve in the Penitentiary at least one set of copies of all official reports made to the Legislature respecting the same, for which purpose, a suitable number of such reports, when printed, were to be supplied to me. These printed copies have never been furnished, and although copies of the same are carefully preserved in the books of the office, the want of a supply of the printed documents has hitherto prevented me from obtaining much valuable information in regard to matters connected with prison discipline, as I am unable to exchange reports with the officers of similar institutions in other countries.

An account of the various employments in which the convicts were engaged at the close of the last fiscal year, will be seen in the return marked H.

I beg also to lay before the Board my yearly general Accounts of Receipts and Disbursements on account of the Penitentiary.

CHAPLAIN'S REPORT.

TO THE INSPECTORS OF THE PROVINCIAL PENITENTIARY.

GENTLEMEN :

The review of the past year is attended with mingled feelings of joy and sorrow ;—of joy, that melioration of the convict has been earnestly sought after ;—of sorrow, that so small a return has been made : still there is some encouragement to proceed in an undertaking accompanied by so many disappointments and difficulties ; for if even only one out of every fifty should be reclaimed, this would authorize the continuance of increased exertion in behalf of the rest.

The fact that several re-committals during the year now ended have been registered, may at first serve to call in question the utility of the institution ; but when the obduracy of the heart, enslaved for years, (and in many instances from childhood) is considered in connexion with the shortness of the term for which they were imprisoned, all doubts respecting the successful working of the establishment must vanish. Besides, the very circumstance that so very few have returned, out of the number discharged, is itself a decided proof, that some good has been effected.

The experience of the last year has satisfactorily proved, that a short sentence tends only to harden the heart and produce a repetition of crime ; for how can it be otherwise ? The prospect of a speedy liberation, alleviates the punishment, banishes reflection, by bringing before the mind the scenes of riot, so gratifying to their nature, and even encourages to form schemes which feed their passion, and render them, when released, a far more terrible scourge to society. If the evil habit, whether it be of drunkenness, theft or idleness, be not entirely broken, no change of heart can take place. I do not mean to say, that long sentences will entirely break the habit, and prevent a recurrence of crime, but that if good is to arise from the Penitentiary system, the object is more likely to be attained by long rather than by short sentences.

There exists a very serious evil, which ought, if possible, to be remedied—an evil which acts very unfavourably to the growth of those improved habits, which may have been acquired within the Penitentiary. It has happened frequently during the past year, that many convicts have been released, upon the expiration of their sentence, within a short time of each other, and have remained in the town. Independently of the danger to which society may be exposed from the union of these men, it is evident that temptations will arise peculiar to their situation ; the well-disposed become a prey to the designing, through fear of exposure,—and this is a very powerful instrument, when wielded by a base mind. They are induced to yield to their invitations to frequent the public house, under the hope, and with the inward feeling that no further temptation awaits them ; but when once the poisonous draft is tasted by those, who were previously addicted to intemperance, then the seeds of reformation are scattered to the winds, then the door is open for a fresh commission of crime. It moreover seems natural to convicts, upon finding themselves in possession of liberty, to celebrate their freedom from confinement in the first public-house that lies in their path. There is a possibility, if not a probability, that if one convict at a time were discharged, he might elude the temptation which might otherwise overcome him. I have seen the ill effects of this association, and have the testimony of a convict, who left the prison with a thorough determination to walk uprightly, but being waylaid by others, whose hearts were only hardened by their temporary deprivation of “liberty,” was unable, from the absence of a confirmed principle, to withstand the jeers and seductions of his companions. To this short indulgence he attributed his downfall.—I need not say, that now he is a drunkard.

As regards the duties of my office, I have endeavoured to impress upon the convicts the absolute necessity of an acknowledgment of their guilt, the justice of their punishment, as well as an undeviating conformity to the rules of the institution, laid down for their observance. Many, who at first boldly denied their guilt, have, upon reflection, made an ample confession, and acknowledged that punishment was not awarded according to their deserts.

I cannot complain in the least of the want of attention given to the word preached, or to advice offered for their consideration ; the chief cause of discouragement is, that so little profit has arisen. When in confinement, there seems to be something like inquiry about the way in which they should walk; but so soon as all restraint is laid aside, and they become masters of their own actions, then vanishes speedily, in too many instances, the pleasurable prospect of a renewed spirit. The number admitted last year was 110; 80 have been dismissed; the re-committals have been 7, three of these under very aggravated circumstances.

In the majority of cases, the commission of crime is to be assigned to the want of religious instruction in childhood; in very many instances, evil habits have been strengthened by the immoral conduct of parents and guardians; some have been thrown upon the world, without a friend to counsel, and have unfortunately fallen into company, the very hot-bed of sin; some, disliking wholesome parental restraint, have unhesitatingly yielded themselves up to licentious living; some, by indulging their lustful passions, have attempted the most brutal deeds; some, by suffering anger to overcome reason, have been driven unwittingly to imbrue their hands in the blood of their fellows. The love of change, the encouragement of seditious meetings, and the attempt to revolutionize, have increased the number of the penitents; and the very means adopted for the suppression of rebellion, have also contributed to swell the lists of the prison. The enrolment of militia has produced crime; as sedition ceased, idleness ensued, and with it entered the prolific cause of evil—drunkenness.

The discontinuance of the school, though a matter of expediency, is nevertheless a subject of regret. The numerous applications daily made for instruction, afford a gratifying proof of the deep interest which a desire for learning has excited; and indeed what greater blessing can there be than a privilege of perusing the word of God, which proclaims the plan of salvation to the sinner? What can tend so effectually to alleviate the misery of silent solitude, as the undisturbed meditation of the wonders of redemption? This is a privilege to which the veriest outcast is entitled: as spiritual knowledge is the only means whereby we may hope to reform the the immoral. If it be true that knowledge is power, what mighty moral effects may be produced, if that knowledge be communicated to the convict, which will enable him both to discern the evil which disturbs his breast, as well as discover the antidote. It is to be hoped, that circumstances will soon allow the re-opening of the school on a more secure and approved plan.

Upon the whole, the friends of morality have no cause for complaint or despondency, if the extent of reformation meet not their utmost wishes; the attempt has been made—the opportunity has been afforded the culprit to consider his ways. If he has not encouraged reflection—if he has wilfully rejected the means whereby a change might be expected, his blood then rests upon his own head. A wide and daily extending field lies before us, which will require on our part increased exertion: disappointment often discourages a further effort—but the consideration, that it is not the will of Man, but of God, which bends the stubborn heart into subjection, bids us proceed, with the assurance, that in due time we shall reap, if we faint not.

W. M. HERCHMER.

SURGEON'S REPORT.

GENTLEMEN:

I have the honour to report, that I have visited the prison, either in person, or when unavoidably absent, by the proxy of a qualified Medical Practitioner, daily, since my last annual report. Indeed, as I have noticed in my previous report to you, the disposition to “malingering” amongst the convicts is so great, that were not the visits of the Medical Officer known to be certain and daily, constant advantages would be taken of his non-attendance; and the discipline officers of the establishment would be constantly perplexed, as being liable to imposition by candidates for the sick list, who have often no other object but a temporary respite from labour. By the vigilance and discrimination of the Medical Officer of such an establishment as this, much imposition may be prevented, and a corresponding quantum of valuable labour secured for the public.

In my two former reports, I submitted at some length my views of the duties of the office which I hold; since then I have seen no cause to alter my opinions.

I hereto subjoin two returns—one of the patients treated in hospital, and another of those not so admitted. By the former it will be observed, that three deaths have taken place during the year. Their cases have been recorded, as well as those of all other hospital patients in the register, together with a post-mortem report of each.

In the latter return will be seen a list of 811 distinct applications for medical aid, by what are termed “cell” or “out” patients. In my last year’s report, I stated my reason for not admitting to hospital, any but those labouring under affections of the more serious nature. Of the diseases detailed in this return, many are of a species visible and demonstrable, while many others are of such a kind, that the assertion of the applicant is oftentimes the only evidence of their existence; and doubtless, successful deceit has frequently been practised on the Surgeon, while on the other hand, it is confessed, that more than once it has occurred, that applicants have been treated with suspicion, whose diseases in the sequel assumed a serious aspect.

I have the honour to be,

GENTLEMEN,

Your most obedient Servant,

JAMES SAMPSON,

REPORT,

OF

A. MANAHAN AND G. A. RIDLEY,

COMMISSIONERS ON THE REMOVAL OF THE PENITENTIARY FROM KINGSTON TO MARMORA.

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

THE undersigned Commissioners, appointed "to examine before the next Session of the Provincial Parliament the Iron Works, known as the MARMORA IRON WORKS, in the County of Hastings, and to ascertain upon what terms the Proprietor of those Works and the Lands attached to them would be willing to dispose of the same;" and finally, "to submit Estimates of the probable expense of transferring the Penitentiary from Kingston to Marmora, for the purpose of employing the Convicts in the manufacture of Iron there, should such a measure be decided upon by the Legislature,"—

MOST RESPECTFULLY REPORT, for your Excellency's information, their observations and opinion; in which latter the subscribing Commissioners are unanimous, as well as in their proceedings upon the subject generally :

It will be perceived, that the undersigned Commissioners have not confined their attention to the matters expressly referred to them under the Address of the House of Assembly to His Excellency Sir F. Head, of the 17th February 1837; but having inferred from that Address a desire for every information relating to the project of conducting those works by convict labor, they have, with the intent of bringing all the circumstances materially connected with a plan of its importance under the full consideration of Your Excellency and the Legislature, embraced with this Report such Estimates and Statements as tend in their opinion to that end—a deviation which the Commissioners deem excusable, considering the intense anxiety of feeling which prevails among the Mechanics of the Province, whose interests it is apprehended will be unfavourably affected by the present Penitentiary system, if continued. But although the Commissioners are actuated by a strong desire, in common with their fellow subjects in the Province, to see the question fairly and finally settled pending the coming Session of the Legislature, they disclaim any intention of entering into the question of the proper encouragement due to the Mechanics of the Province, or whether their fears of serious disadvantage from the present system be well or ill founded.

To become perfectly satisfied with the rumoured advantages of the Marmora Iron Works, in point of locality; of hydraulic powers and privileges; of quantities and qualities of Iron ore; of abundance of wood for charcoal, fuel, and other purposes; of all other minerals and materials requisite to the successful operations of Iron Foundries, with the great facilities of transporting each to the establishment; and to be able to report with certainty on these essential points, the Commissioners proceeded to Marmora, and spent a reasonable time in the minute and close examination of the subject.

The buildings, machinery, and utensils, although out of operation for some years, are now in a sound and comparatively fit state for use, should a re-organization of the entire establishment be undertaken.

The works, of which a ground view with references is herewith presented, consists of two furnaces for smelting iron ore, connected by a casting house common to both, with the wheel house and bellows house attached to each, having in the same pile of building several capacious rooms and lofts usefully occupied in the purposes of a foundry—the whole forming one solid mass of building of limestone, constructed on the face of a bank of the same material, forty feet high to the level of the bank; on this bank (an area of five acres of which is enclosed with a dry wall) three substantially framed coal houses are built, sufficient to contain each 35,000 bushels of coal; another portion of the same bank has hitherto been occupied as a coal and ore bank, where the ore has been usually roasted on log heaps, to fre it by that process from the intermixed sulphur, and upon the unoccupied part of it much if not all the charcoal required for the uses of the furnaces could be most profitably made, as will be hereafter shewn. The furnaces, as conducted formerly by private enterprise, were found capable of making four tons of iron daily, on the average; statements in which respect they are enabled to submit by politeness of the Honourable Peter McGill, the proprietor. In connexion with the furnaces, is a large and substantial stone building, containing two trip hammers and four forge fires, for the purpose of making bar iron, with two wheels which trip the hammers, and four wheels that propel the bellows, one to each fire. This factory, put in active and kept in constant operation, is capable of making five tons of bar iron per week, of all sizes and descriptions, and is now in a state requiring but moderate repair to fit it for immediate use.

On the forge bank, a clear area of two acres, is another well built coal house, of equal size with those belonging to the furnaces; attached to the forges is a convenient carpenter's shop, sufficiently capacious to accommodate five workmen, with a lathe and grinding stone impelled by water, the upper loft of this shop forming a convenient and spacious moulding and framing room for moulding, planning, and putting together large patterns and moulds—opposite, and at a convenient distance between the furnaces and forges, stands the general pattern store, and occupied besides as a casting and bar iron sale and deposit store, a good frame building, built on a solid foundation on the water's edge.

Next on the falls occur in their order, the blacksmith's forge, suited for two smiths, with benches and utensils complete—a bakery—the baker and miller's house, adjacent to a respectable grist mill, the under story of stone, the upper handsome, substantial, well finished frame work, one run of stone and a smut machine; contiguous to which is a superior saw mill, newly built, with two pit saws and a circular saw—and near thereto, on a small island, a situation admirably adapted for the purpose, is a substantial two-story building—under story stone, the upper story frame work, fitted into a most complete tannery, with vats, utensils, and bark mill complete—added to these are several very valuable dwelling houses, some of them stone—a stone store and offices—a barn, barn yard and sheds, forming in the view of the Commissioners a more complete and substantial establishment, than on its scale of magnitude can be met with in all North America.

The hydraulic powers of the Marmora Falls can be better imagined than described by the Commissioners, from the fact that they occur upon the Crow River at the foot of untold Lakes, falling into the Crow Lake, one of the deepest inland Lakes in the Provinces; and just below the junction of the Beaver River, which latter has its rise in the Ottawa or Grand River, or the waters flowing parallel therewith, and by the outlet at the Marmora Falls—these head waters on their confluence with the waters of the Rice Lake and the Otanabee River on Crow Bay, six miles below the works form the great River Trent, second only in magnitude and importance to the Saint Lawrence.

The principal dam at these falls has been designed;—allowed to fall into decay, from the circumstance of its having been originally constructed in an unfavourable place, and a new one could be constructed when the water is low at an inconsiderable expense. The other dams are available to their original usefulness, and upon altering the saw mill lately a new and very perfect one has been constructed, which, while it confines the water to the uses of the Grist and Saw Mills, has valuably enlarged the Saw Mill Pond. Suffice it then to say on this head, that the Commissioners deem the water power at Marmora abundantly equal to all the purposes of machinery and manufacture which can for centuries be established there; after minutely inspecting the falls, buildings, &c. the property and estate in the works, the Commissioners proceeded to the Ore bed immediately adjoining the establishment, and in the veins already partly developed they discovered iron ore seemingly to them of the purest and best quality, and in the same veins an admixture of red paint and yellow ochre; and in separate veins and beds in this locality those paints occur in some quantities; and the Commissioners were informed that formerly the red paint in its native state was an article of commerce, interrupted only by the careless manner after which the veins were worked for iron ore, having choked up the veins of paint. Here also occur heavy beds of purely white marble, seemingly not stratified, and quarries of excellent, if not superior Lithographic stone are found in the immediate vicinity of this ore bed.

From the great jumble of mineral substances which the careless and imperfect opening of these veins brought to the view of the Commissioners, they could not hazard an opinion as to their probable extent; but if they may judge from geological analogy, and from the appearance of the surrounding few acres, and the apparent dip of the veins under a high hill, they might state the probability that the quantities of ores and paints to be found here are considerable. Specimens of the several minerals, the marble, and the lithographic stone, found here, shall be transmitted to Your Excellency. It may be remarked, however, that the Commissioners have been informed by authority of credibility, that several hundred tons of very pure ore had been already taken from the small space which it seems was mined here for the uses of the Furnaces, and that several barrels of red paint had also been sold at 25s. per barrel, and that the heaps of rubbish now closing up the veins, and obstructing the observations of the Commissioners, was occasioned by over haste and anxiety on the part of Mr. Hayes, the former proprietor to procure quantities of the Iron Ore on several occasions of working the furnaces. Here there is a substantial, well-built bridge, constructed chiefly at the expense of the works—and a large and commodious wharf, whereat the Ores brought by the Lake Boat is landed; and there remains a stock of Ore exceeding two thousand tons on hand there now. The Commissioners next turned their attention to the Lake Ore-bed, as reported to them to be the most abundant, the freest from sulphur, and, of the Rock Ores in this region, the most easily fluxed and reduced: they accordingly proceeded there, and at the distance of four miles up the Crow Lake, they came upon a mountain, on the Lake shore, entirely composed of Iron Ore. Inasmuch as the Commissioners had never before a conception of such a quantity of Ore in one mass in such a position, their surprise was exceeding, for the first consideration that must be given to his locality is, that it is inexhaustible for all the purposes which may be for ever required for this Province. The Ores on this locality are strongly magnetic, and the portions of the most mixed up with sulphur lose that combination upon exposure. The most useful ore here is a shaley or slate ore, which occurs in great abundance, is pure and rich in quality, and found to be the best and most advantageous ore to be smelted in the Marmora Furnaces, as the Commissioners were informed. On returning down the Lake the Commissioners visited another of the many important localities of ore which surround that beautiful sheet of water, in which they were informed the ore was abundant but imbedded, and comparatively difficult of being mined. The ore here met with is of the purest kind, and best adapted to making bar-iron in the forges, far surpassing in magnetic powers any of the other ores they tested. And at the base of the hill containing this last bed, and but one mile distance from the Foundry, great quantities of meadow and bog ore are found, which it is reported may be dug and collected with great ease and at small expense; but the Commissioners cannot say, unless from uncertain rumour, whether this species of ore could be procured in such abundance as to make it an object to work it. Upon enquiry, the Commissioners find that with a boat of 50 tons, navigated by four men, one hundred and fifty tons of the ore from the head of the Lake may be easily brought to the works in two days, so readily is it quarried and put on board there.

Upon the subject of other ore beds in the locality of the Iron Works, the Commissioners have ascertained satisfactorily that the works are surrounded by mines, some of them of equal abundance as those visited, but being inland did not merit the same consideration which the Commissioners have bestowed on those more likely to be brought into immediate use; and they content themselves with the observation, that to the eastward and north-east of the establishment, there are no fewer than five abundant deposits of magnetic ore, with several large quarries of white, variegated, and black marble, with slate quarries, marl beds, and other mineral subjects; the development and introduction of which for the general uses of commerce, they doubt not, will mainly depend upon the active enterprize with which the Marmora Foundry shall be carried on, and which, when brought into market as commodities of use and ornament, will give a new impulse to the trade of the country, and keep within the Province much of the money paid to foreign account for the purchase of the like articles, often far inferior in quality to those which could be produced and supplied from these sources.

At the works, limestone quarries of a quality of stone unequalled for building, are found in profusion, in fact the falls with the prominencies over them consist of little else than limestone, and the Commissioners know of no place where that material can be found in equal quantity or superior quality; here also, adjoining the works, moulding sand, useful for all the purposes in moulding, occurs in whole acres, in fact is inexhaustible; and the surrounding country affords a sufficient supply of hardwood to furnish the works with charcoal constantly for half a century, and it may be brought by water at inconsiderable expense from above or below in rafts—provided, however, that careful fuel reservations were made, and the after growth of the timber preserved, by a due regard to the prevention of fires or plunder, a circumstance as connected with these works of vast importance.

The Commissioners next gave consideration to the estate in lands belonging to the establishment, some in fee, others under stipulations that the works shall not cease operations for a definite time, and under those stipulations reserved to their use for fuel. They find that the entire quantity of land, in fee, consists of 10,935 acres, namely 8,535 acres in the Township of Belmont, in the Newcastle District, being the per centage lands drawn by Mr. Hayes, the original proprietor, for having caused at his expense the survey of the Townships of Belmont, Methuen and Lake—and 2,400 acres in the Township of Marmora, acquired part by purchase from C. A. Hagerman, Esquire, and part by grant; with 1,800 acres of fuel reserves in the Township of Marmora, and a water lot in the Town of Belleville, as fixed contingencies, dependant only on the continued operations of the establishment—or rather forfeitable on the abandonment of the works. A list of these lots, amounting in the aggregate to 12,735 acres, is herewith submitted for Your Excellency's information, and the Commissioners have respecting them only to add, that from the improved state of several of the lots, upon many of which some most excellent farms could without much expense be maintained—from the valuable mill sites and other water privileges on others of them—from the especial selections of the lands, especially in Belmont, and the fast increasing settlement of that Township, they would deem the average price of the said lands estimated under value at one pound per acre.

In giving their opinion of the vast advantages of the locality at Marmora, of the abundant supply of all the necessary and useful materials for the manufacture of all descriptions of iron, iron ware, and steel—and for the manufacture and production of other most important branches of commerce, and the unequalled facilities of procuring and transporting them to the works—the Commissioners must not omit to adduce, the additional importance which the improvement of the navigation (in part effected and in progress) of the Trent and the inland waters of the Newcastle District, will give to this establishment, by means of which a cheap and easy communication may be had with the interior of the Province by the Rice Lake and the Cobourg Rail Road, affording the facility of transporting by a short route its wares to any part of the Upper Lakes by this route upwards—and by free access to the Bay of Quinte, its wares without transshipment may be sent by the Saint Lawrence or the Rideau Canal to Quebec; an improvement which the Commissioners deem the most encouraging to the general project, as the great difficulty of transporting its wares, and the enormous expense necessarily attending that transport in a new country, where the access road for eighteen miles had to be cut out and kept in repair for several years at the cost of the establishment—was the greatest hindrance to the successful operations of the private enterprise hitherto managing the works.

The statements which the Commissioners present herewith, serve to shew the importance of the works, if even conducted upon the moderate scale of operations upon which they have hitherto been managed, by which it appears that by the operations of only one furnace in blast for the year, and the forges making but three tons of bar iron per week, an annual profit of £13,037 18s. 6d. was estimated to accrue, after paying all the contingencies chargeable on the operations producing it, and valuing the produce at a net price under the market rates, deducting charges of transport and sale; a profit (independent of the advantage to the country of having even so much of the supply of so necessary an article of consumption as iron, furnished within ourselves) which would cover the first heavy outlay of building, and otherwise preparing for the safe-keeping and accommodation of the convicts in the event of transferring them to the establishment. But the Commissioners cannot contemplate the probability of confining the operations of an establishment like this, and of one of the manufactures in the rank of utility most essential to mankind, with the unequalled privileges and advantages which the works possess, to be confined to the making of a few hundred tons of castings and bar iron every year—while the province is annually disbursing hundreds of thousands of pounds for that commodity from abroad, which could be profitably produced at home of a far superior quality and at a diminished price. Independent especially of the great importance which the establishment would prove to the Queen's Government in the time of war, as a resource to supply all the ordnance and munitions of war, in their line, a resource contemplated with approbation by the Home Government, when to foster the Iron Works into existence, they gave a contract to Mr. Hayes for the delivery of pig iron ballast into the naval yard at Kingston, at a full remunerating price, to the extent of £13,000, sterling.

The Commissioners, after consulting the best opinions on the subject, and without entering into a minute detail of the general expense, can with some degree of certainty and confidence advance the opinion, that an establishment at Marmora, sufficiently safe for their perfect security, and commodious for all uses, for the accommodation of two hundred and fifty convicts, could be constructed at an expense not exceeding two thousand pounds, much of the labour required in which would of course be convict labour, and so far lessen the estimate; and the Commissioners are of opinion, and so report it, that the supervision and diligence required in guarding the convicts within the strict rules of penitentiary discipline and preventing their escape, would not exceed the expense incurred or required, more than the ordinary management on the present system.

This opinion, however, contemplates the construction of a surrounding wall, for the building of which all the materials are on the spot, and this wall could be constructed of the best materials, substantially, well, and sufficiently protective for all the intended purposes, at an expense not exceeding £2,000 more, leaving an area or enclosed space on three sides of upwards of fifteen acres, which could be extended if required to forty-five acres, fronted by the rapids and river—and with the temporary advantage of a company of soldiers stationed there until the erection of the wall and edifice with the other minor works of security, most of the labour required in the construction and completion of the works contemplated, might be supplied by the convicts themselves, thereby lessening very much the expenses of this estimate.

The cost of transportation of the convicts from the present Penitentiary to the Iron Works, would be contracted for at one pound each convict; and it is but reasonable to calculate that the contract price for provisions there, in the midst of a well settled and extensive agricultural country, would not exceed the charges at present made for their maintenance at Kingston. And on the whole, the Commissioners are fully of opinion, that the expenses of the surrounding wall, the building for the accommodation of the convicts to be erected, with the other improvements to be primarily made for their safe-keeping, will cost infinitely less than the structure now in progress of building as the required addition for their accommodation at Kingston; that their expenses there, would not exceed those necessarily incurred in their safe-keeping, maintenance and management at Kingston—independent of the great expenditure yet contemplated in constructing a surrounding wall of stone, to supersede the wooden wall now existing, and the filling up of wharves yet contemplated on Hatter's Bay, and not keeping in view the advantages yet to be derived to this Province from the useful employment of the convicts in the manufacture of a commodity so necessary an ingredient to our well-being—and in keeping so much of the circulating medium within it as is now disbursed to foreigners, and especially of not interfering, but on the contrary encouraging and increasing the useful employment of that most valuable class of men, the mechanics, whose immunities as honest, laborious and industrious members of society, would not by thus employing the convicts be interfered with; and, yet more desirable, the operations of the convicts themselves would be found productive of an increasing revenue, instead of being as at present a public and unprofitable charge.

In submitting this report to Your Excellency at this distant period, the undersigned Commissioners take leave to state, that it had been by them prepared, and given to their co-commissioner and Chairman, Isaac Fraser, in 1837, with the recommendation that it should be by him (assuming his consent to the principles it embraced, as certain) put in due shape, and transmitted as intended to Your Excellency's predecessor in the Government—but which this gentleman, without expressing dissent to their view, neglected to do; and when called upon lately to perfect and present the same, the undersigned were informed, that not agreeing to some of the positions taken by the undersigned, he had made a separate report, which it is understood has been presented to Your Excellency.

All which is respectfully submitted.

MONTREAL, 4th January, 1838.

SIR,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 26th ultimo, enquiring whether I am willing to sell my interest in the Marmora Iron Works, and to acquaint you, for the information of the Commission appointed by the Lieutenant Governor of Upper Canada to examine and report on the probable expense of transferring the Provincial Penitentiary from Kingston to that place,—what value I put upon them.

In reply I beg to say, that considering the measure contemplated, as one of vast consequence to the Province of Upper Canada, in which I have a very deep interest, I am disposed to sell the property, but I feel somewhat at a loss what value to put upon the whole, or any part of it; I know very well what it has cost me, but that amount I cannot expect the Commission would recommend to be given.

As I feel persuaded the Commissioners themselves will have formed correct opinions with regard to the great mineral resources, water privileges, &c. of the establishment, and its fitness for a provincial concern of the nature contemplated, I will not occupy your time by entering into any details, or offering any speculative opinions, as to increased value which may naturally be expected to arise to property in that section of the Province, and to it in particular, when the projected improvements of the Trent are completed, but at once proceed briefly to state my terms. My great object is, to sell the whole of the property of every description, including all the lands, water lot in Belleville, &c.: and I offer them for the sum of twenty-five thousand pounds payable in debentures of the Province of Upper Canada, redeemable in thirty years, bearing an interest of five per cent per annum, payable half-yearly.

I have a great aversion to a division of the interest I hold in the property, as in making what I consider a sacrifice in price, I want to get rid of the trouble of managing any portion of it; nevertheless, should the Legislature not be disposed to buy the whole, I will consent to sell the works, with all the appurtenances, together with the lands in Marmora and the water lot in Belleville, fuel reserves, &c. for the sum of twenty thousand pounds, payable in debentures of the province, redeemable in thirty years, and bearing in interest of six per cent per annum, payable half-yearly.

All circumstances considered, I hope these valuations will appear to the Commissioners reasonable and fair.

I have the honor to be, SIR,

Your very obedient Servant,

(Signed) PETER MCGILL.

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

THE undersigned Commissioner appointed in conjunction with Anthony Manahan and George Neville Ridley Esquires, by His Excellency Sir Francis Bond Head, late Lieutenant Governor of Upper Canada, under commission bearing date the 16th day of July, 1837, to carry into effect the objects expressed in an Address of the House of Assembly passed the 17th day of February, 1837, praying that His Excellency would cause an examination to be made before the next Session of the Legislature of the Iron Works known as the Marmora Iron Works, in the County of Hastings, and that His Excellency would also ascertain upon what terms the proprietors of those works and of the lands thereto attached would be willing to dispose of the same; and further that His Excellency would cause estimates to be made of the probable expense of transferring the Penitentiary from Kingston to Marmora for the purpose of employing the convicts in the manufacturing of iron there, should such a measure be decided upon by the Legislature.

In pursuance of which appointment the undersigned, in company with the above-named Commissioners, visited the Marmora Iron Works in August, 1837, and examined their state, and that of the mills, buildings, and appurtenances, and some of the principal ore beds in the vicinity with a view to report thereon at the then next Session of the Legislature; but in consequence of the disturbances which soon after agitated the Province, and the unsettled state of affairs which has since prevailed, no report on the subject has hitherto been made.

The undersigned having learned that the subject will probably be resumed by the Legislature at the ensuing Session, and being unable to join in all the views and opinions expressed in the Report of the other Commissioners, therefore begs leave to submit the following separate Report.

The Marmora Iron Works are situated at Great Fall on the Crow River, in the Township of Marmora, in the County of Hastings, about thirty miles northerly from the Town of Belleville, and about eight miles from the junction of the Crow River with the River Trent.

Without entering into minute details, the works consist of a large substantial building, partly built of stone and partly with wood, apparently in a sound condition, containing two smelting furnaces, four forge fires, two trip hammers, with all the necessary appurtenances for the manufacture of iron on an extensive scale, and are said to have produced heretofore when in full operation at the rate of four tons of Cast Iron and five tons of Bar per day. Attached to the Works are a good Grist Mill with one run of stones, a Saw Mill with one circular and two pit-saws, a Tannery, Bakery, and a Blacksmith's shop and Carpenter's shop, with tools for each, with extensive Coal Houses adjoining the works.

There is also on the premises a good mansion-house, with garden, out-houses, barn and stable, suitable for the residence of a superintendent; also a large well-furnished stone store-house, and a number of comfortable dwelling-houses, sufficient to accommodate all the workmen and labourers required at the establishment.

These works and buildings when viewed in 1837, appeared to be in a better state of repair than could have been expected, considering that most of them had been untenanted upwards of five years. The water power at Marmora is immense, and appears to be sufficient for manufacturing purposes to almost any extent that may be required.

The supply of rich iron ore is absolutely inexhaustible, and can be brought to the works by water at a very small expense.

The surrounding country is well wooded, and wood for charcoal and other purposes can be obtained to an unlimited extent, and transported to the works by water from the Crow Lake and the streams which fall into it.

In the immediate vicinity of the Iron Works are extensive quarries of excellent limestone, lithographic stone, marble, gypsum, and yellow and brown ochres, and various other mineral products.

In addition to the advantages before enumerated, the value of the establishment will be much enhanced when the projected improvement of the navigation of the Trent shall be completed, obviating the necessity of an expensive land carriage of upwards of twenty-two miles over bad roads, and facilitating the transport of its productions and supplies at a much reduced rate.

The lands held in fee and attached to the works consist of 8535, situate in the Township of Belmont, in the District of Newcastle, and 2400 acres situate in the Township of Marmora and a water lot in the Town of Belleville with 1800 acres held conditionally for fuel reserves, also situate in the Township of Marmora; amounting in all to about 12,735 acres.

The proprietor of the works, the Hon. Peter McGill, of the City of Montreal, in Lower Canada, has (as will appear by his letter hereto appended) offered to dispose of the whole property before mentioned for the sum of twenty-five thousand pounds, payable in debentures of Upper Canada, redeemable in thirty years, and bearing interest at the rate of five per cent per annum, payable half yearly.

Or for the whole property, exclusive of the lands in the Township of Belmont, the sum of twenty thousand pounds, payable in debentures, redeemable as aforesaid, but bearing interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, payable half yearly.

With reference to that part of the enquiry relative to the expense of removing the convicts from Kingston to Marmora, the subjoined statement by the Master Builder of the Penitentiary at Kingston, kindly furnished by order of the Board of Inspectors of that Institution, in which the cost of erecting one wing of a prison at Marmora, with cells for 200 convicts, is estimated at £9839 6 2, exclusive of such articles as might be taken from the Penitentiary at Kingston. The Deputy Warden, Mr. Powers, who has had long experience in the erection and management of Penitentiaries, is however of opinion that with an advance of £1000 the whole can be completed by convict labour, as will appear by his able communication hereto appended.

Taking the higher estimates, the first cost of the Iron Works and appurtenances, and the erection of the prison, will amount to £34,839 6 2, not including the repairs of the works and buildings, and various other items of expense difficult to foresee and estimate.

Without offering an opinion on the present value of the establishment, the undersigned is fully persuaded that it possesses very great facilities and advantages for the extensive manufacture of iron, and that a more eligible situation for that purpose cannot be selected in this Province; but whether the manufacturing of iron on the public account and at the public cost, in preference to leaving that, as well as all other branches of industry, open to the free competition, skill, enterprise, and capital of such individuals or companies as may wish to engage in the same, will be for the Legislature in its wisdom to decide.

The principal object in transferring the Penitentiary from Kingston to Marmora, would seem to be the employment of convict labour, so as not to interfere with the pursuits of the honest mechanics of the Province; but if this object can be equally well attained at the present establishment, it is evident that the loss of the large amount already expended on it will be avoided, and the necessity of a further large outlay would be prevented.

On a subject of so much importance, and on which so much difference of opinion prevails, the undersigned will not presume to offer his own views, but begs to refer to the able papers hereto annexed, furnished by Henry Smith, Esquire, the Warden, and Mr. Powers, the Deputy Warden, of the Penitentiary at Kingston, whose experience and successful management of that institution entitle their views and observations to particular consideration.

All which is humbly submitted.

(Signed) ISAAC FRASER.

PENITENTIARY, KINGSTON,
February 20th, 1838.

DEAR SIR,

I have been informed by the Warden of the Penitentiary (Mr. Smith) that he had received a letter from you, requesting his opinion on several interrogatories, in regard to the proposed removal of the Penitentiary from Kingston to Marmora, and that you requested my opinion also.

In regard to your first enquiry, to wit, "whether the employment of the convict in such an establishment as iron works would be consistent with the system of prison discipline now deemed best adapted to their safe custody and reformation, and if so, whether any additional officers, overseers, or guard, will be required," I beg to state that I am not much acquainted with the process of manufacturing iron. I am aware of no reason, however, why convicts may not be employed at that business consistently with good order and discipline. In order to prevent communication between the convicts while at their labour, (which is the foundation of prison discipline,) it is necessary that the shops, or places of labour, should be so arranged, that the keeper can have a clear view of each one at his work, and be sufficiently near not only to see, but to hear any attempt at conversation. If the condition of the work is such, that they will be considerably scattered, or have to work in small parties, more keepers will be required. Every squad of convicts at work, however small, will require a keeper to prevent communication, and see that they labour diligently and to the best advantage.

Should the Penitentiary remain in Kingston, much of the labour will be employed in raising stone from the quarry, which perhaps will be about the same, as respects the oversight of the men, as the digging and gathering the ore at the Iron Works. If night labour should be required in smelting, it could not be done with safety by the convicts. Perhaps a few more keepers at Marmora than at Kingston, in proportion to the number of convicts, might be necessary, but how many, or indeed whether any more, I am not sufficiently acquainted with the business to determine.

In answer to your next enquiry, "whether it is probable that suitable officers to take charge of the Penitentiary at Marmora can be obtained at the same salaries that are now paid at Kingston," I would state, that I consider the salaries now paid at Kingston too small to command the permanent services of competent officers. In order to maintain a proper system of discipline, men of character, integrity, discretion, and a talent to command, are required; and the duties are arduous. Their constant watchfulness and vigilance are indispensable through the whole day. The employment of incompetent officers is necessarily attended with a lax and inefficient discipline, and consequent injury, as regards security and reformation, and also a great pecuniary loss by neglect of diligence and misapplication of labour. I know of no reason, however, why the services of competent officers cannot be engaged as cheaply at Marmora as at Kingston. If it is a good farming country in the vicinity of Marmora, I should think the necessaries of life (and of course the supplies for the convicts) may be obtained as cheap, if not cheaper at that place.

To your third enquiry, "Can the convicts in the Penitentiary at Kingston be probably employed without injury to the mechanics of the Province?" I would remark that the subject of this question is of much importance, inasmuch as great complaints against the Penitentiary system have been made by many mechanics, which I suppose has been the occasion of the proposal to remove it to Marmora.

I do not hesitate, however, to say, that their fears and complaints are entirely groundless. In the first place, I think it is clearly evident, that in a new country like this, there can be no danger of an excess of mechanical labour. A very great proportion of nearly all kinds of articles of manufacture used in this country is imported. Five times the amount of mechanical labour that is now done in the Province would not probably be sufficient to supply the wants of the people. Mechanical labour will always command a high price, while common labour is in good demand. Common labour will always be in great demand while the population is thin, and land is cheap. Both common and mechanical labour will be in great demand, and obtain a high price in this country, probably for a century or centuries to come, or until the millions of acres of fertile land in the Canadas, the adjoining States and Territories and far west shall become cultivated and covered with a dense population. If an increase of mechanical labour is a public detriment and injury to the mechanics, whether done in a Penitentiary or elsewhere, then every good and industrious mechanic who should emigrate to this country, as well as every one who should learn a trade, and every one who should turn from vice and idleness to honest and industrious habits, would be an injury; consequently every skilful and industrious mechanic who should leave the Province, or change to habits of vice and idleness, would be a benefit.

The wealth and prosperity of a community proceed from the industry of the inhabitants, and is increased in proportion to the productiveness of the labouring classes; in the benefits of which, all classes participate. Every dollar earned by an individual is so much addition to the commonwealth. No class of society is more interested in an increase of national wealth than the mechanics, or more benefitted by it,—as a demand for their labour, and skill in articles of convenience and ornament, will increase with an increase of wealth and refinement. Whatever objections may be made against productive mechanical labour in a Penitentiary, will apply with equal force and reason against water and steam power, and against all inventions and improvements in labour saving machinery; which improvements, by facilitating manufacturing operations, and increasing the product of individual labour, thirty, fifty, or perhaps a hundred fold, notwithstanding its dense population, has made England rich.

I have been informed that a proposition was once made by some person to bring water to the Town of Kingston in pipes or an aqueduct, the Town being mostly supplied from the Lake, drawn by carters; and the proposition was objected to by some, because (they said) it would injure the carters by throwing them out of employ. The objection in the case above, is precisely the same in principle as those made by the mechanics against the Penitentiary, which principle, if universally allowed and carried into effect, would annihilate the arts and sciences, change the plough for the spade or the mattock, and bring mankind to a state of barbarism.

That a well-regulated Penitentiary, where criminals are made to support themselves by their own labour, and society is secure from their felonies, without considering their hopeful reformation (which next to the public security is the grand object of the institution,) is a great public benefit, few will deny. While the felons are there confined, society is as secure from their depredations as if they were executed. This benefit is enjoyed by the mechanics in common with the whole people, and some idea of the extent of this benefit may be had, by imagining all the inmates of the Penitentiary let loose at once upon society. Admitting that the manufacturing operations or mechanical labour done in the Province were sufficient to supply the wants of the people without importation, which is by no means the case, still, that the benefits enjoyed by every mechanic in the security of his person and property, and exemption from taxes to support the criminals in gaol, will greatly overbalance any supposed injury he may sustain by their labour in a Penitentiary, the following calculation will clearly show. It will be seen by the following statement that the amount of mechanical work done in the Penitentiary, compared with that in the country, is a fraction so small as not to be susceptible. The number of convicts now in the Penitentiary (being 160) in proportion to the number of inhabitants in the Province, is probably one to about two thousand eight hundred. As the Penitentiary has been recently established, there will undoubtedly be an increase of convicts till the number arrives to a certain proportion. Taking the number of convicts in the Penitentiaries of New England and New York in proportion to the population, as the ground of calculation, the number of convicts in this Penitentiary will be as one convict to about one thousand five hundred inhabitants. The labour of those who were mechanics when convicted could not be a subject of complaint, because their labour in the Penitentiary would have no more effect upon the interests of the mechanics, than if done out of the prison. This number, with those who are employed as cooks, waiters, shoemakers, and tailors for the use of the Penitentiary, with the labourers, invalids, sick, and the females, would amount certainly to as much as one-fourth of the whole, which would leave one convict at mechanical labour for sale to every two thousand inhabitants. It may be remarked, that the labour of a convict, not having learned a trade, would not be more than equal to that of half a thorough bred mechanic. This would make the amount of mechanical labour done in the Penitentiary only as one to four thousand inhabitants. The addition to the general stock of articles of manufacture, of the labour of one mechanic to every four thousand inhabitants would be, indeed a very small fraction, and could not be considered a just cause of complaint. By a still further calculation, however, the extent of the effect of Penitentiary manufacture on the interests of the mechanics in the Province, will be more correctly seen. It is not to be supposed that the convicts will be employed at only one kind of manufacture. Suppose there are ten different kinds carried on at the prison, for instance (enumerating the same as done at Auburn) comb-making, coopering, making joiners' tools, blacksmithing, shoe-making, tailoring, manufacturing carpets, clock-making, cabinet work, making hames and saddle trees—suppose the number employed are equal in each—this would make one convict to each sort, or one shoemaker, one tailor, and so of all the other kinds to every forty thousand inhabitants. No mechanic can be all interested, or claim to have the least shadow of complaint against work done in the Penitentiary, but that kind only belonging to his own particular trade. The shoemaker cannot say that the tailoring, coopering, cabinet work, &c. will be any injury to him, and so of all the other different branches. The case then stands thus, that the interests of the mechanics in the Province will be affected by work done in the Penitentiary, only as the labour of one mechanic to every forty thousand inhabitants, and if there are twenty different kinds of manufactures carried on, it will be only as one to eighty thousand.

The above I believe to be a fair comparative estimate of the work that will be done in the Penitentiary. What ground then can the mechanics have for complaint, especially when most of the manufactured articles used in the country are imported?

I have been informed that some mechanics have been loud in their complaints against the Penitentiary, who kept articles for sale, which they purchased and brought from the States. I have myself seen articles in use here, which were made in the Penitentiary at Auburn. Would it have been an injury to any one, had they been made in the Penitentiary here? But it is said the convicts learn trades in the Penitentiary which they may follow when they are liberated, and that would be an injury to the mechanics. In answer to this objection, it may be remarked, that many of the convicts, particularly those who have families, will return to them and to their former occupation of farming; (those who were mechanics, when convicted, as before observed, should not be taken into account.) None will set up their trade, and work to any effect, but such as have become reformed at the Penitentiary. All others will go to their old practices of fraud and theft; and if the reformation of wretched inmates of the Penitentiary, and their return to honest industry, are an injury to the interests of the mechanics, then are their interests directly opposed to the best interests of society, the principles of christian benevolence, and the humane object of the Government.

It is said, likewise, that learning the convicts a trade, which they may follow when they are set at liberty, will disgrace the honest mechanic. I cannot see why mechanics should be disgraced by the occupation at mechanical labour, of those who had been convicts, than the farmer would be disgraced, should they follow the plough. If there is any reason at all in this objection, it will apply with equal force against all labour by one who had been guilty of crime, and the divine precept, "let him that stole steal no more, but rather let him labour," would be wrong. Of all complaints made or grievances imagined, those of the mechanics against the Penitentiary are, in my opinion, the most preposterous. As well might the physician complain of any measure to preserve the public health, or tavern-keepers, distillers, and gin-shops, of efforts for the promotion of temperance.

Although the establishment of a well-regulated Penitentiary is a great public benefit as it regards the whole Province, its greatest benefit is unquestionably realized at the place where it is located. It increases the market for the supply of the convicts in rations and clothing, and materials for their manufacture, and brings a large amount of capital into the place. Whether this capital is derived from the appropriations of Government or the earnings of the convict, is immaterial as regards its advantage to the people in the vicinity. Since the Penitentiary was established at Auburn, that village has augmented its population probably five times, and increased more than ten times its wealth, and although an inland place, is now one of the most flourishing and wealthy villages in the State of New York. The location of the Penitentiary there has undoubtedly contributed greatly to its growth and prosperity.

In answer to your fourth question, "whether much inconvenience would be likely to arise in conducting the affairs of the establishment, were the gentlemen composing the board of inspectors to reside thirty miles distant," I would observe—It would be desirable that the Inspectors should reside near the Penitentiary, where each one as often as he should wish might conveniently observe and examine its management; but the necessity of their residing near would depend much on the qualification of the Warden. Should the Warden be duly qualified for his station, the residence of the Inspectors near would not be so important, and indeed without a Warden competent for the duties of his station, the Inspectors, even should they reside near, could not conduct the affairs of the Penitentiary successfully, any more than a Government could the operation of an army, or vessels of war, without skilful commanders, or the trustees of a college, academy, or common school, with incompetent instructors. In either of the cases there would eventually be a failure. Should the Inspectors reside at some distance, it would be necessary that the Warden should have the power to suspend any of the keepers or guard in case of insubordination or neglect of duty, and engage others to supply their places, until a meeting of the Board, which meeting might be quarterly, or oftener if necessary. As you have kindly invited any suggestions that might occur, I beg to make a few remarks.

I consider that Kingston is a good location for the establishment of the Penitentiary. There is a good Stone Quarry on the premises, which is inexhaustible. Stone-cutting is easily learned, so that profit from the labour of new-beginners will soon be realized. As vessels can approach the Penitentiary wharf, there will always be a ready sale for all the stone that can be manufactured; and it will undoubtedly be the most profitable work at which a great portion of the convicts can be employed. There will also be a market for all the rubble stone by the toise for the purpose of building and for lime, and the cutting chips from the shops will be good for making roads. The conveyance of the convicts from the different gaols to the Penitentiary, will be attended with less expense than if it were located in an inland place. Security from any attempt at insurrection is greater near a large town, where it is known to the convicts that assistance by an efficient force can be immediately had.

Considering the appropriations that have been expended in erecting the buildings of the Penitentiary in this place, I cannot believe that the Parliament will consent to remove it. I will remark however, that if the Government should determine to remove the convicts to Marmora, and establish the Penitentiary there, it would not be necessary to appropriate and expend a large sum in erecting a permanent stone building for their reception by hired labor, before they could be removed. The large Penitentiary at Mount Pleasant, in the State of New York, containing one thousand cells, was erected wholly by the labor of convicts.

Captain Elam Lynds who had been the Superintendent of the Penitentiary at Auburn, took one hundred convicts from that prison to Mount Pleasant; when he arrived at that place with his convicts, no preparation whatever was made, except a few loads of lumber laid down at the spot, with which the convicts made a kind of shanty or shelter for the first night; and the buildings of the Penitentiary were commenced and finished entirely by the labor of the convicts, without any surrounding wall or enclosure whatever, which shews the efficiency of the Auburn system of discipline.—And here permit me to digress, just to state, that the earnings of the convicts at that Penitentiary the year past, has amounted, if I recollect correctly, to about twenty-three thousand dollars more than the whole expense of the establishment during that period.

Before removing the convicts to Marmora, it would only be necessary to erect a frame building, (which would serve afterwards for a shop,) in which temporary cells could be made of plank, that would answer the purpose quite as well, (till a permanent stone building could be made by the convicts' labour,) and also an enclosure around the ore-bed or yard, large enough for them to work in, the same as the enclosure now at this Penitentiary. This could be done in a few weeks, after the spring opens, at an expense of not more than one thousand pounds; and then suitable stone buildings could be made by the labour of the convicts.

I owe you an apology for delaying so long to answer your enquiries. I supposed, however, it would not be very important, as Mr. Smith had written you on the subject. The duties of my office allow me very little leisure; I thought, too, that owing to the peculiarity of the times, the question would not probably come before Parliament this Session. Not having leisure to attend to it immediately, it escaped my recollection a considerable time. Understanding you had made your report, I hesitated whether to write you at all, as my communication would be too late; but I was anxious to give you my opinion on the subject of your enquiries, particularly in regard to the mechanics, whose complaints I consider most unreasonable, and I thank you for affording me the opportunity.

I am, SIR,

Your obedient Servant,

PROVINCIAL PENITENTIARY,
13th December, 1837.

SIR,

I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 1st instant, and in answer to the several queries therein contained, beg to state :

1st. That I do not conceive the employment of convicts in an Iron Work Establishment to be inconsistent with the system of Prison discipline in operation here, so far as it is necessary for the safe keeping of the convicts, provided the ground on which they are employed is surrounded with a sufficient wall or fence to prevent their escape, nor am I aware that there is a less chance of producing reformation in the convicts, by changing the description of their employment.

The great distance of the Marmora Iron Works from a thickly settled population, would necessarily require a much stronger force to keep the prisoners in proper subjection, some of the more daring convicts would no doubt be tempted to endeavor to effect their escape at any hazard, should the guard consist of no greater number than it at present does, and if, from the nature of the work to be carried on at Marmora, the prisoners should be required to be moved from one place to another, unconfined by a wall or fence, it would be necessary to employ from sixty to eighty men to guard them. I do not think that any additional officers would be required at the Marmora, over and above what are necessary here, except for the purpose of teaching the convicts the business which it is proposed shall there be carried on, unless the nature of such business requires them to be employed in small detached parties, in which case it would require the assistance of several extra keepers.

2nd. I do not think it possible to procure efficient officers to take charge of a Penitentiary at Marmora at the present small rates of pay allowed them, which are barely sufficient for their support, and when the difference of prices that must be paid for every article of necessity at Belleville, with the expense of carriage to Marmora, above what they can be procured for in Kingston, is taken into the account, it will require a very heavy advance of pay to make them equal to what they at present are here. In addition to the increased expense of the pay of the other officers, it would be necessary to engage a Chaplain and Surgeon at increased salaries, with allowance of house rent, fuel, &c. as these gentlemen would be altogether precluded from turning their attention to other sources of emolument for their support.

3rd. No doubt the prisoners in the Penitentiary can be employed with advantage to the Province, and without detriment to the interests of the mechanics. There are several occupations in which convicts can be engaged that are not followed as trades in this province, and in the event of their being employed in those mechanical branches which are usually followed in this country, the products of their labour can be so disposed of as not to cause any injury to the interests of the mechanics.

4th. I think the greatest inconvenience would arise from the residence of the Inspectors being at so great a distance as thirty miles from the Penitentiary. Circumstances may arise in which the Warden might on a sudden emergency require the assistance and direction of the Board of Inspectors, which unless promptly afforded, would possibly be of no effect, and such would certainly be the case if they resided so far from the Penitentiary.

From the description of labour, which it appears time will be required in the event of the Penitentiary being removed to Marmora, I do not think the convicts as a body are fit to be engaged in it. The working of iron and the removal of the articles made, particularly the heavier part of them, require the employment of none but men of the most robust constitutions ; and it is well known that a great proportion of the convicts are those whose constitutions are completely destroyed by intemperance and other excesses, and that they are consequently unfit for hard labour, and can therefore be put only to such work as their health and strength will allow. The expense of supporting the convicts at Marmora would be at least 50 to 75 per cent. more than it is at Kingston, as nearly all the articles required for their maintenance must be purchased at Belleville, where they could not be had on such advantageous terms as at Kingston, and the hire of carriages for their conveyance to Marmora would materially add to their cost. I do not imagine there would be any difficulty in finding gentlemen in Belleville who would be willing to accept of the office of Inspectors, provided the Penitentiary was removed to Marmora; but, when it is considered they would have to travel so many miles to and from the place of their meeting, and the time it would necessarily occupy, it would be requisite to make them some annual allowance, or at least to defray all their expenses while engaged in their official duties, which would form a considerable item in the increased expenditure of the establishment.

Another very serious expense which would be incurred in removing the Penitentiary to Marmora, would be the time devoted to the building of the prison, which if built on the present plan, would require at least eight years, so that during that time little or no benefit could be derived from the labour of the convicts at the Iron Works.

I am, SIR,

Your obedient Servant,

WARDEN.

REPORT OF TRUSTEES OF THE DISTRICT SCHOOL:

EASTERN DISTRICT—1838.

(Copy.)

THE Trustees of the District School of the Eastern District, have the honour to transmit to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, the following Report—to be laid before the Legislature at its present Session.

The Trustees have to express their regret for the inconvenience experienced by the Government, from the delay in sending in this report, and beg leave to assure His Excellency, that such inconvenience will be studiously guarded against for the future.

FIRSTLY.—State of the School.

Although the number of scholars in attendance is less than in preceding years, the Trustees are satisfied that this diminution is not attributable to any defect in the conduct of the school; but to the domestic circumstances of the Master, which induced him to diminish the number of his family boarders. The number of local scholars is equal to that of any preceding year.

SECONDLY.—Number of Scholars, with the Branches taught.

At the last examination in July last, the number of scholars in the school was thirty. The branches that came under examination were the following:

1st. GREEK—In two Classes:

First Class.—Reading in the Greek New Testament, and Dalry's Analecta Græce Minora, which they were just finishing.

Second Class.—Had just finished the verbs of the second conjugation, in Moor's Greek Grammar, by Neilson.

2nd. LATIN—In four Classes:

First Class.—In Cicero "de Sencetute"; the Æneid of Virgil; two Books of the Odes; one of the Epistles; and four of the Satyrs of Horace; and Adams' Roman Antiquities.

Second Class.—In Sallust; Virgil; and Cicero's first Speech against Cataline; and Adams' Roman Antiquities.

Third Class.—In Cornelius Nepos; Cæsar and Ovid; and Muir's Introduction to Latin Syntax.

Fourth Class.—Rudiman's Latin Rudiments; and Adams' Selectæ.

3rd. GEOMETRY—In two Classes:

First Class.—In the Eleventh and Twelfth Books of Euclid; and plain Trigonometry.

Second Class.—In the First and Second Parts of the Third Book of Euclid.

4th. ALGEBRA.—One Class in Simple Equations.

5th. ARITHMETIC.—The whole school is exercised in some branch of this study.

6th. BOOK-KEEPING.—One Class.

7th. GEOGRAPHY.—Here also the whole school is exercised in the different stages of advancement.

8th. ANCIENT AND MODERN HISTORY—In two Classes.

9th. ENGLISH READING AND GRAMMAR.—All the Junior Scholars are exercised in these branches twice a week, and some every day.

The Trustees feel themselves called upon to state, that they were perfectly satisfied at the progress made by the scholars; and thus obtained the best proof of the fidelity and ability of the Teacher.

Three boys had, at this examination, finished the course of education designed for them, preparatory to their entering on a professional course.

In conclusion, the Trustees beg to express their unqualified approbation of the Reverend Hugh Urquhart, the talented and gifted Master of the District School; and they heartily congratulate this community, in possessing such a man to preside over the education of their youth—a man who unites in himself the character of a gentlemen, scholar and christian.

The Trustees hope that they are not going out of their way, in remarking on the unseemly building occupied as the District School-House—an edifice which presents rather the appearance of an old barn, than a Seminary where the Classics and Sciences are taught; and they would humbly suggest to the Legislature the propriety of granting a sum of money, to erect a suitable building for a School-House.

All which is respectfully submitted.

GIVEN at Cornwall, this first day of February, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-nine.

 REPORT OF BOARD OF EDUCATION:

(Copy.)

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H. &amp;c. &amp;c. &amp;c.

THE Board of Education for the Eastern District, respectfully report—

That during the half year, ending 1st July, 1838, there were in this District eighty-five Common Schools, and the number of pupils taught was 2,524; and for the half year ending 31st December, 1838, there were eighty-nine Schools, containing 2,460 pupils. The Trustees report favourably of the improvement of the pupils, and appear satisfied with the conduct of the Teachers. The pupils are receiving instruction in reading, writing and arithmetic, and in some schools, latin, geography, and English grammar.

The Board has distributed for the year, to the several Teachers, the sum of nine pounds nine shillings each, for the period of twelve months, being the full amount of the allowance from Government. The books received in June last, have been distributed in equal proportions to every school, but the number of books being so small, did not allow the Board to give more than three books to each school.

The Board considers that notwithstanding the small allowance, much good is done in the District, and were the allowance to be increased, Teachers would come forward better qualified, and be induced to remain; as many at present seem to continue for a few months, as a matter of convenience, and to assist themselves in following other occupations, which greatly retards the improvement of the children.

All which is respectfully submitted.

JOSEPH ANDERSON,

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H. &amp;c. &amp;c. &amp;c.

THE undermentioned Trustees of the District School of the District of Ottawa, respectfully report—

That the annual examination of the said school was this day held at the school-house, in Longueil, in the said District.

The pupils are twenty-four in number; and although few of them are engaged in the higher branches of learning, yet their improvement and attainment in their respective studies are conspicuous and satisfactory, and bear evident testimony to the zeal and abilities of the the Teacher, Mr. Colin Gregor.

While the undersigned are ready to acknowledge that the benefits of a classical and enlarged education, which were undoubtedly expected to flow from the establishment of District Schools, have not been fully realized in the Ottawa District, they beg leave to assure Your Excellency, that the failure is to be attributed entirely to causes over which neither the Teacher nor the Trustees have any control.

The undersigned are perfectly satisfied with the character and abilities of Mr. Gregor, whose conduct, under very trying circumstances in connection with his Teachership, is deserving of warm commendation.

All which is humbly submitted.

(Signed)

GEORGE HAMILTON,

W. KEARNES.

LONGUEIL, July 31st, 1838.

ALTHOUGH not personally present at the above-mentioned examination, I fully coincide with the above Report—the particulars being within my own cognizance.

RICHARD PHILLIPS HOTHAM,

A Trustee of the Ottawa District School.

All which is humbly submitted.

 REPORT OF THE JOHNSTOWN DISTRICT SCHOOL.

(Copy.)

BROCKVILLE, February 18th, 1838.

SIR,

In consequence of the resignation of the Rev. Mr. Smith, the Trustees of the Institution elected to the vacant Mastership the Rev. Henry Caswell, M. A., a native of England, and late Professor of Hebrew and Sacred Literature, in the Episcopal Theological Seminary of Kentucky. The appointment was made August 27th, 1838, and has been confirmed by His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor. Mr. Caswell commenced his Scholastic duties in September, at which period, the number of Scholars did not exceed 7. The number has, however, regularly increased to the present time, when it amounts to 19, with a favourable prospect of much further enlargement. The average number of pupils has exceeded 10.

No free scholars have as yet presented themselves. The pupils are divided into four classes. Those in the fourth class, are instructed in English Grammar; Geography; Spelling; Arithmetic; Writing, and the Holy Scriptures. The third class pursue the study of English Grammar; Arithmetic; Geography, and Writing, with the addition of Latin, Book-keeping and History. The second class adds to the last-mentioned studies, those of Mathematics; Natural Philosophy, and Composition. The first class is engaged in the study of Greek and Latin, grammatically and analytically; Latin Exercise; Mathematics; Arithmetic; History; Geography; Natural Philosophy; English Composition, and the drawing of Maps. At present, there are three pupils in the first class; five in the second; three in the third; and eight in the fourth. Every class recites four lessons daily.

The school-house is an old frame building, very cold and inconvenient. The prosperity of the establishment, no less than the comfort of the Master and Scholars, would be materially increased by the erection of a substantial and well contrived stone Academy. Funds also are greatly needed, for the purchase of Apparatus, which is pre-eminently necessary in a country like this, where practical knowledge is so highly important to the public good.

REPORT OF TRUSTEES OF MIDLAND DISTRICT SCHOOL.

(Copy.)

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H. &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY:

We the undersigned, Trustees of the Midland District School, most respectfully beg leave to report, for the information of Your Excellency, the present state of the School under their superintendence.

Your Excellency has already been apprised of the circumstances which led to the removal of Mr. Baxter, the late Teacher, and the appointment of the Rev. William Herchmer, A. B. of Queen's College, Oxford, in his stead; on this point, therefore, the Trustees need not enlarge.

The number of Scholars in attendance is thirty-two, who are divided, according to their age, proficiency, or probable occupation in after life, into several classes, the two senior of which are instructed in the elements of the Greek and Latin languages, in the use of the Globes, in Algebra and Euclid, and in Sacred and Profane History. The other classes, according to their capabilities, are successfully assisted in the acquisition of that knowledge, both of a religious nature and secular, which is so essential to their future happiness and usefulness, as members of society and subjects of a Christian Queen.

The Trustees of the Midland District would respectfully suggest to Your Excellency's early consideration the promotion of the increased efficiency of the District Schools in the several Districts of the Province, by granting a larger endowment to a Head Master, and making provision for a second Master in each; for they are fully persuaded, that if an allowance equal to that enjoyed by any of the Junior Masters of Upper Canada College, were granted to the Head Masters of the District Schools, and the present allowance to a second Master in each, it would be attended with results highly conducive to the best interests of society. The selection of Head Master would then become an object worthy the attention of Gentlemen who now seek other professions, and they would give a tone to the District Schools which, under the present arrangement, is vain to expect, except under peculiarly favourable circumstances.

The Trustees of the Midland District School earnestly desire to call Your Excellency's immediate attention to the decayed state of the building now occupied as the District School-house. They beg to assure Your Excellency that in a year or two at most, it will be in such a ruinous state, as to be absolutely untenable; and they have no funds at their disposal, from which they could either repair the present house or erect a building more adequate to the wants of the District. They have on several occasions represented this fact to Your Excellency's predecessor in this Government, but, from various causes, without effect; they, however, trust that Your Excellency will have it in your power to prevent any longer delay; and convinced that it will be your Excellency's wish to foster and encourage, by every means in your power, the District Schools of this Province, which, even on their limited scale, have proved of incalculable benefit to the community, they leave the matter with confidence in Your Excellency's hands.

All which is respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF BOARD OF EDUCATION:

PRINCE EDWARD DISTRICT.

(Copy.)

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H. &c. &c. &c.

The Board of Education for Common Schools in the District of Prince Edward,

RESPECTFULLY REPORT—

That during the year ending 31st December, 1838, there were reported 64 schools, which have mostly been continued through the year, and the returns from the Trustees shew that 2,110 scholars have received instruction therein. The branches taught are Geography, Arithmetic, Reading, Writing, Spelling, and English Grammar; and in some schools, History. The amount of public money distributed by the Board to each Teacher, has been £10 15s. per year.

The Board is well convinced that much benefit is derived from the encouragement given to Common Schools by Government. The Trustees of the several Schools report generally that the Teachers employed conduct themselves with propriety, and the Board hope that encouragement will still be extended, for the purpose of improving and increasing Common Schools in the Province.

SIR,

I have the honour to enclose you a report of the state of the District School at this place. There is one vacancy in the Board of Trustees, made by the death of the late Elias Jones, Esquire, which has not been filled up. Allow me to recommend to that situation, the Rev. Thomas Alexander, Minister of the Church of Scotland in this place. I have not mentioned the subject to him, but I feel little doubt but that he will accept the office.

I have, &amp;c.

A. N. BETHUNE.

The Hon. JOHN MACAULAY,
&c. &c. &c.

To the Rev. A. N. BETHUNE, Chairman of the Board of Trustees for the District School.

REVEREND SIR:

The number of Scholars at present on the books, is thirty-one; the average attendance, twenty-five; all the free places are full. There are some boys learning Latin. The books used are the same as those of the Upper Canada College, as far as they can be procured; there is, however, a great difficulty in obtaining them, which difficulty is increased by the unwillingness of some parents to incur expense.

The most serious disadvantage under which we labour is the want of a proper School-house; the one formerly used for that purpose being now in such a state as to be untenable. I am inclined to believe that many more pupils would attend the District School, were it not for that reason. The hours of business, are five daily, viz. from 9  $\frac{1}{2}$  till 1  $\frac{1}{2}$ , and from 2 till 3 during winter; and in summer, from 9 till 1, and from 2 till 4.

SIR,

I have the honour to enclose you a report of the Common Schools in the District of Newcastle.

It was impossible, without a personal application, (which circumstances did not allow) to ascertain the ages of every individual Teacher, and the length of time they have been resident in the country. The desire of procuring further information on these points, has created some delay in forwarding this report, but the anxiety you have expressed for its early transmission, induces me to forward it, even in its present imperfect state.

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H. &c. &c. &c.

The Trustees of the Home District School, beg leave to report—

That the number of Scholars in attendance during the past year fluctuated, between twenty-five and seventeen; of these, sixteen had commenced the Latin Grammar, and only two had began the Greek Accidence.

The Teacher, C. N. B. Cozens, Esq. having been appointed Master of the Preparatory Form in Upper Canada College, resigned his situation as Master of the District School, on the 30th September, 1838, and has been succeeded by Mr. Crombie, a gentleman highly recommended as an experienced Teacher, and under whose management it is hoped the District School will be rendered highly efficient.

All which is respectfully submitted.

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H. &c. &c. &c.

The Board of Education for the Home District, pursuant to the Statute in such case made and provided, beg leave to report as follows:—

For the year ending 31st December, 1838, eighty-nine Common Schools have been open, in which were 2,557 scholars.

The branches of Education usually taught, are Reading, Writing, Spelling, Arithmetic, and English Grammar.

All which is respectfully submitted.

TORONTO, 8th March, 1839.

SIR,

We have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Circular of the 25th ultimo, addressed by command of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, and beg leave to state for His Excellency's information, that the Members of the Board of Education for the Home District found it necessary to apprise His Excellency Sir John Colborne, when Lieutenant Governor of this Province, as well as Sir Francis Head, that their number was incomplete; since that, Dr. Powell has departed, leaving only the two subscribers to discharge the duties of the Board.

We beg leave further to state, that the report already given in was duly considered, and received our joint approbation.

For many years, elaborate reports were sent from the Board, detailing what were believed to be the alterations necessary to render the present Common School Act efficient. In consequence of these, and like reports from other Districts, a measure for the establishment of such Schools, has been for more than six years before the Legislature, which purposes to provide remedies for the defects which are met with in the working of the present system.

This being the case, it did not appear necessary to report the same information year after year, since it is not from ignorance of the defects of the law as it now stands, or the want of ability to make it better, but from other causes, that a more efficient measure has not yet been adopted.

Nevertheless, in obedience to His Excellency's commands, as expressed in the Circular, we beg leave to amend our report, by adding two returns, including the year 1838, and stating that the School-masters, with the exception of two Americans, who have been long in the Province, are all British Subjects—that they have taken the oath of allegiance—that during the last year, the salary allowed was ten pounds each—and no books from the United States are permitted to be used in the schools.

All which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN STRACHAN.

REPORT OF LONDON DISTRICT SCHOOL.

(Copy.)

At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the London District School, held at London on the 19th day of February, 1839, the following report of the School for the past year was adopted :—

In October, 1837, the London District School was removed from Vittoria, where it had been previously held, to the Town of London, and Francis Wright, A. B., after due examination, was chosen Master.

The disturbed state of the country since the establishment of the School at London, has generally militated against its prosperity, so that it has not progressed as might reasonably have been expected.

The average number of Scholars in attendance for the past year has been 22 ;—this the Trustees consider a very small number indeed, in such a populous neighbourhood.

Of the scholars at present in attendance, ten are learning Latin, and several of them have made respectable progress in the Classics. The branches taught in the School are Greek and Latin, Mathematics, Arithmetic, Writing, Geography, and English Grammar. The boys generally, at the annual examination held on the 24th of December, 1838, answered much to the satisfaction of the Trustees present. Since the establishment of the District School in London, two scholars, who had previously been under the care of Mr. Wright, the present Master of the School, have completed their education;—one of them has been received at Osgoode Hall, and is now pursuing the study of the law; the other has been taken into the office of the Bank of Upper Canada in this town.

The hours of attendance in School, are from 9, A.M. to 3, P.M. There are four weeks of vacation in summer, and ten days at Christmas. The charges for tuition are £1 5s. £1, and 15s. per quarter, according to the branches in which the scholars are instructed.

There have been no returns made by the Trustees of Common Schools, of the children of poor parents, for gratuitous instruction; and the Board is of opinion, that under the present very defective system, the Common Schools of the country will rather repress than encourage a desire amongst the people for education of a superior description. The Trustees generally of the Common Schools, are men who do not know the value of a classical education, and the Masters chosen by these Trustees are often ignorant men, barely acquainted with the rudiments of education, and consequently jealous of any school superior to their own. In many cases too, they are foreigners, and therefore anxious to keep the people from acquiring a liberal education, which they well know would be the surest means of protecting them from the delusions practised upon them by designing men, and of strengthening their attachment to those institutions which are based upon the soundest principles of philosophy and christian truth, and which have, for ages, successfully withstood the united attacks of infidelity, false philosophy, and the restless desire of change so natural to man.

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION:

LONDON DISTRICT.

(Copy.)

LONDON, 12th February, 1838.

SIR,

THE undersigned members of the Board of Education for the London District, have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Circular of the 4th instant, and in compliance with the commands of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, beg to forward you their report of the state and condition of the Common Schools within the said District, shewing in detail, in what Townships taught, and as well as the books used, and the amount paid to each Teacher, &c.

The undersigned beg to mention that in the first column of amount of monies paid, it will be found, that in compliance with the 60th Geo. III. chap. 7, the sum of £250, granted by that Act, has been equally portioned to the several Teachers; and in the second column the amount apportioned, as directed by the 3rd Wm. IV. chap. 56, and subsequently continued: in doing which the Board supposed (upon information received) they had at their disposal a sum alike in amount as in preceding years; and having received the report of schools in the County of Norfolk, for the six months ending in December, 1837, (that being then in the District of London,) they consequently provided for all the Teachers (with some limited exception) to the amount of £824 10s. independent of per centage to the Treasurer; it was however ascertained, immediately on receipt of the Acts of the last Session of Parliament, that the Legislature had appropriated the sum of £150 to, and which was applied in, the District of Talbot, thereby leaving fourteen Teachers unpaid, who otherwise would have been provided for.

The undersigned have much gratification in reporting that a number of persons who had been Teachers in the years preceding, mostly of American birth, have left the District, and gone, it is believed, to the United States, from whence they came; and although the Board have for many years been opposed to the employment of such persons by the Trustees of Common Schools, yet it was found impossible wholly to exclude them, as by reference to the 36th Geo. III. chap. 36, it will be found that as regards being a subject, it was very easy for those desirous of employment "to take the oath of allegiance to His Majesty."

The undersigned beg to give a statement of the preceding years, shewing the number of children taught in each year, viz:—For the year ending 30th June, 1835, 103 schools; 1771 boys, and 1296 girls. Ditto, 30th June, 1836, 85 schools; 1547 boys, and 1124 girls. Ending 30th June, 1837, 96 schools; 1698 boys, and 1111 girls. Ditto, 30th June, 1838, 38 schools; 1356 boys, and 750 girls: and that great decrease has occurred in the last year, which is ascribed to the outbreak of the rebellion, and the continued disturbed state of the country.

The Board beg most respectfully to suggest, that should the Legislature take into consideration the Acts now in force to amend, and especially in providing for the augmentation of members of the Board of Education, so to afford more facilities in the examination in the different sections of Districts; also as to the mode now permitted to be adopted by the Trustees, in the employment of Teachers, which, it is thought, ought to be truly of a British character. The means of, and amount of payment, to be increased, and proportioned to the labour and service performed by the Teacher: at the same time regard being had to the branches of education taught, it would be found to produce good results.

They cannot abstain from remarking upon a system now, (as is believed) to be commonly practised by Teachers, and generally encouraged by the employers in the country, of receiving the Teachers as members or lodgers with each family, who are subscribers to the school, in succession, for the period of engagement, which in its influence and consequence has not hitherto been productive of good: and more especially, in cases where the Teachers have been Americans—a system than which none can be more mischievous in its effects: added to which, the circumstance, as will be seen by reference to the books used in the schools, that a portion of American books, particularly Geographies, have been permitted to be used, (notwithstanding the Board have the power to order the discontinuance of such) because others could not be procured in the country—nor has any provision been made by the Legislature for the formation of depots, where proper books could be had.

They beg, in conclusion, most respectfully to request, that His Excellency may be pleased to appoint the number of members to this Board, which the law now permits: as it is found difficult for the few who act, to perform the duties which it is contemplated should be fulfilled.

We have, &c.

(Signed) JOHN B. ASKIN.

The Hon. JOHN MACAULAY,

(Copy.)

SANDWICH, 22nd February, 1839.

SIR,

I have the honour to enclose to you, in compliance with His Excellency's order, a report of the Township Schools of this District. The report is not so perfect as I could have wished, though I have (there being no Clerk at present of the Board) used my utmost diligence to have it fully and correctly made out.

I have taken the liberty of enclosing with the report, a few hints in relation to the Common Schools of the District, which, if you think fit, you may lay before His Excellency; I also enclose the annual report of the District School.

I have, &amp;c.

(Signed) W. JOHNSON.

The Hon. JOHN MACAULAY.

Present State of the Common Schools of the Western District of Upper Canada.

(Copy.)

First—The situation of the School-house is not always judiciously chosen—it being situated often more for the convenience of some one influential person, than for that of the inhabitants generally of the settlement.

Second—The School-house is often a wretched log hut, or a ruinous building, altogether unfit for the purpose—especially in the winter season.

Third—In too many cases the Teachers are badly qualified for the task which they undertake; and some of them having taken up the profession more from necessity than choice, are seldom permanent—and consequently, very ineffectual Teachers.

Fourth—The remuneration which the Teachers of Common Schools receive for their services, are by no means sufficient to induce respectable, and well qualified Teachers to undertake the irksome and laborious task. The allowance made by Government seldom exceeds £17 or £18, Currency, per annum; and the small fees due by the parents of the pupils, are most generally very ill paid.

Some Hints for the Improvement of the Common Schools of the Province.

FIRST.—The School-room should be erected in a dry and healthy situation, if possible, and situated so as to suit the majority of the inhabitants of the settlement in which it is erected.

The School-room should be a neat and commodious building, sufficiently large to render it airy and healthy in the summer season, and well finished inside and out, to cause it to be comfortable in the winter. It would be advisable to have all the School-houses throughout each District uniform, at least in their external appearance.

SECONDLY.—A comfortable dwelling should be erected for the accommodation of the Teacher and his family, and three or four boarders, if necessary, contiguous to the School-room; and if ten or fifteen acres of land could be obtained, so much the better.

THIRDLY.—The Teachers throughout the Province might be divided into three classes, according to their acquirements;

The first class to be qualified to teach Classics, Mathematics, together with the minor branches.

The second, Mathematics, Book-keeping, &c.

The third to be capable of giving a good English Education.

To the first class should be given an allowance from Government of not less than £100 currency, annually.

To the second, £75.

To the third, not less than £50.

FOURTHLY.—Every Teacher, previous to receiving any appointment, should be examined, as to his literary acquirements, his political opinions, and his moral character; and after having given full satisfaction on these points, should receive from the Lieutenant Governor of the Province, a Licence, signed by His Excellency, and sealed with the Seal of the Province.

FIFTHLY.—A uniform set of Elementary Books should be compiled and published for the use of the Common Schools of the Province, and those Republican productions, that tend to poison the minds of the youth of the country, should be driven out of the Province.

A uniformity should also be adopted in relation to the other School apparatus. The pupils should be furnished by the Teacher with pens, ink and writing-books, and a quarterly charge made for the same; and the writing-books should be retained to the end of each quarter, or six months, by the Teacher—and it would thus be seen what progress the pupil has made in that branch during the period.

SIXTHLY.—A discreet and competent person should be appointed by His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, to visit the Schools in each District, eight or at least four times in the year, to examine the Scholars, and the internal economy of the School, and to report thereon annually; and this person should have a salary allowed him for his services.

REPORT OF TRUSTEES OF TORONTO HOSPITAL.

(Copy.)

TORONTO, 19th March, 1839.

SIR,

I have the honour to enclose, for the information of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, the report of the General Hospital for the year ending on the 31st December last.

I likewise transmit certain other documents, marked 7, 8, 9, with a letter from the Treasurer, on the deplorable state of the funds of the Institution; I have added some printed documents, which have already been before the Government and Legislature, that His Excellency may have the subject of the Hospital wholly before him.

I regret to state, that from these documents it appears, that notwithstanding the greatest economy, the expense of supporting the Hospital, on account of the great number of patients, has, for the last three years, averaged nearly £1,300 per annum—a sum more than double its income during the same period.

Indeed the statement of the Treasurer proves, that the funds are almost entirely exhausted; that the capital arising from the sale of lands given for its endowment, has been, of necessity, used in meeting current expenses; and that matters are so nearly at a stand, that if assistance be not promptly obtained from some quarter, the doors of the Hospital must soon be closed.

To prevent so great a calamity, (for the benefit of the Institution may be considered rather Provincial than sectional,) I see no resource but that of applying to the Legislature for relief.

Allow me, therefore, to request you to move His Excellency, in sending down the report and documents, to recommend the Hospital to the favourable consideration of the two Houses of Parliament.

I have, &c.

(Signed) JOHN STRACHAN.

The Honourable JOHN MACAULAY,

TORONTO, 16th March, 1839.

VENERABLE SIR,

I have the honour to transmit to you herewith, account in continuation of the sums received by me for sales and rents of lands appropriated in aid of the funds of the Toronto General Hospital, and of the manner in which the same have been expended; also, an account of the expenses of the Institution, from the 3rd February, 1836, to the 2nd February, 1839, and beg to acquaint you that the sum of £200 is due on account of the quarter ended at the last-mentioned period, which I have no present means of discharging. I have also to remark, that although collectively there is a considerable amount due on the sales of the Park Lots, that the payment of the instalments is very irregular and uncertain, and cannot be depended upon any longer to meet the necessary disbursements of the Institution, and maintain its effective operation; and even this resource, which has hitherto mainly contributed to its support, must necessarily, in a short period, be wholly exhausted, the land being nearly disposed of.

I have, &amp;c.

(Signed)

JAMES NATION,

TREASURER, &amp;c.

REPORT OF COMMISSIONERS,
FOR ERECTING PRESQU'ISLE LIGHT-HOUSE.

*To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H. Lieutenant Governor
of Upper Canada, Major General Commanding Her Majesty's
Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.*

THE Commissioners for superintending the erection of a Light-house at Presqu'isle Point, respectfully report :

That considering it advisable for the public interest—for the more efficient prosecution of the work in its details—for reporting on the most eligible site—furnishing the necessary plans, specifications, &c. as well as for the general superintendence of the work—they engaged the services of N. H. Baird, Esquire, Civil Engineer, and on the 29th July, 1837, in company with that gentleman, inspected the ground along the point, and on his recommendation, which met the concurrence of your Commissioners, the south-easterly point of the Peninsula, commonly known as Gibson's Point, at the entrance to Presqu'isle Harbour, was fixed upon as in all respects the site best suited for the Light-house, in which opinion they find themselves generally borne out by the Captains of vessels navigating Lake Ontario.

On the same day, your Commissioners issued advertisements for tenders, and in consequence, concluded an agreement with John McLeod, on the 15th day of October, 1837, for the execution of the whole work, including the lantern, &c. at the sum of £1050—stipulating, however, in said agreement, that £100 should be withheld until the same should be obtained from the Legislature. As your Commissioners are satisfied that the tender was a reasonable one, and that unavoidable contingent expenses would require fully that amount, your Commissioners trust that your Excellency will consider the arrangement judicious.

From the circumstance of the appropriation being made without any previous estimate of the work to be done, and the sum of £1000 assumed as sufficient for a Light-house under ordinary circumstances, there will be a deficit for accomplishing the whole, of £150.

The chief item of excess may be attributed to the increased height of the tower on this very low situation—(the foundation of the tower being below the level of the water of the lake)—so as to shew the light as much as possible over the extreme western point of Presqu'isle Peninsula, together with the superior description of work which your Commissioners thought advisable to adopt, and which, from the accompanying report of the Engineer, appears to have been so far done to satisfaction, with some slight exceptions, which your Commissioners will see remedied before finally taken off the Contractor's hands.

The work has not progressed to completion so rapidly as your Commissioners could have wished—the term for completion of Contract being the 1st November, 1838.

By the Engineer's report, there still remains to be completed, "the railing to the stairs—two coats of plastering—glazing the sashes—replacing the main door with one in terms of specification—some re-pointing, and levelling off properly around the building, together with the completion of the clearing and burning off the quantity of land required per agreement—and the lantern, which the Contractor has pledged himself to have immediately completed."

From the accompanying progress statement, it appears that the entire cost of the Light-house, including contingent expenses, will amount, per Engineer's statement, as reported prior to the tenders being received, to £1150, leaving £150 to be provided—which, your Commissioners trust, that your Excellency will recommend to the favourable consideration of the Legislature.

Besides the mere erection of the building, lantern, &c. which will be accomplished for the sum of £1150, as above stated, it occurs to your Commissioners, that there are several matters which ought to be provided for—Light-house utensils, or furniture: such as butts for holding a stock of oil, oil-cans, fillers, &c. ; as also the consideration of a house for the Keeper, which can be more conveniently done at present than at a future period.

Your Commissioners would also suggest, whether a lightning-rod should not be attached to the tower: also a large bell, to be rung during fogs.

Your Commissioners also beg to suggest, whether it would not be advisable to reserve a quantity of land in the immediate vicinity of the Light-house, for the use of the Keeper, in providing fire-wood, &c.

Your Commissioners, in closing their report, beg to state that they have been desirous of adhering strictly to the obligations of the Statute, requiring that their report should be furnished by the 1st January last, but have been prevented doing so by unavoidable circumstances.

All which is respectfully submitted.

DONALD CAMPBELL.

B. McMAHON.

THOMAS REID.

BRIGHTON, 8th April, 1839.

To the Commissioners for the erection of a Light-house at Presqu'isle.

GENTLEMEN:

IN compliance with your desire, that I should inspect and report on the progress of the work on the erection of the Presqu'isle Light-house, I proceeded on the 5th instant, accompanied by Donald Campbell, Esquire, one of your number, to the necessary inspection, the result of which I beg to submit for your consideration.

The masonry of the building is completed in a very substantial and workmanlike manner, with some slight deviations from the original design, involving no extra charge on the part of the contractor, and on the whole probably an improvement on the original. The masonry and pointing have stood the severe winter better than I expected; the wood work and plastering, I regret to state, have not been so satisfactorily done, owing chiefly to the indisposition of the contractor—the former, in several instances, at variance with the specification, and which must be remedied on the contractor resuming operations.

The defects I severally pointed out to Mr. Campbell, on the spot. The enlargement of the well-holes in the several floors, to allow a free passage, will also have to be attended to.

To complete the building, there still remains to be done the railing of the stairs—two coats of plastering—glazing the sashes—replacing the main door with one in terms of specification—some re-pointing, and levelling-off properly around the building, together with the completion of the clearing and burning-off the quantity of land required per agreement.

The lantern, the contractor has pledged himself to have immediately completed; but in the mean time, from circumstances which have come to my knowledge, I should recommend Mr. McLeod being written to, requesting him to inform your Board of the precise state of the progress of the lantern, with the dimensions thereof, as I should not advise your admitting any thing short of the dimensions shewn on the plan; this step I should recommend as necessary to ensure the completion of a work so much required. The contractor has already considerably over-run the period allowed for completion, and if some steps be not taken to hurry him on, a longer time may elapse than your Board at present may consider advisable to allow.

I have the honour to be,

GENTLEMEN,

Your most obedient Servant,

FOR ERECTING A LIGHT-HOUSE AT PORT COLBORNE.

HAMILTON, 3rd January, 1839.

To His Excellency Major General SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K.C.H. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

THE undersigned Commissioners for erecting a Light-house at Port Colborne, have the honour to report: that in the designs for the improvement of that Harbour, the Light-house is placed on the east pier, which not being yet built, they have taken no steps towards the construction of the before-mentioned work, which cannot be commenced until the eastern pier head shall have been completed.

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, Knight Commander of the Royal Hanoverian Guelphic Order, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major General Commanding Her Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

The Commissioners appointed under authority of the Provincial Statute, 7th Wm. IV. chap. 95, granting the sum of five hundred pounds, for the erection of a Light-house at Oakville, in the Gore District—

MOST RESPECTFULLY BEG LEAVE TO REPORT :

The Commissioners advised with several of the Masters of Vessels, respecting the proper place to erect the Light-house, and after due consideration, the end of the Pier was decided upon. To make the foundation sufficient, it was found necessary to sink three additional cribs.

The foundation was commenced on the 22nd of August, 1837, and with the Light-house, was completed on the 1st day of November, 1838, and has, since that time, been regularly lighted.

The Commissioners beg leave to refer your Excellency to the enclosed statement of moneys disbursed by them.

Of the sum of five hundred pounds, appropriated for the erection of said Light-house, a balance of three hundred and fifty-two pounds, seven pence half-penny, was wanting to complete, which sum has been paid by William Chisholm, Esq. one of the Commissioners.

The Commissioners would respectfully beg leave to state, that having thus closed their proceedings, are of opinion, that the Light-house at Oakville is inferior to none on Lake Ontario, and trust that the duty assigned to them has been discharged in a manner that may be found satisfactory.

All which they have the honour to submit with great deference and respect.

REPORT OF MR. SECRETARY MACAULAY, ON NEW ARRANGEMENT OF THE OFFICES OF THE PRIVATE AND PROVINCIAL SECRETARIES.

*To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K.C.H. Lieutenant Governor
of Upper Canada, Major General Commanding Her Majesty's
Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.*

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY:

IN obedience to your Excellency's commands, I have inquired, as carefully as circumstances would admit, into the best method of rendering the Offices of the Private and the Provincial Secretary more efficient than they now are, for the discharge of public business, in the present circumstances of the country, and have the honour, most respectfully, to submit my views upon this subject, for your Excellency's consideration, in the following—

MEMORANDUM:

It is proposed by your Excellency, to re-organize the Offices of Provincial and Private Secretary, and with that view to restore to the former Office much of the business which is understood to have belonged to it at an early period of the Government, and to assimilate it to the department of a Colonial or Civil Secretary, existing in most of the other Colonies of the Empire.

At present the duties of the Provincial Secretary are limited to the engrossing and recording of all Patents for Land, Commissions, Proclamations, &c.—and the care and use of the Great Seal of the Province; the preparation of the "Blue Book"; the transcribing of the Acts of Parliament for the Secretary of State, and for the Printer; the preparing and recording of Patents for Inventions, &c. &c.—all of which will be found particularly stated in a paper marked A, attached hereto.

These duties are performed by the Principal, with the aid of a senior Clerk, and two junior Clerks; and though they of course require much method, attention and accuracy, they never demand any extraordinary intellectual effort.

The duties of the Private Secretary, as they now exist, are various and extensive, comprehending the general correspondence of the Lieutenant Governor; the receipt and acknowledgment of Addresses, Petitions, Memorials, and Applications for Office, &c.; the transmission of Messages and Public Documents to the Legislature; the reference of Petitions, &c. to the Public Departments, to be reported on, and afterwards considered by the Executive Council; the preparation and issue of Marriage, Land Surveying, Medical and other Licences; and the various Commissions, and other Documents, to which the Governor's Office Seal (which is in the Private Secretary's custody) is applied; the record of applications for Office, and of recommendations for Magisterial and other appointments; the supervision of the Court of Requests, according to the divisions from time to time fixed by the Magistrates of the several Districts, and now amounting in number to 173, including the inquiry into complaints preferred against the said Courts, and the fitness of persons to be selected as Commissioners in all parts of the Province (their number at the present time exceeding 1000); the preparation in duplicate, and the recording of warrants for the issue of money from the several funds applicable to the Public Service; the submission of all Commissions, Warrants, Patents, &c. for the signature of the Lieutenant Governor; and finally, the multifarious correspondence obviously resulting from these duties, which he must himself personally carry on.

To be efficiently discharged, these duties must of course continually demand the closest application on the part of the Principal, and press severely upon his mental energies. His regular assistants consist of a chief Clerk, a second Clerk, and two junior Clerks, as stated in Appendix B—whose united labours, however, proved quite inadequate to the extraordinary and urgent calls of the public service during the last year; and it accordingly became necessary to employ occasional writers on every emergency, when they were found indispensable to the proper dispatch of the public business.

Such being the nature and extent of the duties at present performed at the two Offices, the question arises, what portion of the business of the Private Secretary may, with the greatest advantage, be transferred to the Office of the Provincial Secretary?

Upon this point, the answer which, on the first view of the subject, presents itself is, that the extensive correspondence, which the community has been in the habit, and appears desirous, of addressing direct to the Lieutenant Governor; and His Excellency's Despatches to Her Majesty's Ministers; the Governors of other Provinces, and the Minister at Washington; the issuing of Licences and Certificates, and the custody of the Governor's Office Seal, should continue to be transacted by the Private Secretary, and that the rest of the business should be transferred to the Provincial Secretary. This appears an obvious and natural division of the duties—a division which is, indeed, so marked and distinctive, as very materially to diminish, if not wholly prevent, the chances of collision or of difference between the two Secretaries. But though I would look upon this as the most convenient arrangement that could be made for the actual transaction of business, I am aware that there are other considerations, besides mere convenience, to be regarded, of such weight and importance, as to render a deviation from it, to a certain degree, expedient.

In no point connected with the administration of public affairs is the conduct of the Government more closely scrutinized, than in the dispensation of the Royal patronage, and the appointment to office in the Province.

The aspirants to office, in particular, are very jealous respecting the manner in which the mind of the Lieutenant Governor may be swayed in the distribution of appointments, and are prone to attribute to the influence of party, or of race, or of family, decisions which may, in fact, result from the free exercise of the Lieutenant Governor's own unbiassed judgment and conscientious sense of duty.

Under these circumstances, it appears proper, that the entire branch of duty connected with appointments to office, with the exception hereafter noticed, should continue to be conducted by the Private Secretary for the time being, and not to be transferred to the Office of the Provincial Secretary, who is a permanent public functionary, and must necessarily become, more or less, connected with the parties in the Province. Assuming, therefore, that the appointment-books, and the correspondence relating thereto, will be allowed, to remain with the Private Secretary, I proceed to suggest a plan for the efficient organization of the Offices.

First.—With respect to the Private Secretary's Office, which should, perhaps, rather be called the Lieutenant Governor's Office.

The business of this Office resolves itself into two branches or departments, viz:—one, embracing the Governor's correspondence; and the other, the correspondence of the Secretary—and in order to carry it on, the Principal will require three Clerks or Assistants.

1st. For the Department relating to his own correspondence, one Clerk will be required to receive, acknowledge, docket, enter and file, all applications for office; assist in the preparation and issue of Licences and Certificates; affix the Governor's office Seal to documents sent from the Provincial Secretary's Office, and attend to other minor duties.

2nd. For the Department relating to the Lieutenant Governor's correspondence—one chief Clerk will be required, capable of drafting papers with skill and readiness: and one junior Clerk to transcribe from the drafts, and enter from them into the books; prepare duplicates of Despatches, and enclosures for them; make up the bags of Despatches; docket the Despatches received from the Secretary of State, the Governor General, &c. and enter a minute thereof in the docket-book.

This establishment of Clerks, it is true, will not be sufficient for the performance of the whole work of the Office; but it is, perhaps, all that should, at present, be proposed as a permanent one.

On all occasions, when voluminous enclosures are to be transmitted to the Secretary of State, or an unusual press occurs in the preparation of Despatches or of Documents for the Legislature, extraordinary aid, according to the existing practice, can readily be provided.

This arrangement would, perhaps, be the most economical that could be devised, while it would, at the same time, be efficient. Future experience would determine, from the permanent increase of business, when it might become advisable to make additions to the establishment.

Second.—With respect to the office of Provincial Secretary. The nature and extent of the duties which will devolve on this Officer, render it most important that they should be carefully systematized, and distributed into branches or departments, under superior Clerks, each responsible to the Principal for his particular charge.

First branch or department, to be in charge of a Chief, or Senior Clerk, upon whom should devolve the general superintendence of the whole office, upon occasions when the Principal, from illness or other causes, might be absent. His Assistants should consist of two Junior Clerks, in charge of the duties at present performed by the third and fourth Clerks in the Private Secretary's office, viz :—One, docketing and recording all memorials, petitions, &c. referred to the several Public Departments; and the other entering, and sometimes copying, the Secretary's letters—docketing and filing the letters received, &c. The receipt and custody of reports, and other documents to be laid before the Legislature; the examination and reference of applications for pensions; remission of fines; sentences of imprisonment, &c.; together with the communication to individuals or public bodies, of the answers conveyed in the Despatches from the Colonial Office, to applications referred to Her Majesty's Government—form the proper duties of the Chief Clerk of this department of the office business.

Second branch or department to be in the charge of one individual, with the rank and allowances of a Chief Clerk. The duty, (with the exception of the appointment-books) will be nearly the same as that now performed by the second Clerk in the Private Secretary's office. He should be charged with the keeping of all money-warrant books, and the preparation of all money-warrants. He should also prepare all Licences and Commissions to which the Governor's office-seal is usually affixed; and superintend the execution, by occasional writers, of extra work, required as enclosures for the Despatches, or for the information of the two branches of the Legislature.

Though it may be expedient, for the reasons stated in the former part of this Memorandum, to retain the appointment-books in the Governor's office, I am inclined to think, nevertheless, that to this Clerk should be assigned the whole duties connected with the Courts of Requests. This is the lowest class of appointments made by the Governor, as well in respect of rank as of emolument, and it differs from others in this particular, viz —that continual complaints are made against the conduct of Commissioners in those Courts, which occasion infinite trouble, in references and inquiries necessary to determine whether the parties professing to be aggrieved have, in point of fact, suffered by reason of the incompetence or corruption of the members of the Court—to which extent only the Government may reasonably be called on to interfere, because it is obviously bound to remove from judicial station, all persons who are shewn to be incompetent or corrupt. This duty of making inquiries into such cases, belongs to the Provincial Secretary, and on that ground it would appear most conducive to the public service, that the management of the business relating to the Courts of Requests should be exclusively under his directions. The information he will necessarily collect in the course of his investigations into the conduct of the Commissioners in the various divisions, will be of the greatest use, as often as the appointment of Commissioners becomes the subject of consideration by the Lieutenant Governor. This department would thus embrace a wide field, but it is competent, in ordinary circumstances, for one individual to discharge its duties. To do this satisfactorily, however, the Clerk in charge of it must be, to a considerable extent, acquainted with accounts, and financial matters, and have a general knowledge of the business and condition of the country. I am not prepared to say that a necessity may not arise for granting an Assistant to this superior Clerk, but at present I am anxious to limit the establishment to the lowest possible scale consistent with its efficiency.

Third branch or department.—The duties now performed at the Private Secretary's office, should be assigned to this department, with the same number of Clerks.

Such an organization of the offices would, as it appears to me, ensure the prompt and satisfactory performance of the public business, in a methodical and regular manner.

I have merely adverted, in a general way, to the arrangements which appear desirable. The Principals will hereafter, of course, be enabled so to modify them as to suit their own views of efficiency, and to correspond with the occasional pressure of duty in the several departments.

One duty to which I have not yet adverted, might be assigned to a particular Clerk, or be distributed among the departments,—I mean the duty of endorsing on each paper a note of its purport, in a summary way, for the more ready information of the Lieutenant Governor, on its being submitted by the Secretary.

I now come to the consideration of the expense of the offices under the new arrangement, which it will be seen, I have proposed to keep within the limit of the expenses incurred by the existing establishment in former years, although public business has increased in a most extraordinary manner, as the statement which I have the honour of annexing, marked C, will clearly explain.

First—With respect to the expense of the Private Secretary's office.

In the annual grant, the sum of £208 is allowed as the salary of the Private Secretary. The fees on Marriage, Medical, and Surveyor's Licences, Certificates, Commissions, and all Instruments, &c. under the Seal of the Governor's office, yield at present, I am persuaded, upwards of £900 per annum, and they appear to be rapidly increasing. Perhaps the total income of the Private Secretary, for the current year, may safely be estimated at £1,200.

On the transfer of a great proportion of his present duties to another office, this income would seem large, and therefore he might not unreasonably be called upon to relieve the Province from the burden of salaries for his Chief Assistant Clerk, and one of the Junior Clerks, by allowing them suitable compensation from the fee fund. Thus, if there be charged in the estimate for the Civil expenses of the Government, the usual allowance of £208 currency, to the Private Secretary, and £175 for one Junior Clerk, there will remain to be provided for by the Private Secretary, £350 to the Assistant Secretary or Chief Clerk, and £175 for one Junior Clerk—making together the sum of £525, which deducted from his total receipts of £1,200 per annum, would leave him a net salary of nearly £700.

I have proposed allowing £350 to the Assistant Secretary, which exceeds, by £50 the usual salary of Chief Clerks, because he will be continually liable to the performance of night-work.

Second—With respect to the expense of the Provincial Secretary's office.—The whole burden of this office must fall upon the public chest, for its fees are inconsiderable.

It is my impression that each superior Clerk in charge of a branch or division of the business, should receive £300 per annum, which is the present allowance to all the Chief Clerks in the public offices.

If any distinction were made among them, it should be in favour of the Superior Clerk of department No. 1, who might be allowed an addition of £50, especially if, besides the circumstance of an extensive sphere of duty in the most important office under the Government, he should have any claim to further consideration, on the ground of personal merit or long service. All the other Clerks should receive salaries of £175 each.

The late Provincial Secretary received, in the latter part of his life, a salary of £300 per annum, and the sum of £636 11s. 4d. as a commuted allowance for fees—together, amounting to £936 11s. 4d. sterling; on his death, a salary was established for this office, of £600 sterling, and the fees which are received do not exceed £20 per annum.

In consequence of the greatly increased duties proposed to be assigned to this Officer, it would seem but reasonable that his salary should be correspondingly augmented; but without further remark upon this point, I respectfully submit a—

Salary to Clerk in charged of papers not to exceed £73 19s. 3d.

From this statement it will be seen, that a new organization of the Offices may be effected, upon a plan to render them infinitely more effective than they now are, without any addition to the charges on the public Revenue, by a reduction of £373 19s. 3d. from the salary of the Provincial Secretary, and by the transfer of £525 per annum, from the emoluments of the Private Secretary, to the payment of the salaries of the Clerks.

It will be remarked, that I have omitted the class of Clerks, on salaries of £200. I have done this, because I do not consider that it should be continued under an arrangement of the business into departments or branches, by which the labour of the junior Clerks is equalized; at the same time, it is a proper subject for consideration, whether at the expiration of a certain fixed term of service, junior Clerks should not, upon principles of sound policy, be allowed a reasonable increase of salary.

When it is observed, that the gentleman filling the principal situation in the Private Secretary's Office, has occupied it for the long space of twenty-nine years, it is obvious, that the hope of preferment, by succession, must be very slender; and as it is, on every consideration, proper that no subordinate station of the public service should be without hope, I respectfully give it as my opinion, that the junior Clerks of this Department, after — years service, should be entitled to an increase of their salaries.

Indeed a scale might be framed, commencing with £60 or £70 per annum, for Youths on their first admission into the office, and gradually increasing, at stated periods, until it reached the maximum allowance to be granted for any length of service. Upon a principle of this kind, I believe, the Clerks in the Post Office and in other Civil Departments in England, are compensated.

In the Governor's Office, as well as in that of the Provincial Secretary, the charge of the Stationery should be specially assigned to a Clerk, who should superintend occasional small issues for the current service, from the Deposit-room, of which he should keep the key.

Though I have no reason to question the integrity of the Messenger to whom the duty is at present confided, at the Governor's Office, I think it is not fit that supplies of such magnitude in the aggregate, as are now annually required, should be committed to his charge. This, it is true, is a digression, respecting a matter of mere detail; but it is a matter of some importance, and for that reason, deserves to be noticed on the present occasion.

With respect to the Stationery annually consumed for public uses in this Province, I am strongly impressed with the belief, that supplies might be obtained of a better quality than is now in use, and on far more advantageous terms than are now had, if the whole quantity required were annually imported by the authority of the Government, and then distributed among the Public Officers, under such regulations as would prevent imposition and ensure frugality.

To return to the proposed estimate, it is my impression, that the Legislature cannot but approve of it, when they become fully sensible of its advantages, and of the necessity which the growing urgency and extent of the public business has created, for a more efficient and systematic mode of conducting it. It is, indeed, understood, that the Assembly has often shewn a disposition to provide generously for the Clerks in the Public Offices, and to grant them salaries corresponding to the unavoidable expenses of living in a place where the necessities of life are far dearer than in any other part of the Province.

It may be proper here to remark, that the fee upon the Seal attached to Certificates, originally established at 5s. was needlessly, as I understand, and without previously taking the pleasure of the then Lieutenant-Governor, reduced, by the Private Secretary, a few years since, to 2s. 6d. It might, with great propriety, be again raised to the original amount.

For the purpose of testing the propriety and value of the foregoing suggestions, it would be desirable to inspect the account of disbursements, for contingencies actually and unavoidably incurred, in conducting the public business at the Private Secretary's Office, during the year 1838.

The sum voted by the Legislature, in conformity to the Estimate, was £1,110.

The amount of the actual expenses for that year, is found to be £2,420 0s. 9d. which may be thus classified:—

Mr. Moore, Agent at New-York, Correspondence, &c.....	42	15	0
Postage, .....	979	17	3
For Stationery and Printing, .....	284	6	0
Candles and Oil,.....	45	12	0
Fire-wood,.....	33	0	6
Sundry small expenses, including repairs of the Office,.....	107	0	0
Extra Work in copying, inclusive of salary to an extra Clerk,.....	772	10	0

That the contingent expenses should, in the course of one year, be considerably more than doubled, is a fact well calculated to attract the particular attention of the Government and the Legislature.

It may be proper to observe, with respect to it, that the political circumstances of the Province during the past year, were of an unprecedented character, and that the correspondence of the Government with the Colonial Office, the Governor-in-Chief, and the Envoy Extraordinary at Washington, was voluminous and extensive, far, very far, beyond all former experience. A bare reference to the accounts for Stationery, Candles, and the work of extra writers, amply proves this.

Although it may be hoped that the country will not be in future exposed to agitations, similar to those by which it has been recently afflicted, I cannot allow myself to fancy that the expenses of the Government, in conducting the business now concentrated in the Private Secretary's office, will immediately sink to a point approaching the average of former years.

It will not escape notice, that a sum exceeding the salaries of four junior Clerks, has been disbursed during the year, for the services of extra writers, and this circumstance may justify an inquiry, whether it might not be advisable to increase the regular establishment of Clerks, rather than continue the practice of employing occasional writers to so great an extent.

Upon this point I would observe, that there would be much gained, as respects convenience and method, by adding to the number of permanent Clerks, rather than hiring occasional writers, provided the Government were satisfied that there would be a corresponding increase of a permanent character in the business of the office.

In coming to any conclusion upon this subject, it should however be recollected, that extra writing is not required in regular daily course, but generally occurs after uncertain intervals, and then in such amount, that the additional permanent Clerks alone, could not perform it within the time limited by the exigency of the public service, and therefore the resort to occasional aid would still be requisite to a certain extent.

It may also be submitted, on a view of the whole case, whether in the actual circumstances of the Province, and the difficulty of estimating the degree of future pressure on the public Departments, it would not be better to defer, for the current year, making, on such grounds, any permanent addition to the strength of the office, and to continue, as at present, to procure temporary aid, until a calculation could be made with a satisfactory degree of precision, upon a more settled state of things.

The regular office hours are from ten to three o'clock, and it is presumed that they will not be altered in the Government Office, as they are such as prevail in other departments, and at Banks, and other public institutions, where they are found sufficient for public convenience, and appear to require no alteration. As a general rule it might be laid down, that no arrears of ordinary business should be allowed to accumulate in a public office; and with this in view the principal should be held responsible, that when such a pressure occurs, as may cause business of an ordinary character to accumulate in arrear, his Clerks should continue in the office, after the usual time for closing it, one hour daily, or more if requisite, until the work in arrear should be fully disposed of.

When business of an extraordinary nature occurs, requiring attention after the proper office hours, it might perhaps be considered advisable to allow, in future, a general gratuity to the Clerks, at the end of each year, in which they wrought after regular hours, and at night. To this plan however it may be objected, that it offers no stimulus to diligence equal to that of the present system, by which night-work is paid for by the hour, at a rate equivalent to an hour of labour performed within the usual office hours.

Before I conclude this paper, I beg permission to advert to the proper accommodation of the Departments, as it is a subject that, on the present occasion, ought not to be overlooked. The building now occupied by the Private Secretary, is much too small for its present purposes. Indeed it has recently been found necessary to convert the room originally appropriated as a waiting-room, for the accommodation of the public, into a deposit-room for the public correspondence, and for the use of the Clerks in charge of it; and it frequently distresses me to find gentlemen of the first respectability waiting in the messenger's room, until I can attend to their business in its regular course.

This building would, however, amply accommodate the Private Secretary, under the new arrangement.

With regard to the accommodation of the Provincial Secretary, some difficulty will be found to exist. The rooms which have hitherto been open to him in the eastern division of the public buildings, are obviously insufficient for his Clerks, under the new arrangement, which would require four rooms for himself, and the three distinct branches into which it is proposed to distribute the subordinate duties of his office, besides a waiting-room for the public, a messenger's room, and a stationery or store-room.

But independently of this difficulty, there is a serious objection, arising from the want of safety in the east wing, as a depository for the important records now contained in the office of the Provincial Secretary.

It is evident, that very considerable risk of loss or damage arises from exposure to fire. The rooms now occupied as the Secretary's Office, in the easternmost part of the public buildings, are not vaulted, or in any manner protected from fire, if it should accidentally break out in any other part of the eastern wing; and it is possible that if a fire broke out there in the night time, no means might be at hand for rescuing the books and papers.

On this account it is to be regretted, that when the present range of public offices was constructed, a building separate from all others, with fire-proof rooms, had not been provided for the safe keeping of the Secretary's records. Under present circumstances, the risk is certainly very considerable, and in order to lessen the inconvenience which the destruction of the Secretary's Office would occasion, it occurs to me, that if no other or better arrangement should take place, it would be proper to cause a duplicate of the volumes containing the index, to be made out and deposited in some other public building:

This would not be a work of very great time or labour, but might probably be accomplished by the present Clerks, during the intervals, when the ordinary current business was not very pressing.

In order to obviate all risk, and promote general convenience, I at one time thought it practicable to build a range of apartments for the Provincial Secretary, in connection with the Private Secretary's Office, but on examination I found that it could not be done, without occasioning an unsightly and unpleasant exposure of wood-yards and out-houses in front of Government House.

It has since occurred to me, that on the lot purchased from Mr. Hagerman, near Government House, there was ample space for building, in a most convenient position a Provincial Secretary's Office, with tin roof and fire-proof vaults, to which might be added a chamber for the Executive Council, and rooms for the Clerks of the Executive Council Office.

The expense of such a building is, doubtless, a consideration not to be overlooked in the present state of the public finances. Nevertheless, the security of invaluable public records, continually exposed to great risk of destruction by fire, in the offices now occupied by the Executive Council and the Provincial Secretary, is an object deserving the immediate and serious attention of the Government and the Legislature.

Connected with this subject, I have yet an observation to submit, upon the necessity of providing convenient depositories for the despatches, reports, addresses, letters and other public documents, which, after being docketed, should be put away in such a methodical manner, that reference might at any time be had to them with ease and certainty.

At present, I regret to say that there are very great defects in the system of filing away papers in the Private Secretary's Office, owing to which cause, and the want of proper accommodation, important papers are frequently mislaid, and much inconvenience and loss of time to the Clerks, as well as delay in the transaction of the public business, are thus unavoidably incurred.

Nothing seems more urgently to require attention, than this branch of the duties of the office, and yet while the present insufficiency of the building exists, the evil cannot be entirely obviated.

Although I have been under the necessity of preparing this paper, while subjected to an unremitting pressure of public business, I yet venture to hope, that it will be found to have a correct bearing on the several points which, in the course of this investigation, have commanded my attention.

I have, at least, endeavoured to make my suggestions comport equally with economy and the efficient discharge of the duties of the Private and Provincial Secretary's Offices, and when it is contemplated how much those offices come in contact with the interest, feelings and wishes, and even with the prejudices and passions of the community at large, too much pains cannot be taken to render them able and effective departments of the public service, where all applications may be received and considered willingly, courteously, judiciously and promptly, and such of them as require the report of the several other branches of the service, despatched without delay, through their proper channels.

It cannot be denied, that the want of due attention in these important particulars, on the part of persons holding official stations, might justly cause much dissatisfaction.

All which is respectfully submitted.

Should the Books of Registry, by any accident, be destroyed, the Indexes (which, from their size, could be easily secured) would define the title of the Grantees to their several lots of Land. From the year 1821, they are very clear; but previous to that period, it is requisite to refer to three Books, before the necessary intelligence can be furnished to individuals making searches. It would be for public convenience, if they were made up to 1821; and if completed in duplicate, one copy could be deposited in a separate place—and would thus form a clue to the title of Grantees from the Crown, if the office and originals were destroyed by accident, or in case of a war.

GENERAL REMARKS, CONNECTED WITH THE ABOVE.

The duties of the PROVINCIAL SECRETARY AND REGISTRAR, consist in engrossing Grants of Land from the Crown, of every description, in affixing the GREAT SEAL of the Province (of which he is the Guardian,) thereto, and registering the same, previous to the delivery to the respective Grantees, or their Agents: in the latter case demanding a written authority, which is filed for reference. Every Commission, Proclamation, Writ of Election, Commission of Assize, Commission of the Peace, and other Public Instrument, requiring the Great Seal, is prepared in his Office, and an exact record kept of the same. Patents of Endowment to Churches, and of Presentation of Clergymen thereto, form a portion of his duty.

The Provincial Statutes are deposited with him: and he furnishes two copies every Session—one upon parchment, for the Secretary of State—the other for the Government Printer; besides extra ones, for individual advantage, if called upon,—[31 Geo. III. chap. 31.] He transmits copies, also, of all Proclamations to the Queen's Printer, for insertion in the Gazette. The annual Blue Book is compiled by him, in quadruplicate: two copies for England; one for the Lieutenant-Governor; and one office copy. It is his duty to keep an Alphabetical Record of all persons who become Naturalized.—[9th Geo. IV. chap. 21.] Sheriff's Covenants must be lodged with, and filed by him.—[3rd Wm. IV. chap. 9.] The list of Stockholders of the "Bank of British North America." is now deposited with him; and he is compelled, by statute, to furnish a copy of the same, upon demand.—[7th Wm. IV. chap. 34.] Models of Inventions are, by law, lodged in his office, previous to the Patents being prepared.—7th Geo. IV. chap. 5.] The Standard Weights and Measures are under his charge. A list of Land sold for Taxes must now be filed by him, on being returned by the Sheriffs, for reference, if called for.—[7th Wm. IV. chap. 19.] As Registrar, this Officer is constantly called upon to make searches; supply copies of Patents, Exemptions and Certificates; to enter, upon the margin of the Registry, all surrenders to the Crown; and to furnish lengthy Returns for the Government and Legislature; and the Vice-Chancellor has decided, (Becket vs. Watson) that in the absence of the Original Patent, a certified copy of the same, from the Provincial Registrar, is indispensable, to prove the unfettered right of the Grantee, without Trusts or other Conditions. The addition of new Districts, will cause a corresponding increase of labour to the Secretary and Registrar, as each will require its separate Appointments, Magistrates, Assizes, &c. The number of Books of Record will be seen, by references to the second part of this Statement; and in addition to them, it should be mentioned, that the Surveyor General's Descriptions, from which the Land Patents are prepared, amounting to 40 or 50,000, are alphabetically filed as vouchers, and constantly appealed to, in proof of correctness of boundaries, &c. There is no particular distribution of the work. Every thing, as it comes into the office, is completed forthwith. Although always work sufficient for the whole of the Clerks, at times there is not enough of one class of labour (engrossing) to occupy one person exclusively; and at other periods, there is too much. Each, therefore, proceeds with that he finds on hand—and by this means, the office is never unnecessarily in arrear, except after the Session of Parliament, when the press is so great, owing to the copies of the Statutes, Blue Book, and ordinary routine of work, being obliged to progress together, that it is found to be impossible to avoid it, and extra hands have always been employed for a few weeks.

The salary and allowances of the Provincial Secretary and Registrar, have been as follows: Salary, £300 sterling, per annum; commutation in lieu of fees, as an officer of the Land Granting Department, £636 11s. 4d. sterling, per annum, and he is disbursed the expense of stationary for the Patents. His small fees of office, derived from searches, certificates, copies, commissions; &c. averaged about £30 per annum. Up to 16th May, 1836, he charged the Government half-yearly (as Secretary) for engrossing special public Instruments, 1s. per folio; affixing the Great Seal, 23s. 4d. currency; and parchment, 2s. 6d. per press; and (as Registrar) for recording the same, 1s. per folio—clerk hire being defrayed by him. Subsequent, however, to the 16th May, the Government having furnished the requisite assistance, stationery, &c. the foregoing charges have ceased altogether.

Establishment of the Government Office.

DUTIES.

First Clerk, with a Salary of £270 sterling—Twenty-nine years Service.

It would be difficult to define the duties of the First Clerk, in any other way than calling them a general superintendence of the whole duties of the Office; and aiding the Secretary in meeting the numberless matters that daily come under his attention, connected with the general business of the Country.

Second Clerk, with a Salary of £180 sterling—Ten years Service.

Preparing and recording all Money Warrants, on the Public Service; preparing and recording the Appointments; Commissions of the Courts of Request throughout the Province; preparing and recording all Commissions under the Office Seal; filing and recording applications for office; preparing letters for the Secretary's signature, on routine matters, connected with the above.

Third Clerk, with a Salary of £157 10s. sterling—Seven years Service.

Docketing and recording the reference of all petitions referred to the several Departments to report on, and writing letters connected therewith.

Fourth Clerk, with a Salary of £157 10s. sterling—Six years Service.

Preparing from the Secretary's rough drafts, such of his letters as he does not write the originals of himself; recording all the Secretary's letters; and docketing and putting away all letters addressed to the Secretary.

NOTE—In addition to these Clerks, which form the regular establishment hitherto provided for in the estimate—Fifth Clerk has been employed since December, 1837, at £157 10s. sterling, who will be permanently required: and should, without reference to any new organization of the Department, be hereafter included in the annual estimate.

The following Reports belong to the Report of Commissioners of East York Road, sent down in the Session of 1837-8.

TO THE TRUSTEES OF THE KINGSTON ROAD:

GENTLEMEN,

I have the honour to present the following as a result of a survey of the banks of the River Rouge, preparatory to the erection of a bridge, excavating the hills, and levelling the road, accompanied with a plan and estimate of the cost.

The levelling commences at a point A, on an east and westerly course south, 50° west, and vice versa, passing to the north of the houses in the valley, as shewn by the stakes driven. This line I should strongly recommend, if the new channel is cut, but not otherwise, as the present road down the west hill would not require more than half the excavating on the old course, and the road would be equally good. The red line shews the profile of the hills in feet and inches; the blue line, the inclination of intended road; the space coloured between the red and blue, the earth to be removed; and that not coloured between the two lines, the part to be raised. With regard to the new channel, I am rather doubtful as to the expediency of cutting it, as I find the water of the River to the north is 6 inches and  $\frac{2}{10}$  above the water to the south, by the wreck: this might be considered as a favourable circumstance, in cutting the channel, as the current would assist greatly in forming it. The appearance of the ground indicates a former channel, though now 6 feet above the water on the line, but only 2 feet above on the old road—which, I have little doubt, has frequently been inundated; and I am of opinion, is composed of such soil as would render it almost impossible to keep the water out during the progress of the works. And the chances are, in the first place, that by making the cut, you reduce the depth of water above bridge 6 inches and  $\frac{2}{10}$ ; and from the impossibility of thoroughly charging the new cut before it is thrown open, the rush of water passing through might throw up obstacles that would greatly impede the navigation, and be continually fretting away the east side of the channel, unless the sides were piled and planked.

I should rather recommend, that the new bridge be erected where the old one now stands: and the side channel, from the north-west, filled up with stones, brush and earth. This would have a tendency to deepen what I consider the proper channel, and by judiciously applying the earth taken from the hills on the west side of the bridge, you can effectually protect the abutments on that side—there will be no danger from those on the other. The bridge may be erected from 30 to 50 feet above the water, which would allow schooners to pass under; the dotted curve line would give 40 feet above the water, and the rise 1 in 7; the rise of the blue line on the east hill is 1 in 5; the rise of the west is 1 in 11. Part of the old bridge would be very serviceable in erecting the new one: the abutments of the bridge should be erected with good coursing stones—the foundation to be piled and planked—to be of a circular form—the radius 300 feet, as shewn on plan, which form is best adapted to resist the action of the water, and the lateral thrust of the bridge. The piers at the back are to assist the abutments, and to resist the pressure of earth against them before the bridge is erected; they are likewise calculated to sustain a weight of 200 tons, suspended from 30 to 50 feet above the surface of the water: the bridge itself weighing 101 tons, 10 cwt. 3 qrs. and will sustain 100 tons in the centre, though it is not likely half that weight will ever be upon it at one time. The abutments might be erected with less materials, but being the high road, I should in no wise recommend its being of less dimensions than shewn on the plan: for when the improvements are made, for one team that travels the road now, ten may be expected. The bridge, you will perceive, is without any apparent covering; but in fact it is so constructed, as to render it impervious to the weather, and saves the necessity of erecting a covering over it, which is very unsightly and expensive: and when perched up, as this will be, would cause a vibration that would not otherwise exist, which all persons acquainted with bridge-building, strenuously strive to avoid.

TO THE COMMISSIONERS OF THE EAST ROAD:

GENTLEMEN,

In pursuance of your instructions, I have examined the Highland Creek, and investigated the hills on both sides of it, with the intention of exhibiting to you the best and most economical method of forming a useful safe road through this difficult portion of the country: the line which I would recommend is shewn on a plan and section, made to accompany this report, to which I would request your attention.

Previously to entering upon the description of the proposed line, I would premise, that I have also exhibited a section of the present road, in order to shew the difficulty of forming a road on the eastern side of the Creek. The present road on that side has a rise somewhat steeper than 1 in 6, for nearly 400 feet; the red line on the section shews the depth of excavation requisite to reduce this road to an inclination of 1 in 15. The quantity to be excavated, allowing for a slope on the sides of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  horizontal to 1 vertical, is 72,132 cubic yards: at 1s. 3d. per yard, it amounts to £4,510 16s. 3d.—a sum too large to be used for this purpose; besides, the earth to be excavated could not be usefully employed.

Before fixing upon the line proposed, I took elevations at other places, in order to ascertain if any better or cheaper line could be found.

I would now draw your attention to the proposed line—On the western side, you will perceive, that it does not materially deviate from the present line of road: indeed nothing better is to be found there. The excavation on the crest of the hill, and the embankment at its base, will both be considerable, in order to render the inclination easy, and the road safe and useful; I have cast it out in two forms: First, as 1 in 18, (as shewn by the blue line in the section)—this gives an inclined plane of 1,690 feet in length, rising 93 feet from its base: the elevation of its summit being 115 feet above the surface of the water in the Creek. In order to obtain this, 20,481 cubic yards of excavation, and 22,095 cubic yards of embankment, will be required. The excavation is for the most part near the summit; the soil is light and sandy; I would therefore value it at 1s. per yard—the earth excavated to be placed so as to form the embankment: 22,095 cubic yards at 1s.—£1,104 15s.

Second, as 1 in 15, (shewn by the red line on the section)—which gives an inclined plane of 1,410 feet in length, also rising 93 feet from its base; to obtain this there will be 11,646 cubic yards of excavation, and 11,212 cubic yards of embankment. The soil is the same as above described, and the earth excavated to be so placed as to form the embankment; therefore 11,646 yards at 1s. per yard—£582 6s. It will remain with yourselves to determine upon the inclination to be acted upon: 1 in 18 is too steep, if better could be procured; nothing steeper than 1 in 25 can be called tolerably good—but to obtain that inclination in this place, a very heavy expense would be incurred.

I would observe here, that it is indispensable that the small brook at the summit be turned off, in the direction shewn by the dotted line B. on the plan.

By referring to the plan, you will perceive that from the base of the inclination, onward to the curve at the sand hill, the road is proposed to be kept on the present line. It is nearly level, elevated about 22 feet above the water in the creek. I would propose that the roadway on the tops of the bridge, be elevated 21 feet above the surface of the water. The ground at the curve, and onward to the river, is low. The sum of £150 will be required, to elevate and level the road at the ends of the bridge.

On the eastern side of the river, the hill is more difficult. By referring to the Plan, you will perceive that the proposed line crosses the river in a straight direction; it then curves along the base of the hill, and rises upon its side; about the middle elevation, it curves again, to join the line of road already formed to the eastward, encircling the high point on which the present road rises—maintaining as much as possible the highest ground near the base, and the lowest ground near the crest of the hill. The inclination, 1 in 15—1230 feet in length—commences 27 feet eastward from the bridge, and rises 82 feet. The proposed elevation of the bridge, is 21 feet, and the elevation of the summit of the hill, is 103 feet above the surface of the water in the river. The quantity of excavation, is 25,003 cubic yards, and of embankment, 24,578 yards. The excavation is, as much as possible, placed on the crest of the hill, where the soil is light and sandy; but to a considerable extent, it goes down into the stiff hard clay;—I would average its value at 1s. 3d. per cubic yard—therefore, 25,003 cubic yards, at 1s. 3d.—£1,562 13s. 9d. The earth excavated to be laid down to form the embankment.

This rise of 1 in 15, is steeper than could be desired, but it is all that can be obtained here, without going to an enormous expense. The inclination commences near the bridge: therefore, the embankment cannot be elongated at that end, and any farther decrease must be obtained by cutting deep into the crest of the hill, which, I am satisfied, could not be done to a much greater depth than is proposed, under 2s. per cubic yard. If the curve were directed more to the southward, the line would pass along low ground, which would cause the embankment to be more than double what is now shewn, even to obtain this arise of 1 in 15. It cannot be called an easy line; but as the inclination is short, it will at least be safe and useful. The slopes on the sides of the excavation, and the embankment, are calculated at  $1\frac{1}{2}$  horizontal to 1 vertical, and the curves are laid out on a radius of 400 feet.

From what I witnessed at and about the time when the bridge over this River was washed away, as well as from what I have observed elsewhere in this country, I am convinced that the only means by which absolute security and uninterrupted intercourse can be obtained, where roads cross large rivers, full of drift wood, and liable to sudden floods, is by placing arches of large span across them.

The present resources of the Country, forbid forming such splendid and enduring stone bridges as those which are the boast and ornament of older and richer countries, but by a better adaptation of timber, and a moderate use of iron, bridges scarcely less strong and nearly as elegant, requiring few repairs for a long series of years, may be formed at a comparatively small expense. From measurements which I took during the late floods, I am satisfied that an arch of 50 feet span is required, and will be sufficient for the Highland Creek; a design for such a bridge (of which the following are specifications) accompanies this report.

SPECIFICATION.

The piers to be of sound mason work, in the form shewn on the ground plan; the length or River front of each pier to be 27 feet; the ends to be rounded as shewn on the plan; the thickness to be 3 feet; the counterforts on each end to be placed truly perpendicular to the River front—to be a straight line for 8 feet, then to curve out, as shewn on the plan, to the width of 40 feet from one circular termination to the other, in order to form a parapet wall: the thickness to be 3 feet. The counterfort behind the centre of each pier to be placed as shewn on the ground plan: the length of each to be 10 feet, the thickness to be 2 feet. The foundations throughout to be made thicker in the form shewn on the sectional elevation, as the nature of the ground shall require; these dimensions to be maintained to the height of 10 feet above the ground line, at which elevation a regular and equal slope of 8 inches shall commence on the River front of the piers, (as shewn on the sectional elevation,) to be continued to the height of 24 feet from the ground line: at which elevation the thickness of the walls shall be 2 feet, 4 inches. Recesses or hollow quoins, 8 inches in depth, to be truly wrought into the walls, to receive the arch timbers, as shewn on "the plan of one of the piers," at the elevation of 10 feet above the ground line; the counterforts shall also slope regularly, so as to make their length, at the elevation of 24 feet, to be 4 feet—the thickness to be maintained throughout to this elevation of 24 feet, in the form shewn on the plan of the top of one of the piers. At the elevation of 10 feet from the ground line, the parapet walls to be reduced to the thickness of 2 feet, 8 inches; the break to be on the inside, and at the elevation of 18 feet from the ground line to be reduced to the thickness of 2 feet, 4 inches—which thickness is to be continued to the elevation of the flooring of the bridge; the pier walls on the River front also to be carried up to the elevation of the flooring of the bridge, as shewn on the sectional elevation. The counterforts to terminate at the elevation of 24 feet, except only in so far as they become a part of the parapet walls; at the elevation of the flooring of the bridge a course of broad, well-jointed stones to project 4 inches beyond the lower walls, on which to erect the parapet, 4 feet high above the flooring of the bridge, and 1 foot, 4 inches thick, to be finished with a coping of well-jointed flat stones, projecting 1 inch on each side.

TIMBER WORK.

The arch frames of the bridge (three in number) to be constructed of the best oak timber, 14 inches square, to be well and truly jointed in all respects, according to the form shewn on the sectional elevation; the tenons to be cut to one-third of the thickness of the timber, and to be let into the depth of two-thirds of the timber; two well-formed oak trenails,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  inches diameter, to be firmly drove through each tenon; the joints to be farther secured by iron plates on each side of the timbers of each frame, in the form shewn on the sectional elevation: the plates to be 3 inches wide, and  $1\frac{1}{2}$  inches thick, and to extend at least 2 feet in length beyond the joint on each connecting timber—to be well and truly fitted on each side of the frame, and to be held fast by 3 iron screw-bolts,  $\frac{3}{4}$  inch square on each side of the joints, passing through both plates, and the thickness of the frame timbers; the iron plates to be of a greater width at the points of welding, as shewn on the sectional elevation.

The cross-bearers to be of the best oak, 12 inches thick by 10 inches: to be formed and fitted upon the arch timbers, (as shewn by the enlarged view of a cross-bearer, and of the flooring of the bridge,) and to be held fast in their true positions by iron bolts, 1 inch square, and  $1\frac{1}{2}$  feet in length, driven down through the bearer into the arch frame timber at each joining; the ends of the bearers to project 9 inches on each side, to support the railing; the joists to be of sound oak, 10 inches by 7 inches—to be formed and let into the cross-bearers in the form shewn by the enlarged view of a joist, and of the flooring of the bridge; the flooring to be of oak plank, 6 inches wide by 4 inches thick, even-laid and firmly spiked and tre-nailed down upon the joists.

The railing to be formed as shewn on the sectional elevation. The sills to rest upon, and to be strongly secured with iron, to the cross bearers. The sills, square upright posts, and top-rails, to be of oak, 9 inches by 9 inches. The other timbers to be 9 inches by  $4\frac{1}{2}$  inches.

The cost of this proposed bridge, as given in detail, (see estimates) is £462 10s. 6d. exclusive of the expense which will be incurred for constructing dams, digging the foundations, &c. &c. These expenses, however, I trust will be covered by the sum of £46 5s.—put down to meet contingencies.

The form shewn is the cheapest which I could devise—combining the advantages of a stone arch of 50 feet span, with even greater strength than would probably be obtained from such an arch built with lake-stone, or indeed with any other material, except good hewn stone, having piers upwards of 12 feet thick, and voussoirs nearly three feet thick. It is shewn by the drawings, that the arch frames abut upon the counterforts—therefore, the piers bear only the pressure of the earth behind them, which is reduced more than one-half, by the intervening counterforts, and is further met by the horizontal arch formed by the circular parapet: indeed, if required, a great pressure could be met in this form, by merely constructing strong abutments at the extreme circular ends of the parapet, and at the circular ends of the river front; the span of the arch may also be enlarged to 60, or even 70 feet, if the counterforts are proportionably enlarged.

18th March, 1839.

SIR,

In compliance with the request contained in your note of the 16th instant, I have the honour to transmit to you herewith, the detailed accounts composing the sum of £4512 4s. 9d. paid on account of the arrest, subsistence, trial, &c. of State Prisoners, paid from the Crown Reserves, and charged in the estimate of the civil expenditure of the Province for the current year, so far as the claims have been audited. With regard to the sum of £3000, estimated for the same service for the current year, it is not in my power to furnish the detail thereof until the expenditure is made; nor can I furnish the detail of the £5000 mentioned, that being also an estimate of the amount that is probably due for 1838, but not yet audited and paid. The items composing the sum of £11,500 in estimate, I transmit herewith.

I have the honour to be,

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Toronto, 22nd June, 1838.

MR. SHERWOOD was employed to assist in conducting the trials for High Treason, at the Special Session holden in and for the Home District, with the sanction of the Lieutenant-Governor, communicated to me by Mr. Secretary Joseph, on the 9th March last. His services were of much importance to the Government, and were efficiently rendered. The only question for consideration, is the amount of the remuneration that should be paid him, and whether that should be ascertained by a charge on each indictment, or a per diem allowance during the whole period he was employed. Considering the nature of his services, the former will probably be considered the most correct mode of calculation,—and if so, I do not think the sum of £2 10s. in each case too great. With respect to the sum charged for attending the Commission, I think there should be no difference in the allowance made to Mr. Sherwood and Mr. Spragge.

ACCOUNTS OF KING'S AND UPPER CANADA COLLEGE, FOR 1836, 7 & 8.

Letter from the Bursar of King's College, transmitting Abstracts of Accounts of King's College and Upper Canada College, for 1836, 1837 and 1838.

KING'S COLLEGE OFFICE,
April 16th, 1839.

Sir,

I have the honour herewith to transmit to you a part of the Returns which, by direction of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, I was required to furnish in compliance with an Address from the House of Assembly.—These now sent are as follows:

Three Annual Abstracts of the General Account Current of the Bursar's Receipts and Payments, on account of King's College for the years 1836, 1837 and 1838.

Three ditto for the same periods, on account of Upper Canada College.

N. B.—Those for preceding years have long since been laid before the House of Assembly, and are recorded in their Journals.

Also, a Return of the amount of Government Debentures, Bank Stock, and Notes of individuals bearing interest.

The other Return called for in the said Address, respecting the sale of Lands belonging to the two Colleges, and the average price per acre, I shall have the honour of transmitting to-morrow or next day; and I hope to be pardoned for the delay, on account of my anxiety that the Return should be correct—and as I have to retrace a period of upwards of ten years, it may easily be imagined that it requires a very laborious investigation to render it so.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your most obedient, humble Servant,

JOSEPH WELLS,
Bursar of King's College.

Hon. JOHN MACAULAY,
Civil Secretary, &c.

Letter from the Bursar of King's College, on Salaries to the Officers thereof, agreeably to Address of the House of Assembly.

KING'S COLLEGE OFFICE,
May 3rd, 1839.

SIR,

In obedience to the commands of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, communicated in your letter of the 30th ultimo, I have the honour herewith to transmit a statement of "the authority under which the salaries and allowances are paid to the President, and other Officers of King's College," in compliance with the Address of the House of Assembly to His Excellency.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your obedient Servant,

JOSEPH WELLS,

Registrar and Bursar,

King's College.

The Honourable JOHN MACAULAY,
Civil Secretary,
&c. &c. &c.

Statement of the authority under which the salaries and allowances are paid to the President, and other Officers of King's College, in compliance with the Address of the House of Assembly to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor.

- March 21st, 1839.—Order in Council, that the sum of £150, Provincial Currency each, be the respective salaries of the Registrar and Bursar, to commence from the date of their appointment.
- February 8th, 1838.—Order in Council, that the salary of the Clerk (Mr. George Percival Ridout,) be £100, Currency, per annum, from the period of his being first employed.
- March 17th, 1830.—Order in Council, that Richard Coleman be appointed Overseer of the College Grounds, with a salary of £60 per annum.
- October 1st, 1831.—Order in Council, that Mr. John Wedd be appointed Overseer, vice Coleman, deceased, with the same salary and appointments.
- March 16, 1832.—Notification from His Excellency the Lieut. Governor Sir John Colborne, that he has appointed Lieut. Col. Wells to be the Registrar of King's College, vice Mr. G. H. Markland, appointed Inspector General, whereby his salary was increased to £300, Currency, per annum, as Registrar and Bursar.
- March 27, 1833.—Order in Council to allow Mr. John Wedd, as Overseer of the College Grounds, £12 10s. Currency, per annum, for House Rent, until he could be put in possession of the house before occupied by his predecessor, which the widow and family of the latter still occupy.
- February 27, 1836.—Upon a representation of Mr. John Wedd, of the inadequacy of his salary, and a solicitation that the sums collected by him for the pasturing of cattle, &c. might be allowed him as a perquisite, It was ordered in Council, That no perquisites whatever should be allowed, but that taking into consideration all the circumstances of the increasing responsibility of the Overseer in managing the farming concerns, his salary from the 1st of January last, should be at the rate of 5s. Currency, per day, and that a proportion of this salary (viz. £6 5s. per annum,) should be charged against the Upper Canada College, on account of the Overseer's occasional superintendance of the ornamental ground attached to it.
- December 17, 1836.—Upon the strong representation of the Bursar, that Henry Hawkins, the Messenger, had been necessarily employed as a Junior Clerk, for upwards of a twelve-month past, in consequence of the increasing duties of the Office, which required additional aid, and that he was found fully adequate to the situation, It was ordered in Council, That Henry Hawkins be allowed an additional salary of £25, Currency, per annum, for the current year.
- N. B. His former salary, as Messenger, was £50, per annum.
- February 22, 1837.—The President communicated to the Council, that, in reference to the situation of the Officers of the Institution, and the prospect of its speedily getting into actual operation, and the necessity of active measures being immediately taken for the effecting this object, he had thought it reasonable to express to His Excellency the Lieut. Governor (Sir Francis Bond Head,) his desire to draw his appointed salary, as President, from the 1st day of January last, having forborne any application hitherto, in consequence of the obstacles which had arisen to the execution of the Charter, and that His Excellency had been pleased to approve of this suggestion, which he had expressed, It was ordered in Council, That the President's salary (£250, Sterling, per annum,) be considered as accruing from the 1st day of January last, and be hereafter paid out of the funds of the Institution, upon the scale established by His Majesty's Government, as notified in a Despatch from Earl Bathurst to His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland, dated Downing Street, March 21, 1827.

August 15, 1837.—Order in Council, That Mr. Thomas Young be employed as Architect for the proposed buildings, at the rate of £200, Currency, per annum, from the 1st of May last, when he was first employed in drawing Plans and preparing Estimates.

May 12, 1838.—Upon the strong representation of the Bursar, of the inadequacy of the salary of Henry Hawkins, the Junior Clerk, for the very efficient services which he had zealously rendered for upwards of three years, It was ordered in Council, That the salary of Henry Hawkins be raised from £75 to £100, Currency, per annum, from the 1st of January last.

ON THE SUBJECT OF
POSTAGE OF ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE.

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
3rd May, 1839.

SIR,

With reference to the Estimate now before the Legislature, of the Contingent Expenses of this Office, amounting only to the sum of two hundred and sixty-five pounds, currency, for the current year, I beg to send for your information, and with a view to a reformation of the Estimate, the accompanying account for Postage, for the quarter ending on the 5th of April, amounting to the sum of five hundred and nineteen pounds, sixteen shillings and eleven pence.

I have, &c.

(Signed) RICHARD BULLOCK,

The Honourable JOHN MACAULAY,
&c. &c. &c.

P. S. The Postage, Stationary and Printing of this Office, during the last year, amounted to two hundred and ninety-eight pounds, ten shillings and ten-pence: these embrace the whole of the items forming the contingent account; but the sum will necessarily be much larger the present year, as you will observe that a charge has been incurred the last quarter, for Postage, very disproportioned to that of the corresponding quarter in the last year.

(Signed) R. B.

POST OFFICE, TORONTO,
8th April, 1839.

SIR,

I have the honour to enclose the account of this Office against your department, for Postage, from the date of your appointment to the 5th instant, which now amounts to the large sum of £283 7s. 2d. Currency, and beg to call your attention to the absolute necessity of making some arrangement to pay the amount, as I cannot continue to advance the same every quarter, out of my private funds, which I have to do to meet my balances.

I have written to the Deputy Postmaster General on the subject, requesting to be directed how to act in the matter ; for the sum is now becoming too large for me to advance.

I am, &c.

CHARLES C. SMALL,
CLERK OF THE CROWN AND PLEAS.

PROVINCIAL SECRETARY'S OFFICE,
Toronto, 12th March, 1839.

SIR,

In obedience to the commands of His Excellency, conveyed in your letter of the 11th instant, I have the honour to transmit a Return of the Fees received in this Office, during the years 1837 and 1838, for the information of the House of Assembly.

In rendering this Return, I would respectfully remark, that I cannot be answerable for the correctness of the amounts, as they refer to periods prior to my assumption of the duties of the office. An account of Commissions and Exemplifications appears to have been kept, because the fees upon them are distributed among different Departments, although in the first instance paid into this Office—which distribution I have shewn; but there is no account of small fees for searches, &c. and I can only give a general average, which I have reason to believe is rather over than under the real amount received.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your most obedient,
Humble Servant,

R. A. TUCKER,
Provincial Secretary.

MILITIA GENERAL COURTS MARTIAL.

GEO. ARTHUR.

The LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR submits the accompanying correspondence, relative to the charges incurred in the late trials of Prisoners by Militia General Courts Martial, at Kingston and London, together with detailed accounts of the amount of those charges, to the early and very favourable consideration of the House of Assembly.

Government House,

A. M. SECRETARY'S OFFICE,
Toronto, 11th March, 1839.

SIR,

The Major-General Commanding has directed me to transmit, for the consideration of His Excellency the Commander of the Forces, the enclosed Pay Lists and Accounts, which have been presented by the Acting Judge Advocate of the Militia General Courts Martial, lately held at Kingston and London, for the trial of the Prisoners captured at Prescott and Windsor.

In selecting the Members of these Courts Martial, Sir George Arthur considered it of importance to avail himself of the services of the most eligible Militia Officers in the vicinity of these two Towns.

The present demands have thence chiefly arisen, and neither the charges for the Members nor the Accounts, appear to the Major-General irregular or unusual. As regards the higher remuneration claimed by the Judge Advocate, however, it is necessary to explain, that those Gentlemen have declared the regulated allowance for the performance of their duty to be solely inadequate to the labours which devolved upon them. They have also represented that, by their close application, the respective Courts were enabled to conclude their proceedings in a comparatively short period of time, thereby effecting a commensurate saving of expense on account of the pay of the Members, &c.

Under these circumstances, and presuming that similar questions may have lately arisen in Lower Canada, the Major-General would be glad to receive the Instructions of the Commander of the Forces, as to the rate of remuneration His Excellency may feel authorised to sanction to the Acting Judges Advocate, as well as His Excellency's approval of the Pay Lists.

I have, &c

HEAD QUARTERS,
Montreal, 21st March, 1839.

SIR,

Having laid before the Commander of the Forces your letter of the 11th instant, transmitting Pay Lists and Accounts, which have been presented by the Acting Judge Advocates of the Militia General Courts Martial, late held at Kingston and London, for the trial of the Prisoners captured at Prescott and Windsor, I am directed to acquaint you, for the information of Major-General SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, that His Excellency considers the charges are very moderate and should be paid; but these Courts having been assembled under a Provincial Statute, if SIR GEORGE ARTHUR does not feel authorised to defray the amount from the Provincial funds, the subject should be referred for the consideration of Her Majesty's Government.

The expenses incurred in the trial of the Prisoners in Lower Canada, have not been paid from the Military Chest.

I have, &c.

M E S S A G E ,

FROM

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR,

WITH

DESPATCHES ON FINANCES OF THE PROVINCE.

GEO. ARTHUR.

THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR transmits to the House of Assembly, for their information, a copy of a Despatch, (No. 91, 20th November, 1838,) relating to the Finances of the Province, which His Excellency addressed to the Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, together with His Lordship's reply, (No. 203, 31st January, 1839.)

Government House,
12th March, 1839.

(Copy.)

No. 91.

Government House,
Toronto, 20th November, 1838.

MY LORD,

In my Despatch to your Lordship, (No. 56,) of the 11th of August last, I had the honour to transmit, for your Lordship's perusal, a copy of a communication which I had addressed to the Earl of Durham, on the 30th of June preceding, on the subject of Crown Lands and Emigration: wherein, in connexion with it, I took occasion to advert to the causes which had tended to produce derangement in the finances of this Province, and stated that its resources had been anticipated to an extent that was felt to be embarrassing.

Occupied as I am upon matters of the most urgent nature, it is of the greatest importance that I should, without delay, bring this matter under your Lordship's notice in a more special manner: as in the ensuing meeting of the Provincial Legislature, the question of how the pressing pecuniary demands of the Province shall be satisfied, will require to be discussed—and in anticipation of such discussion, I would wish to receive your Lordship's instructions on the point, which I beg leave to submit to your consideration.

In your Lordship's Circular Despatch to Sir Francis Head, of the 31st of August, 1836, your Lordship states, after some preliminary observations—"With this view I have to desire that you will not permit any Act, or Ordinance, or Proclamation, or regulation, to come into operation in the Colony under your Government, relating to the local currency and circulating medium—or to the rates at which coins shall pass current or be a legal tender—or to the circulation of promissory notes, or other paper, either by the local Government or by any corporate bodies or individuals, without having first received His Majesty's sanction, conveyed to you by the Secretary of State."

This Despatch having been submitted to the House of Assembly by my Predecessor, formed the subject of an Address to him from that body, enquiring "if he would be prevented from giving the Royal assent to any Bank Bill in future"—which Address, together with his reply to it, Sir Francis Head transmitted to your Lordship, in his Despatch (No. 10) of the 5th February, 1837: the receipt thereof being acknowledged in terms of approbation in your Lordship's Despatch (No. 162) of the 19th April following.

Fully concurring in the view taken by Sir Francis Head respecting your Lordship's instructions, as stated in his reply to the Address referred to, I am desirous of adhering to them as strictly as I am able; but as the very peculiar circumstances of the Province, may render unavoidable some departure from them, I wish to be prepared to meet possible contingencies.

I venture, therefore, to suggest to your Lordship that, in the event of such a measure being proposed in the Legislature, I should be provisionally authorised to give the Royal assent to any Provincial enactment, having for its object to allow the Receiver General to issue, on the credit of the Government, bills or notes payable in Toronto at twelve months after date, to the extent of £100,000—to be used as a circulating medium, and made chargeable on the prospective revenue of the Province.

That such, or a similar measure, may be rendered necessary by events, I consider highly probable; and it appears to me, as far as I can judge at this moment, that no other so well calculated by its simplicity to effect the desired object, could be conveniently resorted to.

Though the cases are not exactly parallel, yet in illustration of the principle, and as affording a precedent for such a course of proceeding, I would instance the circumstance, that during the last war in these Colonies, bills of the description I have mentioned were issued by the Provincial Government, and were found, as a temporary resource, of the utmost value to the public service.

Debentures payable in the Province are altogether unsalable from the want of local capital; and Debentures payable in London, where alone they are negotiable, have been already issued to a larger amount than has yet found purchasers.

With reference to these Debentures, the accompanying letters from the Receiver General, (enclosing others addressed to him by Messrs. Baring,) and report of the Executive Council on the subject of their contents, will put your Lordship in possession of every necessary information respecting the circumstances under which they were issued; and your Lordship will at once perceive, that however powerful—and certainly they are very forcible—may be the arguments used by Messrs. Baring, against the mode of their negotiation, yet that they could only have been made available for the immediate and urgent wants of the Province, through the medium of the local Banks, in the manner which was practised.

In drawing the attention of your Lordship to the measure here suggested, I would wish to impress upon your Lordship, that viewed as a continued system, I consider the issue of Government paper, not convertible into specie, to be detrimental to the credit of the Province, and calculated to displace the more wholesome convertible currency; unless, therefore, I could see before me a prospect of financial relief, founded upon a sound and simple basis, I should not look for any good result from mere temporary expedient.

Though large in proportion to its actual revenue, the debt of this Province has been mainly incurred through incidental causes, namely, the construction of public works—the outlay on which is commensurate less with the country's present productive wealth than with the development of which its vast natural resources are susceptible; thence, the investment not being immediately profitable, the burden of the interest payable on the public loan is thrown on the ordinary revenue raised by means of taxes, intended to meet only the current public expenditure.

As compared, however, with similar public debts incurred by different States of the neighbouring Republic, for the promotion of national objects, the debt of this Province is but small: while future resources, and the wants of an increasing population, have been here anticipated to a far less extent.

The Americans have also borrowed money on more advantageous terms than those obtained by this Province, the existing laws of which only permit the Government to negotiate in London loans at par, bearing 5 per cent interest, whereas, the Americans have not hesitated to raise money on the best terms that could be obtained, and which, latterly, have been productive of a loss, varying from five to ten per cent. on the amount of the borrowed capital.

The unhappy troubles with which this Province has been visited; the doubts that have been raised as to the permanency of its political institutions, assisted by the expression of opinions in quarters whence the Colonies justly looked for support, and the threats of armed interference in our affairs, by the American Citizens, with the attempts made to carry them into execution on various occasions, are circumstances which have naturally tended to induce a feeling of insecurity, and a consequent depreciation in the value of property, which is beginning to be most severely felt.

The present inconvertibility of property, leaves without the means of meeting their engagements, those who have become indebted on its security; and comparatively trifling liabilities are thus found sufficient to work the ruin of individuals, hitherto believing themselves opulent, and who would actually be so, could they realize what they own.

By the same unhappy causes, the ordinary influx of Emigration, and British capital, has been suspended, so that anticipated income from public works has not been forthcoming, from the want of means to complete them.

Your Lordship may give me full credit when I assure you, that it is this state of things, more than any theoretic difference in regard to politics, which renders the Government of this country to the satisfaction of the community so difficult as to be almost impossible. And I cannot blame, or be surprised at the discontents of a people, who, though connected with the most powerful Empire on the earth, are nevertheless enduring evils, usually attendant only on the prostration of national strength!

It is not in my power, my Lord, to retrieve the almost withered hopes of Upper Canada; nor will the suffering inhabitants be able, of themselves, to sustain their fortitude, in the immediate neighbourhood of a powerful hostile population, and in the rear of a rebellious Province. I see very clearly, that if the present state of things be suffered to continue for a much longer period, there must be a general wreck of property; and although, eventually, public prosperity may be restored, and may give to the young, ardent, and the unencumbered, an opportunity of growing rich, yet it will not restore to those who have been prosperous, the well-earned fruits of former industry, nor replace the present holder of property in the possessions which will have passed from him.

The effects of the moral deterioration which, it is to be feared, all this is working in the people, will finally make these Provinces indeed untenable and worthless, since the energies of their inhabitants, which can alone render them of sufficient value to be worth retaining, will be unavailable, unless supported by the feeling, that the protection and security which the governed naturally look for from their government, are afforded to their full extent.

The means, my Lord, of averting these impending evils, are not to be sought for in the Province, but in the Mother Country; and all will depend upon the opinion of the British Government, as to the desire and power of England to retain the country, in the face of all opposition. The present friendly professions of the Government of America, may be sincere, however contradicted by the outrageous conduct of her border citizens; but there is no real security for their continuance; and the question is not, whether Canada can be held during a time of peace—but, whether in peace or war, it is to be protected or contended for with the power of the Empire.

Assuming that your Lordship holds an affirmative opinion in this matter, the bright side of the prospect presents itself, and I see little difficulty in producing the most desirable results from the bold and decided measures that must follow.

It must be obvious to your Lordship, that the prosperity of the Colony must mainly hinge upon the progressive development of its resources, by the united agencies of Emigration and British capital.

The preliminaries to the efficient employment of these great means, will be comprised in placing the Province in a state of complete defence, and in raising the credit of the Colony in the British markets. This will attract capital seeking profitable investment, that will inspire confidence as well to the borrower as to the lender; for, my Lord, it must be remembered, that capital is diverted from this country into other channels, merely because a doubt has been engendered, as to the permanency of its political institutions.

To induce immigration on a scale commensurate with the importance of the object which it is intended to promote, I would respectfully suggest to your Lordship, that it should be directly facilitated, as a great national measure, and considered as that best calculated to preserve, at perhaps the least expense, the connection of the Colony with the Parent State.

Your Lordship is aware to how narrow an extent the resources of this Province have hitherto been tried, in the way of taxation levied on the trade of the country. Were the imports increased to even one-half of the amount, in proportion to property raised throughout the American Union, the Provincial revenues—provided that tranquillity and confidence were restored—would be in a flourishing condition, and the interest on the public debt could be met with facility; but, unfortunately, the want of a sea-port places it beyond the power of the Local Government and Legislature to make any addition to the import duties; and even if this could be effected, the want of confidence that is at present felt, would prevent the measure from being attended with an immediate beneficial effect upon the public credit.

Without now discussing in what manner Upper Canada is to be permitted to have a Port of her own, I trust I am not wrong in supposing that the giving her access to the sea, will form a prominent feature in any remedial measures that may be proposed in her behalf.

in the British Parliament. When this is accomplished, the revenue may be at once materially increased, without the slightest injury to trade; without anticipating future resources; and without producing any discontent.

The very best security would be at the same time available to the public creditor, as a certain portion of such revenue might be inalienably set aside for the liquidation of the public debt.

I look, my Lord, upon this prospect, as a substantial foundation for the measure I am about to propose. The preservation of this Province, as a Colony, is essentially in the hands of England. Let England, then, assume the pecuniary responsibility, and offer the security, which the Province cannot furnish, of the permanency of its government;—let it not rest as a mere matter of opinion amongst money-lenders, but upon the broad basis of British guarantee. The sum which would be required to liquidate the whole public debt of the Province, is small, in comparison with the interests which would be secured and promoted by that liquidation; and the British Treasury might negotiate a loan upon its own security, in London, at little more than half the rate paid at present by the Province. The benefits accruing to the Province from such a measure, would be incalculable. The public works in progress might be completed and made productive; all doubts respecting the intentions of the Mother Country would be removed; and when peace was restored, the immigration of men of property to Upper Canada would re-commence, instead of contribute to swell the resources of a foreign and unfriendly country. Nor should we then see, as now, the labouring population of the Province drawn into the United States, to be there employed with money raised in England.

My Lord, I have good reason to know, that many thousands of Her Majesty's Subjects have merely passed through this Province and crossed into the United States, because English capital, which was to afford them the means of profitable employment, was to be found there, instead of here. While such is the case, it is unjust to eulogize the United States, as being so excellent a market for British manufactures; for, were the facts reversed, in proportion as we had British capital, so should we employ it profitably to ourselves, and to the advantage of those investing it. By means such as these, the country would rapidly increase in value and importance to England: and perhaps, at some future period, prevent the loss of the American trade from being felt, when, by the employment of British capital and British artizans, the United States shall have been enabled to establish rival manufactories within their own territories.

To be effectual, such a measure of relief as is here suggested, should, in my opinion, be immediate: for if it be delayed until the general settlement of other matters relating to the Colonies, the time, I fear, will be gone by, when its application would prove most salutary.

The payment of one or two years' interest from the capital advanced, would not, I trust, be considered sufficiently objectionable to warrant the rejection of a plan whereby so much good may be accomplished; and I can assure your Lordship, that by causing it to be promptly and decidedly carried into effect, Her Majesty's Government would acquire the lasting gratitude of a whole people, whose happiness and prosperity they would have been in such case so instrumental in promoting.

I have been the more induced to enter into these details, in proportion as I have been sensible of the importance of the matter to which they have reference.

Anticipating a stormy and unsatisfactory Session, scarcely any thing could give me greater satisfaction, when I meet the Legislature, than the power to offer from Her Majesty's Government the great boon to Upper Canada, which I have here ventured to solicit on her behalf.

By granting it, many of my difficulties would be materially overcome—and whilst thus affording to the community so great an earnest of the desire of Her Majesty's Government to promote, as well their present as their future welfare, I should look forward with confidence to the speedy restoration of public tranquillity and security.

I have, &c.

(Signed) GEO. ARTHUR.

ENCLOSURE No. 1.—DESPATCH No. 91, 20TH NOVEMBER, 1838.

*Receiver General's Office,
Toronto, 31st July, 1838.*

SIR,

I have the honour to enclose to you a letter, dated the 14th June, from Messrs. Baring, Brothers & Co. just received by me, for the particular information of His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, and beg leave to state that their communication, dated the 20th October last, was transmitted by me to the Government here on its receipt.

I have, &c.

(Signed) JOHN H. DUNN,
R. G.

The Honourable JOHN MACAULAY,
Private Secretary,
&c. &c. &c.

(Copy.)

London, 14th June, 1838.

SIR,

We have been duly favoured with your esteemed letters of 7th, 20th March, 3rd April, and 1st ultimo,—the former advising your drafts, together with £10 000, Nos. 199 a 204, on account of the Government, which we enter accordingly. By the two last, you inform us of a fresh issue of Debentures, to the amount of £5,000, and £10,000; the numbers, &c. of which are duly noted.

In referring you to what we had the honour of communicating to you in our letter of the 20th October last, (of which we enclose copy, as you do not seem to have acknowledged receipt) with regard to the sale of bonds with you, which do not pass through our hands, but have the dividend warrants made payable at our Counting-house, we must again repeat our objections to that course, which we believe to be as prejudicial to the interests and credit of the Colonial Government, as it is contrary to our system, and European usage. On our part, we object to having our names inserted on stock, the issue of which has not had our previous knowledge and consent. We have every confidence in the resources and good government of the Province of Upper Canada, but we do not wish our names to be connected with loans, of which neither the amount, nor the periods of negotiation, are previously communicated to us.

On the other hand, the credit of the Government is injured, by parcels of bonds finding their way to this market, (where they must all ultimately come) through different channels, and being offered by different parties, whilst the public is not officially informed whether any, and what, limit is to be put to this irregular system of borrowing. The interest of the Province is likewise injured, because the sale of these casual parcels interferes with the realization of what we hold for the Government—depresses the price, and discourages buyers. We are convinced, that by adopting a more regular system for these operations, the finances of the Province would be materially benefited; but should you, Sir, and the Government, continue to think differently, we must most respectfully repeat, that we beg the name of our House may not be inserted in the dividend warrants of any bonds that are not sold to us, or through us.

We have, &c.

(Signed) BARING, BROTHERS, & Co.

The Honourable JOHN H. DUNN,
H. M. Receiver General,
Toronto, Upper Canada.

London, 20th October, 1837.

SIR,

The preceding is copy of the letter we had the honour to address you on the 14th instant, which we confirm, and would now beg further to remark, in respect of the unsigned dividend warrants therein mentioned, that as the bonds have not passed through our hands, and we have received no particulars from you, by which we could determine the genuineness of the coupons, we cannot consider ourselves liable for the amount of any forged ones we may pay. We shall, of course, use our best discretion in paying the dividends; still, as the warrants have no mark on them to serve as a guide to us, it will be impossible for us to discover those of a fictitious character. We hope that no loss will result, in consequence of the irregularity above mentioned; but should the case prove otherwise, we feel that it cannot proceed from any inattention on our part; and we have therefore thought it right, to prevent any misunderstanding between us, to trouble you with these observations on the subject.

We have, &amp;c.

P. S.—Since writing what precedes, we have received a letter from Messrs. Bosanquet & Co, of which the annexed is copy, and we likewise annex a copy of our reply, for your Government. You will perceive that much difficulty will be experienced, in the disposal of the bonds in our market, in consequence of their not having, as is usual in such cases, passed through our hands, or any information furnished by you to enable us to answer inquiries from the holders of the bonds, as to the authenticity of the signatures attached to them. We regret the irregularity which has arisen on your side, in the issuing of said bonds; and we hope you will be enabled, on receipt of this, to devise some plan regarding them, as will have the effect of removing the feeling which exists against them at the moment, on the part of our stock-dealers. It has heretofore been our custom, to have the negotiation of loans, when the dividends on which are made payable at our Counting-house; and as this is the system generally pursued in this country, we must beg respectfully to decline paying any of the dividends on any future issues on debentures, unless they are passed through our hands in the usual way.

*Receiver General's Office,
Toronto, 3th August, 1838.*

SIR,

IN reply to your communication of the 6th instant, I have the honour to report to you, for the information of His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, that during my absence in England last year, His Excellency Sir Francis Head directed the gentleman performing my duty to dispose of, to each of the Banks, the undermentioned sums in Debentures, amounting together to £138,650 Sterling, and to make them payable, together with the interest, at Messrs. Baring, Brothers & Co. of London. This was a departure from the usual course which had been adopted by me, and it appears to be objected to by Messrs. Baring & Co.—I suppose that Messrs. Baring—who contracted with the Government, through me, for the sum of £200,000 Sterling, at the rate of 10s. premium for each £100 Sterling—hold, or their friends hold, a large portion of these Debentures, and may desire to dispose of them; and as long as Debentures are sold here to parties, and transmitted to England to various agents, who have no interest in the transaction, but to realize the sale of the Debentures, and expose them to sale, and perhaps at improper periods of the money market, will have the natural effect of depreciating such stock.

When contracts for loans of money are made in the City of London, the purchaser with whom the contract is made, feels interested in keeping up and supporting the credit of such stock: but when sold in this Province, and fallen into promiscuous hands in London, to be realized for as much as it will bring in that Metropolis, it will and must have an injurious tendency on the credit of the Province.

Messrs. Baring, Brothers & Co. are made the agents for paying dividends on the Debentures, without their sanction; and whilst their House appears on the face of these Debentures, I am not surprised that they should feel anxiety on the subject, not having any certainty as to the extent of the issue of Debentures which may take place here.

On my return to this Province, I induced His Excellency not to sell any more Debentures within the Province, but to send them to London. Accordingly I was desired to transmit £60,000 to Messrs. Baring & Co. which I accordingly did; but the Debenture Acts confined the sale to five per cent in London, and Messrs. Baring could not, nor have they yet been able to make sale of them at par, and they remain in their hands.

The pressure for want of moneys to keep some of the public works from going into ruin, and the necessity of prosecuting others this season, left no alternative but to sell Debentures in this Province, to such parties as would give par value for them; although it would have been a saving to the Province to have sold them in London under par—the difference would have been made up by the premium on Exchange. This would not have been according to the law: and by selling them for the value of £100 Sterling here, the law has not been violated.

The present state of the Public Debt to this day, stands thus:

Issued in Upper Canada, interest and principal paid here, £195,830 Currency.

Issued in London, interest and principal paid there, £929,650 Sterling.

There remains a debt due by Messrs. Thomas Wilson & Co. of about £83,000 Sterling.

Messrs. Glynn, Halifax & Co. have paid dividends on the £400,000 Sterling, contracted for by Messrs. Thomas Wilson & Co. from January, 1837, making now three half-yearly periods of interest, which will amount to about upwards of £30,000, and which is contemplated to be repaid to these gentlemen by dividends arising out of the debt of £83,000.

The Committee of Finance of the last Session of the Legislature, has made a long and full statement of the Public Finances of the Province, which is now printed, and to which I beg most respectfully to refer.

I have, &c.

Receiver General's Office,
Toronto, 29th September, 1838.

SIR,

IN reply to your letter of the 28th instant, with its enclosures, I have the honour to state, for the information of His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, in relation to the means of raising money for the various public improvements now in progress.

The Debentures at 6 per cent, authorised to be raised in this country, are unsaleable. I have advertised, and made myself satisfied that, under existing circumstances, these Debentures cannot be sold. The Debentures payable in London, at 5 per cent. per annum, I think can be disposed of here, at about par. These Debentures must of course be made payable, on the face of them, at some House or Firm in the City of London; and I am not aware, or am I authorized by any, to offer their services to the Government of Upper Canada, for such an undertaking. It appears by Messrs. Baring, Brothers & Co's. letter, under date the 14th June last, that they decline being made Agents for Debentures sold in Upper Canada under these circumstances; and it appears to me that the Government cannot issue any more, until Messrs. Baring's permission be obtained, or some arrangement can be made with some other House in London, to act as Agents in these transactions, which will require a full and complete investigation into the finances of the Province, before I could expect to obtain the consent of an Agent.

I lament to observe, that I see no way by which money can be procured for the public works, until Messrs. Barings either consent to permit their House to be the Agents, or some other Agent be appointed, which will take time; and as it is now late in the season, perhaps the Legislature will devise other resources for meeting the demands of the Province.

I have, &amp;c.

(Signed) JOHN H. DUNN,
H. M. R. G.The Honourable JOHN MACAULAY,
Civil Secretary.

P. S.—The enclosures above referred to, with report of the Honourable Executive Council, are returned herewith.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER AT TORONTO,
Thursday, 9th August, 1832.

PRESENT:

THE HONOURABLE	ROBERT BALDWIN SULLIVAN,	Presiding Councillor.
"	"	WILLIAM ALLAN.
"	"	AUGUSTUS BALDWIN.
"	"	JOHN ELMSLEY.
"	"	WILLIAM HENRY DRAPER.

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major General Commanding Her Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY:

The Executive Council have perused, with much concern, the report of the Receiver General, on the subject of loans negotiated in this Province, payable in London.

The Council are not disposed in any particular to dispute the statements and arguments used by the Receiver General, and by the House of Messrs. Baring, Brothers & Company, in the letters accompanying that Officers report, as to the injurious tendency of forcing a negotiation of loans, under unfavourable circumstances in the money market, and of negotiating these loans without the knowledge of the Agents by whom the interest had to be paid, or of the negotiation of loans at any depreciation, to the injury of the holders of Debentures formerly issued.

The Executive Council feel bound, however, to state circumstances which appeared of paramount necessity, and which will, it is hoped, excuse the measure adopted by this Government, in your Excellency's mind, as well as to the House of Messrs. Baring, Brothers & Company, whose complaints appear not to be without foundation.

Upon the commencement of the crisis in the mercantile affairs of the United States, reports injurious to the credit of the London Houses connected with American trade, found their way into this Province, and serious apprehensions were entertained by this Government, as to the safety of balances belonging to the Province, in the hands of the London Houses.

These reports induced His Excellency Sir Francis B. Head, to direct Mr. Draper to proceed to England, to cause the adoption of some measure of security, and to prevent the dishonour of Bills of Exchange drawn upon London by Government.

The Receiver General applied for leave of absence, and proceeded to England at the same time.

Debentures payable in the Province were found unsaleable, in consequence of the scarcity of money throughout America.

The greatest distress in the mercantile affairs of the Province arose, and there was every prospect of its being aggravated to a great and dangerous extent, by the stoppage of the Public Works, undertaken under Acts of Parliament previously passed. Advices from England continued to be discouraging, and from these it appeared that there was no prospect of the immediate sale of Debentures in the London Market, where American securities appeared to be peculiarly unacceptable.

The House of Thomas Wilson & Company suspended.

It was represented to the Government, that extensive losses would accrue from the decay of the works undertaken, and from the breach of contracts with the undertakers of Public Works, and delay in their accomplishment.

The Provincial Parliament was officially summoned to devise measures to meet the crisis which had arrived.

One of the measures of relief adopted, was giving authority to the Government to issue Debentures, payable in London, in lieu of those payable in the Province, found to be unsaleable.

The House of Assembly adopted this measure in anticipation of the Debentures being purchased by the Banks in this Province, who might use them in raising funds in London, either by way of sale, or by adding their own credit to that of the Government, and thus obtaining advances.

The Act was so drawn as not to leave it in the power of the Government to sell Debentures under par: this was in conformity with all the other Acts authorizing the negotiation of loans.

The balances in the hands of Messrs. Wilson & Company, appeared to be in jeopardy; and the Government could not take the responsibility of sending large amounts of public securities to Agents in London.

If they were so sent, it did not appear probable that they could be sold at par; and therefore the sending them as a means of immediate relief, would not have the desired effect of giving immediately available funds.

By a sale to the Banks in the Province, these funds became immediately available.

It was necessary to name some House in London at which the dividends on the Debentures should be made payable.

Under the pressure of these circumstances, the Council most reluctantly assented to the sale of Debentures in the Province; and at the time it did not appear that the Banks entered into the transaction without considerable risk, as if depreciation in American securities had continued to increase, they must have been severe losers, notwithstanding their gain by the Exchange.

The Council were under the full impression that the transaction would have been immediately explained to Messrs. Baring & Co. and their approval, under the circumstances, obtained—which they regret extremely was, however, not promptly done.

After the return of the Receiver General to the Province, upon his reporting favourably of the perfect stability of the House of Messrs. Baring, and upon his statement that he was so well assured of the Debentures being saleable in London, a further sum of £60,000 was transmitted to that House for sale.

It appears, however, that to this day they are not saleable at par, according to law.

The expenditure which these Debentures were expected to cover was, in consequence, obliged to be borne partly out of the sum raised in the Province, though this appropriation was certainly not strictly legal, and partly by a renewal of the measure of disposal of Debentures in the Province, adopted with the approval of the Receiver General.

Had the Debentures first negotiated by the Banks, been sent to London in the usual manner, as the sum of £60,000 was afterwards sent, and had they been drawn against at once, which was the only way of meeting public exigencies, and had they proved unsaleable, the bills must have been protested, and the credit of the Province would have been ruined. This was a risk which the Council could not incur, from any considerations of expediency or advantage in the transaction.

The Council, in their own justification, beg to state, that the measure for the negotiation of the extensive loans authorized by Parliament, were in no wise Government measures: they originated altogether in the House of Assembly—and their adoption was not witnessed by the Council without serious fears of consequent embarrassment.

The Council have made this general statement of the principles upon which they felt themselves compelled to act, and they humbly conceive that subsequent events have not proved the want of judgment in the measures advised by them: they endeavoured to proceed with safety, and if profit was in any degree sacrificed thereto, the Council hope that the state of public affairs will prove a sufficient excuse for their proceedings.

While the Council admit the principle, that the interests of holders of public securities should be most tenderly guarded in the negotiations of new loans, these interests cannot be held as superseding all considerations of public welfare and convenience. The history of the National Debt of England shews frequent and extreme depreciation of public securities, in consequence of new and extensive loans; and this has been too often the case to admit of the recognition of the principle, that the interests of the old holders of Debentures should be so exclusively considered, as to prevent the negotiation of new loans in the best practicable manner, should the necessities of the Province or the public interests require such a measure.

It is due to the Honourable Messrs. Allan and Draper, to say, they were absent when the first sum of Debentures were sold to the Banks; and that, therefore, they cannot be held liable to any censure which may be held to attach to the transaction.

All which is respectfully submitted.

No. 203.

Downing Street,
31st January, 1839.

Sir,

I have received, and have laid before my colleagues, your despatch of the 20th November last, No. 91, explaining the present financial state of Upper Canada, and offering various suggestions, by which the existing difficulties may, in your opinion, be overcome. The importance of this subject, and the manner in which you have brought it under our notice, have commanded our most serious attention.

You propose in the first place, that under existing circumstances, you should be permitted so far to depart from my circular instructions of 31st August, 1836, as to assent to any bill which may be presented to you, "having for its object to allow the Receiver General

“to issue, on the credit of the Government, bills or notes, payable in Toronto, at 12 months after date, to the extent of £100,000, to be used as a circulating medium, and made chargeable on the prospective revenue of the Province.”

This, however, you describe as a mere temporary expedient; and you express your opinion, that the issue of government paper, not convertible into specie, is detrimental to the credit of the Province, and unless there were a prospect of financial relief, founded on a sound and simple basis, no good result could be looked for from it. That “sound and simple basis,” you subsequently explain to be, the development of the resources of the country, by an emigration on a large scale, “directly facilitated as a great national measure,” with the consequent influx of British capital, and the restoration of confidence in the security of the connection between the Province and Great Britain; the annexation to Upper Canada of a sea-port, and the increase of the import duties; and lastly, the raising of a loan in this country, on the guarantee of the Imperial revenues, to pay off the provincial debt. By the immediate adoption of such measures, you consider that the difficulties in which the Province is now involved may be effectually removed. With respect to your first proposition, I must observe, that the restriction imposed on the Lieutenant Governor of Upper Canada, in regard to money bills, by my circular despatch of 31st August, 1836, was conditionally withdrawn, by my despatch to yourself, of the 28th December, 1837. So far as that instruction is concerned, you are therefore free to act on your own discretion, in accepting or reserving any bill which may be presented to you by the legislature, for the issue of paper money. But, before Her Majesty’s Government could give their express previous sanction to a measure such as you contemplate, they would require much more detailed information respecting it than is contained in your present despatch. I proceed to notice the points on which that information is peculiarly defective.

You suggest that the contemplated notes should be used as a “circulating medium”—you do not, however, state in what sums they are to be issued—in what manner the issue is to be made—whether in payment for provincial engagements and disbursements, or upon securities, or through the Banks,—nor whether it is designed to constitute them a legal tender for debts. I need not point out the essential difference between a loan made on public security, by the issue of state bonds, and a creation of paper money, inconvertible into coin, but which is to be forced into circulation with paper convertible into silver. The first plan only gives the capitalists a means of investment, temporary or permanent, and at the same time affords to the state the use of the capital lent. The second plan increases the whole circulation, by an issue which cannot possibly circulate at par with paper bearing an intrinsic value, and must therefore, if made a legal tender, drive out of the Province a certain amount of the silver now there, either in circulation, in the banks, or in the military chest. The temporary relief, therefore, which such a measure might afford, would be purchased by an eventual increase of the embarrassments of the Province.

Your report is also defective on another point. You state that the existing debt of Upper Canada has been principally incurred in the construction of public works, but you do not state to what purpose the money to be raised by the proposed notes is to be applied. If the public income is insufficient to meet the expenditure essentially public, the balance must, in some way, be provided for; but if this balance is wanted solely for public works, or local improvements, every general principle is opposed to the raising it by an issue of inconvertible government notes, unless there be a surplus revenue, or a state of public credit, that justifies the expenditure. Under these circumstances, it appears to Her Majesty’s Government, that the proper course would be, after ascertaining the existing deficit in the revenue, to procure an enactment, revoking, in the first place, the law which prohibits the raising of loans in London, on less favourable terms than at par, bearing 5 per cent. interest, and authorising the negotiation of a loan in London, to the amount of the deficit in the revenue, and no further, on the most favourable terms which can be procured, under the sanction, and with the assistance of Her Majesty’s Government, but secured on the revenues of the Province. If such a measure should be adopted, you would, in reporting it to me, transmit, for the information of Her Majesty’s Government, a statement, shewing the exact amount of the revenues and expenditure of Upper Canada, with such explanations as might appear to you necessary.

In respect to your proposal for the direct encouragement of emigration to Upper Canada, and the annexation to the Province of a sea-port, I refrain at present from entering into any detailed explanation. The latter of these propositions could, of course, only be effected through the intervention of Parliament: and until the plan of Her Majesty’s Ministers for the future Government of Canada shall have been laid before Parliament, it would be obviously inconvenient to enter into a discussion of isolated portions of it; but I beg to assure you, that neither of those subjects have escaped our attentive consideration.

Lastly, you propose that Her Majesty's Government should, on the security of the British Treasury, raise a loan in England, to pay off the whole debt of Upper Canada. The amount of this debt is not less than £1,125,000—of which the greater part has been incurred, not at the suggestion of the local Government, nor with the knowledge of the Secretary of State, or the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, but by the authority of the Colonial Legislature, for public works and local improvements. Her Majesty's Government can discover no ground on which they could propose to throw on this country the burthen thus incurred by Upper Canada; at all events, they would feel it impossible to hold out any prospect of this nature at the present moment, when the general affairs of both the Canadas are engaging their serious deliberation, and must shortly be submitted for the consideration of Parliament.

I have the honour, &c.

GEO. ARTHUR.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR transmits to the House of Assembly, in compliance with the request contained in their Address of the 6th instant, copies of a correspondence between Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies and the Earl of Durham, relating to His Lordship's resignation of the offices of Governor-General of Her Majesty's Colonies in North America, and of High Commissioner within the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

For the further information of the House of Assembly, on so important a subject, the Lieutenant-Governor has also deemed it proper to annex to the copies of that correspondence, the copy of a Despatch to himself from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, enclosing copies of the answers which had been returned by Lord Glenelg to the Earl of Durham's Despatches to His Lordship, (Numbers 66, 67 and 68, of the 25th, 26th and 23th of September last,) together with the copy of a Despatch addressed by Lord Glenelg to the Earl of Durham, on the 15th of December following, in reference to His Lordship's Proclamation of the 9th of the preceding month of October.

MY LORD,

I have to acknowledge the receipt of your Despatch of the 29th June, (No. 18,) reporting the proceedings which you had adopted for disposing of the Prisoners whom, on your arrival in Canada, you found in confinement on charges connected with the late insurrection.

Her Majesty's Government are fully alive to the difficulties by which this question was surrounded. It has, therefore, afforded them much satisfaction that you have been able to surmount those difficulties, and that the course which you have adopted has been favourably received in the Province, as equally free from the imputation of too great severity, or of excessive and ill-considered lenity.

While, however, I convey to you the approbation of Her Majesty's Government of the spirit in which your measures have been conceived, I abstain from making any observations on the legal objections which may possibly occur to some of the provisions of the Ordinance, a copy of which is transmitted in your Despatch, as it is at present under the consideration of the Law Officers of the Crown.

MY LORD,

I have had the honour to receive your Lordship's Despatch of the 29th June, (No. 19,) enclosing a copy of a Commission which you had issued for an inquiry into the best mode of disposing of the waste lands of the Crown in the British North American Colonies. Her Majesty's Government entirely approve of this measure, and of the instructions respecting it, which you addressed to the several Lieutenant-Governors of the neighbouring Colonies.—They are fully aware of the great importance of establishing a general and efficient system of disposing of the Crown Lands, as connected with the question of promoting emigration from the Mother Country to those Colonies—and they anticipate the most beneficial results from the establishment of such a system.

Castle of St. Lewis,

MY LORD,

Previous communications from me will have made your Lordship aware of the very injurious effects upon the course of my Government, occasioned more or less by all the proceedings, with respect to my Mission, which have taken place in the House of Lords since my departure from England. The representations which I have made to you upon this subject, were but the echo of the public voice in these Colonies, where all men, of whatever class or party, were agreed in thinking, that unless I should be cordially supported by the Legislature which had created most extraordinary powers of Government for the country, and by the Ministers of the Crown who had placed that extreme authority in my hands, there was not the slightest prospect of any satisfactory result. The proceedings in the House of Lords, from the moment of my leaving the shores of England, shewed but too distinctly, that the support so essential to my success was not extended to me. I allude, in particular, to the speech of the Duke of Wellington on the 4th July, and to the expressive silence of the Prime Minister on that occasion. His Grace was pleased to say—"The Act gives no power further than that of making certain reports on an important subject respecting the Government of Canada, and of directing the formation of a Commission of Inquiry for that purpose; in any other respect, so far as my recollection serves me, I know of no other powers given to the Earl of Durham, which are not ordinarily given to every Governor of a Colony." The tacit assent of Her Majesty's Ministers was even more injurious than Lord Melbourne's previous expression of "very great concern and surprise" at one of my appointments. In the latter case, my authority was not seriously affected, because it depended on myself to persevere in an appointment, which had been originally suggested to me by a member of the Government.—I had constantly refused Mr. Turton's repeated proffers of resignation. His talents and uncommon assiduity had been appreciated here. The proceedings of the Opposition and of the Government, with respect to him, were attributed to the impatience of the one, and the timidity of the other, of the two great parties which divide the House of Lords. And the performance of the arduous duties imposed upon me was scarcely impeded here by what had occurred;—it was not impeded, let me repeat—because, in that case I was enabled to maintain a deliberate act of my Government, and to preserve my honour as a gentleman, by declining all participation in the sacrifice of one, whose ruin, through his connection with me, would, if I had taken any share in it, have left a foul stain on my character. But in the other case, when the leaders of these two great parties,—the one, by the most unqualified expressions, and the other, by consenting silence—concurred in depreciating the authority with which I had been invested, that authority was seriously weakened. The effect upon the public mind was instantaneous and most remarkable. The disaffected (and how numerous these are, your Lordship will have learned from my Despatch of the 9th August, No. 36, marked "secret and confidential") were encouraged to believe, that as my authority was so questioned, the manner in which it had been, or might be exercised, would, to a certainty, be vigorously assailed by the Opposition, and feebly defended by the Government; and they inferred that the success of my mission, which, as all parties at home had allowed, when the danger was imminent, and all here still felt, depended on the vigorous exercise of an extraordinary authority, was thus rendered next to impossible. In forty-eight hours after the speech attributed to the Duke of Wellington had been published here, the tone of that part of the press which represents the disaffected exhibited a remarkable change, giving evidence no longer of submission, however unwilling, to extraordinary powers unhesitatingly exercised, but of discontent, irritation, and seditious hopes. From that time forth, too, down to this day, I have continually received intimations of a state of feeling amongst the Canadian peasantry of the District of Montreal, which threatens, if not actual disturbances during the winter, still so much combination of purpose and means amongst the disaffected, as to require the utmost vigilance on the part of government. Nor did the Duke of Wellington's speech, and Lord Melbourne's silence on that occasion, produce a less mischievous effect upon the great bulk of the British race in this Colony. As respects this class, the first impression created by this evidence of my being left without adequate support at home, was one of despondency. I can speak almost from my own personal knowledge, of numbers, including gentlemen of the most respectable character and highest influence, who had entered into all my views for the improvement of this much neglected country, who were aware of my determination, so far as it might depend upon me, to remove the causes—to dry up the very source of past dissensions, and to render this Colony essentially British in its laws, institutions and character; who had, merely on account of those views and intentions, afforded me their confiding support; and who were employing their valuable influence in diverting public attention from the miserable past, and endeavouring to fix it on a happy prospect of peace and prosperity. These gentlemen, when the news in question arrived from England—when they perceived that I was left alone to struggle with unparalleled difficulties, could no longer rely on the accomplishment of any of the important measures that I had projected. They were therefore led, most naturally, as it appears to me, instead of looking with confidence to the future, first to despair of any fruit from my exertions, and next, to recur to the past with feelings of irritation, as violent as were ever produced amongst the British race in this Colony, by the worst previous sacrifice of Colonial interests, to the objects of mere party in the Mother Country. Such is the unanimity of opinion and feeling amongst the British population of this Colony, that the individuals whom I have described fairly represent the whole class. The despondency and irritation of that class, were as conspicuous as the half elated and threatening activity of the disaffected portion of French Canadians. But such was the effect produced upon both classes, that is, upon the great bulk of the people, by the party proceedings at home.

Although I happened to be suffering from severe illness during the period in which this change of opinion was in course of taking place, I was constantly informed of its progress; and I must not conceal from your Lordship, that this information had a most discouraging effect upon myself. It soon became plain to me, that the great difficulties necessarily attendant on my position, were fearfully increased by the assaults made upon my government by the opposition at home, and tacitly (when not even in a still more injurious mode) suffered by Her Majesty's Ministers. Upon two things alone could I chiefly rely for ultimate success;—the first was, the great extent of the legal powers conferred upon me, enhanced as they had been, morally, by the universal expression in England of satisfaction at my having undertaken to exercise them;—the second was, the impressions which prevailed throughout these Colonies, that I might reckon with perfect confidence on the undeviating approval and support of the members of Her Majesty's Government, with most of whom I had been so long and intimately connected, as well by personal friendship as by political relations. By the proceedings in question, I was deprived of these, the only, but all-sufficient grounds of confidence, in my own exertions. Your Lordship may believe, that the people of these Colonies are not better acquainted with the springs and influences of party politics in England, than are most English politicians with the real state of parties, and of public affairs, in this distant part of the world. You will easily understand, therefore, that no sufficient allowance was made here for the nature of those party motives which had dictated the proceedings of the opposition and the Government, in respect to my mission. It was supposed that the great party in opposition at home really believed my authority to be no more extensive than that of an ordinary Governor in ordinary times;—that Her Majesty's Ministers were of a similar opinion; that all my promises of unusual measures, suited to the unusual circumstances of the case, had been made inadvertently or delusively; and that I had no more prospect of healing the wounds inflicted on this country by a long course of shifting and temporising policy, than if the Act for suspending a constitution, and conferring Legislative powers on an individual, had never passed. In fact, whatever may be the powers which that Act legally confers upon me, the moral authority of my Government,—the prestige, if I may so speak, of power once imagined to be so great, and of a supposed unbounded influence with Her Majesty's Government, was gone apparently for ever. Under these circumstances, I was greatly tempted to resign my authority, which appeared to have become inadequate to the grave emergency which alone had called for its existence. I did not, however, give way to this sentiment of despair. On the contrary, making all allowance for party motives, which could not be appreciated by the people of these Colonies; trusting that the approaching recess of Parliament would soon leave me undisturbed to pursue the useful course, on which I had already determined; relying not a little on the early promulgation here of legislative measures, calculated to encourage British enterprise and promote general prosperity; and, above all, influenced by a conviction that the worst consequences might result from my resignation, I deemed it my duty to the Queen, to my Country, and to the people of these Colonies, who had generously confided in my good intentions, to persevere in my course so long as there was the least chance of success. Thus impelled, I banished every thought of resignation, and occupied myself more diligently than ever in bringing to maturity the whole series of measures by which I have hoped that these Colonies might be established in peace and prosperity, as a happy and loyal portion of the British Empire. I was thus engaged, when I received your Lordship's Despatches, No. 83 and 84, conveying to me the most flattering expressions of the satisfaction which all my measures, including the Proclamation relating to the Political Prisoners, had given to Her Majesty's Government.

Those Despatches were the more gratifying, inasmuch as they were accompanied by numerous unofficial letters from members of the Government, and especially by those from yourself and Lord Melbourne, whereby the expressions of official approbation were most warmly and kindly confirmed.

While these Despatches and Letters were still before me, an American newspaper, which had reached Quebec by the same conveyance, was placed in my hands. Your Lordship will judge of my astonishment, when I inform you, that it contained a Report of the proceedings in the House of Lords on the 7th, 9th and 10th of August.

At present no other information on the subject has reached me.

I shall abstain, until officially informed, from entering at length on that important subject. Meanwhile, however, it behoves me to assure Your Lordship, that public opinion here does not wait for the receipt of official intelligence on matters of vital moment to the interests of all; and that it has been most deeply affected by the sufficiently authentic intelligence.

I have had no choice (as I shall fully explain in a future Despatch,) but to declare whether or not I should resign my now useless office. As Your Lordship will perceive by the Documents which I have the honour to enclose, (being an address to myself from the Delegates of the Colonies of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward's Island, with my answer,) I have resolved on resigning an authority which has now, indeed, become thoroughly inadequate to the ends for which it was created, and on quitting a post which has been rendered altogether untenable by those from whom I expected every possible assistance in maintaining it.

I shall not lose a moment, after hearing officially of the recent proceedings in England, in fully explaining to Your Lordship the reasons for my having arrived at this determination, and the grounds on which I may, after ample deliberation, decide upon the time for carrying it into effect.

I have, &c.

To His Excellency the Right Honourable JOHN GEORGE, Earl of Durham,
 &c. &c. &c.

In approaching Your Lordship on the eve of our departure from Quebec, we beg unanimously to offer to Your Lordship the expression of our highest respect, and of the deep concern with which we have heard of your Lordship's rumoured intention to resign the Government of these Provinces.

The duties of the mission with which we have been intrusted by the Lieutenant Governors of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island, and the frankness of communication permitted by your Lordship, have brought us into acquaintance with your Lordship's feelings and views in relation to British North America, and irresistibly impressed on our minds the conviction, that your Lordship cherished an ardent desire to elevate the Colonies committed to your Government, and entertains conceptions calculated to render that desire effective.

In a review of the short period of the Government under your Lordship's personal direction, we behold your Lordship with that feeling so congenial to Englishmen, which turns with repugnance from the shedding of blood on the scaffold, blending mercy with justice; while returning tranquility had already rewarded an administration conducted without the sacrifice of one human life; and we were aware that improved laws and constitutions were in preparation, which, under a government, firm, mild and impartial, gave to the future the reasonable prospect of restored confidence and renovated prosperity.

For the Provinces with which we are more personally connected, we saw, in the warm interests, the enlightened and comprehensive views, and extensive powers of your Lordship, the dawning of vigour and improvement hitherto unknown. With your Lordship's departure those anticipations will, we fear, fade away; but, although it should be our lot to see these Provinces continue feeble and nerveless, compared with the condition at which their natural advantages entitle them to aim, yet shall we ever remember, with gratitude, the statesman who, exalted in the first rank, and treading on the highest eminences of political life in our common country, hesitated not, at the call of his Sovereign, with disinterested zeal, to undertake an office of unparalleled difficulty, and has given to these distant territories the benefit of his enlarged experience and vigorous conceptions. Your Lordship's comprehensive mind has opened to our view the animating prospect of great public improvements advancing our common welfare, and which will ever associate your Lordship's name with the highest prosperity of the Colonies.

We are unwilling to abandon the hope, that your Lordship may yet continue in the administration of your high office. Under any circumstances, we beg to assure your Lordship, that our most ardent wishes for the happiness of the Countess of Durham, your Lordship and family, will accompany you through life.

It is impossible for me to express to you in language sufficiently strong, the feelings of gratitude and pleasure with which I have received this address.

Representing as you do, so worthily, the three Provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island, this proof of your confidence in me, and approbation of the principles on which my administration has been conducted, is most gratifying to me.

I assumed the Government of the North American Provinces, with the pre-determination to provide for the future welfare and prosperity of them all; never doubting that such a provision would be the best, nay the only real security for their permanent connection with the British Crown. In communications which have taken place between us, and from which I have derived equal pleasure and information, you have been fully apprised of my views and intentions. These you have appreciated and recognised in a manner for which I can never be sufficiently grateful. I have, indeed, had a difficult and laborious duty to perform. The credit of my endeavours, however, is one of which I need not be ashamed. In the short space of little more than three months, I have seen tranquility restored and confidence reviving. I have caused substantial justice to be administered, tempered by mercy. I have carefully examined, with a view to reformation, all the Institutions of the Province more immediately committed to my charge; and I was on the point of promulgating such Laws as would have afforded protection to all those British interests which had been too long neglected. I had also, as you well know, devoted the most careful attention to all subjects which could affect the general interests of all the Colonies, and had brought nearly to maturity the plan which I intended to submit, in the first instance, to the consideration of the Provinces, and eventually of the Cabinet and the Imperial Parliament. In this, I trust, useful course, I have been suddenly arrested by the interference of the British Legislature—in which the responsible advisers of the Crown have deemed it their duty to acquiesce. Under these circumstances, I have but one step to take—to resign that authority, the exercise of which has thus been so weakened, as to render it totally inadequate to the grave emergency which alone called for its existence.

Be assured however of this, Gentlemen, that this unexpected and abrupt termination of the official connection which united me with the North American Provinces, will not weaken in my mind the feelings of deep interest which I shall ever take in their fate, or render me less anxious to devote every faculty of my mind, every influence I may possess, to the advancement of their interests, and to the establishment, on the most lasting foundation, of their welfare and prosperity.

No. 89.

Downing Street,

18th August, 1838.

MY LORD,

WITH reference to my Despatch, (No. 83,) of the 5th instant, I have now the honour to enclose to you a copy of the report of the Law Officers of the Crown on the Ordinance, providing for the security of the Province of Lower Canada, a copy of which was transmitted in your Despatch of 29th June, (No. 18.)

Your Lordship will observe, that the Attorney and Solicitor General are clearly of opinion, that so much of the Ordinance as relates to the restrictions to be placed in Bermuda on the eight persons sent by you to that place, is void: inasmuch as the legislative jurisdiction of the Governor and Special Council of Lower Canada does not extend beyond the limits of the Province. In all other respects they are of opinion, that the provisions of the Ordinance were within the competency of the Governor and Special Council.

I regret however to state, that a different view of the case was taken by several individuals of high legal attainments, whose station and professional experience could not fail to secure great weight to their opinion in the House of Lords, where the question was first agitated. There were, indeed, some who went so far as to contend that the whole Ordinance was illegal, as exceeding the legislative authority vested by Parliament in the Special Council; but as this view of the case has not received the sanction of either House of Parliament, Her Majesty's Government, in accordance with the opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown, are fully satisfied that the powers confided by Parliament to the Governor and Special Council are sufficiently ample to authorise them to legislate to the full extent of the Ordinance in question, so far as it relates exclusively to acts to be done within the Province of Lower Canada. But an objection of a more popular and general nature was also urged with great force against so much of the Ordinance as purports, on a conviction for returning to the Province without permission, to subject to capital punishment those persons, who having fled the Province, had thereby avoided the execution against them of the warrant for their apprehension on the charge of High Treason.

Her Majesty's Government, fully sensible of the numerous and weighty difficulties with which you had to deal, with reference to this question, of the notoriety of the conduct of those persons who, having taken an open part in inciting their followers to insurrection, had fled to the United States, in order to withdraw themselves from justice, and of the importance of securing the Province, for a time at least, against their return—and aware, moreover, that ample time had been afforded to these parties, had they been so disposed, to surrender themselves to justice, and demand their trial,—would have been quite satisfied to have left in your Lordships hands the mode of dealing with them, with perfect confidence that no act of needless severity or of substantial injustice, would have been either committed or sanctioned by your authority. The course, however, which Her Majesty's Government would have taken, as in their judgment the best calculated to uphold your authority, and thereby to consult the success of your mission, has unhappily, as they feel, been overruled. A bill was introduced into the House of Lords, the object of which, as it was originally submitted, was two-fold;—first, to obtain a declaration of the intention of Parliament, in accordance with the view to which I have referred, of the narrow and restricted extent of the Legislative powers of the Special Council, and thereby not only to invalidate the Ordinance, as altogether illegal, but also to prevent any future legislation by the same authority, involving a departure from the ordinary course of criminal law, under whatever circumstances of danger and emergency;—and secondly, to provide an indemnity in respect of all acts done in pursuance of the Ordinance. Her Majesty's Government felt it their duty to offer a decided opposition to the second reading of that bill in the House of Lords, as calculated, in their opinion, most injuriously, and contrary to the spirit and tenor of the Act for making temporary provision for the Government of Lower Canada, to narrow and restrict the power vested by Parliament in the Special Council. I regret, however, to state, that the second reading of that bill was carried in the House of Lords. Under these circumstances, and after the public discussions which have taken place on the subject, Her Majesty's Government, compelled as they were, to admit that a portion of the Ordinance, though comparatively unimportant, rested on no legal foundation, most reluctantly advised Her Majesty to disallow the Ordinance. Extensive amendments were subsequently made in the committee, on the bill. The clause which would have restricted the Legislative powers of the Special Council was altogether omitted, and the indemnity was expressly confined to Acts done in respect of that part of the Ordinance which was admitted to be beyond the Legislative authority of the Governor and Special Council. The bill, so amended, has been since passed by the other House of Parliament, and has received Her Majesty's assent. I send you a copy of it. The comparatively unimportant point, to which alone the Act, as it has finally passed, applies, renders it, in itself, a measure demanding but a slight and passing notice.

Her Majesty's Government cannot, however, conceal their apprehension, that the discussions which have been raised on this question, may tend to impede and embarrass your course in the settlement of the affairs of Canada, and to raise anew some of those difficulties and obstacles which, under your administration, appears to be rapidly on the decline. But on the other hand, the opposition to your measures in this country, has given rise to such strong expressions of confidence in the purity and excellence of the motives by which your conduct has been regulated, and has drawn forth from those personally interested in the affairs of Canada, such decided testimony to the beneficial tendency of your administration, that Her Majesty's Government cannot but hope that your hands may be rather strengthened than weakened by the degree of public attention which has been directed to this subject. At the same time, they feel it their duty to leave you in no uncertainty, as to their views on the course which it may be expedient now to adopt with regard to the persons who, in consequence of the disallowance of the Ordinance, can no longer be liable to its provisions. In the first place, I have to convey to you Her Majesty's entire approbation of the Proclamation issued by you, on the 28th June, by which, with the exception of the twenty-three persons specifically referred to, an amnesty was granted to all other persons charged with treasonable offences committed during the late disturbances and insurrection in Lower Canada. In order, however, to maintain the distinction which you appear so properly to have made between the chief leaders and instigators of the insurrection, and their misguided followers, Her Majesty's Government are decidedly of opinion, that notwithstanding the failure of the provisions of the Ordinance, the eight persons sent by you to Bermuda should not be permitted to return to Lower Canada, except by the express permission of Her Majesty, or of Her Representative in the Province.

It seems to them that this object could be best attained by an Ordinance, to be passed by yourself and the Special Council, subjecting the persons in question to such penalty, short of death, as may be thought expedient, in the event of their being convicted of returning to the Province without such permission.

With regard to those who had previously fled from justice, it may, perhaps, be sufficient, by Proclamation, or by any other clear and unambiguous channel of information, to make it publicly known that, should they re-enter the Province, without the same permission, they will forthwith be arrested, and dealt with according to law, on the charge of treason. It will at the same time, be desirable to continue or renew the suspension of the habeas corpus, that you may be able to detain any of them in custody, in the event of their arrest, should the safety of the Province render such a proceeding necessary. In adopting this plan, it will be indispensable that the Suspension Act should be passed at the same time that the Proclamation is issued, and made as publicly known as the Proclamation, in order to avoid the possibility of any of the parties referred to in the Proclamation, entering the Province in ignorance of the Suspension Act. To let them enter in such ignorance, would be to deal unfairly with them. Her Majesty's Government hope, that by these means the end which you had in view may be attained, of averting the serious evil to be apprehended from persons being at large within the Province who had notoriously taken a prominent part in the recent revolt, and whose presence could not fail to occasion jealousy and dissatisfaction among the loyal subjects of Her Majesty, and might tend to revive feelings and passions which it must be the anxious desire of the Government to suppress and to allay. I do not intend to prescribe to you the precise course to which I have adverted, as that which, under existing circumstances, ought to be adopted—nor am I insensible to the objections to which any course on this subject is liable from those who are disposed to take an unfavourable view of the conduct of the Government; but I am anxious to relieve you, as far as possible, from the uncertainty in which you might be involved by the recent debates in Parliament, as to the extent to which you would be held justified in proceeding with respect to the small number of persons whom, in the exercise of a sound and wise discretion, you have excepted from the amnesty which has been extended to the great body of persons implicated in the insurrection.

I have assumed, throughout the consideration of this question, that no steps have been taken under the Ordinance passed by the Special Council, during Sir John Colborne's Administration, "for the more speedy attainder of persons indicted for High Treason, who have fled from the Province, or remain concealed therein, to escape from Justice."

It will be for your Lordship to determine, whether it would be advisable to proceed against the parties to whom that Ordinance refers in the manner there prescribed; but, as the object to be attained is not so much the severe punishment of the guilty as their exclusion from the Province, and the suggestion to them of some motive for abstaining, during such exclusion, from a mischievous interference with its affairs, the other course to which I have referred appears to Her Majesty's Government to be, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, the most expedient.

I cannot conclude this Despatch, without expressing the deep regret which Her Majesty's Government have felt at the embarrassment to which you will have been subjected, by the recent proceedings in Parliament, regarding the difficult and delicate question of the disposal of the persons charged with Treason in Lower Canada. On a deliberate review of the whole case, Her Majesty's Government are enabled distinctly to repeat their approbation of the spirit in which those measures were conceived, and to state their conviction that those measures have been dictated by a judicious and enlightened humanity, and were calculated, under your authority, to satisfy the ends of justice—although in some respects, they involve a departure from its ordinary forms. The Government are also persuaded, that your Lordship will be equally anxious with themselves to avoid, as far as possible, giving even a plausible ground for cavil or objection to hostile criticism.

It only remains for me to assure you of the undiminished confidence which Her Majesty's Government repose in you, and of their earnest desire to afford you the utmost support in the discharge of the arduous duties with which you are entrusted.

I have, &c.

Temple, August 6th, 1838.

MY LORD,

IN answer to your Lordship's letter of the 4th instant, requesting our opinion whether there is any objection in point of law to the confirmation, by Her Majesty in Council, of an Ordinance passed by the Earl of Durham and the Special Council of Lower Canada, on the 28th June last, entitled, "An Ordinance to provide for the security of the Province of Lower Canada"—we have to state, that in our opinion, so much of this Ordinance as directs the class of persons therein first enumerated to be transported to Bermuda, and to be kept under restraint there, is beyond the power of the Governor and Special Council, and void; but that all the rest of the Ordinance is within their power, and valid.

The Imperial Statute 1st Victoria, chap. 9, sec. 2, authorises the Governor and Special Council to make such Laws or Ordinances, for the peace, welfare, and good government of the Province of Lower Canada, as the Legislature of Lower Canada, as then constituted, was empowered to make, with certain exceptions, which do not affect the validity of the Ordinance in question. The Legislature of Lower Canada, as constituted by 31st Geo. III. chap. 31, had conferred upon it a general Sovereign Legislative power within the Province; and it is expressly enacted, that all Acts passed by this Legislature shall be valid and binding, to all intents and purposes, within the Province in which the same shall have passed.

We conceive, therefore, that the old Legislature might have lawfully passed an Act for banishing from the Province the first class of persons described in this Ordinance, and enacting that if any of this class or of the second class should return to the Province without the leave of the Governor, they should be deemed guilty of treason, and being convicted thereof, should suffer death. This could not be done by the Proclamation of the Governor, but it is an Act of Legislation for which there are precedents in the Parliaments of Great Britain and of Ireland. There is no pretence for saying that if this part of the Ordinance really were put in force, that the parties who suffer would be put to death without trial. Before they suffer, they must be indicted for having returned to the Province without leave of the Governor, which by law is made treason; and they could only suffer on being duly convicted of the offence laid to their charge. Of course we are only considering the regularity of such a proceeding, without giving any opinion as to its being expedient or proper.

With respect to that part of the Ordinance which is to be executed beyond the limits of the Province of Lower Canada, we are of opinion that it would acquire no force by being confirmed by Her Majesty.

We have the honour to be,

Castle of St. Lewis,
September 26th, 1838.

MY LORD,

THE late debate in the House of Lords, and the observations that have been made there upon the Ordinance passed by the Special Council of this Province, subjecting the State Prisoners to transportation to Bermuda, imperatively call on me to submit to you a statement of my views upon the legality of that Ordinance, and of the grounds upon which, with every deference to the House of Peers, and the high legal authorities who are asserted to have declared its illegality, I venture to maintain, that no part of that Ordinance is in itself illegal, however inoperative it might, and must of necessity be, without the assistance and co-operation of the Home Government, and the British Parliament, or the Legislature of the Bermudas, under sanction of Her Majesty's Ministers.

The Imperial Statute 5th Geo. IV. ch. 84, sec. 3, provides, that His Majesty in Privy Council, may appoint any place beyond the seas, either within or without His Dominions, to which felons, and other offenders under sentence or order of Transportation or Banishment, shall be conveyed. It provides for the imprisonment of such offenders—their conveyance, either in contract vessels or in Her Majesty's ships—their punishment for misconduct on the voyage—their delivery to the Governor of the Colony to which they may be sent—and their safe custody after arrival.

Section 17 recites, that by law, in some of the Colonies, offenders convicted of certain offences are liable to be transported beyond the seas, and that there might be no means of transporting such convicts to any of the places appointed by "His" Majesty in that behalf without bringing them to England; and it then provides, that such convicts, when brought to England, may be imprisoned in any place of confinement, under that Act, and so soon as he shall be so imprisoned, all the provisions of that Act shall be applicable to every such convict, as if convicted and sentenced in England. No provision is by this Act made for their treatment up to their being brought to England. That is left to the Local Legislatures.

The Imperial Statute, 6th Geo. IV. chap. 69, § 4, provides that "His Majesty," by an Order in Council, may authorise the Governor, &c. for the time being of any of the Colonies, to appoint the place within "His" Majesty's Dominions to which offenders convicted in any such Colony, and being under sentence or order of transportation, shall be sent or transported, and provides that such convicts, at the place to which they may be transported, shall be subject to the same laws as other convicts, but it makes no provision for their transport, or their treatment on the voyage to England; that is still left to the Local Legislatures—at least there is no other mode of providing for it.

Under these Acts, an Order of Council was issued on the 11th November, 1825, directing that all Governors of the Colonies for the time being, should from time to time appoint the places to which convicted offenders should be transported.

Lord Gosford, on the 7th October, 1835, issued his Proclamation, appointing such convicts to be sent to England, and from thence to New South Wales, and Van Diemen's. The Provincial Legislature, by Act 6th William the Fourth, chap. 1, continued by the Ordinance of the 1st Victoria, chap. 8, provided that—"Whenever any offender shall have been lawfully sentenced by any of His Majesty's Courts in this Province, other than Courts Martial, to transportation, it shall be lawful for the Governor for the time being, from time to time, to cause any such convict to be removed from any place of confinement in this Province to any other safe place of custody." (It does not repeat "in this Province,") "and thence to be sent to England, to be there imprisoned according to the provisions of the fifth George the Fourth, chapter 84, section 17, to be thereafter transported to New South Wales or Van Dieman's Land."

The Act authorises contracts for their safe transport to England, and, by section 6, enacts that after the delivery of any such convict to the contractor, "his transportation to England, safe-custody, treatment and confinement, until delivered to the authorities in England, shall be regulated to all intents and purposes by the provisions of the fifth George the Fourth, cap. 84."

This Act, although authorising imprisonment, and directing a certain mode of treatment upon the high seas, was not thought to exceed the powers of the Provincial Legislature, and was sanctioned and approved by Her Majesty's present Ministers.

These several provisions, however, only applying to the case of persons convicted in Courts of Law of offences, were not in force as to the State Prisoners who confessed their participation in the treasonable practices of which they were accused, but they afford a sufficient guide in an emergency beyond the scope of ordinary law.

If the British Parliament could authorise the Sovereign to name any place of transportation beyond the seas out of the British dominions, it would seem not less within the authority of the Provincial Legislature to appoint a place of banishment not within the local limits of their authority, but within Her Majesty's dominions, which had been frequently used as a place of transportation from this Colony, and at which hulks are now kept for the reception of convicts, and to which, as appears by Lord Aberdeen's Circular Despatch of the 2d March, 1835, relative to transportation from the Colonies, such offenders as may be specially selected by the Home Secretary, may still be sent. I need scarcely say that this last Despatch was by no means restrictive of my power in respect to the State Prisoners, as to whom Your Lordship's instructions expressly suggest the substitution of transportation and banishment in lieu of capital punishment.

The power of the Colonial Governments to punish by transportation is indisputable; and its frequent exercise is recognised by the recital in Section 17, of the Imperial Statute, 5th Geo. 4, cap. 84, already cited; for if by the law of the Colonies convicts can be subject to transportation beyond seas, the Legislatures of such Colonies must have power to pass such laws.

I, as Governor-General and Governor-in-Chief of Canada, had a power to appoint the place to which any person should be transported who was convicted of a transportable offence, or who being capitally convicted should assent to such commutation of his punishment; and I had at my disposal the immediate means of transport to any place within the command of the Admiral on the Halifax station, and the previous assent of the Admiral to give every facility within his power.

The Legislature which had the power to suspend the Habeas Corpus Act, and to place the whole country under the operation of Martial Law, to substitute a Drum Head Court Martial of Volunteers for a trial by Jury in the ordinary Courts of Justice in the country, if they had thought it necessary to exercise it, (and the Executive Government alone did in fact exercise it,) had an equal power (it would be contending for little to say an equal Constitutional right) to subject to punishment those who admitted that they had offended against the laws of their country, and who prayed to be spared a public trial, to which the public interest was alike opposed. The Legislature had an equal power by law to pass an Act of attainder with or without forfeiture of property, and with or without examining further witnesses, as they might think most likely to conduce to the benefit of the public and the tranquillity of the Province, against the associates of those who pleaded guilty, and who had fled from the pursuit of justice to a foreign country.

Whatever power was vested in the assembled Legislature of this Province before the recent troubles, was vested in me and the Special Council by the Imperial Statute of the first Vict. chap. 9, so far as that Act did not expressly circumscribe the power which it originated, I have yet to learn that the Ordinance of the second Victoria, cap. 1, (now disallowed,) in imposing the penalty of transportation to Bermuda on the State offenders, violated any one of the restrictive clauses of the Imperial Act. With the question in a Constitutional point of view, it is not my purpose in this place to deal, my arguments are directed merely to the legality of the Ordinance, to shew that, (whether inoperative or not in any respect) it is not illegal,—to shew that the Legislature of Lower Canada, as constituted by the Imperial Parliament, kept within the limits of its authority.

I contend, then, with every deference for those who may have expressed a contrary opinion, that the Legislature of Lower Canada had a legal right to transport any offenders to Bermuda, and under that authority to convey them there if they had "the means," as much as to send them to England and provide "the means," and there to leave such offenders, liable to such restraints as it might please Her Majesty to subject them to. But Her Majesty could only act through the constituted authorities. The constituted authority here was the Governor, who under sanction of the Legislature of Lower Canada conveyed them, by the means at his disposal, to the Bermudas. There the power of the Legislature of Lower Canada and of the Governor General ceased. When the Prisoners arrived at the Bermudas, it was the business of Her Majesty's Government either through the Imperial Parliament or through the Local Legislature to retain them there. It was perfectly well understood here in the passing of the Ordinance, that there was no power in this Legislature to pass any Laws which could be binding in the Bermudas; and the Ordinance was confined to its recited object—"to provide for the present security of this Province by effectually preventing the several persons" named in it "from being at large therein."

It was foreseen that the Governor of the Bermudas might have refused his assistance in this emergency and declined to allow the prisoners to be landed, or, if landed, might have instantly released them, or if not, that before Her Majesty could procure any laws to be passed subjecting the parties to the necessary restraints to prevent their return, the parties might apply to the Courts of the Bermudas for their writs of Habeas Corpus, and might be enlarged and quit the Island to return. Opposition to an Ordinance intended as, and being in fact, an extension of Her Majesty's mercy towards the individuals who were the objects of it; would probably have weakened the claim to a future permission to return to the Province, a permission which, if the British Parliament had adopted and continued the Ordinance, would have become of the utmost importance to the persons transported; but the "present security" of the Province was further guarded by a severe penalty (not, as is evident from the Ordinance, to be inflicted without trial) upon such as should return without due permission. As the Ordinance stands, coupled with the 1st Victoria, chap. 9, it simply imposes banishment for four years from the Province under the penalty of death. The returning from transportation before the period for which it is inflicted, is subjected to capital punishment by many Provincial Statutes, in cases where the original offence is not to be punishable. To have imposed a lesser penalty would have been to lessen the original offence of Treason, which those transported had admitted.

In conclusion, I maintain that in no respect is the Ordinance illegal, although in part it might have been inoperative without the co-operation of Her Majesty's Ministers and the British Legislature. Instead of waiting for the express direction of Government, I determined, for the sake of tranquillizing the Province, to anticipate such co-operation, and to remove the prisoners instantly.

I have, &c.

No. 68.

Castle of St. Lewis,
Quebec, September 28th, 1838.

MY LORD,

I had the honour to receive, on the evening of the day before yesterday, your Lordship's Despatch of August 18th, (No. 89,) with its inclosures. That communication was accompanied by private letters, and by full reports of the recent proceedings in both Houses of Parliament, with respect to my mission.

The information thus supplied, enables me to fulfil the promise made in my Despatch of the 25th instant, (No. 66,) of fully explaining to your Lordship the grounds on which I had determined to resign my Commissions of High Commissioner and Governor-General of Her Majesty's Colonies in North America.

The Act of mere Indemnity which has passed the British Legislature, no doubt differs very materially, as your Lordship observes, from the Bill introduced by Lord Brougham. The Bill would have placed such restrictions on my authority as to deprive me of the legal power indispensable to the temporary government of this distracted country—the Act only purports to save me harmless from the consequences of a measure declared to have been illegal. Still my position has been, morally and practically, so much weakened as to be no longer tenable with a hope of beneficial results; but I will not detain your Lordship, by drawing any further comparison between the Bill that was proposed and the Act that has passed. The latter measure is now irrevocable and must be considered on its own merits. It is only in that point of view—which, however, does not exclude any of the Parliamentary proceedings, which resulted in the passing of the Act—that I request your Lordship's attention to the following observations on the subject:

Your Lordship informs me, that "Her Majesty's Government felt it their duty to offer a decided opposition" to the second reading of the Bill introduced by Lord Brougham. But in what, I venture to ask, did that opposition result?—In a concession far more calculated, as it appears to me, to weaken my hands, than would have been any vote of the House of Lords—in which, it is notorious, that Her Majesty's Government have never commanded a majority. A vote of the House of Lords, adverse to Her Majesty's Government, or merely condemnatory of any proceeding of mine, would have been considered almost as a matter of course in the present state of parties; and would, if it had been decidedly opposed by the Ministers, have left my authority untouched, because it would have been, attributed to the mere party motives of a powerful Opposition. Supposing that such a vote had been passed, there would have remained the House of Commons, where, I am bound to presume, that a measure decidedly opposed by Her Majesty's Ministers, would not have been adopted.—In that case, the Parliamentary proceedings on this subject would but have resembled many others which have occurred of late years and which have left the Government unharmed by a hostile proceeding of the House of Lords. In that case, I should have suffered no greater inconvenience than such as any Government must be subject to, which is vigorously and almost constantly opposed by a majority in the Upper House. As respects these Colonies, I do believe that the inconvenience would not have been very great; because the adverse proceeding would have been attributed altogether to the state of parties in England, and would have been considered as foreign to the state of affairs in this part of the world. But at all events, in that case, my acts and my authority would have been supported by the House of Commons and the Crown. How different is my actual position! In order to stop hostile proceedings in the House of Lords, (for after your Lordship's Despatches, approving of all my measures, I can discover no other motive for the step,) Her Majesty's Ministers determine on advising the Crown to render abortive the most important act of my Government. The Crown, therefore, whose Representative I am, condemns me on the ground that I have acted illegally. But this is not all. The manner of the condemnation requires (at least so it is supposed by those who advise it) that I should be saved harmless from the consequences of the measure which, whatever it may have been before, they render null and void. They imagine that I require such a shield. They think that without it the prisoners now in Bermuda, whom I refused to subject to the jurisdiction of such a tribunal as would assuredly have condemned them to death—whose property as well as lives I spared—whom I saved from the ignominy of transportation as convicts—whose parole of honour I took as sufficient security for their not attempting to escape—that these men are to sue me for damages for such treatment. This is the opinion of Her Majesty's Ministers; and therefore, having disallowed the Ordinance, they support in both Houses the Bill of Indemnity.

The condemnation of the most important measure of my Government has thus become the act of the whole British Legislature. In addition to all this, the Act requires that it should be proclaimed here; and I am thus compelled, unless I should instantly resign, to join in the condemnation that has been passed on me by the Crown, the Lords, and the Commons. I may surely be permitted to think, that adverse votes of the House of Lords would have been infinitely preferable to the course which has been taken in order to avert that evil.

Being determined, above all things, that no personal feeling or consideration shall have any influence on my conduct in the present state of public affairs in this Colony, I shall proclaim the Act of Indemnity in the next Official Gazette. If I resigned immediately, that duty would be imposed on the Administrator of the Government. The reasons which induce me to abstain from resigning at present will be stated hereafter. Meanwhile I have to explain the grounds on which it appears to me that my permanent occupation of this Government would be rather injurious than beneficial to Her Majesty's service.

In my anxious examination of this question, I have endeavoured to disregard the past, excepting as it affects the future. By this course I have hoped to gain two advantages—first, that of simplifying the subject; and secondly, which is far more important, that of preventing the intrusion of wounded personal feelings into a deliberation which should be conducted solely with a view to public objects.

Recurring to the past, then, only as it bears on the future, I am desirous to point out what seems to have been overlooked by every body in England, that the particular measure which has been condemned forms but a part, though a very important one, of the whole policy of the Special Council, and the Proclamation of Amnesty issued on the day of Her Majesty's Coronation. That policy was not indicated by either of those measures separately. The two measures were indeed one—having been divided into two parts merely for the purpose of imposing on the Governor and Council all that required legislation, and was of a penal character: and making all that partook of mercy and kindness the act of the Queen. Nor was the whole policy proclaimed on that day, to be found in the Ordinance and Proclamation alone. The Official Gazette, in which these documents were published, contained a most unusual announcement, in the following terms:—"We are authorised to state, that His Excellency the Governor-General is actively engaged in the preparation of measures, which will, as soon as it may be possible, be embodied in Ordinances of the Governor and Special Council, relative to a Jury Law; a Bankrupt Law; the Judicial and Municipal Institutions of the whole Province; General Education; the establishment of Registry Offices; and the equitable commutation of Fendal Tenures." If it had been possible to prepare measures of this kind in time, they would have appeared in the form of Ordinances on the same day as the Proclamation of Amnesty; but the promise was considered sufficient to indicate my sense of the necessity of very important changes in the Civil and Municipal Law of the Province. The whole policy which I intended to pursue, was embodied in that promise; in the Amnesty; and in that part of the preamble of the Proclamation, whereby is asserted, "Her Majesty's firm resolve to punish, with the utmost severity, any future act of insubordination—and more especially to prevent, in future, the occurrence of dissensions similar to those by which the Province has been disturbed, by effectually removing all causes of dissension, so that the Province might be established in peace as a loyal and truly British Colony." I had made up my mind, it was evident, to the necessity of rendering the Institutions of this Province thoroughly British; but it was also plain, I hope, that admitting as to the future, the necessity of measures which would be unpalatable to the majority of French Canadians, I was desirous to deal very leniently with such of them as had, by their conduct, become amenable to severe punishment. As to the past, I proclaimed forgiveness and oblivion—as to the future, British Institutions—as to the present, security against the disaffected. The only provision for the security of the Colony, has been rendered null. Moreover, since the different parts of the whole scheme of policy were intimately blended with, and dependent on each other, the destruction of one portion of it affects all the rest: not merely by giving a triumph to the disaffected generally, and allowing the worst of them an opportunity to play over again their part as leaders in a rebellion, but also (and this is the main consideration) by shewing that no reliance is to be placed upon the validity of any law, or the performance of any engagement proceeding from the extraordinary authority which has been created for the temporary Government of this country. If I have described my own policy aright, I shall not err in representing that of the Imperial Government as one productive of insecurity at present—and of doubt, uncertainty and want of confidence, as to the future.

The particular defect of the Ordinance which has led to the disallowance of the whole of it, was occasioned by no oversight of the extraordinary Legislature of Lower Canada. I believed, and still believe, for the reasons assigned by me in my Despatch No. 67, that by the Legislative powers entrusted to that body, we were authorised to banish persons from the Province, and that according to a constant course of precedents furnished by the Legislation of the Province, our power extended to the custody and disposal of Provincial Prisoners while on the high seas, and to landing them on the shore of Bermuda, or any other portion of the globe in which free access to strangers is allowed by the municipal laws. Further—it was well known to us, our jurisdiction did not extend; once landed in Bermuda, the prisoners were subject only to the laws of that Island. It was known that they would not arrive there as convicts, (especial pains had been taken to spare them that indignity) and that the laws therefore which held good with regard to ordinary convicts, would not apply to them. It was known that they could be forcibly detained within the precincts of Bermuda only by provisions to be made for that purpose by the Legislature of the Island, or by the Imperial Parliament. The words of the Ordinance which authorised Her Majesty to impose restraints on the Prisoners in a Colony not subject to our jurisdiction, could give Her Majesty no power which she did not possess before. It was never supposed that they could; and that part of the Ordinance was passed with a perfect knowledge that it was wholly inoperative, and that the prisoners could not be compelled to remain in Bermuda without the adoption of measures in aid of our legislation by the authorities of the Island or of the Empire. The words were inserted for the double purpose of showing that the prisoners were not to be subjected to the ordinary treatment of ordinary convicts, and a relieving the loyal inhabitants of the Province from the apprehension of the immediate return of these dangerous persons to its limits or its vicinity.

As it happened, however, the object of the provision in question was attained, in spite of its legal inadequacy: for the detention of the prisoners in Bermuda was secured by their voluntary parole.

Except for the purposes I have mentioned, the words objected to were, in fact, mere surplusage. If, as common sense points out, they were merely inoperative, their insertion is a matter of no importance. If the Lawyers are technically right in confounding two very distinct words and ideas, and describing as illegal all Legislative provisions which are obviously inoperative, it may be inferred that Her Majesty could not give her sanction to this enactment, and that the disallowance of the Ordinance was a matter of technical necessity. But in either case, it was the business of a wise Government and Legislature, to correct the errors or supply the imperfections which had their origin in a zeal for humanity, and for the integrity of the Empire. I speak of a policy, of which the leading features and animating spirit have now been sanctioned by almost universal assent. It has hardly been impugned even in this Province, by those whose friends I could not entirely relieve from all punishment for rebellion, or those whose sense of justice I shocked not a little, by the supposed inadequacy of my penalties. It has been generally and cordially approved, even in its details, by the people of the neighbouring States—the people in the world the most competent to judge without passion, of the local necessities of the case, and not the least ardent in their love of freedom and their respect for the law. It has not, even amid the acrimony of party debates at home, been denied by any person whose opinion has any weight with any body, to possess the merits (all by which I set much store) of substantial justice, mercy, and sound discretion. A Government and Legislature anxious for the tranquillity of this wretched country—for the interests of humanity—for the honour of the British Crown, would not have lightly foregone the benefits which such a policy promised, and had already in a great measure secured;—they would have taken great care that its great and beneficent purpose should not be frustrated by any error which they could rectify, or by the want of any power which they could supply. If they found the Ordinance inoperative, they would have given it effect; if legal, they would have made it law.

Instead of this, Her Majesty's Ministers, at the instance of a branch of the Legislature, have decided on disallowing the whole Ordinance; and in place of finding the co-operation which I had a right to expect, I am favoured with an Act of Indemnity, for which I can be thankful only because it purports to relieve others from any penalty incurred by their ready acquiescence in my views. The disallowance of the Ordinance has, I repeat, rendered null all the repressive portion of my policy; it has also, by extending a complete pardon to all, deprived me, who do not shrink from the ungracious task of framing measures obnoxious to one class of the people, of the power to make them some compensation, by further acts of gracious kindness. Finally, it overthrows all confidence in my engagements; it deprives my pledged word of all weight and value. I should now legislate, if at all, with the expectation that each measure would be scanned and criticised in a hostile spirit, and not improbably rendered abortive by the Supreme authority. A delegated authority, when not sustained by the power that has bestowed it, loses all moral force; and I need not remind your Lordship, that a Government of mere physical force is neither possible on this continent, nor would be otherwise than wholly inconsistent with my feelings and opinions. Therefore, I am satisfied that the proceedings of the Government at home, entirely preclude me from carrying out the policy which I had proclaimed, and on which I have acted. I could not adopt a new policy now, without bringing ridicule on all concerned. I am thus disabled from rendering any important service to the public in my present situation. By retaining an authority which has become merely nominal, as regards the great purposes for which it was created, I should wilfully delude the public with false hopes, and deliberately provide for a more bitter disappointment. These are the main grounds on which I persevere in the determination of resigning, announced to you in my Despatch No. 66.

But these, though the principal, are not the only reasons which induce me to resign. The late proceedings at home have not merely, by destroying the moral power of my Government, deprived me of all the necessary means of carrying into effect a policy, of which the Ordinance in question was a small, though essential part, but have, by the disallowance of that particular measure, imposed on the Government of this Province the most serious practical difficulties. I have already called your Lordship's attention to the fact, that the disallowance of the Ordinance annuls all the measures of precaution and punishment which I have adopted; and that the universal operation of Her Majesty's Proclamation of Amnesty, limited by no exceptions save those now invalidated, establishes an impunity absolutely co-extensive with crime—and places the leaders of the rebellion precisely in the same situation as that which they occupied before their recent unsuccessful attempt. I find that this result was not wholly overlooked in the debates in Parliament: and that it was suggested that some precautions should be taken by the authority, which invalidated our acts, to avert the mischief thereby occasioned. Though much was said, however, nothing has been done: the work is left to be performed by the Provincial Legislature—and your Lordship is kind enough to suggest the course, which you think it advisable that we should adopt in the present emergency. The question of the disposal of the persons implicated in the late insurrection was one originally foreign to my mission—an obstacle left in my path by previous neglect in one quarter or another. I succeeded in removing it: the effects of its existence had been effaced. It is now placed in my way once more—with this additional disadvantage, that, having all that is difficult and odious to do over again, I had lost the power of accompanying it with an act of grace. I have to punish without pardoning—and justice having been now balked of its due, I am to execute whatever vengeance the interposition of the Home authorities may have left within my reach.

The suggestion made by your Lordship, appears to me liable not only to this, but to other objections. Her Majesty's Government, feeling it their duty, as you say, "to leave me in no uncertainty as to their views on the course which it may be expedient now to adopt with regard to the persons who, in consequence of the disallowance of the Ordinance, can no longer be liable to its provisions," suggests the passing another Ordinance, banishing from the Province the eight persons who had been sent to Bermuda, and forbidding their return under some penalty "short of death."

Your Lordship appears, in a subsequent passage, to desire that such an Ordinance should apply to the whole of the "persons whom, in the exercise of a sound and wise discretion, I have excepted from the Amnesty." This would include Mr. Papineau, and the others, whom, being at large and absent from the Province, the disallowed Ordinance had sentenced to banishment; but from a paragraph immediately following, which refers to the course practicable under an Ordinance of Sir John Colborne's, I am led to suppose that you look to a suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act as sufficient for effecting the exclusion of those dangerous persons.

If the Ordinance which you propose, were to exclude only the eight persons now in Bermuda, it would be useless and iniquitous. There would be no justice in punishing Mr. Bouchette for being taken, while Mr. Gagnon, the companion of his guilty enterprise, is allowed to return, unmolested, to his home—or in dooming Dr. Wolfred Nelson to a severer lot than that assigned to his brother, who was not only guilty of Treason previous to leaving the Province, but has since invaded it at the head of an armed band of foreigners and refugees. If it be politic to allow Mr. Papineau to return and resume his former course, it were, surely, a heedless and petty cruelty to banish from their homes his bolder, and therefore less dangerous tools.

If the Ordinance were to include Mr. Papineau, and the others who had been banished without a trial or confession of guilt, the ends of substantial justice would be attained in the same way as in the disallowed Ordinance—and the new Ordinance would be liable to the same objections as those urged against the former one. Your Lordship, I know, does not participate in these objections; but experience has shewn me that it is necessary, in the present times, for those exercising an arduous responsibility far from home, to look to the opinions, not only of the Ministers, but also of the Opposition. And in following a course similar to that, which has been already impugned by your Lordship's opponents in Parliament, I do not feel quite sure that the same power which has induced Her Majesty's Government to cancel an act, of which you had already declared their approbation, might not compel them to disallow the very course suggested by themselves. The mere substitution of a milder punishment than that of death, would obviate none of the objections, made on principle, to the infliction of any penalty without trial. No one can imagine that capital punishment would ever have been wantonly inflicted by one, who has deviated from the ordinary law, in order solely that he might exercise a more than ordinary clemency. That penalty was announced in the Ordinance, because it seemed necessary, according to the general practice of civilized nations, to enforce submission to the second in the scale of penalties, by a threat of the highest. To call an act innocent in itself, by the name, and subject it to the penalties of treason, is not more revolting to strict notions of ordinary law, than to call it felony or misdemeanor, and punish it with banishment, imprisonment or fine.

Your Lordship suggests that this new policy should be completed by a suspension of the Habeas Corpus; and such a measure I am aware has been suggested, as a matter of course, by some Speakers in Parliament, who profess most regard for the British Constitution. I cannot bring myself to rate the great guarantee of personal liberty as so unimportant a part of the British Constitution, or of those securities which should be possessed by every civilized community. On the contrary, I am inclined to think it quite as important, and quite as sacred from heedless and unnecessary violation, as any, without exceptions, of the provisions made for fair and open trial. And I must own, that I have seen with no little regret, how much men's minds appear to have been familiarized with the idea of suspending the Habeas Corpus, by the frequency with which it has been done in the bad periods of our own history, and the consequent facility with which, in these debates, it seems to have been proposed as a mere matter of course, by some of those who express the greatest horror at any deviation from what they call a constitutional course. To me, my Lord, it appears that men's notions of right and freedom would be much more shocked at such an universal violation of every man's dearest right, than by any summary process adopted for the punishment of the undeniable guilt of a few. I do not say that there are no circumstances under which I would consent to a suspension of the Habeas Corpus;—I should not hesitate to adopt it in any emergency in which the notoriety of a general outbreak, or of a general purpose of insurrection, might render it advisable that a Government should be for a while armed with a power of arresting the objects of its suspicion without bringing them to immediate trial. But I see no necessity, on account of any existing evil in this Province, for taking such a step now: and the present Legislative authority of this Province will be capable of being brought into immediate action at the moment in which any danger may declare itself. On no other ground can I consent to propose such a measure for adoption by the Special Council. I cannot think it justifiable to take away the franchises of a whole people, in order to punish a few known and dangerous individuals, or to guard against the misconduct of twenty-three men, by enveloping them in a general forfeiture of personal liberty.

Had your Lordship's suggestion of these measures been accompanied by positive instructions for their instant adoption, I should have felt that, in consequence of my insuperable repugnance to taking any part in them, it would be my duty to resign immediately the Government of this Province, and to give up my authority to a successor who would carry your orders into effect; but as you expressly state, that you "do not intend to prescribe to me the precise course to which you have adverted, as that which, under existing circumstances, ought to be adopted," I conclude that you mean not in any way to fetter my discretion. I shall therefore pursue the course which, taking all the circumstances of the case into consideration, I regard as best calculated for the public service.

I do not instantly resign my authority, because I have made engagements, and imposed upon myself obligations, which it is absolutely necessary that I should fulfil. In my character of Governor-General, I have set on foot the reform of some practical grievances, which are among the many that have been long suffered by the people, and which, I fear, they might continue to suffer, if the governing hand which has first ventured to meddle with abuses in this country, were suddenly withdrawn from the work of reformation. In some cases, both of individuals and classes, I have held out hopes, and made virtual promises, to which every sense of honour and of truth commands me, as far as remains in my power, to give effect. In my character of High Commissioner, I have instituted inquiries, some of them relating to the whole of these Colonies, and all to subjects of great importance. Considering the great expense necessarily incurred in carrying out the objects of my mission, and the lamentable want of information upon these subjects which prevails in the Imperial Legislature, I should take shame to myself, if, except under some absolute necessity, I were to leave these inquiries incomplete. Above all, I am desirous that my mission should not prove fruitless as to its main object, namely, the preparation of a plan for the future Government of this part of the British Empire. Such a plan could only be framed upon ample information as to the wants, dispositions and interests, as well conflicting as general, of every class of Her Majesty's subjects in these Colonies. I have endeavoured to gain such information from all quarters, but have not yet completed that very arduous task; still it is so near completion, that I cannot bear to think of leaving it unfinished; and, if unfinished, productive of no other result than a waste of public money, of the laborious exertions of those whom I have employed, and of the patience of the people of these Colonies, which I do solemnly assure your Lordship may be tried overmuch. I have no doubt that, in a few weeks more, nothing essential to this object will be left undone. I shall then return to England without loss of time, for the purpose of laying at the feet of the Queen the Commissions of Governor-General and High Commissioner, with which Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to honour me. And then, in my place in Parliament at least, I may be able to render my mission productive of good, by satisfying the British people and Legislature, of the absolute necessity of steadily pursuing towards these Colonies a very different policy from any that has yet been adopted by the Parent State.

Even if I can do no other good there, I shall be able to use my experience of this Colony in checking the too prevailing disposition of Parliament to decide on the vital interests of this distant community according to the principles of a Constitution, and the feelings of a state of society, the least analogous to those which prevail here. The Government of these Provinces requires something more than a knowledge of the Common and Statute Laws of England. Though the object of wise and benevolent statesmen should be to establish the great principles of the British Constitution, and the English law in the Province, it must not be supposed that this is yet done, and I trust that the acts of future Governors will be submitted to the decision of some more competent Judges than those who profess to try such acts by the mere principles of English law.

My acts have been despotic, because my delegated authority was despotic. Until I learn from some one better versed in the English language, that despotism means any thing but such an aggregation of the supreme executive and legislative authority in a single hand, as was deliberately made by Parliament in the Act which constituted my present powers, I shall not blush to hear that I have exercised a despotism. I shall feel anxious only to know how well and how wisely my countrymen think that I have used, or rather exhibited an intention of using my great powers.

Nor shall I regret that I have wielded these despotic powers in a manner which, as an Englishman, I am anxious to declare utterly inconsistent with the British Constitution, until I learn what are the Constitutional principles that remain in force when a whole Constitution is suspended—what principles of the British Constitution hold good in a country in which the people's money is taken without the people's consent—in which Representative Government is annihilated—in which Martial Law has been the law of the land—and in which the Trial by Jury exists only to defeat the ends of justice, and to provoke the righteous scorn and indignation of the community. I should, indeed, regret the want of applicability in my own principles of government, or my own incapacity for applying them, had the precise course which I should think it imperative on me to pursue in a land of freedom and of law, proved to be the only one which I could adopt in a country, which long mis-government and sad dissensions have brought to a condition which may fairly be described as one of constituted Anarchy.

SIR,

THE Earl of Durham having informed me, that he has transmitted for your guidance and information, copies of his Despatches to me of the 25th, 26th and 28th September, (Numbers 66, 67 and 68.) I feel it my duty to enclose herewith, for your information, copies of the answers which I have returned to those Despatches, together with the copy of a Despatch which I addressed to the Earl of Durham, on the 15th instant, in reference to his Proclamation of the 9th October last.

His Excellency Major-General

SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K.C.H.

(Copy.)

No. 126.

*Downing Street,
26th October, 1838.*

MY LORD,

SINCE the date of my Despatch of the 19th instant, Her Majesty's Government have had under their consideration your Lordship's Despatches, No. 66, of the 25th of September, and No. 68, of the 28th of September.

Her Majesty's Government observe that the first of these Despatches was written before your Lordship had received any official information of the proceedings which took place in Parliament with regard to the Ordinance of the Special Council of Lower Canada for providing for the security of the Province, or of the course adopted by Her Majesty's Government in reference to those proceedings. That Despatch was written, consequently under the feelings and impressions which could scarcely fail to be excited by the partial information, derived only from the public prints, of what occurred in the earlier stages of the Parliamentary discussions on the subject. Under such circumstances, unacquainted as you were in a great measure with the considerations which had led Her Majesty's Government to the conviction that the course which they reluctantly felt themselves bound to pursue was, in the actual situation of the question with which they were called to deal, the one least likely to prove injurious to the public interests, and to your authority, and resenting, as it was natural to do, the imputation of an abuse of arbitrary power, it cannot be matter of surprise that your Lordship should have conceived your position in Canada to be so materially affected as to leave you little hope of a successful result to your mission.

Fully entering into the feelings occasioned by the report of the earlier proceedings, only in the House of Lords, Her Majesty's Government do not think it necessary, with reference to the first of your Despatches, to do more than express their deep concern, that yielding to the impulse of the moment, you should at once have publicly announced your determination to resign your authority.

On the evening of the day subsequent to the date of your first Despatch, your Lordship appears to have received my Despatch of the 18th August, together with full reports of the proceedings in both Houses of Parliament, with regard to your mission. Her Majesty's Government deeply regret that with this full information before you, your Lordship, at the date of your Despatch of the 28th September, still considered your position no longer tenable with a prospect of beneficial results. But they have been relieved from much of the apprehension which they would otherwise have entertained for the security of the Province, and the interests entrusted to your care, by the assurance contained in your last Despatch, that it was not your intention abruptly to relinquish your authority, or to abandon the post which you occupy, without giving effect to the reform of some practical grievances, to the redress of which you had applied yourself; without completing the main inquiries which, in your character of High Commissioner, you had instituted; and above all, without accomplishing the chief object of your mission, in the preparation of a plan for the future Government of the British North American Provinces. Her Majesty's Government fully appreciate the motives which have induced you to postpone your intended resignation, until these important ends shall have been attained; and they are persuaded, that the same regard to the public interests which had deterred you from a sudden and immediate resignation, will prevent you hazarding the tranquillity of the Canadas, or placing their security in jeopardy, by the premature relinquishment of your authority—should any circumstances not contemplated at the date of your Despatch convince you, that your departure at the time which you then anticipated, would be attended with results dangerous to the peace and safety of the British North American Provinces.

Connected with this important object, the safety of the Provinces, is the question to which your Lordship adverts, of the mode of preventing the evil to be apprehended from the impunity of the authors or leaders of revolt. Your Lordship objects to what is called the suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act, as a measure involving a whole people in a penalty in order to punish a few; and you likewise condemn the levity with which a measure of this severe and arbitrary nature is spoken of in Parliamentary debates.

There can be no question, that an Act giving power of arbitrary detention and imprisonment is one of a serious nature, not to be resorted to without necessity founded on circumstances of public danger. But Her Majesty's Government cannot agree with Your Lordship that these temporary suspensions of a constitutional Law, do in reality affect the whole people unless upon occasions when the remedy is improperly applied to the existing evil.—That remedy when properly applied, is intended to counteract the designs of a few leaders, and to separate them from the great body of their followers. In this manner it was used after the Revolution of 1688, and after the accession of the House of Hanover; and the stability of these two great settlements was perhaps in a considerable degree owing to the readiness and decision with which this remedy was applied. In such cases the leaders of Revolt, and the chiefs of conspiracy, know themselves to be struck at, and feel their safety endangered; but the great body of the people, relying on the general spirit and administration of the Law, fear nothing from its momentary interruption, and enjoy their liberty unmolested. Such, it appears to us, is the case of Lower Canada, at a moment when rebellion has but recently been suppressed, and preparations for a renewal of it are threatened. At such a moment the loyal and peaceable inhabitants of the Province will be more secure, while the fomenters of revolt are in danger, and on the other hand, if the fomenters of revolt can act with impunity, the peaceable inhabitants are in danger. Your Lordship asserts in your Despatch that in the present state of the Province "Trial by Jury exists only to defeat the ends of justice, and to provoke the righteous scorn and indignation of the community." This a picture of a most lamentable state of things, of which the truth I fear must be admitted, and the evil cannot be overated. On the due execution of justice the whole relations of society depend. If men find that the murder of their relatives and friends is not visited with retribution in a Court of Justice, it can scarcely be expected that they will abstain from a recurrence to the personal revenge which, in reliance upon Law, they had relinquished.

This state of insecurity imperatively requires a remedy. It is therefore the desire of Her Majesty's Government that an Ordinance should be passed by the Special Council of Lower Canada, constituting a Tribunal for the trial of Treason and Murder.

With respect to the manner in which such a Tribunal can be formed, it is not proposed to bind your Lordship's discretion. Learned Judges alone might constitute a sufficient Court for the trial of these offences; or it might be better to form Courts more nearly resembling Courts Martial,—or to combine both these species of Tribunal. But in any case where trial by jury has excited the righteous scorn and indignation of the community, it cannot be difficult to form tribunals more impartial and more competent than the existing juries. The cautious habits of learned Lawyers, and the fairness usually exhibited by Englishmen, even to enemies taken in open resistance, added to the publicity of their proceedings, would be a security that none but the most conclusive evidence would lead to convictions.

It would not be safe to postpone the formation of such tribunals until a new insurrection may happen to break out, for the same objections which induced Her Majesty's Government to reject the proposition to subject the prisoners charged with being concerned in the late revolt, to new tribunals constituted after the commission of the offences, would again apply. Men would complain that they were tried by an ex-post-facto law. While, therefore, the power of detention and imprisonment without trial may well be reserved for a period of emergency, of which your Lordship will be the judge, it is the desire of Her Majesty's Government that you should at once prepare, and propose to the Special Council, an Ordinance for constituting Tribunals by which future rebels and murderers may be tried. The leaders and agents of insurrection will thus be forewarned, and cannot justly complain if they are made amenable for their crimes.

I have thought it unnecessary to enter, in this Despatch, into a detailed consideration of the observations which you have addressed to me on the course pursued by Her Majesty's Government, with regard to the affairs of Canada;—to the assurances contained in my Despatch of the 18th August, of the undiminished confidence of Her Majesty's Government in your Lordship, and of their cordial approval of the spirit and tenor of your administration, I can only add, that subsequent experience has tended to justify and confirm their persuasion of the general wisdom and soundness of the policy by which you have been guided. They continue to feel that, under the difficult and peculiar circumstances forced on them by the proceedings taken in the House of Lords, they adopted that course which was calculated to render those proceedings as little injurious as possible to the public interests, and to the great objects of your mission. They could not indeed hope altogether to neutralize the evil consequences of what appeared to them an ill-timed and injudicious interference with the exercise of those powers with which Parliament had invested the Governor of Canada; but when they review the unequivocal proofs of respect and esteem which have been largely tendered to you in the North American Provinces—when they consider the repeated testimony of persons, having a deep interest in the welfare and security of those Provinces, to the beneficial tendency of your Administration—and when they observe the unusual concurrence of men of various parties and political opinions in deprecating your intended departure, Her Majesty's Government cannot but think that on the first receipt of the intelligence of the Parliamentary proceedings, to which reference has been made, you over-rated the effect of those proceedings on the public mind—both in this country and in North America—and formed an incorrect estimate of the state of public opinion with regard to them.

Her Majesty's Government are persuaded that the more closely the main acts of your Administration are reviewed in all their bearings, the more apparent will it be to impartial observers, and to men actuated by a sincere regard to national interests, that those acts have been conceived in a spirit, and executed with a firmness, alike worthy of your reputation and adapted to the exigency of the circumstances with which you were called to struggle. Impressed with these sentiments, and in the absence of any precise information as to the time which may be occupied in the completion of the several objects contemplated in your Despatch of the 28th of September, Her Majesty's Government will abstain, until they hear further from your Lordship, from tendering any advice to Her Majesty as to the succession to your Government. They have received, with much satisfaction, Sir John Colborne's acquiescence in their request, that he would continue during the approaching winter in the command of Her Majesty's Troops in Canada; and as in the event of your Lordship's return to England, the administration of the affairs of Lower Canada will, in the ordinary course, devolve on that Officer, Her Majesty's Government can feel no difficulty in confiding to his hands the security of the Province, until the appointment of a successor in the office of Governor-General.

I have &c.

No. 133.

Downing Street,
12th November, 1838.

MY LORD,

IN my Despatch of the 26th ultimo, I abstained from any notice of your Lordship's Despatch, No. 67, of the 28th September, and of the observations contained in your Despatch No. 68, of the same date, on the proceeding which, in your opinion, ought to have been taken by Her Majesty's Government, with regard to the Ordinance of the Special Council of Lower Canada, therein referred to—having thought it desirable to reserve, for a separate communication, my remarks on those subjects.

Her Majesty's Government have attentively considered the statements which you have addressed to me, of your views as to the legality of that Ordinance. Without intending to enter on a legal discussion, or to offer any further opinion than that which, on the authority of the Law Officers of the Crown, I have already conveyed to you on this subject, I have to express my satisfaction that little difference of opinion exists between your Lordship and ourselves as to the extent to which any valid legal objection could be urged against the Ordinance. Waiving the question of your right to send to Bermuda persons under restraint by virtue, not of an order of sentence of transportation, but of an Ordinance of the Special Council of Lower Canada, subjecting them to banishment to that particular place, it is admitted on all hands, that so far as it purported to confer on Her Majesty the power of imposing restraint on the parties named in it, while in Bermuda, the Ordinance was at least inoperative.

Your Lordship has now informed me that you were always fully aware of this defect; and that "that part of the Ordinance was passed with a perfect knowledge that it was wholly inoperative, and that the prisoners could not be compelled to remain in Bermuda, without the adoption of measures in aid of your legislation by the authorities of the Island, or of the Empire." Your Lordship has further stated it to have been the business of Her Majesty's Government, on the arrival of the prisoners at the Bermudas, either through the Imperial Parliament, or through the local Legislature, to retain them there. Her Majesty's Government regret that, until the receipt of your recent Despatches, they had no reason to believe that such was your view or opinion at the time when the Ordinance was passed.

Neither in your Despatch, transmitting the Ordinance to this country, nor in your Despatch to the Governor of Bermuda, informing him of your having sent the prisoners to that place, was any allusion made to your expectation of the adoption of any such measures. As the prisoners were sent to Bermuda within a few days after the passing of the Ordinance, and consequently long before it could possibly reach this country, the intervention of the Legislature of the Bermudas, on which you now appear to have relied, could not have been made available at the suggestion of Her Majesty's Government, for the purpose of authorising their restraint on their arrival there. That object could only have been attained by a suggestion from yourself to the Governor of Bermuda, of the expediency of recommending to the local Legislature an enactment of the required character, in case that Legislature should have been at the time in Session, and the Governor should have thought that such a recommendation would be favourably received.

The propriety of proposing a measure to the Imperial Parliament, to supply the defect in the Ordinance, did not escape the attention of Her Majesty's Government. It was fully considered by them. Your Lordship will not expect me to state in a Despatch the reasons which induced Her Majesty's Government, after full deliberation, to think such a course inexpedient. That I abstained from adverting to it in my Despatch to your Lordship of the 18th August, was solely owing to the absence of any reference in your previous Despatches to the expectation which it appears your Lordship entertained that such a course would have been adopted.

There is one other topic to which I hoped it would have been unnecessary for me to recur, but which, after the renewed allusion to it in your Lordship's Despatch, No. 66, I cannot altogether pass over in silence—I mean the appointment of Mr. Turton as an Executive Councillor. I abstained from replying to your Despatch of 20th July, (No. 30,) on this subject, from a conviction that the correspondence which had already taken place with regard to it could not be continued, without a wide departure from the ordinary rules of official communications, and without exposing to needless pain the individual who had unfortunately been the occasion of it. The observations, however, which you have made in your Despatch of the 25th September, compel me to remind you that your selection of that gentleman for the office of your legal adviser, was made by you without any previous communication to Lord Melbourne or to myself, and without any knowledge on our part of your intention; and that as soon as it was known to us, Lord Melbourne stated to you the decided objection which he entertained to the appointment. In consequence of this intimation from Lord Melbourne, you waived the appointment, expressing at the same time your intention, in consideration of the painful position in which Mr. Turton would otherwise be placed, that he should proceed to Canada as your private friend.

It was, unquestionably, the firm impression and expectation of Lord Melbourne and myself, that whatever assistance Mr. Turton might render to your Lordship, would be given in a private capacity; and that he was not to fill any official situation connected with your mission.

No. 134.

Downing Street,
15th November, 1838.

MY LORD,

I HAVE had the honour to receive your Lordship's Despatch of the 9th October, (No. 80) enclosing copies of two Proclamations, bearing date respectively the 8th and 9th of that month, and published by you in the Quebec Gazette.

Of the Proclamation of the 8th October, I am commanded to convey to you Her Majesty's approval.

The Proclamation of the 9th of October, Her Majesty's confidential advisers regard, not merely as a deviation from the course which has hitherto been invariably pursued by the Governors of the British possessions abroad, but as a dangerous departure from the practice and principles of the constitution. They consider as open to most serious objection, an appeal by such an officer to the public at large, from measures adopted by the Sovereign, with the advice and consent of Parliament.

The terms in which that appeal has in this instance been made, appear to Her Majesty's Ministers calculated to impair the reverence due to the Royal Authority in the Colony—to derogate from the character of the Imperial Legislature—to excite amongst the disaffected, hopes of impunity—and to enhance the difficulties with which your Lordship's successor will have to contend.

The Ministers of the Crown having humbly submitted this opinion to the Queen, it is my duty to inform you, that I have received Her Majesty's commands to signify to your Lordship, Her Majesty's disapprobation of your Proclamation of the 9th of October.

Under these circumstances, Her Majesty's Government are compelled to admit that your continuance in the Government of British North America, could be attended with no beneficial results.

I presume that before your receipt of this Despatch, your Lordship will have delivered over the Government of Lower Canada to Sir John Colborne, to whom I shall address the requisite instructions for his guidance.

I have, &c.

DESPATCH

FROM THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE LORD GLENELG,

WITH AN ACCOMPANYING PAPER.

FROM THE LORDS COMMISSIONERS OF THE TREASURY,

ON THE SUBJECT OF GOLD AND SILVER COINS:

TRANSMITTED 19TH MARCH, 1839.

(Copy.)

No. 124.

Downing Street,

13th August, 1838.

SIR,

Her Majesty's Government have had under their serious consideration, the Act passed by the Legislature of Upper Canada, during their Session of 1836, entitled, "An Act to repeal and amend certain Acts of this Province, in relation to the gold and silver coins made current by law, and to make further provision respecting the rates at which certain gold and silver coins shall pass current in this Province." This Act was not reserved for the signification of Her Majesty's pleasure, having been passed previously to the receipt in Upper Canada of my circular instructions of 31st August, 1836.

You will be aware, from my Despatch to your predecessor, of 1st March, 1837, that considerable doubts existed in the minds of Her Majesty's Government, as to the propriety of confirming this Act. It appeared to them, that the changes which it was calculated to produce in all monied transactions, were so important and unusual, as to be justified only by some paramount necessity: while neither in the preamble of the Act itself, nor in the Despatch of Sir F. Head, transmitting it, was that necessity explained. The report contained in Sir F. Head's Despatch of the 7th May, 1837, has not removed these doubts—and it would, therefore, have been my duty, under ordinary circumstances, to advise Her Majesty to disallow this Act.

I could not, however, without the greatest reluctance, have tendered to Her Majesty such advice, with reference to any Act which had received the concurrence of both branches of the Legislature of Upper Canada—and that reluctance would have been much increased in the case of an Act so immediately affecting the every day transactions of society, and which having gone into immediate operation, must have influenced all the pecuniary engagements and obligations contracted since its enactment: considering, moreover, that the duration of the Act was limited to four years, of which two have already expired, I have felt myself at liberty to advise Her Majesty not to make any Order in Council on it, thereby leaving it in effect to its operation. But as it is possible, that at the expiration of this Act, a similar bill may again be introduced into the Legislature of Upper Canada, I think it necessary to transmit herewith, for your information, the copy of a paper on the subject, which has been drawn up in the Office of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury. In the general reasoning of this paper I concur—and I attach especial weight to the objections stated to those provisions of the Act, by which the English shilling is valued at 1s. 3d. currency, instead of 1s. 2½d. and the sovereign at £1 4s. 4d. If therefore any bill, similar to the Act in question, should be hereafter introduced into the Legislature of Upper Canada, you will bring under the notice of the Legislative Council and House of Assembly, the arguments stated in the accompanying paper, in order that the defective provisions in the present Act may be avoided. I have no doubt that the Provincial Legislature will admit the force of the objections urged in reference to those provisions, and they will take the necessary steps to remedy them; but if not, you will let it be generally understood, that you would be compelled to reserve, for the signification of Her Majesty's pleasure, any bill for the regulation of the Currency, containing provisions similar to those which, in the present Act, have been objected to by Her Majesty's Government.

I have the honour to be,

UPPER CANADA ACT, OF 1836.

(Copy.)

PREVIOUS to the introduction of British silver into the Province of Upper Canada, the legal denominations of an English crown, an English shilling, and a Spanish dollar, were respectively as follows:

Crown .....	5s. 6d. Currency.
Shilling .....	1s. 1d.
Dollar .....	5s.

According to this scale, a dollar was reckoned equal to 4s. 6d.—54, in English crowns, and to 4s. 7d.—4, in English shillings.

But as a dollar was really worth only 4s. 2d. in English money, crowns and shillings could not circulate in the Province at the rates assigned to them by law.

The Proclamation of 1825 reduced the sterling value of the dollar to 4s. 4d.

With obvious reference to this Proclamation, the Legislature of Upper Canada passed a law, by which the English crown was raised to 5s. 9d. and the English shilling to 1s. 2d.—the dollar being still rated at 5s. currency.

According to this new scale, a dollar was reckoned equal to 4s. 4d.—17, in English crowns, and to 4s. 3d.—43, in English shillings.

British silver being still undervalued with reference to the dollar, both by the King's Proclamation of 1825, and by the local Act last-mentioned, was no sooner issued from the Commissariat Chest, than it was collected and exported, or brought back for bills upon the Treasury. Under these circumstances, when 4s. 4d. was due to the soldier, he received very nearly the same sum in the legal currency of the Province, whether he was paid in British silver, or with a Mexican dollar.

But 4s. 4d. of British silver was really worth one dollar, and one twenty-fifth of a dollar; it was generally, therefore, in his power to dispose of his 4s. 4d. for more than the sum for which 4s. 4d. was legally current. When the soldier availed himself of this advantage, he obtained no more than what was fairly due to him—he obtained no more than a just equivalent for his 4s. 4d.

When paid with a Spanish dollar, he got less than what was justly due to him. He did not complain, however, for he found that in the ordinary market, and according to the law of the Province, a dollar and 4s. 4d. were deemed to be of equal value.

Government gained what the soldier lost.

The metallic par of exchange is 5s. for 4s. 2d. or £120 currency for £100 sterling. This is usually expressed by saying that bills upon London are at 8 per cent. premium.

Thus.....	£100
Premium 8 per cent.....	8

9) 108

£ 120 currency, or 480 dollars ;

which 480 dollars, are worth in London, at 4s. 2d. each, £100.

When the exchange is at 8 per cent. premium, (the metallic level) Government obtains a dollar for 4s. 2d. and with that dollar discharges a debt of 4s. 4d. and thus gains, or saves, about 4 per cent. The bill which passed the Legislature of Upper Canada in 1836, has raised the current denomination of an English crown, from 5s. 9d. to 6s. ; and of an English shilling, from 1s. 2d. to 1s. 3d. ; but leaves the Spanish dollar, at 5s. unaltered. According to this scale, a dollar is equal to 4s. 2d. in English crowns, and 4s. in English shillings.

It is objected to this bill, that it is "disreputable in its principles," and likely to be injurious in its consequences.

But neither the flagrancy of the principle, nor the mischief which the bill is likely to occasion, have been distinctly pointed out.

It is undoubtedly true, that to alter the quality or the denomination of those coins to which existing money contracts have reference, would be both disreputable and unjust. But is this done by the bill in question? Have existing contracts in Canada reference to British silver, or to American dollars? Surely not to the former, for the high rates given to English crowns and English shillings, previous to the passing of this Act, render their use, as the medium of interchange in that colony, wholly impracticable.

It may be said that a debt which, before the passing of this Act, required 4s. 4d. in British silver for its discharge, may now be discharged with 4s. 2d.; but is it true, in point of fact, that before the passing of the Act, a debt of 5s. currency was ever actually discharged by the payment of 4s. 4d. in British Silver? Was the creditor entitled to demand, or did he ever expect to receive this sort of payment? On the contrary, the debtor had the option of discharging his obligation either by the payment of 4s. 4d. in British silver, or by the payment of a dollar worth only 4s. 2d. He naturally preferred the latter. The use of British silver, by its undervaluation with reference to the dollar, was virtually proscribed. It formed no part of the ordinary metallic currency of the Province; nor had existing contracts any practical reference to it.

The question now is, whether it is desirable to exclude British silver altogether from the Province. If this be desirable or expedient, the exclusion will be effectually accomplished by refusing the Royal assent to the bill in question.

If, on the other hand, it is wished to promote the circulation of British silver, the bill now under consideration should be confirmed, with two material exceptions, which I shall advert to hereafter.

Before doing so, however, it is proper to notice a matter of considerable subtlety, and of great importance, which is involved in the question.

Before the passing of the Act in question, when 4s. 4d. sterling was due to a soldier or to a pensioner, he was commonly paid by a dollar, worth only 4s. 2d. sterling, and was satisfied with that payment. Since the passing of the Act, instead of a dollar he receives 4s. 2d. in British silver. In either case he receives 5s. currency; but having been led to believe that a dollar is equal to 4s. 4d. sterling, he naturally concluded that 5s. currency must likewise be equal to 4s. 4d. sterling.

He was strengthened in this conclusion by the mode in which the Canada Bank keeps its account with the Commissariat. When a dollar is paid into the Bank by the Commissariat, credit is given for 4s. 4d. army sterling; when a cheque for 4s. 4d. is drawn by the Commissariat upon the Bank, the Bank has the option of paying the cheque either with a dollar or with 4s. 4d. Before the Act of 1836, the Bank naturally preferred the former mode of payment. Since the Act has become a law, and has enabled the Bank to discharge a debt of 3s. currency with an English half-crown, or a debt of 5s. currency (a dollar) with 4s. 2d. in British silver, the Bank, without any obvious advantage to itself, chooses to pay the Commissariat cheques in British coin, and the pensioner gets 4s. 2d. where he formerly obtained a dollar.

Formerly, the Pensioner received less, and at present he receives less, than his just due. But formerly, he was unconscious of his loss; it is now brought home to his apprehension, by the contact and intervention of British silver.

In Lower Canada, the troops receive a Mexican dollar at the Army rate of 4s. 4d.—apparently without complaint or hesitation. In Nova-Scotia, the troops murmur and are dissatisfied. In the former Province, British silver is greatly undervalued by law, and does not circulate there; in the latter, it obtains circulation, in consequence of being placed on a level with other coins legalized in the Province. In the former case, the troops are satisfied with the dollar at 4s. 4d.; in the latter, they complain.

But the Commissary General at Quebec, in his letter, dated 18th February, 1837, says that the new law of Upper Canada "has not really raised the value of the English coin, but brought down that of the quarter dollar to the level of the shilling."

Of this no proof is given.

In order to establish the accuracy of the Commissary's proposition, it would be necessary to shew that before the passing of the new law, a dollar would command a bill on London for 4s. 4d. and will now command a bill on London for only 4s. or in that proportion; but this cannot be shewn.

The Commissary General's proposition cannot, therefore, be admitted.

The foregoing observations have proceeded on the supposition, that the Upper Canada bill of 1836 reduced the value of the dollar, estimated in British silver, from 4s. 4d. to 4s. 2d.

This is the case, in so far as crowns and half crowns, which are valued at 6s. currency, and at 3s. currency, respectively, are concerned. But the shilling, instead of being valued in exact proportion to the crown and half crown—namely, at 1s. 2½d.—is valued at 1s. 3d. currency.

This, the Cashier of the Upper Canada Bank thinks, was done in order to avoid small fractions. But the small fraction is, in this case, a matter of essential importance, and fraught with important consequences.

The shilling being valued at 1s. 3d. currency, and the dollar at 5s. currency, makes the dollar equal to 4s. in British silver—being an over-valuation of the shilling, with reference to the dollar, of 3½ per cent. This is quite sufficient to drive away, not only English crowns and half crowns, but likewise the dollar itself, from circulation.

The bill is, in this respect, decidedly objectionable. It injuriously affects all existing pecuniary contracts: it is, in this point, "disreputable in principle," and pregnant with mischief.

There is another important alteration made by this Act, which does not appear to be adverted to in any of the papers which I have seen.

In the new Act, the sovereign is valued at £1 4s. 4d. currency, and the American eagle of the coinage of 1834, at 50s. currency. With reference to the sovereign and the American eagle, therefore, the dollar is reckoned equal to 4s. 1⅓d. sterling: now this is the same proportion, within a very small fraction, ( $\frac{1}{5}$ th of a penny,) which is adopted in the new regulations of the mint of the United States—16 grains of fine silver to 1 grain of fine gold. Whether this coincidence was unintentional or designed, I do not venture to offer an opinion; but I have no hesitation in saying, that the ultimate effect of the bill, as it now stands, will be to banish Mexican, and so American dollars, English crowns and half-crowns, from circulation—and to render gold, the legal basis of the metallic currency of the Province, at a depreciation, compared with dollars, of about 1½ per cent.

In his observations on this bill, the Cashier of the Bank of Upper Canada says, that the rate of £1 4s. 4d. given to the sovereign, "is a fraction below the American standard, so that it leaves the Province as soon as it is issued."

But this fraction is too small ( $\frac{1}{5}$ th of a penny, or about 1s. 3d. in £100) to produce that effect. If the fact be as stated by Mr. Ridout, some other cause must be simultaneously in operation to produce it: that other cause, no doubt, is the small paper money of the Province.

On the whole, the result is as follows:

The rate of 1s. 3d. currency, given to an English shilling, is calculated to drive away dollars, crowns and half-crowns, from circulation.

If the rate of the English shilling were altered to its just proportion to the Crown and the dollar—say to 1s. 2½d.—the overvaluation of the sovereign and the eagle, would produce the same effect—so that sovereigns and eagles are the only coins that would obtain circulation in the Provinces.

But the small paper money issued by the Banks, will drive away the sovereigns and the eagles. The ultimate effect of the bill, then, will be, to establish a paper currency, without any admixture of metallic money, except English shillings, considerably injured by wear.

Whatever may have been the intention of the framers of the bill, a more effectual scheme for establishing a paper currency, nominally payable in specie, but practically inconvertible, could not well have been devised.

J. PENNINGTON.

17th March, 1838.

EXTRACT FROM A DESPATCH,

DATED 28TH DECEMBER, 1857,

FROM HER MAJESTY'S PRINCIPAL SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES,

RELATIVE TO THE SURRENDER OF THE

CASUAL AND TERRITORIAL REVENUE OF THE CROWN,

IN UPPER CANADA,

TO THE PROVINCIAL LEGISLATURE.

In the arrangements to be concluded with the Assembly, Her Majesty's Government desire only to secure the efficient and upright discharge of the duties of the Executive Government, and the maintenance of the pledged faith of the Crown.

The Revenues now at the disposal of the Crown in Upper Canada, appear from the Blue Book returns, to have amounted in the year 1836, to £35,399 7s. 5d.: the items of which they consist are stated in the schedule marked A. appended to this Despatch.

Of these Revenues the first item in the annexed schedule, arising from the payments of the Canada Company, and amounting to £20,000, is of a temporary nature, and will altogether cease after the year 1842; but on the other hand, it is not unreasonable to expect an increased return from other sources. Thus, as the population and capital of the Province advance, the sales of Crown lands and timber will naturally be augmented: while by the arrangement concluded with the Ordnance Department, for the sale of the Military Reserve at Toronto, the price of that Reserve, which cannot but be considerable, will, subject to a deduction to be hereafter noticed, be placed at the disposal of the Legislature.

The existing charges on this revenue amount to £32,005: the items of which they consist are stated in the annexed schedule, marked B. Of these items a large proportion may, I conceive, be altogether excluded from the Civil List to be proposed to the local Legislature—while others, though they must for the present be maintained, are yet to be considered only as temporary charges.

In the first class are to be placed the salaries of the Officers mentioned in the margin—the contingent expenses of the Government Office—of the Secretary and Registrar—and of the Administration of Justice—together with that general expenditure, on account of public objects, of an occasional or fluctuating nature: to the support of which the faith of the Crown is not pledged. From the schedule marked C. you will perceive that the total amount of these charges, on an average of three years, is £12,565. The incidental expenditure of the Surveyor-General's Office is omitted in this schedule, as well as in the proposed Civil List—because being, as I presume, for expenses incurred in the management of the Crown Lands, it must, according to the universal practice, be deducted from the gross proceeds of the land revenue, before that revenue is paid over. But in order to prevent any misconception on this subject, you will lay before the Assembly of Upper Canada, annually, within fourteen days of their meeting, a statement of the incidental expenditure during the preceding year, of the Offices connected with the management and sale of the Crown property.

Clerk of Executive Council.
Receiver-General.
Inspector-General.
Speaker of the Legislative Council.
Government Printer.

In excluding these charges from the proposed Civil List, I am influenced by no doubt of their propriety, but by the consideration that there is no sufficient ground for withdrawing them from the annual revision of the Provincial Legislature. I feel confident, that the Assembly of Upper Canada will pay due regard to the fair claims of the Public Officers thus thrown on their liberality; but so soon as you shall have submitted to that House the propositions of Her Majesty's Government, you will apprise those Officers of the change which will probably take place in their situation.

In the second class to which I have referred, that, namely, of charges which must for the present be maintained, but which are only of a temporary nature; the first and the most important is the charge of £6,995 per annum for the Ministers of the different religious communities in Upper Canada. These payments are made under engagements which have been contracted at various times with the representatives of these bodies, and the fulfilment of which they have a right to demand so long as they cannot obtain an equivalent from other public funds in the Province, and as the Crown shall possess funds at its own disposal sufficient to meet their demand after satisfying the claims of the various public services which must necessarily be provided for in order to the efficient conduct of the local Government. An equitable settlement of the Clergy Reserve question to which your attention has been called in a separate Despatch, would, I trust, provide for each of these bodies a secure and permanent provision, which would be far more than an adequate substitute for the payments now made to them from the Crown Revenue. On the other hand, the diminution of this revenue in 1842 by the cessation of the receipts from the Canada Company, would deprive the Crown of the power of continuing these payments on their present footing—nor can I hold out any prospect that it would be in the power of Her Majesty's Government to propose to Parliament to provide from the funds of this country for the support of ecclesiastical establishments in Upper Canada. In the earnest hope, therefore, that your efforts to effect a satisfactory adjustment of the Clergy Reserve question, will be successful, I feel that I am entitled to consider this charge as only a very temporary burthen on the Crown Revenue. For the present, however, and until such arrangements can be effected, it must be retained, subject to the contingency to which I have already referred.

The next charge of a temporary nature, is that for pensions, now amounting to £1,596 10s. 9d, but which will gradually decrease as the interests of the actual receivers cease. As however, the faith of the Crown has been pledged to these payments from funds at its own disposal, this charge must be retained, on the surrender of those funds, subject to an understanding that the Province will have the benefit of whatever reduction may from time to time take place by the gradual diminution of the payments.

The salary and commuted allowance to Mr. Cameron must also be considered as subject to future reduction. In conformity with the assurance heretofore given to that gentleman, his emoluments will be continued during his tenure of office at their former amount, but on the appointment of a successor, the whole salary of the Provincial Secretary will be fixed at £600, a sum, which from Sir John Colborne's Despatch of the 16th April 1834, would seem to be a sufficient remuneration for the duties of the office.

After making these deductions, the whole of the permanent Civil List to be demanded in return for the cession of the Crown Revenues, will amount to £9,000—the temporary charges above alluded to, constitute a further demand of £3,929 10s. 9d. In the schedule marked D, will be found a statement of these charges.

I now proceed to advert to the items of which the permanent Civil List is composed:

1—The charge is a sum of £1500 per annum for the salary of the Lieutenant-Governor, making the entire emoluments of that Officer £3500 a year. This is a departure from the intention respecting the future amount of the Lieutenant-Governor's salary, announced by the Earl of Ripon to Sir J. Colborne, on the 24th of April, 1832, and actually carried into effect in the case of your Predecessor. But it must be observed, that the experience of the last two years has shewn the insufficiency of the civil salary of £3000 a year alone, to support the dignity of the office, without a very considerable departure from the ordinary habits of hospitality observed by the Lieutenant-Governor. At the date of the Earl of Ripon's communication, it was the general practice to appoint to the Government of the British Colonies, Officers holding high military rank, and enjoying considerable military emoluments. Although these emoluments were entirely independent of such appointments, yet being paid out of public funds, they might not improperly be taken into account, in considering the further remuneration to be granted by the public for the additional duties attached to the Administration of a Colonial Government. Under these circumstances, a salary of £3000 sterling per annum, added to the military emoluments, would seem an ample remuneration for the office of Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada—because it would enable the Officer selected for that high station, to discharge the duties and to maintain the dignity of it, without trenching on his private fortune. To this amount, therefore, I should propose to restrict it in the case of an Officer drawing large military emoluments—but where, as in your own case, and that of Sir F. Head, the only remuneration received from the public is the civil salary attached to the office, Her Majesty's Government are of opinion, that that salary should not be less than £3500 a year. Considering the prominent station occupied by the Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada, and the large claims necessarily imposed on him as the Representative of the British Sovereign, I entertain a full confidence that the Assembly of Upper Canada will give a fair consideration to this proposition.

2—The salaries of the Provincial Secretary, the Commissioner of Crown Lands, and Surveyor-General of Woods, and of the Surveyor-General, are the next items on the Civil List. I need not make any further comment on the first of these charges—and with regard to the salary enjoyed by Mr. Sullivan, who fills the offices of Commissioner of Crown Lands and Surveyor-General of Woods, I think it only necessary to observe, that it does not exceed one moiety of that received by his predecessor. The salary proposed for the Surveyor-General is, evidently, no more than an adequate remuneration for the duties of that office.

3—The payments to the Indians form the next item on the Civil List. These payments being made under treaties, and in return for the cession to the Crown of large tracts of land, can, of course, admit of no question.

4—The last item is a sum of £395 for contingencies, on which it seems superfluous to offer any explanation.

These are all the fixed charges for which I consider it necessary to stipulate; but there are two contingent charges to which a portion of the Crown Revenues of Upper Canada are subject, and which it is, therefore, necessary here to notice.

The first of these charges is the expense of surveying the land sold to the Canada Company, and of completing the road through the Clergy Reserves, in the District of Gore—which, by the eighth clause of the definitive agreement with the Company, Her Majesty's Government are bound to undertake. What may be the amount of the expenditure required for these works, or what portion of them may have been already completed, I have no means of stating; but you will, probably, be able to ascertain these points, and afford to the Assembly, should they desire it, a tolerably accurate estimate of the reduction to be made on this account from the payments of the Company.

The second charge of this nature is for the erection of new barracks at Toronto. When it was proposed to the Ordnance Department, in 1833, that the reserve at Toronto should be sold, the Master-General and Board stated that such a proceeding would make it necessary to remove the barracks from their present site. As, however, the grounds of the proposition were the advantages which would thence result to the City of Toronto, the Board consented to the sale on condition that a sufficient site for new barracks should be reserved, and that the expense of erecting them should be defrayed out of the proceeds of the sale; to this condition Her Majesty's Government felt bound to accede, and the obligation of it still exists, although various circumstances have hitherto delayed the commencement of the barracks. But in transferring to the controul of the Provincial Legislature the proceeds of this reserve, it is necessary that the conditions on which the sale of it was permitted, should be distinctly explained. The amount required for the barracks will not, I apprehend, exceed £10,000—while the proceeds of the reserve will, probably, be not less than £60,000.

In stating the resources from which an addition may be expected to the Casual and Territorial Revenue, I have not adverted to the lands ceded by the Indian Tribes in the autumn of 1836: because, however valuable those lands may be, their proceeds will not, for many years, be more than sufficient to meet the charges which it is intended to place on them. On referring to my Despatch of the 20th of January last, you will perceive, that in conformity with a suggestion of your Predecessor, Her Majesty's Government have decided to devolve on the fund arising from the sale of these lands, the expenditure at present defrayed by this country for presents to Indians in Upper Canada. This is an expenditure almost entirely of a local nature—and although the Imperial Parliament, in deference to the faith plighted to the Indians, have during many years consented to bear the burthen of it, Her Majesty's Government would not feel justified in continuing to demand a vote for this service, after there should have accrued within the Province a fund legitimately applicable to it. No fund could be more properly applied to such a purpose than that which arises from the sale of Indian lands: and, adverting to the great advantages which the Province will derive from the possession of these lands, I have little apprehension that the Legislature will object to the condition with which that possession is connected.

It is possible, that if the Assembly should accede to the proposition now to be made to them, they may desire to incorporate into one Act the whole of the provisions for the grant of a Civil List to the Crown, and to repeal the Provincial Act of the 1st Wm. IV. chap. 14. There would, of course, be no objection to such a proceeding, should they think it advisable—provided that the whole amount, so to be granted to the Crown, be not thereby diminished. For the forms which must be observed in the presentation of any such bill for your acceptance, I refer you to my Despatch to Sir Francis Head, of the 7th February last, (No. 142.)

I have now gone through all the topics connected with this subject, which it seems necessary for me to notice. I am confident, that in the offer which, by the Queen's commands, I have instructed you to make to the Legislature of Upper Canada, the Council and Assembly will recognize the anxiety of Her Majesty to meet the wishes of Her Subjects in that part of Her dominions, and the confidence which Her Majesty feels in their attachment and liberality. It will afford Her Majesty the most sincere gratification, if the result of this offer should be a satisfactory settlement of the question respecting the Crown Revenues in Upper Canada.

I have the honour to be, &c.

No. 96.

Government House,
Toronto, 22nd August, 1837.

MY LORD,

THE object of this Despatch is, to request your Lordship to be so good as to furnish me with such Instructions respecting the surrender of Her Majesty's Casual and Territorial Revenues, as may enable me to bring that important subject satisfactorily before the Legislature, at the next Session.

The general views of Her Majesty's Government on this subject, have already been clearly explained to me, in your Lordship's Despatch of the 30th September, 1836, inclosing copies of your Lordship's Instructions to the Lieutenant-Governor of New-Brunswick: which Instructions having been promulgated by Sir A. Campbell, made their appearance in all the Newspapers of this Province; but as your Lordship's Despatch enclosing them to me was marked confidential, I did not feel myself at liberty to disclose them: which refusal created to me no small embarrassment. However, being desirous promptly to carry the wishes of Her Majesty's Government into effect, I sent to both Houses of the Legislature, in the form of a Message, (a copy of which is enclosed) a declaration, that I should feel myself authorized to assent to a measure for the placing the Royal Revenue at the disposal of the Provincial Government, provided a provision should be made granting to Her Majesty certain expenses for the Civil Government, which I named, "together with such sum as will enable Her Majesty to meet the actual charges upon the Fund, for which Her Majesty may graciously consider the faith of the Government pledged."

I considered that this Message, first, would give the House of Assembly a fair and ample opportunity of explaining their views; secondly, that it would explain my proposals, so far as I was authorized to offer any; and lastly, that it would secure to Her Majesty's Government, power to make such alterations in the proposed bargain, as they might consider themselves pledged to require.

The subject, however, after a short discussion in the House of Assembly, fell to the ground; and it has therefore become advisable that Her Majesty's Government should consider, and finally determine the precise terms of the offer which should be made to the Legislature, at their next meeting.

To enable your Lordship to decide on this question, I beg to inclose a letter from the Receiver General's Office, shewing—

First.—Balance appearing in the hands of the Receiver General, of Crown Revenues, on the 30th June, 1837, deducting the sum appropriated towards the War-losses.

Second.—Real balance, deducting Warrants on the Clergy Fund, actually paid out of the Crown Revenues.

Third.—Amount of Crown Revenue, independent of the Canada Company, for the following periods—during the years 1834, 1835, 1836, 1837.

Fourth.—Amount of the Canada Company Fund for the same time, during the years 1834, 1835, 1836, 1837.

Fifth.—Amount of the debt from the Clergy to the Crown Fund.

From the foregoing statements, I beg to submit to your Lordship the following observations:—

First.—In the Province of Upper Canada, the yearly amount of the Casual and Territorial Revenue is small, and hardly equal to the charges upon it.

Second.—The Indian Annuities, (which amount to £5,405) form a charge, from which it is not likely the Province will be relieved for many years.

Third.—The charges for Ecclesiastical purposes, (which amount to a large sum yearly) depend upon the settlement of the Clergy Reserve question. As far as relates to the Church of England, if that Establishment is to continue in the receipt of the whole of the interest to arise from proceeds of the Clergy Reserves, it is probable it will be gradually lessened; if otherwise, not, as the Government would not probably consent to have the Missionaries (formerly supported by Parliamentary appropriations in England, and latterly from the Clergy Reserve Interest and the Crown Revenue jointly) cast off without provision.

Fourth.—If the Crown Lands, Clergy Reserves, and Woods and Forests, are to be in one Office—(an arrangement which I have already effected, and which only awaits your Lordship's confirmation)—a charge of £500 a-year will be saved.

Fifth.—The funds arising from the Canada Company, amounting at present to £20,000, per annum, will cease in 1843, at which time, the amount to be received from the Crown Revenues will probably not be sufficient to pay the charges upon it.

Sixth.—The sum of £20,000 has been paid for war-losses, out of the Crown Revenue, which, so far from leaving any balance, brings the Fund in debt;—and thus, the Casual and Territorial Revenue in this Province has been fully expended.

Your Lordship will perceive that all these circumstances make the New-Brunswick bill completely inapplicable to the Province of Upper Canada, and account for the indifference of the Assembly in not at once accepting an offer, which in their opinion, might turn out to them a losing bargain.

The Land Granting Bill sufficiently explains what the views of the House of Assembly of this Province are, upon that part of the New-Brunswick bill relating to the disposal of Lands.

I am not aware that I can afford your Lordship any further explanation on this important subject. Her Majesty's Government will retrospectively have to determine the amount of my salary, (which your Lordship is aware has been under their consideration since the day of my appointment) and also what sum it would be desirable for the Executive Government to retain in its hands, for the purpose of meeting contingent expenses. Both these questions I would wish to leave to the decision of your Lordship; and I have only respectfully to request that your Lordship will be so good as to furnish me with an early reply to this Despatch, in order that I may be enabled distinctly to explain to the Legislature, at their next meeting, the precise terms on which Her Majesty's Casual and Territorial Revenues of this Province, will irrevocably be surrendered.

I have, &c.

(Signed) F. B. HEAD.

The Right Honourable
THE LORD GLENELG.

MEMORANDA.

Explanatory of LORD GLENELG'S Despatch of the 28th December, 1837.

IN reference to that part of Lord Glenelg's Despatch of the 28th December, 1837, which relates to the expense of surveying the block of one million of acres, and of making a road through the blocks of Clergy Reserves in the District of Gore, agreeably to the 8th clause of the definitive treaty with the Canada Company, it is be observed that those charges have already been defrayed ; and consequently, that no further expense will be incurred under the stipulations of that article. A very small expenditure may, however, still arise under the 4th article of the third agreement with the Company, but it will certainly be of an extremely limited amount.

In the Schedule D. annexed to Lord Glenelg's Despatch, an item of £600 sterling, is included in the proposed Civil List, as the annual salary of the Surveyor-General. It becomes necessary, therefore, in reference to it, to offer the following explanation :

In conformity to the suggestion of the Finance Committee of the last year, the office of Surveyor General has been amalgamated or incorporated with that of Commissioner for Crown Lands, under an arrangement which deprives the person holding the consolidated office, of any claims to the salary of Surveyor General, so long as he shall enjoy the salaries he now receives from his appointments as Commissioner for Crown Lands, and Agent for the sale of Clergy Reserves. This arrangement having been entered into subsequently to the date of Lord Glenelg's Despatch, will relieve the Civil List, at all events for a time, and perhaps permanently, from the charge of £600 a-year, included in His Lordship's estimate of the salary of the Surveyor General.

*Crown Lands Office,
Toronto, 30th April, 1839.*

SIR,

I have the honour to send herewith, a duplicate copy of the general statement of the Military Reserve at this place, furnished by this Office, on the 20th ultimo, for the information of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor.

I have the honour, &c.

Honourable Mr. Secretary MACAULAY.

EXTRACT FROM DESPATCH

ON

FURNISHING GOVERNMENT HOUSE.

EXTRACT from a Despatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, to Lieut.-Governor Sir F. B. Head, (No. 234) dated 4th October, 1837.

"So, also, with regard to the sums paid by you on account of Furniture, I regret that I cannot feel myself justified in suggesting to the Lords of the Treasury to assume any portion of that expenditure. At the same time, I am of opinion that, without reference to your particular case, it would be expedient to extend to other Colonies the rule which has already been applied in the case of some of the West India Colonies, in which the furniture of the rooms in the Governor's residence, required and used for public receptions, is provided, not at the expense of each successive Governor, but from Colonial funds. On the same principle on which a residence is provided for the Officer administering the Government, at the public expense, the requisite furniture for so much at least of that residence as is employed for public purposes, should also, as it appears to me, be supplied. I have, therefore, to authorise you to suggest to the Legislature of Upper Canada, the propriety of purchasing for the public service, such part of the furniture at present in use in the Government House, as comes within this description. If, as I confidently anticipate, they should accede to this suggestion, it will be for them to take the necessary steps for ascertaining its value, and to decide in what manner provision should be made for its future safe custody, for the use of the Lieutenant-Governor for the time being."

Truly extracted.

CORRESPONDENCE

WITH MR. FOX,

ON THE INVASION OF THE CANADAS.

GEO. ARTHUR.

IN compliance with the Address of the House of Assembly, the Lieutenant-Governor now transmits copies of such communications from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington, relating to the invasion of the Canadas by people from the United States of America, as he considers himself at liberty to publish.

Government House,

8th April, 1859.

SIR GEORGE ARTHUR TO MR. FOX.

(Copy.)

*Government House,
Toronto, 22nd October, 1838.*

SIR,

ON my return to Toronto from Quebec, on the 18th instant, I had the honour to receive your Excellency's letter, marked "confidential," of the 4th instant.

The information it contains, of the extensive preparation for the invasion of this Province, is indeed sufficiently alarming; it is amply borne out by statements which have reached me from other quarters, and of which copies are enclosed.

The documents Nos. 1 and 2, are still more particular than the statements which your Excellency had received; of their entire accuracy I have no doubt. You will perceive that the information they contain, is remarkably corroborated by the statement No. 3; and, indeed, there are many other statements before the Government, which tend to shew this deponent's accuracy.

I have despatched an Officer to Major-General Macomb, earnestly requesting him to prevent the arms in the public Arsenals, from falling into the hands of the Brigands: which is inevitable, unless decisive measures be adopted, and carried into effect with promptitude and vigour.

I have further earnestly desired him to take such other steps as are within his power, to avert the calamities which must follow, if the Brigands cross into Canada.

I appeal to you also, Sir, to urge upon the American Government, the solemn obligation they are under, as a civilized State, to prevent these lawless aggressions from being carried on upon the frontier.

It would appear that riflemen, from Kentucky, have been brought to Cleveland, to take part in this wicked crusade; that Indians have been engaged to co-operate, who are still in a savage state; and that a Bank has been established, to provide funds, in which numbers of American citizens appear to have taken shares.

These are proceedings which, it may be expected, the Government of the United States should suppress, now that they have a perfect knowledge of their existence; and I do trust, that in Her most gracious Majesty's name, your Excellency will demand of them so to do.

I enclose a memorandum, (a copy of which has also been sent to Major-General Macomb,) containing the names of the most prominent leaders in the conspiracy, and their immediate arrest might have a most beneficial tendency. I have also addressed Governor Marcy.

Having taken these measures to avert the threatened calamity, I have called out a Militia force to act in conjunction with Her Majesty's Regular Troops, in opposing such an enemy; and if it must come to blows, I have no doubt but we shall be able to strike an effective one, to deliver the country from such a band of ruffians.

I have, &amp;c.

(Signed) GEO. ARTHUR.

MR. FOX TO MR. ADRON VAIL.

Washington, November 3rd, 1838.

SIR,

THE alarming reports which had reached the United States Government, respecting apprehended hostile movements against Canada, from within the American territory, and which are communicated to me by the friendly orders of the President, have been amply confirmed by intelligence conveyed to Her Majesty's Colonial Authorities, through various other channels; and I am sorry to add, that the mischief appears to be far more serious and extensive, and the danger of hostile disturbance more imminent, than had been represented in the information received at Washington.

It is now ascertained, beyond the possibility of doubt, that a secret combination or conspiracy, of vast extent, and possessed of great resources in money and military provisions, has been formed, and is at this moment in active progress, within the confines and jurisdiction of the United States, for the purpose of waging war upon Her Majesty's Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada. The combination extends along the whole line of the Canadian frontier, from Maine and Vermont to the State of Michigan; it extends also far into the interior of the States of New York, Pennsylvania, and Ohio—and likewise into the neighbouring State of Kentucky. It is affirmed and believed, that 40,000 American citizens are already enrolled in this criminal association. The above is the lowest estimate: the depositions of some of the informants carry the numbers to a much greater extent. To these are joined a few vagrant Canadian refugees; the number of the American conspirators is daily and hourly increasing. The plot is carried on by means of masonic lodges, secretly established in almost every town along the frontier, the members of which communicate with each other by private signs, and are divided into several grades of initiation. A complete system of these secret signs, as well as the cypher or secret alphabet, by means of which the associates correspond in writing, is in the hands of Her Majesty's Authorities. The regular organization has been completed of a pretended Provisional Government for Upper Canada, with assumed official rank and commissions, both civil and military. The names, description and residences of the chief individuals composing this pretended Government, who are American citizens, are also in the possession of the British Authorities.

A pretended National Bank of Canada has also been organized—to be established and maintained by the seizure and plunder of the public property. The superior lodges of the association are believed to be situated in the towns of Rochester, Buffalo and Detroit; a grand central lodge, or convention of delegates, is held at Cleveland; another considerable lodge is situated at Cincinnati. Arms and warlike stores are secreted at various points; and the conspirators also reckon, that with their present force and number, and complete organization, they will have no difficulty in again forcing and plundering the United States and State Arsenals, whenever the time for showing themselves in arms shall have arrived. No less than nine Steam-boats, of those that ply regularly upon Lake Erie, the names of which are in the possession of the British Authorities, have been engaged for the service of the conspirators. I am afraid there is no doubt that a number of Magistrates, Justices of the Peace, and State Officers of the above-mentioned States, are involved in the present flagitious enterprise.

The direct objects of this vast combination are, to invade and conquer Upper and Lower Canada: to subvert and revolutionize the established Government of those Provinces—and to wrest them from the rightful dominion of the British Crown. These are the designs of the chief directors of the plot; but it is probable that a large majority of their followers have enlisted in the scheme, for the sole purpose of rapine and plunder. The particular mode and time of operation do not appear to have been yet determined upon by the conspirators, but will be made to depend upon circumstances, and the accidental course of events.

The above particulars, a large portion of which is already known to the United States Government, are derived from private information, received through various channels by Her Majesty's Authorities in Canada. The evidence which has been already submitted to Her Majesty's Authorities, and also to myself, is of such a nature, that we can entertain no doubt whatever of its truth. There may, possibly, be error and exaggeration in some of the details, which must usually happen when secret machinations are to be detected and dealt with, but the general truth of the information admits of no doubt whatever.

In this critical state of things, the immediate interference of the supreme authority of the Republic, can alone avert the most terrible and afflicting consequences; and I do solemnly appeal to the President and Government of the United States, effectually to suppress this lawless association, which is plotting the destruction of Her Majesty's Provinces, and fearfully hazarding the peace of both countries. Vast hordes of banditti and assassins are maturing their plans for the desolation and ruin of a British Territory: they are engaged in this work within the jurisdiction of the United States, where no British authority can reach them—but where Her Majesty's authorities rely confidently upon the friendship and honour of the United States themselves, to exert the necessary power. It would not be fit for me to suggest modes of proceeding; but surely there must reside somewhere, in every well-constituted State, the power to prevent those who live under its laws, from persisting in the perpetration of violent and atrocious wrong against a friendly foreign people.

I must observe, that the present crisis in no way resembles an ordinary case of neutrality between contending foes—between parties contending in open and legitimate war. Neither is this a case of neutrality as between a Government and its rebellious subjects. No rebellion or civil war is now raging in Canada, nor has been for nearly a twelve-month past. The insurrection of last winter, in Lower Canada, was suppressed in a few weeks; the insurrection in Upper Canada was suppressed in a few days;—yet, from that time to this, Her Majesty's Provinces have been kept in an almost constant state of warlike alarm, by attempts and projects of invasion from abroad: the invaders being the citizens of a friendly Republic—of a country with whose Government Great Britain is at peace. Her Majesty's subjects are exposed to the inconvenience and expense, the hazard and suffering, of a state of war, while they are precluded from retaliating or making just reprisal upon their enemy. That enemy is enabled, again and again, to mature his plans of aggression within the confines of a friendly power, whose laws, from some incomprehensible reason, he still continues to evade or over-rule. I have here presented no exaggerated picture of the extraordinary state of things, which we have witnessed during the last twelve months upon the Canadian frontier. It is true, that whenever actual invasion has been attempted, the attempt has been quickly repelled by the firmness of Her Majesty's troops, and by the high courage and heroic loyalty of the British population of Canada. But it is not just that all these hazards should again be encountered, and the burthen again forced upon Her Majesty's subjects, of defending themselves in arms against the hostile citizens of a friendly State.

If the invasion which is now meditated be allowed to take place, disastrous consequences will ensue. If the American invaders, proceeding from within the jurisdiction of the Republic, should obtain a transient success, and overrun a portion of British territory, the United States would necessarily become answerable to Great Britain for the whole amount of the damage sustained, both public and private—for the recovery of the territory, and the reparation of individual loss. If, on the other hand—which is more probable—the invading armament be impulsed, is it possible to suppose that the victorious party, exposed to such unheard of and enormous provocation, will always have the forbearance to respect the American boundary, from within which such a lawless and unprincipled enemy will have been enabled to advance? Is it possible to believe that a horde of ruffians and brigands shall be permitted, again and again, to issue forth from within the territory of the United States, for the ruin of Her Majesty's subjects, and still, when repulsed, to shelter themselves at pleasure beneath the same extorted and abused protection? I allude not to these things for the purpose of arguing, prematurely, the question either of the right of self defence, or of national reparation: I speak only of the probability of events; and out of either of the cases above supposed, there would arise national discussions and disputes, of which it is painful to contemplate the issue—painful to those who desire as cordially as I do, to behold a long continuance of peace and friendship between England and America. It is by timely and instant measures of prevention, under the authority of the Supreme Government, that the mutual calamities now imminent, may be averted.

I have the honour to be,

&c. &c.

ADRON VAIL, Esquire,
Acting Secretary of State.

MR. FORSYTH TO MR. FOX.

(Copy.)

Washington, November 15th, 1838.

SIR,

THE President, to whom has been submitted the note addressed by you to the Acting Secretary of State, of the 3rd instant, conveying information of a secret conspiracy supposed to exist within the confines and jurisdiction of the United States, for the purpose of waging war upon the British Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada,—has instructed me to make the following reply to it:

The Government of the United States has regarded with the deepest anxiety, the unfortunate disturbances which have recently taken place in Her Majesty's possessions adjoining the northern frontier of these States, and has spared no exertions, whilst enjoining upon their citizens a proper sense of their obligations, to prevent, by all legitimate means, any interference on their part in the affairs of their Canadian neighbours. That measures of this nature were promptly adopted by the President, upon the occasion referred to, you are well aware, as also how far they have proved successful. Prompted by the same feeling, the reports which have reached this city, of apprehended hostile movements against Canada, from within the American Territory, whether received through official or other channels, have been scanned with lively interest by the Executive; and although the examination has resulted in a conviction that the circumstances detailed in them are of a highly exaggerated character, every precaution that the most watchful prudence can suggest, and perfect good faith towards a friendly nation dictate, has been, and will continue to be taken, to avert the threatened mischief.

If an organized combination, against any foreign Government entertaining the lawless designs attributed to that described in your note of the 3rd instant, exists within the jurisdiction of this Government, it is the duty of the United States, as well to themselves as to that foreign Government, to use their best endeavours to suppress it. In the determination to fulfil this acknowledged obligation, the Government of the United States cannot, with propriety, take into consideration the contingent consequences on discussions to which you have alluded; and the President is pleased to find, that you have properly omitted to argue, so prematurely, questions of the right of self-defence, or national reparation, in reference to circumstances that have not happened, and which, it is hoped, will never occur.

From the evidence in the possession of this department, highly coloured in its details as much of it unquestionably is, there is certainly room to fear that some attempts may be made during the approaching winter, to excite disturbances in Her Majesty's Canadian Provinces. No serious uneasiness as to their result can well be entertained. Such attempts must necessarily prove abortive. And the President is unwilling to believe it possible that any difficulties in the friendly relations subsisting between the United States and Great Britain, will be permitted to spring from such a source. Every thing in the power of this Government to do, will be done, to prevent a result so much to be deprecated; and the President is quite sure that our efforts to that end will meet with the cordial and efficient co-operation of Her Majesty's Authorities. It will require the exercise of great discretion, as well as the utmost vigilance of the officers of both Governments, to counteract the design apparently existing to involve the two countries in a war. Predatory incursions, and acts of violence on each side of the boundary, will probably be the principal means resorted to, to effect this criminal purpose. The utter impracticability of placing a Frontier, extending nearly one thousand miles, in a military attitude sufficiently imposing and effective, to prevent such enterprizes is evident. Regular military armaments, and the movement of armed bands to any considerable extent from the American side of the line, will, I think, be successfully repressed; and all other hostile preparations will be diverted, as far as that object can be accomplished by the active employment of the means at the disposal of this Government. Whilst thus performing all its duties in this regard, it will expect that under no pretext whatever, will the officers in command of Her Majesty's forces permit a violation of the Territory of the United States. Such a step could not fail to have a most injurious effect on the friendly relations at present so happily subsisting between the two countries; and might to the deep regret of both parties, lead to their entire disruption. If any armed bodies of men should take refuge within or otherwise enter the Territory of the United States, they will be immediately disarmed, or expelled by force; and if any American citizen shall have so far forgotten his duty, as to enrol himself among armed bands that shall have crossed our frontier, after being disarmed, he will be arrested, and delivered over to the civil authorities for trial and punishment. Orders to this effect have already been given to our officers, and they will, I doubt not, be promptly and efficiently executed. No depredations committed by the insurgents on our citizens, will be regarded by American officers as justifying retaliation upon Her Majesty's peaceable subjects; and with the application of a similar rule on the part of Her Majesty's Authorities, in respect to such unauthorized and lawless incursions from our side of the line, as may be made in despite of the vigilance of our officers, civil and military, and the exercise of great forbearance in all things on both sides, the President allows himself to hope that the two Governments will be able to overcome difficulties which he feels to be of the most threatening character.

I have the honor to be,

MR. FOX TO SIR GEORGE ARTHUR.

(OFFICIAL.)

SIR,

Washington, November 30th, 1838.

I herewith enclose to your Excellency the copy of an official Note, which I addressed to the United States Government on the 3rd instant, upon the subject of the extensive conspiracy, which it has been ascertained exists within the territory and jurisdiction of the United States, for the prosecution of lawless and piratical hostility against Her Majesty's North American Provinces. I also enclose a copy of the official reply, dated the 15th instant, which I have received from the United States' Secretary of State.

I further transmit to you, a Proclamation by the President of the United States, which was issued on the 21st instant, after the intelligence had been received at Washington, of the actual invasion of Her Majesty's Province of Upper Canada, in the direction of Prescott, by an armed body of Americans, proceeding from Oswego and Ogdensburgh, in the State of New-York. It will be well if this earnest exhortation addressed to his fellow-citizens by the Supreme Magistrate of the Republic, shall succeed, before it be too late for the peace of both countries, in arresting the present atrocious course of violence and crime.

I continue to receive from the President, and from his Government, distinct assurances of their resolution to employ all means which the law permits, for the prevention or punishment of those acts of hostility which are now being perpetrated against the peace of Her Majesty's possessions.

It is my duty, however, to add, that it becomes each day more manifest and certain, that the authority which the laws and institutions of the United States place in the hands of the Executive Government, is not sufficient to enable that Government, in the crisis which we are now witnessing, to fulfil its national duties towards the Crown of Great Britain.

We must still mainly rely for the defence of Her Majesty's Provinces, upon the firmness and valour of Her Majesty's troops, and upon the well-tryed honour, courage and loyalty, of the inhabitants of British race in Canada. And we may all rest secure in the heartfelt and proud conviction, that the whole strength of the British Empire will be exerted, when necessary, to guard or to avenge the attached and faithful subjects of Her Majesty in North America.

I have the honour to be,

With high regard and consideration,

Your Excellency's, &amp;c. &amp;c.

SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H.

Provided always, and be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That this Ordinance shall have no force or effect unless (after a copy thereof shall have been transmitted to the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, or person administering the Government of the Province of Upper Canada,) the concurrence of the Legislative Council and Assembly of that Province, shall be signified to the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, or person administering the Government of this Province, in the manner provided by the Act of the Imperial Parliament, passed in the third year of the reign of King George the Fourth, and entitled, "An Act to regulate the trade of the Provinces of Lower and Upper Canada, and for other purposes relating to the said Provinces," nor until such concurrence shall have been proclaimed by the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, or person administering the Government of this Province.

AN ORDINANCE to suspend in part certain Acts therein mentioned, and to consolidate the Laws relating to Duties levied under the authority of the Provincial Legislature.

WHEREAS great inconvenience hath arisen from the multiplicity and complication of the Acts under which the several duties and draw-backs imposed and allowed by the Provincial Legislature, on certain goods and articles imported into or exported from this Province, have hitherto been levied and paid, and by which the exemptions, abatements, conditions, and modes of collection and payment, allowances, fines, penalties, and other matters and things relating to the said duties have been hitherto prescribed, regulated and provided for; and it is therefore highly expedient that such of the provisions of the said Acts as are now in force, should be consolidated into one Act or Ordinance of the present Legislature, under which all the duties so imposed on such goods and articles as aforesaid, but no other or greater duties, may hereafter be levied, with such amendments to certain provisions of the said Acts, with regard to the delay granted for the payment of the said duties, in certain cases, and to the collection thereof, as will facilitate commerce, and advance the public good: Be it therefore ordained and enacted, by His Excellency the Governor of the Province of Lower Canada, by and with the advice and consent of the Special Council for the affairs of the said Province, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act of the Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, passed in the first year of the reign of Her present Majesty, entitled, "An Act to make temporary provision for the Government of Lower Canada," and it is hereby ordained and enacted, by the authority of the same, That a certain Act, passed in the thirty-third year of the reign of His Majesty King George the Third, chapter eight, entitled "An Act to establish a fund for defraying the salaries of the different officers of the Legislative Council and Assembly, together with the contingent expenses thereof;" and another certain Act, passed in the thirty-fifth year of the reign of His said Majesty, chapter nine, entitled "An Act for granting to His Majesty an additional and new duties, on certain goods, wares and merchandizes, and for appropriating the same towards further defraying the charges of the administration of Justice, and the support of the Civil Government within this Province, and for other purposes therein mentioned;" and another certain Act, passed in the forty-first year of the reign of His said Majesty, chapter fourteen, entitled "An Act for granting to His Majesty certain new duties, on the importation into this Province of all manufactured tobacco and snuff, and for disallowing the draw-back on tobacco manufactured within this Province;" and another certain Act, passed in the fifty-third year of the reign of His said Majesty, chapter eleven, entitled "An Act to grant certain duties to His Majesty, towards supplying the wants of the Province during the present war with the United States of America, and for other purposes;" and another certain Act, passed in the fifty-fifth year of the reign of His said Majesty, chapter two, entitled "An Act to repeal part of an Act to amend an Act passed in the fifty-third year of His Majesty's reign, entitled 'An Act to grant certain duties to His Majesty, towards supplying the wants of the Province during the present war with the United States of America, and for other purposes;' and another certain Act, passed in the year of His Majesty's reign last aforesaid, chapter three, entitled "An Act to grant new duties to His Majesty, to supply the wants of the Province;"—(which said three last-mentioned Acts were rendered permanent, by an Act of the Parliament of Great Britain and Ireland, passed in the third year of the reign of King George the Fourth, entitled "An Act to regulate the trade of the Provinces of Lower and Upper Canada, and for other purposes relating to the said Provinces, until repealed or altered in the manner therein provided"); and another certain Act, passed in the fifty-ninth year of the reign of His said Majesty, chapter seventeen, entitled "An Act to discontinue certain duties therein mentioned"—shall be, and the said Acts are hereby suspended, during the time this Ordinance shall remain in force, in so far as they relate to any goods, wares, merchandize, or other articles imported into this Province, after this Ordinance shall be in force; but the said Acts shall be and remain in force, as if this Ordinance had not been passed, with regard to all goods, wares, merchandize, and other articles imported into this Province before this Ordinance shall be in force, and to all duties thereon, and bonds given for the payment of such duties, and to any thing done in pursuance of, or in contravention of the said Acts, or any of them, before this Ordinance shall be in force, as aforesaid.

And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That from and after the time when this Ordinance shall come into force, there shall be raised, levied, collected and paid, to and for the use of Her Majesty, Her Heirs and Successors, for and upon the several goods, wares and merchandize, and other articles hereinafter mentioned, respectively, which shall be imported or brought into this Province from any place or places whence the same may be lawfully imported, over and above all other duties payable thereon in this Province, under any Act or Acts of the Parliament of Great Britain, or of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the several rates and duties following, that is to say:—

And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That in all cases where no invoice shall have been received at the time of the arrival of any goods, wares or merchandize, whereon the said duty of two and a half per cent is imposed by this Ordinance, and the importer or importers thereof, or such person as by the foregoing section is authorized to make the declaration thereby required, with regard to such goods, wares or merchandize, shall make and subscribe a declaration before the Collector, or principal officer, who is hereby empowered to take the same, that he cannot, for want of full information, make perfect entry thereof, it shall be lawful for the Collector, or principal officer, to cause such goods, wares and merchandize, to be landed on a bill of sight for the packages and parcels thereof, by the best description that can be given, and to be seen and examined by such person and at his expense, and in the presence of the Collector, or such officer of the Customs as he shall appoint, and to be delivered to such person, on his depositing in the hands of the Collector such sum of money as shall, in judgment of the Collector, be fully sufficient to pay the duties thereon, and engaging to make perfect entry thereof, and to pay the deficiency of such duty thereof (if any) within one month, from the date of the bill of sight, (on which the sum deposited shall be mentioned, with such other particulars as the Collector may deem necessary); and the said engagement shall be written and signed by such person, who shall incur a penalty of fifty pounds, currency, if he shall fail to fulfil such engagement, which shall be held to be fulfilled either by the production of the invoice, and compliance with the other requirements of this Ordinance for cases where an invoice is produced, or by a declaration made and subscribed as aforesaid, at the expiration of one month as aforesaid, that no invoice has been received, in which case the money deposited shall be retained by the Collector, as the amount of the duties; but if the invoice is produced, and the other requirements of this Ordinance complied with within the said delay, the overplus (if any) shall be returned to the importer or person as aforesaid, or the deficiency made good as hereinbefore ordained.

And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person or persons whomsoever shall come within this Province, or any part thereof for the purpose of actually settling therein, it shall and may be lawful for the said Collectors to exempt from the said duty of two pounds ten shillings per centum all household goods and necessaries of all kinds, which such person or persons shall import or bring with them for their own use and the use of their families; but it shall not be lawful to exempt any goods, wares or merchandize of any kind whatsoever brought or imported by such person or persons for the purpose of trade or for sale.

Provided always, and be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no Collector of the Customs shall claim, have or retain any fee, profit or emolument for the collection of the duties imposed by this ordinance.

And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any salt shall be landed in this Province below the east bank of the river Saguenay, on the north shore, and the east bank of the river of Great Metis on the south shore of the St. Lawrence, no duty shall be charged or payable thereon, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any goods, wares, or merchandize shall be landed from any ship or vessel coming from sea above the said limits of the east bank of the river Saguenay and Great Metis, before the same shall be entered at the Custom House at Quebec, and if any salt permitted by this ordinance to be landed as aforesaid duty free, shall be afterwards put on board any ship or vessel, boat or other conveyance, and be carried above the aforesaid limits and there relanded without being first entered at the Custom House at Quebec, and the duties thereon paid or secured to be paid as hereinafter directed, the said goods, wares and merchandize or salt, shall be forfeited to Her Majesty Her Heirs and Successors, and shall be sued for, recovered and divided in the same manner as other forfeitures under this ordinance.

And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That there shall be allowed and paid by the Collectors of the Customs of the Ports of Quebec and Montreal respectively, out of the duties which shall be by them received under this ordinance, a drawback of four pence currency for every minot of salt which shall be exported from the Port of Quebec or from the Port of Montreal, to any port or place beyond or below the limits hereinbefore mentioned; and there shall be allowed and paid by the said Collectors respectively, seven-pence for every tierce of salted salmon, and four-pence for every barrel of salted beef or pork, or of salted fish of any kind, and so in proportion for any greater or less package exported from the Port of Quebec or from the Port of Montreal to any port or place out of the limits of this Province.

Provided always, and be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That in order to entitle the exporter or exporters, or his, her or their agent or agents to the benefit of the said drawback or allowances on any such articles, he, she or they shall, previous to putting or lading the same on board of any ship or vessel for exportation, give notice to the Collector of the Customs where the same is intended to be shipped, of his, her or their intention to export the same as aforesaid, and of the quantities thereof; and before the same shall be cleared out of the Custom House at Quebec or at Montreal respectively, a declaration shall be made and signed by the exporter, his, her, or their agent, before the Collector of the Customs for the place (which declaration they, or either of them, are hereby required and are authorized to take) that he or she verily believes that the duty of four-pence per minot by this ordinance imposed, was paid for the said salt, and that the said salted beef, pork or fish so to be exported as aforesaid, was cured with salt upon which the said duty had been paid.

Provided also, and be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the exporter or exporters, or his, her or their agent or agents, shall before receiving payment from the Collector of the drawbacks and allowances aforesaid, enter into bond, with good and sufficient surety, to the satisfaction of the Collector, in a sum of double the amount of such drawbacks and allowances, that such salt shall not be relanded above the limits aforesaid, and that such salt, beef, pork or fish shall not be relanded in this Province; and every such bond shall be deemed null and void if no suit or action shall be had thereupon in three years from the date thereof.

And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That from the gross weight there shall be deducted by the Collector for the tare of packages containing goods subject to any of the aforesaid duties by weight as follows, that is to say: On Coffee in bags or bales, three pounds on every hundred pounds; on Coffee in casks, twelve pounds on every hundred pounds; on Muscovada or clayed Sugar, in casks or boxes, twelve pounds on every hundred pounds; on loaf or lump Sugar in casks or boxes, fifteen pounds on every hundred pounds; and on leaf Tobacco in casks, twelve pounds on every hundred pounds; and an allowance shall be made for leakage on all wines, spirituous liquors and molasses, of three gallons on every hundred gallons; and for the waste of articles subject to any of the duties aforesaid by weight, an allowance shall be made of three pounds upon every one hundred pounds; and on salt an allowance shall be made for waste of three minots on every hundred minots thereof; which said allowances shall be respectively deducted by the Collector from the true and real gauge or nett weight or measure of the said goods respectively at the time of their being landed.

Provided always, and be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That where the original invoice of any of the articles mentioned in this section shall be produced, and a declaration of the correctness thereof made by the importer or importers, consignee or consignees, or his, her or their agent (which declaration the Collector of the Customs is hereby authorised and empowered to take) it shall in such case be lawful to deduct the tare according to such invoice from the real gross weight of such goods respectively, instead of deducting the aforesaid allowances for the tare of packages.

And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That when any ship or vessel shall be entered at the Custom House at Quebec, or at Montreal, on board of which there shall be any goods, wares or merchandize subject to duty under this Ordinance, and on which the duties shall have been paid, deposited or secured to be paid, in the manner hereinafter provided for, and that thereafter the said goods, wares or merchandize shall be lost or destroyed before the same shall be landed from such ship or vessel, or from any vessel or craft employed to lighten such ship or vessel, either at Quebec or on the voyage to Montreal, that then on proof being made upon the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, before the Collector of the Customs for the time being, (which oath he is hereby authorised and required to administer,) that such goods, wares or merchandize, or any part thereof, specifying the same, have been so lost or destroyed before the landing of the same, the duties on the whole or the part thereof so proved to be lost or destroyed, shall, if the same have been paid or deposited, be repaid or returned to the owner or his agent, or if secured to be paid the security or a proportionable part thereof, as the case may be, shall be cancelled and discharged accordingly.

And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any goods, wares or merchandize, on which duties are made payable by this Ordinance, and which shall be imported into this Province after this Ordinance shall come into force, shall receive any damage by salt water or otherwise during the course of the voyage, after such goods, wares or merchandize shall have been laden or shipped in foreign parts, and before the same shall be unshipped or discharged from the ship or vessel in which they shall be imported into this Province, so that the owner or owners thereof shall be prejudiced in the sale of such goods, wares or merchandize, the two principal officers of the Customs, at the place where the same shall be landed, if there are two, and otherwise the principal officer shall have power to choose three indifferent Merchants, experienced in the value of such goods, wares and merchandize, who or any two of them upon viewing the same, shall certify and declare, upon their corporal oaths first administered by the said officers, or one of them, who is and are hereby authorised and empowered to administer the same, what damage such goods, wares or merchandizes have received, and how much the same are lessened in their true value by such damage, in relation to the duties imposed on them by this Ordinance; and thereupon the principal officers of Her Majesty's Customs at Quebec, or at Montreal, whereof the Collector for the time being shall be one, shall and they are hereby authorized and required to make a proportionable allowance to the merchant by way of return or repayment out of the duties due or which shall have actually been paid upon the same.

And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That before the unloading of any goods, wares or merchandize, on which any rates or duties are imposed by this ordinance, the said rates or duties shall be paid or secured to be paid to the Collector of the Customs at the port at which the same shall be entered in the manner following, that is to say; where the amount of the duties imposed by the second and third sections of this ordinance on any of the goods, wares or merchandize therein named, imported in any ship or vessel on account of or consigned to one person only, or several persons jointly interested, shall not exceed the sum of fifty pounds currency, the same shall be immediately deposited in money; and where the said amount shall exceed the sum of fifty pounds currency, the same may, at the option of the proprietor or proprietors, or his, her or their agent or agents, be either immediately deposited in money or secured to be paid by bond to Her Majesty Her Heirs and Successors, payable to such Collector of the Customs for the time being with condition for the payment of so much as such duties shall be found to amount to (when the same shall be ascertained by the return and certificate of the proper officer who shall gauge, weigh, measure or tell the said goods, wares and merchandize so subject to the payment of duties) in six months from the date of such bond, if the same shall be dated on or before the first day of November in any year, or if the same shall be dated after the first day of November, then with condition of payment as aforesaid, on the first day of May next following; which bond shall be executed by the proprietor or proprietors, or his, her or their agent or agents, and one or more sureties, to the satisfaction of the aforesaid Collector of the Customs; and the officer or officers who shall gauge, weigh, measure or tell such goods, wares or merchandize, whereon the duties shall have been so deposited in money, or secured to be paid, shall, if required, give to the proprietor or proprietors thereof, or to his, her or their agent or agents, without fee or reward, a duplicate of the return or certificate he shall make of such gauge, weight, measurement or telling, and the duties shall be calculated agreeably to such return or certificate, the allowances for leakage, waste and tare, as hereinbefore ordained, being first respectively deducted; and the amount thereof shall be indorsed by the Collector on the bond so given for such duties, which indorsation shall cancel and make void the surplus of such bond, and if the duties have been deposited in money, such return and certificate shall entitle the proprietor or proprietors, or his, her or their agent or agents, to demand and receive back the overplus, if any there be, of the money so deposited for such duties,—but if the duties, when so calculated, shall be found to exceed the amount so deposited in money, or secured to be paid, such excess shall immediately be paid to the Collector accordingly, and where the amount of the ad valorem duty of two and a half per centum, imposed by the fourth section of this Ordinance, on any goods, wares or merchandize, imported in any one ship or vessel, on account of or consigned to one person only, or several persons jointly interested, shall not exceed the sum of one hundred pounds, currency, the same shall be immediately deposited and paid in money; and when the said amount shall exceed the sum of one hundred pounds, currency, the same may, at the option of the proprietor or proprietors, or his, her or their agent or agents, be immediately deposited and paid in money, or secured to be paid by bond as aforesaid, on the first day of January then next, if the bond shall be dated before the first day of September in any year, and on the first day of May then next, if the bond shall be dated after such first day of September: Provided always, that no person or persons whose bond for the payment of any rates or duties, shall be due and unsatisfied, after the time therein limited for payment, shall be allowed a future credit for duties, until such bond shall be fully paid and discharged.

And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the person or persons who shall give any such bond as aforesaid for the payment of any duties under this Ordinance, shall subscribe the following declaration, which shall be entered at the foot thereof: "I" (or "we") "declare that the goods, wares and merchandize, for the payment of the duties on which the bond above written is given, and all of them, were imported into this Province for and on account of — alone, and of no other person or persons whomsoever, and that no part thereof, or any invoice of any part, hath been transferred to the said —, in order that the payment of the duties thereon, in ready money, might be avoided, but that the said — (am, is or are) truly entitled to the credit given in the said bond, according to the true intent and meaning of an Ordinance, entitled, 'An Ordinance to suspend in part certain Acts therein-mentioned, and to consolidate the laws relating to duties levied under the authority of the Provincial Legislature,' and this declaration is true."

And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the said duties and rates imposed by this Ordinance, shall be deemed and are hereby declared to be current money of this Province, payable at and after the rate of five shillings to the Spanish dollar, or in silver or gold coin, as nominally proportioned thereunto, according to the laws of this Province enacted or to be enacted, and the said duties shall be levied, collected, paid and recovered, in the same manner and form, and in the same Courts, and by such rates, ways and means, and under such penalties and forfeitures, as any other duties payable to Her Majesty upon any goods imported into this Province under any Act or Acts of the Parliament of Great Britain hitherto enacted, as fully and effectually, to all intents and purposes, as if the several clauses, powers, directions, penalties and forfeitures relating thereto, were herein repeated and re-enacted; and that all moneys that shall arise by the said duties, shall be paid by the Collector of Her Majesty's Customs into the hands of the Receiver-General of this Province for the time being, and shall remain in his hands for the public uses of the Province.

And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That all such moneys as are paid as aforesaid to the Receiver General of this Province, shall be by him paid in discharge of such warrant or warrants as shall from time to time be issued by the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the Government of this Province for the time being, and not otherwise; and the duties aforesaid, together with all fines, penalties, and confiscations that shall be incurred under this Act, shall be accounted for to Her Majesty, Her Heirs and Successors, through the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, for the time being, in such manner and form as Her Majesty, Her Heirs and Successors shall direct.

Provided always, and be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the proportions of the moneys arising from the duties levied under this Ordinance, to be paid to and for the use of the Province of Upper Canada, shall be in all respects the same, and shall be awarded and paid in the same manner as if such duties had been levied under the authority of the Acts hereby suspended, or any of them.

And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That an account of all the moneys which shall arise by the aforesaid rates and duties, shall be made up quarterly by the Collector or Collectors of the Customs, and signed by them, and sworn to by the Collectors of the Customs for the Ports of Quebec and Montreal respectively, before one of the Justices of the Courts of King's Bench, and by the Collectors at any other place, before any Justice of the Peace for the District, and transmitted to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the Government, and all such moneys shall be paid at the end of every quarter into the hands of the Receiver General, without any deduction, excepting all such sum or sums of money as shall have been paid by the Collector for the drawback on salt, and the allowances on the exportation of salted beef, pork and fish, and excepting also such sum or sums of money as shall have been re-paid or returned by him for duties on goods, wares and merchandizes which shall have been lost, destroyed or damaged before landing as aforesaid; and there shall also be made up quarterly, an account of the incidents incurred, and the same shall be sworn to by the said Collectors, in the manner before directed, and shall also be transmitted to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the Government, and being by him approved in Her Majesty's Executive Council, a warrant shall issue, directed to the Receiver General, for the payment thereof to the said Collectors.

And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That each and every Act of the Legislature of this Province, relating to the officers of the Customs, or the mode of collecting such Customs, or the places where they may be paid, or in any way affecting the same and not hereby repealed, or contrary to the provisions hereof, shall be and are extended to the duties hereby imposed, and the officers employed in collecting the same.

And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any declaration required by this Ordinance, shall be wilfully made untrue, in any particular, the person making the same shall over and above every other penalty to which such person may become subject, incur a penalty of one hundred pounds, currency.

And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the penalties and forfeitures by this Ordinance imposed, shall and may be sued for in any of Her Majesty's Courts of Record, or in any Court of Admiralty or Vice-Admiralty having jurisdiction in this Province; and the same shall and may be recovered and divided in the same manner and form, and by the same rules and regulations, in all respects, as other penalties or forfeitures for offences against the laws relating to the Customs and trade of Her Majesty's Colonies in America, may by any Act or Acts of Parliament now in force, be sued for, prosecuted, recovered and divided.

And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That any person or persons who shall be convicted of wilfully taking a false oath in any of the cases in which an oath is required to be taken by virtue of this Ordinance, shall be liable to the pains and penalties to which by law persons are liable for wilful and corrupt perjury.

And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any action or suit shall be brought or commenced against any person or persons, for any matter or thing by him or them done or executed, by virtue of and in pursuance of this Ordinance, notice of such action or suit shall be given to such person, conformably to the seventieth section of the Act of the Parliament of the United Kingdom, entitled, "An Act to regulate the trade of the British possessions abroad," passed in the third and fourth years of the reign of King William the Fourth; and that such action or suit shall be commenced within three months after the matter or thing done, and not afterwards; and the defendant or defendants in such action or suit, shall and may plead the general issue, and give this Ordinance, and the special matter, in evidence, at any trial to be had thereon, and that the same was done in pursuance of and under the authority of this Ordinance; and if afterwards judgment shall be given for the defendant or defendants, or the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall become non-suited, or shall discontinue his, her or their action or prosecution, after the defendant or defendants shall have appeared, then such defendant or defendants shall and may recover treble costs, and have the like remedy for the same as any defendant or defendants hath or have to recover costs in other cases at law.

And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That this Ordinance shall have no force or effect, until after a copy thereof has been transmitted to the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, or person administering the Government of the Province of Upper Canada, conformably to a certain Act of the Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, entitled, "An Act to regulate the trade of the Provinces of Lower and Upper Canada, and for other purposes relating to the said Provinces," and that the concurrence of the Legislative Council and Assembly of Upper Canada shall have been obtained, and shall have been signified to the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, or person administering the Government of this Province, as provided by the said Act, and by him proclaimed therein.

CORRESPONDENCE,

ON THE

SUBJECT OF SUSPENSION OF SPECIE PAYMENTS.

GEO. ARTHUR.

In compliance with the Address of the House of Assembly, the Lieutenant-Governor herewith transmits copies of such communications from the Officers of the Chartered Banks, on the subject of their suspension of specie payments, as have not already been brought under the consideration of the House; and to those communications he has also directed other documents to be annexed, calculated to convey additional information on the question to which they relate.

Government House,
16th April, 1839.

(Copy.)

No. 53.

Toronto, 8th August, 1838.

MY LORD,

I have the honour to acknowledge your Lordship's Despatches (Nos. 14 and 98) of the dates stated in the margin, together with a copy of the letter of the Assistant Secretary of the Board of Trade, dated 18th December, from which I learn, that Her Majesty's Government considers it indispensable that any permission for suspending cash payments, without forfeiture of Charters, should be conceded to such of the Incorporated Banks as might apply for it, only on condition that during the suspension no dividend shall be paid to the shareholders; and I am instructed to take such steps, by the issue of revised Orders in Council, or otherwise, as may ensure a speedy return to the system of redeeming bank notes in specie, on demand.

26th January, 1838.
19th June, 1838.

On referring to the Statute-book, I perceive that the Banks of this Province found no difficulty in observing the conditions of the Charter, respecting cash payments, until the extraordinary commercial crisis which occurred last year, when the Legislature found it expedient to provide for the contingencies of a suspension, by passing, on the 11th July, the Act named in the margin, (7th and 8th Wm. IV. chap. 7,) by which the Banks were permitted, under certain conditions, to issue notes while they did not redeem them in specie.

In this Act, though the propriety of prohibiting the payment of dividends during the continuance of suspension, became a subject of debate, no provision to that effect was actually introduced—but the duration of the Act was restricted to the close of the next ensuing Session of Parliament.

In the Session which terminated on the sixth day of March last, two sections of the Act were repealed, which restricted the Banks to a circulation not exceeding the amount of their respective capitals, and prohibited the disposal of the specie in their vaults; and by the Act to continue expiring laws, the existence of the original Act (7th and 8th Wm. IV. chap. 7,) was prolonged until the close of the next Session.

As I did not arrive in the Colony until the Session of last winter had been closed, your Lordship's Despatch (No. 14) could not be brought under the notice of the Legislature; and it does not appear that my Predecessor was aware of the views entertained on this point by Her Majesty's Government.

Had the Legislature been in Session when your Lordship's Despatch reached me, I should have been careful not to allow the continuance of the Act beyond the existence originally assigned to it, unless it were amended by the addition of such a provision for the suspension of dividends, during the suspension of cash payments, as your Lordship considers indispensable. As it is, however, too late now to bring this matter under the notice of the Legislature, I have to consider in what other manner an unnecessary postponement of specie payments, on the part of the Banks, may be prevented.

The Act of the 11th July, 1837, has left it entirely in the discretion of the Governor and Council, to determine when the suspension of specie payments may commence, but has intentionally kept from them any sort of controul over the period of resumption—which is to be determined by the period of duration of the law itself, or by the early voluntary act of the Banks themselves.

I have reason to believe, that the Legislature would not confide to the Government any power over the Banks, with respect to the time of resuming cash payments. They preferred that the question of resumption should be reserved for Legislative deliberation at the ensuing Session, if the Banks themselves should not, of their own accord, set it at rest.

Under these circumstances, your Lordship will observe, that I cannot revise the Order in Council under which the suspension has been sanctioned—and that consequently, no other mode of bringing about a resumption remains, than the voluntary compliance of the Banks with the wish of the Government, or the disallowance of the Act of 11th July, 1837, by Her Majesty's Government.

Upon the latter measure I shall not offer many remarks, for I do not suppose it will be entertained by your Lordship—since another Session would be near at hand, before Her Majesty's disallowance of the Act could be proclaimed in this Province.

With respect to the former, I have to inform your Lordship, that I have taken steps for its accomplishment, by addressing a circular letter to the three Chartered Institutions, inviting them to discuss with me, privately, the expediency of an early return to sound Banking principles.

I have the honour to transmit to your Lordship, a copy of this circular, together with the replies made on the part of the Banks—and the Despatch (No. 14) in which I have acquainted the Earl of Durham with my proceedings on this point.

I shall avail myself of the earliest opportunity of communicating to your Lordship, the final result of my correspondence with the Banks.

I have, &c.

SIR,

WITH reference to my Despatch to Sir Francis Head (No. 222) of the 26th August last, I have now the honour to transmit to you an Order passed by the Queen in Council, on the 20th ultimo, leaving to their operation three Acts passed by the Legislature of Upper Canada, on the 11th July last, and numbered 1081, 2 and 4.

With reference to the Act 1082, relating to the suspension of cash payments by the Provincial Banks, I have the honour to inclose, for your information and guidance, the copy of a letter received from the Assistant Secretary to the Board of Trade.

Whitehall, 18th December, 1837.

SIR,

In reference to Lord Glenelg's minute of the 13th September, upon the Canada Act, (No. 1082) and the minute of the President of this Board, of this date, I am directed to request that you will inform Lord Glenelg, that the Lords of the Committee of Privy Council for Trade, are desirous that instructions should be given to the Governor of Upper Canada, that he should, in the exercise of powers entrusted to him under this Act, take care to introduce, as one of the conditions under which he will permit the suspension of cash payments by any Bank, a prohibition against the payment of any dividend by the same Bank, so long as the suspension of its payments in specie shall endure.

And further: their Lordships would wish that this provision should be made to apply to the Commercial Bank, in favour of which the Governor has already exercised his discretionary power.

Their Lordships consider a provision of this nature indispensably necessary, as a check against a wilful prolongation of the time during which so dangerous a practice as the non-payment of its paper engagements in specie by any Bank, may continue.

I am, &amp;c.

(Signed) D. LE MARCHANT.

SIR,

I HAVE had the honour to receive Sir Francis Head's despatch of the 20th March last, (No. 41) explaining at considerable length, the grounds on which he had consented to issue Orders in Council, authorizing the continuance of business by the Bank of Upper Canada, and the Gore Bank, notwithstanding their suspension of specie payments.

Having submitted this despatch, and its enclosures, for the consideration of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, their Lordships have informed me, that, adverting to the very peculiar circumstances in which the Banks in Upper Canada were placed, as explained in their several applications to Sir Francis Head, and in his despatch, they are not disposed to disapprove the course adopted by that Officer, in complying with those applications.

At the same time, Her Majesty's Government consider it indispensable, that any permission for suspending cash payments without forfeiture of charter, should be conceded to the Bank applying for it only on condition that, during the period of suspension, no dividend shall be paid to the Shareholders. With a view, therefore, to guard against any unnecessary delay in the resumption of cash payments by the Banks—more especially as one of the channels for obtaining specie has now become available, by the opening of the navigation—you will take such steps, by the issue of revised minutes of Council, or otherwise, as may ensure the observance of the condition above stated.

I have, &amp;c.

Government House,
17th July, 1838.

SIR,

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor desires me to invite the attention of the Directors of the Bank of Upper Canada, to the question of resumption of specie payments, without unnecessary delay. His Excellency feels that he need not inform the Bank Directors, that the state of the currency, in all parts of the Empire, is a matter in which Her Majesty's Government takes a peculiar interest; and the Directors must be aware, that nothing can affect the money transactions of the people, and of the Government, more seriously, than the use of a circulating medium which does not command a redemption in specie, and which therefore cannot be considered as having any fixed intrinsic value.

His Excellency is fully aware, that the Upper Canada Banks did not adopt the measure of suspension from any undue apprehensions of the consequences to themselves, of maintaining their obligations with the public inviolate; and I am commanded to say, that the proof of the solvency and credit of those institutions which has been afforded, by their maintaining specie payments during times of unparalleled commercial difficulty, is much to the honour of the Banks, and affords the best evidence of the wisdom of the Legislature, when it left a discretionary power in the hands of these important corporations, to suspend the redemption of their notes in specie, should necessity occur, arising from unforeseen or extraneous circumstances.

His Excellency is most desirous of restoring all public transactions, as soon as possible, to their ordinary course; and the conduct of the Upper Canada Banks, hitherto, offers him the strongest assurance, that they will co-operate with him in the very important point, of once more equalizing the value of the current coin of the realm, with the Bank Note currency commonly in use.

His Excellency trusts that the Banks will see the difficulty in which the Government is placed, in using a currency not redeemable in specie, at the same time that he is aware of the public and private inconvenience which must ensue, were the Government to make a difference between the commonly used currency and the legal coin of the Province, which, in strictness, ought only to be used in public transactions.

From the large importations of specie for the use of the Government, and from the present low rate of Exchange in England, as well as from the comparative state of quiet on the American frontier, His Excellency is induced to draw the conclusion, that the time has arrived when the Banks in this Province can resume, without serious inconvenience; and as those institutions declined to suspend from interested motives, His Excellency does not anticipate that these motives will have more weight now than heretofore.

His Excellency, therefore, invites the Banks to an early and private communication with him, for the purpose of arranging a simultaneous resumption of specie payments throughout the Province.

STATEMENT of the causes which led to the suspension of specie payments on the part of the Bank of Upper Canada, and the reasons that may be assigned for continuing that suspension at the present time.

When the general suspension of specie payments throughout the United States and Lower Canada took place in May, 1837, this Bank had £204,000 of notes in circulation; but being confident of their ability to redeem their paper, the Board determined to do so, and not to suspend, and at the same time they granted the public every indulgence in the way of renewals; and so well was the Bank prepared for the emergency, that when the insurrection broke out last December, it had £140,000 in specie in its vaults, and only £80,000 of notes in circulation.

In the above state of affairs the exigencies of the public service suddenly required a large outlay of money which the Commissary General was quite unable to meet; and although he had some months before withdrawn his account, and the Bank did not contemplate its renewal, yet it at once came forward and advanced him in bulk £50,000 in dollars, leaving £90,000 of specie in its vaults; and offered besides to furnish money for the military disbursements in all parts of the Province where posts were established; which proposals were accepted, and consequently those payments amounted in January to £34,417; in February to £96,618; and in March to £88,892; by which means the issue of bank notes was increased to £154,000, and its specie in the vault reduced to £60,000; and finding every probability of a continuance of those payments, and it being notorious from the disturbed state of the American Frontier that it would be impracticable to import specie from New York to replenish our coffers, which were rapidly being drained by the joint attacks of the Commercial and other suspended Banks of this Province, who, taking advantage of the great issues made for Government by the Bank of Upper Canada, collected its notes in large sums, and demanded their redemption in specie, at the same time refusing to take any part of their own notes in exchange; so that feeling the contest to be unequal and unfair, the Board of Directors finally determined on the sixth of March last to petition the Lieutenant-Governor for leave to suspend, and it was immediately granted; and which we have reason to think was concurred in by the Commissary General, as it insured him the means of carrying on the service until he could receive his supplies of specie from abroad on the opening of the navigation, being well satisfied that the notes of the Bank in the meantime would afford a sound currency by its well established reputation; and he was also aware that its late extraordinary issues were based upon his Treasury Bills sold to the Bank and which it had remitted to London to the amount of more than £200,000 Sterling, being an actual gold deposit more than equal to meet the entire circulation of its notes; and that the suspension of the Bank was not under any inability to pay its debts, but was entirely owing to political events of a most extraordinary nature; also, that there was a physical impossibility both on his part and on the part of the Bank to supply the country with specie.

The Bank of Upper Canada consequently suspended specie payments with £60,000 in gold and silver coins in its vaults, and upwards of £200,000 Sterling in London against a circulation of £154,000 of its notes in this Province; notwithstanding which, and not from a desire to hoard up its specie, but to afford every facility to the public service, it was communicated to the Commissary General that the Bank would still continue to pay the troops, staff, and department in dollars, and would pay the same to his contractors if required; this the Bank has faithfully performed not only here, but at the various posts in Upper Canada and at a considerable cost for transport.

The affairs of the Bank of Upper Canada having been brought down to the present time, it remains to discuss the expediency of resuming specie payments or the disadvantages that would be the result of such a measure at this juncture. His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor having lately ordered the three chartered Banks to take the matter into their earliest consideration.

To the foregoing requisition the Commercial Bank has quickly answered, that they were ready at any moment that the Upper Canada and Gore Banks first shewed the example; such an indefinite reply needs no comment, and if the other two Banks had answered in like manner, only reversing the order of names, it would be impossible ever to arrive at a conclusion. The Board of Directors of this Bank have not however thus endeavoured to evade the question, but have maturely considered it and have requested a meeting of the three Banks by a delegation of their Presidents to take the matter into their fullest consideration; to this request the President of the Commercial Bank has replied to the effect that as that Bank would be ready to resume specie payments as soon as the Upper Canada Bank would set the example, it was quite useless for him to attend the meeting, which he therefore declined; it remains therefore with the Bank of Upper Canada and the Gore Bank to state their own opinion and to be guided thereby.

The Board of Directors of the Bank of Upper Canada having maturely weighed all the circumstances attending this question are of opinion as follows:

That an immediate resumption of specie payments, in the present distressed state of this country, owing to the late political events, and the general want of confidence in trade, would compel the Bank to stop all further discounts, and to call in their debts as fast as possible; and should recourse be had to suits at law—which, in most cases, would be necessary—it is a well-known fact, that no money can be realized at Sheriff's sales, without bringing ruin on the debtors—for neither goods or chattels, lands or houses, will now bring one-third of former prices; and so well are the public aware of this, that there does not appear to be any general wish to enforce specie payments. In stopping discounts, the advantages likely to arise from the rich crop of wheat now coming into market, would be, in a great measure, paralyzed; for, in consequence of the scarcity of money, prices would, of course, fall to ruinous rates, or else there would be no sales for a foreign market;—at the same time, the country would be drained of its specie, by those who are daily selling off their farms, and removing to the United States. It is therefore suggested, as an act of prudence on the part of Government, and of consideration for the state of the country, not to call upon the Banks to resume specie payments, until the present crop shall have been brought to market, and that a new impulse shall have been given to the prosperity of the Province, by the renewal of our usual emigration from Europe, and the additional capital derived from that source.

Besides the foregoing, this Province labours under many other disadvantages, which might justly be brought under His Excellency's notice, particularly as Mr. Secretary Macaulay, in his letter, intimates that the state of the currency in all parts of the Empire, is a matter in which Her Majesty's Government takes a peculiar interest. Such being the case, it may be fairly urged that the currency of Upper and Lower Canada should be placed upon an equal footing—which it never can be, until the circulation of the French half-crown shall be totally abolished in the latter Province, as it is in this, and that it shall no longer be a legal tender at 2s. 9d.—when, in fact, it is an old worn-out smooth coin, and is not recognized as a coin in any other country excepting Lower Canada; and its intrinsic value as bullion, in the United States, is only about 1s. 10½d. or 2s.—equal to 38 or 40 cents.

Secondly.—That the base copper coinage now existing, be entirely prohibited from circulation, and that it be replaced by a Provincial coinage of good copper.

Thirdly.—It may likewise be suggested, that there shall be established, by an Imperial Act, a certain silver coinage, for the use of the British Colonies on this Continent, consisting of dollars and its parts, of equal weight and fineness to the United States dollar,—as such a measure would put an end at once to the Banks of this Province drawing their supplies of specie from the mint of the United States, at Philadelphia—it being a profit to the Bankers, of 1 or 1½ per cent. to melt down the Mexican dollar, and have it re-coined into American halves.

Fourthly.—A silver coinage for the Colonies will be the more acceptable—for, besides abolishing the French half-crown, it will also abolish the circulation of the British silver coins in this Province, against which the Lower Canadians complain, and which has already been brought under the notice of the Lords of the Treasury, by Mr. Commissary-General Routh, as having been fixed by our Legislature at too high a rate. The Act, however, will expire in about another year.

It is unquestionable, that at the present moment the Banks of this Province are quite able to resume specie payments,—the effect of which would be, the withdrawal of the greater part of their notes from circulation, and so deprive the country of a circulating medium of its own, as silver and gold, in the present political state of men's minds, would either be hoarded up or carried out of the Province. The bank notes of Lower Canada, which are redeemable in French half-crowns, would then take the place of our notes, and all the real inconveniences of a bad and inconvertible currency, would be immediately felt, although as yet it is little known, as our Banks are in the daily course of redeeming their notes by bills on London and New-York, within one per cent. of the Montreal rates, and that to any amount that may be offered.

It is not only from the depressed state of trade, and the great difficulty of collecting debts, that the Upper Canada Bank suffers inconvenience, and would be unable to afford the country any new discounts on a resumption of cash payments, but the well known embarrassed state of the Provincial finances tends very materially to press upon the public credit, and has become burthensome to this Bank: as the holders of Government Debentures having, for several months past, been alarmed for the safety of their property in those investments, have insisted upon the Bank to redeem them at par, under a claim that as they bought them from the Bank, so ought they to be re-purchased by the Institution. This feeling has proved to be very extensive, and within the last six months the Bank of Upper Canada, in order to uphold and maintain the credit of Government, has actually re-purchased £40,700 of the Provincial Bonds, which are now unsalable—and consequently, remain a dead weight on its hands. To this may be added the further sum of £37,500 sterling, of Government Debentures, unsold and unsalable, in the hands of its agents in London—our last advices being, that capitalists will have nothing to do with Canada Bonds during the unsettled state of that country. The Board, therefore, respectfully submit, whether, under all the circumstances hereinbefore stated, and whilst this Bank is encumbered with £80,000 of unsalable Government Debentures, many thousand pounds of which are now due, but which the Receiver-General is unable to pay, it can be considered prudent or proper, at the present time, to resume specie payments in this Province.

*Government House,

MY LORD,

FOR your Lordship's information upon a question of some importance to the mercantile interest of both the Canadian Provinces, I have the honour to transmit a copy of the letter which I have caused to be addressed to the three Incorporated Banks of Upper Canada, inviting them to an amicable discussion of the expediency of their immediately resuming cash payments.

I also inclose copies of the answers which, up to the present date, I have received from those Institutions.

In further elucidation, I transmit a copy of the original Act, authorising the suspension of specie payments, passed on the 11th July, 1837, which has been continued by an Act for extending the duration of expiring laws, dated 12th January, 1838, until the close of the next ensuing Session of Parliament.

By another Act passed on the 6th March last, the sixth and seventh clauses of the Act of 11th July, 1837, have been repealed—and power has been granted to Banks, having suspended specie payments under that Act, to put into circulation their notes to any amount not exceeding twice the amount of their paid-up capital.

Your Lordship will perceive, on examination of the Act of 11th July, 1837, that after having permitted the suspension of specie payments by any Banking Company, the Government of this Province is allowed no further control over the question. The resumption of cash payments cannot be insisted upon by the Government in any revised minute of Council, for the law preserves the original minute in full force, until the Banks themselves shall choose, voluntarily, to recur to the redemption of their notes in specie, or until the expiration of the Act, by the terms of its limitation, if the Banks should choose to avail themselves of the temporary advantage given them by the law, and decline resuming specie payments, in accordance with the wish of the Government.

Since the excitements have subsided along the American frontier, the prices of the precious metals in the New York market have fallen, and preparations seriously commenced for the resumption of cash payments in the leading States of the neighbouring Republic: the necessity of resuming also in this Province appears urgent and unquestionable. I therefore hope, that the three Chartered Banks of Upper Canada will concur in a simultaneous return to specie payments, without any further delay.

MY LORD,

WITH reference to my Despatch, (No. 53,) dated 8th August, in which I informed your Lordship that I would transmit the earliest intelligence of the final result of my endeavours to bring about the resumption of cash payments by the Banks of this Province. I have now the honour to state, that no progress has been made in accomplishing that very desirable object; and that it is questionable whether the Banks will heartily endeavour to resume cash payments, until they shall be compelled to do so by the expiration, at the ensuing Legislative Session, of the Act by which the suspension of cash payments was sanctioned.

The statement made by the Bank of Upper Canada, on the 18th August, of which I have the honour to enclose a copy, will explain the views of that institution, on the question of an immediate resumption.

I avail myself of the present opportunity, to transmit to your Lordship my despatch (No. 21) addressed to the Earl of Durham, on this subject.

Your Lordship may depend upon my continued endeavours to restore the currency of this Province to a satisfactory condition.

MY LORD,

WITH reference to my despatch to your Lordship of the 8th of August, (No. 14) containing copies of certain Acts of the Legislature of this Province, relative to the suspension of specie payments by the three chartered Banks, and of the correspondence which had taken place with those institutions, for the purpose of bringing about a speedy resumption—I have now the honour to transmit to your Lordship, a letter from the Cashier of the Bank of Upper Canada, dated 18th August, accompanied with a statement explanatory of the causes by which that establishment was originally led to suspend cash payments, and are now induced to to desire that suspension to be prolonged.

As no further communications have been made to me by the two other Banks, since the date of my despatch above referred to, and as the Board of Directors of the Bank of Upper Canada have expressed their opinion, that it would not be prudent for the Banks to return to specie payments, under existing circumstances—I am led to infer, that there is but little probability of any change taking place in the course of business pursued by the Banks, before the next meeting of the Legislature, when the Act authorizing the suspension will expire,—unless, indeed, the Cashier of the Bank of Upper Canada, who is at present in New-York, should bring with him, on his return, such favourable information respecting the state of monetary affairs in the Atlantic cities of the United States, as would induce the Directors of that Bank to consider an earlier resumption in the Province both safe and practicable.

I should further invite the attention of your Lordship to that part of the accompanying statement having reference to the metallic currency of Upper and Lower Canada, and suggesting that it should be placed upon an equal footing in both Provinces, so as to obviate effectually the mutual inconvenience arising from the present inconvertibility of certain denominations of coins into a medium of inter-provincial exchange, in consequence of their local value being fixed at a higher rate than is warranted by the rates at which they are elsewhere current.

As the state of the currency in all parts of the Empire, is a subject which has engrossed much of the interest and attention of Her Majesty's Government, I have considered that it would not be unwelcome to your Lordship to receive these observations at the present juncture; and I beg to assure your Lordship of my entire readiness to co-operate in any measures which your Lordship may deem it expedient to adopt, with a view to facilitate a satisfactory adjustment of the relations of the two Provinces, in regard to their monied transactions.

THE EARL OF DURHAM,

Upper Canada,
Toronto, 15th February, 1839.

My LORD,

I HAVE perused with much attention, the observations contained in your Lordship's despatch of the 13th December last, (No. 182) on the subject of the Act passed by the Legislature of Upper Canada during their last session, respecting which Her Majesty's pleasure has not yet been signified, entitled, "An Act to repeal and amend part of an Act passed in the last session, entitled, 'An Act to authorize the chartered Banks in this Province to suspend the redemption of their notes in specie, under certain regulations, for a limited time, and for other purposes therein mentioned.'"

Your Lordship informs me, that this Act having been referred for the consideration of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, and the Lords of the Committee of the Privy Council for Trade, their Lordships had observed, that however circumstances might have existed in 1837, to render necessary the passing of the Act, there did not appear to them sufficient cause for its renewal in 1838, and still less for the removal of the restrictions that were imposed by it.

On reference to my despatches of the 8th August and 28th September, (Nos. 53 & 70) your Lordship will perceive, by my efforts to induce the Banks to resume specie payments, that I fully concurred in the opinion entertained by the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, and the Lords of the Committee of Trade, as to the impropriety of legalizing a system of inconvertible paper money, and that I was equally sensible with their Lordships, of the necessity of the Banks reverting to their usual practice, so soon as they could safely do so.

The peculiar circumstances of the country, have hitherto acted as an inducement to the Banks to avail themselves, to the full extent, of the privilege granted to them by the Legislature, with which, your Lordship is aware, the Executive had not the power to interfere,—while the second suspension of the Bank in the Lower Province, from the pressure of events, has furnished an additional argument for the suspension in Upper Canada to be continued until now.

From present indications, it is my belief the Banks will not apply to the Legislature for a renewal of the Act granting them immunity, which will expire with the termination of the ensuing session. I am further of opinion, that should they set the imitative of resuming cash payments, their example would be speedily followed in Lower Canada; and your Lordship will readily appreciate the advantages to be derived from the banking institutions of the two Provinces acting, as much as possible, in concert, in a matter so important.

Your Lordship having fully explained to me the course which, under ordinary circumstances, Her Majesty's Government consider that it would be proper to adopt, with reference to this subject, and left me the discretionary power of not acting on your instructions, should the present position of affairs in Canada require its exercise, I shall be quite able, in the event of the question being again mooted, to decide upon it.

The provisions of the Act 1st Victoria, c. 4.—to which, at the request of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, your Lordship has especially directed my attention—shall receive from me every consideration; and I am too much impressed with the soundness of your Lordship's views, as to the indiscriminate extension of expiring laws, passed for special objects, not to be desirous of acting in strict accordance with them.

I have, &c.

SIR,

Your Excellency having recently inquired whether the Banks of this Province evinced any inclination to resume cash payments in the month of May next, when, it is understood, the Banks in Lower Canada will be prepared for that desirable measure—I think it proper to request your Excellency's attention to despatches upon this subject, (Nos. 14 and 21) addressed, last summer, to the Earl of Durham, and to his Lordship's reply, contained in his despatch No. 11.

With my despatch No. 21, I transmitted an able paper by Mr. Ridout, the Cashier of the Bank of Upper Canada, dated 18th August, giving a clear statement of the grounds upon which the suspension of cash payments in this Province originally rested, and upon which it was found necessary that it should be continued for some time longer. Your Excellency will observe, that the Bank of Upper Canada, at the period when this letter was written, proposed that the resumption of the ordinary course of business, should only be deferred until the harvest had been secured. It however occurred, that on the arrival of that period, a new and formidable difficulty presented itself, in the suddenly increased hostility of the whole American frontier, and the consequent interruption of that secure and ready intercourse between Canada and the city of New-York, the great money-market of this continent, which is indispensable to the maintenance, in this country, of a paper currency convertible into specie at the pleasure of the holder.

Under these peculiar circumstances, I forebore to urge upon the Banks the propriety of their voluntarily relinquishing the privilege of suspending specie payments, conferred on them by the Act, until the close of the present Session; but on meeting the two Houses of the Legislature, a few days since, I took occasion in my Speech (of which I have already inclosed your Excellency a copy) to advert to the importance of an early resumption of cash payments, and expressed a hope that no difficulty would be found to interpose and prevent it.

On the day after the opening of the Session, the Bank of Upper Canada addressed to me a letter, of which I enclose a copy, bearing upon points intimately connected with the resumption of specie payments by the Banks of this Province, viz. the policy of continuing as a legal tender, at their original nominal value, certain depreciated French coins now current in Lower Canada, and the expediency of providing a new and convenient silver coinage for the use of Her Majesty's North American Provinces.

Without entering at present into the discussion of the latter question, which however is far from being unimportant, I am anxious to call your Excellency's attention to the propriety of abolishing the use of the depreciated French half-crown as a current coin in Lower Canada. The reasons on which this proceeding would be founded, are fully exhibited in Mr. Ridout's letters, and they appear to me conclusive. Thinking that they will also satisfy your Excellency's mind, I indulge a hope that you will deem the subject worthy the immediate consideration of the Special Council of Lower Canada, which I believe is still in Session. If, upon your Excellency's submitting the matter to the Special Council, it should be decided that the proposed reform of the circulating medium of Lower Canada is for good reasons inexpedient at the present time, I would then suggest to your Excellency, as a concession due to the interests of Upper Canada, that an Ordinance should be passed, declaring that the old depreciated French half-crown had ceased to be a legal tender when offered by the Banks of the Lower Province, in payment for their own notes, to the Banks of this Province. By a measure of this nature, a just and reasonable degree of protection would be afforded to the Banks of this Province; and I propose it to your Excellency, on a presumption that the Bank of Upper Canada has not over-rated the quantity of depreciated coin actually current in the Lower Province.

I feel particularly solicitous to bring this subject under your Excellency's earliest consideration, because it is my impression, that the course to be pursued by the Legislature of this Province, during its present Session, respecting the resumption of cash payments, will be shaped, to a certain degree, by the conclusion at which your Excellency's Special Council may arrive upon the question, whether depreciated silver coin shall continue to form a large portion of the currency of Lower Canada.

I would further invite your Excellency's attention to the equalization, in value, of British silver coin in the Upper and Lower Provinces, which forms one of the topics discussed by the Bank of Upper Canada, and is, in my opinion, much to be desired.

The greater current value of that description of coin in Upper Canada, under the authority of the Act passed in 1836, may certainly be objected to, on the ground of its inconveniently affecting the common interests of the trading community in both Provinces; but it is not clear that it has a very material affect as a protection to the Banks of this Province against the fair demands of the Banks of Lower Canada—for I understand, that of the large quantities of British silver imported into this Province within the last three years by the Banks of Upper Canada, exceeding I understand £150,000, a considerable portion has already been collected by the merchants of the Lower Province, and used with advantage for remitting, in the course of business, to England.

There are weighty objections to the enhancement in the nominal value of British coins to the extent sanctioned by the Act now in force in this Province; and I greatly doubt whether, under any circumstances, that Act should be renewed.

The measure best adapted to overcome the difficulties experienced in preserving a convenient metallic currency, seems to be the issue of a peculiar coinage, such as Mr. Ridout has suggested; and if the question of providing such a currency were favourably entertained, it would appear advisable, in proceeding with any measure in Lower Canada upon the subject, to allow the late Act regulating the current coin of this Province to expire, by virtue of its limitation, next year, and in the mean while to prepare for the due substitution of the better currency.

It is stated that Her Majesty's Government have under consideration the question of providing a gold, as well as a silver coinage, for Colonial circulation; and as your Excellency may have also directed the deliberations of your Special Council to that subject, I would suggest to your Excellency, whether, before the adoption of any other measure, it may not be expedient to recognize, by an Act in both Provinces, the exact American tariff on all the gold and silver coins current on this Continent, which was established by an Act of Congress in the year 1835.

For your Excellency's information, I enclose a copy of a Despatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, (No. 124,) relating to the Act of this Province for the regulation of its current coins.

I have, &c.

Toronto, 28th February, 1839.*

SIR,

As the Act will shortly expire which authorizes the suspension of specie payments by the Banks of this Province, and as the Board of Directors of this Institution are desirous to ascertain, as early as possible, the views of Her Majesty's Government on this subject, I have been directed most respectfully to request that you will be pleased to inform me if any proceedings have been had on the Report which the Board had the honour to submit to His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, on the 18th of August last, more particularly on that part of it which relates to the abolishing of the French half Crown of Lower Canada,—a coin which is so utterly worthless in its intrinsic value, that it has been, for many years past, a bar to the freedom of exchanges between Upper and Lower Canada; serving in all times as a virtual suspension of specie payments on the part of the Banks of Montreal and Quebec, so far as respected the people or Banks of this Province—being strictly a loss on exchange of twenty-seven per cent., as the nominal value of the half Crown is 2s. 9d., whereas it is only worth 2s. in other parts of this Continent, and then only as bullion, not being recognised as a coin out of Lower Canada.

The Board are anxious to call His Excellency's attention to this point, as they have lately understood that the Banks of Lower Canada are provided with large sums of this kind of money, which is inconvertible in all other countries, and on which they may with impunity rest a resumption of specie payments, whilst, on the other hand, the Banks of this Province would be exposed to an unequal contest, and from the course of trade would, in a great measure, be compelled to furnish specie for the commercial transactions of both Provinces, in which case the notes of the Lower Canada Banks will again form a very considerable portion of the circulating medium of this country.

Under these circumstances, the Board pray that His Excellency will be pleased to take into his consideration the expediency of communicating with the Government of Lower Canada on the subject of the currency of both Provinces, and they trust that the result will be that the French half Crown will no longer be suffered to form the legal coin of any portion of British America. The Board are more particularly led to hope for this conclusion, by adverting to that part of your letter of the 17th July last, in which you intimate that the state of the currency, in all parts of the Empire, is a matter in which Her Majesty's Government takes a peculiar interest. The Board are the more induced to hope for such a favourable determination, from having observed that, within a few days, an ordinance has been passed at Montreal, to exclude from circulation all coins of copper of less value than their legal rate, as there can be no doubt that a remedy which has been so promptly applied by Government to the lesser evil, will not be delayed in removing the greater.

Referring also to that part of the report in which the Board suggested the issue of a specified silver coinage, for use of British America, I am further directed to request that you will be pleased to inform me if such a measure is in contemplation by Her Majesty's Government—as in that case, this Bank, in common with the other Banks of this Province, would solicit a share of the new coin, and would take immediate steps to order their Agents in London to purchase a large quantity, for shipment on the opening of the navigation, which would materially tend to render an early resumption of specie payments both easy and safe.

In order to provide further for equalizing the exchange between Upper and Lower Canada, the Board would beg leave to recommend, that the provisions of the Act of 1836, declaring the value, in this Province, of the gold and silver coins of Great Britain, be extended in like manner to Lower Canada.

I have, &c.

SIR,

IN reply to your Excellency's letter of the 9th instant, upon the subject of the resumption of cash payments by the banks, and adverting to the observations and report of Mr.
Ridout—I have to acquaint you, that it appears, from the return of the number of French half-crowns in possession of the Banks of Lower Canada, a copy of which is annexed, and from the accompanying statement of the President of the Bank of Montreal, that the information conveyed to your Excellency by Mr. Ridout, is erroneous, in respect to the extent of the circulation of French half-crowns in Montreal, and to the amount in deposit at the Banks, and to their value in the United States.

The injurious effects of authorizing the continuance of the deteriorated coin alluded to by Mr. Ridout, cannot be denied, and it is highly desirable that these half-crowns should be driven out of circulation; but this can be only accomplished by passing an iniquitous and impolitic Ordinance, declaring their value reduced, or by redeeming them at a loss—a measure which, in consequence of the limited means of the Special Council, may create embarrassment.

The evils, however, resulting from the present currency, are so objectionable, that a proposed ordinance for redeeming the French half-crowns, and to regulate the currency of this Province, has been for some time under the consideration of the Executive Council, and is now before the Special Council; and I hope that should no provision be speedily made by Her Majesty's Government, to establish a good silver coinage for the Colonies, that I shall be able to submit to the Special Council the measure suggested by your Excellency, that the foreign gold coins recognized by the American Congress in the year 1835, should be made a legal tender, by an Act in this Province.

I have the honour,

&c. &c.

(Signed) J. COLBORNE.

His Excellency Major-General

SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K.C.H.

Bank of Montreal,
Montreal, 22nd March, 1839.

WITH reference to the despatch of Sir George Arthur, (No. 8) dated 9th instant, on the subject of a resumption of specie payments by the chartered Banks of Upper Canada—the cause assigned by Mr. Ridout for the suspension on the part of the Bank of Upper Canada—his reasons why that suspension should be continued, and the necessity of assimilating the currency in both Provinces, as a means of facilitating a return to cash payments, so clearly set forth by His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada—

It is respectfully submitted—that the erroneous policy pursued by the Bank of Upper Canada, in not suspending specie payments in May, 1837, when that course was adopted generally by other chartered Banks, equally well prepared to meet their engagements, is illustrated by the fact, that when a resumption did take place, in June, 1838, as well in Lower Canada as in the United States, that Institution was, it is believed, the sole obstacle to a resumption by the other chartered Banks in Upper Canada; and so far from its having granted to the public every indulgence, it is notorious, that the positive refusal to afford the ordinary and usual accommodation, caused serious injury and embarrassment to the commercial community of the Upper Province, and produced great inconvenience to the Merchants of Lower Canada connected therewith.

This result is clearly observable, even from Mr. Ridout's own statement, wherein he shews the contraction of his issues—the increased specie balance in the vaults, and the decreased liabilities of the public to the Bank—undeniably evidencing a material diminution of the usual accommodation.

The attempt to cast upon the Commercial Bank the odium of a non-resumption of specie payments, in June, 1838, cannot be considered fair or just.

That Bank was, of necessity, compelled to follow in the wake of the Bank of Upper Canada—which possessed the advantage of all the Government deposits; but it was prepared to resume simultaneously with the Bank of Upper Canada, could the Directors of that Institution have been induced or forced to do so; and no reason existed, why a resumption should not have taken place in June, 1838, which was not equally cogent in Lower Canada when all the Banks did resume, though legally authorized to continue the suspension, and to which resumption the Commercial Bank had agreed to become a party provided the Bank of Upper Canada led the way or “shewed the example.”

A resumption having however been procrastinated in Upper Canada until a renewal of the political troubles last fall, more powerful reasons arose than any hitherto adduced in favor of a continued suspension; but these are now happily removed, and unless a war should actually take place between Great Britain and the United States, no valid argument can be urged against a general resumption, in both Provinces, on the first of June next.

But that resumption should be simultaneous and general, and cannot be evaded by the Banks of Upper Canada without inflicting a very serious injury upon the trade of Lower Canada.

The heavy balances due to the Bank of Upper Canada by its London and New York Agents, as lately exhibited by the return made to the Legislature, when compared with the liabilities of the Bank, incontestably prove that it cannot resume without cramping the trade or withdrawing its present comparatively small amount of accommodation from the public; as evidence of which it may be remarked, that when the Bank of Montreal did resume cash payments on the first of June last, it was not under the necessity of contracting its issues; on the contrary, it beneficially extended them, and it is prepared, as are, it is believed, all the chartered Banks in Lower Canada to resume, without urging the necessity of any curtailment in their discounts as a reason for postponing a return to a proper and legitimate course of business. It appears however, imperatively necessary that the Upper Canada Banks should be required to resume cash payments at the same time.

It is a matter of surprise that in adverting to the relative state of the currency in the two Provinces, so much stress should be laid by the Cashier of the Bank of Upper Canada upon an assumed protection afforded in Lower Canada to the Banks in their exchanges with those of Upper Canada, in consequence of the French half Crown being a legal tender, and it is certainly somewhat singular that so barefaced a departure from the fact should have been hazarded in an official statement, purporting to contain the truth, as to affirm or assert that the intrinsic value of the half Crown was only equal to thirty-eight or forty cents.

That the French Crown and half Crown are depreciated coins, is admitted on all hands, and no difference of opinion can, it is conceived, exist with respect to the propriety and justice of reducing their legal value to their intrinsic worth, or of abolishing their circulation altogether as a coin receivable in sale; but though some isolated instances may be found of a French half Crown so worn, as to be intrinsically not worth more than 1s. 10s. to 2s., so also may be found similar instances of the deterioration of the American half dollar.

At the United States mint, however, the Crown is still received at 109 cents, (not one per cent. discount,) and the half Crowns may be paid into the Banks at fifty cents, or two shillings and six-pence, currency; and if taken indiscriminately and weighed against American half dollars, the difference in weight upon two hundred pieces, will be found only equal to about 3s. 4d. currency, not quite one per cent. under the new half dollar; and when that difference is put against the superior purity of the metal, more than one and one half per cent. in favour of the French silver, it is very evident that prejudice and interest combined dictated the assertion.

Mr. Ridout, in his letter of the 28th February, says that it is understood "the Banks of Lower Canada are provided with large amounts of money inconvertible in all other countries, on which they may, with impunity, rest a resumption of specie payments." From what source such unfounded information was obtained, it is impossible to conjecture; but it is a fact, that when the Bank of Upper was urged to resume specie payments in the spring of 1838, he was distinctly informed that the Bank of Montreal possessed very few of that description of coin, and when subsequently it did resume, half Crowns were not tendered, in any amount, in redemption of its paper. In fact, with the exception of a few hundred received and paid away in the daily operations of the Bank, no transactions in deteriorated coins took place; and at the present moment there are not five thousand French half Crowns in the Bank: and it is believed that Your Excellency will find, by the returns which have been required from all the Banks in the Province, and the Receiver General, that the amount in their respective vaults of such description of coin, is comparatively trifling, and cannot shield them from any foreign demand upon them for any considerable sum. It is impossible to estimate correctly the amount of half Crowns which may be in the hands of the French population, but assuredly whatever it may be, it forms a very considerable portion of the circulating medium of the Province.

The poverty which unfortunately prevails throughout the Province, warrants the assumption that there cannot be over £100,000 in French half-crowns in the possession of the whole population, and this must be hoarded up—for it is rare, indeed, to receive any considerable amount in the course of business, in this description of money.

With reference, however, more particularly to the general state of the currency in Lower Canada, it is certainly desirable that the French deteriorated coins should be driven from circulation, and it would be politic and just that provision should be made (in the ordinance which Your Excellency directed to be prepared some time ago, giving a new legal value to certain gold and silver coins, and which it is understood will soon be submitted to the consideration of the Special Council) for their gradual redemption by the Government, with a view to their being, within a limited time, abolished as a legal tender in tale. But should the finances of the Province not warrant at present the adoption of such a measure, which might involve a loss of 12 to £15,000, some are of opinion that it would be well to reduce their legal value to 2s. 6d., and let individuals sustain the loss, which would not be great, scattered over so great a surface, in like manner as the pistolen or shilling was reduced to 10d. some years since.

It is doubtful, however, if this could be deemed sound or just legislation, and as a choice of evils, until some comprehensive measure can be framed by the Imperial Parliament, establishing an uniform currency throughout the North American Colonies, it might be recommended to the Upper Canada Legislature, to restore the legal value of the half Crown to 2s. 9d., though from what has already been said, it is really not necessary to do so for the protection of the interests of the Banks of that Province.

It is stated, and very correctly so, by Sir George Arthur, in his despatch, that there are weighty objections to the enhancement of the nominal value of British coins to the extent sanctioned by the Act now in force in Upper Canada. These objections, it is presumed, have reference more especially to the shillings and sixpences, which are rated at 1s. 3d. and 7½d. currency, while the Crown and half Crown are rated at six shillings and three shillings respectively, and the Sovereign at twenty-four shillings and four-pence, a difference of nearly four per cent.

The inconvenience, however, of establishing a tale value, embracing fractional parts of a penny, in the value of the shillings and six-penny pieces, which are required principally for change, would be such as to overcome any desire to alter the present fixed legal rate of any of these coins; but a limitation should be made as in England, and as it is provided in Your Excellency's ordinance already alluded to, to the amount for which such coins shall be a legal tender.

Your Excellency's proposed ordinance, which will, if it become law, assimilate the legal value of British gold and silver coins in Lower Canada to their established legal value in Upper Canada, has wisely fixed upon the sum of five pounds as the maximum amount of small change which can be legally tendered in payment; and should a clause be added to the same measure, providing for reducing the legal value, or the redemption by the Government of the French deteriorated coin, and the limitation referred to be introduced by Legislative enactment in Upper Canada, the object pressed upon the attention of Your Excellency, by Sir George Arthur, will have been obtained, namely, that of assimilating the currency of the two Provinces, which ought unquestionable to stand in that and every other respect upon perfect terms of equality. Should Your Excellency, nevertheless, not think it expedient to exercise any legislative action upon the French deteriorated coins in the present circumstances of this Province; it ought, it is humbly conceived, to be recommended to the Lieutenant Governor of Upper Canada, to propose an amendment to the Act of 1836, limiting the amount for which small change shall be a legal tender.

Among other unfounded assertions, it would appear to have been represented to Sir George Arthur, that the present discrepancy between the established legal rates of British silver coins, in the two Provinces, affords little or no protection, and does not act as a shield to the Banks of the Upper Province, and that large amounts of British silver have been withdrawn by the merchants of Lower Canada, and advantageously used as a remittance to Britain.

Particular enquiry has been made, and no instance of any such negotiations can be discovered. When the rate of exchange on London, rated so high as from 18 to 20 per cent. premium, during the suspension of the American Banks, and during the absurd and ridiculous endeavours of the Bank of Upper Canada to sustain cash payments; to the manifest and direct injury and prejudice of the best interests of that Province, there can be little doubt but British silver, even at 12½ per cent. premium, was drawn and remitted by brokers and money-changers from New York and its borders, and even by individuals at Toronto; but that drafts were made upon the Banks of Upper Canada by those of Lower Canada, and advantageously remitted or negotiated, has been made with a view rather of making out a case than as establishing a fact, or a sound argument, and it must be notorious that since the resumption of specie payments in the United States, the rate of exchange has been such in New York and in Lower Canada, as to prevent any abstraction of British coins from the Upper Province, especially of the lesser denominations.

That the Bank of Upper Canada, immediately prior to, and subsequent to its suspension, speculated largely in the debentures of the Province, is a well-known fact; but these debentures were purchased at par, and sold at large premiums by that Bank, in New-York, and remitted to London and drawn against. Having derived large profits from these negotiations, it cannot surely now be sufficient to urge the loss which may accrue to the Bank, or the inconvenience of holding £80,000 of unsaleable and unredeemed Debentures, as a successful argument against so necessary and so desirable a measure as a return to cash payments, especially as it may be fairly presumed, that a large proportion of the apparent surplus profits of the Bank has arisen from these investments. Nor should such a reason, it is thought, have any weight with the Executive Government of Upper Canada, should an Act of the Legislature continuing the suspension be presented for its sanction.

Indeed nothing but a return of the border difficulties, or a national war with the United States can justify a longer suspension by the Banks of either Province than the first of June next.

Though the Commissary General has, it is understood, brought the subject of a Colonial coinage under the consideration of the Lords of the Treasury, it is not expected that an early decision on this matter will be come to by their Lordships; and in the meantime it would certainly be desirable that the suggestion of Sir George Arthur should be adopted, namely, to enact a law in both Provinces that all the foreign gold coin, recognized by the American Congress in the year 1834, be made a legal tender by weight at the following weights, viz:

- For Portugal gold, 94s. 10d. currency per ounce, being the same standard as British gold.
- “ French gold, 93s. 2d. currency, per ounce.
- “ Spanish gold, 89s. 11d. currency, per ounce.

Until such time as a colonial coinage, as recommended by the Commissary General, shall have been established, or that the British Imperial coinage, in all its subdivisions, shall be introduced into and made the sole legal circulating medium of the Province, and the pound sterling made the money of account instead of Halifax currency,

*Castle of St. Lewis,
Quebec, 16th August, 1838.*

SIR,

I HAVE been applied to by members of the family of Samuel Chandler, and Benjamin Waite, now under sentence of death in Upper Canada, for high treason, or under the late Act against Foreigners, for an extension of the Royal Mercy to those persons, and for the grant to them of Her Majesty's pardon.

I am unwilling to interfere with the course, which, in Your Excellency's opinion might seem the most advisable, and I feel that without full information and report of the circumstances, I have no means of forming an accurate judgment whether any person convicted of treason, by a competent court, is, or is not, a fit object of the Royal clemency, or the extent to which it might be proper to grant it. But on a careful and attentive perusal of my commissions and instructions, it appears evident that I am called upon to exercise my judgment as Governor General of British North America, and Her Majesty's High Commissioner in all cases arising out of the recent insurrection in the two Provinces.

You are in possession of a copy of Lord Glenelg's Despatch addressed to me on the 3rd of April last, No. 8, in pursuance of which I opened my commission of Governor General and High Commissioner, as well as that of Governor-in-Chief of Lower Canada, on my arrival here. It is therefore unnecessary to do more than refer Your Excellency, in general terms, to the tenor of that despatch; but I am not aware whether Your Excellency is in possession of any copy of Lord Glenelg's despatch to me of the 21st of April, 1838, No. 21, chiefly upon the subject of the revolt in both the Canadas, it is therefore as well that I should state to Your Excellency some of the passages in that despatch.

Lord Glenelg observes, "the late revolt in the Canadas has been followed by the arrest and imprisonment of a very considerable number of persons, both in the Lower and Upper Province. In regard to Upper Canada, I have not even to this time been informed of the course contemplated by the local authorities for bringing such prisoners to trial." After giving various instructions as to Lower Canada, His Lordship proceeds:—"From the very commencement of the late disturbances, it has been, as Your Lordship is aware, the earnest desire of the Government that the utmost lenity, compatible with public safety, should be exercised towards the insurgents. This is the principle inculcated in my various despatches to the authorities in Lower and Upper Canada. The course of events, and the circumstances in which we may venture to assume you will find the Provinces, will supply, as it appears to us, new facilities, as well as fresh inducements to the carrying of this principle into effect." "In order to enable you to act with promptitude in this respect, you are relieved from the restriction by which your predecessors were prevented, in the case of treason, from giving an absolute pardon, or granting more than a respite till the Royal pleasure should be known. In your Commission that restriction is omitted."

In consequence of these instructions, I have to request that your Excellency will forward to me a full report of the cases of all the prisoners, with the Judges' report upon them; and that your Excellency will also favour me with your own views upon each particular case, and a statement, as far as in your power, of the previous character and conduct of each of the prisoners, and any recommendation to mercy which the Juries who have tried them may have given.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your Excellency's most obedient,

Humble Servant,

SIR GEORGE ARTHUR TO THE EARL OF DURHAM, ON SHORT HILL PRISONERS.

(Separate.)

Cornwall, 20th August, 1838.

MY LORD,

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt, whilst on a tour of inspection through the Eastern Districts of this Province, of your Lordship's despatch, No. 7, of the 16th instant, framed upon an appeal which has been made to your Lordship by the members of the family of Samuel Chandler and Benjamin Waite.

The measure which your Lordship has considered yourself called upon to adopt, in consequence of this appeal—that of depriving the Officer administering the Government of Upper Canada, of the powers expressly vested in him by the Royal Commission, is so important in its nature, and in its inevitable effects, that I must beg your Lordship will excuse my delaying to reply to it at any length, until my return to Toronto on Monday next.

In the mean time, I beg at once to inform your Lordship of the course it had been, after long and most anxious deliberation in the Executive Council, my determination to pursue towards all the prisoners convicted in the affair on the Niagara frontier.

Moreau, the leader of the expedition, who was an American, has been executed. If any distinction could be made, when all the cases were reported, the worst offender being a subject of Her Majesty, was also to suffer capitally,—the remainder were to be pardoned, on condition of transportation, or some other secondary punishment.

The cases of Waite and Chandler, are very aggravated; but before I left Toronto, I directed their sentences to be respited.

That your Lordship has misapprehended the intention of the instruction of the Secretary of State, which you have quoted, I think may be deduced from the whole tenor of Lord Glenelg's correspondence with me respecting the cases of the persons convicted of treason—and more especially, from a despatch which I have very recently received, dated the 18th ultimo, (July) in which his Lordship conveys to me the gratifying assurance, that Her Majesty's Government entirely coincides in the measures I have adopted, and the views I have expressed myself to entertain in this important matter, and directly refers me to the powers of pardoning for treason, vested in the Officer administering the Government under your Lordship's Commission as Governor-in-Chief.

I have, &c.

SIR,

I HAD the honour of receiving here, yesterday, your Excellency's communication of the 20th instant, to which I defer replying, as I am on the point of setting out for Quebec. In the mean time, I enclose your Excellency the copy of a despatch which I have received from the Secretary of State.

MY LORD,

I HAVE recently had under my consideration various despatches from Sir George Arthur, relative to the disposal of the individuals implicated in the late rebellion in Upper Canada. The general views which Sir George Arthur has adopted in this matter, have met the approval of Her Majesty's Government; but, as it is important that in carrying those views into effect, he should act in concert with your Lordship, I have directed him to transmit to you copies of the correspondence which has passed between himself and Her Majesty's Government.

I have the honour to be,

*Castle of St. Lewis,
Quebec, August 24th, 1838.*

SIR,

IN referring again to your Excellency's Despatch of the 20th instant, I cannot but notice, with very sincere regret, some indications of an absence of that spirit of perfect and cordial co-operation which I have hitherto found, and expected to continue to find, in our communications.

I neither intended, nor was I able, to "deprive your Excellency of the powers expressly vested in you by the Royal Commission." My purpose was simply to exercise that superintending authority, as Governor-General, which is vested in me by my Commissions, and my Instructions, in terms too clear to admit of discretion or doubt. Nor could I, without, in my own judgment, a direliction of duty, abstain from exercising it in a matter which not only belongs to that class of "more considerable questions," on which I am required to "maintain uniformity of principle in the administration of the different North American Governments," but which has been specifically referred to me in repeated despatches. I cannot agree with your Excellency, in supposing that I could have misapprehended the many passages quoted in my despatch of the 16th instant, or that I could have erred in inferring from the whole tenor of Lord Glenelg's correspondence with me, that the disposal of the political prisoners in Upper, as well as in Lower Canada, was a matter especially committed to my controul. Nor do I think it possible for me to err, in concluding from Lord Glenelg's despatch of July 14th, of which I had the honour of transmitting your Excellency a copy on the 21st instant, that his Lordship's intentions and directions must have been, that you should take no step with regard to the persons implicated in the late rebellion in Upper Canada, without communicating and making sure that you were acting in concert with me.

I am aware of the power of pardoning for treason possessed by you in virtue of that clause in my Commission which devolves on you during my absence all the powers therein entrusted to me, and which consequently invests you with powers of pardon never hitherto committed to the Governors of these Provinces. But I know of nothing which exempts this delegated authority from the general subordination to instructions from the Governor-General.

Your Excellency's explanation of the policy which you had determined on adopting with regard to the prisoners convicted at Niagara, does not immediately strike me as indicating a course so obviously correct that I can dispense with the information which I had required in my despatch of the 16th instant. I cannot quite admit the propriety of selecting some one subject of Her Majesty to share the fate of Moreau, the leader of the expedition, who happened to be a citizen of the United States. The fate of Her Majesty's subjects should be determined on a view of their own conduct, and of the circumstances which have led the Juries to accompany their verdict of "guilty," in every instance, with a recommendation to mercy. I must, therefore, repeat my request for the reports, statements and information, which I previously desired your Excellency to transmit to me, taking it for granted that you will, as a necessary consequence, respite all the prisoners until I shall have had time to make the inquiries which I propose.

I have the honour to be, &c.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE,
Toronto, 29th August, 1838.

MY LORD,

In my communication of the 20th instant, marked "separate," I had the honour to acknowledge your Lordship's despatch, No. 7, of the 16th instant.

On considering that despatch, my impression was, that the power of extending the Royal clemency to a convict, of whatever offence proved to have been guilty, was distinctly vested in the Officer actually administering the Government, and it seemed to me that your Lordship's assuming that power, whilst your Lordship was absent from the Province, was virtually depriving Upper Canada of her Government, and that it would have the tendency of weakening, materially, the Executive authority in the Province, which, in times like the present, and particularly with reference to the crime of treason, would be full of danger. Moreover, I contemplated the possibility of a difference of opinion in any particular case, either in favour of mercy or otherwise, which could not fail to produce great embarrassment, and even painful consequences.

These considerations, together with a reference to what must be expected to be the feeling of the Legislative bodies with whom I have to act, and who would not fail to inquire, with great strictness, into any innovation upon the Constitution of the Province, and most particularly in respect to the administration of Justice, induced me, whilst I informed your Lordship that the sentence of death upon the convicts Chandler and Waite, (the representation of whose cases had apparently been the occasion on which your Lordship thought it necessary to communicate with me,) had been ordered to be respited before I left Toronto—to request your Lordship would excuse my delaying to reply to your Lordship's despatch until my return.

I took the liberty of remarking what would be the effect of your Lordship's interposition in this matter,—that it would appear to deprive the Officer administering the Government of Upper Canada of a most important power, expressly given under the Royal Commission, and submitted to your Lordship, that from the whole tenor of the correspondence of Her Majesty's Secretary of State with me, I was under the impression that your Lordship had misapprehended those parts of Lord Glenelg's instructions to which my attention was called by your Lordship, in which I was the more confirmed by remarking in the very passage of Lord Glenelg's despatch, which your Lordship quoted, that whilst your Lordship was enjoined to pursue a certain line of policy, the Secretary of State observed that the same course had been pointed out to the authorities in Upper Canada.

In addressing my "separate" despatch to your Lordship, I confess I felt also that, to a certain extent, your Lordship was practically (though I was sure unintentionally) encouraging complaints and endless appeals from this Province; and it occurred to me that it was possible, upon a full re-consideration of the subject, your Lordship might not continue to be under the impression that you were obliged to interpose your decision, "in particular cases," and I entertained the hope that your Lordship might be induced to withdraw the instruction which I thought it possible had been induced by feelings of kindness and humanity towards the petitioners, without fully estimating the want of confidence it implied—the power it suspended, and the prejudice it worked, in taking from the Officer administering the Government the uncontrolled exercise of the prerogative of mercy, which is of particular importance at this moment.

The receipt, on my return to Toronto, on Saturday the 25th instant, of your Lordship's Despatch, No. 8, of the 21st instant, dissipated this expectation; and, therefore, early on Monday the 27th instant, I convened the Executive Council, to take into consideration the Report of Mr. Justice Jones on the prisoners who had been tried at Niagara, and, at the same time, I laid on the Council table your Lordship's Despatches, Nos. 7 and 8, of the 16th and 21st August.

After considering the cases of all the convicts reported, and discussing the whole subjects at great length, the members agreed upon the advice which they thought it their duty to give, and the Council adjourned until this day, and then gave the opinion and advice embodied in the accompanying minute, (27th and 29th August, 1838.)

Your Lordship will perceive that, after considering the advice given, I directed that the sentences passed upon all the prisoners should be respited until the 1st of October, which will afford your Lordship time to consider their cases. The Report of Mr. Justice Jones, and the Petitions in favour of the prisoners, with such other information as is before the Council in these cases, which are the most pressing for decision, has been directed to be prepared to accompany this Despatch; and, as some of the papers are original and important documents, your Lordship will, I hope, excuse my having detained your messenger to be the bearer of them.

Upon the cases of the prisoners implicated in the original revolt, who have not been unconditionally pardoned, I would beg to remark, that, on reporting them to Her Majesty's Government, I suggested that it should be left in the power of this Government to exercise their discretion, so that up to the last moment of the convicts remaining in this Province, a mitigation of sentence might be extended. This suggestion was necessary, because, at that time, I was not acting under your Lordship's Commission, which enables the Officer administering the Government, in your Lordship's absence, to pardon even in cases of treason;—and secondly—because the Act of the Provincial Legislature, which has received the Royal approval, authorized the Lieutenant-Governor to extend mercy to petitioning prisoners only, with the advice of the Executive Council; and the members (whose anxiety and desire to do what they considered was their duty, in justice towards the country, and in mercy towards the prisoners, I cannot too highly commend) could not at that time bring themselves to advise, with reference to the safety and tranquillity of the Province, any further extension of clemency.

Notwithstanding the terms of the Provincial Act to which I have alluded, I have no doubt the Officer administering the Government might extend pardon independently of the Council, but when it is considered that they are all gentlemen of great experience in the Canadas, and are extensively informed as to its political relations, I have considered it prudent that my proceedings should, if possible, be, in every important particular, supported by their unanimous advice.

In my despatches of the 18th and 27th June, (Nos. 3 and 5,) I stated to your Lordship what my views and intentions were, respecting an extension of mercy to a great number of prisoners. Continuing to entertain the same sentiments, I have endeavoured gradually to reconcile the public mind to that view of the subject, and where applications for pardon have been made to me, I have generally suggested, that, in order to warrant the Government in extending its clemency, it would be desirable to procure the interposition of respectable and loyal persons in their behalf.

On the receipt, therefore, of Lord Glenelg's despatch, (No. 111,) of the 12th July last, I intimated to the Executive Council my desire again to go through all the cases of the prisoners under sentence, and requested their attention to the subject during my absence on a tour of inspection; and whilst I was recently at Kingston, I visited all the prisoners in the Fort, and in the Gaol of that town; and, indeed, in the Gaols generally in the Eastern Districts; and afforded each one of them an opportunity of bringing forward any additional favourable features in his case, with the view of fully preparing myself to carry into effect, to the utmost, the wishes of Her Majesty's Government, so far as it can be done with safety, and without giving occasion for strong remonstrances or dissatisfaction in the Province.

I have not yet gone through the list of names which have, in consequence, been under consideration in the Executive Council—and, although I think it proper to allude to the circumstance, I take it for granted that your Lordship does not desire to restrain my powers of action in this proceeding, upon which Her Majesty's Secretary of State has conveyed to me distinct authority.

Your Lordship is already in possession of my despatches of the 30th May, and 7th June, to the Secretary of State, a copy of His Lordship's answer to them I have the honour to enclose, (No. 111, 12th July, 1838,) and I would simply observe upon it, that, even if it be possible that I am mistaken in the opinion I have formed, that it never was intended to take out of the hands of this Government the decision of such cases as those of Waite and Chandler, yet your Lordship will, I am sure, be disposed to admit that the view I entertain, and have expressed in my despatch, marked "separate," might well be drawn from the Secretary of State's reasoning and instructions.

I have the honour,

No. 111.

Downing Street,

12th July, 1838.

SIR,

I have received your despatches of the 30th May, (No. 22,) and of the 7th June, (No. 26,) on the subject of the trials of the persons implicated in the late rebellion in Upper Canada, and of the manner in which they should be disposed of. The second of these despatches reached me after I had prepared an answer to the first, and happily relieves me from the necessity of entering into the prolonged discussion to which that answer was devoted. It is very gratifying to me to find that the conclusion to which I was led by the examination of the voluminous documents accompanying your despatch of the 30th of May, that the number of persons to undergo punishment might be materially lessened, is confirmed by the result of your mature deliberations on the whole question, as reported in your despatch of the 7th of June. The receipt of this despatch has left me hardly any other duty to perform on this occasion, than that of expressing the concurrence of Her Majesty's Government in your opinion, and their adoption of your advice.

In the first place, you will perceive, on referring to the Earl of Durham's Commission, which, during his Lordship's absence from Upper Canada, you are authorised to execute, that the Royal prerogative of mercy is delegated to you, without the exceptions formerly made of the cases of murder and high treason. It is, therefore, in your power either to grant pardons in particular cases, or even to declare a general amnesty. But in any measure of the latter description, it would be obviously very inconvenient that a different principle should be observed in Lower and in Upper Canada. This is consequently one of the subjects on which it is fit that you should act in concert with the Earl of Durham. It would be unnecessary to trouble his Lordship upon any particular case in which no general policy was involved.

I concur in your views as to the inexpediency of merely banishing from the Province British subjects, who have their settled place of abode there. The probable consequence would be that which you anticipate, that is, the increase on the border of a body of men, whose hostility to the British Government would be exasperated by the desire to regain their homes, and whose efforts for its subversion would be more active and dangerous than before.

I am also of your opinion, that banishment may be a very proper mode of disposing of strangers who have invaded the Province, and against whom it may not be necessary to proceed with greater severity. The pardon of such offenders would, of course, be granted on the condition that the judgment or proceedings against them should only be stayed so long as they should not be found again within Her Majesty's dominions in North America.

You have, as it appears to me, correctly distinguished between political offences in which a large number of persons have been engaged, and crimes of ordinary occurrence—such as robbery, or individual acts of violence and outrage. Whatever indulgence it may be just or politic to shew towards the former, there can be no sufficient reason for exempting thieves, robbers or incendiaries, whose aim was plunder, from the penalties due to their offences.—The imprisonment of these persons, with hard labour in the Penitentiary, would, therefore, appear the most judicious course of proceeding. But the grounds of the distinction should be most clearly made known to the public.

There remains the class of prisoners ordered for transportation. It is a great relief to find from your despatch of the 7th June, that there is no danger of any material difference between your judgment and that of Her Majesty's Government on this part of the general question. I adopt your opinion, that in the present instance the good of society will be best consulted by subjecting a few to such penalties as may "mark the sense entertained by Government of the heinousness of the offence, and by mercy and complete indemnity towards all others."

You have pointed out, with great clearness, the obstacles which prevented the application of this general principle to the cases of the numerous prisoners mentioned in your despatch of the 30th of May.

It is vain, as you observe, to "seek for mere shadows of distinction" between different cases, or "where the punishment of a few will answer the hands of justice, to punish many because all are equally guilty." If subtle distinctions were allowed to guide the decision of the Government, or if, without discrimination, the sentence of transportation were carried into effect against all the prisoners who have been selected for that mode of punishment, it would be impossible to escape the imputation of caprice and favour on the one hand, or of undue severity on the other.

I am, therefore, glad to learn that you anticipate the early arrival of a time, when mercy may be extended to many of these without risk of remonstrance or discontent. The gradual development of favourable circumstances in some of these cases, and the constant sympathy towards some of the prisoners which you report, confirm the expediency of a considerable reduction in the number of the persons marked for transportation.

I agree in your opinion that this reduction should, in appearance as well as in reality, originate rather with the Provincial than with the Home Government.

I have, therefore, to convey to you the authority you require, to relieve from the sentence of transportation, and from the inferior penalties of banishment, imprisonment or confiscation, any persons whom you may think worthy of that indulgence. This you will do as you propose, not as reversing wrong judgments, but as acting upon information which the Executive Council did not possess, and upon views to which the legal tribunals could not advert. It would, however, be a reasonable condition, to attach to such remission that the parties should find securities, at least for a time, for their future good conduct.

You will convey to the Executive Council the expression of Her Majesty's gracious approbation and acknowledgement of the diligence with which they have investigated these cases, and of the spirit by which they appear to have been guided.

As it is necessary that the Earl of Durham should be apprised of what is passing on this subject, you will have the goodness to transmit to him copies of this correspondence.

I have, &c.

(Signed) GLENELG.

No. 6.

SIR GEORGE ARTHUR TO THE EARL OF DURHAM.

(Copy.)

(No. 18)

Government House,
 Toronto, 31st August, 1838.

MY LORD,

I HAD the honour to receive, in the afternoon of the 30th instant, your Lordship's despatch No. 9, of the 24th instant.

It gives me much concern—I can truly say, the deepest concern—to find that your Lordship should have formed the opinion, that my despatch of the 20th instant, indicates an absence of that spirit of perfect and cordial co-operation which your Lordship had hitherto found, (and most justly) expected to find in our communications.

A spirit of an entirely opposite nature, I can assure your Lordship, influenced me in that communication to you. I have felt strongly the importance of a judicious and consistent disposal of the cases of all the prisoners concerned in acts of treason against Her Majesty's authority in this Province, or in attacks made upon it in connection with American citizens, with a due regard to the extreme sufferings, and consequent excited feelings, of the Queen's loyal subjects in the Province, who naturally enough have felt highly exasperated against the authors of their calamities;—this, therefore, has been a duty to which I have devoted days and nights of the most anxious solicitude and labour, during the last five months.

The difficult task has been, to oppose a stern countenance to the crime of treason, which brings such calamitous consequences upon large numbers of the community—to put down marauding parties, who were committing murders and robberies, on the plea of a patriotic enterprize—to distinguish between the comparative degrees of guilt in the criminals, and to extend mercy without doing absolute violence to a just administration of the laws, and thereby rousing the indignant feelings of the loyal inhabitants, on whom the security of this Province, and its connection with Great Britain must ever mainly depend.

On the successful issue of my measures in this arduous undertaking, I have considered that the future peace, welfare, and good government of this Province, greatly depended: for I have no hesitation in saying, that if the crime of treason had been lightly passed over—if the Executive authorities had suddenly and extensively granted pardons—if an Act of general amnesty had been untimely resorted to, the feelings of alarm and dissatisfaction would have been so strong, and so general throughout the Province, that the great object of restoring tranquillity to the public mind, would have been entirely defeated, and clemency, instead of a healing, would have produced an exasperating effect.

My course has therefore been, an undeviating endeavour gradually to bring over the public mind to regard with some complacency the lenient dealings which Her Majesty's Government have anxiously desired should be pursued towards persons convicted of treason; and although great difficulties of a legal nature have laid in my way, which the Provincial Government never expected to encounter, I have reason to believe that my efforts have not been altogether unsuccessful.

In almost the very last stage of these anxious proceedings, I must confess I was surprised and disappointed, that, on the application of the families of two of the most active and hardened of the traitors who had encouraged and led a band of ruffians into this Province, and secreted themselves in their own neighbourhood, with the view of again raising the standard of rebellion in Upper Canada—your Lordship should have felt it to be necessary to interpose your authority in their behalf, and to stay the ordinary course of the Executive Government, under circumstances that must necessarily create a very great sensation, while they were proceeding according to law, and under the Royal Commission.

I felt it to be a duty to call your Lordship's attention to some of the consequences of this unexpected instruction, which, I thought, possibly, might not have been fully weighed; but I can assure your Lordship, that nothing could be farther from my mind, than to evince the least want of cordial feeling, or of that respectful deference which is due to your Lordship.

I have not, my Lord, doubted for a moment, that—whether a general amnesty should be proclaimed—whether any considerable number of traitors should be transported—or whether capital punishment should be carried into effect against many criminals—and in what manner the American citizens in custody should be disposed of, were all important considerations which fell, unquestionably, within the range of the high and important duties which devolve upon your Lordship; and entertaining this view very strongly, I took an early opportunity of transmitting to your Lordship copies of my despatches to Her Majesty's Secretary of State, detailing all the information within my power to convey to you, respecting the proceedings arising out of the revolt in December last, and especially on the occasion of the aggravated wickedness of the parties concerned in the treason, murder and robberies, on the Niagara and Western frontiers. I conveyed to your Lordship the fullest particulars, and solicited your Lordship's counsel and advice; at the same time, I submitted to your Lordship the course of proceedings which appeared to me to be proper, and the extent of punishment which I thought was necessary, to put a stop to those acts of atrocity.

At the time I addressed your Lordship, it was supposed that there were about forty persons captured, subjects of Her Majesty, and citizens of America, who had taken a prominent part in the renewed attempt at invasion and rebellion in the Niagara and Western frontiers—of these it was my opinion that two should suffer capitally at Niagara, and two in the Western District, and that the rest should be directly transported to a penal Colony, except in individual cases, where favourable circumstances were discerned.

Your Lordship, in acknowledging this communication, deferred any expression of your sentiments until the personal interview which shortly afterwards took place; and I can call to recollection no point on which your Lordship expressed the slightest difference of opinion with me, except that your Lordship thought the offenders should have been more promptly and summarily brought to justice—an observation which your Lordship repeated to the Solicitor General at the very time that officer was engaged in the prosecution of Morreau and others at Niagara.

If then, it really were as your Lordship supposes, from the following observation in your despatch—"nor do I think it possible for me to err in concluding, from Lord Glenelg's despatch of July 14th, of which I had the honour of transmitting your Excellency a copy on the 21st instant, that his Lordship's intentions, and even directions, must have been that you should take no step, with regard to the persons implicated in the late rebellion in Upper Canada, without communicating and making sure that you were acting in concert with me;" my answer is, I have made the most ample communications to your Lordship, and that although they were not replied to in writing, I felt as assured as I could possibly be of any thing, that I was acting in concert with you, so far as I could discover your Lordship's sentiments from your answers to addresses, from your public declarations, and from the personal communications with which you honoured me.

The Secretary of State's Despatch, No. 111, however, of which a copy is enclosed in my communication to your Lordship of 29th instant, conveys no such an instruction to me as your Lordship imagines; but on the contrary, it was what I had done, and what I had decided upon doing, that Lord Glenelg thought it necessary your Lordship should be apprized of—and not knowing that I had already furnished your Lordship with copies of my Despatches, he desired me to do so.

The question of a General Amnesty is one in which my acting in concert with your Lordship is mentioned as being desirable; but particular cases are stated to be subjects on which I need not trouble your Lordship.

This is of serious importance, as regards the case of Morreau: for fully impressed as I was, and still am, that I was acting lawfully and rightly, and in unison with your Lordship's views, I never should have forgiven myself if I had suffered that execution to take place, without particular reference to your Lordship, had such a course been enjoined on me by Her Majesty's Government.

I did myself the honour to address your Lordship very fully the day before yesterday, in answer to your Despatch, No 7. Your Lordship, after having in that Despatch adverted to the application which had been made by the family of "Chandler" and "Waite," for an extension of mercy, and for the grant of a pardon, observes—"I have no means of forming an accurate judgment whether any person convicted of Treason is, or is not, a fit object of Royal clemency, or the extent to which it might be proper to grant it"; and, "on a careful and attentive perusal of my Commission and Instructions, it appears evident, that I am to exercise my judgment as Governor-General, and Her Majesty's Commissioner, in all cases arising out of the recent insurrection in the two Provinces." Your Lordship proceeds to desire, that the Judges' Reports, with every other particular, together with the Lieutenant-Governor's views, may be forwarded to your Lordship. From this I certainly understood, that it was your Lordship's intention to decide upon the case yourself, and in the same light the Council understood it, after a very deliberate consideration of your Lordship's Despatch.

I confess, your Lordship's Despatch, No. 9, does not now, to my mind, place the matter in a different light: for whether your Lordship issues your own warrant for the execution or pardon of a particular criminal—or be pleased to instruct me in each particular case to let the law take its course, or to pardon, the result is just the same—in either case, it is your Lordship's decision, and not the decision of the Officer administering this Government.

The powers of pardon, your Lordship observes, you are aware are possessed by the Officer administering the Government in your Lordship's absence, in virtue of your Lordship's Commission, but that this delegated authority is not exempted from the general subordination to instructions from the Governor-General.

If this be the case, undoubtedly I have laboured under a great misapprehension: for I considered that the power of pardoning for Treason, as well as for every other crime, was given by the Queen to the Governor-in-Chief, or in his absence to the Officer administering the Government of Upper Canada, to be exercised as an act of mercy towards Her subjects, and was in no sense whatever an authority delegated by or in subordination to the authority of the Governor-General. In this sense also the Secretary of State appears to me to regard it, where he uses this language:—"In the first place, you will perceive, on referring to the Earl of Durham's Commission, which, during his Lordship's absence from Upper Canada you are authorised to execute, that the Royal prerogative of mercy is delegated to you, without the exceptions formerly made of the cases of murder and high treason. It is, therefore, in your power either to grant pardons in particular cases, or even to declare a general amnesty; but in any measure of the latter description, it would be obviously very inconvenient that a different principle should be observed in Upper and Lower Canada. This is, consequently, one of the subjects in which it is fit that you should act in concert with the Earl of Durham."

Most earnestly do I entreat your Lordship not to suppose that I am struggling for this power, from any vain pretensions of placing myself on a footing with the exalted station which your Lordship fills; but in my humble sphere I have a duty to perform, not only to the Sovereign, but to the people of this Province, so long as Her Majesty is pleased to continue me in office, which I am conscientiously bound to fulfil; and the preservation of those powers which are graciously given, as part of the Constitution of the country, to the Officer administering the Government, for the benefit of the subjects of the Crown, I feel myself required to maintain unimpaired, so far as it lies in my power.

I do not doubt that, upon consideration of general policy, your Lordship may lay down instruction for my guidance, under the directions contained in the Secretary of State's Circular Despatch, of the 3rd April, to which your Lordship has alluded—"as however the success of your Lordship's mission may, in no light degree, depend on your power of maintaining uniformity of principle in the administration of the different North American Governments, in regard to all the more considerable questions which are depending on them, it seems necessary to depart from the existing system, so far as may be necessary for obtaining that object, but no farther."

I shall not only feel it a duty but a pleasure, to follow your Lordship's instructions to the fullest extent of the spirit as well as of the letter of this instruction. But the consideration of and decision upon particular cases of crime, and the exercise of the Royal prerogative of pardoning any offender upon whom judgment has been pronounced, I humbly conceive is solely vested in the Officer administering the Government, is perhaps the most important attribute belonging to the office, and with which I cannot think, under any such general terms, the Secretary of State intended to interfere.

Under the Secretary of State's instructions, I am enjoined to co-operate with your Lordship; and with a due regard to the great distinction in the circumstances, the condition and sentiments of the people of the two Provinces, I feel it to be my duty to follow up your Lordship's policy, wherever I can discover it, to the utmost of my power, and this I have done zealously and earnestly. As an instance of this feeling, from the moment your Lordship issued the Proclamation of amnesty, I have intimated on frequent occasions to the Executive Council, that a measure somewhat corresponding should, as soon as public feeling would admit of it, be resorted to in this Province, and I trust a partial approach to it is not far distant.

A misapprehension, to which I confess I had not thought the language used in my Despatch of the 16th instant, on the subject of the course I had intended to adopt with regard to the criminals convicted of participating in the late treasonable and hostile proceedings in the Niagara District, was open, has given rise to a reflection of so very painful a nature from your Lordship, that I must beg to offer a few observations upon it.

The Banditti who committed the lawless outrages on the Niagara Frontier, were partly citizens of the United States, and partly Subjects of Her Majesty. As Treason is the highest offence known to our laws, Her Majesty's Subjects were, in this sense, the greatest offenders. Supposing, however, all to be equally guilty of the capital offence for which they were respectively tried, and that in the deliberate judgment of the Executive Government, it was thought that at least two culprits should suffer the extreme penalty of the law, it might be, in my opinion, a very proper question of policy for the consideration of the Governor in Council, whether one offender of each description should not be selected to suffer as an example to deter others from the perpetration of the like offence. The citizens of America were tried for the felony, under the "Act to protect the inhabitants of this Province against lawless aggressions, from subjects of foreign countries." Her Majesty's subjects were arraigned for high treason! Never did it enter my mind for one moment, nor was even any notion of the kind hinted at by any Member of the Executive Council, that the fate of any subjects of Her Majesty should be determined upon grounds apart from their own conduct, and without due regard to all the circumstances of their respective cases; and your Lordship has been misinformed as to the Juries having accompanied their verdict of "guilty," in every instance, with recommendation to mercy.

When I left Toronto, on the 13th of August, the cases of all the culprits stood as follows:—

Moreau was tried as a foreigner, under the Provincial Act. He was found guilty—there was no recommendation to mercy. His case was reported on the 26th July, and by the advice of the Council, he was left for execution.

On the 9th August, the cases of the convicts named in the margin* were reported—of those the first five were American citizens. Their crimes were fully proved; but, although each might be deserving of capital punishment, one example was deemed sufficient, and the rest of the foreigners were conditionally pardoned.

* AMERICAN CITIZENS.—James Moreau—Linus Wilson Miller—George Cooley—Norman Mallory—William Reynolds.

SUBJECTS.—Samuel Chandler—Benjamin Waite—James Gammill—John Grant—Murdoch McFadden—John James McNalty—Alexander McLeod—David Taylor—James Waggoner—Garret Van Camp—John Vernon—George Buck—Jacob Beemer—Erastus Warner—John W. Brown.

The cases of the other convicts were also fully considered. It was the opinion of the Council that one at least of those convicted of high treason, under such aggravated circumstances, should suffer capitally. The cases of "Wait," "Chandler," and "McLeod," were deemed, under all circumstances, the worst. The Jury had recommended the two former to mercy. In the instance of Wait, no grounds for the recommendation were assigned. On being asked by the Judge, they said they had none—whereas the active part he had taken in enrolling the banditti, of which he was an officer, was an act of notoriety, and the Government was in possession of letters and other papers, which shewed the prominent part he had taken. The grounds in favour of Chandler were, as the Jury said, "his previous good character, and his good feeling and humanity towards his neighbours."

It was within the knowledge of the Council, however, that "Chandler" had in fact been mainly instrumental, with "Wait," in bringing the Banditti into his own neighbourhood of Pelham, and supporting and secreting them there.

The case of "McLeod" was no doubt very aggravated, as having been concerned as a leader or officer in both this incursion and the out-break last winter, under W. L. Mackenzie. He pleaded guilty, however, when he was arraigned—throwing himself upon the mercy of the Government; and it did not appear just to the Council to treat him with greater severity on account of an acknowledgment, which might be considered indicative of penitence, than was shewn to those who were convicted upon clear proof, after denying their guilt, although the Jury convicting showed a desire that mercy should be extended to them.

Whilst these cases were being deliberated upon, it was represented to me, in Council, that there remained other prisoners to be tried at Niagara—one of whom, who had not been arrested till after the opening of the Court, and the time for whose trial had not yet arrived, was supposed to be, if possible, still more deeply implicated than "McLeod."

On Monday, the 13th instant, therefore, before I left Toronto, I issued an order for respiting "Chandler," "Wait," and "McLeod," until Friday, 31st August, and required that the remaining cases should be reported on Monday, the 27th!

I observed that endeavours were made in the United States to excite a strong feeling of sympathy in favour of the culprits, although none had ever been evinced for the Canadian sufferers. Meetings were held, and petitions were in the course of preparation—and as some had been forwarded to me, I thought your Lordship might also have been addressed upon the subject, and it was upon this account, particularly, that I alluded in my Despatch marked "separate," to the circumstance that one other culprit, being a subject of Her Majesty, was intended to be left for execution.

Constrained to take a different view from your Lordship, I have endeavoured to express myself with what I sincerely feel, the utmost respect towards your Lordship—and whilst I utterly disclaim the slightest notion of controversy, I hope and believe you will not think me wrong in endeavouring, in the discharge of a great public trust, to preserve to Her Majesty's Subjects all the advantages which they derive under your Lordship's Commission as Governor-in-Chief of Upper Canada, which Commission, in your Lordship's absence, the Lieutenant-Governor is bound to execute.

I have, &c.

(Signed) GEO. ARTHUR.

NOTE.—With the Schedule marked A. are herewith transmitted to your Lordship, the Reports of the Judge and Solicitor General, and other documents relating to the trials at Niagara, numbered from 1 to 29.

P R E S E N T :

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.
The Honourable ROBERT BALDWIN SULLIVAN,
“ WILLIAM ALLAN,
“ AUGUSTUS BALDWIN,
“ WILLIAM HENRY DRAPER.

The Council having considered the matters referred by His Excellency on the 27th instant, with much care and solicitude, having agreed upon the following Minute of their opinions, which they humbly submit for the consideration of His Excellency:—

His Lordship the Earl of Durham, in the above-mentioned despatch of the 16th August, 1838, mentions that "he had been applied to by members of the family of Samuel Chandler and Benjamin Waite, for the extension to them of the Royal mercy, and for the grant to them of Her Majesty's pardon."

His Lordship observes in another part of the despatch—"but on careful and attentive perusal of my commissions and instructions, it appears evident, that I am called upon to exercise my judgment as Governor-General of British North America, and Her Majesty's High Commissioner, in all cases arising out of the recent insurrection in the two Provinces."

His Lordship then adverts to a despatch, dated 3rd April last, in pursuance of which his Lordship's Commission was opened, and makes the following quotation from a despatch of the 21st April received by his Lordship:—The "late revolt in the Canadas has been followed by the arrest and imprisonment of a very considerable number of persons, both in the Lower and Upper Province."

"In regard to Upper Canada, I have not even to this time been informed of the course contemplated by the local authorities for bringing such prisoners to trial." After giving various instructions as to Lower Canada, his Lordship proceeds:—"From the very commencement of the late disturbances it has been, as your Lordship is aware, the earnest desire of the Government that the utmost lenity, compatible with public safety, should be exercised towards the insurgents."

"This is the principle inculcated in my various Despatches to the authorities in Lower and Upper Canada. The course of events, and the circumstances in which we may venture to assume you will find the Provinces, will supply—as it appears to us—new difficulties as well as fresh inducements to the carrying this principle into effect."

"In order to enable you to act with promptitude in this respect, you are relieved from the restrictions by which your predecessors were prevented, in the case of treason, from giving an absolute pardon, or granting more than a respite till the Royal pleasure should be known. In your Commission that restriction is omitted."

His Lordship the Governor-General then proceeds:—"In consequence of these instructions, I have to request that your Excellency will forward to me a full report of the cases of all the prisoners, with the Judge's report thereon; and that your Excellency will also favour me with your own view upon each particular case; and a statement, as far as in your power, of the previous character and conduct of each of the prisoners, and any recommendation to mercy which the Juries who tried them may have given."

It seems, from the terms of this despatch, that his Excellency the Governor-General is under the impression, either that the power of pardon for treason is vested solely in himself, or that the responsibility of directing the exercise of that power, in each particular instance, is imperatively cast upon his Excellency by his instructions, and therefore his Excellency requires in each case information, to enable him to exercise the function of the Government, notwithstanding his absence from the Province.

But, however much it might relieve your Excellency and this Council, from the burden of this most painful and onerous duty, to have the cases of prisoners, convicted of high treason, disposed of by the Governor-General, in his absence from the Province—the Council humbly submit that your Excellency has no strictly legal authority, and that the instructions from Her Majesty's Secretary of State can scarcely be held to direct your Excellency to divest yourself altogether of the responsibility and discretion required in acting according to the Constitution of the Province, under the Commission which, in the absence of his Lordship, your Excellency executes.

The Council feel respectfully desirous that this question may be clearly understood. If the Governor-General, and not your Excellency, has the sole authority and responsibility of dispensing life and death in this Province, in his Lordship's absence, the Council cannot relieve themselves from the heavy charge of having recommended your Excellency to exercise that power, even so far as to affect life, without previously knowing his Lordship's determination; and your Excellency having acted upon that advice; and his Lordship the Governor-General having permitted your Excellency for so long to dispose of the cases of prisoners without remonstrance or interference, would relieve the Council from little of the charge of having trifled with human life, and of having assisted to deprive a fellow creature of the chance of mercy to which Her Majesty's instructions, and Her Royal Commission to the Governor-General, would (if the Council have been mistaken in their construction) have entitled him.

To defer as much as possible to the opinions, and to act in accordance with the policy of the Earl of Durham, is a duty imposed upon your Excellency by Her Majesty's Government, and the Council know how anxiously your Excellency has endeavoured to obey these instructions. The very acts which, as the Council understand his Lordship's despatch, ought in his Lordship's opinion to have awaited his commands, were intended to be in concert with his Lordship's policy, as far as it was understood; and the Council were too well aware of the high trust reposed in his Lordship, and the extensive powers vested in him by Her Majesty, to have advised your Excellency to act in opposition to his Lordship's views, or to assume the heavy and painful responsibility of deciding on cases of life and death, if they conceived that this responsibility could constitutionally and properly be avoided, by awaiting his Lordship's directions.

The despatch from Her Majesty's Secretary of State, of the 12th July, (No. 111) would, however, relieve the Council from all apprehension of having acted in error, if they could have entertained such an apprehension for a moment. His Lordship's words cannot be misunderstood, or be held to admit of doubt or hesitation, as to the views of the Home Government.

In that despatch the following passage occurs:—"In the first place, you will perceive, on referring to the Earl of Durham's Commission—which, during his Lordship's absence from Upper Canada, you are authorized to execute—that the Royal Prerogative of mercy is delegated to you, without the exceptions formerly made of cases of murder and treason. It is therefore in your power to grant pardons in particular cases, or even to declare a general amnesty; but in any measure of the latter description, it would be obviously very inconvenient that a different principle should be observed in Lower Canada and Upper Canada. This is consequently one of the subjects on which it is fit you should act in concert with the Earl of Durham. It would be unnecessary to trouble his Lordship upon any particular case in which no general policy was involved."

The explicit and reasonable language of this despatch, confirms the construction which it seems obviously proper to give to the letter of Her Majesty's Secretary of State, of the 3rd April last, in which it does not appear to have been contemplated that the Lieutenant-Governors of these Colonies were to receive instructions contrary to former usage, except in regard to questions and measures of general policy. For his Lordship observes, that it will be desirable (even) "to limit the correspondence between the Lieutenant-Governor of the Colony and the Governor-General, to questions of general and permanent interest;" and he adds in the same despatch, that "no positive instruction will be addressed to any of those officers without fully weighing every representation which he may have made, or may wish to make on the subject of it."

These representations, it is respectfully submitted, could only be expected to be made in the course of that correspondence which the Secretary of State suggests, and as that correspondence is desired to be limited to matters of general and permanent interest, it is to be inferred that no instructions were expected to proceed from his Lordship the Governor-General, in respect to individual cases occurring in the administration of justice in the ordinary course.

Her Majesty's Commissions to the Governor-General, and to the Lieutenant-Governor of this Province, indicate no other intention, and authorize no deviation, in this respect, from that course of proceeding which all former usage, and the understood relations between the Governor-General and the Lieutenant-Governor of this Colony, have hitherto established.

This recent Despatch of the Secretary of State, of 12th July last, is irreconcilable with any other construction; and the conduct of His Lordship the Governor-General, in respect to the cases of all the other convicts, had naturally led to the conclusion that he entertained the same opinion.

It appears from your Excellency's Despatches to the Earl of Durham, that your Excellency has not failed to inform His Lordship of not only the general but also of the particular course of this Government, as regards all the convictions arising out of the late rebellion; and the Council are not aware of a single instance, in which the policy of this Government has met with His Lordship's disapprobation, or in which any suggestion has been made of want of concert or cordial co-operation with His Lordship, in his views of Government in the Colonies.

The Despatch from Lord Glenelg, of the 12th July, affords to the Council the gratifying intelligence, that Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to approve of your Excellency's proceedings, and of the advice of this Council—and it has been most gratifying to the Council to think that Her Majesty's High Commissioner also appeared satisfied with the policy pursued by your Excellency, and with the humble exertions of your Excellency's advisers.

However painful the duty of deciding upon questions of life and death, upon the facts appearing in each case, particularly as regards political offences, in which a portion of the community, however small, would naturally disagree with the decision, whatever it may be, the discharge of that duty is required at your Excellency's hands; and although His Lordship's high influence and authority may uphold Your Excellency's policy and give success to your measures, the functions of Governor of the Colony remain to be discharged by Your Excellency according to your oath of office and to the best of your judgment and ability.

It would be painful to the Council to suppose that His Lordship would desire to place Your Excellency in the embarrassing situation which would be the inevitable consequence were every case of murder or treason (to which crimes the new powers referred to by His Lordship apply) publicly considered a subject of appeal from Your Excellency to His Lordship; Your Excellency would thus be placed in the unbecoming position of a party in Court defending your proceedings against the complaints of a petitioning convict, and a reversal of Your Excellency's decision would indeed be fatal to Your Excellency's authority and to the character of your Government.

This appellate jurisdiction has been most sedulously avoided even by Her Majesty's Government, as Your Excellency will perceive by more than one Despatch, which has come under the view of the Council, and in which references to England in cases of life and death are almost positively forbidden. The power of remitting the penalty of death has been always hitherto withheld, while there never was any restriction upon carrying the sentence of the law into effect in such cases.

If a case can be supposed to occur in which His Lordship should direct Her Majesty's pardon to a criminal upon whom Your Excellency had, for the public good, felt it necessary that the sentence of the law should be executed, Your Excellency might indeed look in vain for public confidence or approval in the Colony or in England—or if the still more embarrassing supposition be made of His Excellency's directing a sentence of death to be carried into execution contrary to Your Excellency's decision, that mercy should be extended; how would the question be decided as to which determination should be carried into effect? To show how strictly Your Excellency has been acting in obedience to the instructions of Her Majesty's Government in deferring to the opinions of the Governor General in questions of policy arising out of the late insurrection, the Council may be excused for alluding to His Lordship's public declarations on more than one occasion when His Lordship was in the Province, at which time the people of this Colony were in a state of great alarm and justifiable excitement in consequence of the atrocious attempts and threats to invade and overrun the country.

Your Excellency will remember with what delight His Lordship's pledges of protection to the loyal and of prompt and severe punishment to the criminals were received by the Upper Canadians; Your Excellency will also remember that His Lordship expressed his opinion on more than one occasion, that summary and immediate execution might not improperly have been carried into effect, instead of awaiting the deliberate course of legal proceedings in the case of the invasion in the District of Niagara; with the circumstances of which His Lordship had the opportunity of being fully acquainted from personal inquiries. His Lordship was then of opinion that these marauders were not entitled to the same considerations which would be extended to criminals of another character; and the Council have ever since felt that this government was much more liable to be charged with not acting up to the extent of His Lordship's policy than with going further than His Lordship's general policy warranted. For how could it be supposed that His Lordship would approve of delay and hesitation after legal and deliberate trial, when he stated publicly that he would have approved of summary infliction of punishment. Public opinion went with His Lordship in these declarations which were heard with almost universal acclamation and public gratitude; and the Council could not but see that comparisons were made not always to the advantage of this government between His Lordship's promptness and decision and the more cautious and deliberate course of policy pursued by Your Excellency. His Lordship's expression of opinion had, however, the beneficial effect of supporting Your Excellency's Government in the necessary infliction of punishment which His Lordship no doubt generously intended it should have.

But the present want of promptitude and apparent uncertainty in the measures of government will, no doubt, until explained, do away with much of the benefit derived from the decision with which his Lordship spoke concerning the atrocious attempt upon the Province.

The government here are apparently not acting in accordance with his Lordship's policy, and the public mind is impatient and exasperated because Your Excellency does not fulfil the expectations entertained in consequence of His Lordships most welcome and popular expressions of opinion.

The Council have already informed Your Excellency of their views respecting the late incursions from the United States and the original outbreak in December last. For the last there is some shadow of mitigation, arising from the excitement of political contention and the practices of crafty and evil minded leaders; in that case it was hoped that the great leniency of the Government would conciliate while the two cases of capital punishment would have the effect of deterring prominent leaders from inducing the populace to insurrection.

That rebellion was at an end. But not so was American sympathy. Her Majesty's Government was defied, and her loyal Canadian subjects threatened, for months in continuation, with invasion and conquest; the enemy was safe beyond our boundary, and all we could do was to watch and wait his attack.

The evils which this state of things has produced in this Province, are almost beyond calculation, and which no future events, however fortunate, can entirely obviate. It was in vain that the Government of the United States was appealed to—its power did not seem to extend to protect its own property. The laws passed for what the Americans called neutrality, were contemned and violated with impunity, and even a British vessel was burned in the American waters while lying at an American Island, and the perpetrators of the outrage allowed to escape unpunished, and Her Majesty's subjects to this hour remain wholly undemnified for the great loss they have sustained. A part of the American press openly vindicated these outrageous proceedings, and in the end a number of men armed with deadly weapons, came in hostile array into the Province with the avowed purpose of overthrowing the Government. In the Western District one of the first acts of hostility was murder—in the next robbery. In the Niagara District the brigands commenced with two robberies upon persons of the most inoffensive character, who were not in any sense political partizans; they next fired for half an hour together into, and ultimately set fire to, a house occupied by a small detachment of militia, whom they captured and robbed. The whole country was roused at an enormous expense; the villians were dispersed, pursued and some of them taken; one has been executed who was the leader of the party.

Several more have been tried and condemned to death, some of whom are total strangers to the Province, and others traitors, who are now guilty for the second time, having been engaged in the former rebellion.

In this state of things we find from the petitions before the Council, American sympathy again alive, but with whom? None was shown for the innocent and peaceful inhabitants of the Province who were threatened with the miseries of civil war; none for those whom the rifles belonging to the United States Government were to murder; none for the widows and orphans to be left destitute in Canada no voice was raised; no arm was lifted to preserve national faith or to prevent outrage against the Canadians—but the moment the marauders are subdued and in the hands of justice, the frontier is full of sympathy, and those who looked with apathy on the immediate prospect of murder, rapine and devastation, in a neighbouring friendly country, now are filled with the most lively compassion—and they intercede for the criminals, who are asserted not to be very bad after all. "They only seek," in the language used in of the petitions on this table, "that liberty which we, as Americans, enjoy": in short, they are only guilty of murder, attempts to murder or robbery, and double treason.

The Council continue fixed in the opinion, that prompt and exemplary punishment of the criminals implicated in the late incursion, is necessary for the public safety, and under this impression, recommended that the leader, Moreau, should be left for execution; and had it been a point suggested for their consideration and advice, the Council would not have hesitated to have deliberately recorded, that such a course was in accordance with the expressed opinions of the Governor-General, as the Council understood them. But not feeling, even in the instance of this extreme outrage, that many capital punishments were absolutely necessary, all the other convicts implicated in the incursion into the Niagara District, were recommended for transportation, or other secondary punishment, except Samuel Chandler, Benjamin Waite, and Alexander McLeod, who were respited by your Excellency until the result of the remaining trials should be known, with the intention of selecting from the whole another convict for capital punishment.

Jacob Beamer was afterwards convicted. At his trial it was proved—and indeed, so far as the evidence on the defence went, was not denied—that he formed one of the invading party under Moreau, and was in company with them holding the rank of Captain. It was further shewn that he was acting as Captain of a party or division on the night of the 20th and morning of the 21st June—that the two Overholts were robbed, the elder of upwards of one thousand dollars, and the other of about three hundred, by this division—that he was identified as having personally taken part in the robbery at the elder Overholt's—that he was present assisting in the attack on the Lancers, one of whom was severely wounded, and was with the insurgents when the Lancers were liberated, after being robbed. The defence was a feeble attempt at alibi, on the morning of the 21st June, which was totally discredited by the Jury, and an attempt to throw some doubt as to his being the identical Captain Beamer of the "Patriot Army." He was found guilty, and there was no recommendation in his favour by the Jury.

Independently of the case proved to the Jury, the following facts are to be considered :

That an indictment was found against him, by the Grand Jury of the London District, last spring, for his participation in the insurrection under Dr. Duncombe; and from statements contained in depositions made affecting other persons, there seems abundant evidence to prove that he formed one of that body of rebels. On the trial of Moreau, and some others of the Short Hills offenders, it was sworn that the attack on the Lancers was resolved on against the advice of Moreau, by the influence and exertions of Beamer. It was also sworn that he had been one of those who had advised the putting the Lancers to death, instead of releasing them; and it came out on a trial which took place subsequently to his, that money had been offered by him, or in his name, to induce some witnesses to give testimony which would throw a doubt on his identity.

The Council are decidedly of opinion, that Jacob Beamer ought to be executed.

Samuel Chandler, one of the convicts respited by your Excellency, as far as the Council can judge, had much of the guilt of originating the expedition against Canada. From some feeling of compassion to an old neighbour, and for his large family, he appears to have been recommended to mercy by the Jury, on the ground, as they stated, of his previous good character, and his good feeling and humanity towards his neighbours. To this recommendation, the Council would desire to give all the weight which it was intended to have; and notwithstanding the deep guilt of the convict, as appearing by the Judge's notes and the report of the Solicitor General, they are of opinion that this sentence may be commuted into transportation for life to one of Her Majesty's penal Colonies.

Benjamin Wait was also tried, convicted and respited. He seems to have been prominent amongst the Brigands, as the evidence detailed on the Judge's notes clearly shews; but he was recommended to mercy, though the Jury were unable, when required, to state any grounds for their recommendation. The Council are, however, desirous of attending to the wish of the Jury, and are of opinion that his sentence may be commuted into transportation for life, into one of Her Majesty's penal Colonies.

Alexander McLeod was also, as above stated, convicted and respited. He pleaded guilty. It is known of him that he was deeply implicated in the rebellion in December last: he bore the rank of Captain in Mackenzie's party: and has, probably, since his escape, continued to act against the Government; for he is found again amongst the rebels and invaders at the Township of Pelham. It seems difficult to find a reason why he should be spared; but the Council not being willing that more should suffer, than the ends of justice actually and imperatively required, are of opinion that his sentence may be commuted into transportation for life to one of Her Majesty's penal Colonies.

John W. Brown was also tried and convicted; but he seems not to have taken a very prominent part. He is a young resident in the Province in his father's family, and joined the invaders a few days before the attack at the Short Hills, at which he was present in arms. The Council therefore think that his sentence may be commuted into imprisonment in the Penitentiary for three years.

Erastus Warner pleaded guilty. He came into the Province with Moreau. It was sworn at the trial of another prisoner, that this convict was one of the persons concerned in the robbery at Overholt's. In his examination, as well as in that of Norman Mallory, will be found a full detail of the proceedings of the party; and they strongly corroborate the information of the accomplices, Hart, Doan and Seymour, who were admitted as evidence for the Crown.

The Council are of opinion, that his sentence may be commuted into confinement in the Penitentiary for fourteen years.

The Council feel themselves bound by a sense of duty to state the strong objections which exist to a respite of the prisoner Beamer, should your Excellency deem it advisable to take this course, in consequence of the Despatch of the Governor-General.

In the first place, the granting of a respite is always looked upon as a precursor of a commutation of the sentence of death, and should therefore be carefully avoided in any case where such commutation is not intended.

But this consideration becomes, in the minds of the Council, of secondary importance, compared with the injurious consequences which they cannot but anticipate will be produced on the feelings of the inhabitants of the frontier by such a proceeding. During the incursion into the Niagara District, the zeal and activity of the Militia, in the pursuit and capture of the Brigands, was only equalled by their profound respect for and observance of the laws; no prisoner was injured or maltreated—and though taken, it may almost be said, flagrante delicto, in every instance, they were treated with no greater degree of severity than was necessary for their safe keeping, and were promptly brought before the proper tribunals, to be dealt with according to the due course of law.

It was doubtless the confidence reposed in your Excellency's assurance, that these offenders should be brought to immediate justice, joined to their respect for the regular administration of the laws, which led to this praise-worthy conduct; and it is no light reflection, that this confidence may not merely be shaken, but altogether destroyed, if, by the respite of the execution of the most notorious offenders, reason is given to suppose that they may finally escape the penalty attached to their crimes.

The Council cannot help expressing their fears, that in the event of future incursions or difficulties in this Province, one of two results will follow, either that those who have been zealous and eager in the support of the established institutions of the country heretofore, will remain inactive under the impression that the government will not do its duty to them, or that if again driven to arms by the stern necessity of self-defence, they will make no more prisoners, but take the execution of the offenders into their own hands without the intervention of regular trial.

The Council have not on this occasion recommended any of these prisoners for unconditional pardon; they are of opinion that the punishment of all these criminals is essentially necessary for the preservation of the Colony and for the purpose of deterring those inclined to enmity with the Province from further reiteration of hostile attempts against it.

In conclusion the Council feel it their duty to bring under your Excellency's notice some of the difficulties which they have feared would result from the views apparently entertained by his Lordship, the Earl of Durham, with respect to the administration of public affairs in this Province.

Her Majesty's Secretary of State, in approving of the course recommended by your Excellency of taking advantage of delay, and consequent change in public sentiment towards the State Prisoners, in the despatch of the 12th July makes the following observation: "I have therefore to convey to you the authority you require to relieve from the sentence of transportation, and from the inferior penalties of banishment, imprisonment or confiscation, any persons whom you may think worthy of that indulgence. This you will do as you propose, not as reversing wrong judgments, but as acting upon information which the Executive Council did not possess, and upon views to which the legal tribunals could not advert."

This course of proceeding recommended by the Secretary of State has the evident advantage of conciliating the minds of those of the community who think least unfavourably of the insurgents, of giving the more decided loyalists the opportunity of exercising their natural humanity towards their suffering, though criminal fellow creatures, by petitions in their favor, thus gradually making the extension of the Royal Mercy popular in all quarters, and proving that all the Executive Government were desirous of from the beginning, was the exercise of the utmost clemency, wherever opportunity should offer.

This desirable result cannot, it is humbly submitted, follow from the course now beginning to be taken of passing by the officer actually administering the government, appealing from his decisions and claiming their contravention as a matter of right, and on the principle that your Excellency's decisions were unnecessarily severe and impolitic; for thus the very same extensions of mercy, which according to your Excellency's proposed mode of proceeding, would strengthen Your Excellency's Government and help to gain it the confidence and respect of all parties, will, if ordered by His Lordship the Governor-in-Chief, become in each instance a direct censure upon Your Excellency and Your Government, and cast upon Your Excellency the necessity of submitting in silence to unmerited stigma, and of driving those who have been concerned in the enactment of law or the administration of justice, into the necessity of defending their own characters, by repeatedly bringing into public view in just colours the guilt of those whose criminal conduct, when they are once considered objects of clemency, should for the sake of all parties, and for the public good, be speedily forgotten.

The Executive Council humbly represent that there can scarcely be a greater evil than the creation of a local party and a Governor General's party; this evil the Council know that Your Excellency has sedulously avoided by taking every means of informing the Upper Canadians of your confidence in and accordance with His Lordship's policy. But the Executive Council cannot but see reason to apprehend that in appeals from Your Excellency to His Lordship in individual cases, and in reversal of Your Excellency's decisions upon these appeals, or even in affirmance of them upon Your Excellency's representation, the recommencement of divisions, animosity and disrespect to the Royal authority exercised by His Lordship and Your Excellency, which neither His Lordship or Your Excellency will, by any means, be able to avoid.

Nor do they less fear that an excitement, perhaps not easily allayed, and at all events to be deprecated, may be created in the Legislature, who, justly considering that the Constitutional Act of 1791 assures to them the administration of the affairs of Upper Canada by a resident Executive Officer, to whom they can at all times refer for information and explanation on subjects affecting the peace, welfare, and good government of this Province, and who thro' the medium of the Home Government and the British Parliament, is held responsible for any course he may pursue in the conduct of public affairs, may consider the control of the Governor General, when not actually administering the Government, as inconsistent with their vested rights; and they further respectfully submit that a general want of confidence and proper respect for the Lieutenant Governor will exist throughout the community when it becomes known that he has not virtually the pre-exercise of the powers contained in the Royal Commission, though nominally and in legal strictness, they continue vested in him, and that as regards some of his most important functions he is limited and restrained; and that the principle of appeal to the Governor General once being established, questions of every description will be pressed upon the notice of his Lordship by parties who may desire to take the chance of obtaining from a distant tribunal decisions more in accordance with their own wishes.

The minute having been read, the Lieutenant Governor stated, that His Excellency the Governor General having expressed himself to be under the obligation of exercising his own judgment whether "any person convicted of treason in Upper Canada by a competent authority, is or is not a fit object of the Royal Clemency or the extent to which it may be proper to grant it," He deemed it right, whatever embarrassing or inconvenient consequences might flow from it, to direct that all prisoners should be respited until the first of October next, and that a copy of the minute of Council, together with the Judge's reports of the cases, with the petitions, and all other information before the Council, should be forthwith prepared for transmission to the Governor General.

The Lieutenant-Governor also desired that the reports upon the other cases lately tried in the Niagara District, should be prepared for transmission to the Earl of Durham.

A true copy.

Clerk, Executive Council.

MY LORD,

I have the honour to invite your Lordship's attention to an Act passed by the Parliament of this Province, at its last Session, entitled, "An Act to provide for the more speedy attainder of persons indicted for High Treason, who have fled from this Province, or remained concealed therein, to escape from Justice," which your Lordship will find contained in the accompanying volume of Statutes.

By this Act it is provided, that immediately upon return being made by any Sheriff, that a person indicted within his District for high treason, or treasonable practices, is not to be found therein, a Proclamation of Attainder shall be issued against such person, if he shall not, within three calendar months, surrender himself to the custody of the Sheriff of the District where the indictment was found.

The Attorney General has prepared some Proclamations against the persons named in the margin,* whose cases came within the provisions of the Act; but on these instruments being laid before me, I have forborne to direct their issue, until I could refer the matter to your Lordship's consideration, in case the measure should in any way interfere with your Lordship's policy regarding this class of persons.

Among the persons who have fled from justice, are several leading offenders, whom, doubtless, it would be imprudent to include in any amnesty, and against them it will be necessary, therefore, that Proclamations should be issued.

Considering the urgency of the Statute, I have to solicit as early a reply to this communication as your Lordship's convenience may permit to be afforded.

I have, &amp;c.

*Castle of St. Lewis,
Quebec, September 18th, 1838.*

SIR,

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of two Despatches from your Excellency, bearing date the 29th, and 31st ultimo, enclosing together with other documents, copies of a Despatch from Lord Glenelg, bearing date 12th July, and of a minute of the proceedings of the Executive Council of Upper Canada, on the 27th ult. They all refer to the disposal of the Prisoners lately convicted of high treason and felony, at Niagara; and to my Despatches on that subject of the 16th ult.

I am much pleased to find from your Excellency's Despatch that I have no reason to apprehend any cessation of that cordiality which marked our first communications. Entire co-operation on your part, and on that of the other Lieutenant Governors of British North America, I regard as one of the essentials to success in my most arduous undertaking. And your Excellency may be quite confident I shall not endanger the maintenance of that desirable state of things, by needless interference in the administration of any of the Provinces subject to me as Governor-General, or by calling on the Lieutenant Governors to abandon any public duty, in deference to my instructions.

I wish that I could observe the same tone which pervades your Excellency's Despatch, in all the proceedings of the Government of Upper Canada. But, I regret to find, in the minute of the proceedings of the Executive Council, which you have transmitted me, a tone of criticism, in reference to my policy, which could not, with propriety, have been under any circumstances used by that body, which it was particularly unseemly for it to address to your Excellency, but which shall not tempt me into the controversy which it seems to invite.

I am happy, however, to perceive there is no apparent difference between the view which I have always taken of my powers and duties as Governor-General, and those which are expressed by your Excellency and your Executive Council. My inclination does not prompt me any more than my instructions direct me, to exercise a constant interference in the details of the administration of affairs in the Upper Province. These I have left, and shall continue to leave to your Excellency and the local authorities, wherever the course which you or they may pursue, would not necessarily interfere with the larger policy, which I consider applicable to all the Provinces of British North America. This distinction I have endeavoured consistently to observe in all my acts, with reference to the various applications addressed to me from Upper Canada. Whenever my interposition in the ordinary administration of affairs in that Province has been desired, I have invariably referred the applicant to your Excellency, or informed him that I could not interfere. Nor have I failed to mark my sense of this necessary distinction between your functions and mine, in the very case in which your Excellency appears to think that I have confounded them. When the urgent nature of the cases of Chandler and Wait compelled me to take some instant steps, in order to prevent the practicability of any general policy, with regard to the political prisoners, from being compromised by the adoption of a definite course, with respect to those men, I think that the very mode of my interference showed that it was directed, not to the particular cases, but to the general policy involved in them. For I desired your Excellency to give me the means of considering the proper course to be adopted, with regard not only to those two, but to all the prisoners then under sentence for treasonable offences. I conceived in fact that a period had arrived in which it became imperative on me immediately to consider the cases of all the political prisoners in Upper Canada, in order to avoid the inconvenience, which, as Lord Glenelg has observed in his despatch of the 12th July, must ensue, if "a different principle should be observed in Lower and in Upper Canada." If I intended in compliance with Lord Glenelg's instructions, to consider the question of a "General Amnesty," it was surely but necessary to delay the execution of prisoners who might be included in it.

It is to the great question thus referred to me by Lord Glenelg, in former despatches, as well as in the one which you have transmitted to me, that I wish to invite Your Excellency's serious attention. The question of a "general amnesty," involves the whole policy of the punishment. The extension of pardon on any general principle, implies the determination of the objects, and the degrees to which punishment is to be applied. On this it is that Lord Glenelg desires that the Government of Upper and Lower Canada should act in concert.—Nor should I have waited for such specific reference of this particular question: I should have conceived the consideration of it imposed on me by my duty as Governor-General.—Every hour's experience of passing events, convinces me more and more, that the disposal of the prisoners implicated in the late insurrections, is a matter on which, above all others, the British Government should not appear to be acting on different and conflicting principles in the two Canadas; that it is one of those "more considerable questions" on which I am instructed to "maintain uniformity of principle in the administration of the different North American Governments." My line has already been taken. The whole of the cases arising out of the late insurrection in Lower Canada have been disposed of in one way or other.

The Gaols are emptied—all the punishment that is to be inflicted, has been allotted to the different offenders. No man remains in uncertainty as to the fate that awaits him; and almost the whole of the refugees, whom the apprehension of punishment had made dangerous exiles, have returned in security to their homes.

If any uniformity is to be observed in the two Provinces, it only remains to be seen how far the same results are attainable in Upper, as have already been secured in Lower Canada. The state of feeling in the Upper Province, fortunately, enables your Excellency to enforce the laws, by those ordinary legal means which I have found insufficient in this. You have discharged the painful duty of making a severe example of the most prominent offenders. It now only remains for your Excellency to act in concert with me, by putting an end to that excitement which must continue as long as the fate of any person involved in the late insurrection is left undetermined. With the details of minor punishments, it is not necessary or desirable I should in any wise interfere.

My purpose will be attained, if definitive measures can be adopted, to bring to trial all persons now in custody, and determine their fate, without the infliction of any further capital punishment; and if provision can be made for an amnesty, that shall enable all but a few of the most prominent of those not in the hands of justice, to return in confidence to their homes.

I am certainly very anxious that no further capital punishment should take place. I think I may assume that there can be no intention on the part of the Government of Upper Canada, to inflict such punishment on any of the persons implicated in any of the disturbances prior to that of the Short Hills. Of the latter class it now appears that it has been determined in the Council, to inflict the utmost penalty only on one, namely, Jacob Beamer. Your Excellency has transmitted to me a minute of the proceedings of the Executive Council, on the 9th ult., in which I find that that body had recommended, with Your Excellency's approval, that Chandler, Wait, and McLeod, should all be executed, together with a fourth, whom the Council say in the minute of the 27th, it had been their intention to select out of a batch of untried prisoners, of whose guilt nothing could then be known. I am as much at a loss to understand this principle of anticipative severity, and to conceive why the number four should have been originally fixed upon, as I am to discover, what subsequent information or new view had induced the Council to change its opinion on the 27th, so completely, as to recommend that all the three should be pardoned, and the extreme rigor of the law applied only to Beamer, who having had the bad fortune of being convicted in the interval, had been fixed on as the fourth of those originally destined to suffer together. I entirely approve of the lenity shown towards the three; but I cannot reconcile it with my notions of justice, to doom Beamer to a harder fate. There is one clear rule for the apportionment of punishment amongst rebels. Except where a subordinate happens to have aggravated his offence, by some peculiar act of atrocity, the severest punishment ought always to fall on those who shall appear to have been principal leaders and instigators, and whose influence shall have led others into crime and misfortune. The leader of the Rebel band has already suffered, in the person of Moreau. Common report and the evidence adduced on the trial, agree in pointing out Chandler as the next in influence, activity and guilt. No circumstance of contingent aggravation has been proved against Beamer, for the fact of his being a nominal leader in an act of robbery, concerted with the others, and committed in the company of Moreau, seems to me in no wise to distinguish him from the rest. I cannot but say that it would appear to me the utmost injustice that Beamer should suffer, while Chandler escapes capital punishment.

But be the proportion of Beamer's guilt greater or less, it does not appear that the amount of it is such as to render it impossible to vindicate the authority of the law without his execution. My earnest desire is, that no further capital punishments should be inflicted for past offences. While I give your Excellency credit for the same natural feeling of humanity, your recollection of my conversation with you when I was in Upper Canada, will convince you that I, on the other hand, should not, any more than yourself, hesitate to conquer my repugnance to capital punishment, in those emergencies in which a prompt severity is necessary to the public safety. I expressed my wish, that in the case of piratical outrages, similar to those which have recently harrassed our frontiers, the prompt and rigorous execution of the most summary process known to our law, should strike instant terror into the offenders. I have not changed this opinion; and one of the grounds on which I formed it was, that where severity is advisable, the moment of the commission of the crime, seems to be the only one in which it is possible to apply it. When an insurrection is suppressed—when the offender is helpless—the recollection of the crime weakened by the lapse of time, and the horror of the impending punishment alone vivid, the common feelings of humanity render it impossible to use the severity which would previously have been allowable. That this change of feeling has taken place in this instance, the information supplied to me by your Excellency, leaves no room for doubt. In the very District which has been disturbed by their crimes, the very juries that convicted have recommended the very leaders to mercy; petitions from a large number of persons, and one signed by the Sheriff of the District, have declared the feelings of the neighbourhood against further capital punishment; and those which have been received from inhabitants of the United States, shew that the utmost leniency would be most acceptable to the people of a continent in which the punishment of death is rare and odious.

Even if I thought it just that Beamer alone should suffer death, these evidences of feeling would convince me that it would be unwise and impolitic to mar, by a single exception, the good effect of that general lenity which I think practicable. I trust that your Excellency may be induced to look on this matter in the same light, and commute the sentence of Beamer, as well as of the others, by your own act.

If your opinion should remain unaltered, I will not desire your Excellency, yourself, to carry into effect a course which may be repugnant to your own sense of duty: but I must request that reference be had to Lord Glenelg, and that Beamer be respited until his Lordship shall have decided the point.

With respect to the political prisoners not yet tried, the course which policy and justice alike demand is, that they should be brought to trial or discharged, without loss of time. I fully appreciate your Excellency's reasons for past delay, but as the great excitement has subsided, there appears to be no sufficient objection to the adoption of definitive measures with regard to these persons—a great cause of excitement would be removed by putting an end to the suspense of these persons and their friends.

But a point on which I am still more anxious, is that of the adoption of some measure that shall allay the alarms of such of the refugees as it is not necessary to keep in perpetual banishment. The number of persons who, from a consciousness of guilt, or from a causeless alarm, have fled their homes, and now hang about the frontiers of Upper Canada, is represented as very considerable. Of these, a few are among the most dangerous and guilty of the rebels; a large portion are the more insignificant of their followers and dupes; and probably as large a portion are persons who, without having actually committed treason, were nevertheless so connected with the rebels, or had carried their political opinions so far, as naturally to render them fearful of suspicion and prosecution. It is obviously desirable to separate these two latter classes from the former, to prevent their supplying it with tools—to relieve the frontiers from the cloud of hopeless exiles who menace the Province with their desperation, and awaken the sympathies of our neighbours by the aspect of their wretchedness. With this object, I am desirous of impressing upon your Excellency the policy of adopting some measure of amnesty, excluding from it those prominent and irreclaimable rebels, whose guilt merits no mitigation of punishment, and whose hostility no mercy could disarm. That amnesty might be so extensive as to relieve the Province from the great mass of refugees now crowding the frontiers, and appease the alarms and animosity of their families.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your Excellency's most obedient,

Humble Servant,

No. 22.

Government House,
 Toronto, 29th September, 1838.

MY LORD,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's Despatch No. 10 of the 18th instant. The Acts of the Provincial Parliament passed in the last Session respecting the disposal of persons implicated in the late revolt refer me directly to the Executive Council, with whose advice I am required by law to act in many cases; I therefore thought it right to lay upon the table for the advice and consideration of the members, your Lordship's Despatch.

I regret very much that any observations made by the Council in the minute of the 27th and 29th August, should have given your Lordship offence, and I ought in behalf of the members to say, that they could not have known that the minute would have been communicated to your Lordship, and therefore cannot have intended it to be controversial. Their intention no doubt was to advise me to a line of conduct which they considered strictly legal and constitutional, and which they believed could be justified to a Legislature extremely and properly jealous of what it considers its right, and to which, though not legally, the Council feels itself to a certain extent nominally responsible.

I therefore entreat your Lordship not to attribute the earnestness of the Council in endeavouring to enable me to keep clear of legal difficulties which might hereafter involve me in discussions fatal to the tranquil exercise of my authority to any wish to make captious objections or to intrude unnecessary or unrequired advice.

I have in obedience to my instructions from Her Majesty's Government, and in pursuance of my wish to make the policy of this Government accord with your Lordship's views, granted a conditional pardon to Jacob Beamer as well as to all the other convicts implicated in the Short Hills incursion whose cases were not already disposed of, and their sentences are now commuted into transportation for life.

I most earnestly hope that your Lordship's policy in this matter may be productive of benefit, and my best endeavours shall not be wanting to produce that tendency; but I ought not to disguise from your Lordship, that, with all the facts before me, I still am strongly inclined to concur in the opinion of the Council, that, it would have been advisable to leave the convict Beamer to suffer pursuant to his sentence; for had this taken place, and could the convicts for transportation be at once removed to England, on their way to their destination, the examples would, I think, have been salutary and in the end would prove to have been humane.

After leading a party in arms against the Government in December last, Beamer escaped into the United States and an indictment for high treason was found against him. Instead of demeaning himself peaceably in the expectation that a time would come when he might be permitted to return as others have done, under the like circumstances, he added to his first offence the greater crime of bringing with him into the Province, then beginning to attain a state of comparative tranquillity, a band of foreign brigands. He was on this occasion prominent in the mid-night robbery of an unoffending individual, without even the poor excuse of that individual being a political opponent. He was also in command at the attack upon a small body of Militia whilst they were in a distant and defenceless position, and continued with his party firing many rounds of musketry into the house and through the slender floor of the room they occupied, and finally set fire to the house to compel the submission of its occupants.

As the facts appear to me, both the robbery, and the attack upon the party of Lancers, in which one of that body was wounded, were alike wanton and wicked, and without excuse or possible palliation. I admit that the conduct of Chandler and Wait was bad, but Beamer was distinguished beyond them by having been actively concerned in the rebellion in December, and in the attack upon the Lancers he was the avowed leader.

Still I could not consent to recommend to Her Majesty's Government that this culprit should at a future time be executed; for three months hence the force of example would be lost, which alone renders capital punishment justifiable.

The recommendations of juries are entitled to the utmost respect and consideration; but there were circumstances connected with the petitions which were signed by the Sheriff and others of the Niagara District which led the Council not to attach very great weight to them, and still less to the petitions sent in from the States, convinced as the Government is that most of the parties who got up and signed the petitions were not respectable citizens of the States, but, generally, had been very active abettors of the brigands, and very naturally felt for their captivity and danger.

Your Lordship's opinion that on such occasions as the piratical outrages on the Niagara Frontier, the most prompt and rigorous execution of the most summary process known to our law, should be resorted to, was strenuously urged upon me by the Executive Council, and at one time I thought myself that it would be the better course—but, the more I reflected upon it and considered what would be the position of the Government when the insurrection was suppressed, and when the excitement of the moment had passed away, the more I became convinced that if the severest punishment were in any case to be resorted to, the offenders should be tried before the ordinary tribunals of the country, and not by any military court.

I offer these observations to Your Lordship, with no intention to oppose myself to Your Lordship's views, but simply to explain my own.

Your Lordship has laboured under an entire mistake, in supposing, that the Council recommended, with my approval, that Chandler, Wait, and McLeod, should all be executed; no such recommendation was offered at any time. It was determined that besides Moreau, another convict should suffer—the Council felt it difficult to decide who was the worst, and finally all their cases were left undisposed of—that is they were left under legal sentence for execution, until the Judges report on the other prisoners should be made, the Solicitor General having represented that on carefully looking into the indictments he was of opinion, that Beamer would be found to have been more deeply implicated than either Chandler Wait, or McLeod.

With regard to the measure of amnesty, which Your Lordship recommends, I do not apprehend any material difference of opinion between Your Lordship and myself. The constitutional objections raised by the Council, appear to be directed against the measure as applied to persons actually indicted and against whom legal proceedings are in progress. It seems to me, that these persons if pardoned, should properly receive the royal mercy, upon individual application, and I have no disposition to limit within narrow bounds the clemency which may be bestowed. There is, however, a great difference of opinion between the mass of the people of Lower Canada, and the majority in the Upper Province, which has induced me to abate the severity of the law, progressively and cautiously, and to seize occasions for shewing mercy as they arise, rather than to attain the same end suddenly by a general measure.

I have lately made an extensive tour through the Districts east of Toronto, and to the westward as far as London, in the course of which I have endeavoured personally to ascertain the state of the public mind, respecting the course of lenity pursued towards persons convicted of treason, and I regret to say that the result of my inquiries has not been satisfactory. There is in fact a very general opinion, that this Government has gone too far in granting pardon to delinquents, and the loyal inhabitants of the province entertain the strong apprehension that the impunity extended to traitors, will in no small degree have the tendency to expose the province to a recurrence of all the miseries through which it has recently passed.

Still this has not prevented me from pursuing the lenient course pointed out by my instructions, and the number of convicts has been reduced so low, that I shall have no difficulty in ascertaining the number to whom I see no prospect of granting pardon, with a due regard to the public safety.

While the opportunity of extending mercy to those actually in the hands of justice, has been used so extensively as to leave but few convicts, I am aware that of those who have escaped, and who, having been indicted, have been proceeded against with a view to outlawry, there may be yet some whom I should be disposed to allow to return to the Province. I think it, however, but a due respect for the law and public opinion, that these persons should individually apply, and exhibit some disposition to return, and promise to demean themselves loyally for the future, before mercy and indemnity shall be offered to them.

This seems to be in accordance with the opinion of the Secretary of State, to whom I had intimated my intention of resorting to some qualified measure of amnesty. In a despatch dated 7th September, instant, his Lordship observes—"I entirely concur in your opinion of the wisdom, as well as the humanity, of encouraging any persons to return to the Province who fled from it under an apprehension of the consequences to which their conduct may have exposed them, & whose return is consistent with the public safety and tranquillity. You are fully aware of the desire of Her Majesty's Government, that the greatest degree of lenity compatible with a due regard to the public interests, should be exercised towards such persons; and it will afford them much satisfaction to learn that you have been enabled to carry into effect your own views on this subject."

Under these considerations, I think it right not to delay the Proclamations calling upon these persons to submit to justice, which was the subject of my despatch to your Lordship, No. 20. These Proclamations I am imperatively required, by an Act of the Provincial Parliament, to issue forthwith; and they will designate the only fugitives from the Province who will be under any necessity to petition for the Royal clemency—and all others will come in under the general amnesty.

I most cordially agree with your Lordship that it is advisable to remove all apprehension of legal proceedings being taken against the implicated persons in the Province or who have fled from fear of prosecution. It has not been my intention at any time to seek out objects for punishment, or to hold the terrors of the law over the heads of persons who have not already actually come under the notice of the tribunals of the country; and although a proclamation of amnesty as regards these men would no doubt be less objectionable, if authorized in the usual form by Act of Provincial Parliament, I shall not delay such a beneficial proceeding by awaiting Legislative sanction, provided your Lordship concurs with me in the immediate removal out of the Province of the prisoners (about —) under commuted sentence of transportation, to whom the Council will not consent to recommend any further extension of mercy.

The names and particulars of these cases are included in the enclosed memorandum.

The Executive Council has explained in the minute the difficulties which stand in the way of disposing of the foreigners who were taken in arms relative to whom I am anxiously awaiting instructions from Her Majesty's Government. It is undoubtedly desirable that these cases should be immediately disposed of; but the bringing them to trial for high treason, would obviously be useless, considering the opinion of the law authorities here; and their acquittal upon a legal point, or the permitting them to go at large without trial, would amount to a declaration that foreigners levying war against the province, are neither liable to be treated as prisoners of war, nor to be punished as offending against municipal law. The promulgation of such a doctrine, would, I am certain be most dangerous to the peace of the country, and therefore I wait with anxiety and impatience final directions from England.— This matter I assure Your Lordship is very urgent, as the excitement and agitation in the patriot cause are reported at the present moment to be going on along the American shore with great activity.

Your Lordship is aware how all this feeling began to subside when you visited the frontier in July last; but that feeling, from causes perhaps not apparent to the public, has certainly taken a very unfavourable turn.

I have, the honour to be, &c.

SIR,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's Despatches, No. 19, and 21, of the 27th and 29th, ultimo, respecting the disposal of the political prisoners in Upper Canada, and written with reference to my Despatch of the 18th.

I am happy to be able to inform you that the measures mentioned therein, as contemplated by Your Excellency, which have been more fully explained to me by you during your late visit to Quebec, entirely meet my views of the exigencies of the case; I have only to express a hope that they will be carried into operation without delay, and in the only matter in which my assistance is requisite, I have already made preparations for co-operation with Your Excellency in the prompt conveyence to England of the persons on whom you propose to carry the sentence of transportation into effect.

I have the honour to be, &c.

GEO. ARTHUR.

THE Lieutenant Governor transmits for the information of the House of Assembly a Report from the Commissioners appointed under the Provincial Statute 1st Victoria ch. 13, to investigate the claims of certain inhabitants of this Province for losses sustained during the late rebellion.

Government House,

12th March, 1839.

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major General Commanding Her Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

THE Commissioners appointed under the Provincial Statute 1st Victoria, chap 13, to investigate the claims of certain inhabitants of this Province for losses sustained during the late unnatural rebellion, respectfully beg leave to Report :

That immediately after their appointment they gave public notice of their being prepared to receive claims for investigation under the Act of the Legislature, with a request that they should be forwarded to Toronto, the place appointed by your Excellency for the sittings of the Board.

In performance of their duties under the Statute, the following claims have been brought before them for investigation, copies of which accompany this Report.

Copy of the evidence adduced on these several claims is also annexed for your Excellency's information.

Taking each claim in its order, with the evidence before them in support of the demands made upon the public by the parties who have suffered loss by the acts of traitors during the late rebellion, the Commissioners respectfully beg leave to submit the following observations for your Excellency's consideration.

No. 1.—JOHN BUTLER.

It appears from the evidence of Richard Butler, who was left in charge of the family, that his father, the claimant, was meritoriously employed in the discharge of his duty as a militia-man on the Niagara Frontier during a threatened invasion of the Province, and that this period of his absence on such an occasion when it is probable too that his fellow loyal subjects and neighbours were called from their homes, and his family left in comparative insecurity, was deemed most opportune by incendiary rebels to deprive them of their shelter and to ensure the complete destruction of their property.

The evidence is not so clear and pointed in this case, as in all the others, as to the act having positively been that of the rebels. In all the other cases no doubt whatever remains on this point, as the acts of destruction took place in open day in the presence of several witnesses; in this however, the dead hour of night, when the inmates were at rest, and the neighbourhood in repose, seems to have been appropriately chosen for the deed of darkness; the family being first aroused by the fire which speedily accomplished its work of destruction, and from which they escaped with much difficulty. The presumption in the opinion of the Commissioners is strongly in favour of the belief of the witness, that the house was fired by incendiaries from the rebels, and as they see no cause to doubt the reasonableness of the charges made for the several items of property lost, they recommend this claim for payment,..... £102 8 9

No. 2.—ROBERT C. HORNE, Esq.

This gentleman's residence, near Toronto, was burned by the rebels on December 5th, 1837, and involved the destruction of the whole establishment and its contents.

The value of the buildings destroyed is ascertained in a satisfactory manner, not only from the estimate of Dr. Horne himself, but from the testimony of the person from whom he purchased the premises, and that of one of the most respectable practical builders now in Toronto, who was actually employed upon them during their erection.

Of the contents of the dwelling house, &c. the value is ascertained by the evidence of Dr. Horne, and with reference to the ordinary prices of similar articles, appears to be fairly stated.

It has been thought proper however to deduct from this claim certain items for which compensation ought more properly to be sought by other parties.

The total amount of claim submitted by Dr. Horne is £2,369 2 9, subject to the following deductions:

Amount of articles the property of the estate of the late Benjamin Whitney, Esq. ....	£125 0 0
Servant's Clothing.....	16 4 0
and, taking the estimate of Messrs. Ewart & Ritchie as to the value of building,.....	100 0 0
Difference of.....	£ 241 4 0
Leaving the sum of.....	£2127 18 9

which they recommend to be allowed to Dr. Horne as compensation for the losses sustained by him.

No. 3.—MRS MARGARET WASHBURN.

This was a large and valuable property on the River Don, near the City of Toronto, newly built by the late Simon Washburn, Esq. and not quite completed at the time of his death. The evidence will show that the premises were on an extensive scale.

It appears from the report of a Committee of the House of Assembly, last session, that a larger amount was recommended as being due than what is now claimed. The items now specified in detail, give a total of £1310 6s. 5d. with a statement annexed as explanation, that the actual cost was about £1640, "including excavation and other matters"—and this may probably account for the difference in amount, but which the Commissioners did not consider as coming within the view of their investigation.

From the Evidence adduced the following amounts appear to be satisfactorily established:—

Cash payments.....	986 15 0
Wragg, & Co.....	109 1 5
Timber, Hay, Oats, Laths,.....	125 10 0
Amounting to.....	£1221 6 5

and which they would recommend to be allowed to the claimant.

No. 4.—WILLIAM BURROWS.

The claim now submitted by Mr. Burrows is.....	£ 448 9 5
By a former one sent into the House of Assembly, it was.....	304 7 6

The excess of claim now presented being..... £ 144 1 11

neighbourhood in repose, seems to have been appropriately chosen for the deed of darkness; the family being first aroused by the fire which speedily accomplished its work of destruction, and from which they escaped with much difficulty. The presumption in the opinion of the Commissioners is strongly in favour of the belief of the witness, that the house was fired by incendiaries from the rebels, and as they see no cause to doubt the reasonableness of the charges made for the several items of property lost, they recommend this claim for payment, ..... £102 8 9

It will be seen from the testimony of the Claimant that he states the difference to have arisen from his having in the first instance being called upon in a hurry to prepare his claim, and that many items have since been called to his recollection.

With respect to this claim, it appears to the Commissioners, that some items are charged at rather high prices—this applies to his own clothing—to some of the books, as well as some other articles.—The evidence of his wife, Mary Burrows, respecting the clothing belonging to herself, and the articles of property in the house more immediately under her care, is considered quite satisfactory.

On an account including such a variety of items, it would be difficult to detail at length the particulars of overcharge. Having, however given the claim their attentive and careful consideration, and making deductions from those items which the Commissioners apprehend to be overcharged, giving at the same time credit to the statement of the claimant, as to the cause of difference in the amount above alluded to, they have thought that this demand should be allowed to the extent of..... £ 350 0 0

No. 8.—CLARKE GAMBLE, ESQ.

The Commissioners beg leave to state to Your Excellency, that under the Statute, the power vested in them being limited to the investigation of claims for losses sustained to the date of its becoming a law ; they did not feel themselves authorized, under its provisions, to take into their consideration the claim of a respectable and loyal inhabitant of the province, whose house was damaged at the time of the attack at the Short Hills, in the Niagara District, in the month of June, 1838, subsequent to the passing of the Act.

An account of the disbursements incurred by the Commissioners in the discharge of the duties entrusted to them, and for which they pray Your Excellency's authority for liquidation is annexed to this report.

All of which is most respectfully submitted.

Niagara, 4th June, 1838.

We, the undersigned, do certify, that John Butler, a private soldier belonging to the 2nd Company 1st Frontier Light Infantry, was on duty on the night that his house and property were destroyed by fire which is mentioned in his claim. This man has served on the lines since the month of December, 1837.

Evidence on claim of John Butler.

RICHARD BUTLER, sworn—Is son of the claimant John Butler—resides in the township of Grimsby—resided there on the 7th February, 1838—living in the house there occupied by his father's family, who was then absent on militia duty on the Niagara Frontier. On that night, viz. 7th February, 1838, the house was destroyed by fire by incendiaries, as this deponent suspects and believes from the rebels—the fire broke out about midnight, and was first seen to break out from the stoop in front of the house—himself, his mother and family, in all seven then at home, being aroused by the fire, with difficulty made their escape from the building, which was filled with smoke and burning, found it impossible to save anything from the house, their attention being first directed to get the children out of the house—they are distant from their nearest neighbours about fifty rods—some of the neighbours came to the fire but could render no assistance in saving the furniture, it being impossible to venture into the burning house, which was eventually totally consumed, his father's household stuff and furniture being burnt in it.

The inventory of articles for which claim is made being read to deponent, he states, that to his knowledge, they were in the house when destroyed—the money he knows was in the house, having had it in his hands the day before the fire—the pocket book contained one hundred and twenty dollars in bank notes—the greater part being in Bank of Upper Canada notes; the articles enumerated, to the best of his knowledge and belief, are fairly valued.

The house was rented by his father from Merritt Paulding, late of Grimsby, yeoman, latterly of the town of Niagara, where he kept a tavern, and who left the Province soon after the rebellion broke out.

CLAIM OF DR. HORNE.

TORONTO, 20th November, 1838.

The Commissioners upon Claims for Losses during the late Rebellion.

GENTLEMEN:

I enclose an estimate of my losses by the rebels, when advancing upon this City, in December last.

The impossibility of accuracy in making such a return, must be obvious, and I trust the Commissioners, taking that into consideration, and the undoubted fact, that the burning of my house saved the whole City from destruction, by exposing to many of the insurgents the true nature of the conspiracy, and by exciting a more determined spirit among the loyalists, will make some allowance in addition, for interest, as it may be several years before the claim is paid.

I have the honour to be,

Toronto, 19th November, 1838.

The above estimate was made out when the transaction was recent; even at that time it was found impracticable to enumerate every thing lost—many articles being recollected, after making up the account, which were not considered worth while to add to it, as the whole was expected to be paid immediately—the omission cannot now be remedied.

A large quantity of books and furniture, belonging to the estate of the late Mr. Whitney, are included in the above list. I may be mistaken in the value of some of the items, but cannot hesitate to declare, that the whole is within the amount lost by me on that occasion.

Evidence on Claim of Dr. Horne.

ROBERT C. HORNE, sworn—Says that the house and premises, with their contents, as set forth in the claim which he presents to the Board, were, with the exceptions therein-named, his property; and that the same were destroyed by fire, by the rebels, on the 5th December, 1837. To the best of this deponent's knowledge and belief, the amount claimed by him, as set forth in this, his claim, is just and true in all its particulars; and that the several items therein-mentioned are charged at a fair and reasonable value. The articles noticed as exceptions in his account, were in his house at the time of its destruction; and the two sons (minor children) of the late Benjamin Whitney, Esquire, were residing with deponent, and under his charge at the time. The clothing of these two boys were destroyed in the house: and to the best of this deponent's knowledge, would amount, in value, to the sum of twenty-five pounds, currency. The articles of furniture and books, included in his claim, belonging to the estate of the late Mr. Whitney, would amount, to the best of his belief, to the sum of one hundred pounds, currency—making, in all, the sum of one hundred and twenty-five pounds, currency. With respect to the clothes and money of servants, destroyed in the house, the value of about seven pounds ten shillings, currency, were the personal property of this deponent; the remainder of the items charged in the account, belonged to a male and female servant, in his employ at that time.

JOHN EWART, sworn—This deponent was formerly owner of the premises set forth in this claim; he sold them to Dr. Horne—delivering him the dwelling-house in a furnished state; it was finished in good style. Deponent was called upon, together with Mr. Ritchie, last winter, to make an estimate of the value, by a Committee of the House of Assembly: their estimate, as he recollects, was stated at nine hundred and fifty pounds, currency, which amount was subsequently increased one hundred pounds, in consideration of additions and improvements made by Dr. Horne, subsequently to his purchase of the premises from this Deponent. The total value of the buildings destroyed by the rebels, to the best of this deponent's knowledge and belief, is of the value of one thousand and fifty pounds, currency.

CLAIM OF MARGARET WASHBURN.

Toronto, 31st January, 1839.

SIR,

Herewith I enclose you the amended statement of the property destroyed, belonging to Mrs. Washburn, signed by herself.

You will perceive I have altered it to a certain extent, on account of circumstances which I was not aware of previously.

JOSEPH C. MORRISON,

Agent to the Estate of the lateSimon Washburn, Esq.

To ALEXANDER WOOD, Esq.

Chairman, Board of Claims.

STATEMENT of the cost of building the houses, premises and stables, destroyed by the Rebels, near the Don Bridge, on the 7th December, 1837, belonging to the Estate of the late Mr. Washburn.

To amount paid William Burrows, as per receipts .....	986	15	0
To commission charged by him .....	30	0	0
To one year's rent expended on premises .....	60	0	0
To amount paid Wragg & Co. as per account .....	109	1	5
To 3,500 feet hewn timber, at £10 per M .....	35	0	0
To 16 acres of oats, at £4 per acre .....	64	0	0
To 56 bundles laths, at 6s. 3d. per bundle .....	17	10	0
To 3 tons of hay, at £3 per ton .....	9	0	0

The actual cost to the late Mr. Washburn was about £1640, including, on account of excavation and other matters, £520—which, from the loss of the papers relating thereto, cannot now be accounted for.

The excavations are a total loss to the estate, as the land is thereby not intrinsically increased in value. Mrs. Washburn would respectfully draw the attention of the Board to this particular.

The only vouchers that can be furnished are the receipts of Mr. Burrows, who superintended the erection of the buildings, and the account of Messrs. Wragg & Co. for materials, &c.: the papers containing the detailed expenditure having been burnt at the fire. The laths, hay and oats, were burnt in the buildings, and are charged at a lower rate than their value at that time.

The buildings were intended, by the late Mr. Washburn, for a large brewery, distillery, and an inn attached. Mr. Burrows, at the time of the destruction of the premises, occupied the same under a rental of sixty pounds per annum; and under a further agreement, that when Mr. Washburn had completed the inn and stabling, Mr. Burrows should pay at the rate of six per cent on the actual cost, or at the rate of £130 per year for the same.

There were many other articles destroyed, but Mrs. Washburn is unable, from many circumstances, and particularly on account of Mr. Burrows, (who is the only person acquainted with the subject,) and who has shown himself inimical to her interests, to ascertain their description or value.

(Signed) MARGARET WASHBURN,

Executrix and sole Devisee of the late Mr. Washburn.

Evidence on Claim of Margaret Washburn.

JAMES FITZGIBBON, Esquire, Clerk of the House of Assembly, sworn—Says that the claim of Mrs. Washburn was presented to the House of Assembly, and was referred to a Committee, appointed by the House to enquire into the said claim and others of a similar nature, during the last Session; George S. Boulton, Esquire, M. P. P. was Chairman of the Committee. A Report was made to the House by the said Committee, which deponent here presents. The following is an extract therefrom, dated 24th February, 1838:

“ It appears satisfactorily proven, that the house and brewery belonging to Mrs. Washburn, with a number of articles therein, were destroyed by the Rebels during the late rebellion, and that their value was one thousand six hundred and fifty-three pounds three shillings (£1653 3s.) which your Committee consider her entitled to, for such loss as stated in her petition.”

The said Report was placed upon the Journal of the House, in the ordinary manner, but no particular action took place upon it by the House. It was then near the close of the Session—the prorogation having taken place on the 6th day of March following.

MARY BURROWS, sworn—Says that on the 5th December, 1837, her husband, William Burrows, resided in the house on the east side of the Don Bridge, near Toronto, being the property set forth in Mrs. Washburn's claim. On the 7th December, during the rebellion, her husband observing the approach of a body of rebels, left the house to go to Toronto, in order to give the alarm of their approach. The band of rebels, most of them being armed, came to the house not long after her husband had left for the City: a number of them came into the house, desiring her to leave it; on looking out she saw the stable adjoining the house on fire; she was forced out of the house, without time being allowed her to remove any thing out of it, or even to take necessary articles of clothing. In a short time the whole premises were in flames, and were entirely destroyed by the fire; she has no doubt the fire was set by the rebels; she fled to the office of the keeper of the toll-gate, and there saw some of the rebels take a brand from the fire-place, with which they fired the Bridge. In the stable and barn, deponent is aware that a considerable quantity of hay and oats were stored away, as well as a quantity of squared timber and laths.

1st February, 1838.

WILLIAM BURROWS, sworn—Was residing in the house mentioned in this claim, at the time of the rebellion. On the 7th December, 1837, he went up on the top of the house with a spy-glass in his hand, and observed at some distance a body of armed men approaching, whom he believed to be a party of the rebels; he immediately proceeded to Toronto, to give the alarm, and not very long after, he saw the premises on fire, and has no doubt but that they were fired by the rebels whom he had previously seen approaching.

Deponent has resided on the premises from their first construction, and was himself employed in their erection. They consisted of a building constructed with a view to its being subsequently used as a brewery: a dwelling-house, which was used as an inn: granary, stable and shedding, with hay-loft—these latter being three stories in height; they were all frame buildings on stone foundations; the dwelling-house was two stories in height, and that part of the premises intended for the brewery was to have corresponded with the granary and stables—being three stories in height. The materials for this part of the premises were all prepared, and were on the ground; the dwelling-house and granary above-mentioned were completely finished, and in the occupation of this deponent, who kept an inn there.

Deponent was employed in the erection of the buildings generally, as superintendent of the same by Mr. Washburn, the disbursements were made through this deponent, he receiving from time to time the means of paying the people employed, from Mr. Washburn. Materials, such as timber, stone, nails, iron work, and some other items were disbursed by Mr. Washburn, without reference to this deponent, who has no personal knowledge of such items of expense.

Deponent had kept account of the outlay made by him on account of the buildings, from monies placed in his hand, by Mr. Washburn for that purpose. These accounts as well as all others, his own papers, books, and the articles of property belonging to himself were burned in the house by the rebels, and he cannot now therefore state the particulars.

A book produced to witness containing receipts for monies paid to him by Mr. Washburn, at various times; deponent admits the correctness of these receipts—they are signed by him, and the several amounts were paid into his hands by Mr. Washburn, and by him expended on Mr. Washburn's account, in erection of the premises in question, and in the laying in of the materials to be used as before stated. These sums are exclusive of the excavation of the brewery part of the building, which was a separate job. A commission was charged by this deponent against Mr. Washburn, on the expenditure, amounting to about thirty pounds, independently of the money receipts now produced. The excavation part of the brewery was performed by this deponent, and he was to have continued in possession of the Inn and its appurtenances, as the tenant of Mr. Washburn, at the rate of £65 per annum, till the job was settled up—he remained in actual possession from 13th January, 1837, to the time of the destruction of the premises, being about eleven months. Deponent is aware that a considerable quantity of squared timber and other materials were prepared and on the premises, with a view to the completion of the brewery part; a great part of these were totally consumed by the fire, and other parts damaged—cannot speak positively as to the total quantity of timber, materials, &c. laid down on the premises, but is aware the whole which would have been required for the erection of the brewery were there, for the framing, flooring, and covering it in to the three stories in height; there were also some thousands of Laths, which were totally destroyed by the fire; in the the barn and granary, a quantity of hay and oats were laid in, these were the property of Mr. Washburn, having been brought there from his farm; the produce of about 16 acres of oats was so laid up, and part of the produce of about 12 acres of hay; the value of the oats at a fair and reasonable valuation, the deponent believes would be about £5 the acre; thinks there were about three tons of hay. The whole of the oats and hay on the premises were destroyed by the fire.

The brewery was intended as a building larger than the granary part, which was 80 feet by 40, and to have been as before stated, three stories in height; the materials provided and on the premises, were in accordance with that design, and from his knowledge of building and quantities required for such a purpose, would, he thinks, exceed 3,500 feet squared timber. He is not aware of any other articles being on the premises, the property of Mr. Washburn, than those stated in this his deposition.

HENRY LAYTON, sworn.—Is a clerk in the employ of Wragg & Company, of this City, hardware merchants; knows the premises at the Don Bridge, the property of the late Mr. Washburn. During the erection of the building, various materials of hardware were furnished, on Mr. Washburn's account, by Wragg & Company, and delivered to William Burrows, as deponent understood, to be made use of in the erection of the buildings at the Don, the property of Mr. Washburn. The value of materials so procured, on such account, amounts, to the best of deponent's knowledge, to about one hundred pounds.

JOSEPH C. MORRISON, sworn—Says that he is employed on the part of Mrs. Washburn, as her agent in the affairs of her late husband—to whose estate she is sole executrix; he was in the employ of Mr. Washburn in his life time, while the buildings in question were in the course of being erected, and knows that William Burrows, as stated in his deposition, was engaged as superintendent of the same—the expenditure passing through his hands, from monies paid to him in various sums, at various times, by Mr. Washburn; deponent has himself at times paid sums to Mr. Burrows, for Mr. Washburn, for this purpose. The book presented contains the receipts of Mr. Burrows for monies paid to him on various occasions, on this account—deponent has added these receipts together, they amount in all to the sum of nine hundred and fifty-nine pounds, fifteen shillings—in addition to which are two sums of twenty-four pounds ten shillings, paid by Mr. Washburn on Burrows' account, and an order of Burrows for two pounds ten shillings, making in all the sum of nine hundred and eighty-six pounds fifteen shillings, as the total sum so paid by Mr. Washburn to Burrows on account of the said premises. Deponent has no personal knowledge of the excavation of the brewery part of the premises, as a separate job, or the agreement made with Burrows by Mr. Washburn on the subject, nor has he any knowledge of the amount which was to be allowed for the same. The detailed accounts connected with the buildings, were, as he believes, destroyed in the house at the Don, when it was fired by the rebels; the book now produced, with Burrows' receipts, and the items included in the statement of claim submitted, being the only data within his power, as the agent of Mrs. Washburn, to exhibit with any degree of certainty. This deponent is aware that a claim was submitted to the House of Assembly last Session, exceeding this in amount, and from deponent's general knowledge of the transaction, as connected with these premises, he has no doubt that the total loss is not short of the sum stated in the report of the Committee.

Evidence on claim of William Burrows.

WILLIAM BURROWS, the claimant, sworn—A claim was submitted by him to the House of Assembly, last Session, amounting to three hundred and some odd pounds; the claim he now submits is for £448 9s. 5d. The previous claim was, as stated, in the report of the Committee of the Assembly..... £304 7 6

The difference between the two being..... 144 1 11

He endeavours to account for this large difference between the two claims made, from the fact that the one submitted to the Assembly being called for in a hurry, and being handed in without having sufficient time to recall to recollection all the things which were destroyed in the house, it did not contain many items which have since been recalled to his recollection. Of the items contained in the claim now made, deponent swears that most of them are within his own knowledge as having been in the house at the time it was burned by the rebels; he states with certainty the following :

All the clothes belonging to himself;
 The beds, bedding and bed furniture;
 The earthenware;
 Ordinary house furniture;
 Liquors and bar furniture;

And generally to the other items stated in the account, with the exception of his wife's clothing; the table linen; spoons, and some other things, which were particularly in his wife's charge, and more under her observation. The house was fitted up and furnished for the purposes of an Inn—seven beds were made up in the house for the accommodation of persons calling—the bar was supplied in the ordinary way, with liquors of various kinds—some of the articles enumerated were burned in the barn or stable adjoining the house—by the destruction of the house when fired by the rebels all his property contained in it at the time was totally lost to him. For many of the articles contained in the statement of claim he had paid the accounts of tradesmen, and others, and had their receipts for the amount paid; these documents as well as his other papers were destroyed in the house; for several items he had paid ready money, and for some of these he yet remains indebted; of the earthenware charged at £16, he recollects one blue dinner set for which he paid £7; there were various other articles, necessary in such a house, such as common plates and dishes, tea services, mugs, and measures of different sorts; the glassware he states was of the usual description for an inn, and the items charged he believes to be truly stated. The stock of liquors in his bar, at the time of the burning, consisted of various sorts, brandy, gin, whiskey, some wine, contained in kegs and small barrells. The money in the till, he had not counted for two or three days previous, but on looking at it on the morning of the burning, he recollects that it consisted of bank bills, silver, and small change, and from ordinary receipts of the house, he verily believes the amount to be reasonably stated. To the best of his knowledge and belief the items contained in this his claim, are fairly and truly stated; that they were destroyed by the fire and are a total loss to him, and the prices charged are just and true.

MARY BURROWS, sworn—Is the wife of the claimant, Wm. Burrows, the house in which they resided and kept an inn, was burned by the rebels in December, 1837, and all their property contained in it, and the adjoining stable and barn, were totally destroyed and lost to them in consequence—she was herself not allowed to save any article even of her own clothing, and she was compelled to leave the house to its fate—the whole of her own clothing was destroyed by the fire—it consisted of an ample and comfortable stock, mostly purchased for her by her parents when leaving England, about eighteen months before—many of the articles were yet new as when purchased, not having had occasion to make use of them—some of them were purchased in Toronto, both before and after her marriage to Burrows, and these are charged in statement of claim at the prices actually paid for them, and had been but little in use. This deponent further swears that the several articles being now called over to her, are those actually lost, and that their value is truly and justly stated, having personal knowledge of the prices paid for nearly the whole of them. The inn they kept was supplied with the usual bed and table linen, for most of which she made the purchases. The bed linen consisted of the necessary articles, sheets, pillow and bolster-cases, sufficient for making up and having change for the number of beds they made up, which were seven in number, with feather beds and mattresses to each. The table linen consisted of diaper table cloths, hand towels, bedroom towels, and towels for kitchen and common use; there were several bed counterpanes, cotton and worsted. The table and bed linen were procured mostly by herself. The articles of bed and table linen, and furniture are read over to the deponent, she knows that the number of each as stated, were in the house at the time of the fire, and destroyed, and having herself purchased several of the articles for the use of the house, believes them to be truly stated as to quantities and prices. The knives and forks, spoons, and kitchen utensils, baking oven pans, and other kitchen furniture, she knows to be truly stated; their house was newly built, a large building, they had been in occupation of it about eleven months, when it was destroyed by the rebels; they had moved into it immediately after their marriage, and commenced fitting it up as an inn; the house for this purpose was comfortably furnished and provided in all respects, as to the bedding, furniture, kitchen utensils, bar room, and the usual requisites in a house of that kind; the purchases were all of new articles, and having been not more than eleven months in use were nearly as good as new; some of them had not been at all used. The whole was lost by the destruction of the house by the rebels.

EDWARD FOLEY, sworn—Is keeper of the east toll gate at the Don, resided at the toll house in December 1837, when the rebels approached towards Toronto. On their advance he with some other persons, retreated into the city; it was subsequently that the premises in question were fired—his residence was near that of the claimant, William Burrows, who kept an inn in the house built by Mr. Washburn; had frequent opportunities of personally witnessing the manner in which the house was provided and furnished by Burrows for this purpose; it was well and comfortably furnished as a respectable country inn. It was a large house two stories in height, and would require a considerable quantity of furniture to enable Burrows to keep it properly and respectably; and in this respect having been his near neighbour all the time he was there, he had not heard, nor does he believe there could be any ground of complaint as the character of Burrows and his wife was such, as in his opinion, to preclude any ground of complaint, it was a respectable, comfortable and well kept house.

Evidence on Claim of Nicholas Burrows.

NICHOLAS BURROWS, the Claimant, sworn.—The statement of claim now handed in by him, and sworn to before James FitzGibbon, Esquire, on 28th May, 1838, contains a true and correct account of the articles lost by him in the house of his brother, William Burrows, when fired by the rebels, in December, 1837. His brother's house was his usual home when not employed at work at a distance—he kept his clothing there in his chest—the articles enumerated he so left in the house in December, 1837, and has no doubt they were there, and consumed by the fire; has resided in this country rather more than two years; came from England; previous to leaving home he purchased his stock of clothing; they are justly stated in his claim as to quantities and prices.

Toronto, 29th January, 1839.

Sir,

As Acting Executor and Trustee of the Estate of the late Benjamin Whitney, and Guardian to his Heirs, I beg to lay before the Board, of which you are Chairman, the following claim for property belonging to the said Estate, destroyed in the dwelling-house of R. C. Horne, Esq. on the 5th December, 1837; when the same was fired by the rebels, and totally consumed.

The property lost consists of household furniture, bed and bedding, books, plate and china, together with wearing apparel, estimated at a low value—at £125.

The particulars further I am unacquainted with; but I beg to refer you to the evidence of R. C. Horne, Esq. who can give you all the information required by your Board.

I have the honour to be, &c. &c.

Evidence on Claim of Clarke Gamble, Esquire.

ROBERT C. HORNE, Esq. sworn. The amount of claim here set forth was included in a claim made by this Deponent, the articles lost being in his house when destroyed by the rebels, in December, 1837. This amount is now deducted from his claim.

The articles destroyed were the property of the estate of the late Mr. Whitney, and consisted of books, furniture, plate, china and clothing, belonging to his children. It is not in Deponent's power, from recollection, to particularize the several items of property lost—they were generally valuable, and the amount claimed, as stated at £125, he has every reason to believe is justly set forth—and to the best of his knowledge and belief, under the actual value of the same.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR recommends to the early consideration of the House of Assembly, the accompanying copy of a letter (19th December, 1838,) from Major Goldie, Civil Secretary of the Province of Lower Canada, transmitting two certified accounts of disbursements by the Sheriff of Quebec, for the conveyance of certain Upper Canada convicts to England, on their way to Van Dieman's Land, amounting, in the whole, to the sum of £646 2s. 7d. currency.

Montreal, 19th December, 1838.

SIR,

THE twenty-three convicts recently sent from Toronto to Quebec, for transportation, having been conveyed to England, I have been directed by His Excellency, the Administrator of the Government, to transmit to you, for liquidation, the enclosed accounts furnished by the Sheriff of Quebec, and certified by the Inspector-General of Accounts, of the expenses incurred for the conveyance of these convicts; also an account for passage-money, bedding, &c. for a convict from Upper Canada, sent to England in 1837, which has not yet been paid. The payment of these accounts might be simplified by deducting the amount from the proportion of duties payable to Upper Canada, on the 1st January next, should His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor not see any objection thereto.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your most obedient,

Humble Servant,

THE Executive Council are respectfully of opinion, that as the Session of Parliament will, probably, not be deferred for many weeks, and as there is no Parliamentary provision made for the expenditure, the least objectionable mode of payment of the charge for transportation of the convicts to England, on their way to Van Diemen's Land, will be the submission of the account to the House of Assembly, by Message, at an early period in the next Session.

In transmitting, for the information of the House of Assembly, the copy of a correspondence which has taken place between the Assistant Military Secretary, at Toronto, and the Military Secretary to His Excellency the Commander of the Forces, relative to the claims of certain Lessees of the Tolls of the Brantford and Paris Bridges, for a remuneration for the passage of Troops, and persons employed in Her Majesty's service, over the said Bridges, the Lieutenant-Governor recommends this subject to their early consideration.

SIR,

HAVING laid before the Commander of the Forces, your letter of the 18th instant, covering two communications from Colonel Love, with applications from the Lessees of the Brantford and Paris Bridges, to be remunerated for the free passage of Troops and Stores, I am directed to state, for the information of Major-General Sir George Arthur, that His Excellency thinks these claims should be brought under the consideration of the Provincial Legislature.

In time of war and rebellion, when an unusual number of Troops are ordered into disturbed Districts, it appears reasonable that the Province should provide for their passage over bridges and ferries.

SIR,

I have received the directions of the Major General commanding, to transmit for the consideration of His Excellency the Commander of the Forces, the enclosed communication from Colonel Love, covering applications from the lessees of the Brantford and Paris Bridges, for a remuneration for the passage of troops and others employed on Her Majesty's service.

Sir George Arthur is of opinion that the owners of horses and carriages who are employed and paid for the transport of stores, &c. are not exempt from the payment of tolls, and that such exemption applies only to troops and their horses, and to carriages and horses bonâ fide the property of the Crown. For the latter, however, the Major-General would recommend that some compensation be allowed to the lessees out of the military funds.

JAMES NATION,
Acting Inspector-General.

*Inspector-General's Office,
1st April, 1839.*

GEO. ARTHUR.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR transmits, for the consideration of the House of Assembly, an application from the lessees of the tolls of the Cataragui Bridge at Kingston, of the same nature as the claim of the lessees of the Brantford and Paris Bridges, to which the attention of the House has been drawn by a former message.

*Government House,
April, 1839.*

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada.

The petition of James Williamson, and William Ferguson, of the Town of Kingston, humbly sheweth—

That your petitioners are the joint contractors for the tolls of the Cataragui Bridge, for the year ending the first of April, 1838, for which they pay the heavy rent of four hundred and seventy pounds for the year.

That in consequence of the removal of Her Majesty's troops from the Garrison of Kingston, your petitioners have been, and are at this day, heavy losers by their contract.

That at the commencement of the present domestic troubles, your petitioners threw open the gates of the bridge to all persons passing on Her Majesty's service, at the suggestion of Colonel Bonnycastle, and other officers of the garrison, and on the promise that their claim for remuneration should hereafter be attended to.

Your petitioners have therefore made out the accompanying account which they humbly submit to Your Excellency's consideration, trusting that the certificates attached to it will be satisfactory proof of their claims.

And your petitioners will ever pray.

HER MAJERTY'S GOVERNMENT,

TO THE CONTRACTORS FOR THE TOLLS OF THE CATARAQUI BRIDGE, KINGSTON:

	£	s.	D.
For the passing to and fro of 3,580 men from the 8th December, 1837, to the 31st January, 1838, both days inclusive at 4d each .....	59	13	4
For passing 178 horses with riders, within the above dates at 5d each.....	3	14	2
Do. 703 horses with carts, within the above dates, at 6d each.....	17	11	6
Do. 54 waggons drawn by two horses each, within the above dates, at 7½d each .....	1	13	9

For passing 544 sleighs, drawn by two horses each, within the above dates, at 7½d each .....	17	0	0
	£ 99	18	9

JAMES WILLIAMSON and WILLIAM FERGUSON, both of the Town of Kingston, maketh oath and saith, that the above amount of ninety-nine pounds eighteen shillings and nine-pence, Halifax Currency, is to the best of their knowledge and belief fairly due to them for suffering persons, &c. as above stated, to pass the toll gate free of toll, supposed to be on Her Majesty's service.

JAMES WILLIAMSON.
WILLIAM FERGUSON.

Sworn before me at Kingston,
22nd February, 1838.

JOHN MOWATT, J. P.

GEORGE WALKER, of the Town of Kingston, maketh oath and saith, that from the 8th day of December, 1837, until the 31st day of January, 1838, he was in the employment of Messrs. James Williamson and William Ferguson, the contractors for the tolls on the Cataragui Bridge as toll gate keeper, and that to the best of his knowledge and belief, the sum of ninety-nine pounds eighteen shillings and nine pence, H.C. is the amount due by and charged to Her Majesty's Government for suffering persons supposed to be on Her Majesty's service to pass the toll gate free of toll.

GEORGE WALKER.

Sworn before me, at Kingston,
22nd February, 1838.

JOHN MOWATT, J. P.

Kingston, Upper Canada, 23rd February, 1838.

I certify that Mr. Ferguson did permit the militia and others employed in the public service in very considerable numbers, to pass toll free, thereby much facilitating the measures of security adopted here.

H. W. BONNYCASTLE, LT. COL.
Commanding Militia, Kingston.

*Fort Henry.
February 23rd, 1838.*

As president of the Catarqui Bridge Co. I have no hesitation in certifying that to the best of my belief the toll contractors must have lost a good deal of money during the hurry and confusion occasioned by the late commotions in the country.

WILLIAM LOGIE,
President, C. B. C.

GEO. ARTHUR,

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR transmits, for the information and consideration of the House of Assembly, several documents relative to the claim which has been preferred by Duncan McGregor, Esquire, the owner of the Steamer "Thames," for a compensation for the loss incurred by him, in consequence of the destruction of that vessel on the 4th of December last by the brigands at Windsor.

*Government House,
8th April, 1839.*

(Copy.)

*Assistant Military Secretary's Office,
Toronto, 4th February, 1839.*

SIR,

I am directed by the Major-General Commanding, to request you will inform His Excellency, the Commander of the Forces, that numerous applications have been made for compensation for the loss of the steamer "Thames" which was burnt on the 4th December last by the brigands when they landed at Windsor, in the Western District.

This vessel had given up plying some time previous to that period, but as it was necessary to transport blankets and provisions for the troops, the owner, Mr. Duncan McGregor unhesitatingly continued her at the disposal of the authorities which prevented her return for the winter to a place of safety in the River Thames.

From this and other circumstances attending the manner in which she was destroyed, Sir George Arthur is inclined to consider Mr. McGregor's claim a strong one, and he would submit for His Excellency's consideration, whether in this particular instance, the funds of the military chest might not be made available for the purpose of enabling Mr. McGregor to repair his loss.

Mr. McGregor who is a most loyal, patriotic and enterprising man, estimates his loss at £4,250 sterling, and in the event of being compensated proposes immediately building a new boat.

This petition is backed in the strongest manner by all the most influential and respectable inhabitants of the Western Frontier, and neighbourhood of Chatham, who view the loss of the boat as a great public calamity, as, to the existence of the "Thames" is mainly to be attributed the prosperity of the town of Chatham in particular.

I have the honour to be, &c.

Head Quarters,
Montreal, 16th February, 1839.

SIR,

Having had the honour to lay before the Commander of the forces, Captain Halkett's letter of the 4th instant, in which he states that numerous applications having been made for compensation for the loss of the steamer "Thames," which vessel was destroyed by the brigands at Windsor, on the 4th of December last, Your Excellency under the circumstances attending the destruction of the "Thames," consider the claim a strong one; and submits for consideration whether in this peculiar instance the funds of the military chest might not be made available for the purpose of enabling the proprietor of the boat to repair his loss. I am directed to acquaint you that the commander of the forces does not think himself authorized to order any sum to be paid from the military chest, as indemnification for the loss of property in these provinces without previously communicating with Her Majesty's Government.

With reference to the letter from the secretary to the treasury, (7th July, 1838,) a copy of which was transmitted to Captain Halkett with my letter of the 29th of September. His Excellency recommends should the Provincial Legislature not provide for the loss sustained by McGregor, that a board of officers shall be assembled at Windsor, or Sandwich, to report upon this claim, and the result of the investigation be forwarded by Your Excellency to the secretary of state for the colonies, for the purpose of being submitted to the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

I have, &amp;c.

Duncan McGregor, owner of the steamer Thames, maketh oath and saith, that he cannot state the exact cost of the said boat, but that she cost three thousand five hundred pounds before she commenced running. No charge for lumber furnished from his mill; teaming of his cattle and provisions being made, and nearly all the proceeds of her first season were expended upon, and that had an account been kept she would have cost upwards of four thousand five hundred pounds currency, and is of opinion that a boat of her dimensions cannot be built for the same at present.

Adverting to that clause in his speech at the opening of the present session of the Provincial Parliament, which refers to "the numerous and pressing claims arising out of the "late disturbances"—the Lieutenant-Governor now transmits to the House of Assembly, statements, with sundry documents connected therewith, of such of those claims as were rejected by the Board of Officers appointed to investigate the same, on the express ground that they did not fall within that class of claims which alone, in the opinion of the Board, could with propriety be satisfied by payment from the Military Chest.

In drawing the attention of the House of Assembly to this subject, the Lieutenant-Governor feels it proper to add, that no examination into the facts alleged by the Claimants, has yet taken place, and consequently, that some previous inquiry into the merits of each particular case, ought to be instituted, on the supposition that the principle should be conceded, that the Provincial Legislature is bound to satisfy such of them as may be founded in truth and justice.

The Honourable JOHN MACAULAY.

Civil Secretary,

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

As part owners of the British Steamboat, Sir Robert Peel, the undersigned Jonas Jones, of the City of Toronto, in the Province of Upper Canada, and David B. O. Ford, of the town of Brockville, in that Province, beg to call the attention of Your Excellency to the late wanton destruction of that steamer, with a view of urging such claim for redress as that extraordinary outrage appears to demand.

The steamer Sir Robert Peel was built at Brockville, in the District of Jownston, and Province of Upper Canada, in the year 1836 and 1837, by the undersigned and the house of Horace Billings, & Co. of Brockville aforesaid, and William Bacon of Ogdensburg, in the State of New York, and at the time of her destruction was owned one fourth part by each of the undersigned, one fourth part by the said William Bacon, and the remaining fourth part by Henry Jones and George Sherwood, both of Brockville aforesaid, and Mr. Ford, one of the undersigned as assignees of the bankrupt estate of the said Horace Billings and Company.

The Sir Robert Peel being fully furnished and equipped, commenced plying regularly upon the opening of the navigation, between Prescott in the District of Johnstown, and Niagara and Lewiston, on the Niagara River, for the peaceable and lawful transport and conveyance of passengers and freight, and in the prosecution of her regular voyages, she usually stopped at an American Island in the River St. Lawrence, called Wells's Island, for the purpose of taking in wood. On the evening of Tuesday, the twenty-ninth day of May last, the Sir Robert Peel left Prescott on her accustomed trip and arrived about midnight at Well's Island, where she came to as usual to take in fuel. While lying at the wharf there, within the territory of the United States, and while the men were engaged in taking in wood, about one or two o'clock in the morning of the thirtieth day of May last she was attacked by a party of twenty or thirty men disguised and armed with muskets and bayonets, pikes and other weapons, who took forcible possession of the Steamer, forced the crew and passengers on shore, cast the boat off from the wharf and anchoring her in the stream plundered the baggage and property on board, set the vessel on fire, and utterly destroyed her with all her furniture, books and papers. For the circumstances attending this aggression your Excellency is referred to the affidavits annexed. This act of violence was committed by persons residing within the State of New York, some of them citizens of the United States and some who had fled from this Province for treasonable offences, but all claiming and enjoying the protection of the laws of the United States; and the expedition to commit the outrage was planned and fitted out in that republic.

The first object of these brigands in attacking and destroying the Sir Robert Peel from their declarations at the time that it was "satisfaction or revenge for the Caroline" seems to have been to avenge the destruction of that piratical Steam-boat, cut out and burned by order of the officer then in command of Her Majesty's troops upon the Niagara Frontier—an act justified and approved of by the Government. A secondary motive appears to have been plunder, and no doubt they hoped that the outrage would widen the breach between Great Britain and the United States, and render a war between the two countries the more probable; an object which all concerned in these border outrages seem most desirous to effect.

Under all these circumstances the undersigned confidently looking to the government for redress of this very serious pecuniary injury, earnestly but very respectfully appeal to your Excellency as the head of the government in this Province to take the matter into your Excellency's consideration, with a view of causing such steps to be taken as may be necessary to procure indemnification to the owners of the Sir Robert Peel for the destruction of their vessel and property.

SIR,

I beg leave through you most respectfully to call the attention of His Excellency the Governor General to the subject of the loss sustained by the passengers and others in consequence of the capture and destruction of the Sir Robert Peel Steamboat within the American territory on the 28th May last.

Soon after the outrage was committed, I as one of the principle sufferers, had communication with several of the proprietors and passengers of the steam-boat on the subject, and it was agreed that in accordance with the terms of the proclamation of their Excellencies the Governor General and Sir George Arthur a statement of the different claims should be forthwith made up and submitted to the American Government, and one of the proprietors of the steamer, Mr. D. B. O. Ford was deputed to proceed to Washington to prefer these claims.

It is hardly to be expected however that they will meet with the necessary share of attention from the American authorities unless the redress promised in the proclamation, already alluded to, is powerfully urged by Her Majesty's Government on behalf of her subjects, who have been the sufferers on that occasion; and it is respectfully to ask whether such reparation or redress has been claimed from the American Government by His Excellency the Governor General, that I now take the liberty of addressing you, or what other proceedings the sufferers are to take to have their wrongs repaired according to the expectations held out to them.

I have included in my claim a sum of money which was under my charge belonging to Mr. D. P. Ross of this city, on the subject of which I understand that gentleman has already petitioned the Governor General.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient Servant,

THE PETITION OF JAMES HOLDITCH, of the Township of Thorold, in the District of Niagara, Yeoman, sheweth :—

That your petitioner was a passenger on board the Steamer "Sir Robert Peel" in the month of May last, when destroyed on her upward trip from Prescott.

That he was then upon his return from England to this province, and had in his possession money and bills to a large amount, to wit: a five hundred pounds of Messrs. Harris Rosdew and Company, bankers in Plymouth, England; a note for one hundred and fifty pounds called an interest note; also two bank of England notes for the sum of five hundred pounds each, payable to bearer; also in cash from twenty to twenty-five pounds.

That your petitioner lost the above property on the occasion referred to, and all his clothing; that he has communicated his loss to the Bankers in Plymouth, from whence he received the Bank of England notes, and inquired of them the numbers, requesting of them to stop those bills if in their power; but they have replied that they are ignorant of the numbers, and being payable to bearer, will not probably come to their notice or possession, and consequently your petitioner is now a loser thereby of the sum of one thousand pounds, and must so remain unless in the power of Your Excellency, or the Provincial Government to make him remuneration; that the five hundred pound note of Messrs. Harris, Rosdew and Company, he has received back through the Executive of this Province.

Your petitioner immediately after the loss, made oath thereto at Kingston, and is prepared to furnish other testimony if necessary.—Requesting Your Excellency will submit this matter to the Executive Council, Provincial Parliament, or Home Government, as you may in your wisdom deem most advisable.

And as in duty bound your petitioner will ever pray.

SIR,

Having had the honor to communicate with you on a former occasion respecting the improvement of the navigation of the White Fish Creek; from your then polite attention to the petition of the inhabitants of this vicinity, I feel emboldened to solicit your advice, as it respects a difficulty (and possible loss) in which I am embarrassed, arising out of the nefarious attack and destruction of the Sir Robert Peel Steamer, last spring.

Having had occasion to forward to the office of the Commissioner of Crown Lands at Toronto, the sum of thirteen pounds fifteen shillings, an instalment due on the price of the west half of lot number thirty-five in the second concession, Township of Matilda; I placed the same in the hands of R. D. Fraser, Esq. Collector of Customs for the port of Brockville, who was (and of which fact I have his certificate to prove) plundered by the brigands or pirates at Wells' Island, at the time of the destruction of the aforesaid Robert Peel, on his way to Toronto.

I should deem it sir as a particular favour, would you inform me whether I am to be a loser of a sum of money forwarded by a public conveyance, and in full faith of the protection of the British Government, and if not so, what steps may be necessary to take on my part to obtain indemnity for the above loss, and by so doing you will add another to the obligations under which you have already laid

Sir,

Your most obedient, and Grateful servant,

SIR,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 25th of last month, yesterday, informing me that by the return of public defaulters, made for His Excellency's information by the Inspector General, it appears that on the receipts of the current year, I would be a defaulter to the public in the amount of £118 12s. 3½d.

I beg leave to assure His Excellency that I am thankful he has given me an opportunity to state upon what grounds I might conceive that measures might not be taken to carry into effect the wishes of the Assembly, in respect to my case, to which unfortunately I have to inform you, for his Excellency's information, that on my passage last May to Toronto, for the purpose of a settlement with the Inspector General, with bank bills to make a payment of £98 6s 10d, together with money and papers to the amount of £125 10s 8d was plundered on board the Sir Robert Peel, at Wells' Island, where she was destroyed and burned by the Pirates—a statement of which I made to the Inspector General, on my arrival at Toronto, also, a full account of my losses, to Mr. Secretary Joseph. I yesterday transmitted to the Inspector General, a return of sums of money paid by me, as Collector, for different services, to the amount of £118 4s. 2½d. which I hope His Excellency may be pleased to take into consideration as to my excuses, and that proceedings may be stayed against me.

I have the honour to be,

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY:

WHEREAS the house of the subscriber, Edward Durham, of the village of Drummondville, in the Township of Stamford, in the County of Lincoln, in the District of Niagara, and Province of Upper Canada, was rented to Her Majesty's Government, for the use of the troops stationed at this place, and that the said house was fitted up by the Engineer Department expressly for the use of the troops; and on the third day of September last the house was cleaned by Her Majesty's troops, who were to move into the same the day following; and between the hours of three and four o'clock, on the morning of the fourth of said month, the house was discovered to be on fire, and was burned to the ground, notwithstanding that every exertion was made by the inhabitants of this village to rescue the building, but all their exertions were of no avail; and your humble subscriber begs to state, that the inhabitants of this village suppose the said house to have been set on fire by some of the rebel party, who, at that period infested this district. May it please Your Excellency if you will have the kindness to take notice of the above statement, and take such measures as to you may seem proper, so that it may be ordered that your humble subscriber may be remunerated for the same, and he as in duty bound will ever pray.

SIR,

The Commissioners under the statute 1st Vic. chap 13, beg leave to submit for the information of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, their Report (in addition to that of the 23rd of February last) embracing the loss sustained by three individuals by the burning of a dwelling house and out-buildings near the Don bridge, on the 7th December, 1837, by the rebels. Enclosed are the claims of Robert Brown of Moore, St. Clair, amount £70 14s. 10d. This claim has it seems been before the Commissariat Board and by them £52 14s. 10d. was not allowed, probably as not coming within their instructions from the Commissary General, the vouchers were, it appears, sent to the gentlemen at the head of that department at this post in April, 1838, and not now to be found in the office, it is supposed they were sent to Quebec by Mr. Wilson with many others of a similar description, so that they cannot at present be exhibited. A small claim for team hire by John Sales, 30s., with the certificate of Colonel Dunlop and Angus McDonald; also, claim by John E. Ebbs, for butter and candles furnished to a corps of militia commanded by Colonel McNab, amount £4 3s. Certified by James Lane of the Commissariat as supplied but not paid.

These claims are sent to you that they may be submitted to the proper Board; Mr. Stanton being of opinion that the Commissioners under Statute 1st Vic. chap. 13, cannot with propriety notice them in any report emanating from their investigation.

Be pleased to acknowledge receipt of these documents.

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H. Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major General Commanding Her Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

The Commissioners appointed under the Statute 1st Victoria chap. 13, to investigate the claims of certain inhabitants of this Province for losses sustained during the late unnatural rebellion, respectfully beg leave to report :

That since their report of 23rd February, 1839, the undermentioned claims have been presented to them for investigation.

No. 9.—JOSEPH STAFFORD,	£	s.	D.

No. 11.—JOHN DETCHMAN,
Household Furniture, Clothing, &c. destroyed in house burned by the rebels,.	60	14	0

Copy of the evidence in support of these claims is annexed to this report for your Excellency's information.

From this evidence it will be seen that the claim of the several parties is founded on the destruction of the house which belonged to one of them, and the loss of property belonging to the others who were living in it at the time of the fire.

The several claims are substantiated by evidence such as the Commissioners consider satisfactory, the value upon the items enumerated being in their opinion just and reasonable. They therefore venture to recommend the claimants as deserving of your Excellency's favorable consideration.

All which is respectfully submitted.

According to deponent's opinion, these buildings might be worth £100 as they stood, including the fencing in front of the house. The stable was a log building, and in good condition, having been built not many years—thinks it was worth about one hundred and fifty dollars.

The Petition of William McMullan Ross, of Rossland, Medonte.

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY:

YOUR PETITIONER well aware of the painful and arduous duties of Your Excellency's high office, during the late eventful crisis, and unwilling to occupy one moment of that time so valuably employed toward the public welfare ; your petitioner at the same time fully sensible of the liberality of the government of his country, begs permission to take the present opportunity (he trusts a favourable one) of making known to Your Excellency the loss he sustained while bearing arms on Her Majesty's service, and praying Your Excellency may have the condescension and consideration to order such loss to be made good.

YOUR EXCELLENCY'S petitioner's brother was one of the many loyal volunteers of this township, who sallied forth at the commencement of the late rebellion, armed with a gun belonging to myself, to meet the enemy, whose near approach was generally anticipated, being met on the Penetanguishine road by the Government supply, himself with others, were requested to exchange arms, the latter being more appropriate for general service ; those belonging to individuals being placed in the cases from whence the others were taken, and left under the anticipation that they would be kept in safe custody ; I am however sorry to add, that he returned from public service without my gun, which was not to be found, notwithstanding all inquiries that have been made, my father having also written to Captain Moberly on the subject at the instant.

The loss although trifling in a national point of view, is severely felt by myself, having frequently to range the bush in quest of strayed cattle, where very often it has been my lot to meet with beast of prey unarmed. If required, witnesses are not wanting to vouch for the veracy of this statement. Trusting your Excellency may pardon any apparent presumption, and that I may be permitted the honour of subscribing myself, with profound respect,

Your Excellency's most dutiful,

Obedient, and devoted Servant,

WILLIAM McMULLIN ROSS.

I certify that the three guns, and the flask and bag, charged above, were taken from William Iredale, soon after the outbreak, by my orders, under the command of Sir Francis Head, and were brought to the Mayor's office, and placed with others taken in like manner, and were afterwards, as I believe, removed either to the Parliament buildings or the garrison. I have no doubt they were of the value above charged.

GEO. ARTHUR,

The Lieutenant-Governor transmits for the consideration of the House of Assembly, a copy of the claim of Mr. Isaac Preston, an inhabitant of Amherst Island, for compensation for the loss and damage sustained by him, in consequence of the attack made upon his house in the month of June last, by a party of brigands or rebels.

This claim having been addressed to the Commissioners appointed under the Act 1st Victoria, ch. 13, has been transmitted by their Chairman to the Lieutenant-Governor, as not coming within the scope of the jurisdiction conferred on the Commissioners by the statute, and is therefore now laid by the Lieutenant-Governor before the House of Assembly.

Government House,

6th May, 1839.

Toronto, 1st May, 1839.

SIR,

The enclosed petition (Isaac Preston, of Amherst Island) came under cover directed to me, Chairman of the Commissioners Board, 1st Victoria, ch. 13; it is altogether different from the subject of inquiry submitted to the Commissioners under that statute; but I hope you will be able to put it in a way to call the attention of the Legislature, where it may probably be favourably dealt with.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your most obedient servant,

ALEXANDER WOOD.

The Honourable JOHN MACAULAY,

Private Secretary, &c. &c. &c.

To the Worshipful the Commissioners appointed by His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, pursuant to the Provincial Statute 1st Victoria, chapter 13, for investigating the Claims of certain inhabitants of this Province, for losses sustained during the late Rebellion.

The Petition of Isaac Preston, of Amherst Island, in the Midland District, Farmer—

MOST RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH:

That your petitioner is a native of Ireland, and served in the 23rd Light Dragoons for many years, and under Sir Edward (then Major) Pakenham; and was discharged at Belfast, in 1802; and emigrated to this Province in 1816; and purchased a farm on Amherst Island, on which he has ever since resided, and brought up a family of six sons—three of whom are settled on farms, and three at home with your petitioner.

That last winter, James, the eldest of his sons residing at home, served as a volunteer in the Lennox Militia, under the command of Colonel Frazer, in the garrison of Kingston, and two of his other sons, as volunteer guards on Amherst Island, on which it was thought an attack would be made by the pirates.

That on the night of the 6th June last, after your petitioner and his family had retired to rest, he heard a knocking at the door, and on inquiring who was there, was answered that they were men on the Queen's duty, and wanted provisions—upon which your petitioner immediately rose and opened the door, when two men, apparently Americans, entered the house, and your petitioner's wife rose to prepare them a meal; and after a short conversation between your petitioner and the two men, the one who appeared to be the leader inquired whether they could not have some provisions to take with them, and on your petitioner replying that they could, the leader ordered the other man to go for a basket; but as he remained absent for a considerable time—from that, and other circumstances, your petitioner became alarmed, and went to the door, and saw a man standing at the end of the house, with a drawn sword, of whom your petitioner inquired what was the matter, and was answered "nothing;" and your petitioner there observed armed men standing at each window, and a boat drawn close up to the shore, under the shade of the fence and some trees, and several men with her.

That your petitioner then returned into the house, and went to the bed on which two of his sons were lying, and whispered to them to rise

That the man who appeared to be the leader of the party, made a spring up at two guns which were hanging from the ceiling. Your petitioner made a rush to prevent him, and your petitioner's son, James, (a carpenter) ran from bed to his assistance, when five of the pirates who had been stationed outside, with the man who had been sent for the basket, entered the house, one of whom fired a pistol, as your petitioner believes, at him—but the ball missed him, and carried away two of the fingers of James' hand—and then fell on petitioner and beat him about the head with the butt end of a pistol, which, from the violence used, was broken to pieces; and after your petitioner was, in consequence of the severe blows he had received about the head, obliged to sit down, they inflicted a severe cut and contusion on his shoulder—the effect of which he still feels, and fears he long will continue to do.

That your petitioner's son David, a youth about sixteen years of age, being awake by the report of the pistol, attempted to rise, but received a severe blow beneath one of his temples, which disabled him from rendering any assistance; and your petitioner believes he will carry the mark during his life.

That two of the rebels then held a brace of pistols to your petitioner's breast, whilst the others plundered the house, and carried away a great quantity of clothing—two watches, belonging to your petitioner's son James—and two guns, one belonging to your petitioner, and the other to his son James—and also broke open a chest, and stole therefrom at least one hundred and seventy-five dollars, in cash and notes, besides private papers of importance.

That at the time the outrage was committed, a friend of your petitioner's, from Kingston, named Robert Johnston, and two young girls, were in the house, exclusive of your petitioner's own family, and on the girls attempting to rise, one of the rebels produced a bowie-knife, and threatened to cut their throats.

That after securing their plunder, the rebels left the house, and committed depredations in the houses of two other families.

That your petitioner immediately sent intelligence to Kingston; and the steam-boat "Commodore," with Assistant Commissary General Clarke, Captain Gordon, Doctor Chisholm, R. A., Lieutenant Taylor, R. N., Alexander Pringle, Esq. J. P. and others, were despatched in search of the rebels, but without success.

That your petitioner, at a low calculation, estimates his loss in money and other property (exclusive of two watches, and a gun belonging to his son James) and medical attendance, at least to sixty pounds.

Your petitioner therefore humbly prays your Worships, by virtue of the authority vested in you by the said Act, to cause the amount to be reimbursed to him, and also to some allowance to be made to him for the personal injury and loss of time he sustained in consequence.

And your petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

SIR,

I have the honor to lay before you certified copies of two affidavits on the subject of persons from the United States purchasing the cattle and hogs in the Midland District for exportation across the lines.

I am also informed that large droves of cattle are passing daily from that District into the States.

The enclosed affidavits are made by Mr. Rourke, the present contractor for fresh meat at Kingston, and Mr. Scobell, a dealer in pork and beef, both respectable persons; and the subject is one of so much interest to the army, and so connected with every military operation, that I trust His Excellency, the commander of the forces, will take it into his prompt consideration, and adopt some measures to restrain a practice so very prejudicial to the interests and well-being both of Her Majesty's service and of both Provinces.

As this complaint is not one of present date, having been carried on during the whole of last Autumn, and being now renewed, the necessity of an early interposition on the part of our government to stop a speculation involving such great consequences, has become most urgent and important.

I have the honour to be,

Brochville, February 24th, 1839.

SIR,

We have to acknowledge the receipt of your reply to a late communication of the Magistrates of this District to His Excellency, stating, "that the subject of it would receive the early attention of His Excellency," the result of which we are anxiously awaiting.

We feel it necessary in the mean time to address His Excellency on a subject which appears to us to be so important, and which is so forcibly pressed upon our notice that we have determined not to delay the communication.

During the winter a number of American speculators have been traversing this District, for the purpose of purchasing cattle.—Many hundreds have been sent across the river, and it is believed that there are now above a hundred in this neighborhood, the owners of which are applying for passes to take them over.

The acting Magistrates met to day, to take the subject into consideration, Colonel Marshall was present. They were unanimously of opinion that under the existing circumstances it was highly inexpedient that the country should be further drained of cattle. That the quantity remaining is far less than is usual, and will be unequal to the demand of our own population; and that in case of war with the United States, it is believed that it would be impossible to obtain a supply for our troops. It will be the more injurious as these speculators are purchasing all the cows they can get, as it is well-known that for some months to come veal is almost the only fresh meat to be procured.

The Magistrates have refused to grant passes till they shall have heard from the head of the government upon the subject, which they will feel obliged by your laying before His Excellency with as little delay as possible.

I have the honour to be.

The question of the propriety of permitting persons from the United States to go into the country upon their various prettexts, was discussed, when the following resolutions were unanimously passed :

Resolved, That the introduction of American dealers and other American travellers through the Province tends much to disturb the peace of the country.

Resolved, That in the present state of the neighbouring country, it is deemed inexpedient and unsafe to permit persons from the United States to pass through the province on any pretence whatever until they shall first obtain the permission of two Magistrates authorizing them to go to some particular place, for some special purpose, to be distinctly expressed, and where reference is to be made to the nearest Magistrate, and to return within a given period.

Resolved, That the Magistrates residing throughout this and the adjoining Districts, be requested to co-operate with their brethren here, in carrying into effect the object of the foregoing resolutions; and that they be recommended to examine into the business and conduct of all strangers who may appear in their respective neighbourhoods; and to see that they are provided with the necessary passes.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this meeting that intercourse between this Province and the United States of America requires to be placed under certain Legislative restrictions; that His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor be humbly requested to recommend the same to the Legislature now in session; and that a copy of the foregoing resolutions be transmitted to him for his consideration.

SIR,

In transmitting to you the enclosed letter from Mr. Harrison, (27th January, 1834) Assistant Secretary to the Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland, complaining that young men holding Diplomas from that body are subjected to disadvantages in Upper Canada, as compared with those who are possessed of London or Scotch Diplomas—I have to request, that you will inform me whether the representations which the Irish College of Surgeons has received, are accurate, in point of fact; and further—that you will furnish me with a statement of the nature and constitution of the Colonial Medical Boards alluded to, as well as with any explanations which you may be able to procure, on the reason of the alleged discrimination, if it really be made, between Surgeons admitted by the College in Dublin, and those admitted by any other British College.

Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland,
27th January, 1834.

SIR,

I am directed by the Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland to entreat your attention to the following circumstance which materially effects the interest and character of that body. Within these few years, some young men who have been educated in surgery and who have received their Diploma from this College, after a solemn public examination have repaired to the British settlements in North America determined there to pursue the practice of their profession. It appears, however, that in some of the towns, especially in York, which is situated in Upper Canada on Lake Ontario, that some resident medical men have established a Medical Board with the view of regulating the practice of medicine and surgery. This Board assumes the right to permit or refuse certain persons to settle as practitioners; they allow those to do so who are possessed of a London or Scotch Diploma in medicine or surgery, but will not allow the holder of one from this College unless he shall submit to an examination by them and pay a certain fee.

The Irish College of Surgeons feel persuaded that the British Government is not aware of this circumstance, and they beg to observe that the system of education they enforce, and the examination they adopt, are superior tests of professional education to those required by the London College of Surgeons or by any of the Scotch Universities; and that the regulation above mentioned is not only derogatory to their character, and injurious to their interests, but it also inflicts an unfair and invidious distinction on those Irish gentlemen who repair to America with their Diplomas. The College do not presume to dictate what course is best to pursue to remedy this obvious inconvenience, but they would venture to suggest that the interposition of the Right Honourable the Secretary for the Colonies would soon have the desired effect of placing all British Diplomas on a perfect equality in all the British Colonies.

I have, &amp;c.

ROBERT HARRISON,

Assistant Secretary.

Right Honourable E. J. LITTLETON,
&c. &c. &c.

(Copy.)

City of Toronto,
May 2nd, 1834.

SIR,

I have the honour to acknowledge your letter of the 29th March last enclosing a copy of the complaint from the Royal College of Surgeons in Dublin, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies against the Medical Board, and requesting them to transmit to His Excellency such observations as they might think necessary to offer on Mr. Harrison's letter.

The Royal College of Surgeons in Dublin charge some resident medical men of this place with arbitrarily establishing a Medical Board and assuming the right to permit or refuse certain persons to settle as practitioners, allowing them to do so who are possessed of a London or Scotch Diploma in medicine or surgery, but disallowing the holder of one from the Dublin College of Surgeons unless he shall submit to an examination by them and pay a certain fee.

This letter, in terms quite unqualified, prefers against certain Medical Practitioners not named, the charge of arrogating to themselves extensive powers, and exercising those assumed powers to make invidious distinctions and exact illegal fees.

By a reference to the Provincial Statute of the 59th year of His late Majesty George the Third, chapter 13, entitled, "An Act to repeal an Act passed in the fifty-fifth year of His Majesty's reign, entitled, 'An Act to license Practitioners in Physic and Surgery throughout this Province,' and to make further provision for licensing such Practitioners," it will be seen that the Lieutenant-Governor is empowered to appoint five or more persons, to be a Board to examine all persons desirous to apply for a license to practice Physic, Surgery and Midwifery, or either of them, and being satisfied by such examination, to certify the same: whereupon the Lieutenant-Governor, being satisfied of the loyalty, integrity, and good morals of such applicant, may grant him a license to practice the same. The third clause of the same Act recites the penalty for non-compliance with the law; and the fourth clause authorizes the fees to be received by the Board, for the examination of the Candidate.

In a statute of the next session, in the same year, viz. the 59th of His late Majesty George the Third, chapter 2nd—by the second clause the Board is authorized to appoint a Secretary, &c.; and in the third clause, the periods for holding the sittings of the Board are directed.

By an Act passed in the eighth year of His late Majesty George the Fourth, chapter 3rd. the second clause enacts, "that upon the application of any person exhibiting a Diploma or License from any University in His Majesty's dominions, or from the Royal College of Physicians or Surgeons of London, as Physician or Surgeon, or a Commission or Warrant as a Physician or Surgeon in His Majesty's Naval or Military services, and producing an affidavit made before any Judge of any District Court in this Province, stating that he is the person named in such Diploma, License, Commission or Warrant, it shall and may be lawful for the Lieutenant-Governor to grant to such applicant a License to practice Physic, Surgery and Midwifery, in this Province.

The Medical Board is at present composed of the following persons:

C. WIDMER, Esq.—M. R. C. S. London; Staff Surgeon, on half-pay, of His Majesty's Forces; and President of the Medical Board.

W. W. BALDWIN, Esq.—M. D. University of Edinburgh.

GRANT POWELL, Esq.—Surgeon, half-pay, late Incorporated Militia of Upper Canada.

R. C. HORNE, Esq.—M. R. C. S. London; late Assistant Surgeon, Glengarry Regiment of Fencible Infantry.

JAMES SAMPSON, Esq.—Late Assistant Surgeon in His Majesty's Forces.

PETER DEHLL, Esq.—M. R. C. S. London.

JOHN KING, Esq.—M. D. University of Edinburgh; M. R. C. S. Edinburgh, and Licentiate of Midwifery, of Dublin.

JOHN ROLPH, Esq.—Of St. John's College, Cambridge; M. R. C. S. London.

G. N. RIDLEY, Esq.—M. R. C. S. London.

S. J. STAFFORD, Esq.—M. R. C. S. London.

CHARLES DUNCOMBE, M. D.

A reference to the above Provincial Statutes will satisfy the Royal College of Surgeons in Dublin, that the Medical men in the City of Toronto, (late York) have not established a Board, but have been erected into a Board by the Executive Government, under the authority of law.

As the Board act in obedience to the laws, those laws must be taken, without regard to any alleged impolicy, to be a sufficient vindication against the charges of usurpation and exaction—charges which, being expressly preferred against medical men, ought not, it is apprehended, to have been entertained and repeated by the College, without that just circumspection comporting with their known dignity and professional urbanity.

From the language of the statutes it is plain, that the rights conferred upon persons holding a Diploma from the Scotch Universities, or from the Royal College of Physicians or Surgeons in London, are not extended to those from the Royal College of Surgeons in Dublin; and it is to be regretted, that any gentlemen admitted by that honourable body should, upon visiting this Province, have unjustly made representations injurious to the character of the Board, the legal constitution and duties of which, were known to the complainants.

It may be here observed, that the statute embraces persons who have taken their degree in Medicine in the University of Dublin; and in like manner, members of the Royal College of Surgeons in Edinburgh are excluded, while Doctors of Medicine from the University are privileged. Ireland and Scotland are therefore placed upon the same footing. The exception in favour of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons in London, is not founded on any presumed right of those bodies to interfere in any manner or degree with the domestic affairs of the Province; and it therefore affords to the Dublin College no ground of complaint which might not be preferred with equal force by all other similarly constituted corporations, in every part of the British Empire.

The reason of this discrimination is not known to the Board. Perhaps it originated merely in the will of the Legislature, which, while they recognized many years ago the expediency of somewhat relaxing the rules of exclusion during the more infant state of the Province—nevertheless, deemed it just to the native youth, not to discourage them, by the further extension of competition from other countries, in which they would not receive a reciprocity of privileges.

The Board are by no means assured, that English and Scotch Surgeons are as cordially received in Ireland as would justify the spirit and language of the letter from the Dublin College.

Attornies from Great Britain and Ireland, are not recognized by the laws of the Province; nor can Barristers from the Sister Colonies be admitted by the Law Society to practice at the Bar, unless corresponding facilities are extended by them to the youth of Upper Canada. No part of the Crown Revenues in the Province have hitherto ever been applied to make provision for medical education; and the Royal Charter and endowment of King's College, granted in 1826, have not yet yielded any practical opportunities of acquiring any of the Professions. Under these circumstances, the youth of the Province are obliged to resort to foreign schools; and after acquiring their profession under severe inconveniences and expenses, it has perhaps been thought not unreasonable, that their Provincial privileges should, to a certain extent, be secured to them.

The Board have no desire to question, by any invidious comparison, the alleged superiority of the tests of professional education required by the Dublin College, to those by the London College of Surgeons, or by any of the Scotch Universities; but it is their duty to bear testimony to the importance of some better proof of professional competency, than the exhibition of a Diploma, and an affidavit that the deponent is the person described in it.

Imposters exhibiting false credentials, have presented themselves to the Executive, and to the Medical Board; and one has even sworn falsely to his identity. The test of an examination at this distance from the Parent State, is the best security against any imposition in which a confiding public are so deeply and vitally interested. If the Dublin College mean to assume, that an examination is unnecessary, they are not borne out by facts occurring here; or if they intend to intimate that it is an indignity, for any stranger desiring to command the professional confidence of this community, to satisfy a legally constituted tribunal of his competency, the Board are at a loss to know of what that indignity consists, either as it regards the Candidate or the Dublin College of Surgeons.

MEMORANDUM.—The petition herein referred to, was not returned to the Government Office.

Toronto, 16th June, 1834.

SIR,

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 12th instant, enclosing the petition of the Medical Students' Society of Toronto, to His Excellency, and acquainting me, with reference to the several past interviews with the Lieutenant-Governor, for the purpose of adopting such measures as might lead to the formation of an institution for the instruction of Medical Students, that His Excellency requested me to confer with the Medical Board on the subject, and report to His Excellency whether I would consent to assist in establishing such an institution, and make arrangements for commencing a course of lectures this season.

In compliance with His Excellency's desire, I have submitted the matter to the Medical Board, and have now the honour of communicating to you, for his information, their views upon the subject.

The Medical Board have also received from the Medical Students' Society, a copy of His Excellency's answer to their memorial; and they fully feel the importance of forwarding, in the most effectual manner, the desire of His Excellency to afford an institution which cannot be longer delayed without manifest injury to the Province.

His Majesty's Government appear to have felt the importance of promoting professional as distinguished from elementary education, by granting the Charter and endowment of the University of King's College, as far back as the year 1826. In this Royal provision, the Board find every thing which is required at once to realize the wishes of His Excellency, and extend all those advantages for acquiring the higher branches of knowledge, for which so earnest an appeal has been made to him. All that appears to be necessary is, the simple act of putting it into beneficial operation.

The Board are not aware of any cause which could, for a moment, justify their forbearing to refer to the University as the only proper and most accessible means of attaining the important objects in view.

The Provincial Legislature, it seems, many years ago, suggested the expediency of making some alterations in the Charter; and this proposition appears, from their Journals, to have been submitted to His Majesty's Government, in a series of resolutions, in the year 1828, and further recognized as unobjectionable by the present Parliament, in its third Session.

Upon the merit of the proposed modification, the Board express no opinion; but the immediate urgency for any such alterations does not appear to have been deemed sufficient to demand, during a period of six or seven years, either their total or partial adoption. No other more precise measure, affecting the terms of the Charter, has since been consummated by the Legislature; and as far as the Board can learn from public documents, this most important Charter has remained unmodified from its date to the present day—while the necessity for such an institution, in whatever degree it existed eight years ago, has increased to such an extent, that the schools in a neighbouring Republic have, during all that period, been engaged in educating, in annually increasing numbers, a very influential and meritorious class of the community—and are acquiring an ascendancy not easily superseded when once established.

Had it ever been the serious intention of His Majesty's Government to modify the Charter in any respects, the Board must assume that the interests of the Province would long since have brought the matter to a final and satisfactory issue; but even if it is supposed to be still contemplated to do something of the kind, its immediate operation to meet existing exigencies cannot, any more than its present state of abeyance, prevent the accomplishment of any amendments.

Had this institution been dispensing its benefits for the last seven years, during which period the fate of the education of hundreds has been irrevocably decided, it would have been equally in His Majesty's power, as it now is, to effect such modifications of the Charter as might be thought proper to meet any reasonable suggestions. An inoperative state cannot be a preservation of a power which must ever exist in His Majesty, and His Legislature, under all stages of the institution, to make any necessary alterations from time to time; and if another seven or eight years are to elapse before the question of amendment is decided, it seems desirable beyond a doubt, that such an institution, so imperatively needed, not for elementary but for professional education, should no longer continue barren.

The Board are at a loss to conceive what possible evil can arise from the operation of the University, under its present constitution, (however susceptible of amendment,) that can admit of comparison with the many and immediate benefits flowing from it throughout the country, in a professional, scientific and literary point of view.

If, from circumstances not within the knowledge of the Board, insuperable impediments really exist to the immediate organization of a Medical Faculty, under the University Charter, and further delays must be incurred for carrying on a transatlantic negotiation, unavoidably protracted, they can see no alternative than to leave things in their present unsatisfactory state. I have felt it my duty most explicitly to put the question to the Board, what assistance would be yielded to an institution, placed on a different foundation, awaiting the contingency of the University going into operation, and the objection to do so, in which I concur, not without sincerely regretting any consequent disappointment to Students, or injury to the Province, is unanimously held by the Board to be insuperable. Even could it be accomplished in this minor way, such a school could not now, or in future, be expected to engage the same talent, or secure the same respect and confidence as the University would properly command.

I have, therefore, the honour of submitting to His Excellency the conclusion of the Board, that as the establishment of a Medical School can no longer be delayed, without manifest injury to the Province, or consistently with the sound policy of Government, that injury can, in their opinion, be best and only corrected by putting into beneficial operation, without further delay, the University of King's College, leaving time to disclose and remedy whatever may be found defective in it.

To the above-mentioned observations I must add, for His Excellency's information, that the earliest public intimation should be given of any such intended School of Medicine, when seriously determined upon, not only for the information of Students, who might otherwise engage in foreign schools for the ensuing season, but to enable those who may be appointed to conduct it, to prepare various indispensable preliminaries, such as anatomical and other preparations, requiring a labour which no one would bestow, and an expense which no one would incur, until every thing was based upon a solid, satisfactory and respectable foundation.

Should this plan meet His Excellency's sanction, the Board will, under his direction, lose no time in satisfying, as far as is practicable, the prayer of the Students' petition, and the expectations conveyed to the petitioners by His Excellency's answer.

I have, &c.

To His Excellency SIR FRANCIS BOND HEAD, Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada.

The Petition of the Medical Students' Society of Toronto—

MOST RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH :

That we; the Medical Students' Society of Toronto, beg leave humbly to request your Excellency, to take into your favourable consideration, the propriety of establishing the Medical Department of the University of King's College in this Province. The Medical Students of this City deeply feel that their interests have hitherto been very much neglected, and they have long been trying to obtain a Medical School in Upper Canada.

They have petitioned His late Excellency Sir John Colborne, more than once, urging him earnestly, though respectfully, to grant them such an institution; and from the last answer he was graciously pleased to direct to them, they had every reason to anticipate that the object for which they had been so long solicitors, was about to be immediately established; but it is with heart-felt sorrow and disappointment that they now find themselves apparently as far off as ever from the attainment of their wishes.

Your Excellency is, no doubt, aware that to obtain a competent knowledge of the profession, it is necessary for a Student to attend regular courses of medical lectures.

Young men of this country are obliged to seek in the Sister Province, or the United States, that instruction which would save them much expense, and be infinitely more gratifying to them could they procure it at home.

Fearing lest this memorial should be drawn out to an unnecessary and tedious length, and being aware that any thing more we could add would only be to repeat what has been already said in former petitions, the Students' Medical Society would respectfully beg leave to refer your Excellency to those alluded to, as also to communications on the same subject, between your Excellency's Predecessor, Sir John Colborne, and the Medical Board of this place.

And your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

1st. Resolved—That by the Charter of the University of King's College, it was intended to provide for "the education and instruction of youth and students in arts and faculties."

2nd. Resolved—That the usefulness of such an institution, in an eminent degree consists of preparing those youths who have already received an elementary education, for the practical discharge of the duties of the learned professions.

3rd. Resolved—That of those professions, the healing art has at all times been justly ranked among the most honourable, the most learned, and the most useful.

4th. Resolved—That the members of the Medical Board have noticed with surprise and regret, that in the composition of the Council of the University of King's College, there is not, since the necessary retirement of Messrs. Powell and Widmer, one member of the Medical Profession to guard and advance its interests, although it is evident that this department will furnish a large proportion of the students at the University, should it be provided with Teachers of acknowledged talent.

SIR,

I have received, and will do myself the honour of laying before the Lieutenant-Governor, certain resolutions passed at a meeting of the members of the Medical Board, on the 10th instant, and transmitted to me for His Excellency's information, in your letter of this morning.

Toronto, 22nd August, 1837.

SIR,

I have the honour to transmit to you, for the information of His Excellency the Chancellor of the University of King's College, a resolution, passed at a meeting of the members of the Medical Board, on the 10th instant.

Resolved—"That the President of the Medical Board be requested to obtain from His Excellency the Chancellor of the University of King's College, U. C. all information respecting arrangements which have been, and are intended to be made, for the organization of the Medical Department."

In performing the duty assigned to me by the foregoing resolution, I am induced to represent to His Excellency, the anxiety with which the Members of the Medical Profession throughout the Province are waiting for the development of an effective plan of medical instruction, for the numerous class of students within it, and how long, from causes perhaps unavoidable, the just claims of these young men to participate in the benefits of the University, have been delayed.

The Medical Board having been in frequent correspondence with His Excellency's predecessor, Sir John Colborne, on the subject of establishing a school of medicine, in anticipation of the operations of the University, I am enabled to state, that Sir John was strongly impressed with the imperious necessity of preventing so many of the youths of the Province from resorting to a foreign country for the means of instruction, where their early political principles were exposed to an influence not likely to prove advantageous to themselves or their country.

Now that the period is at hand, when the most important and beneficial results may be derived from the operations of King's College, it becomes the duty of the Medical Board to afford all the aid which their experience may enable them to give, in furtherance of the completion of such a plan of professional education, as shall insure to the Medical Students of the Province all the advantages that an University can bestow, and that shall be so attractive to the public generally, as to invite not only the Canadian aspirants to professional honours, but the Medical Students of all the North American Provinces, and even of the neighbouring States of the Union.

These results, if an enlarged and liberal course of professional instruction be adopted, will no doubt be realized—for it is a fact, that no University enjoying a desirable celebrity for medical education, exists North of Philadelphia.

It may therefore be reasonably expected, that if the medical faculty of King's College is established on a footing of respectability, it will be thronged with students.

The Members of the Medical Board, I am warranted in declaring, are actuated solely, in this communication to His Excellency the Chancellor, by a desire to obtain such information as may enable them to correct, if necessary, any erroneous views that may be taken by those whose official duty it is become, to make the arrangements for the medical department of King's College.

SIR,

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of yesterday's date, transmitting a copy of a resolution passed at a meeting of the Medical Board, on the 7th instant, and having laid the same before the Lieutenant-Governor, I am directed by His Excellency to refer you to a letter, which, on the 26th August, I had the honour, by His Excellency's commands, to address to the President of the Medical Board, expressing His Excellency's readiness, at all times, to communicate to the President any information which may be desired respecting such arrangements as may have been made by the King's College Council, for the organization of the Medical Department; His Excellency, however, is not aware that any arrangements for that object have yet been made.

His Excellency further directs me to state, that any information or suggestions which the Medical Board may deem it desirable to lay before him, he will receive with attentive consideration, and will lose no time in communicating to the College Council.

I have, &c.

Toronto, 13th November, 1837.

SIR,

AT a special meeting of the members of the Medical Board, convened by the President, on the 2nd instant—

PRESENT:

THE PRESIDENT,

DOCTORS BALDWIN,
DEIHL,
KING,

DOCTORS ROLPH,
HORNBY, and MORRISON.

Dr. KING informed the members present, that His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, (through his Secretary,) requested the attendance of the President (Dr. Widmer) and himself at Government House; that they accordingly had the honour of waiting on His Excellency, and during their interview, His Excellency was pleased to say, that "if the Medical Board could make out a case sufficiently strong to convince him of the necessity of establishing at once a Medical Faculty in King's College, he would take the matter into his consideration."

I have the honour, by order of the Board, to enclose you, for the information of His Excellency the Chancellor, "a case" (representing the present state of the Medical profession in this Province, with their claims, &c. &c.) which was unanimously agreed upon in behalf of the Board, by the members present.

I have, &c.

(Signed) FREDERICK WILKINSON,
Secretary.

JOHN JOSEPH, Esquire,

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY:

IN answer to their communication of the 7th October, the Medical Board have been honoured by a reply through your Excellency's Secretary, repeating the assurance of your willingness to receive their suggestions on the subject of a Medical Faculty to be formed in the new University of King's College. The Board will not doubt this willingness: not only in respect of your Excellency's assurances, but also because the matter of this correspondence is of deep public interest. Under these circumstances, and as incidental to the duty of a public body, invested by the law of the Province during its infancy (as it were) with the guardianship of the medical profession and practice, the Medical Board feel themselves imperiously called on to repeat to your Excellency, but with some amplification, their views on the subject.

In the first place, therefore, premising, with due deference to your Excellency, that however education and professional reputation might naturally (and without call for apology) induce the Board to hope, that in the appointment of some of its members to Professorships in the medical department in this University, to your Excellency, as Chancellor, would have been conceded the opportunity of giving some worthy testimonial of public gratitude to those gentlemen who not only discharged the duties of the Board, consisting of minute, scientific and practical examinations of medical candidates, and occupying a large portion of valuable time, without any adequate remuneration, but who also most humanely and gratuitously, attended the General Hospital in this City, it may be said from its very foundation to the present moment; yet as no suggestion of this nature appeared in the previous communications of the Board with your Excellency, it is with some degree of surprise that they now have occasion to observe themselves called upon "to make out a case sufficiently strong to convince your Excellency of the necessity of establishing at once the Medical Faculty in King's College," as if private interest alone dictated their interference. The Board trust this could not have been so meant, inasmuch as no case can be offered to your Excellency but that of the public interests of the community throughout the Province—without exception of persons, place, condition of life, religion or politics; the people of the Province, like mankind generally, are subject to all the variety of disease, accident and their consequences—all in their turn receive their share of pain and anguish, to assuage or remove which is the object of the Physicians and Surgeons united science and skill: and thus it is, that if there be any one object of human knowledge of more importance to society than another, it is that of the healing art. The Board mean not to deny the value of moral and religious instruction, nor to take from general science its just praise; but being called on "to make out a case," the Board are constrained to bring before your Excellency's consideration, the relative position which the wants of the public give to the respective departments of education, at the promised University—the means of which, at present, (as it is said) are unequal to the complete organization of the whole.

The prior claim of a Medical Department, rests not merely on the general interests of the community, as before very briefly mentioned, but on many other circumstances, of which the following should fairly be weighed with it:

First.—That the moral education of youth—always in a large degree supplied by the care which parents most generally feel and take in the direction of their children's principles and conduct—is further promoted by the religious supervision and preaching of the numerous Pastors chosen or appointed to the various congregations of christians throughout the Province: to which may be added, that the prosperous progress of the Upper Canada College, and (as it may be hoped) the improving course of the District and Common Schools—all conspire, not only to enlarge the sphere of moral and religious education, but also lay a very favourable foundation for literature. The profession of the law, too, is largely provided for; and thus, while morals, religion, literature, and even law, are greatly, if not adequately provided for, medical education may be said to be totally disregarded in this Province. Some medical gentlemen, (to their honour be it mentioned) do give instruction to their own pupils—yet, they feel and complain of the deficiency of adequate means—means beyond their reach, and which nothing can supply but the appropriate institution of a University.

Secondly.—The rising youth whose parents are able and desirous of devoting their sons to this useful and honourable profession, are debarred by the apprehension of sacrificing their time and talents to a pursuit, for the honours of which they cannot be fitted within the Province. Some, therefore, have been sent to Great Britain and Lower Canada, many to Philadelphia, New York, Fairfield, and other Colleges of the neighbouring States, there to procure even partially, what is denied them here altogether; and from these seminaries they often return unqualified; how greivous then is the injustice to them and their parents, in the unavoidable rejection to which they are often exposed in their examination before the Medical Board—rejections very seldom induced by want of talent or assiduity, but by the lamentable want of some Collegiate Institution suited to the great object of Medical Science. Well may these Candidates say of the Board—"it is cruel to reject us for ignorance, when you supply us not with the sources of knowledge"—to which the Board can as well reply—"the law has imposed upon us (till better establishments be formed) the duty of protecting the lives and health of the public from the desolation and plunder of empiricism—and this can only be done by rejecting at the Board all the unqualified." So sensible of this was your Excellency's predecessor, Sir John Colborne, that he frequently called upon the Board to attend him in consultations on the subject; and more than once, on these occasions, assured the Board, that "he saw that a Medical School could not be delayed, without manifest injury to the Province," and intimated frequently his readiness to appoint professors immediately—but the confirmation of the Charter having been suspended, for causes not here necessary to be alluded to, he was unable to carry his intentions into effect.

Thirdly.—With a view to the private hopes and interests of the Medical Students, it is fair to state, that the establishment of a medical faculty in an University in this Province, would afford the students of physic the great advantage of allowance of time in foreign Universities—not only in England, but on the continent of Europe, where very probably, most of those who could afford the expense, would wish to resort for one or two years, though unwilling to subject their parents to the expense of an entire education abroad. One or two years study in those Universities, where numerous hospitals, attended by the most eminent men of the profession, afford a source of instruction unattainable on this side of the atlantic: this advantage the student cannot obtain by attending on mere lectures, however able to instruct.

The Medical Board cannot think it necessary to spread before your Excellency any further, the circumstances of interest and importance that envelope the consideration of this subject: and yet after all, notwithstanding the public demand for a Medical School, in a Provincial University—notwithstanding the lively hopes of students and parents, in the public announcement of King's College Charter—notwithstanding the late Lieutenant Governor's conviction of the necessity, and his approbation of a prompt establishment of an adequate medical school—(this Board forbearing to express the extent of their surprise)—fear they discover an intention of postponing this necessary department of the University, to objects of minor importance—or if not of minor importance, at least of far less urgency, as to priority of commencement: and as called upon "to make out a case," the Board take the liberty, for your Excellency's information, of adverting to a printed paper which appeared about April last, purporting to be a plan or arrangement of the several departments of science of King's College; shortly, however, after its appearance, it was mentioned, with some sort of mysterious reserve, amongst those who ventured to speak of it, that it was to undergo some new modification;—the Board therefore, on the occasion of requesting your Excellency, as Chancellor, to inform them of the arrangements, if any had been made, forebore every allusion to that paper, as obviously just towards the College authorities. To this hour, nevertheless, the Medical Board are uninformed of any determinate plan adopted, or to be adopted, by the College Council, as regards a medical faculty therein; and it is therefore still left to the Board to ask your Excellency, as Chancellor, if it be possible that nothing is as yet done! In the mean time, while uninformed, in order to make out the case required, the Board can only revert to the printed paper before mentioned, by which it would appear to have been proposed, that Professorships or Lectureships should be established in the following branches of literature and science, viz.:

- 1st.—In classical and modern literature—Two Professors.
- 2nd.—In physic,.....Two do.
- 3rd.—In mental philosophy, .....One do. (the President.)
- 4th.—In theology,.....In abeyance.
- 5th.—In jurisprudence,.....One Lecturer—no Professor.
- 6th.—In medicine,.....One Professor—(of chemistry, subservient to other departments as well as medicine)—and three Lecturers.

Thus the medical department, last, as least, in the estimation of this extraordinary proposal, was to be all concentrated in one chair, to be filled by a professor of chemistry, (subservient to other objects as well as medicine) furnished, as it were, with out-door servants, under the application of lecturers. How does it happen, that thus in Upper Canada, medical science, of such universal interest, that every individual of the community must experience its bane or blessing, according to its barbarism or its culture, should be so degraded, and the tenderest sympathies of human nature so outraged;—a professor of chemistry, forsooth!!! with out-door lecturers in medicine, surgery and anatomy. Your Excellency surely knows, that a professor of chemistry may be very little versant in the most necessary branches of medicine—nay, if the professor be a chemist worthy of the chair, it is next to impossible that he should be capable of communicating medical instruction.—This, it may be answered, is not intended—if so, then it remains manifest that the object of the arrangement in the printed paper was, to exclude a medical professor from the College Council.* Now then, it may be asked—can it be possible for a Council, composed of men altogether ignorant of medicine, and its manifold scientific subdivisions, to make suitable arrangements for medical classes, or distribute the courses between the lecturers. Moreover, first attempts will unavoidably be found more or less faulty: time only can mature a smooth working of the whole;—during such time, who are to direct the out-door servants?—the printed paper, in effect, answers, men ignorant of the work in their servants hands. What dissatisfaction may be anticipated to arise between masters and servants, the Council and Lecturers!—what disgust with the pupils!—what despair with parents!—finally, what degradation will await this highly necessary and honourable profession, by such ill-judged measures. If there be at present in the Province, any gentleman legitimately honoured with the profession, and fitted for the task, willing to accept the office of out-door lecturer, the Board can only regret it for the sake of the profession, and the public at large. Very true it is, that most of the large cities having Universities, have also independent lecturers, highly learned and honourable men, and deriving an honourable reward from their useful labours; but these learned men, however able and worthy, cannot confer the honours nor the privileges of a faculty in an University. Finally, the Board respectfully beg leave to urge upon your Excellency's consideration, as * See Note in the Appendix.

Chancellor, the crying wants of the Province, and paramount importance of making the medical faculty a prominent feature of King's College, at its very commencement;—such a faculty cannot well be imagined to exist, or be formed, with less than six professors. The Board suggest the following :

1st.—Anatomy.

2nd.—Materia Medica and Pharmacy.

3rd.—Practice of Physic, and Medical Pathology.

4th.—Chemistry.

5th.—Principles and practice of Surgery, and Surgical Pathology.

6th.—Midwifery, and Diseases of Women and Children.

Those six may be considered the most necessary to be at once established ; and it will also be necessary for each of these professors to lecture on one or other of the following subjects, until the University should afford the expense of separate professorships therein, that is to say—

Botany,
Institutes of Medicine,
Medical Jurisprudence,
Natural History,
Clinical Medicine, and Clinical Surgery.

Of the professors forming the faculty of Medicine in the University, two at least, should belong to the College Council—where their presence, and a knowledge of their proper duties, will enable the Council safely to devise and arrange all matters connected with the interests of the medical school.

It is very far from the intention of the Medical Board, to recommend to your Excellency's consideration any thing unreasonable or impracticable;—if the funds at present at the disposal of the College Council require a narrower sphere in the commencement of the institution, surely the requisite contraction should not be such as totally to exclude the profession most required by the community.

With a view to the narrow finances of the King's College, the Board respectfully submit to your Excellency, that there can be no reasonable objection raised to the hiring of apartments in the City, for the delivery of medical lectures;—this course is frequently taken in the Universities of Europe, as your Excellency, without doubt, well knows: and even in Dublin at this day, the University affords accommodation only to three of the medical professors—the others lecture in Sir Patrick Dunn's Hospital.

Before closing the case to your Excellency, the Board have directed an examination of their records to be made, as to the number of Medical Candidates presenting themselves for admission, and the proportion rejected for the causes above explained; and by this it appears, since the year 1830, down to the last term, inclusive of both, the number presenting themselves was 164, of whom 64 were rejected—for a detail of which, the Board respectfully refer your Excellency to the statement in the appendix annexed, No. 2. Thus your Excellency will be enabled, in some degree, to measure the magnitude of the evil inflicted on the students, and the still more painful evil on the community at large, by admission of Candidates but partially educated.

Trusting that they have sufficiently, if not as amply as the subject admits, made out the case required, the Medical Board have the honour to submit this their view of it to your Excellency's consideration; and the members present, on behalf of the Board, beg leave to subscribe themselves—

17th November, 1837.

SIR,

I am commanded by the Lieutenant-Governor to inform you, that he has read with attention the report, dated 10th instant, which has been addressed to him by the Medical Board, in which it is stated—"that it is with some degree of surprise that they now have occasion to observe themselves called upon to make out a case sufficiently strong to convince your Excellency of the necessity of establishing at once the Medical Faculty in King's College, as if private interest alone dictated their interference."

As the assertion by the Medical Board of its having been, by the Lieutenant-Governor, "called upon to make out a case," is several times repeated throughout the report, His Excellency feels it necessary to inform the Board, that in a conversation which he had occasion to hold with Dr. Widmer and Dr. King, he assured those gentlemen how completely he concurred with them in the propriety of giving every proper encouragement to Medical Science in this Province—that he was desirous to do so with as little delay as possible; at the same time His Excellency observed, that it might be questionable whether it would not be for the interests of the Medical Faculty, that it should delay commencing its operations until the other branches of the University were prepared to support it.

His Excellency, however, observed to Dr. Widmer and Dr. King, that he was quite disposed to bring before the College Council any arguments in favour of their object, which the Medical Board might deem it advisable, in writing, to submit to him; and His Excellency added, that if the Medical Board should succeed in making out their case, he could assure them it should be taken into serious consideration.

The Lieutenant-Governor has now received the report of the Board, coupled, His Excellency regrets to observe, with animadversions on His Excellency's intentions, which he desires me to inform you, he cannot, in justice to himself, think of submitting for the consideration of the College Council.

His Excellency, however, desires me to inform you, that should the scientific matter of the report be divested of the uncalled-for observations, to which I have alluded, His Excellency will be happy to bring the suggestions of the Medical Board under the immediate consideration of the College Council.

SIR,

I have had the honour of receiving your letter of the 17th instant, which was laid before a meeting of the members of the Medical Board, held this day; and I am directed, in reply thereto, to transmit the enclosed resolution of the Board, for the information of His Excellency the Chancellor of the University of King's College.

Resolved—That after His Excellency the Chancellor of King's College had been pleased to intimate to Dr. Widmer and Dr. King, that if the Medical Board should succeed in making out their case, he could assure them it should be taken into serious consideration; the Medical Board proceeded to the execution of that duty, by their communication of the 12th November, and should they in doing so, have used any expressions, which, most contrary to their intentions, may admit of a construction they cannot themselves discover implying animadversions on His Excellency's intentions, they trust the public interests will not be allowed to suffer from such inadvertency.

MESSAGE FROM LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR,

WITH

MEMORIAL FROM MR. B. TURQUAND.

GEO. ARTHUR.

The Lieutenant-Governor transmits to the House of Assembly the accompanying copy of a Memorial, addressed to him by Mr. B. Turquand, Senior Clerk in the office of the Receiver General, and a Minute of the Executive Council thereon, the subject matter of which he recommends to the consideration of the House.

Government House,
20th March, 1839.

(Copy.)

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H. Lieutenant Governor of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

IN COUNCIL.

The Memorial of Bernard Turquand, Senior Clerk in the Receiver General's Department—
HUMBLY SHEWETH:

That by several Acts of the Provincial Legislature, authorising the raising of monies by Debenture, in this Province, it is provided, that the Clerks in the Receiver General's office shall be remunerated, from time to time, for their labour, in the performance of these services, and in paying the interest on the same, in the words following, viz:

“And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Receiver General of this Province, and the person or persons necessarily employed under him in the execution of this Act, shall severally have and receive such rewards and allowances as the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, or person administering the Government of this Province, and the Executive Council thereof, shall adjudge to be reasonable, and shall direct to be allowed to them, for their respective services in the execution of this Act, and that the same shall be paid in discharge of such warrant or warrants as the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, or person administering the Government of this Province, shall from time to time issue for that purpose.”
Vide 2nd. Geo. IV. chap. 5, and subsequent Acts.

That agreeably thereto, the Gentlemen at that time in the Receiver General's office did receive an extra allowance.

That in most of the Acts since passed for similar purposes, the like provision has been made.

That since the year 1828, the period when your Memorialist joined this department, very many and large sums have been raised, and are still under negotiation—which, together with the periodical payment of interest accruing thereon—the peculiar and complicated manner in which the payment of such interest is directed to be made, and the necessary concurrent accounts, forms a heavy portion of the duties of the office, independent of the extra labour out of office hours, devolving upon your Memorialist.

That notwithstanding the above-mentioned Legislative considerations, your Memorialist has not as yet received any remuneration or allowance whatever, in relation thereto.

That your Memorialist has a third time had charge, and has conducted the business of the Department, during the Receiver General's absence in England, under a responsibility of no ordinary magnitude. On the late occasion, particularly, his labours were increased in an unprecedented degree, by the changes of the Clerks in the office, and the introduction of gentlemen comparatively strangers to, and as yet, of necessity, unacquainted with the ordinary routine business of the Department—differing from almost every other under this Government,—whereby an onerous and heavy duty devolved upon your Memorialist, whose unremitting exertions and anxiety in its accomplishment, and extra labours in negotiating exchanges and sales of Debentures, with very little assistance, and at a time of extraordinary difficulty and embarrassment—and the large sums of money constantly passing through his hands in various ways, amounting, together with the ordinary receipts and expenditure for the public service, to upwards of £600,000 on that occasion—will at once, your Memorialist humbly conceives, be conceded as an arduous, responsible, and difficult task;—nor can he hesitate to conclude, that when your Excellency shall be acquainted with these facts, (corroborated, as he feels confident they will be, by the head of the Department, to whom your Memorialist most respectfully begs leave to refer) his services will be fairly and deservedly appreciated and rewarded.

That during the absence of the late Inspector General, his then Senior Clerk obtained a handsome gratuity; and in that of the late Surveyor General, Mr. Hurd, the Senior Clerk enjoyed the salary and emoluments of acting head of his Department.—But, with the exception of a small gratuity presented him through the kindness of the Honourable Mr. Dunn, for some private transactions on a former occasion, your Memorialist has derived no benefit or emoluments, either directly or indirectly, for the performance of his extra services.

Your memorialist is furthermore an old public servant, of nearly thirty years standing; and among the many reasons he might adduce for intruding upon your Excellency, he trusts that your Excellency will pardon his adverting to the great difficulty he experiences in supporting himself, and a numerous family, on his present income, with that decency and respectability expected from his situation, and standing in society.

Your memorialist, therefore, humbly prays that your Excellency will be graciously pleased to extend to him the benefit of the provisions of the several Acts of the Provincial Legislature, or in such way as your Excellency may deem proper, to grant him remuneration for extra services, in the performance of his unremittingly severe and arduous duties, as Senior Clerk in the Receiver-General's Office.

And as in duty bound, will ever pray.

(Signed), B. TURQUAND,

Senior Clerk,
Receiver General's Office.

Toronto, 4th September, 1838.

In Council, 10th January, 1839.

THE Council, on considering this application, are of opinion, that the petitioner is fairly entitled to remuneration; but as this has not been given in the respective years in which the petitioner performed the extra duties, the Council respectfully are of opinion, that the matter should be referred to Parliament, with a recommendation in favour of petitioner.

In bringing under the notice of the House of Assembly, the accompanying memorial from Charles C. Small, Esquire, Clerk of the Crown and Pleas, relative to his claim to the salary of £100 per annum, for a considerable period in arrear, together with the copy of a correspondence between that gentleman and the Private Secretary on the same subject, the Lieutenant-Governor feels assured that the House will form such a decision on Mr. Small's claim, as may be consistent with the true merits of the case.

I have the honour of enclosing to you, a copy of my memorial, and correspondence between the Executive and myself relative thereto, and beg that you will ask His Excellency if he will be pleased to authorise the same to be laid before the Legislature, with such remarks as His Excellency may think expedient, upon the justice of my claim for the arrears of salary.

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, Knight Commander of the Royal Hanoverian Guelphic Order, Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, Major-General Commanding Her Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

THE memorial of Charles C. Small, Clerk of the Crown and Pleas, in and for the Province of Upper Canada,

HUMBLY SHEWETH :

THAT His most gracious Majesty George the Fourth, was pleased to confer upon your memorialst, in 1825, the Office of Clerk of the Crown and Pleas, with all the rights, profits and emoluments, thereunto belonging; which office was created upon the division of the Province of Quebec, and enjoyed by the predecessors of your memorialst, up to the time of his appointment. That a salary of £100, sterling, per annum, was attached to the office at its creation, and provided for by an annual vote of the Imperial Parliament, and paid through the Lords of the Treasury, until the close of the year 1827, when by an order from home, the salary of your memorialst, together with that of other officers of the Provincial Government, was directed to be paid in this Province, by warrant from the Lieutenant-Governor upon the Receiver-General, from a fund created by the sale of Crown Lands to the Canada Company, known as account D.—which order bears date the 31st August, 1827. That in obedience to this order, your memorialst was regularly paid by warrant from the Lieutenant-Governor half-yearly, up to the year 1830. That for the year 1830 and 1831, your memorialst received his warrant for his usual salary upon a different fund, without, as he has every reason to believe, any authority from the Home Government for transferring the payment from the Canada Company fund or account D.; the fund from which your memorialst was thus paid for the two years last-mentioned, appears to have been created under authority of the 14th Geo. III. which was surrendered to the Provincial Legislature in March, 1831, upon provision being made for a Civil List within the Province. Upon this occasion, the Provincial Legislature left your memorialst, with other officers of the Government, unprovided for—since which your memorialst has ceased to receive his salary, notwithstanding your Excellency's Predecessor continued to authorise an estimate for such salary to be laid before the Legislature, to within the last two years, when it was discontinued, under the impression, as your memorialst has been given to understand, of the hopelessness of the application. Your memorialst, not being aware that there is any order from the Home Government to withhold his salary, or any authority for transferring the payment of it from the Canada Company fund, respectfully prays that your Excellency will be pleased to cause an investigation to be made into the justness of your memorialst's claim to the payment of his said salary, so withheld from him since 1831; and should your memorialst's claim prove, upon investigation, to be founded upon justice and equity, as your memorialst feels confident it must, that your Excellency will be pleased to order the same to be paid accordingly.

And your memorialst, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

(Signed) C. C. SMALL.

Toronto, 20th February, 1839.

SIR,

I have the honour to request, that you will be pleased to call the attention of His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, to a memorial that I had the honour of transmitting to him last summer, upon the subject of my salary as Clerk of the Crown. In doing so, I trust I shall not be considered pertinacious, after having been deprived of it for seven years, while positive instructions from the Lords of Her Majesty's Treasury exist for its payment, dated 31st August, 1827; the disturbed state of the Province during the past year, has alone been the cause of my not calling His Excellency's attention earlier to the subject, and I am ready to admit has likewise been the cause of His Excellency not having brought the matter under his consideration.

The loss of time that has ensued since my salary was first so unjustly withheld, cannot be brought forward or urged as a reason for my not receiving the arrears due to me; nothing has been wanting on my part in bringing the matter before the Government—as will appear by Lord Glenelg's Despatch, (No. 55,) bearing date 31st October, 1835, to His Excellency's Predecessor.

722 Memorial, &c. from C. C. Small, Esq. [4th Sess. 13th Parl.

After having discharged the duties of my office for fourteen years, I am not aware that I have been guilty of any dereliction of duty, to warrant the withholding that remuneration which my Sovereign was most graciously pleased to bestow upon me.

I therefore most respectfully beg, that His Excellency will be pleased to take the prayer of my memorial into his earliest consideration.

I have the honour to be,

Government House,
26th February, 1839.

SIR,

HAVING laid before the Lieutenant-Governor, your letter of the 20th instant, with reference to your memorial of last summer, I am directed by His Excellency to acquaint you, that he regrets to find it is not in his power to authorise payment of the salary claimed by you, but that it will afford him great pleasure to give his assent to any measure which the Legislature may deem it proper to adopt for your relief.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your most obedient,

Humble Servant,

(Signed) JOHN MACAULAY.

C. C. SMALL, Esquire,
Clerk of the Crown.

Toronto, 1st March, 1839.

SIR,

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your favour of the 26th ult, in answer to my communication of the 20th, upon the subject of my Memorial of last summer, wherein you state—"I am directed by His Excellency to acquaint you, that he regrets to find it is not in his power to authorize payment of the salary claimed by you, &c." In answer, I beg leave to submit, that the salary of £100 sterling, to the Clerk of the Crown and Pleas, which was withheld from me by the Colonial Government in 1832, was granted by the Home Government to, and enjoyed by my predecessors and myself, from the formation of the office up to the last-named period, without any reference to the Colonial Legislature; and as no arrangement has as yet been made with that body, for the surrender to their controul of the Casual and Territorial Revenue, I respectfully request to be made acquainted with the grounds upon which the ordinary salary attached to my office has been ordered to be withheld, until the Provincial Legislature shall think proper to make the necessary provision for its disbursement.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your most obedient,

Humble Servant,

(Signed) C. C. SMALL.

To The Honourable JOHN MACAULAY,
Private Secretary.

*Government House,
26th March, 1839.*

SIR,

I have laid before the Lieutenant-Governor your letter of the 1st instant, relative to your claim for arrears of salary, as Clerk of the Crown and Pleas.

His Excellency has inquired, and duly considered your case, and the correspondence which has heretofore taken place between the Imperial and Local Governments, respecting the salaries of the Civil Officers, which the House of Assembly declined to make provision for in the grant for the Civil List in 1831, and also subsequently: and His Excellency commands me to inform you, that he finds there are no funds at his disposal, which he is at liberty to apply to the payment of your salary, in the absence of any instruction or authority, either from the Secretary of State or the Legislature, and that he can only therefore assure you, that it will afford him great pleasure to give his assent to any measure which the Legislature may think proper to adopt for your relief—that being the source, under existing circumstances, from which alone you have to expect any effective consideration of your claim.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your most obedient,

Humble Servant,

(Signed) JOHN MACAULAY.

MESSAGE FROM LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR,

WITH

COMMUNICATION FROM PROVINCIAL SECRETARY.

GEO. ARTHUR.

In transmitting to the House of Assembly, the copy of a letter from the Provincial Secretary, (9th November, 1838,) relative to the danger, from fire, to which the records and other muniments of his Office are at present exposed, together with the copy of a Minute of the Executive Council thereon, the Lieutenant-Governor deems it necessary to draw the early attention of the House to the important subject of this communication.

Government House,
30th March, 1839.

(Copy.)

*Provincial Secretary's Office,
Toronto, 9th November, 1838.*

SIR,

ON assuming the charge of this Office, I found the business of it, as far as I am yet capable of judging, in a state very creditable to the memory of my predecessor, and to the industry and ability of all the gentlemen belonging to the department.

There is, however, one obvious defect in the Office itself—the consequences of which may be highly injurious to the public interest—which I therefore deem it my duty to bring under your Excellency's early and serious consideration: I allude to the entire absence of protection, from fire, for the numerous and important records which are now deposited in it.

For the prevention of the evil naturally to be apprehended from this circumstance, I would most respectfully suggest the propriety of the construction of fire-proof vaults, on an adequate scale—or the completion of a duplicate set of records, to be kept in a place so remote from this building as to render it extremely improbable that both sets can ever be consumed by the same conflagration.

I am perfectly aware, that either of the measures here proposed would be attended with a good deal of expense; and I am conscious that the latter, which seems to me in some respects the preferable one, as offering greater security than the other, would prove by far the most onerous of the two: since the expense of transcribing the existing records, already amounting to 160 folio volumes, would not only be considerable, but as the future business of the Office would be nearly doubled by such an arrangement, the necessity for a permanent increase to the number of Clerks in the same proportion, would also be created.

When the magnitude of the object, however, which is nothing less than the preservation of all the State Documents, and of most of the muniments of title to property in the Province, shall be taken into the account, it will, I think, be a self-evident proposition, that no expense which is indispensably necessary to the attainment of that object, ought to be declined; and should your Excellency still feel yourself restrained from making such an addition to the public expenditure, without the previous concurrence of the other branches of the Legislature, you will yet, I trust, be pleased to avail yourself of some favourable opportunity of directing their notice to a subject which certainly ranks very high in its relation to the public weal.

Of its vast importance, I am myself so deeply sensible, that in the too possible event of the destruction of the Provincial Records by fire, I should hold myself excessively culpable in not having pointed out, on the earliest occasion that presented itself, some more effectual precautions against such a fatal contingency, than any that now exist; and I entreat your Excellency to believe, that it is this feeling alone which has prompted me to trouble you at a moment when your mind is so fully and so painfully occupied with matters involving the security of the country, with the present representation.

I have, &amp;c.

(Signed) R. A. TUCKER.

His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K. C. H.

THE Executive Council respectfully recommend that the within matter be laid before the Legislature, with a favourable recommendation from your Excellency.

MESSAGE FROM LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR,

With Letters from the Receiver-General, and Messrs. Baring, Brothers & Co.

ON PROVINCIAL DEBENTURES.

GEO. ARTHUR.

THE Lieutenant-Governor transmits for the information of the House of Assembly, the copy of a letter from the Receiver General, (28th February, 1839) accompanied by copies of two communications from the House of Baring, Brothers & Co. (29th September, 1838—19th January, 1839) reporting the sale in the London market, of certain debentures of this Province, at a depreciated price.

Receiver General's Office,
Toronto, 28th February, 1839.

SIR,

I have the honour to report, for the information of His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, that on the 23rd of October, 1837, under the authority of an Order in Council, dated the 3rd of same month, I transmitted for the use of various works authorised by the Legislature, to Messrs Baring, Brothers & Co. Debentures amounting to £60,000, Sterling, which were intended to be sold and drawn for by me as the necessities of these works might require; at the same time, Acts of the Legislature were furnished to this house, which confined the sale of Debentures at par, and in consequence of which they could not then be disposed of—since which period, the credit of Upper Canada Debentures, arising from causes well known to you, have been declining in value.

I received some time since a letter from Messrs. Baring, Brothers & Co. acquainting me that they had sold a portion of these Debentures at 95 per cent, and by the last arrivals I received accounts of a further sale at 91 per cent, (of which advices the duplicates are herewith transmitted); although, in fact, these sales would realize more than selling Debentures in Upper Canada at par—yet as I conceive it to be a violation of the law, I consider it my duty to report the circumstance to His Excellency, and beg to be informed whether any steps should be adopted to prevent any further disposition of the balance of Debentures remaining in their hands.

I have the honour to be, &c.

The Honourable JOHN H. DUNN,
H. M. Receiver General,

SIR,

We beg to inform you that we have disposed of £300 Canada 5 per cent. Debentures, a 92 per cent. with dividend from 1st January, .....

We are, &amp;c.

30th March, 1839.

Referring to the above duplicate of the 22nd instant, we have only to add, that the late accounts from the State of Maine have completely checked in almost all American securities; and the Canadian Debentures, which have been long neglected, have fallen to 90 per cent.—at which price there is no demand. We observed with satisfaction, from your Governor's last speech to the Provincial Parliament, that the objectionable mode of issuing and selling the debentures in the Province has ceased, and we trust will not again be resorted to. They were afterwards always forced off in this market, which lowered the price, and interfered with the sales by us for account of the Government, and also led people to imagine that the issues would be continued without limit. We trust also, that in this session no further bills for creation of debentures will be passed, if speedy sales are reckoned on. We are anxious to do the best for the Government, and have delayed covering ourselves for our present advances of about £10,000, by forced sales of debentures, as we conceived such a course would be prejudicial to the interests of the Province, and that we should do better by waiting: but our conduct would be influenced by the financial prospects of the Province—and your occasional advices would therefore be most useful to your Government, in order to guide us. In the mean time, we shall do our best to effect sales when opportunities offer; but it is evident, that under existing circumstances you cannot reckon on the proceeds of the debentures to meet any further drafts.

SIR,

WITH reference to my letter, dated 19th January, and your memorandum attached to it, dated 18th February, acquainting me that no emoluments belong to the situation of Billet-Master in this command, I have the honour to acquaint you, that the two gentlemen mentioned, Messrs. Fortier for Malden, and Morin for Sandwich, declined continuing in office.

As, however, there is really a good deal of trouble and difficulty, in carrying on the details of this service, especially in making out their accounts for billit money, it is very desirable that some salary should be attached, which the Legislature should certainly take into consideration.

I have the honour to be, &c.

PETITION OF SIMON FRASER, AND ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTEEN OTHERS,

ON SUBJECT OF

BUILDING A BRIDGE FROM HULL TO BYTOWN.

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K.C.H. Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major-General Commanding Her Majesty's Forces therein.

IN COUNCIL.

The Petition of the undersigned inhabitants of Bytown, and others interested in the lumber trade on the Ottawa River—

HUMBLY SHEWETH :

That your Excellency's petitioners, in common with all the inhabitants of this part of the country, were duly sensible of the great advantage they derived from having a line of Bridges, and a direct communication across the Ottawa River at the Falls of the Chaudiere; and in proportion to the benefits they experience from that line of communication, when completed, has been the disappointments, losses and inconvenience they have sustained since it was interrupted by the falling of the main arch across the "Big Kettle," about three years since.

These Bridges, as must be known to your Excellency, were erected as a means of communication to the Rideau Canal, whilst that work was constructing, and during that time were under the controul of the Honourable the Board of Ordnance; but your petitioners having recently learned that since the completion of that work, the Honourable Board has declined all surveillance of these bridges, are induced to make this application to your Excellency for their repair.

Although the want of this Bridge has been very sensibly felt by those engaged in commercial and agricultural pursuits, and also in the depreciation of the value of fixed property in the vicinity, it has pressed with peculiar severity on those engaged in the Lumber trade, as cutting off the only route they can at all seasons command to Bytown, their main depot, and from whence they draw all their supplies of provisions, &c.

Your petitioners would most humbly submit, for your Excellency's consideration, that by thus being deprived of a direct and constant route to Bytown, from the want of the Chaudiere Bridges, they are necessitated to resort to the precarious mode of transport by a ferry extremely difficult of access on the Upper Canada side of the River, involving all the risk of property and delay incident to such a mode of transport; and besides totally impracticable during certain periods of spring and fall, when the ice is taking and breaking up.

Your petitioners might enumerate many instances in which they severely feel the hardships arising from the want of these Bridges; but they will only beg leave to bring one under your notice. This is the only direct, and at all times uninterrupted route to the extensive mills, on the River Rideau, belonging to Thomas McKay, Esquire, from which a great proportion of the lumber dealers are supplied with flour, &c.; and when it can be made evident that from the want of the Chaudiere Bridge, they are compelled to pay an additional impost on the carriage of each barrel of flour they draw from thence, and a proportionate increase upon every other article of supplies, your Excellency's petitioners hope that, taking into your favorable consideration the large amount of Revenue yearly collected from their labors, you will be pleased to order a small portion to be appropriated to the reconstruction of these bridges.

Wherefore, your petitioners humbly pray your Excellency would be pleased to take their case under your favorable consideration, and order the sum of Fifteen Hundred Pounds to be appropriated from the dues charged on Timber cut from the waste lands of the Crown, for the reconstruction of the Chaudiere Bridges across the River Ottawa; which, with a similar amount from the same source from Lower Canada, it is thought will be sufficient for that purpose.

And your petitioners will ever pray, &c. &c. &c.

Dear Sir,

I have the pleasure to inform you, that the Governor-General and Special Council have voted £1000 towards the rebuilding of the Bridge from Hull to Bytown, to be advanced as soon as Upper Canada appropriates a like sum for the same purpose.

I have no doubt £500 or £1000 more will be forthcoming, should such an amount be necessary. You had better, therefore, exert yourself to obtain from your Legislature £1500 to £2000. The object I consider important for Bytown.

I am, Dear Sir,

Your's sincerely,

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE
ON
PETITION OF NANCY STROBRIDGE.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

THE Committee, to whom the petition of Nancy Strobridge was referred, beg leave to report:

That in the year 1828, an Act was passed to appoint Arbitrators to ascertain the amount that was justly due to James Gordon Strobridge, (the late husband of the petitioner,) as contractor on the Burlington Bay Canal. That in pursuance of the said Act, Allan N. MacNab, Edward McBride, and Daniel O'Rielly, Esquires, were appointed Arbitrators. That the said Arbitrators were duly sworn, as required by the Act, "to make a just award"; and that they did accordingly award a certain sum of money, to be due and payable to the said James Gordon Strobridge, and ordered the same to be paid to him on or before a certain day named. That the sum so awarded was not paid till long after the time when the said Arbitrators ordered it to be paid: and that the present claim is for simple interest upon the sum so awarded, from the time it was ordered to be paid until the time of actual payment.

It has been urged against the said award, that it was illegal or unjust—inasmuch as the said Arbitrators awarded a larger sum to the said contractor than remained at the time in the hands of the Canal Commissioners—which, by one clause of the said Act, the Arbitrators were prohibited from doing. But in the opinion of your Committee, the said restraining clause was inconsistent with that part of the Act which required the Arbitrators to make a just award; and the said Arbitrators could not comply with the said restraining clause, without acting unjustly towards the said contractor, by awarding him a less sum than actually appeared to be justly due, especially as they were sworn to make a just award.

It has also been urged against the present claim, that Mr. Strobridge has got too much already. But the Committee are at a loss to conceive how that can be considered too much, which has been awarded by sworn Arbitrators as being justly due.

In the year 1831 an Act was passed granting a certain sum of money to be paid to the said contractor, being the balance of the sum so awarded and remaining due to him after he had received the sum which the Canal Commissioners had in their hands to pay him. In the said Act, the justice of the award made by the Arbitrators is distinctly recognized—and the objection alluded to above (that the Arbitrators were restrained in the amount they should award, and had exceeded their authority in awarding so large a sum) is distinctly waved.

It has been said by some, that, when the Bill was passed in 1831, Mr. Strobridge or his supporters declared, that he had abandoned all claims for interest founded upon the award. But others deny this positively, and say that the claim for interest was merely deferred or postponed in order to be brought forward separately at a future time.

The declared intention of the two Acts herein referred to, was to remunerate the Contractor—and to do him justice. With deference to the opinion of the House, the Committee beg to say, that, in their opinion, the fact of the contractor being fairly remunerated must have depended very much upon the time of actual payment. What might have been a fair remuneration, if paid within a reasonable time—could not be so considered if withheld for a number of years. The Committee think it may be naturally and fairly inferred, that the Arbitrators intended, by ordering the money to be paid on or before a certain day, to entitle the contractor to interest upon the sum awarded, during the time it might be from any circumstances withheld from him. In the said Act last referred to, the Committee can discover nothing from which it can be inferred, that the sum granted was intended to cover any claim for interest founded upon the award—or that it was the intention of the said Act to exclude the said contractor from making his claim at any future time for interest.

In consideration of the above, and with reference to the facts stated in the Petition now before the House, the Committee recommend that the sum claimed should be granted—believing that the claim is just and reasonable.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE, ON THE CLERGY RESERVES.

THE Committee to whom was referred that part of His Excellency's opening Speech which related to the Clergy Reserves, beg leave to submit the following report :

Deeply impressed with the importance of the subject, and anxious, if possible, to suggest some measure which might be acceptable to the community—keep in view the spirit of the object for which the Reserves were set apart, and avoid the excitement of angry feelings on this most difficult topic,—your Committee determined to commence and prosecute their labours with calm and impartial feelings.

Their first object was to fix on some leading principles, as the basis of the plan they might recommend to your Honourable House, the adoption of which would tend to reduce the question to one of mere detail; and the following subjects were carefully considered :

First.—The propriety of carrying into full operation the system commenced under the authority of the Imperial Parliament, viz.—selling all the Clergy Reserves.

Second.—The funds in which the proceeds of all sales should be invested.

Third.—The purposes to which the sums so raised should be devoted; and whether the principal monies, or the annual interest only, should be appropriated.

Fourth.—The mode by which such appropriation should be carried into effect.

Your Committee, on the first of these points, came to a determination to recommend to your Honourable House, that all Clergy Reserves should be sold. Among other arguments which weighed with your Committee in arriving at this conclusion, it may suffice to mention, that there appeared no other certain mode of obtaining an immediate income to any considerable amount, from these lands.

In considering the next question, your Committee, while they would advise the investment of the proceeds of all sales of the Reserves in Provincial funds, feel it their duty strongly to press on your Honourable House, that the interest should be so safely secured, that hereafter no difficulty may be experienced in its collection. At the same time, it was their desire, that the proceeds should be loaned to the Province, so as to be of immediate service for its internal improvement; and with a view of combining these two objects, your Committee have resolved to recommend to your Honourable House, that the monies accruing from such sales shall be immediately invested in Provincial Debentures, bearing an interest of six per cent. per annum, and shall, (if only the interest be appropriated) be expended in making and improving the public highways throughout the Province, the interest to be secured by tolls on such roads, by a tax on the districts wherein the money shall be laid out, and by any other mode which your Honourable House shall see fitting to adopt.

The third, and most important subject of deliberation with your Committee, was—to what purposes the proceeds of these sales should be applied, and whether the appropriation should be confined to the interest, or extend also to the principal money.

Your Committee have felt themselves bound by every consideration of the future welfare of this Province, to urge on your Honourable House, that the proceeds of these lands should be exclusively appropriated to religious purposes; and they have selected three objects, to which they think the expenditure may be properly made applicable—

First.—The maintenance of public worship.

Second.—The erection of Churches and Chapels.

Third.—The education of individuals for the office of the Ministry.

Considering also that these invaluable benefits should be secured, not only to the present, but to future generations, your Committee submit, that only the annual interest should be thus expended.

Your Committee have not found it, in their judgment, advisable to offer any plan of distribution of the interest of the sales, which would complete in all its details, but have thought it more advisable to leave them unsettled to a certain extent, so as to leave to the Executive Government a power to provide for any changes from time to time, in the circumstances of different religious bodies in the community. They have therefore resolved to recommend to your Honourable House, that the Lieutenant-Governor in Council should be empowered to appropriate such interest in the following manner:—

First.—Not more than one-fourth to the Church of England.

Second.—Not more than one-fourth to the Church of Scotland.

Third.—The residue, among such bodies of Christians as he shall think fit, in order to promote to the uttermost the diffusion of religion and true piety throughout the Province.

In order to carry out the recommendation of your Committee, independently of the general sanction of the Home Government, the direct assistance of the Imperial Parliament will be necessary, to authorize the transfer of the proceeds of Clergy Reserves already sold, from the British funds into Provincial securities.

Your Committee have prepared a series of Resolutions, in accordance with the foregoing Report, which they respectfully offer for the adoption of your honourable House.

Your Committee are well aware that no plan can be brought forward for the settlement of this interesting question, to which objections will not be found and urged, or which can be made palatable to those who will not abate one jot of their own opinions; and still less to such as desire to prolong the contention to which this subject has unhappily given rise. Your Committee have, on their part, earnestly endeavoured to suggest a scheme which will tend to allay any present irritation, and will form the basis of an ultimate and satisfactory solution of all the difficulties which have either arisen from or been increased by the long delay of legislation on the subject.

All which is respectfully submitted.

WILLIAM H. DRAPER,
CHAIRMAN.

1. Resolved, That the lands set apart from time to time, as reserves for the support and maintenance of a Protestant Clergy, be sold in the same manner as other Crown lands in this Province.

2. Resolved, That the proceeds of past and future sales of any such lands be loaned to the Province at an interest of six per cent. per annum, to be invested in Debentures which may be authorised by the Legislature.

3. Resolved, That the annual interest arising from such debentures be appropriated and divided, under the authority and direction of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, in manner following:—

Not more than one-fourth to the Church of England.

Not more than one-fourth to the Church of Scotland.

The residue to such other religious denominations as the Lieutenant-Governor in Council shall see fit, to be by them expended for the following purposes:—

The maintenance of Public Worship.

The erection of Churches or Chapels.

The education of persons for the Ministry.

4. Resolved, That accounts of the expenditure of all sums granted, duly verified, shall be, when required, rendered by the Churches or Bodies of Christians receiving the same; and that the Lieutenant-Governor be authorized to withhold further aid from any Church or body of Christians, until previous grants have been duly accounted for.

5. Resolved, That annual accounts of the receipt and expenditure be laid before each branch of the Legislature.

6. Resolved, That an humble Address be presented to Her Majesty, praying that Her Majesty will be graciously pleased to recommend to the Imperial Parliament the passing such enactments as may be necessary for carrying the foregoing Resolutions into full effect.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE,

ON

PETITION OF JOHN BOSTWICK, ESQUIRE, AND OTHERS.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee to whom was referred the petition of John Bostwick, Esquire, and others, beg leave to report—

That some of the members of your Committee are aware that the facts stated in the petition are fairly and truly related. That in their opinion the object of the petitioners is one of a good deal of importance in a public point of view, as well as to the inhabitants of the dense settlements of the surrounding country in the neighbourhood of London, St. Thomas and Port Stanley.

The sums of money heretofore appropriated by Acts of the Legislature for constructing the harbour of Port Stanley, cannot, with any degree of truth or propriety, be considered as an improvident investment of the public money, because, that, on examination of the returns of tolls and dues collected on articles of import and export at that harbour, your Committee find that, for the last four years, notwithstanding the newness of the settlements, and the embarrassments inevitably attendant on our infant trade, the average of tolls and dues collected has exceeded the legal interest on the outlay, which is clearly shown by the annexed statement from the office of the Inspector General:—

The sums heretofore granted amount to .....	£6500	0	0
The Interest per Annum on which is .....	390	0	0
Tolls collected in 1835, 1836, 1837, and 1838, are.....	1561	19	0 $\frac{3}{4}$
The average per Annum of which is.....	390	9	9
Exceeding the Interest by the small sum of (per Annum) .....	0	9	9

The rapid progress of improvement growing up from the industry and energies of the enterprising population, and the particular excellence of the soil and climate of that portion of the Province, afford a certain pledge, that, by granting the means to make the repairs prayed for, facilities will be given to the agricultural and commercial interests of the Province far beyond being merely commensurate with the amount granted for that purpose. In addition to which, they beg to submit that, unless the assistance prayed for be granted, the money already expended must be unproductive of any return of interest by way of tolls, and end in a loss to the public.

Your Committee have agreed to a Resolution for granting the sum of two thousand five hundred pounds for repairing and sustaining the said harbour, which they earnestly recommend to the adoption of your Honorable House.

In reporting upon the Petition referred to their charge, your Committee cannot refrain from expressing their sincere hope that the time is not far distant when the subject of harbours will be taken up as a general measure on the part of the Legislature, and that they will be constructed and sustained at the public expense, instead of being left to the management of private enterprise or that of joint stock companies, whose means have, in all cases, proved too limited for the extensive operations that have been necessary. And that, independently of these considerations, the system of collecting toll and dues for sustaining harbours is too much in the shape of petty monopolies, alike injurious to trade, and agricultural and commercial pursuits. Your Committee by no means concur in the circumscribed opinions sometimes advanced, that the construction of harbours should be paid for by those resident in their immediate neighbourhood. On the contrary, they hold what they humbly conceive to be more enlarged views on that subject.—That every harbour is of advantage to every other part of the Country in a greater or less degree, and that they should be made at the public expense, as they may be found necessary to advance the increasing wants of the country; and thus impart vigor and energy throughout the whole, devoid of the vexing annoyances attendant on any collection of imposts but those which, by our Revenue Laws, are derivable from Foreign commerce.

All which is respectfully submitted.

CHAIRMAN.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE,

ON

BILL TO AMEND THE LAW

ON TAKING PROPERTY IN EXECUTION.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee to whom was referred the bill to amend the law as regards taking Property in Execution, beg leave to report :

That having examined the provisions of the bill, they find it interferes very materially with the law as it now exists, and as it has existed in this Province from the time our Legislature introduced the laws of England as a rule for the decision of all matters of controversy, relative to property and civil rights.

The first enacting clause provides, that the Sheriff shall not remove personal property, seized under a writ of Fieri Facias, issuing out of any of Her Majesty's Courts out of the Township in which the same is situate.

Instances might occur, in the opinion of your Committee, when the Sheriff could not, under any circumstances, procure bidders, if he were confined to the Township where the seizure was made ; but if the property could be removed to the District town, a good price might be obtained.

The second clause provides, that real estate sold by a Sheriff, under an execution against lands, may be redeemed within a year, by payment of the purchase money and ten per cent. thereon.

Your Committee are aware that in some of the United States, land which has been sold for non-payment of mortgage money may be redeemed within a certain period after the sale ; but they are not aware that the principal has ever been extended so far as the present Bill contemplates.

The third clause provides, that the Sheriff, instead of executing a conveyance of real estate, sold as aforesaid, he shall give a certificate, which certificate is to be registered before the return of the writ, and that on the redemption money being paid to the purchaser, he shall give to the person paying the said money a certificate of such money being paid, to be registered in the same manner as the other certificate. Should this clause meet with the concurrence of your Honorable House, your Committee recommend that it be amended, inasmuch as it would be impossible to register a certificate as mentioned in the said clause before the return of the writ, when no sale can, in any instance, take place till after the return thereof.

By the fourth clause, a sheriff is restrained from selling personal property at less than one-fourth its value, which value is to be ascertained by two sworn appraisers.

The last clause of the bill provides, that no Capias ad Satisfaciendum shall issue against a defendant, when he has sufficient property to satisfy the plaintiff's demand—the value of such property to be ascertained by two sworn appraisers, as in the fourth clause is contained.

Your Committee are not prepared to recommend the adoption of all the provisions contained in the said bill, but have determined to submit the same for the consideration of your Honourable House.

All which is respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE

ON

PETITION OF D. JONES, AND OTHERS.

---

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee to whom was referred the petition of David Jones, Esquire, and 92 others, beg leave to present the following report:

That among the numerous applications for pecuniary aid from the Legislature, for the improvement of public roads, the petition which has been confided to the examination and opinion of your Committee, possesses claims and merits of a vastly higher importance, as regards the public safety and defence of this Province, than as concerns the merely local necessities of the extensive section in which the petitioners, who are both numerous and highly respectable, reside.

The petition sets forth in strong but faithful colours, the neglected and scarcely passable condition of a considerable part of the post road between Cornwall and L'Original. The distance between these two places, is less than sixty miles—yet the transport of the mail from the one place to the other, is rarely effected before the close of the second day's journey.

This, however, and other serious inconveniences under which the inhabitants of that section of the Province have so long suffered, from the state of the road in question, dwindle into insignificance, when compared with the actual danger which may result to the public service, by reason of the impracticability of the road in question, in the event of a war or insurrection.

The petitioners correctly state, that considering the road in a military point of view, a glance at the map will demonstrate its importance. It traverses the interior of the Province in a north-easterly direction from Cornwall, and opens on the Ottawa River, a short distance west of the Grenville Canal.

Early in December 1837, a supply of arms, &c. being required for the public service, at the Chatham station, on the Ottawa, it became indispensably necessary, owing to the defective state of that part of Lower Canada adjoining the Eastern and Ottawa Districts, to transport a large supply of arms and munitions of war, from Cornwall to the Ottawa, by the road in question, and the operation was conducted with great difficulty and enormous expense, in consequence of the wretched state of the communication.

In case of war or insurrection, the direct communication between Cornwall and Montreal would be open to interception by the enemy; and, in that case, the road now under consideration would become of vital importance to the defence of the Provinces.

The subject having been laid before His Excellency Sir John Colborne, the Commander-in-Chief of Her Majesty's Forces, His Excellency was pleased to order it to be submitted to the examination and opinion of several distinguished officers connected with the military posts which are most immediately concerned in the premises.

These gentlemen, namely, Colonel Turner, commanding Her Majesty's troops in the Eastern District; Assistant Quarter-Master General Philpotts; Colonel Carmichael, commanding at Coteau du Lac; and Captain Baddeley of the Royal Engineers; have accordingly made the requisite examination, and their certificate appended at the foot of the Petition, states, that "They consider the road from Cornwall to Longueil (L'Orignal) of the highest importance in a military point of view, as set forth in the petition; and cannot too strongly recommend to the Provincial Government the completion of it as soon as possible."

Your Committee therefore, impressed with the urgency of the case, warned by the past state of the public peace, and apprehension of the future, beg leave to state that they have agreed to the following resolution, which they submit herewith, and earnestly recommend to the adoption of your Honorable House.

All which is respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE, ON REPORT OF
COMMISSIONER ON STEAM-DREDGE.

To the Honorable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Select Committee to whom was referred the Report, with accompanying documents from the Commissioner of the Provincial Steam Dredge, beg leave to make the following Report:—

Your Committee have examined the Report and Vouchers with much care and attention, and find them clear and satisfactory.

They observe that a reference to the House of Assembly is mutually agreed upon by the Directors of the Welland Canal Company, and the Acting and only remaining Commissioner of the Provincial Steam-Dredge, as to a difference in charge made by the latter, and the sum which is allowed by the said Directors for the services of the Dredging Machine in the harbour of Port Dalhousie from the 1st of June to the 31st October last, inclusive, the charge made by the Commissioner is £6 5s. per day, and the sum allowed by the Directors is £5 per day—which difference of £1 5s. per day for 131½ days, as charged by the Commissioner, amounts to £166 17s. 6d., as follows:—

131½ days' work of Machine at £6 5s. per day, amounts to .....	£821 17 6
The allowance made by the Directors of Welland Canal Company is £5, per day, for 131 days .....	655 0 0

Making a difference of .....	£166 17 6

left for the decision of the House of Assembly.

The objection taken by the Directors to the charge of the Commissioner is, that a previous understanding existed on their part, that the Commissioner would not charge more than £5 per day for the use of the Machine, and which they thought amply sufficient. To this the Commissioner, in his reply to the Directors on the subject, does not admit of any assurance being given on his part that such a specific charge would be made.—On the contrary, grounding his charge upon the spirit and intention of the adopted Report of the Select Committee of your Honorable House, last session, upon the subject of the Steam Dredge, the Commissioner considers that the charges for the services of the Machine must obviously depend upon the effect the work to be performed has upon the Dredge—that in ordinary labour such a sum as that allowed by the Welland Canal Company might be ample; but from the nature of the work performed in Dalhousie Harbour, as described by the Agent of the said Company, and the effect it has had upon the Machine, the charge, he, the Commissioner has made, he thinks not more than equivalent for the purposes intended by the adopted Report above alluded to.

Your Committee beg leave to recite an extract from the said Report as setting forth the authority given to the Commissioner for making his charge;—"That the Commissioners be authorized to charge a sum adequate to keep the Machine and Scows in proper working order, and to pay the necessary incidental expenses accruing, from time to time, in superintending and directing its operations, however, the discretion of the Commissioners must, in all cases, be used, as no particular data can be laid down as a fixed rule by which to charge for the services of the Machine; the work in some places being more severe for it than in others; there ought, however, to be a sufficient fund at the command of the Commissioners to meet unexpected breakages or necessary improvements, so that the Machine may at all times be in good working order, as any interruption of its services would be attended with a heavy expense by losing the labour of the men necessarily employed in conducting its operations."

The nature of the work performed by the Steam-Dredge at Port Dalhousie, is thus described by the Agent of the Company, in his annual report to the Directors, dated 20th December—"At this Port the Steam-Dredge was employed; there was no other way of removing the vast quantity of stone and timber washed into the channel by the gale, in December 1837. The whole space between the pier, from the lake to the outer end, was also deepened, leaving two feet water more than was had before—an improvement that has been long necessary."

In carefully reviewing all the circumstances connected with the subject thus left for the decision of your Honourable House, your Committee are clearly of opinion, that a decision should be made in favour of the Commissioner. In recommending this course, your Committee are induced by its evident justness and necessity. The sum is absolutely wanted, to enable the Commissioner to put the Machine in an efficient state of repair, to renew operations on the opening of the navigation; and even if your Honourable House should decide in his favour, he would still be deficient of a large sum to put her in working order, and pay off a large item of old debts.

Your Committee observe that the account with the Desjardin's Canal Company, as set forth in the last annual report of the Commissioners, still remains unsettled, notwithstanding the Commissioner has made repeated applications for the payment of it, as appears by his correspondence. The reasons assigned by that Company for not having settled their account, is their inability to get money that is due to them.

Your Committee likewise observe, that the Commissioner has not closed the account for dredging in the Harbour at Oakville. It is alleged as a reason, that the machine will be again wanted at that harbour, and that when the dredging is completed, the Commissioner is assured that a final settlement will be made.

Your Committee cannot conclude their report without expressing their unqualified approbation of the Commissioner's unwearied assiduity, careful, correct, and satisfactory management of his trust.

Your Committee have examined the prayer of the petition of John H. Kilborn, President of the Grimsby Harbour Company, and others. The petitioners do not appear to be aware, that no other charge is made for the use of the Dredge, than what is necessary to keep her and the scows in proper working order, as may be seen in the report of the Select Committee on the management and duties of the Commissioners, as adopted by your Honourable House last session. They therefore cannot recommend the prayer of the petition.

All which is respectfully submitted.

CHAIRMAN.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE,

ON

PETITION OF HENRY SMITH, ESQUIRE.

To the Honourable the House of Assembly.

The Select Committee to which was referred the petition of Henry Smith, Esquire, the Warden and Principal Superintendent of the Provincial Penitentiary, praying for the competent allowance recommended by the Inspectors of that Institution, in their report dated 1st November, 1837, in lieu of convict servants, authorized by the 21st clause of the statute 4th Wm. IV, for the use of the Warden and Deputy Warden—(which said clause was repealed, in accordance with the recommendation of the said Inspectors)—

RESPECTFULLY BEG LEAVE TO REPORT :

That they have fully and minutely inquired into the circumstances, and found the facts as stated by the Petitioner.—That by the 21st clause of the statute 4 Wm. IV. the Act which provides for the maintenance and government of the Provincial Penitentiary—all perquisites and emoluments were denied to them for their services, other than the compensation provided by that Act, except that the Warden and his Deputy shall be provided with dwellings at or near the Penitentiary—shall be furnished with fuel and candles from the stock provided for the use of the Province, and with servants from among the convicts if they think proper.

That the Inspectors of the Penitentiary in their Report of the 1st November, 1837, transmitted for the information of this House by His Excellency Sir Francis Head, recommended the repeal of this clause, viewing it as in some degree at variance with the sentence pronounced upon the convict by the Court, consigning him to hard labour for the period of his confinement, and deeming it a departure from the essential part of the discipline—that of prohibiting convicts from obtaining information of the circumstances or events passing within or without the walls of the prison—and under that view of the matter the Board suggested an amendment of that part of the Statute, by granting to the Warden and Deputy Warden a competent allowance for servants—the expense of which the labour of the convicts otherwise employed than as household servants, would go far to defray.

That, acting upon this recommendation, the said clause was repealed by the fourth clause of 1st Victoria, c. 53, without making any provision for the said Warden or his Deputy to defray the expenses incurred by them in the hire and maintenance of servants which they had to defray from the very moderate salaries which they receive for their services.

Under these circumstances your Committee most respectfully recommended that the sum of fifty pounds currency be annually granted to the said Henry Smith, as an allowance for the hire and maintenance of servants, in lieu of the convict servants which the law originally authorized; and that a further sum of fifty pounds be paid to the said Henry Smith for the expense incurred by him in this behalf since the repeal of the authority under which he employed convicts as household servants.

All which your Committee most respectfully submit.

CHAIRMAN.

P E T I T I O N O F W . S . B U R N ,

CHAIRMAN TO THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES

OF

HAMILTON AND BRANTFORD MACADAMIZED ROAD.

---

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

Your Committee, appointed to enquire into the Petition of the Chairman of the Board of Trustees, for macadamizing the Road from Hamilton to Brantford, beg leave to report:—

That they have examined the statement set forth in said Petition, and are most gratified to find that said Board have used their utmost exertions to carry into effect this important work: That a great part of said road is now under contract, and that about twelve miles and a half is nearly finished. Your Committee are happy to say that, so far as the work has been completed, they have every reason to believe that it has been done in a workman-like manner, and that it is not to be surpassed by any work of the kind done in this Province.

Your Committee, however, beg leave to state, that in consequence of the number of hills to be levelled, and other unforeseen difficulties the petitioners have had to contend with, the sum already granted will come far short of completing said road, which is so much desired by the public, and would therefore recommend to your Honourable House, the propriety of granting a further sum of Twenty-five Thousand Pounds, the amount required, by estimate, to complete the Road, including Toll-houses, Gates, &c., agreeably to a report made by the Engineer employed in the said work.

Your Committee would further state, that they have examined that part of the petition, particularly, which relates to the portion of road which yet remains to be macadamized, (and not authorized by the former Act) which lies between the residence of Mr. John Binkley and the Macadamized Road leading from Dundas to Waterloo, a distance of about a mile and a half of hills, which it is necessary should be levelled and Macadamized, for the purpose of uniting the two roads. Your Committee would therefore recommend the further grant of six thousand pounds, for the purpose of Macadamizing this piece of road. The whole amount, therefore, required to complete the Hamilton and Brantford Road, and to unite it to the road from Dundas to Waterloo, as before mentioned, will be thirty-one thousand pounds,—which sum your Committee would recommend to your Honourable House to grant—but, that only fifteen thousand pounds of the said sum be raised and expended during the year 1839, and the remainder to be raised and expended in the year 1840.

All which is respectfully submitted.

PETITION OF DAVID SECORD, ESQUIRE,

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee to which was referred the petition of David Secord, of the village of St. Davids, Esquire, praying for interest on the amount awarded him by the Commissioners on claims for losses, from the period of the award until the time the same was paid, as an additional compensation—having examined minutely into the circumstances of his case, as to the original demands made by him for losses—the evidence by which those demands were sustained, and the amount actually awarded and finally paid to him; and taking further into consideration, circumstances known to your Committee, as to the very great privations endured by himself and family, arising from his firm and steady adherence to the interests of the Crown, and support of the British Government in these Colonies—his bravery evinced while in command of the 2nd Lincoln Militia, particularly at the battles of Queenston, Chippewa, and Lundy's Lane—the long period of his services, (having their commencement during the time in which the present United States of America were British Provinces, and continued to the present day)—his long-trying loyalty, and straightened circumstances, (arising principally from his fidelity to the Crown)—together with his advanced age, at which period these circumstances weigh more heavily upon him,—would not hesitate to recommend that your Honourable House would take his peculiar case into consideration, and grant to him the additional compensation prayed for, were it not that the present state of the finances of the Province utterly forbids.

All which is respectfully submitted.

PETITION OF FRANCIS HALL, ESQUIRE.

---

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

---

The Committee to which was referred the Petition of Francis Hall, Esquire, Civil Engineer, praying to be paid an amount of money withheld from him for professional services on the Burlington Canal—

BEG LEAVE TO MAKE THE FOLLOWING REPORT :

Your Committee find by the Annual Report of the Commissioners of the Burlington Canal to the Legislature in the fourth session of the ninth Parliament, that the sum of £55 is reported to be due him, and then in the hands of the Commissioners; and in a subsequent session of the Legislature the said Commissioners reported having used the said amount for the general benefit of the Canal—and notwithstanding repeated applications to your Honorable House by the Petitioner to be reimbursed for said amount withheld by the Commissioners, and always acknowledged by the House by passing a Bill for the sum with interest, your Committee cannot understand why any obstacle should be put in the way of paying a debt so manifestly just, and therefore recommend the prayer of the Petitioner to the favorable consideration of your Honorable House.

MEMORIAL OF B. TURQUAND,

TRANSMITTED BY MESSAGE FROM HIS EXCELLENCY.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee to which was referred the Message of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, transmitting and recommending to the consideration of your Honorable House, an application from Mr. Bernard Turquand, senior clerk in the office of the Receiver General, for compensation under the authority of certain Acts of the Provincial Legislature for extra services performed by him in the said office—and also for conducting the affairs of the department during the absence of the Receiver General from the Province at different periods—

BEG LEAVE MOST RESPECTFULLY TO REPORT :

That your Committee have examined the claims of Mr. Turquand, in his memorial to His Excellency, and the various Acts of the Legislature under which he claims remuneration for extra services—as well as the minute of the Executive Council on the subject of his application—and find that Mr. Turquand is legally entitled to compensation under several Acts of this Province to which the clause recited in his memorial refers; and your Committee are not aware that any wrong could have been attributed to the Honorable the Executive Council had they advised the compensation to have been made by Warrant of His Excellency without a reference to Parliament.

Your Committee, having further full reason to believe that the onerous duties devolving on Mr. Turquand, during the absence of the Receiver General, have been performed in a manner fully acceptable to that officer, and highly creditable to himself, and the department feel themselves authorized strongly to recommend to your Honorable House that a recompense may be awarded to him.

The Committee to whom was referred the Petition of James Read, Esquire, and other Magistrates and Freeholders of the Western District, beg leave to report that, on due consideration of the Petition, your Committee recommend that an additional rate or assessment of one penny in the pound be hereafter raised, levied, and collected from the inhabitants of the Western District, until the same shall amount to the sum of one thousand pounds, to be applied to the objects set forth in the Petition. Your Committee have agreed to a resolution on this subject, which they beg leave to report herewith, and which they earnestly recommend to the adoption of your Honorable House in a Committee of supply.

All which is respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE
ON ROADS AND BRIDGES,
ON PETITIONS OF

R. E. Vidal, and others; R. Johnson, and others; L. Lawrason, and others; and two Petitions of G. Hyde, and others.

---

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

---

The Committee on Roads and Bridges respectfully report on the Petitions of R. E. Vidal, R. Johnson, Lawrence Lawrason, and the two Petitions of G. Hyde and others, on the subject of a Road in the county of Kent.—That Petitioners amounting to about one thousand, fully and clearly point out the necessity of a more perfect communication between the town of London and Port Sarnia—that the diversity of opinion is confined to the location of the Road—which Petitioners admit to arise from local interest. That said Road would be in the opinion of your Committee, one of great importance to the Province at large—to the Government, to the people of the Northern Townships of Kent, and to the travelling public.

Your Committee conceive the proper course to be pursued—is the one recommended in some of the said Petitions, namely—that the Lieutenant Governor be authorized to appoint a civil engineer to examine the Northern Townships of said county of Kent, and locate the said Road upon the most direct and eligible route—with due regard to economy, but without reference to the private interest of individuals.

Your Committee further recommend that a loan of ——— thousand pounds be authorized to be raised for the purpose of constructing a Turnpike-Road upon such route as may be so determined upon, and are prepared to report a Bill, to carry the same into effect, in the same way and manner, and with the same provisions, as the Macadamized roads are now being carried on.

All which is respectfully submitted.

E. W. TOMSON,
CHAIRMAN.

*Committee Room,
1st April, 1839.*

Resolved—That it is expedient to authorize Her Majesty's Receiver General in this Province to raise, by way of loan, a sum of ——— thousand pounds, for the purpose of constructing a Turnpike-Road through the townships of Sarnia, Plympton and Warwick, in the county of Kent, which said sum of ——— thousand pounds shall be repaid by the Tolls to be collected at such gates as the Trustees named by this House shall, for that purpose, find necessary to erect: also by causing the inhabitants residing on the lots bordering on each side of the said Road to commute their statute labour and pay the amount to said Trustees; and also, that should their means not be sufficient to pay the interest on the Debentures, as they become due, to authorize Her Majesty's Receiver General to pay the deficiency out of any funds in his hands, applicable to the general uses of this Province, which sum so advanced, shall be repaid from the tolls collected on the said road, or by an additional rate, levied for that purpose on all lands in the county of Kent; the Trustees having full power to dispose of such toll as may be necessary.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

Your Committee to whom were referred the Petitions of John Flummerfelt and others of the Niagara District; and Caleb Williams and others of the Prince Edward District, praying that a tax may be imposed upon dogs in this Province.

BEG LEAVE TO REPORT:

That your Committee having duly considered the prayer of the Petitions, and being aware, from their own knowledge, that large numbers of sheep are killed from time to time, and other injuries caused in various parts of this Province by dogs, and that many useless dogs are kept in and about different towns and villages throughout this Province, recommend the prayer of the Petitioners to the favorable consideration of your Honorable House.

Your Committee would, however, suggest that every farmer should be allowed to keep one dog upon his farm, not subject to be taxed; that every farmer who shall keep more than one dog shall be liable to pay ——— shillings per annum for every dog over one, and that every dog kept by any other person or persons shall be subject to a tax of ——— shillings per annum.

PETITION OF R. LACHLAN, ESQUIRE.

---

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

---

Your Committee to whom was referred the petition of Robert Lachlan, Esquire, Sheriff of the Western District—beg leave to Report:

That they have made enquiries into the fees and emoluments of the Shrievalty of the Western District, and they find them to be so insignificant as to afford no adequate remuneration to the Sheriff for the arduous duties and heavy responsibilities of his office.

Your Committee, therefore, are of opinion that the income of the Sheriff of the Western District is altogether too small for the maintenance of an officer qualified to fill such an important situation; and would recommend your Honorable House to pass an Act to provide for the payment of the sum of fifty pounds currency per annum to the sheriff of the Western District :—and from circumstances which have come to the knowledge of your Committee, it begs leave respectfully to suggest, that a similar sum be provided for the Sheriff of the Ottawa District for the ensuing four years.

All which is respectfully submitted.

Resolved—That there be granted annually to Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, from and out of the rates and duties levied and collected, or to be levied and collected for the use of this Province, the sum of ——— pounds currency, to be paid and applied as follows; (that is to say) to the Sheriffs of the Western and Ottawa Districts, for the time being, the sum of ——— pounds currency, respectively, for the term of four years.

PETITION OF S. WESTON, AND OTHERS.

To the Honorable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee to whom was referred the petition of Seth Weston, and others, inhabitants of the township of Norwich, praying for a repeal of the 5th Wm. IV. chap. 26, entitled “An Act to appoint Commissioners to settle disputes respecting certain roads and lines in the Township of Norwich, in the District of London, and to establish the said lines and roads”—

BEG LEAVE TO REPORT :

That as, in the opinion of your Committee, the repeal of the said Act would directly interfere with the private rights of several of the inhabitants of the said Township, your Committee made inquiry, to ascertain whether any notice had been given, in pursuance of the 39th rule of your Honourable House, of the intention of the said petitioners to apply to the Legislature for the purpose aforesaid, and they ascertained that no such notice had been given, though such notice was given prior to the last session of the present Parliament.

Your Committee therefore recommend to your Honourable House, not to entertain the prayer of the said petition, as any such proceeding might be highly prejudicial to the interests of a number of the inhabitants of the said Township.

All which is respectfully submitted.

REPORT

ROAD AND BRIDGE COMMITTEE,

ON PETITION OF WILLIAM ANDERTON AND OTHERS.

To the Honorable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee on Roads and Bridges, to whom was referred the petition of William Anderton, Esquire, and others, from the Western District, praying for a sum of money to make a good road from Sandwich to Chatham—beg leave to report :

That it appears on investigation, that, owing to the unusual rise in the waters of Lake St. Clair, the road from Sandwich to Chatham has become almost impassable, and that a large sum of money will be required to amend such road, and to repair the old bridges, and erect new ones. Your Committee have also ascertained that the said road is of great importance to the Province, both in a civil and military point of view, and that it is equally important that a good communication be established from Fort Malden, by way of Sandwich, to Chatham.

Your Committee therefore respectfully recommend that the prayer of the petition be complied with, and that a sum of money be granted for the purpose set forth in their petition.

All which is respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE,
ON
PETITION OF E. P. RYERSE, AND OTHERS.

To the Honorable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee to whom was referred the petition of Edward Powers Ryerse, John Harris, and others—beg leave to report :

That they have examined into the statements set forth in the petition, as well as the documents hereto appended, which, in the opinion of your Committee, establish a strong claim to the attention of your Honorable House.

Your Committee are aware that two of the Petitioners, Edward Powers Ryerse, and John Harris, have expended a large sum of money in the construction of peirs at Ryerses' Creek, from which expenditure the public and the commerce of the country have already derived great advantage; and, although, on examination of the appended returns, your Committee find that for the years 1834, 1835, 1836, 1837, and 1838, the said Edward Powers Ryerse, and John Harris, have derived an average income, or rather return for the expenditure they have made, of £209 12s 1d per annum: yet your Committee are convinced that the income thus derived has not enabled them to extend their work to a satisfactory completion; and that, therefore, in this case, where private enterprise has tended so much to promote the public good, the aid they have prayed for by way of loan on the credit of the Province, for the period, and on the sureties they have proposed, should be granted.

Your Committee also find, from a statement made by the Collector of the Customs for the Port of Dover, under whose superintendence Ryerses' Creek is placed, that the duties upon the articles of import entered at Ryersers' Creek for the years 1834, 1835, 1836, 1837, and 1838, amounts to an average of £231 15s 1d per annum; from which fact your Honorable House will perceive, that Ryersers' Creek is a place of a good deal of importance, as regards the public revenue.

Your Committee have agreed to a Resolution, which they report herewith, and earnestly recommend to the adoption of your Honorable House.

All which is respectfully submitted.

WILLIAM SALMON,

CHAIRMAN.

I hereby certify that the above account is correct, to the best of my knowledge, the most of the business therein referred to having been transacted under my immediate inspection.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE,

ON

MESSAGE AND DOCUMENTS ON IMPROVEMENT OF TRENT,

AND

INLAND WATERS OF DISTRICT OF NEWCASTLE.

To the Honorable the Commons House of Assembly in Provincial Parliament assembled.

The Committee to whom was referred the Message of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, with the Reports of the Commissioners for the improvement of the navigation of the river Trent, and of the inland waters of the District of Newcastle—beg leave to report:

That having carefully examined the said reports, and ascertained the situation of the said works, your Committee most earnestly recommend that some immediate steps should be taken to enable the Commissioners to fulfil the engagements they have entered into under the authority of an Act of the Legislature. It appears that at the solicitation of the Commissioners, Debentures to the amount of £28,000 sterling were taken and paid for by the Commercial Bank of the Midland District, for the express purpose of being expended in the improvement of the navigation of the Trent, but that more than half that sum has been appropriated to other purposes, and that, in consequence, the Commissioners cannot obtain funds to meet their engagements. That very serious inconvenience and embarrassment has occurred to the Contractors from the inability of the Commissioners to obtain the necessary funds to proceed with the works, and that unless some means are provided soon for this object, the Province will, at some future period, be called upon to indemnify the contractors for the serious loss they will sustain. The sum required to complete the contracts entered into for the Trent will not exceed twelve thousand pounds. In regard to the inland waters of the District of Newcastle, your Committee find that the Commissioners have great difficulty in obtaining funds, from time to time, to meet their engagements, and in consequence, the works have been carried on greatly to the disadvantage of the public. The sum originally granted for this latter improvement was sixteen thousand pounds, and it might have proved adequate for the purpose if no difficulty had occurred in procuring it as required; nearly twelve thousand pounds have been expended, and it appears an error was committed in the Act making the original appropriation, in reciting that the Engineer's estimate was only £16,000, whereas it was nearly £18,000, and a further grant of £3,000 will be required to complete the work contemplated; by the first grant of £16,000 one section of this work is completed, and some tolls will be collected thereon during the ensuing summer, and if money could have been obtained, as required, the other sections might all have been completed within a year:—should the country return to its former prosperity, and emigration be again directed to our shores, your Committee feel convinced these works will prove highly advantageous and productive to the Province. Your Committee feel themselves justified in urging most strongly the necessity of your Honourable House adopting the most efficient means for completing these works, and trust that the necessary funds, as above mentioned, will be provided for the purpose without delay.

All which is respectively submitted.

CHAIRMAN.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE
ON

---

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

---

THE Committee, to whom was referred the petition of Dorothy E. Spaun, widow of the late Jacob Spaun—beg leave to report:

That they have examined into the statements set forth in said petition, and find that some time in the month of May, 1830, the late husband of the petitioner, together with the late Asa Mann, entered into a contract to perform certain work on the Burlington Bay Canal, for which they were to receive the sum of four thousand one hundred and fifty-one pounds, nineteen shillings and six-pence.

That on examining the Appendix to the Journals of your Honourable House for 1832, your Committee find an account (No. 1) of monies paid to Messrs. Mann and Spaun, the contractors, for and on account of the Burlington Bay Canal, in agreement with the contract, to the amount of three thousand nine hundred and sixty-one pounds, eight shillings; and on account (No. 2) of extra work, done by said contractors, to the amount of one hundred and thirty-three pounds, fifteen shillings—making in all received by them the sum of four thousand and ninety-five pounds three shillings.

Your Committee also find an estimate (marked C) of the work and materials deficient in Messrs. Mann and Spaun's contract with the Commissioners of the Burlington Bay Canal, amounting to £707 13s. 4d., signed by William J. Kerr, Superintendent.

Your Committee also find a letter (marked E) from the Contractors to the Commissioners, wherein they state that the piers in Lake Ontario have cost them, at a moderate calculation, £250 more than was anticipated, on account of the depth of the water being much greater than when the survey was made; and that other work, which they had done, far exceeded in expense their calculations for its completion, in consequence of the water washing over the piers at the east end, thereby undermining them—which they did not expect would have been the case—and in the last clause of said letter they state as follows:

“We have not abandoned the work with any desire not to fulfil our contract, but being deprived of all means by the surety into whose hands all the money has been received, to proceed with the undertaking, and being willing to assume the same, which he has done, you will look to him for a final termination of the contract.

(Signed) MANN & SPAUN.”

Your Committee find that the amount received by the Contractors was £4095 3s., deficiency on contract £707 13s 4d., making in all a sum equal to £4802 16s 4d., while the whole amount of their contract was but £4137 19s. 6d., and for extra work and expenditures, beyond their estimate, £483 15s., making in all a sum equal to £4635 14s. 6d. had said contract been completed; thereby showing that the Contractors actually received the sum of £167 1s. 10d. over and above the full amount of their contract and claim made by them for all extra work done, occasioned by the rise of the water.

All which is most respectfully submitted.

CHAIRMAN.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE

ON

PETITION OF JOHN GORDINIER, AND OTHERS, RESPECTING NAPANEE AND KINGSTON ROAD.

Your Committee to whom was referred the petition of John Gordinier, and one hundred and forty-three others, inhabitants of the Midland District, praying that an additional grant may be made to complete the Macadamized road between the town of Kingston and the village of Napanee—respectfully report:

That it appears that the road has been completed half the distance out of the town of Kingston, the tolls on which, together with the commutation of statute labour, should appear as sufficient to pay the interest of the money expended on that section—that a portion of the road near Napanee village has also been made, and a large hill lowered, a good stone bridge erected, and the road finished for a distance of about two and a-half miles, leaving unimproved a distance of about ———— miles; and there is reason to believe that no objection exists to completing this road, as the tolls and commutation of statute labour would, in the opinion of your Committee, be sufficient to pay the interest of the money required to complete this desirable work, which has become a very popular undertaking, and the objections to which have yielded to the great good which is apparent—and it appears, that in order to connect the two extremes of this work, and to complete it, a sum of about £10,000 would be required; your Committee therefore recommend that a sum of £10,000 be granted to Her Majesty, to enable the Commissioners and Trustees to complete this work, and that the money be raised by debentures in the same manner as directed by the 7th Wm. IV. ch. 18, sec. 1.

THIRD REPORT
OF
COMMITTEE ON BANKING.

---

To the Honourable the House of Assembly.

The Committee on Banking beg leave to report :

That the Act now in force—under which the Chartered Banks of this Province have suspended the redemption of their notes in specie, will expire at the end of the present session of Parliament. The critical circumstances of the times, both in a mercantile and political point of view, render it of great importance that a just and proper decision should be made with respect to the manner in which the banking institutions of the Province shall be allowed to conduct their business : and your Committee have approached the consideration of this important subject with much diffidence, being fully aware of the responsibility which rests upon them, and of the great anxiety that is felt by the public, as to the proceedings of Parliament upon a subject so deeply affecting the commercial, agricultural, and public interests of the Province.

Your Committee entered upon the consideration of the subject, earnestly desiring, if practicable, that the banks should return to specie payments, not only for the purpose of maintaining the character and credits of the Province, but also in deference to the instructions and recommendations contained in despatches from the Home Government, which have been communicated to your Honorable House by His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor.

The accumulation of floating capital in private hands within this Province is, as yet, very inconsiderable; The greater part of the actual capital of the Province is invested in land, in buildings, and in agricultural stock; while the proportion employed in commerce is so limited as to be barely sufficient to carry it on in a very restricted manner. The banks are almost the only sources from which floating capital can be drawn for the purposes of trade and commerce. It has, therefore, occurred to your Committee, that any measure which would induce the banks to withdraw their circulation, or materially to diminish it, would tend to produce a ruinous depreciation in the value of property, which has been described as already approaching to a general wreck; also to cripple agriculture, materially to injure commerce, and to embarrass the public service.

The unsettled state of the public mind in this Province, owing in part to internal disquiet and dissatisfaction, but principally to the continued inroads and invasions to which we have been subjected, and which we have reason to fear may be repeated by the inhabitants of the neighbouring States—has created a want of confidence, which will materially induce holders of dead capital, in the shape of bank notes, to convert the same into specie. The drain which would take place in this way can hardly be estimated, but it would, no doubt, be very extensive. Many persons are also desirous, it is said, of disposing of their property, even at a great sacrifice, provided specie could be obtained which might be available to them on their emigrating to another country, as they intend to do in the expectation of being there free from invasion and the fear thereof, and where they expect to enjoy greater security for person and property than can be expected here, while the present state of things continues.

Fears are also entertained that the importation of specie for the banks by the usual route from New York to this Province would be attended with very considerable risk, owing to the lawless disposition and conduct of the Citizens of the neighbouring States. These causes would induce the banks to curtail the the circulation, and to refuse, in a great measure, to make fresh issues to such an extent, as would be very injurious to the country: and, even if such a course should not be absolutely necessary, there can be little doubt but that course would be adopted by the banks as a measure of precaution.

For the reasons already stated, and on considering the evidence given before them, which is hereunto appended, your Committee have been induced to come to the conclusion—that a complete resumption of specie payments might produce very injurious consequences to the country. But although your Committee have come to the conclusion that it would probably produce great injury to the country, to compel the banks to resume specie payments at the end of the present session of Parliament, and under the circumstances above referred to, they are also of opinion, that to permit the continuance of an unconditional or unqualified suspension of cash payments, would be productive of consequences equally injurious; by encouraging over trading generally, and such an excessive issue of incontrovertible paper, as would probably prevent the practicability of returning to a sound currency, when the proper time shall have arrived for so doing.

Your Committee have therefore prepared a Bill, which they now submit to the consideration of your Honorable House. In doing so they have endeavoured—First, effectually to prevent the banks from issuing their bills to an extent greater than is required by the wants of the country; and second, to compel the banks to hold such an amount of specie during the time of their suspension as would enable them, with safety to themselves, to resume cash payments whenever the internal circumstances above alluded to are removed. Your Committee trust, that by the Bill now submitted, they have accomplished both these important points.

The second enacting clause has a reference to both of the objects. It compels the banks to make weekly returns to the Executive Government, in the same way as is done by the Bank of England, by which means the Government is made acquainted with the extent and progressive increase or curtailment of their operations. It also provides, that an average monthly statement shall be published, by which the public will be made sufficiently well acquainted whether or not the security required by this Bill is actually furnished by the several banks.

The third enacting clause, your Committee are of opinion, will effectually prevent any bank from extending its issues beyond what may be required by the wants of the country. In ordinary times the best check against over issues by any particular bank, is the fact, that the surplus quantity of paper so issued soon falls into the hands of the more prudent banks, who call upon the banks so over issuing, to redeem the said surplus in specie: but even this would be insufficient, as a check, if any profit was made by a surrender of the specie. Your Committee are of opinion, that by compelling an exchange of paper, periodically, among all the banks, and by requiring balances due from one bank to another to be settled by bills of exchange on London—they have substituted a check as effectually, for every practical purpose, as if the banks were liable to pay their other debts and notes in specie. It is a well known fact, that in Scotland (which is admitted to enjoy the most perfect system of banking that is known) the practice of the banks, is, to make periodical exchanges in the way proposed by this Bill—with this difference, that the exchanges are more frequent in that country than it is proposed they should be here. In that country the banks never require specie from each other. Balances used to be settled by drafts on London; and the practice is, now, to settle balances either in that way, or by the transfer of Exchequer Bills. These frequent exchanges, the granting of cash credits, paying interests on deposits, and the unlimited responsibility of partners, are the principal features in the Scotch system of banking. Under that system, Scotland has not been subject to panics like England; loss by the public from failures of banks is hardly known; the establishment of weak banks is effectually prevented, and industry and moral habits are encouraged. It may be considered rather out of place, on the present occasion, but your Committee cannot refrain from expressing their opinion, that, if the Scotch system of banking was adopted, either in whole or in part, by the banking institutions of this country, beneficial effects therefrom would soon be felt and acknowledged.

But to return to the clause in question—your Committee are of opinion that funds in the hands of a respectable London Banker, are as good for the public security as the possession of a like amount of specie, and better for the banks themselves; inasmuch as, in the ordinary course of their business, they would be able to make a profit thereon. But in order that a sufficient check may exist against over issuing, your Committee have been careful to provide, that the premium of exchange, at which balances are to be settled, shall be such as to leave no profit to the bank paying the balance; and at the same time to give a reasonable profit to the banks upon exchange furnished to individuals. Generally speaking, banks in this Province cannot purchase bills of exchange on England at a lower rate than what is current in Montreal; because, at that rate, it would be eagerly bought up by merchants wishing to remittances. After careful investigation, your Committee find, that the average difference between the premium of exchange on London, in Montreal and in New York, is about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. The commission, which is generally paid by the banks of this Province to their London agents, is  $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent.; so that it is evident the rates proposed to be enacted for the settlement of balances due from one bank to another, namely,  $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. above the Montreal rate, and 2 per cent. above the New York rate, will yield no profit to the bank paying the balance, and will offer no inducement to any bank to over issue with a view to making a profit by the settlement of balances.

By the sixth clause of the Bill now submitted, in order that the banks may be enabled to resume specie payments, when the circumstances of the country may warrant it, and for the security of the public, it is provided, that every chartered bank suspending cash payments under the provisions of this Bill, shall have in its possession, from and after the 1st day of July next, an amount of specie equal to one-third of its circulation.—This proportion has been fixed upon, because it is stated by the best writers on political economy and banking, as being the highest which a bank can retain so as to make a fair profit on its issues.

Your Committee beg to call the attention of your Honourable House to the suggestion contained in the evidence, that the value of the coins current in Upper and Lower Canada should be equalized in both Provinces, by a general tariff, previous to the banks being called upon to resume specie payments.

The Bill also contains the same provisions as the Act now in force, for the protection of individuals and for the prevention of vexatious suits during the suspension of specie payments by the banks.

All which is respectfully submitted.

CHAIRMAN.

APPENDIX TO REPORT ON BANKING.

COMMITTEE ROOM, 6th March, 1839.

Select Committee on Banking met.

PRESENT:

MESSRS. FERRIE,	MESSRS. BOCKUS,
" MERRITT,	" SHERWOOD,
" MORRIS,	" RYKERT, and
" ROBINSON,	" THORBURN.

COLIN C. FERRIE, ESQUIRE—Chosen Chairman.

WILLIAM PROUDFOOT, ESQUIRE, President of the Bank of Upper Canada, called in and examined.

1. Is it expedient, in your opinion, to allow the Act authorising the Chartered Banks to suspend specie payments, to expire at the end of the present session of Parliament?

I am of opinion it would not be expedient, at this time, to allow the Act to expire, being fully satisfied there would be a run on the Banks, and in consequence, they would necessarily have to curtail their discounts.

2. In the event of the said Act being renewed, how long would you recommend it to be continued in force? Say—till a certain day, to be fixed by the Legislature—Till the Banks in Lower Canada resume specie payments—To leave it to the discretion of the Lieutenant Governor and Council—Or how would you limit the continuance of said Act?

I am of opinion, the time for a resumption of specie payments ought to be left in the discretion of the Lieut. Governor and Council.

3. In the event of the said Act being renewed, do you think that it requires any, and what, alteration and amendment?

I am not aware of any amendment necessary, unless in the event of the Government requiring a loan to carry on the public works in the Province;—it would then be necessary to increase the circulation of the Banks, say to £600,000, in place of £400,000—the Gore Bank, of course in proportion to their capital.

4. In the event of the Banks being required to resume payment in specie, within a few months from this date, how would that affect their means, or ability to grant accommodation to the public, in the way of discounting or otherwise? Would it compel the Banks to curtail their circulation, or to limit their discounts: if so, how soon, and to what extent?

As soon as it is known the Banks would have to resume specie payments, they would stop discounting; the circulation would soon be withdrawn, at least one-half; and when they would be able to discount, would be quite uncertain, as they could not calculate upon receiving payment of their debts.

5. In case the Banks should be required to resume specie payments within a few months, do you think that there would be a demand for specie, to any great extent, and from what quarter would such a demand principally be made: say—

From Foreigners?

From the different Banks in this Province and in Lower Canada?

From Merchants, by way of making remittances, or as a speculation?

From persons leaving the Province, and wishing to invest their capital elsewhere?

Or from persons remaining in the country, who may entertain doubt as to the solvency of the Banks, or the stability of the Government?

I think the demand from Foreigners would not be to a very great extent. I think there would be a demand from the Lower Province by the Banks, as well as from those of our own Province, and no doubt there would from Farmers and from persons wishing to leave the Province. I think the solvency of the Chartered Banks are not much doubted.

6. Are there any, and what objections, to granting permission to the Montreal Bank, and the City Bank of Montreal, to establish Agencies in Upper Canada?

I do not think they would afford any additional accommodation to the public. My opinion upon this point rests in the supposition that they wish to discount drafts in this Province, drawn by individuals here on Houses in Lower Canada, as set forth in their Petition. The Banks in this Province are willing to discount to a greater extent in this sort of business, than is offered; being more profitable, and the payments, generally, more punctually met, than in ordinary discounts.

7. It has been stated that the Bank of Upper Canada has withdrawn its accommodation from the public, at its different offices in the outer Districts: Has that been the case, and to what extent?

In consequence of the unsettled state of the Province, and the uncertainty when the Banks might be called upon to redeem their Notes in specie, as well as losses sustained by persons leaving the Province, the Board deemed it most prudent to stop discounting at the offices; they have, however, continued to renew notes thereupon, receiving small instalments, and in many cases renewed in full, which amounts almost to the same as new discounts.

The Board have not refused to discount any good paper sent here from other Districts, which has been done to a very considerable extent.

8. In case the Act should be renewed, what equivalent, if any, ought the banks to give the public for the privilege of being allowed to suspend specie payments?

I do not feel myself warranted in making any proposition to this question.—The public will certainly benefit as much by the suspension as the banks would.

WM. PROUDFOOT,
PRESIDENT.

Toronto, 11th March, 1839.

THOMAS G. RIDOUT, ESQUIRE, Cashier of the Bank of Upper Canada, called in and examined.

1. Is it expedient, in your opinion, to allow the Act authorizing the Chartered Banks to suspend specie payments to expire at the end of the present session of Parliament?

In my opinion it would not be expedient, in the unsettled state of the foreign affairs of this Province, to allow that Act to expire at the end of the present session of the Legislature, as the interests of the Government, as well as the interests of the Country, require its renewal—the advantages derived from its operations by the banks are, in a great measure, imaginary; as the depression of trade and the check given to all enterprize and improvement has caused a great falling off of bank business—and as there is no probability of any extensive emigration this year—the effect of returning to cash payments would be to drain the banks of specie and totally to prevent all discounts whatever.

2. In the event of the said Act being renewed, how long would you recommend it to be continued in force? Say—till a certain day to be fixed by the Legislature—Till the banks in Lower Canada resume specie payments—To leave it to the discretion of the Lieutenant Governor and Council—Or how would you limit the continuance of said Act?

Under a prospect that the peace of this Country will not be interrupted—and in case of a renewal of the said Act—I would recommend it to be continued so long as the banks of Lower Canada suspend specie payments—and until the current coins of both Provinces shall be equalized by a general tariff—and then that the Lieutenant Governor and Council shall have a discretionary power to compel the banks to resume specie payments on giving them a certain official notice to that effect.

3. In the event of the said Act being renewed, do you think that it requires any, and what, alteration and amendment?

I am not aware, that, in case of the renewal of the Act, that any important alterations or amendments are necessary—unless it might be, that, in consequence of extraordinary disbursements, both civil and military, the present limit restricting the issue of bank notes to twice the capital paid in, might not be found to suffice for the exigencies of the moment; as the foreign trade of the country will not absorb a forced circulation sufficiently rapid to permit new issues, and unless the limits were extended, I am apprehensive that the Government would, at times, be embarrassed or be compelled to issue army bills.

4. In the event of the banks being required to resume payment in specie within a few months from this date, how would that affect their means or ability to grant accommodation to the public in the way of discounting or otherwise—Would it compel the banks to curtail their circulation or to limit their discounts—If so, how soon, and to what extent?

It would, in my opinion, be necessary to lose no time in reducing the discounts by every practicable means, and to curtail the circulation of bank notes as much as possible, and the sooner this was begun, the easier would it be to return to specie payments.

5. In case the banks should be required to resume specie payments within a few months, do you think that there would be a demand for specie to any great extent, and from what quarter would such a demand principally be made: Say—

From foreigners?

From the different banks in this Province, and in Lower Canada?

From merchants by way of making remittances, or as a speculation?

From persons leaving the Province, and wishing to invest their capital elsewhere?

Or from persons remaining in the country who may entertain doubts as to the solvency of the banks, or the stability of the Government ?

The early resumption of specie payments, whilst the banks had a large circulation out, would cause an extensive demand for specie to be made by all the parties mentioned, for as the circulation, to its present extent, is a forced one, so would be its reaction.

6. Are there any, and what objections, to granting permission to the Montreal Bank, and the City Bank of Montreal, to establish Agencies in Upper Canada ?

It is my opinion, that during the suspension of our banks, there is no object to be gained or no advantage to the Country to allow the suspended banks of Lower Canada to establish Agencies in this Province—but when the resumption of specie payments shall become general, there could be no objections to the measure, under certain restrictions, so as not to permit them to exercise any undue advantage over the Chartered Banks of the Province ?

7. It has been stated that the Bank of Upper Canada has withdrawn its accommodation from the public at their different offices in the outer Districts—Has that been the case, and to what extent ?

It ought very little to be wondered at that the Bank of Upper Canada does not, at present, extend through its offices and agencies the same liberal accommodation to the public that it did formerly ; for on reference to the large list of bills over due it will be found that a great portion of them originated at the offices, and the attention of the Bank is now more directed in securing those debts, by granting renewals and other indulgencies to the parties concerned, than in increasing their liabilities by new discounts ; however, those persons of undoubted credit, character, and responsibility, who at times require advances, find no difficulty in having their notes discounted by transmitting them direct to the Bank ; besides, the offices are not in any way restricted in discounting bills upon Lower Canada, founded upon the usual letters of credit.

8. In case the Act should be renewed, what equivalent, if any, ought the banks to give the public for the privilege of being allowed to suspend specie payments ?

I consider that the Government and the public are more interested in requiring the banks to suspend specie payments than the banks are themselves ; how far, therefore, that a forced loan from them, such as the one proposed, would be proper or not, it is best to leave to the wisdom of the Legislature, who will, of course, take precautions that nothing will be done to embarrass the banks by a heavy and inconvertible incumbrance when the proper time shall arrive for a general resumption of specie payments.

THOMAS G. RIDOUT.

*Bank of Upper Canada, Toronto,

---

Examination of JAMES LESSLIE, ESQUIRE, President of the "Bank of the People."

1. Is it expedient, in your opinion, to allow the Act authorising the Chartered Banks to suspend specie payments, to expire at the end of the present session of Parliament ?

I am of opinion it should expire, as the necessity which existed for the suspension of specie payments, viz. the state of the currency in the United States, does not now exist, and as there is very little doubt that the Banks of Lower Canada would also immediately follow the Banks of this Province, and resume the payment of their notes in specie—particularly if this were a stipulated condition upon which the privilege of establishing agencies in Upper Canada was made to depend.

In the event of the said Act being renewed, how long would you recommend it to be continued in force ? Say—till a certain day to be fixed by the Legislature—Till the Banks in Lower Canada resume specie payments—To leave it to the discretion of the Lieutenant Governor and Council—Or how would you limit the continuance of the said Act ?

If the Act be renewed, it ought not, in my opinion, to remain in force after the Banks in Lower Canada have resumed specie payments.

3. In the event of the said Act being renewed, do you think that it requires any, and what, alteration or amendment?

The privilege conferred upon the Banks, by an authorized suspension of specie payments, and the command which they necessarily have over the exchanges of the country, should be countervailed by some adequate provision in the statute, otherwise it will, as it has been, abused. The rate at which the Banks should be required, during the period of suspension, to furnish Exchange for their notes, if they do not pay in specie, might, with advantage to the public, be defined in the Act. The New-York market being the ordinary standard, by adding from two to three per cent. to the rates in that city, on Exchange on London, the rate would equitably be fixed for Upper Canada. This alteration in the Act, I should consider of the utmost importance.

4. In the event of the banks being required to resume payment in specie within a few months from this date, how would that affect their means or ability to grant accommodation to the public, in the way of discounting or otherwise—Would it compel the banks to curtail their circulation, or to limit their discounts—If so, how soon, and to what extent?

There can hardly be any doubt that the appointing of a period when the banks should be required by law to resume specie payments would inevitably lead to a curtailment of their circulation, preparatory to resumption, and necessarily to a limitation of their discounts. This difficulty would apparently be lessened, however, by their being permitted to tender exchange on London at stipulated rates for all sums over £ ———.

5. In case the banks should be required to resume specie payments within a few months, do you think that there would be a demand for specie to any great extent, and from what quarter would such a demand principally be made: Say—

From foreigners?

From different banks in this Province and in Lower Canada?

From merchants, by way of making remittance, or as a speculation?

From persons leaving the Province, and wishing to invest their capital elsewhere?

Or from persons remaining in the country, who may entertain doubts as to the solvency of the banks, or the stability of the Government?

When the rates of the banks are convertible into specie, it is certain that both individual and institutions will, when their interests require it, present them for payment.—The protection already afforded by the Act relative to British silver, and the proposed regulation of the rate of exchange by law, would, I am inclined to believe, obviate the difficulties arising from resumption, and lessen the demand for specie. The principal demand upon the banks would, probably, be from persons residing in the country having small sums by them unemployed.

6. Are there any, and what objections, to granting permission to the Montreal Bank, and the City Bank of Montreal, to establish Agencies in Upper Canada?

I can perceive no reason why the banks of Lower Canada should be prevented from establishing agencies in this Province, but only under the same restrictions and regulations, in regard to the redemption of their notes, as the Provincial banks.

7. It has been stated that the Bank of Upper Canada has withdrawn its accommodation from the public, at their different offices in the outer Districts—Has that been the case, and to what extent?

I cannot, from personal knowledge, give any testimony in regard to this question.

8. In case the Act should be renewed, what equivalent, if any, ought the banks to give the public for the privilege of being allowed to suspend specie payment?

By the proposed regulation of the rate of exchange, the public will receive temporary protection for the privilege of suspension given to the banks, but the only equivalent which could be given for powers and privileges so great as are possessed by chartered banks, under suspension, would be to make all the stockholders responsible to the full amount of their estates for the debts or liabilities of the institution.

J. LESSLIE.

Toronto, 12th March, 1839.

JOHN CAMERON, ESQUIRE, Cashier of the Commercial Bank of the Midland District, in this City, called in and examined.

1. Is it expedient, in your opinion, to allow the Act, authorizing the Chartered Banks to suspend specie payments, to expire at the end of the present session of Parliament?

It is not. The Banks would, in that case, be compelled too suddenly to curtail their issues, and abridge the accommodation they are now affording the country.

2. In the event of the said Act being renewed, how long would you recommend it to be continued in force—say, till a certain day, to be fixed by the Legislature—Till the Banks in Lower Canada resume specie payments—To leave it to the discretion of the Lieutenant-Governor and Council—Or how would you limit the continuance of the said Act?

I am of opinion, that it would be better that a period should be fixed by the Legislature, reserving, however, a power to the Lieutenant-Governor and Council, further to defer the period of resumption, in the event of any emergency occurring to render the exercise of this power necessary for the benefit of the country: certainly not before the Banks in the Lower Province resume. I would consider that six months from the passing of any renewed Act, would be sufficient to enable the Banks, and the community at large, so to frame their respective operations as to make resumption safe and expedient to all.

3. In the event of the said Act being renewed, do you think that it requires any, and what alteration, or amendment?

I do:—That a clause should be added, compelling Banks to settle for balances of notes, which the one may hold against the other,—say, on the first of each month—by Bills of Exchange, or otherwise; and, if by drafts on London at the current rate—and this fixed by a fair and proportionate advance on that on Montreal or New-York,—say, about half per centum on the former, or two on the latter.

4. In the event of the Banks being required to resume payment in specie, within a few months from this date, how would that affect their means or ability to grant accommodation to the public, in the way of discounting, or otherwise—Would it compel the Banks to curtail their circulation, or limit their discounts, and if so, how soon, and to what extent?

Should the Banks be called upon to resume specie payments in a few months from the present time, it would necessarily, to a certain extent, abridge their ability to grant accommodation to the public, in the way of discounting, as well as compel them to curtail their issues; and that to do so immediately, and to an extent of probably over one-third of their present circulation; I anticipate, in giving this opinion, a simultaneous resumption of specie payments, by the existence of the most friendly feeling between the Banks in both Provinces, when they would the more easily and speedily possess the full confidence of the public, and be enabled thereby the more quickly to grant their usual accommodation to the country.

5. In case the Banks should be required to resume specie payments within a few months, do you think that there would be a demand for specie, to any great extent, and from what quarter would such a demand principally be made: say—

From Foreigners?

From the different Banks in this Province and in Lower Canada?

From Merchants, by way of making remittances, or as a speculation?

From persons leaving the Province, and wishing to invest their capital elsewhere?

Or from persons remaining in the country, who may entertain doubts as to the solvency of the Banks, or the stability of the Government?

I do not anticipate that the demand for specie would be to any great extent. Such an amount of the notes of these Banks as are held by the Banks, or individuals of the frontier towns of the United States, will, I doubt not, be presented for redemption. To what extent, I have no means of ascertaining. The Banks here, and in Lower Canada, may require the settlement of such balances as the one may hold against the other.

From the mercantile community, in speaking for the Commercial Bank, whose policy I am only acquainted with as regards the operations with that body, I think nothing is to be feared. The demand will, I fear, be principally made by persons leaving the Province, and those who may entertain a doubt as to the stability of the Government.

6. Are there any, and what objections, to granting permission to the Montreal Bank, and the City Bank of Montreal, to establish Agencies in Upper Canada?

I am not prepared to reply to that question.

7. It has been stated that the Bank of Upper Canada has withdrawn its accommodation from the public, at their different offices in the outer Districts: Has that been the case, and to what extent?

I beg to decline replying to that question.

8. In case the Act should be renewed, what equivalent, if any, ought the Banks to give the public for the privilege of being allowed to suspend specie payments?

I know not what equivalent the Banks could offer to the public for the privilege of being allowed to suspend specie payments, beyond the extended accommodation the Act of the Legislature enables them to afford to the public, as I have always considered the Act, authorizing suspension, to have been passed more for the accommodation and support of the public, than for the purpose of aggrandizing the Banks.

Examination of BENJAMIM SMITH, ESQUIRE, Manager of the Bank of British North America.

1. Is it expedient, in your opinion, to allow the Act, authorizing the Chartered Banks to suspend specie payments, to expire at the end of the present session of Parliament?

I think not.

2. In the event of the said Act being renewed, how long would you recommend it to be continued in force, say—Till a certain day to be fixed by the Legislature—Till the banks in Lower Canada resume specie payment—To leave it to the discretion of the Lieutenant-Governor and Council—Or how would you limit the continuance of said Act?

Until the banks in Lower Canada resume specie payments.

3. In the event of the said Act being renewed, do you think that it requires any, and what alteration, or amendment?

The Bank of British North America having an "Act to sue and be sued," 7 Wm. IV. c. 34, I think it should be named, in the Act authorizing the suspension of specie payments, because the 20th clause of their Act says, that, "On failure to redeem their notes in specie, they are to discontinue banking operations:" and the Act passed 11th July 1837, secures to incorporated banks only, their privileges during the suspension of specie payments.

4. In the event of the banks being required to resume payment in specie within a few months from this date, how would that affect their means or ability to grant accommodation to the public in the way of discounting or otherwise—Would it compel the banks to curtail their circulation or limit their discounts, and if so, how soon, and to what extent?

I think the banks would immediately lessen their discounts, and take every other method to curtail their circulation, until the effect of the resumption was known.

5. In case the banks should be required to resume specie payments within a few months, do you think that there would be a demand for specie to any great extent, and from what quarter would such a demand principally be made: Say—

From foreigners?

From the different banks in this Province and in Lower Canada?

From merchants, by way of making remittances, or as a speculation?

From persons leaving the Province and wishing to invest their capital elsewhere?

Or from persons remaining in the country who may entertain doubt as to the solvency of the banks, or the stability of the Government?

I think there would be a demand for specie from all these parties, so long as the present high rate of exchange on New York continues.—Should the rate be reduced to 1 or 2 per cent. above par, I think the demand would be confined to persons leaving the Province, and those who doubt the stability of the Government.

6. Are there any, and what objections, to granting permission to the Montreal Bank, and the City Bank of Montreal, to establish Agencies in Upper Canada?

The banks at present established in Upper Canada being able to afford all the accommodation required by the public in their transactions with the Lower Province, I do not think that any benefit would be derived from the establishment of Agencies by the Montreal and City Banks.

7. It has been stated that the Bank of Upper Canada has withdrawn its accommodation from the public at their different offices in the outer Districts: Has that been the case, and to what extent?

I do not know.

8. In case the Act should be renewed, what equivalent, if any, ought the banks to give the public for the privilege of being allowed to suspend specie payments?

During the suspension, I think that those banks which are favoured with the Government Bills of Exchange on London ought to allow the public 1 per cent. upon the amount of such exchange, as they get it at a low rate, in consequence of its not being offered to the other banks or to the public generally, and pay for it in their own notes which are not redeemable.

---

1. Is it expedient, in your opinion, to allow the Act, authorizing the Chartered Banks to suspend specie payments, to expire at the end of the present session of Parliament?

I think that the Banks should not be compelled, at present, to resume specie payments.

2. In the event of the said Act being renewed, how long would you recommend it to be continued in force: Say, till a certain day, to be fixed by the Legislature—Till the Banks in Lower Canada resume specie payments—To leave it to the discretion of the Lieutenant-Governor and Council—Or how would you limit the continuance of said Act?

I think the Act should be continued in force till the end of the next session of Parliament.

3. In the event of the said Act being renewed, do you think that it requires any, and what alteration or amendment?

I am not prepared at present to suggest any amendment.

4. In the event of the banks being required to resume payment in specie within a few months from this date, how would that affect their means or ability to grant accommodation to the public in the way of discounting or otherwise—Would it compel the banks to curtail their circulation or limit their discount, and if so, how soon, and to what extent?

I think the banks would be compelled, for their own protection, to cease discounting altogether—and thereby paralyze the whole commercial community.

5. In case the banks should be required to resume specie payments within a few months, do you think that there would be a demand for specie to any great extent, and from what quarter would such a demand principally be made: Say—

From foreigners?

From the different banks in this Province and in Lower Canada?

From merchants, by way of making remittances, or as a speculation?

From persons leaving the Province and wishing to invest their capital elsewhere?

Or from persons remaining in the country who may entertain doubt as to the solvency of the banks, or the stability of the Government?

I am of opinion that a demand would come from all these quarters more or less.

6. Are there any, and what objections, to granting permission to the Montreal Bank, and the City Bank of Montreal, to establish Agencies in Upper Canada?

I am of opinion that no objection can be made.

7. It has been stated that the Bank of Upper Canada has withdrawn its accommodation from the public, at its different offices in the outer Districts: Has that been the case, and to what extent?

I have no personal knowledge as to this.

8. In case the Act should be renewed, what equivalent, if any, ought the banks to give the public for the privilege of being allowed to suspend specie payment?

Liberal accommodation in the way of discounting.

FRANCIS HINCKS, ESQUIRE, Cashier of the Bank of the People, called in and examined.

1. Is it expedient, in your opinion, to allow the Act authorizing the Chartered Banks to suspend specie payments to expire at the end of the present session of Parliament?

Most decidedly.—The effect of a suspension of specie payments in this Province is to enable the banks to defraud the public by charging an exorbitant premium on foreign exchange. It does not enable them to extend their accommodation. There is, in my opinion, a very prevalent error in this subject. If a bank has to redeem its liabilities with foreign exchange, it may just as well do so with specie, except that it is enabled to charge its own price for exchange in consequence of its creditors having no alternative. It would be ruinous to the Country for the banks to suspend payment altogether, as the Bank of England formerly did, because, even assuming that public confidence would be unbounded, there are no Capitalists to hoard the notes, and thus keep them at nearly par value. For a short time the Bank of Upper Canada refused to give anything for its bills, and the inconvenience caused by this conduct was very great. The Commercial Bank Agency at Toronto has assumed a right to redeem its notes for such parties as it pleases—viz., its own customers. This is, of course, better than not paying at all, but is still very unjust. Under the present Act, the Chartered Banks are enabled to suspend payment virtually, and from the conduct of the Bank of Upper Canada, it is to be apprehended that they might do so; if they did the credit of the Province would be destroyed—specie and exchanges would be 20 or 30 per cent. premium, and every thing else in proportion. I can see no excuse for a continued suspension. I am not aware that the Government has borrowed money from any of the Chartered Banks, and I think it ought not, because all the banking capital in the Province is required to sustain the commercial interests. I feel convinced the sole object of suspension is to enable the banks to charge an exorbitant premium on exchange, and that this will be its effect.

2. In the event of the said Act being renewed, how long would you recommend it to be continued in force? Say—till a certain day to be fixed by the Legislature—Till the banks in Lower Canada resume specie payments—To leave it to the discretion of the Lieutenant Governor and Council—Or how would you limit the continuance of said Act?

I think that the Act should be allowed to expire, but, if the Legislature think otherwise, I am of opinion that a day should be fixed for a resumption. The resumption or suspension in Lower Canada does not affect us in the least, so long as the bank balances are settled in exchange. Those banks have suspended, owing to a vexatious run caused by the disturbed state of the Province, and they will, doubtless, resume whenever the political state of the Country will permit. As far as I can learn, they have acted with strict honour during their suspension, having given exchange at all times at a moderate rate. Still there are complaints that they have charged too much. I think that if the Suspension Act is renewed, a pledge should be exacted from the banks, that they would furnish exchange on London for their paper at a fair rate—say 2 or at most 3 per cent. above New York, and exchange on New York at 2 or 3 per cent. It would be optional with them to give either. I do not think that a clause could be framed in the Act to compel them to do so, but they might be induced to give a pledge which, being public, they could not violate without exposure.

3. In the event of the said Act being renewed, do you think that it requires any, and what, alteration and amendment ?

As I hardly think the suggestion made in my last answer could be embodied in the Act, I should say that I am not aware of any improvement.

4. In the event of the banks being required to resume payment in specie within a few months from this date, how would that affect their means or ability to grant accommodation to the public in the way of discounting or otherwise—Would it compel the banks to curtail their circulation or to limit their discounts—If so, how soon, and to what extent ?

I do not think that the resumption of specie payments would prevent the banks affording the usual accommodation to their customers. There would of course be a demand for a small quantity of silver to supply the wants of the country, small change having almost disappeared, but this would not be sensibly felt.

5. In case the banks should be required to resume specie payments within a few months, do you think that there would be a demand for specie to any great extent, and from what quarter would such a demand principally be made : Say—

From foreigners ?

From the different banks in this Province, and in Lower Canada ?

From merchants by way of making remittances, or as a speculation ?

From persons leaving the Province, and wishing to invest their capital elsewhere ?

Or from persons remaining in the country who may entertain doubts as to the solvency of the banks, or the stability of the Government ?

I do not believe there would be any extraordinary demand for specie—not from Foreigners, because there is very little Upper Canada paper in circulation in the United States. That circulation would be increased if specie payments were resumed, because it would re-establish confidence which has been entirely destroyed. There would be no demand from the banks in either Province on one another beyond what there has always been in ordinary times, and what there always must be. Merchants never demand specie to remit, except when the exchanges rise to an exorbitant rate—the liability to pay specie is the salutary check on exchanges, but merchants are always slow, perhaps too slow, in availing themselves of it. Persons leaving the Province must have specie or its equivalent, whether there is suspension or not, and not one dollar more would go out of the Province if a resumption was to take place. These persons have now to pay a premium for silver, and a good deal of traffic goes on in the commodity, but it still goes out of the Province. If these persons were the only sufferers by the suspension of specie payments the grievance might not be considered so severe, but it presses on the commercial interests with far greater force. There would probably be a demand on the banks for silver, in case of resumption, from the inhabitants of the Province, particularly while rumours of war and political excitements prevail ; but I do not believe this demand would be so serious as is generally supposed. I do not believe the amount of money lying unemployed in this Province to be very great, and unless the specie was drawn out for the purpose of hoarding, no evil would result from a partial demand. It is difficult to judge what may be the extent of the annoyance from this source, but the sooner the evil is met the better. My own opinion is, that there is more hoarding in the Country at present than if specie payments existed. The very careful or timid man loses confidence in institutions which do not pay specie, and turn their bills into specie, on the best terms he can, and hoards it. If he knew that he could get silver at a moment's notice, he would probably hold bills. I do not think there would be any material run on the banks in case of resumption, either from political motives or from fear of their solvency. The continued suspension has a most injurious tendency. It induces Capitalists at home to think either that the Province is insolvent or that the Government is unstable—perhaps both. The suspension of the Lower Canada Banks at the very outbreak of the late Rebellion will afford good ground for the latter opinion, but I am sure the Honourable Committee will agree with me that the political state of Upper Canada does not require a suspension of specie payments. The fatal destruction of our credit, which I have alluded to, has been incurred, that the banks may obtain unreasonable and usurious profits, without affording any real benefit to the community at large.

6. Are there any, and what objections, to granting permission to the Montreal Bank, and the City Bank of Montreal, to establish Agencies in Upper Canada ?

I would encourage in every way the introduction of foreign capital, and I would therefore say, there can be no objection. As however, these institutions are chartered, there would be no liability to the people of this Province, not even the double security clause. I know not whether they could be sued. I think, therefore, that if a branch or branches were established here with limited liability, they should issue notes redeemable in specie at the branches where issued—should give a statement of their affairs to the Legislature—in fact, these branches should be like the branches of the great Banks in Ireland, separate establishments with a permanent local capital, &c. &c. under the superintendence of the Mother Institution. These are my views, but I confess I have formed them hastily, and have not given much attention to the subject. The Montreal Bank has been as far as I can judge, most ably conducted, and it would be a most essential service to the Province if its operations could be extended here. It would in a short time instruct our Directors in the system of Commercial Banking, which very few of them understand.

7. It has been stated that the Bank of Upper Canada has withdrawn its accommodation from the public at their different offices in the outer Districts—Has that been the case, and to what extent?

I know nothing of the outer Districts, I believe there is hardly a Merchant in this City who banks with that Institution, and I have heard that its Cashier has stated that they did not want Merchants accounts—a most extraordinary assertion, if true, for the manager of a Bank. My own opinion, founded, I wish it to be understood, entirely on hearsay, is, that the Capital of the Bank of Upper Canada is so locked up in debentures, mortgages, long loans, and other unavailable securities, that it is compelled to extort exorbitant premiums on exchanges, in order to realize its usual profits. Hence the desire for continued suspension.

8. In case the Act should be renewed, what equivalent, if any, ought the banks to give the public for the privilege of being allowed to suspend specie payments?

I should be very sorry indeed were the Legislature to sell to the Banks a privilege to suspend. If they did so, the power would unquestionably be abused—the Banks would cease redeeming their Bills altogether, and would have a plausible excuse enough for so doing.

---

JOHN S. CARTWRIGHT, ESQUIRE, President of the Commercial Bank of the Midland District, called in and examined.

1. Is it expedient, in your opinion, to allow the Act authorising the Chartered Banks to suspend specie payments, to expire at the end of the present session of Parliament?

I am of opinion that it would be most advisable to renew the Act. The chartered banks could resume specie payments, if insisted on, as far as the banks themselves are concerned, by importing specie at a great expense. But, in self-defence, they would be compelled to suspend all accommodation, demand payment, decline negotiating drafts, or purchasing exchange, or affording any banking facilities; the consequences of which, to the mercantile community and the public generally, can hardly be appreciated. Exchange would fall in consequence of the means of purchasing it being withheld, and it is difficult to understand how the public business could be conducted. The Commissary General's expenditure for Upper Canada I conceive to exceed £100,000 sterling per month. The Commercial Bank paid out for account of the Commissary General £43,000 sterling within the month of February; and he has, on more than one occasion, declared the utter impossibility of procuring a supply of specie, by any means, sufficient to meet the wants of the public service. In the event of resumption the banks must suspend their issues of paper, and I see no means of carrying on the public service, except the issue of army bills, not convertible into specie. Under no circumstances would it be just to compel the banks in this Province to resume until the currency was equalized between Upper and Lower Canada.

2. In the event of the said Act being renewed, how long would you recommend it to be continued in force? Say—till a certain day, to be fixed by the Legislature—Till the Banks in Lower Canada resume specie payments—To leave it to the discretion of the Lieutenant Governor and Council—Or how would you limit the continuance of said Act?

At present I am of opinion that it would be best to fix a certain day, but I am not quite prepared to say how far distant it should be.

3. In the event of the said Act being renewed, do you think that it requires any, and what, alteration and amendment?

I think the Act does not require any amendment.

4. In the event of the Banks being required to resume payment in specie, within a few months from this date, how would that affect their means, or ability to grant accommodation to the public, in the way of discounting or otherwise? Would it compel the Banks to curtail their circulation, or to limit their discounts:—if so, how soon, and to what extent?

Answered in reply to first question.

5. In case the Banks should be required to resume specie payments within a few months, do you think that there would be a demand for specie, to any great extent, and from what quarter would such a demand principally be made: say—

From Foreigners?

From the different Banks in this Province and in Lower Canada?

From Merchants, by way of making remittances, or as a speculation?

From persons leaving the Province, and wishing to invest their capital elsewhere?

Or from persons remaining in the country, who may entertain doubt as to the solvency of the Banks, or the stability of the Government?

I do not apprehend much difficulty between the banks in Upper Canada, whose mutual interest it would be to sustain each other. I apprehend a great drain from foreigners and speculators; and also in the peculiar circumstances of the country, from persons leaving it or who may be apprehensive of future trouble.

6. Are there any, and what objections, to granting permission to the Montreal Bank, and the City Bank of Montreal, to establish Agencies in Upper Canada?

I am of opinion there exists no necessity for the establishment of such Agencies: but would not object to permission being granted, provided they were compelled to redeem in specie all notes issued by them in the Upper Province, and to receive in payment of all claims their notes, whether issued in Upper or Lower Canada. I am not aware of the refusal, in ordinary times, by any of the Chartered Banks in Upper Canada, to discount drafts to any amount, in Lower Canada considered good. Nor has the Commercial Bank at any time declined negotiating drafts on Lower Canada, to any extent, on safe houses. Nor do I conceive that much greater facilities for drawing and negotiating drafts on Lower Canada, by establishing the proposed Agencies, would be afforded.

7. It has been stated that the Bank of Upper Canada has withdrawn their accommodation from the public, at their different Offices in the outer districts.—Has that been the case, and to what extent?

Intended for the Bank of Upper Canada.

8. In case the Act should be renewed, what equivalent, if any, ought the banks to give the public for the privilege of being allowed to suspend specie payments?

I am of opinion that the continuance of accommodation to the public, by discounts, and the prevention of the stagnation of business consequent upon resumption, would be sufficient equivalent; but I think the Banks would not object loaning to the Province, in proportion to their capital, at a reduced rate of interest—the sums so loaned to be repaid before being called upon to resume specie payments.

---

---

1. Is it expedient, in your opinion, to allow the Act authorizing the Chartered Banks to suspend specie payments, to expire at the end of the present session of Parliament?

I think it is.

2. In the event of the said Act being renewed, how long would you recommend it to be continued in force? Say—till a certain day to be fixed by the Legislature—Till the Banks in Lower Canada resume specie payments—To leave it to the discretion of the Lieutenant Governor and Council—Or how would you limit the continuance of the said Act?

As the banks in this Province neither suspended nor resumed specie payments when the banks in Lower Canada did so, I see no reason for the former delaying to resume until such time as the latter see fit to do it.

3. In the event of the said Act being renewed, do you think that it requires any, and what, alteration or amendment?

Not answered.

4. In the event of the banks being required to resume payment in specie within a few months from this date, how would that affect their means or ability to grant accommodation to the public, in the way of discounting or otherwise—Would it compel the banks to curtail their circulation, or to limit their discounts—If so, how soon, and to what extent?

I cannot imagine the country can ever be in a better situation, or the banks better prepared for the resumption of specie payments, than they now are, not only from the past, but future expenditures of the Imperial Government, which enables the banks to place funds in every quarter where they are required, and leaves the inhabitants (generally) in but little want of accommodation, compared to their previous wants. I therefore (see No. 5.) do not think that the banks who may have been discounting would find it necessary to curtail their discounts to any great extent.

5. In case the banks should be required to resume specie payments within a few months, do you think that there would be a demand for specie to any great extent, and from what quarter would such a demand principally be made: Say—

From foreigners?

From different banks in this Province and in Lower Canada?

From merchants, by way of making remittance, or as a speculation?

From persons leaving the Province, and wishing to invest their capital elsewhere?

Or from persons remaining in the country, who may entertain doubts as to the solvency of the banks, or the stability of the Government?

The demand for specie will, in a great measure, depend upon the conduct of the banks themselves; if they will sell exchange on England, drafts on New York or Montreal, at a moderate premium, very little specie would be required. A merchant going to New York to purchase goods would prefer giving a moderate premium for a draft on that city, instead of carrying specie with him, but if he is charged 4 or 5 per cent premium, as has been the case all winter, he will prefer taking the specie with him—this will also apply to persons leaving the Province and wishing to invest their capital elsewhere.

6. Are there any, and what objections, to granting permission to the Montreal Bank, and the City Bank of Montreal, to establish Agencies in Upper Canada?

I do not think permission ought to be granted to any banks (not of this Province) to establish agencies in it—it would materially injure the banks already established—would compel them to curtail their discounts much more than the resumption of specie payments, from the circumstance of the balance of trade being so much against this Province, and in favour of the Lower one. All notes granted or drafts drawn by or upon merchants, for the purchase of goods in the Lower Province, or drafts drawn by the same on persons of the Lower Province, to purchase produce, would naturally pass through the Banks in Montreal, or their Agencies in this Province, which would enable them, in almost all cases, to have balances against the Banks of this Province, which would compel them to curtail their discounts.

7. It has been stated that the Bank of Upper Canada has withdrawn its accommodation from the public at their different offices in the outer Districts: Has that been the case, and to what extent?

Of my own knowledge I know nothing—report says, that it has in this city as well as the outer districts.

8. In case the Act should be renewed, what equivalent, if any, ought the banks to give the public for the privilege of being allowed to suspend specie payments?

Not answered.

Examination of MR. HUGH SCOBIE, Editor of the Colonist Newspaper.

1. Is it expedient, in your opinion, to allow the Act, authorizing the Chartered Banks to suspend specie payments, to expire at the end of the present session of Parliament?

It would require to be shown before renewing the Act, that the banks have severally used the privilege of suspension for the general benefit of the public, as well as for their own profit; that they have continued their operations during the suspension to accommodate the commercial and agricultural interests to a reasonable extent—and that they have not sought for themselves other channels wherein to engage their capital to the detriment of these interests.

The Bank of Upper Canada is generally looked upon as the controlling institution. Her aim seems to have been to regulate the banking operations of the Province, and with the aid of the Provincial Government and of the Commissariat Department, it is generally admitted that she possesses advantages over the other banks, which she can use at any time to promote her own ends.

For sometime back it is notorious that the Bank of Upper Canada has extended no accommodation to the mercantile and agricultural interests—that their operations have been chiefly confined to the negotiation of Commissariat Business. In this manner the usual amount of money put in circulation by them, by discount or otherwise, has been withdrawn—and the funds of the Institution have been chiefly employed in the transaction of Commissariat business. The Commissariat is presumed to pay in specie—in this instance they have paid in paper, for which neither specie could be procured, nor at times an equivalent in exchange. The country was thus deprived of a two-fold advantage—in the first place they were deprived of the issue of bullion by the Commissariat, and secondly, of the customary accommodation by the Bank of Upper Canada.

I understand the intention of the Act authorizing the suspension of specie payments to have been to protect the banks in continuing their usual business—but it would appear that it has been taken advantage of by the Bank of Upper Canada, to produce profit to the Institution, by withdrawing their accommodations from the public, and employing their capital otherwise, without extending to the public a corresponding benefit. During the suspension, the public were entitled to expect reasonable accommodation from the bank as usual—and had these been granted them, they would have had the advantage besides of the Commissariat issues, and trade would have flourished in proportion. I would not, therefore, recommend a continuance of the suspension of specie payments, unless it could be so regulated as to ensure reasonable accommodation to the public.

2. In the event of the said Act being renewed, how long would you recommend it to be continued in force? Say—till a certain day to be fixed by the Legislature—Till the banks in Lower Canada resume specie payments—To leave it to the discretion of the Lieutenant Governor and Council—Or how would you limit the continuance of said Act?

In the event of the Act being renewed it is not easy to prescribe a definite period for its continuance, unless, indeed, it were until the banks in Lower Canada resumed—or in the event of that not taking place sooner, until the end of the next ensuing session of Parliament. Considering the connection of the Executive Government with the bank of Upper Canada, and the manner in which that Institution has, for some time past, been conducted, as well as the proceedings generally of the Executive with respect to financial affairs, since the troubles of the Country commenced, I would not advise that a discretionary power should be vested in that body.

3. In the event of the said Act being renewed, do you think that it requires any, and what alteration, or amendment?

Not having the Act now before me, I decline answering this question. (See answer 8.)

4. In the event of the Banks being required to resume payment in specie, within a few months from this date, how would that affect their means or ability to grant accommodation to the public, in the way of discounting, or otherwise—Would it compel the Banks to curtail their circulation, or limit their discounts, and if so, how soon, and to what extent?

To answer this question satisfactorily, it would be necessary to know the relative amount of business done by the banks, before and during the suspension, and the probable demand for specie that would have taken place had the suspension not been authorized. If the banks are prepared to resume, it ought to be understood that they do so, without limiting their present amount of business—as the extent of accommodation now afforded by them, does not amount to that required by the public.

5. In case the Banks should be required to resume specie payments within a few months, do you think that there would be a demand for specie, to any great extent, and from what quarter would such a demand principally be made: say—

From Foreigners?

From the different Banks in this Province and in Lower Canada?

From Merchants, by way of making remittances, or as a speculation?

From persons leaving the Province, and wishing to invest their capital elsewhere?

Or from persons remaining in the country, who may entertain doubts as to the solvency of the Banks, or the stability of the Government?

The banks should be prepared at all times to provide a fair amount of specie, in proportion to their issues. The public accommodation should be considered as much, at least, as their own profit. I do not suppose the demand for specie would exceed that which the Banks ought to be prepared to answer—and that demand would proceed more or less from the different sources mentioned in the question.

6. Are there any, and what objections, to granting permission to the Montreal Bank, and the City Bank of Montreal, to establish Agencies in Upper Canada?

I am of opinion that the business of banking should be carried on, on as liberal a scale as is consistent with the safety of the public. I cannot see that the public interests would suffer by permitting the banks in Montreal to have agencies in this Province. The business of banking ought to be open to fair competition, subject to Legislative supervision; and the admission of agencies of the Montreal Banks into this Province, would be beneficial, in as much as it would be the means of introducing additional Capital into the Country—produce a check on the Banking institutions now in this Province, and facilitate the exchanges between Upper and Lower Canada.

7. It has been stated that the Bank of Upper Canada has withdrawn its accommodation from the public, at its different offices in the outer Districts: Has that been the case, and to what extent?

I cannot answer exactly this question, but if the proceedings of the Bank in Toronto are taken as a criterion whereby to judge of their doings in the outer Districts, it is very probable that they have withdrawn their accommodations from the Public there also.

8. In case the Act should be renewed, what equivalent, if any, ought the banks to give the public for the privilege of being allowed to suspend specie payment?

If I am to understand the bearing of this question to be, that the Banks should give the public a certain amount of money for the privilege of suspension, I view it as a dangerous experiment. Under the suspension Act, as it now exists, the Banks have sufficient power reposed in them to injure the public, but in the event of a sum of money being paid by them, for a continuance of the suspension Act, it would be nothing less than that they purchase from the Legislature a right to act just as they choose. We have paid for our privilege, they may say, and we are entitled to use it in the most profitable manner for ourselves, and the public cannot object because they have already been rewarded.

If the suspension be continued, the Banks ought to be obliged to furnish the public during the suspension with exchange on England at a fixed rate over the sales of Commissariat exchange at Montreal or Toronto—or over the current rate of exchange at New York on England. They ought also to be obliged to exchange with one another, the notes in their possession belonging to each other at fixed periods, and to settle balances by bills of exchange on England or New York, at a reasonable rate below the selling price to the public.

It would appear proper that the Banks should be obliged always to keep in circulation a given amount of Notes of the denomination of Five Shillings, for which specie might be demanded.

This answer may apply more properly in some respects to the third question.

H. N. SCOBIE.

Examination of WILLIAM ROSS, ESQUIRE, Merchant, Toronto.

1. Is it expedient, in your opinion, to allow the Act authorizing the Chartered Banks to suspend specie payments to expire at the end of the present session of Parliament?

I think the Act ought to be allowed to expire, the privilege having been much abused.

2. In the event of the said Act being renewed, how long would you recommend it to be continued in force—say, till a certain day, to be fixed by the Legislature—Till the Banks in Lower Canada resume specie payments—To leave it to the discretion of the Lieutenant-Governor and Council—Or how would you limit the continuance of the said Act?

Should the Act be renewed I think it should only be till the banks in Lower Canada resume—at all events, no power ought to be invested in the Executive Council, considering how they exercised that power for the same purpose in 1837.

3. In the event of the said Act being renewed, do you think that it requires any, and what alteration, or amendment?

Should the Act be renewed, the banks ought to be made to give exchange for their paper at all times during the suspension at a fair rate, say on New York and London at the same rate as the banks in Lower Canada—this they have never yet done.

4. In the event of the banks being required to resume payment in specie within a few months from this date, how would that affect their means or ability to grant accommodation to the public in the way of discounting or otherwise—Would it compel the banks to curtail their circulation or limit their discounts, and if so, how soon, and to what extent?

Some of the banks may find it necessary to curtail their circulation to a small extent, but may, at the same time, be able to give the same accommodation to the public they now give. It would be better for the public to have a less circulation, if issued in a legitimate way, and redeemed in specie or exchange at a fair rate, than as it is now.

5. In case the banks should be required to resume specie payments within a few months, do you think that there would be a demand for specie to any great extent, and from what quarter would such a demand principally be made: Say—

From foreigners?

None: British silver is sufficient to protect the banks from this quarter.

From the different banks in this Province and in Lower Canada?

A more liberal course among themselves would prevent this, and that they have much need in cultivating.

From merchants, by way of making remittances, or as a speculation?

Exchange at a fair rate would prevent this.

From persons leaving the Province and wishing to invest their capital elsewhere?

Exchange at a fair rate would also prevent this.

Or from persons remaining in the country who may entertain doubt as to the solvency of the banks, or the stability of the Government?

Any demand of this kind would be very trifling, and the British silver is more than sufficient to protect them.

6. Are there any, and what objections, to granting permission to the Montreal Bank, and the City Bank of Montreal, to establish Agencies in Upper Canada?

I think it is very desirable that every facility should be given the Montreal and City Banks to establish Agencies in this Province. A great many of our merchants are obliged to send paper to Montreal regularly to be discounted.

7. It has been stated that the Bank of Upper Canada has withdrawn its accommodation from the public, at their different offices in the outer Districts: Has that been the case, and to what extent?

I cannot say to what extent the Upper Canada Bank has withdrawn its accommodation from the public in the outer Districts, but I know that they have almost entirely withdrawn it from the mercantile community in this City and neighbourhood.

8. In case the Act should be renewed, what equivalent, if any, ought the Banks to give the public for the privilege of being allowed to suspend specie payments?

Should the Act be renewed, the best and only equivalent the public should receive from the banks is, to restrict them as pointed out in the answer to the third question.

WM. ROSS.

Examination of ALEXANDER OGILVIE, ESQUIRE, Merchant, Toronto.

1. Is it expedient, in your opinion, to allow the Act, authorizing the Chartered Banks to suspend specie payments, to expire at the end of the present session of Parliament?

The high rate of Exchange charged here for Bills on England, compared with Bills drawn at New York and Montreal, convinces me at once of the justice of allowing this Act to expire at the end of the present Session of Parliament. The Banks have derived much advantage from the suspension, at a great sacrifice to the public.

2. In the event of the said Act being renewed, how long would you recommend it to be continued in force, say—Till a certain day to be fixed by the Legislature—Till the banks in Lower Canada resume specie payment—To leave it to the discretion of the Lieutenant-Governor and Council—Or how would you limit the continuance of said Act?

I think it should only be renewed until the Banks in Lower Canada resume specie payments, and that no discretionary power should be vested in the Governor and Council.

3. In the event of the said Act being renewed, do you think that it requires any, and what alteration or amendment?

I think that the Banks should be obliged to take their own notes for Exchange on New York or London, at a fair rate—say from 2 to 2½ per cent. premium on New York, and the same advance on the New York rate on London.

4. In the event of the banks being required to resume payment in specie within a few months from this date, how would that affect their means or ability to grant accommodation to the public in the way of discounting or otherwise—Would it compel the banks to curtail their circulation or limit their discount, and if so, how soon, and to what extent?

I do not know the extent of their circulation, and am not prepared to give a positive answer, but it is my impression that those Banks that have supported the mercantile interests of the Province, would have no occasion to curtail their circulation or limit their discounts.

5. In case the banks should be required to resume specie payments within a few months, do you think that there would be a demand for specie to any great extent, and from what quarter would such a demand principally be made: Say—

From foreigners?

I think not, British silver would protect them.

From the different banks in this Province and in Lower Canada?

A proper regulation of exchange, and an amicable understanding among themselves would be required.

From merchants, by way of making remittances, or as a speculation?

Merchants will always remit on the most favorable terms.

From persons leaving the Province and wishing to invest their capital elsewhere?

To no extent.

Or from persons remaining in the country who may entertain doubt as to the solvency of the banks, or the stability of the Government?

They are so very few that no apprehension need be entertained on their account.

6. Are there any, and what objections, to granting permission to the Montreal Bank, and the City Bank of Montreal, to establish Agencies in Upper Canada?

I know no objections, on the contrary I think they should be encouraged.

7. It has been stated that the Bank of Upper Canada has withdrawn its accommodation from the public at their different offices in the outer Districts: Has that been the case, and to what extent?

I do not know, having no transactions with them, and knowing none who have.

8. In case the Act should be renewed, what equivalent, if any, ought the banks to give the public for the privilege of being allowed to suspend specie payments?

By selling exchange about the rate stated in the third answer, the Banks would enable the importer to sell his goods at a cheaper rate than he is now able to do, and would therefore benefit the public greatly.

Toronto, 11th March, 1839.

ALEX. OGILVIE.

Evidence of JAMES CHARLES, ESQUIRE, Merchant, of Toronto.

1. Is it expedient, in your opinion, to allow the Act, authorizing the Chartered Banks to suspend specie payments, to expire at the end of the present session of Parliament?

Yes.

2. In the event of the said Act being renewed, how long would you recommend it to be continued in force: Say, till a certain day, to be fixed by the Legislature—Till the Banks in Lower Canada resume specie payments—To leave it to the discretion of the Lieutenant-Governor and Council—Or how would you limit the continuance of said Act?

When the Lower Canada Banks do—no power left to the Governor in Council.

3. In the event of the said Act being renewed, do you think that it requires any, and what, alteration or amendment?

To compel all the Banks to give Exchange upon England, for their own paper, at a rate not exceeding  $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. above what the Commissariat sells at, which Bills being drawn at 30 days, and the Bank being 60, is equal to 1 per cent.

4. In the event of the banks being required to resume payment in specie within a few months from this date, how would that affect their means or ability to grant accommodation to the public, in the way of discounting or otherwise—Would it compel the banks to curtail their circulation, or to limit their discounts—If so, how soon, and to what extent?

I do not think it will cause the Banks to curtail their discounts to commercial men.

5. In case the banks should be required to resume specie payments within a few months, do you think that there would be a demand for specie to any great extent, and from what quarter would such a demand principally be made: Say—

From foreigners?

To prevent this, make the British half crown and sovereign a legal tender in the same ratio as the shillings and sixpences, and exchange on New York at two per cent.

From the different banks in this Province and in Lower Canada?

Specie will not be required when exchange is to be had at fair rates.

From merchants, by way of making remittances, or as a speculation?

Answer as above.

From persons leaving the Province, and wishing to invest their capital elsewhere?

It will be to a very small extent, and the Banks supplying themselves with British coin will be sufficient protection.

Or from persons remaining in the country, who may entertain doubts as to the solvency of the banks, or the stability of the Government?

There possibly may be some persons who will call upon the Banks for specie, but to a very small amount.

6. Are there any, and what objections, to granting permission to the Montreal Bank, and the City Bank of Montreal, to establish Agencies in Upper Canada?

None whatever; but a great benefit.

7. It has been stated that the Bank of Upper Canada has withdrawn their accommodation from the public, at their different Offices in the outer districts.—Has that been the case, and to what extent?

I cannot answer the above, except by way of remittances, which I have received from the Western District in notes, (and in some instances cut in halves for better security) per post, saying drafts on this place could not be procured for even their own paper.

8. In case the Act should be renewed, what equivalent, if any, ought the banks to give the public for the privilege of being allowed to suspend specie payments?

At all times to act with liberality, and discount good substantial commercial paper, and not cease in toto at times when most required "as they have done," also grant exchanges as previously stated.

THOMAS TAYLOR, ESQUIRE, late Agent for the Farmer's Bank at St. Catharines, called in and examined.

1. The original amount of Subscribed Stock?

Refer to the Manager—such account being only at the Toronto or Home Board.

2. The original number of Partners?

As number one.

3. The amount of forfeited stock, and how applied?

As numbers one and two for the general account—but in the Niagara District where nearly, or quite, four thousand shares were subscribed for, I have no means of knowing now; but my impression is, that there are not now as many hundreds—the rest having been taken in by the Bank, chiefly for liabilities, at a discount of 20 to 25 per cent., which penalties are applied to pay dividends—for lack of profits.

4. From what fund was the first dividend paid?

The Manager can best tell.

5. The names of the Parties who forfeited their stock, and what occupation and residence?

Refer to the Manager.

6. The number of agencies during the first period of the Bank, and how many are now in existence?

Believe four if not five—now one.

7. What was the amount of stock originally taken at St. Catharine's, or in the Niagara District?

Replied to by answer number three.

8. What amount of stock has been purchased by the Trustees of the Bank since the commencement—at what rate?

Refer to the Manager—but for example I refer to answer number three, as relates to the then principal District—Niagara.

9. What amount of stock has been purchased by the Bank in the Niagara District, St. Catharine's, &c.—and at what rate?

Refer to answer number three.

10. What is the number of the present Shareholders, their names, occupation, and residence?

Refer to the Manager.

11. What is the present amount of the absolute and bona-fide capital—viz., How many shares held by the present Shareholders, and how much paid on the same—How many shares purchased by the Bank, and how much was paid on the same—How many shares forfeited by individuals, and how much paid upon the same, making the amount of the subscribed capital—In what manner is the capital of the Bank defined—Does it include the amount of forfeited stock, and also the amount of stock purchased by the Bank?

As number ten.

12. Is the amount of forfeited stock and the stock purchased by the Bank available to any Purchaser in the market, or is that stock considered absorbed, and never intended for sale?

It might be, if a purchaser could be found.

13. Were any promises held out to the original Shareholders that only one or two instalments at most, would be required?

Most certainly: it was stated, if not positively so, that it was not probable much more, if any, would be required or called for.

14. What amount of shares were subscribed, and how much stock was paid in at the time the Bank commenced discounting?

I refer to the books of the Bank, and to the Manager—but I have heard much below the amount required by the deed of settlement.

15 & 16. Is it, in your opinion, expedient to allow the Act authorizing the Chartered Banks to suspend specie payments, to expire at the end of the present session of Parliament? In the event of the said Act being renewed, how long would you recommend it to be continued in force? Say—till a certain day to be fixed by the Legislature—Till the Banks in Lower Canada resume specie payments—To leave it to the discretion of the Lieutenant Governor and Council—Or how would you limit the continuance of the said Act?

It would, in my opinion, be expedient to resume specie payment, but not partially—i. e. the resumption in Upper Canada should be governed by Lower Canada, when they resume, I am of opinion, we should do the like.

18. In the event of the said Act being renewed, do you think that it requires any, and what, alterations and amendments?

This is answered by the above.

18. In the event of the Banks being required to resume payment in specie, within a few months from this date, how would that affect their means, or ability to grant accommodation to the public, in the way of discounting or otherwise? Would it compel the Banks to curtail their circulation, or to limit their discounts:—if so, how soon, and to what extent?

I understand the only bank now discounting, or accommodating the public, is the Commercial Bank; were they compelled to an immediate specie payment, or before the banks of Lower Canada resume, they must contract, and greatly so, their accommodation to the public, as the merchants would drain them of their specie to make their payments at Montreal, where the notes of Upper Canada are at a discount; it may be said that would cease on the general resumption, so it of course would, but the Lower Canada merchants would send the notes in immediately for specie—the result would therefore be the same.

19. In case the Banks should be required to resume specie payments within a few months, do you think that there would be a demand for specie, to any great extent, and from what quarter would such a demand principally be made: say—

From Foreigners?

From the different Banks in this Province and in Lower Canada?

From Merchants, by way of making remittances, or as a speculation?

From persons leaving the Province, and wishing to invest their capital elsewhere?

Or from persons remaining in the country, who may entertain doubt as to the solvency of the Banks, or the stability of the Government?

I am of opinion, if the Banks in Canada are compelled to cash payments, there would no doubt be a demand for specie, by merchants having the means of obtaining discounts for the notes paid to them for those discounts. If not openly, covertly: as it is at all times the most advantageous mode of payment for goods; and in this respect, Upper Canada would suffer more than Lower Canada, as the merchants of Upper Canada purchase all, or chiefly so, of the importers from England, in Lower Canada, and also from New York, and are not importers from England themselves, whereas the Lower Canada merchants, or store-keepers, do not buy at all in New-York, but, either import from England themselves, or purchase in Montreal from those who do, and specie is not remitted by them to England, but Bills on London: which, of course, if all the Banks pay in specie, are at the same premium for notes or cash—they being synonymous. As to persons leaving the country, or those doubting the solvency of the Banks, or the stability of the Government, I do not see much to fear from them, particularly the latter, as but few in this country, I apprehend, have much to spare to lay by, in any way.

20. Are there any, and what objections, to granting permission to the Montreal Bank, and the City Bank of Montreal, to establish Agencies in Upper Canada?

I do not see any objection to, or evil likely to arise from, the establishment of Agencies in Upper Canada, by Lower Canada Banks. Especially, if all pay in specie, but with the understanding, that all notes issued at these Agencies, be made payable at them in specie, and not in Montreal, only, competition and accommodation in money matters, I consider equally desirable and advantageous, as in mercantile affairs—care being in all cases taken to keep within due bounds.

21. It has been stated that the Bank of Upper Canada has withdrawn its accommodation from the public at their different offices in the outer Districts—Has that been the case, and to what extent?

To this I can only answer by hearsay—I have so understood it to be.

BANK OF UPPER CANADA,
Toronto, 13th March, 1839.

SIR,

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of yesterday's date, in which you desire to know what kind of business is done at the offices of this Bank throughout the Province, and what amount of discounting has been done at each—say monthly, for the last twelve months—or the aggregate during the year, which may not include Exchange on England or New-York, or drafts on Montreal;—in reply to which, I beg leave to inform you, that within the limits prescribed by your question, this Bank has transacted little or no new business at its Agencies, within the last year, as I have already stated in my answers to the Committee, that our principal business at the office has been renewing notes, instead of granting fresh discounts—for it is a fact, that all the new discounting that has been done, has been passed by the Board here.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your obedient Servant,

THOMAS G. RIDOUT,

Cashier.

COLIN C. FERRIE, Esquire,
Chairman of Committee,
House of Assembly.

WILLIAM SCOTT BURN, Esquire, of Hamilton, Gore District, examined.

1. Is it expedient, in your opinion, to allow the Act authorising the Chartered Banks to suspend specie payments, to expire at the end of the present session of Parliament?

Most certainly not. Were the banks compelled to resume specie payments in the present uncertain state of political affairs, the whole mercantile interests of the country would be involved in ruin.

2. In the event of the said Act being renewed, how long would you recommend it to be continued in force? Say—till a certain day, to be fixed by the Legislature—Till the Banks in Lower Canada resume specie payments—To leave it to the discretion of the Lieutenant Governor and Council—Or how would you limit the continuance of said Act?

I would by no means leave it to the discretion of the Lieutenant-Governor and Council. It is also clear, that the Banks in Upper Canada cannot resume specie payments till those in Lower Canada have done so, or otherwise, we shall see ourselves placed in the same position in which we were last year, when the bills of the Upper Canada Banks were greedily bought up at a premium, to be converted into specie; and therefore these Banks would not advance a dollar, even on the most unexceptionable security. I would recommend that the Act be renewed for eighteen months, which will give the next session of the Legislature time to consider the question.

3. In the event of the said Act being renewed, do you think that it requires any, and what, alteration and amendment?

Yes: the banks should be compelled to exchange their bills with each other, and pay their balance at least once every month, by draft on Montreal, at sight and par, or by exchange on London, at say one per cent. above the rate in Montreal, or  $2\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. above that in New-York. This would as effectually prevent any one bank from over-issuing, as if specie payments were resumed;—in fact it would establish a check of equal power with the other. As complaints have been generally made, that the profits made on government exchange, have caused a bank or banks to narrow their accommodation to the public, it would be well to compel the banks to keep a certain portion of their issues on mercantile discounts. For it can never for one moment be supposed, that the Legislature had any thing else in view, in chartering banks with limited responsibility in the partners, than that this very diminution of the responsibility should cause the general mercantile business of the country to be done at the lowest possible rate of profit.

4. In the event of the banks being required to resume payment in specie within a few months from this date, how would that affect their means or ability to grant accommodation to the public in the way of discounting or otherwise—Would it compel the banks to curtail their circulation or to limit their discounts—If so, how soon, and to what extent?

The Banks must cease discounting immediately, and curtail their issues by every means. I even think that they would be unable to issue paper for pay of the troops, or for commissariat supplies. The business of the country being thus narrowed, the price of all kinds of goods would be greatly enhanced to the manifest loss of this country and the commissariat—exchange would also fall, (during the last war with the United States I think it went down below par) which would further immensely increase the expenses of the Home Government.

5. In case the banks should be required to resume specie payments within a few months, do you think that there would be a demand for specie to any great extent, and from what quarter would such a demand principally be made: Say—

From foreigners?

From the different banks in this Province, and in Lower Canada?

From merchants by way of making remittances, or as a speculation?

From persons leaving the Province, and wishing to invest their capital elsewhere?

Or from persons remaining in the country who may entertain doubts as to the solvency of the banks, or the stability of the Government?

There would be a demand from all these quarters—and further an immense drain of specie for the purpose of hoarding. When times are likely to be those of trouble, every one would naturally wish to put his spare capital in a shape which would be available under every possible contingency. By every one, I mean farmers, and all who have no mercantile knowledge or means of making investments in British or other secure funds.

6. Are there any, and what objections, to granting permission to the Montreal Bank, and the City Bank of Montreal, to establish Agencies in Upper Canada?

None whatever. On the contrary, such agencies would be most beneficial. What the country requires is a competition in Banking which will bring it to right principles. With this view would it not be right to include the Bank of British North America in any new Act for the suspension of specie payments? Another advantage would follow from this, which would be the thus opening a channel for the flow of British capital into the Province, which is precisely what we want most. Another advantage would be, that as that Bank is to do business on the principles of the Scotch Banks, the working of these principles in this Province would be introduced and tested.

7. It has been stated that the Bank of Upper Canada has withdrawn its accommodation from the public, at their different offices in the outer Districts: Has that been the case, and to what extent?

Of this I know nothing personally, but the rumour of it caused the remarks in my answer to the third Query.

8. In case the Act should be renewed, what equivalent, if any, ought the Banks to give the public for the privilege of being allowed to suspend specie payments?

The best equivalent would be, for the Banks to do the business of the country liberally, steadily, and at a cheap rate.

Examination of CHARLES THOMPSON, ESQUIRE, Director, Farmers' Bank.

1. Is it expedient, in your opinion, to allow the Act, authorizing the Chartered Banks to suspend specie payments, to expire at the end of the present session of Parliament?

My answer is yes—most decidedly.

2. In the event of the said Act being renewed, how long would you recommend it to be continued in force, say—Till a certain day to be fixed by the Legislature—Till the banks in Lower Canada resume specie payment—To leave it to the discretion of the Lieutenant-Governor and Council—Or how would you limit the continuance of said Act?

If it be determined to renew the Act, I would not recommend its renewal until the Banks in Lower Canada resume specie payments.

3. In the event of the said Act being renewed, do you think that it requires any, and what alteration or amendment?

If the Act be renewed, it is most important that some provision should be made for the regulation of Foreign Exchanges.

4. In the event of the banks being required to resume payment in specie within a few months from this date, how would that affect their means or ability to grant accommodation to the public in the way of discounting or otherwise—Would it compel the banks to curtail their circulation or limit their discounts, and if so, how soon, and to what extent?

The consequences of a resumption of specie payments appear to me embodied in the next question and answer.

5. In case the banks should be required to resume specie payments within a few months, do you think that there would be a demand for specie to any great extent, and from what quarter would such a demand principally be made: Say—

From foreigners?

I do not believe that a demand to any extent would be created by the United States, as I have reason to know there is little Upper Canada paper in that country, and what is there is as current as United States paper.

From the different banks in this Province and in Lower Canada?

I cannot speak as to the Lower Canada Banks, but little or none from those of this Province.

From merchants, by way of making remittances, or as a speculation?

None, when Exchange could be obtained at a fair rate.

From persons leaving the Province and wishing to invest their capital elsewhere?

I should not anticipate much from this class, at all events not to a greater degree than at present.

Or from persons remaining in the country who may entertain doubt as to the solvency of the banks, or the stability of the Government?

I do not fear this, as the people in the country always appeared to me to have the greatest confidence in the Banks.

6. Are there any, and what objections, to granting permission to the Montreal Bank, and the City Bank of Montreal, to establish Agencies in Upper Canada ?

There is no question in my mind that it would be most advisable to allow these Banks to establish agencies—more money is wanted in the Province.

7. It has been stated that the Bank of Upper Canada has withdrawn its accommodation from the public, at its different offices in the outer Districts: Has that been the case, and to what extent ?

I cannot reply to this.

8. In case the Act should be renewed, what equivalent, if any, ought the banks to give the public for the privilege of being allowed to suspend specie payments ?

I should say that they ought to take debentures for public works at 4 per cent. ratably in proportion to their circulation, say 20 per cent. a Bank issuing £300,000 in paper, to take £600,000 of such debentures.

ON

PETITION OF REV. THOMAS GREEN, AND REV. R. M'GILL.

To the Honorable the Commons House of Assembly.

THE Committee to whom was referred the petition of the Reverend Thomas Green, and the Reverend Robert McGill, members of the Board of Education for the District of Niagara, praying for a legislative enactment, to entitle the Treasurer of the said District of Niagara to receive any money or moneys that is or may be due, or become due, for the support of the Teachers of the Common Schools of the said District of Niagara, under and by virtue of any Act or Acts of the Legislature of the Province of Upper Canada, but which cannot now be received, in consequence of the insolvency of the late Treasurer—

BEG LEAVE TO MAKE THE FOLLOWING REPORT :

Your Committee find that the above petition sets forth, that the late Treasurer of the District of Niagara did obtain monies from the Receiver General, by virtue of warrants from the Lieut. Governor of the Province on account and for the support of common schools in the said District, which several sums of money were in his hands at the time he became insolvent, and were not applied for the benefit of the Teachers as intended by the several Acts appropriating the same.

Your Committee have examined the late Treasurer of the said District touching the complaint preferred against him by the Petitioners, and he admits that he is unable, by reason of insolvency, to make good the same, and has no prospect of doing so :—that he is now on the jail limits of the District for other debts ; that he does not consider his sureties for such moneys accountable, as they are only bound for the faithful appropriation of moneys raised under, and by virtue of 59, Geo. 3, Ch. 7.

Your Committee have also examined the Acting Inspector General, James Nation, Esquire, and by him they are informed, that the latest return of the application of monies for the support of common schools in said district, is dated 20th July, 1838, being for the permanent grant for 1837—and for the special grants, the latest return is dated 20th January of the same year, and being for the fiscal year of 1836.

They have also examined the Receiver General, and find, that on the 23rd May, 1837, William Clarke, the late Treasurer, was paid by that officer for the support of common schools in the said District of Niagara, the sum of £500. And on the 5th April, 1838, a further sum of £500; and on the 9th August following, a further sum of £250—on Warrants of the late and present Lieutenant Governors. The warrant for the first mentioned sum was issued under and by virtue of 7 Wm. IV. c. 105—the warrant for the second mentioned sum was by virtue of 1 Victoria, c. 60—and the warrant for the third and last mentioned sum was issued under 4 Geo. IV. c. 8—but which your Committee think should have been 60 Geo. III. c. 7.

Your Committee would most respectfully draw the attention of your Honourable House to the following circumstances elucidated during their investigation and examination of this most painful subject.—First, The Act 60 Geo. III. c. 7, provides for the permanent support of common schools, appropriating certain sums of money for each and every District in the Province, under certain limitations, restrictions, and conditions; the first of which is, that no teacher shall have a greater sum than £12 10s. for any one year; the second, that it shall not be lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the Government, to issue any further warrants on the Receiver General, under the provisions of said Act, to any District Treasurer until a faithful account shall be rendered, authenticated by proper Vouchers, and attested by the oath of the respective Treasurers, of the expenditure of the sums already advanced, or which may hereafter be advanced, on account of the respective Districts—the third, that any balances remaining in the hands of any Treasurer over and above the payment of lawful requisitions or certificates of the Trustees respectively, shall be paid over by him to the Receiver General for the public use of the Province. But notwithstanding the existence of such salutary restrictions as a plain rule for the guidance of the heads of departments, your Committee find that the Inspector General, or the Acting Inspector General, did accept the returns of the Treasurer of the District of Niagara without the oath of attestation. That the Acting Inspector General, James Nation, Esquire, says, that the Inspector General has not required returns of expenditure of the special grants, and that the Treasurer obtains his warrant on the Receiver General from the office of the Lieutenant Governor, without a reference from the office of the Inspector General; and is not required by law to account for the expenditure of special grants of money for the support of common schools, although the Acts authorizing the payments of such monies expressly state that the monies therein granted shall be applied in the same way and manner, and in conjunction with the present sums granted by law in support of common schools.

Your Committee considering the subject as one of vital importance, addressed a note to the Hon. John Macaulay, Civil Secretary and Inspector General, requesting to be informed by him how warrants for special grants of money for the support of common schools were issued, and they hereunto append his answer, dated 4th inst. It fully appears that Mr. Clark obtained warrants on the Receiver General without having complied with all the lawful conditions, as no oath of attestation is on the accounts rendered for the special grant of £500, dated 5th April last—nor was there any account at all made for the preceding special grant of £500. In the investigation of the accounts given in to the Legislature for the appropriation of common school moneys, they find that no regard has been had by certain Boards of Education to the annual limitation of £12 10s. to each Teacher, as in some instances a larger sum has been paid.

Your Committee would observe, that Mr. Nation does not consider the annual grants in any way to be regulated by the accounting clauses of the permanent grants, from which opinion your Committee dissent.

Your Honourable House will perceive, from the foregoing investigation and examination, that the late Treasurer of the District of Niagara, has not accounted, as by law required, for the sum of £1250; and that, in consequence, his successor cannot render vouchers for the faithful application of the said sum; wherefore, no future grants for the support of Common Schools for that District can be made before relief is given, in accordance with the prayer of the petitioners; and in order that the same may be done, your Committee herewith submit a Bill for that purpose.

But before dismissing this subject, your Committee are decidedly of opinion that a Bill should be passed to prevent Treasurers from obtaining moneys for Common School appropriations, without first giving sufficient security for the faithful application of all sums of money which they may be entitled by law to receive for that purpose, as they are of the same opinion as Mr. Clarke, that the sureties of District Treasurers are only liable for the faithful application of monies raised under and by virtue of 59 Geo. III. chap. 7.

Since preparing their Report, your Committee have received from Mr Clarke an affidavit, together with two sheets, (appended hereto) purporting to be a return of the appropriation of £420 5s. 4d. of the Common School monies granted for the year 1837, but for which there appears only vouchers for the sum of £324 5s. 4d. leaving unaccounted for the sum of £925 14s. 8d. Mr. Clarke stating at the same time that there was a third sheet, containing a further return of the application of said monies, but that he had lost it, as will appear by the aforesaid affidavit.

All which is respectfully submitted.

DAVID THORBURN,
CHAIRMAN.

Committee Room, House of Assembly,
8th April, 1839.

Government House,
4th April, 1839.

SIR,
In reply to your note, of this date, stating that "Mr. Nation of the Inspector-General's Office, informs you that a District Treasurer gets warrants from the Lieutenant-Governor's Office for Common School appropriations of special grants, without reference to the Inspector-General," and desiring information from me as to the manner of issuing warrants for monies on the Receiver-General; I have the honor to acquaint you, that all money warrants prepared in the Government Office, previous to receiving the Lieutenant-Governor's signature, are submitted for the approving signature of the Inspector-General; it being a special duty of that officer to take care that all such issues of money be made in strict compliance with the limitations and conditions of such Acts of the Legislature as may have a bearing on them.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient humble servant,
JOHN MACAULAY.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE

ON SUBJECT OF

DUTY ON WHEAT AND FLOUR.

On Petitions of D. Thompson and 56 others, and S. Battersby and others.

To the Honourable the House of Assembly.

The Select Committee, to whom were referred the several petitions from various Counties of this Province, relating to the comparative value of Wheat in the State of New-York, and Canada have given the subject their best attention, and, in compliance with the request of the petitioners, submit, for the information of your Honourable House, the following Report:—

The petitioners “most respectfully represent that, for many years past, Wheat, the only staple article we grow for exportation, has averaged at least one shilling and three pence per bushel higher in the neighbouring State of New-York, than in this Province.—That so long as the grower in the United States is protected by a duty from all foreign competition, and so long as the grower in Canada is liable to such competition, without a protecting duty, so long will this inequality of prices exist—operating as a direct bounty to the farmer residing in the State of New-York, and a direct draw-back on the farmer residing in Canada, whenever the market for bread stuffs is higher in America than in Europe.

“In the State of New York a steady market is ensured at their sea ports by this protecting duty, which has a tendency to confine the trade between the miller and grower. In Upper Canada the want of this protecting duty invites competition from all the foreign European ports, as well as the American States, which produces uncertainty and constant fluctuation in our sea ports; thus necessity introduces a third party who purchases from the grower and sells to the consumer, by which means the former sustains the loss gained by the third party without any corresponding benefit to the consumer.

“Various other causes are assigned for producing this great variation in the value of this one most useful production, among which your petitioners beg to call to consideration, the want of control over our natural sea ports—the regulation of our internal commerce—the high prices of transportation, and a more general and better system of banking may be numbered.

They, therefore, pray your Honourable House will enquire into the true causes which produce this unnatural state of things, and adopt such measures as may secure them the full value of their industry.”

It appears evident to your Committee, that, whenever the price of bread stuffs is higher in America than in Europe, wheat always commands a much higher price in the adjoining State of New York than in this Province. It also appears, that, whenever the price of bread stuffs is higher in Europe than in America, this inequality of price ceases. This Act convinces your Committee the cause cannot be ascribed to any local circumstances or any superiority the Americans may possess in machinery or management.

The protecting duty on wheat in the United States is correctly described by the petitioners, it insures a steady demand in their sea ports—confines the trade to two parties—the grower and the miller—the latter being interested in ensuring a good supply to keep the capital invested in his mills employed, secures the former at all times the highest price the article will bear.

The want of this protecting duty in Canada invites competition from foreigners—this produces uncertainty and fluctuation in prices. The market becomes overstocked—sales cannot be effected—charges multiply—engagements must be met—sacrifices ensue—the article passes into the hands of capitalists, or ultimately sours from heat and delay.

This uncertainty produces a third party in the market, who speculate on this additional hazard, what he gains, the grower loses without a corresponding reduction in price to the consumer. Thus we see American millers come into our market, pay higher prices than the Canadian miller can afford—with agency, storage duty, freight, transportation and carriage to their mills. They manufacture the article, gain the transportation and toll for their canals, besides commission and all incidental profits to their merchants—all of which should be gained by our grower, to place him on equal terms with the American grower.

The operation of the two systems in effect ensures one quarter more value for property and labor in New York than in Canada.

The cause is clearly traced to the provision contained in the Canada trade Act, and your Committee have unanimously recommended for the consideration of your Hon. House, the accompanying address.

All which is respectfully submitted.

WM. HAMILTON MERRITT,
CHAIRMAN.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE,
TO
SEARCH THE JOURNALS OF THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL,
ON THE SUBJECT OF THE
UNION OF THE PROVINCES.

---

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

---

The Committee appointed to search the journals of the Honourable the Legislative Council on the subject of an Union of the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, beg leave to report, that they have examined the journals of the Honourable the Legislative Council, and found recorded as follows:

Monday, 25th March.

A Deputation from the Commons House of Assembly brought up and delivered at the bar of this House, a message in the following words, and then withdrew:

MR. SPEAKER,

The Commons House of Assembly communicate to the Honourable the Legislative Council certain resolutions passed by them on Saturday last, on the subject of an Union of the two Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, and also on the subject of sending an Agent or Agents to England to represent the interests of this Province for the concurrence of that Honourable House.

ALLAN N. MACNAB,
SPEAKER.

Commons House of Assembly,
25th March, 1839.

---

The foregoing resolutions of the Assembly were then read by the Clerk as follows:—

Resolved—That during the last session of the Legislature a series of resolutions were adopted by this House, attributing the chief causes of the evils under which these Provinces have suffered to the injudicious division of Canada into two Provinces; which, with an address, dated 26th February, 1838, were transmitted to the Home Government, praying for the adoption of such measures as would carry the same into effect.

Resolved—That the experience of the past year confirms this House in the opinions then expressed, and they are still of the same opinion, that an United Legislature for the Canadas, on the terms then proposed, is indispensable—and that further delay must prove ruinous to the best interests of the Canadas.

Resolved—That as measures deeply affecting the future interests of this Province are now pending before the Imperial Parliament, it is of the utmost importance that one or more authorized Agents, deputed by this House, should proceed forthwith to England to represent the true interests and opinions of Her Majesty's faithful subjects residing in Upper Canada.

Truly extracted.

JAMES FITZGIBBON,

Clerk of Assembly.

On motion made and seconded, it was ordered, that the above-mentioned resolutions be referred to a Committee of the whole House, on Saturday next, and that the same do stand as the first item upon the orders of that day; and ordered, that the Members in town be summoned to attend in their places on Saturday next.

Thursday, 28th March.

A Deputation from the Commons House of Assembly brought up and delivered at the Bar of this House, a Message in the following words, and then withdrew:

MR. SPEAKER:

The Commons House of Assembly have passed a further series of resolutions, on the subject of the Union between the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, which they communicate to the Honourable the Legislative Council, for their concurrence thereto.

ALLAN N. MACNAB,

SPEAKER.

Commons House of Assembly,

27th March, 1839.

The above-mentioned resolutions were then read by the Clerk, as follows:

Resolved—That in reference to the resolutions of this House on the subject of a Legislative Union of the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, this House is distinctly opposed to that measure, unless the conditions as embodied in the following resolutions be fully carried out in any Act to be passed by the Imperial Legislature for that purpose.

1st. Resolved—That in the event of the Union of the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, the seat of Government should be within the present boundary of Upper Canada.

2nd. Resolved—That that portion of Lower Canada laying to the east of Madawaska, and south of the St. Lawrence, consisting of the Counties of Gaspé, Bonaventure, and Rimouski, be attached to the Province of New Brunswick.

3rd. Resolved—That a proper qualification for members of the Legislative Council and House of Assembly be fixed upon by the Act of Union.

4th. Resolved—That the Act of Union not to make void any of the appointments of the present Legislative Council, in full confidence that future appointments will be made in such manner, from the different Districts, as best to secure the commercial, agricultural, and general interests of the Province.

5th. Resolved—That the number of members to be returned to serve in the House of Assembly be as follows:

From Lower Canada, 50 members.

From Upper Canada, as at present.

That the elective franchise in counties be confined to those who hold their lands in free and common soccage, from and after a time to be settled by the Imperial Parliament, not later than the year 1845, and that it be strongly urged on the Imperial Parliament to pass immediate measures for facilitating the change of tenure in Lower Canada, so as to extend to them the exercise of the elective franchise with as little delay as possible.

6th. Resolved—That a new division of Lower Canada in counties be made by the Governor and Council of that Province, so as to provide for the election of such number of members as together with the members from cities and towns, make up the number to be returned from Lower Canada.

7th. Resolved—That the English language be spoken and used in the Legislature, Courts of Justice, and in all other public proceedings.

8th. Resolved—That Courts of Appeal and Impeachment be established within the United Province.

9th. Resolved—That the surplus revenue of the Post-office, together with the casual and territorial, and every other branch of revenue, be placed under the control of the Legislature.

10th. Resolved—That until otherwise provided for by the joint Legislature, the courts and laws to remain as at present.

11th. Resolved—That the debt of both Provinces shall be chargeable on the revenue of the United Provinces.

12th. Resolved—That the local Legislature have power to originate duties, or reduce them from time to time, as they may deem necessary and advisable, subject however to restrictions similar to those of 42nd section of 31 Geo. 3rd chap. 31 respecting certain local Acts.

13th. Resolved—That with the above exceptions, the principles of our constitution as contained in 31st Geo. 3 chap. 31 remain inviolate.

14th. Resolved—That there be two Commissioners appointed to proceed to England on the part of this House, and that Sir Allan N. McNab Speaker of the House, and William Hamilton Merritt, Esq. M. P. for the county of Haldimand, be the said Commissioners.

Truly extracted.

JAMES FITZGIBBON,

CLERK OF ASSEMBLY.

On motion made and seconded, it was ordered, that the further resolutions of the Assembly received by message this day, on the subject of an Union of the two Provinces, be referred to a Committee of the whole House on Saturday next.

Tuesday, 2nd April, 1839.

The Honourable Mr. Sullivan brought up the petition of the Mayor and others, inhabitants of the City of Toronto, praying the House to take into their favourable consideration the proceedings of a public meeting of the said inhabitants, on the subject of an Union of the Provinces, and to arrest the further progress of the measure in order that an opportunity might be afforded to the people of this Province of expressing their opinions thereon; and it was ordered that the forty-eighth rule of this House be dispensed with, and that the said petition be read presently.

The same was then read by the Clerk accordingly.

On motion made and seconded, it was ordered, that the last mentioned petition be referred to the Committee of the whole House, this day, upon the several resolutions of the Assembly, on the subject of an Union of the two Provinces.

Pursuant to the order of the day, the House was put into a Committee of the whole on the several resolutions of the Assembly on the subject of an Union of the two Provinces, together with the petition of the Mayor and others, presented this day, in reference thereto.

The Honourable Mr. Hamilton took the chair.

After some time the House resumed.

The Chairman reported that the Committee had taken the said resolutions, and also the petition, into consideration, and had made some progress therein, and asked leave to sit again to-morrow.

Ordered—That the report be received and leave granted accordingly.

Wednesday, 3rd April, 1839.

Pursuant to the order of the day, the House was again put into Committee, of the whole, upon the several resolutions of the Assembly on the subject of an Union of the two Provinces, together with the petition of the Mayor, and others, praying against the measure.

The Honourable Mr. Radcliff took the chair.

After some time the House resumed.

Thursday, 4th April, 1839.

The Honourable Mr. Crooks moved, that the nineteenth rule be dispensed with, to enable him to introduce the following resolutions—which he read to the Committee of the whole House, yesterday, on the resolutions sent up from the Assembly, for an Union of the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

Resolved—That, at the last session, the Legislative Council adopted a report of a select Committee, to whom was referred the "State of the Province," in which report (amongst other suggestions) the Union of the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada was proposed as one of the remedies for the evils under which this Province laboured, and the evils still continuing, and, if possible, being greatly aggravated since last session—it is the opinion of this House, that an humble Address be presented to Her Majesty, praying that Her Majesty would be graciously pleased to submit to the Imperial Parliament the measure of an Union of the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada upon such just and equitable principles as will secure to all the inhabitants of both Provinces their religion, property, and other privileges, and by an equitable division of the electoral districts of Lower Canada, give to the inhabitants of British origin, that voice in the United Assembly, to which they are entitled by their numbers; and also provide, in any enactment which may pass the Imperial Parliament for that purpose, that the seat of Government shall continue and remain within the present limits of Upper Canada."

The said motion being seconded, and the question of concurrence being put thereon, it was carried in the affirmative, and it was ordered that the nineteenth rule be dispensed with accordingly.

The said resolution, after having been first read by the Clerk, was then moved and seconded, and in amendment thereto it was moved and seconded, that after the word "that," in the original resolution, the whole be expunged and the following inserted:—"this House still adheres to the sentiments, opinions, and remedies set forth in their report on the state of the Province, and in their Address to Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, bearing date respectively the 13th and 23th days of February, 1838, nor have any events happened since that time of a nature to induce them to depart from the principles or reasonings therein contained or the measures therein proposed as necessary to restore peace and tranquillity to this as well as the sister Province of Lower Canada, and to promote their peace, prosperity, and happiness, and perpetuate their happy connexion with the British Empire."

The question of concurrence being put, the said amendment was carried in the affirmative, and it was then moved and seconded, that it be Resolved—That a copy of this resolution be communicated to His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, the House of Assembly, and the Honourable the Chief Justice of this Province, now in England.

Whereupon the question of concurrence was put upon the last mentioned resolution, and the same was carried in the affirmative.

Friday, 5 April, 1839.

To the rejection of the resolution, moved by the Honourable Mr. Crooks, yesterday, in relation to certain resolutions sent up from the Commons House of Assembly on the subject of an Union of the two Provinces—dissentient.

Because the Act 31, Geo. III. chap. 31, was passed by the Parliament of Great Britain for the mutual benefit of all the subjects of the Kingdom, who then resided in the Province of Quebec, or who might afterwards inhabit the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada; and the experience of nearly half a century has shewn that the advantages anticipated by the eminent statesmen who promoted that measure, have not been realized, in as much as the people of Lower Canada, of French origin, are, in consequence of the division of the Colony—the continuance of the Feudal Tenures—the use of the French language in the Legislature and in the Courts of Justice, as much a foreign people, as they were at the conquest of the country, and perhaps even less disposed to adopt the laws, customs and language of Great Britain, than they were at that period;—and further, that the division of the Province of Quebec deprived that part of the population resident in the Upper Province of a seaport for the landing of goods, or the shipment of the products of their fields and forests—thereby depriving them of the means of regulating their own trade—of imposing, reducing or repealing duties on imports, without the consent of the people of Lower Canada.

That these circumstances have hitherto engendered a feeling of mutual jealousy and distrust—have caused misunderstandings and dissatisfactions, with regard to the division of the revenue, and have prevented the undertaking and prosecution of public improvement, upon corresponding plans and principles;—that, although the revenue collected at the ports of Quebec and Montreal has, since the passing of the Imperial Statute 3 Geo. IV. chap. 119, been apportioned to both Provinces upon the basis of their respective population, Upper Canada has suffered great loss, by reason of the imposition of duties since that enactment was made, to which it is said she has no legal claim.

All which is respectfully submitted.

1st. Resolved—That there be reserved or purchased in each and every township of the Province, one or more lots of land, of 100 acres, each lot for a Glebe or residence for one or more resident Ministers of the churches of England and Scotland, so soon as a resident Minister or Ministers of either church may be appointed, provided always that the lands heretofore appropriated to either church, be taken into account in the general appropriation.

2nd. Resolved—That a similar allotment be reserved, or purchased, in each and every circuit, for one or more resident Ministers of the “Wesleyan Methodist church in Canada, in connexion with the English Wesleyan Conference” so soon as a resident Minister or Ministers may be appointed.

3rd.—Resolved—That the whole of the remainder of the Clergy Reserves be sold, as Crown Lands are at present sold, and that the interest of the proceeds thereof, with the interest of those already sold, be disposed of as follows :

1st. To secure to each and every resident Minister of the churches of England and Scotland, the sum of £75 per annum.

2nd. To secure to the “Wesleyan Methodist Church in Canada, in connexion with the English conference,” at the rate of £75 per annum, for each and every Minister of that church regularly authorised, and actually officiating in the discharge of his Ministerial duties.

3rd. That the residue of interest be paid annually to the several conferences, or other bodies representing the several other christian denominations recognized by law, and not otherwise provided for, from any public source, in proportion to the number of ascertained Ministers regularly authorised, and actually officiating in the discharge of their Ministerial duties of each denomination respectively, such sum, in no case to exceed the amount of £75 per annum for each Minister, and to be appropriated in such manner as the respective denominations may from time to time determine, according to the respective rules and regulations of their church government, and whose religious tenets do not prohibit their bearing arms.

4th. The surplus interest (if any) to be expended in the erection of suitable places for public worship in the several townships, and for the religious and moral education of youth within the same.

4th. Resolved—That there be secured to the Ministers of the churches of England and Scotland, at present resident in this Province, the several amounts at present paid to them, but that on the death or removal from office, the several amounts at present paid to them, their successors shall become subject, and liable to the same regulations as to salary and allowances, as the other ministers of those churches hereafter to be appointed.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee to whom were referred the report and other documents of the Welland Canal Company, and also the petitions of sundry private Shareholders in the said Company—

BEG LEAVE TO REPORT :

That they have carefully examined all the documents referred to them, and find that a difference of opinion exists, as well among the Directors of the Company, as among various legal gentlemen who have been consulted as to the true intent and meaning of the Act 7th William IV.

The majority of the Directors contend that the 17th clause of said Act was intended to secure from the future income of the canal, First, the payment of the interest on loans or public debentures subsequently granted by the Legislature for that work, and the remainder to be divided between the private Shareholders until it shall amount to six per cent. From this construction of the said clause the minority of the Directors wholly dissent. The former being sustained by the opinions of a number of legal gentlemen, and the latter by the opinion of the Attorney General, as will appear by the documents herewith submitted.

Your Committee not being prepared to decide upon this point, and finding by reference to the petitions, that very general dissatisfaction prevails among the private Shareholders on this subject, recommend that all doubts should be removed as to the future dividends by a declaratory Act of the Legislature.

It appears from the report of the Directors, that they unanimously concur in the opinion, that the public interest imperatively requires that the interest of the private Shareholders should be purchased out, and make the canal strictly and exclusively a public work.

Your Committee fully concurring in the suggestion of the Directors, and finding that the petitioners too are desirous that their stock should be purchased out, strongly recommend to your Honourable House that a bill should be passed during the present session for that purpose.

And with this view, your Committee submit, herewith, resolutions for the consideration of your Honourable House, embracing the conditions upon which they recommend the purchase of the private stock.

Your Committee beg to refer your Honourable House to the report of the President and Directors of the Company, and also to that of their Superintendent, W. B. Robinson, Esquire, for the present state of that work, and other particulars connected therewith.

They regret to learn that nothing has yet been done towards building stone locks, and otherwise constructing the Welland Canal in that permanent manner contemplated by the Legislature when the sum of £245,000 was granted expressly for that purpose: and your Committee entirely concur in the remarks of Mr. Robinson's report, as to the "absolute waste of public money in continuing to expend large sums (intended for the permanent completion of that important work) in repairing the old locks with the same perishable materials."

It now only remains for your Committee to impress upon your Honourable House, the great necessity of endeavouring to procure funds to commence the contemplated permanent improvements of the Welland Canal, without further delay. If, however, this should be found impracticable, in the present embarrassed state of our Finances, they would recommend that the expenses of the Company should, in the mean time, be reduced as much as possible.

All which is respectfully submitted.

GEORGE RYKERT,
CHAIRMAN.

Committee Room,
8th April, 1839.

Resolved, Therefore, that a law having been passed during the first session of the present Parliament, authorising the payment of a dividend to the private shareholders of the Welland Canal Company, from and out of the tolls received thereon; and whereas the said private shareholders have petitioned to have their interest in the said Canal purchased by the Province, in order that the same may become wholly the property of the public.

Resolved, That it is expedient to comply with the request of the petitioners, with the following terms, viz. :—

The Shareholders to receive Debentures, payable in twenty years, in England, bearing interest as follows, viz. :—3 per cent. the first two years, 4 per cent. the next two years, and 6 per cent. after that period: the interest to be paid out of the income of the Canal, instead of paying dividends on stock.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE,
ON
REPORT OF DIRECTORS OF GRAND RIVER COMPANY.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

Your Committee, to whom was referred the Report of the Directors of the Grand River Navigation Company, and other documents on the same subject—beg leave to report :

That they have examined the said Report and documents, and find that the Directors were unable, during the past year, to raise money for the completion of that work on the debentures issued for that purpose, in consequence of their being made payable in this Province. Your Committee, therefore, recommend the passing of a Bill, herewith submitted, by your Honourable House, making them payable in London.

They fully concur in the opinion of the Directors—that the public interest would be best promoted by making this a Provincial Work. Being merely a continuation of the Welland Canal, they conceive that both works should be under the same direction and interest ; and for other strong reasons, set forth in said Report, a copy of which is hereto appended, your Committee recommend that the stock of the private shareholders, amounting to no more than £5000, should be purchased by the Province upon the same terms and conditions as recommended for the purchase of the stock of the private shareholders in the Welland Canal.—They therefore submit herewith, a Resolution, for the consideration of your Honourable House.

All which is respectfully submitted.

GEORGE RYKERT,
CHAIRMAN.

*Committee Room,
8th April, 1839.*

Resolved, That it is expedient that the stock held by private individuals, in the Grand River Navigation, be purchased by this Province, upon the following terms and conditions, viz. :—The Shareholders to receive debentures, payable in England in twenty years, bearing interest as follows, viz. : 3 per cent. the first two years, 4 per cent. the next two years, and 6 per cent. after that period.

REPORT OF THE DIRECTORS
OF THE
GRAND RIVER NAVIGATION COMPANY.

COMPANY'S OFFICE,
Seneca, 19th January, 1839.

The Directors, when making their last Report, in February, 1835, confidently expected that, long before the present period, they would have been enabled to report the successful completion of the important works under their management, and a permanent and uninterrupted navigation between Lakes Erie and Ontario, and the Village of Brantford, by way of the Welland Canal, by means of the contemplated Lock at Dunnville, and the improvement of the Grand River. Although at that period no apparent obstacle presented itself, they regret to state, that subsequent circumstances and difficulties, beyond their control, prevented its accomplishment.

The Directors were much gratified to find that the Board of Directors of the Welland Canal Company has, in the fall of 1836, ordered the construction of a Lock at Dunnville, with the view of opening a direct communication to Lake Erie from that point, and which was commenced with a spirit that warranted a belief in its early and successful completion. The work, however, was suddenly discontinued in 1837, and has not, up to the present moment, been recommenced.

Although the navigation of the Grand River is greatly improved, and has been partially used, and tolls collected thereon for the last three seasons, it is not yet permanently completed throughout. An apron at Dam No. 3—raising the embankment at the Indiana Cut from one to two feet—making a towing-path from Lock No. 5 upwards—removing some boes in the bed of the River, and other minor improvements, are still required to render the navigation from Cayuga to Peter Green's, perfect and permanently useful to the public.

The lateral cut from Peters Green's to Brantford, has not been commenced, and the Directors deem it imprudent to undertake that part of the work in the present state of the finances of the Company, nor would it be just to do so, until their creditors are paid; many of whom have suffered much, from the unavoidable delay in paying the amount due them.

In the session of 1836 and 1837, the Legislature authorized the loan of £12,500, for the completion of this work, on the security of the Six Nations Indians, and private individuals. Those securities were duly entered into, and debentures were issued to the amount of £6,500, on the credit of the Province. Nevertheless, all the efforts to induce the Banks, or any other monied institutions within the Province, to purchase those debentures, have utterly failed, with the single exception of £500, taken by the Gore Bank, which enabled the Directors to liquidate a part of the most pressing debts.

On the opening of the navigation, several of the dams and embankments had settled, and were in imminent danger of being swept away, and no available means at the disposal of the Company to secure them. The only alternative that presented itself to the Directors, under these pressing circumstances, was either to abandon the work, or issue the Company's notes, payable in one year after date, with interest, with the hope and expectation that the Legislature would, at the ensuing session, adopt some more effectual means to make their debentures available. The latter was adopted, and about £1,250 of those notes have been paid out, and the work by that means is placed out of immediate danger.

The receipts and expenditures of the Company up to the present time are as follows:—

Expenditures for works, real estate, damages, &c. ....	£28,500
Current expenses, including Collectors and Lock-tenders .....	2,430
		£30,930
Total expenditure.....
Receipt of 50 per cent on stock called in.....	£24,044
For village and park lots sold .....	333
Tolls collected .....	835	25,212
		£5,718
Leaving a balance yet due from the Company .....
There is due the Company for lands sold .....	£751
Mill rents .....	861
Stock called in .....	735
		£2,347

There will, however, be some reduction in this sum for lands sold which are not occupied nor improved. For mill rents remitted for certain reasons—and on stock part of which will, doubtless, be forfeited to the Company—besides the balance which may be actually due after such reduction is made, cannot be available for present purposes, owing chiefly to the embarrassed state of the country.

The Company will, consequently, have to provide means to pay the debts actually due as above stated—

Amounting to.....	£5,718 0 0
And the amount required to complete the navigation to Peter Green's, as per Engineer's estimate .....	2,091 0 0
	£7,809 0 0
Making a total amount.....
To be immediately provided for by the Company.

From the above statement it will be seen that the cost of the improvement of the navigation of the Grand River from Dunnville up to within two miles of Brantford, a distance of 57 miles, will not, when fully completed, exceed £33,000, a sum comparatively trifling when compared with the great advantages which will be derived by the public from its outlay.

The Directors are aware that the magnitude and importance of this work are not sufficiently understood and appreciated. There are already erected upon this navigation, three grist mills and one plaster mill, with six run of stones in operation—fourteen saw mills, one of which has a gang of seventeen saws, and other less machinery; on completion of the towing-path by the Welland Canal Company from Dunnville to Cayuga, which has been surveyed, and that part above lock number five, a part of which is now under contract—a continued and uninterrupted navigation will be made from Port Dalhousie, on Lake Ontario, to Bunnell's Landing, near Brantford Road.

The Directors are unanimously of the opinion that the public interest would be best promoted by making this a Provincial work, which would, in connexion with the Welland Canal, reduce the costs of management, and, as a necessary consequence, the amount of tolls. The means required to effect this important object, so far as the Company is concerned, cannot be considered a matter of much moment, or as presenting any serious obstacle in the way, when it is known that the number of shares held by private individuals is only 1815, on which the whole of the fifty per cent. called in, amounts to no more than £5,671 17s. 6d., of which sum a little less than £5,000 has been paid in.

This latter sum of £5,000 is the only amount requiring immediate liquidation in case of a transfer of the works to the Welland Canal Company or the Government. The balance of the stock being owned exclusively by the Indian Department for the Six Nations Indians, they would doubtless be willing to accept of legal interest on the amount paid in by them, or retain an interest in the work equivalent to the amount of their stock.

All which is respectfully submitted.

(Signed) WM. HAMILTON MERRITT,
PRESIDENT, G. R. N. C.

PETITION OF DONALD CAMERON.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

Your Committee to whom was referred the petition of Donald Cameron, beg leave most respectfully to report, that they have examined the Journals of your Honorable House, and the report of a select Committee to whom the same subject was referred at the first session of the present Parliament, dated Committee room, House of Assembly, January 27th 1837, and that they fully concur in that report, and more particularly that the said Donald Cameron offers to give security that if he fails making good his allegations he will pay the whole expense of the Commission recommended by said report to be appointed.

All of which is most respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE
ON
PETITION OF DESJARDINS' CANAL COMPANY.

To the Honorable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee to whom was referred the petition of the President, Directors, and Stockholders of the Desjardins' Canal Company, beg leave to report :

That they have duly considered the proposal of the said petitioners, and, although, they would be most happy to recommend the advance of the requisite sum to deepen the Desjardins' Canal, if the state of the finances of the Province were such as to justify such a loan, but, in the opinion of your Committee, (the canal being navigable for small boats) the deepening thereof should be deferred for the present.

Your Committee append to this report certain documents furnished them by the Company.

All which is respectfully submitted.

W. CHISHOLM,
CHAIRMAN.

*Committee Room,
10th April, 1839.*

Canal Office, Dundas, 18th February, 1839.

REPORT :

THE Directors of the Desjardins' Canal Company beg leave to submit the following Report :

That the canal, after many years of exertion on the part of the Directors, was opened on the 16th day of August, 1837, for vessels drawing 7½ feet water, since which period, until the close of the navigation on the 17th November, 1838, there have passed through the canal, as per documents herewith, for which tolls have been received, and due, to the amount of £599 2s. This sum may appear small for that time, but when the state of the country is taken into consideration, and reference had to the exports and imports of former years, when the only water communication was by the circuitous windings of a small creek, the conclusion must be more cheering.

The Directors accompany this report with an abstract account of the Company's affairs, and other documents, up to the present date, by which it will appear that the canal has already cost £22,058 10s. 8½d. and that, from such calculations as may be depended upon, there will be required, at least, £5,000 to make it a permanent work, giving 10 feet water throughout.

The Directors are sorry to say, they see no way of raising this sum, in the present circumstances of the country, unless by again referring to the Legislature, in doing so the Directors beg to suggest the propriety of the stock holders petitioning both Houses of Parliament, to assume the work on behalf of the Government, they even would urge the suggestion for the following reasons—That there are now in many places only 5½ feet water, which is chiefly caused by the water falling in Lake Ontario—that many complaints have been made by those deeply interested in the Trade—that ordinary sized vessels cannot navigate the canal, they being thereby subjected to great additional expense, by re-shipment, &c. and the utter inability of the Directors to make the canal what it ought to be.

There is also accompanying this Report, a letter lately received from Her Majesty's Receiver-General, with an account of interest on monies borrowed by the Company amounting to £1853 11s. 2d. taken into the statement of the Company's affairs.

The Directors, desirous of having all the accounts correct before the next Annual Election for Directors, gave two different notices through the news papers since the opening of the canal, "That any receipts or documents produced at the Canal Office would be taken to the credit of Stockholders;" several such documents have been received, and credit given accordingly. Some Stockholders may not have seen these notices, or neglected to attend thereto, until that is done, no accurate statement can be given of the stock accounts. JOHN DICKIE,
PRESIDENT, D. C. C.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Desjardins' Canal held at the Inn of Peter Bamberger, on February 18th, 1839, pursuant to notice, to take into consideration the most advisable plan of making the canal of sufficient depth for vessels drawing ten feet water. The Honorable James Crooks was called to the chair, and John Gamble acted as Secretary, when the directors submitted a report stating the affairs of the company, upon which the following resolutions were proposed and adopted.

Resolved—That from a report of the directors, submitted to the meeting, the canal appears to have cost £22,058 10s. 8½d. that the sum of ..... £17,000 0 0
Is due to the government on loans and interest on the same..... 18,53 11 2

Making..... £18,853 11 2

the tolls collected on the canals since August 1837, amount to £599 2s. as per documents produced.

That from an estimate laid before the meeting, the canal tolls would have been more than double the past year had the water in the canal been ten feet throughout the navigable season.

From the rapidly increasing amounts of import and exports, it is the opinion of this meeting that the tolls will be double, and perhaps treble, in a very short period, and as a proof of the increase, there has been shipped during the past season 465000 of puncheon and pipe staves, an article of which none were formerly shipped from this place, the number of vessels loaded at Dundas the past year, appears to be 57, and 142 trips by boats, and 52 trips by steam boats.

That although there appears to be a balance on stock subscribed for, but not paid up, of the sum of £1152 15s. 5½d and upon stock subscribed, upon which no instalments have been paid £950, making together the sum of £2102 15s. 5½d. yet no dependence can be made thereon, for the completion of the canal or paying any part due the government.

That there is the sum of £1013 16s. 6d. due the company, by the mortgages, and otherwise, and that the company owes sundry debts amounting to £220 6s. 9d. leaving a balance in favor of the company of £793 9s. 9d. none of which is at present available for canal purposes.

That the whole of the amount collected as toll and otherwise, has been expended upon the canal, and incidental charges, and £5 13s. 6½d. more.

That it is the opinion of this meeting, that the further sum of £5000 will be necessary for making a towing path, and otherwise completing the canal, so as at all times to enable vessels drawing ten feet water to navigate the same.

That under these circumstances, it is the opinion of this meeting that petitions be presented to the different branches of the Legislature, if the stockholders at Toronto and elsewhere, do concur therein, praying that the Provincial Government take the canal into their own hands, until the debt and said proposed loan is satisfied, the stockholders remaining unpaid until the debt is wholly satisfied.

That these resolutions and a copy of the documents submitted to this meeting, be laid before the meeting of the stockholders at Toronto, if the said meeting concur in the petition to the Legislature—that the same be carried into immediate effect, and that the said meeting at Toronto be called as soon after the meeting of the Legislature, as may be practicable.

The foregoing resolutions were adopted nem. con.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE,
ON
PETITION OF DONALD M'DIARMID.

To the Honorable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee, to whom was referred the petition of Donald McDiarmid, beg leave to report:—

That the petitioner has held the office of Lieutenant in the Glengarry Militia, and was in the discharge of his duty at the capture of the American fort at Ogdensburgh, in the year 1813, where he had the misfortune of receiving a wound, which placed him on the pension list until the year 1821. That an inspection of the pensioners was ordered by the Lieutenant-Governor, but from the circumstance of the petitioner living at that time in Lower Canada, and knowing nothing of such inspection, did not attend at the time and place appointed by the medical officers, appointed to examine and report upon the several cases of the pensioners, and no report was made on the petitioner's individual case, which had the effect of removing him from the pension list. That the petitioner subsequently applied for an inspection of his wounds, which, being granted, had the effect of replacing him upon the pension list, on the 26th of October, 1835. That your Committee, assuming the fact of his reinstatement on the pension list as proof of the continuance of the disability, is of opinion, the petitioner has an equitable claim to fourteen years' pension, as an officer disabled in action with the enemy.

All which is respectfully submitted.

ON
PETITION OF JAMES MITCHELL, ESQUIRE,

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee, to whom was referred the petition of James Mitchell, Esquire, late Judge of the District Court for the District of London, beg leave to report—

That, from the long period of twenty-five years, which the petitioner has served as Judge of a District Court—his advanced age—the bodily infirmity with which he is afflicted, and his straightened pecuniary circumstances, have induced your Committee to recommend that a small pension of seventy-five pounds per annum be granted to him during his natural life—which they hope may meet with the favorable consideration of your Honourable House.

All which is respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE

ON

PETITION OF ELISHA HUFF, AND OTHERS.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

Your Committee, to whom was referred the petition of Elisha Huff, and sixty-six others, beg leave to report :—

That they have taken into their consideration the said petition of Elisha Huff, and others, praying your Honourable House to pass a Bill to establish the course of the side lines of the 2nd concession, west of Green Point, from No. 53 to No. 79,—and are of opinion, that it would be highly improper for your Honourable House to pass a bill to establish any survey on the imperfect evidence within their reach—particularly where there are conflicting interests, as in this case.

Your Committee are of opinion, that cases of the nature of that referred to them, may much more properly be brought before “the boundary commissioners,” who can call the parties interested before them—examine the different surveys—order further surveys to be made, and hear evidence upon oath, thereby enabling them to arrive at a correct decision.

All which is respectfully submitted.

CHARLES BOCKUS,

CHAIRMAN.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE

ON

RETURNS FROM THE CLERK OF THE CROWN,

AND OTHER PUBLIC OFFICERS.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee to whom was referred the message of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, with the returns from the offices of the clerk of the Crown, of the Secretary of the Province, of the Surveyor General, and from the several clerks of Assize.

BEG LEAVE RESPECTFULLY TO REPORT :

That they have examined the several returns, and maturely considered the subject referred to them, with a view to ascertain in what manner the offices could be regulated, so as to afford greater satisfaction to the public, and at the same time increase the general revenue of the Province. Your committee have ascertained, from the return of the clerk of the Crown, and from an examination of that officer, as also of his principal clerk, that the emoluments of that office for the last year, amount to upwards of £3500 exclusive of an account for criminal business, which has been claimed from the government, but which has not yet been paid, amounting to upwards of £400. Your committee are aware that the emoluments of this office have very materially increased, during the period that the present incumbent has held the office, and that they will continue to increase with the population of the country. In providing a salary for the clerk of the crown, your committee have made the same provision for him, as has been provided for each of the puisne judges, and although the income heretofore enjoyed by that officer, and derived from Fees, far exceeds that provision, your committee trust your honorable House will deem it very ample, and adequate to the services performed, which are not of so onerous and responsible a nature, as those rendered by the judges.

Your committee therefore recommend, that the office of the clerk of the crown should be regulated by law, and that instead of that officer being paid by fees as at present, he should receive a salary, as also all those connected with his department. For this purpose your committee have prepared the accompanying bill which they recommend for the adoption of your honorable house. Your committee are surprized to learn, that notwithstanding an adequate salary has been attached to the office of Secretary of the Province, and to that of Surveyor General, each of those officers have enjoyed a considerable addition of income arising from fees which your committee recommend should hereafter be paid into the hands of the Receiver General, half yearly, on account of the general revenues of the Province. Your committee further recommend, that the several deputy clerks of the Crown in the several districts of this Province, should, after the present spring assizes, discharge the duties of clerks of assize. By the alterations thus proposed, your committee confidently anticipate a diminution of expense in the administration of justice, and an increase to the revenues of the Province of about two thousand pounds per annum.

All which is respectfully submitted.

CHAIRMAN.

R E P O R T
OF
COMMITTEE ON ROADS,
ON THE
PETITION OF THOMAS MILBURN, SEN'R. AND OTHERS.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee, to whom was referred the petition of Thomas Milburn, Senior, and two hundred and eighty-five others, inhabitants of the Newcastle District, praying that the Road from Peterboro' to Chemong Lake, a distance of six miles, may be macadamized—most respectfully beg leave to report—

That, having duly enquired into the circumstances set forth in the said petition, and ascertained them as facts, and that the said distance, from the proximity of materials and the favorable position of the line of road, may be fully and finally macadamized, for the sum of two thousand five hundred pounds currency.

Your Committee are also made aware, that the improvement sought for forms a portion of the internal communication—much of which is at present under contract—between the head of the Bay of Quinte and Lake Simcoe—known as the communication road—having on the East and West, a distance of upwards of sixty miles of navigable waters—thereby rendering this portage a very great thoroughfare, and one that, in the opinion of the Committee, would soon repay any necessary outlay.

The Committee, therefore, respectfully recommend that the sum of two thousand five hundred pounds be appropriated to that purpose, and advanced to Trustees, to be named in the Act of appropriation, upon the security of the Tolls, and the credit of the said District of Newcastle.

All which is respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE
ON PETITION OF COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT
OF THE
HOUSE OF INDUSTRY.

---

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

---

Your Committee, to whom was referred the petition in behalf of the House of Industry, in the City of Toronto, beg leave to submit the following Report:—

The experience of another year has given strength to the opinion expressed on a former occasion by a Committee of this House in favour of the House of Industry.

During the past year an expenditure of nearly nine hundred pounds has been made in relieving sick and destitute persons in the City of Toronto—and no less than nine hundred and six persons have been aided by the Committee during that period.

The aid afforded from the public funds has only been three hundred and fifty pounds, which shows clearly that a very heavy burden has been sustained by the charitably disposed, whose contributions have enabled the Committee of the House of Industry to relieve so many applicants.

There is no reason to believe that the number of sick and destitute persons will be diminished, while it is not reasonably to be expected that a larger sum can be obtained from the charitably disposed inhabitants of the City, than was contributed during the last year.— Unless, therefore, a further grant be made, it is obvious that much misery and suffering will occur among those unfortunate individuals who are without the means of assisting themselves.

Your Committee beg leave to observe, that, it appears the services of those gentlemen who superintend and manage this Charitable Institution, are gratuitously afforded—and that no part of the moneys raised by public grant or private subscription are directed from the beneficent object for which they were originally designed.

Your Committee, therefore, recommend a continuance of the aid heretofore granted to the Establishment from the public funds of the Province.

All which is respectfully submitted.

WM. H. DRAPER,
CHAIRMAN.

OF
COMMITTEE ON ROADS AND BRIDGES,
ON PETITIONS OF
G. CHALMERS & OTHERS, AND W. J. SUMNER & OTHERS.

---

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

---

The Committee on Roads and Bridges, to whom was referred the petition of George Chalmers, and others, and also the petition of W. J. Sumner, and others—

BEG LEAVE TO REPORT :

That your Committee have had before them the petition of George Chalmers, and others, praying for a grant of money, by way of loan, for continuing the Macadamization of Dundas-street, from the Western boundary of the Home District, through the Gore District, to the Town of Hamilton, and from the manifest advantage that would result to the community at large, your Committee recommend that the prayer of the Petition be complied with upon the same terms as grants have been made for like purposes in other Districts—the interest to be paid out of the funds of the District. And your Committee also recommend that the prayer of the petition of J. Sumner, and others, of the Gore District, praying for a loan of money to plank the road from Oakville, on Lake Ontario, to Owen's Sound, on Lake Huron, be complied with so far as to enable the Petitioners to plank the said road from Oakville to Post's Tavern, on Dundas-street.

All which is respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE
ON TURNPIKE TRUSTS,
AND ON
Petitions of John Taber and others, and Peter Milne, Esquire, and others.

---

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

---

Your Committee appointed to enquire into the state of the turnpike trusts in the Home District, and to whom was referred the petitions of John Taber and others, and Peter Milne, Esq. and others, have considered it their duty, in order to obtain a correct knowledge of the condition of these trusts, to send to the chairman of each, a series of questions which, with the respective answers, are appended to this report; they have also had before them Mr. Thomas Roy, civil Engineer, whose observations on the proper system of road making and the state of the Macadamized roads now finished, together with two other papers on the same subject from persons who appear to possess a knowledge of the manner of constructing roads in England, are also appended hereto. In order that the state of each trust might be clearly shown, your Committee have added to this report tables exhibiting the amount of money paid by the Receiver General to each separately—the sums borrowed by the commissioners upon their own responsibility—the length of road finished on each—the materials of which they are constructed—the average cost per mile—the amounts expended where the road is not completed—the revenue of each for 1838, arising from tolls and commutation of statute labor—the expenditure for repairs during 1837 and 1838, together with the amount of interest paid out of the principal money, and interest now due. The advantages that have been derived by all classes of the inhabitants of the Home district, in the vicinity of these roads, from their improvement, is unquestionable, but at the same time your Committee cannot conceal the fact, that these benefits have been obtained at an immense expense. The whole distance now completed is thirty-seven miles, at a cost of eighty thousand pounds, averaging two thousand one hundred and sixty-two pounds per mile.

The expense of constructing the north road has been more than double that of the west, and greatly exceeds the cost of the east. This is attributed by the commissioners to the difficulty in procuring materials, and the great outlay at Hogg's Hollow; this trust is also in arrear for interest, which may in a great measure be accounted for, by the failure of the lessee of one of the gates, whose sureties the commissioners are now prosecuting for the sum due—£600.

The eastern road has been made with 3 inch plank, for considerably more than half the distance, now completed, and your Committee call the attention of your Honorable House to the fact, that the expenditure on this road averages £400 per mile more than that of the west road, where the materials are of the most durable description; and they also remark the great expense incurred in repairing the 3 miles made with stone, for the last two years—exceeding £900. There is no interest due by this trust, but it has been paid out of the principal, to the amount of £470.

The western road has been the least expensive in its construction, and which may partially have arisen from the general level surface of the country over which it passes, together with the facility of procuring materials; the tolls collected upon this road, although charged at too low a rate, have nearly equalled the interest, which has been paid up to 31st December last: the sum taken from the principal for that purpose, is £150.

The tolls collected upon these roads have not hitherto equalled the amount payable for interest, but in the opinion of your committee they may be increased, so as to accomplish that object, and also provide for the necessary repairs without being burdensome, provided that they are levied upon a just and equitable principle, in such a manner that those who use the road shall pay for it in proportion to that use, and the injury done thereby. Upon the north road the tolls appear to be collected fairly and justly, the gates being nearly equi-distant from each other.

Upon the east road there are two gates, within four miles of the City of Toronto—the rate charged at the two amounting to 15d. for a carriage drawn by two horses;—of this the first named petitioners complain, and so far as the statements made in their petition apply to the tolls, they are, in the opinion of your Committee, well founded.

Upon the West Road the course hitherto pursued seems objectionable—the rate of tolls appears to have been altered without the concurrence of the majority of the Commissioners, and to have been kept at too low a rate—in one case an additional gate appears to have been unnecessarily erected by them—an increased expense in collecting the tolls unwisely incurred; and at one gate an unfair distinction appears to have been sanctioned by the Board of Commissioners—different rates being charged to different persons.

The attention of your Committee has been drawn to a point requiring serious consideration—viz: whether the system now adopted by the Commissioners of the east road of making that road with plank will answer the purpose intended. If the statement is correct, that it can be laid down for £550 per mile, and last seven years without repairs, it would appear desirable that that plan should be more generally adopted; but your Committee are of opinion that the actual cost would prove much greater, 3 or 4 hundred pounds per mile at least, for forming the road in the first instance, which requires to be done as well when it is planked, as when other materials are used for the surface. In that case the advantages arising from the use of wood as a material, may well be questioned, and it would not be advisable to allow it to be continued, unless the amount of tolls raised should be equal to the repayment of the principal, together with the interest, in seven years.

Your Committee feel it their duty to allude to circumstances of questionable propriety that have occurred on the north and west trusts—The Commissioners of the former have employed one of their own number as Secretary, to whom they have paid a salary of £125 annually—while those of the latter have this year given £50 as a compensation to their Chairman. Those Gentlemen have probably not been sufficiently remunerated for their services, but a system under which the Commissioners have legally voted money to each other in any capacity seems to be one very open to abuse, and requiring amendment—the practice also that has hitherto obtained in all the trusts of allowing the Commissioners to furnish team work and materials, should not, in the opinion of your Committee, be allowed to continue.

Your Committee are of opinion that the continuation of these improvements will be greatly facilitated, the expenditure much reduced, and the roads constructed in a more substantial and scientific manner, if it were made compulsory upon the Commissioners to employ a competent person as Engineer, or Surveyor, whose practical knowledge of road-making would, for the future, prevent the Commissioners from falling into such costly errors as crossing Hogg's Hollow on Yonge-street, in a straight line, or ascending the Rouge Hill in a similar manner—to effect this purpose they recommend that these trusts should be consolidated, which would enable the Commissioners to employ a properly qualified person to superintend the three roads, and be the means of furnishing them with an efficient executive at a less expense than that now incurred. Several matters of minor importance require to be regulated by Legislative enactments, but your Committee do not consider it necessary further to allude to them than to remark that they have been provided for in the bill already reported, and which they recommend for the adoption of your Honourable House.

 ANSWERS

Of C. C. SMALL, Esquire, to Questions put by a Committee of the House of Assembly, relative to the Roads.

- To the first question—I answer, the eastern trusts.
2. By 3rd Wm. 4th, chapter 37.
  3. The answer to this question will be found upon reference to the annual reports transmitted to His Excellency, the Lieutenant Governor.
  4. Both wood and stone—The plank road has of late altogether been adopted, as will appear upon reference to the reports.
  5. It was found necessary to reconstruct a considerable part west of the Don Bridge, and a few yards east thereof, in consequence of there not being a sufficient quantity of metal laid down in the first instance.

6. The answer to this question will be found upon reference to the exhibits accompanying the reports already before you.

7. I am of opinion that the stone roads will resist the action of the frost, and not break up in the spring, provided they are made upon correct principles, such as thorough drainage from beneath the centre of your metal bed, and a sufficient quantity of the metal laid in the first instance, say at least 10 or 12 inches.

8. I think it necessary to employ an Engineer when and only when his services are required—To employ a permanent Engineer upon the roads would run away with from £150 to £200 per annum of public money, when two-thirds of that amount would be saved by employing a practical man by the day, when you required his services.

9. I would certainly recommend plank road or one made of that material when stone or gravel is difficult to be procured, the difference of expense is considerable, a plank road will cost £550 per mile laid down, where a stone road the same width, 10 inches in depth will require 326 toise of stone; the stone on the East Road has cost from 16 to $20 per toise broken, which would bring your road to £1469 per mile for material, exclusive of laying down; so that in fact you may have a plank road for 15 years by renewing it every five, for what a stone road will cost in the first instance, or you make three miles of plank road for one of stone—My own opinion is, that a plank road will last seven or eight years, and it is attended with no expense in repairs, whereas that of stone must be considerable.

10. Ten thousand pounds granted by 3 William IV. for the three roads.

Ten thousand pounds for the Eastern Section by 6 William IV., and twenty thousand pounds by 7 William IV.

11. From the first grant the Eastern Section received £2,200. From the second grant £8000. And from the last £11,889.

But for a more detailed state of receipts and expenditure I beg to refer you to the Reports.

12 and 13. I cannot answer.

14. In my opinion it is necessary to resort to both in certain cases, though, generally speaking, if you can procure a faithful Overseer, I should recommend day labour as the most economical.

15. No further check than a constant and watchful observance by the Trustees that both men and Overseers discharge their duty.

16. In answering this question, I beg to refer to the Exhibits attached to former Reports.

17. I do if practicable.

18. None further than his own affidavit when required.

19. No.

20. Nearly so.

21. Four hundred and seventy pounds seventeen shillings and ten-pence half-penny.

22. The answer to this question will be had upon reference to the reports.

23. No.

24. This question is answered by the above.

25. They have, those possessing saw-mills have furnished plank for the road at the same rate that was paid to Mr. Willard and others.

26. My opinion (and that of my brother Trustees,) is opposed to consolidating the trust, and desire that it may be perfectly understood, that if such a measure should be approved of by the House, they desire to be left out of the Act as Commissioners.

Respectfully submitted.

CHARLES C. SMALL,
CHAIRMAN.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES proposed by a Committee of the House of Assembly on the Home District Road Trusts.

1. For the North York-road.
2. Act 7 Wm. IV.
3. About eleven and a quarter miles.
4. Stone—principally granite, with a thin coating of sand on the surface of the metal bed.
5. None of it has been re-constructed.
6. The sum of £920 has been expended in repairs of bridges, and £243 in repairs of the road within the limits of the City of Toronto.
7. Decidedly.
8. Certainly not, solely, for the North York Road—but could a really intelligent person be found who could take charge of the engineering department of the three trusts, and be well acquainted with the construction of Macadamized roads, such an appointment might be beneficial, but the Trustees are not of opinion that a person so qualified could be easily met with in this country.
9. On a clay soil, certainly not, where stone can by any possibility be procured. The Trustees are not of opinion that a plank road is a judicious mode of laying out the public funds.
10. Thirty-two thousand eight hundred and twenty-two pounds four shillings and five pence has been received from the Government, and three thousand nine hundred and fifty pounds borrowed from the Bank of Upper Canada, on the personal security of the Trustees.
11. Thirty-six thousand seven hundred and seventy-two pounds four shillings and five pence.
12. We do not consider that any of the roads in Toronto have been judiciously constructed.
13. Previous to the appointment of the present Commissioners, no regular accounts appear to have been kept since May, 1837. The total sum expended in repairs of the Macadamized road is £343 5s. 3d.
14. The difficulty of finding parties who can be depended upon to execute contract work, renders day labour more desirable with good superintendents.
15. The Overseers merely take account of the time of the day labourers, but the money is paid to the individuals every second week by Mr. Young.
16. The average rate of toll per mile is 1d.—when the work is completed, a better system can be adopted than at present: owing to the immense expenditure at Hogg's Hollow, the toll to cover the interest would average one penny farthing per mile.
17. During the summer season, teams should only be allowed to carry a certain weight on a certain breadth of wheel.
18. The Toll Keepers swear to their monthly accounts.
19. None at present.
20. No they have not.
21. The sum of £133 6s. 10d. appears to have been paid out of the principal—and there is now due to the Receiver General £887 13s. 3d. which is covered by the balance in the bank and the amount of Snider's bond.
22. Deducting the expense of excavating at Hogg's Hill—it may be averaged at £2000 per mile.
23. £125 per annum has been voted to Mr. Young for keeping the accounts and paying the labourers, &c.
24. No other sums except the above amount have at any time been granted.
25. Both materials and teams have been furnished at various times, by Messrs. Hogg, Bridgeford and the late Dr. McCague—to Mr. Hogg a considerable amount has been paid.

26. The trustees are not aware of any advantage that the North York road would derive from being connected with the other trusts, and they have every reason to believe, that on a fair inspection of the road under their charge, and likewise of their accounts—it will be clearly proved, that the monies intrusted to their care have not been improperly applied.

JOHN BARWICK,

Chairman, North York Road.

Yonge Street, March 27, 1839.

THE CHAIRMAN of Board of Trustees for the Western Dundas Road having had 26 Questions put to him, by a Committee of the House of Assembly on Turnpike Trusts, begs leave to submit the following answers to the same:—

1. I am a trustee of the Western Dundas road.
2. Under the 7th Wm. 4th, chap. 76.
3. 12 miles complete have been Macadamized on Dundas street, and about three miles beyond that gravelled, making as pleasant a road for travel, and also the hills at the River Credit lowered, besides this about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  miles Macadamized with stone laid 6 inches deep, and the rest of the road formed to the river Humber on the lake road, together with some hills levelled beyond the bridge over the Humber.
4. Stone.
5. No.
6. About £205 has been expended in repairs only since the commencement of the works.
7. Yes, when the roads are sufficiently drained.
8. Only as at present, when the Commissioners find it necessary.
9. In consequence of having no experience in plank roads, I am unable to give an answer to this question.
10. £30,000 sterling, besides a portion of the first grant of £10,000 for the 3 roads, which was expended upon this road, amounting to £2,200 currency.
11. £23,922 4s. 5d. currency have been received and expended on account of the grants in addition to £1,500 currency raised by the trustees upon their personal security.
12. Considering the low, wet soil, upon which the road was constructed, it appears to stand as well as any in the District.
13. About £150 since its commencement upon the road as far as Col. Givins's gate; this sum would not have been so great had not the trustees been prevented repairing it in the fall of 1837.
14. Day labour.
15. The Overseer produces an account to the Clerk, of the number of days worked upon the road, as well as of materials purchased for the same, the Clerk makes all the calculations, which are then examined by the Board, the men are paid by him, who takes their receipts for the same. The Overseers are sworn to their accounts or returns.
16. The average rate of toll is not quite one penny per mile, no particular system is followed in levying the tolls.
17. No.
18. No particular check.
19. Only one gate is let, and that is a side-bar at Mr. Crookshank's lane.
20. The tolls have, during 1836, overpaid the interest, during 1837 were equal to it, and during 1838 fell rather short, which deficiency is now made up by the erection of two other gates on Dundas-street.
21. One hundred and fifty pounds have been paid out of principal since the commencement.

22. Two and a half miles have been made 20 feet wide and 10 inches deep, and 9½ miles have been made 16 feet wide and 10 inches deep, which average is about £1450 a mile, for Macadamizing and excavating, not including gravelling.

23. Yes, several times.

24. As the individual trustees, having the direct management of the expenditure of the sums so devoted, in 1836 and 1837—A sum of £50 was also voted to Thomas Fisher, Esq. in March 1839, as a remuneration for certain services rendered the trust during the last two years, in addition to the usual duty of a Commissioner, and at the special order of the Board, and not for his duty as Chairman.

25. Several of the Trustees have been in the habit of furnishing materials in the same manner, and upon the same terms as other persons, and sometimes team-work has also been performed in that manner.

26. I see no advantage to be gained by such a measure.

THOMAS FISHER,

Chairman to the Western Turnpike Trust.

On receipt of a number of Questions proposed by a Committee of the House of Assembly, I called a meeting of the Commissioners, when the above Answers were those agreed upon by the board.

My individual opinion regarding the Answer to the 12th Question, does not agree with that Answer, inasmuch as I do not think the road in Lot Street stands as well as any in the District.

My opinion is that the tolls should be regulated by the weights carried.

THOMAS FISHER.

ON THE CONSTRUCTION OF ROADS.

LAYING OUT A ROAD.

Roads ought to be carried along a level line as nearly as possible, and only having gentle acclivities and declivities; for a greater distance on a road nearly level, is productive of less expense of animal strength than a lesser distance passing over considerable elevations.

The following tables, the general results of experiments, and drawn from approved formula, will render this manifest:—

TABLE 1.

Force of Traction required on various inclinations of Road—Load 25 cwt. velocity two and half miles per hour.

RATE OF INCLINATION.	FORCE REQUIRED
Level .....	115 lbs.
1 in 600 .....	120 "
1 in 57 .....	140 "
1 in 40 .....	164 "
1 in 29 .....	200 "
1 in 26 .....	218 "
1 in 19 .....	300 "
1 in 14½ .....	400 "
1 in 11½ .....	500 "
1 in 8½ .....	700 "
1 in 7½ ultimum of Traction .....	800 "

TABLE 2.

A horse can exert the following moving forces at different velocities for six hours per day.

MILES PER HOUR.	STRONG HORSE.	ORDINARY HORSE.
2	169 lbs.	100 lbs.
2½	156 "	90 "
3	144 "	81 "
3½	132 "	72 "
4	121 "	64 "
5	100 "	49 "
6	81 "	36 "
7	64 "	25 "
8	49 "	16 "
9	36 "	9 "

By the Woburn experiments the mean force exerted by 144 horses in 52 teams, was 163 lbs. each horse—inclination and velocity not given; force exerted by a strong horse, at a dead pull, 480 lbs.

From the above tables it is manifest, that a moderately strong horse can draw 25 cwt. on a nearly level road, but upon inclinations exceeding 1 in 40, such a load is beyond his strength for any considerable distance. However, if the inclination is short, he will be able by considerable exertion to draw this load on an inclination of 1 in 26—but upon an inclination of 1 in 14½, it is beyond the strength of an ordinary horse at a dead pull. These deductions assume the road to be firm and wrought into true inclinations; where the roads are loose and ill-formed, the required force of traction is greatly increased.

PROPER FORM OF A ROAD.

After a proper location for the road has been established, the ground should be carefully levelled and levelling stakes placed at every hundred feet distance. Sections of it should be made, and the whole be laid out into true levels or inclinations as the case may be. This will not only facilitate the future operations, but will also tend to lessen the expense; for it will prevent all improper excavations or embankments from being done. The metal bed is then to be formed, and the soil to be carefully drained, which is an operation of great consequence and requires much skill to execute it properly. The metal bed should be levelled transversely, and made as firm as possible. The metal should be so laid as to render it impervious to water. This can only be effected by laying it on in thin layers and giving each layer time to be settled by the action of the wheels, before the next in succession is laid on. The first layer should be about five inches thick, quite level, and be well pressed down upon the metal bed, and consolidated before the next layer is put on, so as to form a species of concrete bottoming for the road. Should the road be narrow and the traffic light, another layer of five inches average thickness will form a good road; but if the road is wide and the traffic heavy, it will require two more layers of four inches each, which form a road strong enough for any situation. The form of the surface of the road when finished, ought to be the segment of a circle, radius eight hundred feet. If the width of the metal or the chord be 16 feet—the versine or rise should be 2½ inches nearly. Thus, if an average of 10 inches of metal is to be given, the thickness at the edges should be 8¾ inches, and at the middle it should be 11¼ inches. This curve is quite sufficient to drain off the water, and it is strictly in accordance with the required strength of the road at the centre and at the sides—for by observation it is found that on a road much used by wagons, the waste is in the following propositions:—

Action of the Atmosphere	20 per cent.
Carriage wheels	35 per cent.
Horses feet	45 per cent.

Therefore, if the atmospheric action is equal over the breadth of the road, and the action of the horses feet being most frequently on or near the centre, it follows that the centre ought to be stronger than the edges, in the proportion of 7 to 9. Hollow arching of the materials ought to be carefully guarded against; for a percolation of water from the surface will take place wherever it exists. This hollow arching cannot be avoided when the full thickness of the metal is put on at once ; therefore it ought never to be done. Covering the surface of the road with loose materials such as gravel or sand, has a still more pernicious effect. It forever prevents the angles of the stones from combining, and a road so used must always remain hollow underneath.

It has been found on roads where great traffic exists, that if they are made of clean hard broken stones placed on a firm foundation, and rendered impervious to water, and sufficiently strong not to yield under the pressure of the wheels, the wear is about one inch in thickness per annum—but on weak ill-drained roads, pervious to water, and yielding under the pressure of the wheels, the wear of materials has been as much as 4 inches per annum.

The size of the broken stone ought to bear a proportion to the hardness of the material used.

One and a half inch Cubes, of Aberdeen Granite are compressed by a weight of .....	24,536 lbs.
Peterhead Granite .....	18,636 do.
Cornish, do. ....	14,302 do.
Purbeck Limestone .....	20,610 do.
Compact Sandstone .....	15,560 do.

It follows if  $1\frac{1}{2}$  inch Cubes of Aberdeen Granite is a proper size,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  inch Cubes of compact Sandstone (the material chiefly used in this country) would be equivalent to resist the same pressure.  $2\frac{1}{2}$  inches is too large, but certainly upon every sound principle, the softer Stone ought not to be broken so small as the harder.

Having briefly traced the outlines of the formation and construction of a well made road, we shall endeavour to examine how far the roads lately made in the Home District are conformable to sound principles of road making, and in so doing shall take each road in succession.

Yonge Street road was the first experiment. It is not necessary here to inquire into the justice or injustice of the much agitated question about the expense of that small portion of road made during the first season. It is enough to say that expense was not spared. The road was formed of a greater breadth than has been done since ; the metal was laid on thicker, and an expensive, but injudicious system of drainage was adopted. Unfortunately, those adaptations which science has supplied to the art of road-making, were totally disregarded, and a low standard of action was placed before the public. In future seasons this has not been remedied, it is even worse. The road has been carried forward in a nearly straight line, regardless of the expense of animal strength which the Commissioners were entailing upon the public, and heedless of the certainty that in a few years, if the Province prospered, the steep inclinations which they were forming, would be altered at an expense probably as great as the first cost. The proceedings at Gallow's hill and at Hogg's hollow will fully justify these remarks. I shall confine myself to the latter of these. An excellent line of road, with an inclination of about 1 in 30 on each side of the ravine could have been obtained at a moderate expense. Instead of adopting this line, the road was carried right across the ravine ; the inclinations are not regular ; at the steepest parts they are about 1 in 14. The principle of action appears to have been to reverse the geometrical truth—lessen the inclination, by increasing the distance : for the distance was lessened in order to increase the inclination. The consequence is, that if Yonge Street road had been properly laid out, a regular descent could, with three or four exceptions, have been obtained from the oak ridges to Toronto, and one horse could have drawn in a ton weight of produce to the city ; but Hogg's hollow, and one or two other mis-managed places, intervene, and it is absolutely necessary to employ two horses to bring in a ton of produce, instead of one horse—a tax upon every individual who lives to the northward of the hollow, far heavier than both the tolls upon the road, besides having toll to pay for two horses instead of one, into the bargain.

The metal bed is badly formed—the inclinations irregular, resembling the section No. 2—the metal laid on in masses, and imperfectly consolidated—drainage seems to have been neglected, or not understood—and the road is breaking up.

Dundas road presents one of the finest lines for constructing a road which an Engineer could desire : from Toronto to Dundas, it might have been nearly level, and the ravine of the Humber could have been crossed at a point which nature seems to have formed for the purpose. The Commissioners on this road seem to have acted the very reverse of the Yonge Street Commissioners ;—the latter have run straight lines in spite of every obstacle—the former have made the road as crooked as possible, in order to meet every obstacle which could be found, and to place the road on as bad a location as the country afforded—such is the top of the sand ridge, along which it runs. On such a bottom, it is next to impossible to consolidate a good road: besides, the ridge to the west of the Humber is ascended and descended several times, apparently without any good reason.

The road formation, and the laying on of the materials, are as objectionable as on Yonge Street—drainage on the wet places as badly executed, and the hills on each side of the Humber river, nearly as steep as those at Hogg's hollow; the excavations are to the full as injudiciously executed, and both excavations and embankments have frequently been done where they were not required. For some distance out of Toronto, this road is so much broken up, that unless it is attended to in the spring, it will be impassible.

Kingston road, for two miles out of Toronto, is exactly similar to the others; the soil over which it passes is wet, drainage was not properly attended to, and this portion of the road is in a ruinous condition. For five miles farther, the road passes over an undulating country. The inclinations are steeper than could be desired, but are not altogether objectionable;—a difference of opinion has arisen about the proper line which should have been adopted here. About seven miles from Toronto, a new line has been formed, on which there is an inclination of 1 in 14; from thence to the Highland Creek, the old road is left and a new line of road formed;—the line chosen is not judicious. On the east side of the Highland Creek, an expensive excavation is in progress—the inclination contracted for is 1 in 10; a small portion of road is made eastward, and at the Rouge hill a very expensive excavation is in progress—inclination 1 in 6. Both these last-named excavations are on the principle of going straight, and the road could in each case be made useful for less money than these works will cost. It will be seen by the table 1st, that both these hills are steeper than Baron Humboldt's summum ultimum of draught. On this road, planking has been done for five or six miles; it is a poor shift, and can only be used until heavy carriages are put upon the road. Had road-making been conducted upon better principles, it is probable that no such expedient would have been resorted to. In conclusion, I cannot value the whole of the works done upon these roads, at any greater sum than the worth of the broken stone lying upon them, less the expense of raising and screening.

THOMAS ROY,

Civil Engineer.

March, 1839.

SIR,

THE sketch I submit is principally to shew, that roads must be made perfectly dry, in the first instance, just as a wise man would prepare a solid foundation for his house, consequently it is applicable to all roads, in every country, only requiring variation according to circumstances, by men possessing knowledge of the action and re-action of springs, but if it fall into hands of men whose heads are full of surface water, it will share the same fate as reform, in the heads of fellows whose hearts are full of rebellion.

You say that you have not seen two plans alike, on the different roads in operation; I remember when hardly one alike was to be found in the old country, because there was no plan at all, but now there is a solid and fixed rule established. Previous to McAdam, Commissioners on every Trust Road throughout England, expended much more in eating, drinking, and disputing, than is now paid for regular Superintendents, but are now merely Guardians to the public, with but little self-inconvenience, which will be the same here, when once the public have ocular demonstration; until then, conflicting opinions, and bad roads will continue. The roads already (nick-named) Macadamized, will have to undergo the same process, and if Watson, &c., who have so wantonly buried stones enough in one mile for at least two, are not to be hanged, I hope they will be sent to put them all back again in heaps on the side of the road. Waiting an opportunity to prove these assertions correct, or myself an impostor,

I am, Sir,

Your's most respectfully,

GEORGE CASE,

Newmarket, March 11th, 1839.

COBOURG, 15th March, 1839.

SIR,

I have observed in the report of the proceedings of the House of Assembly, that you have introduced a motion for establishing a Board of Works in this Province, under the control of which, all public works now in progress, or hereafter undertaken, shall be placed.— And that you feel particularly anxious as regards Macadamized roads, and invite such gentlemen in the Province, as possess a knowledge of the system practised in other countries, to transmit such information to you for the consideration of the Committee, or Board, when established.

I do not profess to be scientific in the process of Macadamization, but, with your permission, I will state what I have seen done in England on one of the principal thoroughfares into London—the entrance from the South and East.

This piece of road, over a space of five miles, was, within my recollection, one of the worst of the great thoroughfares, and I have witnessed many serious accidents therefrom. The ground low and swampy the whole distance, reclaimed by embankments and ditches.

The process that I saw adopted, was the removal of the upper stratum to the depth of eighteen inches or two feet, then laying down bavins or faggots packed close, endwise across the road, to the depth of two feet more or less, to preserve the level as near as possible, but at all events to avoid holes or undulations of ground that would favor a lodgment of water—the superstratum before removed, was thrown over the bavins, and found its way in the interstices of the bavins. It is fit to observe that this soil was of a sandy description, and from its non-adhesive quality, more readily deposited itself,—over this again was thrown common gravel, six to eight inches thick, which formed the road for use. The traffic soon solidified the whole—wherever any part of the earth-covering sunk, the injury was repaired in dry weather, with gravel. The convexity of the road was slight, the ditches were carefully kept in repair, to receive the water, and the road from being one of the worst, became one of the best around London.

It was after the formation of this road that Mr. MacAdam commenced his system in England; the value of which appears to consist in creating ample drains for water, the removal of trees from the road sides, where they would interrupt the action of the sun and wind; and the upper layer of his road to consist of large stones, broken to about 2 inches square, thus preserving angular pieces, instead of round; the former having the greater tendency to hang together and solidify, than round substances—fill in between with earth.

The principal object to which I take the liberty of directing your attention, is the foundation, which, in the formation of the road above referred to, consisted of Bavins and Faggots. The opportunities afforded in this Province for so conducting the work of road-making, hold out a prospect of effecting this object to the greatest advantage, and with best probable results; and I am persuaded from what I have witnessed on the road above referred to, where the traffic is so immense, that the plan would succeed well here.

I have often seen in this Province an attempt to repair roads, by casting loose brush on the road, and covering loosely with earth, a practice to be altogether condemned as useless. I presume I need hardly state that Bavins consist of sound twigs, and brush-wood, the thickness of a finger, bound up, close and compact with withy, and a strong stake driven through the middle to keep them firm. I humbly conceive that Bavins are much superior to trunks of trees, because they will interlace and support each other, which the trees cannot do.—Arguing from analogy, Mr. MacAdam broke large stones into small pieces, in order that he might obtain a material that would unite, or more properly speaking, bind. I am not prepared to state what would be the expense of preparing the Bavins, but there must be many persons here who pursued the occupation of wood-cutting in England, and could give an accurate estimate of the cost.

I will close my remarks my stating that the Dover Road, to which I have made such particular reference, is considered one of the best around London. Its foundation has not been disturbed since its formation, at the division I have described—nor has it perceptibly given way.

Requesting you will accept my apology for the length of this communication.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your most obedient servant,

CHARLES GREEN.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE

TO

SEARCH JOURNALS OF LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL,

ON

BILL TO SEND COMMISSIONERS TO ENGLAND.

To the Honorable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee appointed to examine the Journals of the Honourable Legislative Council relative to the Bill sent up from your Honourable House, entitled "An Act to appoint Commissioners to proceed to England on behalf of this Province, and for other purposes therein mentioned—beg leave to report:—that they proceeded to the examination of the Journals of that Honourable House, and found recorded as follows:

Tuesday, 9th April, 1839.

"A deputation from the Commons House of Assembly brought up a Bill, entitled "An Act to appoint Commissioners to proceed to England on behalf of this Province, and for other purposes therein mentioned," to which they requested the concurrence of this House, and then withdrew.

"The said Bill was then read, and it was ordered that the same be read a second time "to-morrow."

Wednesday, 10th April, 1839.

"Pursuant to the order of the day the Bill, entitled "An Act to appoint Commissioners to proceed to England on behalf of this Province, and for other purposes therein mentioned," was read a second time, and it was "Ordered—That the House be put into a committee of the whole, presently, to take the same into consideration.

"The House was then put into a Committee of the whole accordingly.

"The Honourable Mr. Wilkins took the chair.

"After some time the House resumed.

"The Chairman mentioned that the Committee had taken the last named Bill into consideration, and made some progress therein, and asked leave to sit again on Monday next.

"Ordered—That the Report be received, and leave granted accordingly."

Monday, 15th April, 1839.

"Pursuant to the order of the day the House was again put into a Committee of the whole upon the Bill, entitled "An Act to appoint Commissioners to proceed to England on behalf of this Province, and for other purposes therein mentioned."

"The Honourable Mr. Wilkins took the chair.

"After some time the House resumed.

"The Chairman reported that the Committee had passed certain resolutions which they recommend to the adoption of the House.

"Ordered—That the said Report be received, and the said resolutions were then read by the Clerk as follows:

"Resolved—That, for the reasons set forth in the resolutions of this House on the 4th instant, it is inexpedient to pass the bill sent up from the House of Assembly, entitled "An Act to appoint Commissioners to proceed to England on behalf of this Province, and for other purposes therein mentioned," especially as the Report and Address to Her Majesty referred to in those resolutions, expressed the entire confidence of the Legislative Council, that Her Majesty's Government would not carry into effect any measure deeply affecting the interests of this Province, without affording to its inhabitants an opportunity of being heard on the subject.

"Resolved—That when Her Majesty's Ministers have made the Legislature of this Province acquainted with the plan which it is proposed to submit to the Imperial Parliament for the restoration of peace and tranquillity to the people of Upper and Lower Canada, this House will take the same into consideration, and communicate its opinion thereon to Her Majesty, either by uniting with the House of Assembly in the appointment of a Commissioner or Commissioners for that purpose, or by Address, as may seem most expedient according to the circumstances of the case.

"The said resolutions being read a second time, and the question of concurrence being put on each, they were severally agreed to by the House, and it was "Ordered—That the same be communicated by message to the Commons House of Assembly, for their information."

All which is respectfully submitted.

OGLE R. GOWAN,
CHAIRMAN.

---

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE
ON THE
AMENDMENTS OF LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL,
TO
FISHERY BILL.

---

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

---

The Committee, to whom was referred the Amendments made by the Honourable the Legislative Council, in and to the Bill sent up from your Honourable House, entitled, "An Act to regulate the inspection of Fish, and to prevent aliens from fishing within the waters of this Province,"—beg leave respectfully to report:—That they have given the said amendments their attentive consideration, and with the exception of two of said amendments, your Committee beg to recommend their adoption.

The two amendments which your Committee consider highly objectionable, are as follows:—

Press 2, line 14—After "aforesaid," expunge the remainder of the clause, and insert "That it shall be the duty of the Inspector or Inspectors, so to be appointed, on application being made to any one of them for that purpose, to proceed to inspect all fish, by opening one of the heads of each barrel or half barrel, and if the same is found to contain sound and merchantable fish, with a sufficient quantity of salt to preserve the same, he shall then brand the same, as hereinafter provided, on the head of such barrel or half barrel; and if the fish are found unsound, or not merchantable, the same shall be destroyed by the Inspector; and if the barrel or half-barrel is not full, or not salted with a sufficient quantity of salt, that in that case the said Inspector shall fill the same with sound, merchantable fish, or add such quantity of salt as he may deem requisite, as the case may be. Each barrel shall contain two hundred pounds, and each half-barrel one hundred pounds."

Add to the Bill, "And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if it shall appear to the Inspector that a part of the fish, in any barrel or half-barrel inspected by him, is sound, and a part unsound, then it shall and may be lawful for the said Inspector to separate the sound from the unsound, and re-pack the sound fish, and add such salt or pickle as he may judge necessary, and brand the same as aforesaid; and such fish as the Inspector shall judge not capable of preservation, he shall condemn as bad."

If the Bill should become a law, in its present amended shape, a duty would be imposed upon the Inspectors to be appointed under the said Act, not only unreasonable, but, in the opinion of your Committee, extremely unjust—inasmuch as, in the event of any fish inspected being found to be unsound and not merchantable, or if the barrel or half-barrel is not full, or not salted with a sufficient quantity of salt, the person inspecting the same is bound to fill the said barrel or half-barrel with sound and merchantable fish, or to add such quantity of salt as he may deem requisite, without any provision being made to re-imburse him for the expense which he must necessarily incur in procuring sound fish and salt. Besides, by compelling Inspectors (where a barrel or half-barrel is not full) to fill the same, at his own trouble and expense, with sound and merchantable fish or salt, as the case may be, a construction might be put upon it which would hold out an invitation to persons to produce empty barrels, to be filled with sound fish or salt, or to purchase, at a low rate, unsound fish, in order that sound fish or salt may be substituted instead thereof, free of any charge.

Your Committee are inclined to think, that the amendments, to which they object, have been inserted by some oversight; but they have felt it necessary to point out their objections, for the information of your Honourable House.

All which is respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE

ON

PETITION OF RICHARD FLOOD, AND OTHERS.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee to whom was referred the petition of Richard Flood, and others, for the improvement of the navigation of the river Thames, between the towns of London and Chatham—

BEG LEAVE TO REPORT:—

That on the further examination of the matter referred to them, your Committee find by the report of the Civil Engineer, employed by the inhabitants of the London and Western Districts, in 1836, for levelling, surveying, and making plans and estimates for the improvement of the river Thames, for slack water navigation by means of Dams and Locks, between the Town of London, and the Town of Chatham; and which report of the Civil Engineer is appended to the report of a former Committee of your Honourable House, on the same subject, that the whole expense, including contingencies, is estimated at £32,248, and that there will be 24 Locks; each of these Locks will afford great advantages for Hydraulic purposes. At every Lock will be a favourable position on each side of the river, making 48 in number. And should a joint stock Company be formed, as recommended by the first report of your Committee, the Company could no doubt, if they should deem it advisable to do so, in the course of their operations, and when the same should be completed, sell or lease those sites for the application of water power, at fair and reasonable valuations.

On reference to the practice of the Grand River Navigation Company, your Committee find that they lease each site for prices in proportion to the value of the erectments to be made by the lessees respectively. That is to say, for every saw to be used in a saw mill, £12 10s., for every pair of stones to be used in a grist mill, £12 10s., for carding machines and lathing mills, £6 5s., for turning laithes, and other small machinery, £2 10s. per annum.

Considering the great value of the lands and timber with which the face of the country is clothed, in the neighbourhood of these contemplated improvements, the present population, and the certainty of its gradual increase, even should immigration not be greater than it has been for the last two or three years, your Committee deem it a moderate calculation, in taking it for granted that as soon as the navigation should be completed, there would be at least two establishments on each side of the river, at every Lock, renting for £12 10s. per annum—these would be 96 in number, and would amount to the sum of £1200 per annum, being nearly two thirds of the interest on the whole outlay; regardless of any advantages that must accrue from the receipts of rents on smaller machinery, and the Tolls at the several Locks, which your Committee believe would be enough to make up the deficiency of interest on the capital to be expended. And your Committee regret that the state of the Provincial Revenue is not such as to enable them with propriety, to recommend to your Honourable House, to provide for making the improvements in question at the public expense; they have therefore, in their first report, felt constrained to submit a bill for forming a Joint Stock Company.

Your Committee would fain hope that the time is not far distant, when the contemplated Great Western Rail Road, will be completed from Burlington Bay, at the head of Lake Ontario, to the town of London. If such were now the case, there can be no question that the moment a slack water navigation should be made on the river Thames, between the towns of London and Chatham, the profits that would immediately accrue from tolls and leases of sites for Hydraulic advantages, would amount to more than the interest of the money expended in making the improvements.

Respectfully submitted.

CHAIRMAN.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE

ON

PETITION OF FRANCIS HALL,

AND ON

MESSAGE AND DOCUMENTS ON GULL ISLAND LIGHT-HOUSE.

To the Honourable the House of Assembly.

The Committee to whom was referred the petition of Francis Hall, with the message of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, with the report of the Commissioners appointed to superintend the building of a Light House on Gull Island—

BEG LEAVE RESPECTFULLY TO REPORT :

That, having attentively examined the documents submitted to them, your Committee have ascertained that the late Commissioners, without any authority or instructions from the Government, and contrary to the express wishes of your Honourable House, instituted several actions against the first Contractor and his Sureties, in which they were defeated.

Your Committee are surprised to find that the late Commissioners received at once the whole £1000 granted for the erection of the light house, and that it remained in their hands a great length of time before it was required to be expended. Your Committee perceive that the late Commissioners, who reside at Port Hope, have made a charge of £3 17s. 6d. for procuring the said £1000 from the Receiver General; and have, moreover, charged £62 10s. for the costs of the said law suits. These charges your Committee cannot sanction, and they, therefore, recommend that the late Commissioners be called upon to refund the same. Your Committee cannot justify the conduct of the late Commissioners in obtaining the whole sum of £1000 at once, when they were aware that a very small part thereof would be required to be expended by them for a great length of time.

In regard to the claim of £10, made by Mr. Hall, for examining and reporting upon the work, for the information of your Honourable House, your Committee consider it reasonable that he should be paid.

It appears this light house is not yet completed, and the present Commissioners state that a further sum of £520 is necessary to finish it; but your Committee conceive that the £66 7s. 6d. retained by the late Commissioners, should be paid over by the present ones, in which case only £453 12s. 6d. would be required to be provided for by the Legislature to effect the above object.

All which is respectfully submitted.

PETITION OF SARAH USSHER.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

---

THE Committee to whom was referred the petition of Sarah Ussher, respectfully report: That the claim of this Lady to a Pension from the Provincial funds, should in their opinion be allowed.

The melancholy assassination of her husband, by Brigands from the United States, and the circumstances attending that melancholy event are of too recent occurrence, and are too generally known to require repetition. There is no doubt that he was deliberately murdered by foreigners he had never injured, and to whom he was probably personally unknown, for no other reason than that he had gallantly done his duty in resisting invasion from the neighbouring Republic, and being reputed to have been concerned in the destruction of the Piratical Steam-boat Caroline; and your Committee are, therefore, of opinion, that his death should be considered in the same light as if it had occurred while actually engaged with the enemy.

Your Committee are not fully informed of the pecuniary means of Mrs. Ussher, arising from personal or other property, but they recommend the grant of a pension of fifty pounds per annum, during her live.

All which is respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE,
ON
THE SUBJECT OF EDUCATION.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

---

THE Committee on the part of your Honourable House, appointed to meet a Committee on the part of the Honourable the Legislative Council, on the subject of certain resolutions adopted by the two branches of the Legislature during the present Session, on the subject of education, after having agreed to their first Report, which has been communicated to your Honourable House, they met this day at four minutes after two o'clock, in the Committee-Room of the Honourable the Legislative Council—when certain resolutions were proposed for the adoption of the Joint Committee by an Honourable Member of the Legislative Council, which recommended a delay in proceeding with the building of the University of King's College, and a mode of the appropriation of a portion of the proceeds of the lands set apart for the endowment of the said University, for the purposes of Grammar Schools.

An Honourable Member of your Honourable House, denied the power of the Joint Committee to take the subject into consideration, and moved that the Chairman should leave the Chair—with the exception of that Honourable Member, a majority of the Members of the Joint Committee present protested against such a proceeding, but the Chairman left the Chair, declaring that he would propose no question having for its object any interference with the University of King's College.

Your Committee have felt it to be their duty to report the above proceedings to your Honourable House, with the view of being instructed as to their further conduct.

All which is respectfully submitted.

REPORT
OF
COMMITTEE OF PRIVILEGE,
ON RESOLUTIONS OF LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.
ON
SENDING COMMISSIONERS TO ENGLAND.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

---

The Committee of Privilege, to whom were referred the Resolutions adopted by the Honourable the Legislative Council, in relation to the Bill, sent up from your Honourable House, entitled, "An Act to appoint Commissioners to proceed to England on behalf of this Province, and for other purposes therein mentioned,"—beg leave to report:—

That they have attentively examined into the practice and proceedings of the Parliament of Great Britain and Ireland, as well as that of this Province, and they can discover no precedent for the proceedings of the Legislative Council referred to your Committee ; nor can they find any that, in the opinion of your Committee, would at all go to warrant the course pursued by that Honourable House, in reference to the said Bill.

Your Committee are of opinion, that the Legislative Council should either have rejected, adopted, or amended the said Bill ; and they can find no single instance on the Journals of the said Council, where a bill, passed by your Honourable House, has been rejected, and where resolutions, at the same time passed, giving the reasons for such rejections, have been communicated to your Honourable House.

If the Bill, sent up by your Honourable House, can be considered in the light of a money bill, the Legislative Council might have requested a conference with your Honourable House, and if acceded to, the opinions of the Council, in the instructions to their committee, might have been in such manner conveyed to your Honourable House ; and if unsatisfactory, your Honourable House might have so resolved, and asked a conference on the subject of the last conference, where written answers to the reasons of the Council might be read and delivered in like manner. In the fourth session of the eleventh Parliament, such a course was pursued by the Legislative Council, upon the subject matter of the Supply Bill, and was acceded to by the Assembly.

Indeed it has been pursued in reference to other than money bills, and had it been adopted in the present instance, each House could have recorded their justification to the Province at large, and your Honourable House would have had an opportunity to prove that the reasons given by the Honourable the Legislating Council, for not passing so necessary and highly important a measure, were entirely founded on error. But the course adopted by the Council (if acquiesced in) has left your Honourable House no alternative, but the Resolutions must be entered on your Journals, without your having the power either to assent to or dissent from them, and the justification of the Council goes forth to the world upon the Journals of both Houses without an answer. A person not familiar with the whole proceedings, upon reading the Journals of your Honourable House, would conclude that the reasons of the Council, were satisfactory to your Honourable House, because they would appear as having been tacitly acquiesced in.

Your Committee are of opinion that the course pursued by the Council, is an infringement upon the liberty and privileges of your Honourable House ; and they beg leave to recommend the adoption of such means as in your wisdom you shall deem proper to induce the Legislative Council to withdraw the Resolutions sent down by them.

All which is respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE, ON ROADS AND BRIDGES,

ON

PETITION OF H. STRANGE, AND OTHERS.

---

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

---

THE Committee on the subject of Roads and Bridges, to whom was referred the petition of H. Strange, and others, of Guelph, Dundas, Puslinch and other Townships of the District of Gore, praying for the construction of a Macadamized Road from the Town of Guelph to the Town of Dundas, beg leave respectfully to report on said petition as follows :

Your Committee have had under their consideration the subject matter of the above petition in connection with the report of the Engineer appointed by petitioners to examine the route and estimate the cost of the construction of said Road.

The report of the Engineer appears to have been favourably received by petitioners, and they pray that the route for the proposed road may be in accordance thereto.

The petitioners further pray that a grant of money may be made for the construction of said road upon the security of the tolls collected thereon, and such other security as to your Honourable House may seem proper.

From the great advantages which will arise to the extensive and fertile tract of country through which this improvement will be made, and the unquestionable return that will be made for the outlay necessary for its construction, your Committee do not hesitate to recommend to the favourable consideration of your Honourable House the prayer of the petitioners.

Your Committee have appended to this report a copy of said petition, together with the report and estimate of the Engineer, as showing forth more clearly the advantages of the said improvement.

All which is respectfully submitted.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly of Upper Canada in Provincial Parliament assembled.

The Petition of undersigned, Inhabitants of Guelph, Dundas, Puslinch, 'Flamboro', Nicol, Woolwich, &c., in the Gore District, Upper Canada—

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH :

That your Petitioners regard with the deepest interest every measure that is likely to promote the advancement of public improvement in this Province, and, in their estimation, scarcely any can compete with good roads; the prosperity of their own local situation has been for very many years seriously retarded from not having a good road leading from the town of Guelph to that of Dundas.—Your Petitioners, therefore, with the like assistance of your Honourable House, granted to other portions of the country, contemplate the formation of a Macadamized road between the two towns above mentioned, on and near the road now between them, through Puslinch, which road is the principal one, leading in almost a straight line from Dundas, through Guelph, to the Falls of Elora, Fergus, and Garrafraxa—and will in time become a great thoroughfare into the Huron Territory.

Your Petitioners, therefore, pray that your Honourable House will authorize the formation of a Macadamized road from the town of Guelph to that of Dundas, leading through Puslinch, on or near the line recommended by the report of the Surveyor had on the occasion, with the chart or plan of the same annexed; to grant such a sum as in its wisdom it shall deem sufficient for carrying on and completing the proposed undertaking upon the security of the tolls, statute labour money, and such other security as your Honourable House have appointed in other road bills of a like nature or otherwise, as to your Honourable House may appear expedient in furtherance of the views of your Petitioners.

All of which, with the plan and Surveyor's estimate of the same, your Petitioners respectfully submit to the consideration and early action thereon of your Honourable House.

For whom, as in duty bound, they will ever pray.

(Signed) H. STRANGE,
And 308 others.

To the Committee for superintending the survey of the intended Macadamized road from Dundas to Guelph.

GENTLEMEN:

In discharge of the duty which you have confided to me of making a survey of the road from Dundas to Guelph, and an estimate of the expense of Macadamizing the same—I beg leave to submit the following remarks explanatory of my proceedings, and the results at which I have arrived.

Immediately on receiving instructions from Colonel Kirby (one of your Committee), I commenced operations, and have been unremitting in my exertions to bring them to a speedy and satisfactory conclusion. Having obtained a suitable party to assist me in the survey, and having had previously a tolerable acquaintance with this section of the country, I hope to be able to give you such satisfaction, as to your enquiries, as may be expected from an experimental survey. As I have been formerly engaged in laying out and superintending the construction of Macadamized roads, and of late years have been engaged in this neighbourhood in carrying similar works into effect, I can (from the practical knowledge thus acquired) with more confidence submit the annexed estimate as a correct one.

Agreeable to your instructions to me, I have examined two proposed routes from the present Dundas and Waterloo Macadamized road to Nevills' Tavern on the Brock Road. One commencing on the above referred to Macadamized road, near the Honourable James Crooks', and following the allowance for road between lots number 6 and 7, commonly called the Brock road, to letter B. on the plan annexed, being in length three miles thirty eight chains and  $\frac{44}{100}$ . The other, and that which I have selected as the preferable route, leaves the Dundas and Waterloo Macadamized road at Mr. Kingley's Tavern, and crossing the Creek, west of Colonel Kerby's, follows the allowance for road to Mr. William Green's house; thence it takes a direct course through Mr. Green's farm to a road between lots numbers 8 and 9, in the third concession of 'Flamboro', west, and following the direction of the said road to the front of the fourth concession, where it crosses the lots obliquely (as pointed out by the line coloured red on the plan) until it intersects the Brock Road towards the rear of the fourth concession, as letter B on the plan. The better to enable you to make a comparison of the relative merits of those two lines, I will copy from the annexed estimate an abstract of the expense of Macadamizing each.

From the Macadamized road near the Honourable James Crooks' to letter B. on the Plan, by the Brock road,	} m. chs. lks. }	£ 6492 1 4½
From the Macadamized road at McKinley's corner, to where it intersects the Brock road at same place,	} 3 51 76 ... }	4867 7 9
Difference.....	0 13 22 ...	£ 1624 13 7½

	Miles.	Chains.	Links.
Distance from letter B. on Plan, by Brock road, .....	6	38	79
Do. do by proposed line, .....	5	67	40
Difference.....	0	51	39

From which it appears that by adopting the new proposed line, a saving will be effected in the cost of construction, of £1,624 13s. 7½d. and the road from Guelph to Dundas will be shortened 51  $\frac{39}{100}$  chains.

From letter B. on Plan, I have followed, with some trifling exceptions, the present travelled road to Guelph; and although some expense in excavating might be avoided, by making greater deviations, it is probable that when the expense of slashing trees and grubbing, and the price of the land which the road would occupy, (for which, no doubt individuals would require compensation) is estimated for, the road as it is laid down on the annexed plan, would be found not only the shortest but the least expensive. However, it will be prudent to make these examinations previous to the road being located for construction; to make them at present, would, by prolonging the time, render it useless for your present application to the Legislature.

This route presents a very favourable appearance for the formation of a Macadamized road; materials for its construction are very convenient along the whole line, and of the best description. The line also presents a level profile, requiring comparatively little grading, and will, when completed, be a beautiful road. The greatest inclination being only one foot, in eighteen feet, or little more than five and one-half feet in one hundred feet, even this only takes place at one hill, namely at the Dundas Creek, and that for the short distance of 23 chains. In crossing this Creek, considerable embankment will be required, for which the excavation on its north side, will be found sufficient, after cutting it according to the plan. No other difficulties occur on the road until you arrive at Flinn's Tavern, with the exception of the extracting and removing stumps from the road way, and for which I have allowed in the estimate an adequate sum. When the road is being constructed, I would recommend that in the first instance, a machine would be provided for the extracting and removing of those roots, &c. by which a great saving would be effected in this particular item, and for which a proportionate deduction may be made from the annexed estimate. At Flinn's Tavern, the country assumes a hilly aspect, and considerable excavation is required to grade the road sufficiently. It is probable that by keeping to the South West of the present road, a more level line might be obtained, but whether a saving in the expenditure would be the result, will require further examination, for this purpose it would be necessary not only to ascertain the quantity of excavation, but also the difference in length of the two lines, and the price of the land which the new line of road would occupy, previous to selecting a new route, in preference to the old established road. To make those examinations at the present time would be unnecessary, and would delay my report too long for your present purpose.

A hill on the Dundas side of Guelph will require to be deeply excavated, so as to bring it within the proper grade for Macadamizing, but as all the materials will be required for embanking on each side of the culvert, required to be erected over the river Speed, (for which purpose it will be found as convenient as at any other place.) I have estimated for cutting it deeper than would otherwise be required.

It would be advisable to have the trees cut or slashed, for a width of twelve rods or perches, previous to Macadamizing the road, as by letting them remain contiguous to the road, they are not only dangerous to travellers, but by their removal, the sun and wind will have free access to the road, which will have the effect of rendering it less expensive to keep in repair.

The road for which I have estimated would be generally forty feet wide in the clear, or between the water tables, having the centre part covered with metal or broken stone, fourteen feet wide, by ten inches in depth, the drains or water tables on each side, for the conveyance of rain water, are to be not less than two feet wide at top, one foot in depth, and six inches wide at bottom, the trees are to be cut or slashed for at least one hundred feet from the centre of the road. Through the pine woods, it will answer every purpose at the present time to have the road 36 feet in the clear of the water tables. Where hills are cut, or embankments formed, the road-way should not be less than thirty-four feet wide, the banks sloping at an angle of not less than 45° with the horizon, or of one foot to one—the slope of course depending on the nature of the soil.

For constructing a road from Dundas to Guelph of the above description, the following is an abstract of the estimate:—

I have also, as requested, made a calculation of the probable returns (by tolls) on this road, the following is the result of my enquiries on this subject, and which I believe will be considered moderate by those acquainted with this section of the country :

75 double teams, passing daily between Dundas and Smith's Tavern, 1s. 4d...	£ 5	0	0

	£245	9	8

But it is not from a view of the present travel on this road, that a fair estimate can be made of the returns which it may be expected to yield, as the road is almost impassable for teams the three-fourths of the year. For this purpose, a surer calculation can be made from the section of country which will be laid open to market, if a passable road was made in this direction. The inhabitants of the Townships of Fergus, Eramosa, Nichol, Guelph, Puslinch, part of East and West Flamboros, Woolwich, Garrafraxa and Waterloo, would select this road to market, as their shortest and best route. Those townships, as is well known to those acquainted with this section of the country, are composed of the richest and most productive lands in the District, and susceptible of producing, when cultivated, the most valuable agricultural products in abundance; though they are now, for want of a road to market, only partially settled: but should a road be once opened, those settlements would soon vie with the oldest settlements in the Province. Nor should it be overlooked, the great increase in value which those lands would derive from having a road thus opening into them—an increase fully equal to the original cost of construction. As they now are situated, the inhabitants of those townships have to travel round by Galt to market, which makes an increase of the distance to market of more than ten miles by one road, and if the shortest road from Guelph to Galt is selected, an increase in distance eight miles, as follows:—

	Miles.	Chas.	Links.
Distance from Dundas to Galt,.....	20	29	74
Do. from Galt to Guelph,.....	16	00	00
	<hr/>
	36	29	74
Distance from Dundas to Guelph.....	26	14	72
Difference in favour of new road .....	10	15	02

It is not necessary for me at present to allude to the advantages which the country generally must derive from the opening of Macadamized roads, or the inducements which they will hold out to wealthy and intelligent emigrants to settle in the country. From the few roads which have been constructed, the public have had an opportunity of estimating the conveniences which they afford, and I believe they fully appreciate them; but care should be taken that while they are constructed in a permanent and durable manner, all profuse expenditure should be avoided (when the object to be obtained is merely ornament,) particularly in a country where capital is not overabundant. It is true, that a road finished in the best style, will look well, and too frequently great praise is given by persons not aware of the expenditure, to those who have the superintendence of their construction; but if with the same amount of money, one third more in length of road can be constructed, and that as substantially, the country is, no doubt, proportionably benefitted by the outlay. It is with this view of the matter, that I have, in estimating for your road, allowed the metal to be spread only fourteen feet wide, which I consider sufficient for the present travel on it; and if afterwards the increase in travel should warrant its widening, it can then be as easily and cheaply effected as at the present time.

All which is respectfully submitted.

Dundas, 23rd March, 1839.

ROBERT W. KERR,

C. E. &c. &c.

ADDITIONAL REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE

ON

EXPIRING LAWS.

To the Honorable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee appointed to examine and report to your Honourable House what laws have expired and are about to expire, respectfully present as an additional report—

That "An Act to impose an additional duty on Licences to vend wines, brandy, and spirituous liquors," passed 28 January, 1832, will expire at the close of the present session of Parliament.

All which is respectfully submitted.

CHAIRMAN.

REPORT
OF
SELECT COMMITTEE ON CLAIMS,
ON
PETITION OF C. LEGGO.

---

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

---

The Committee to whom was referred the Petition of Christopher Leggo, of the town of Brockville—

RESPECTFULLY REPORT :

That they have carefully examined into the prayer of said Petitioner, and find that the said Christopher Leggo had a shop in the town of Brockville, in the Johnstown District, and that, during the winter of 1838, said shop was forcibly entered by some of the "Volunteers" on actual service stationed in that place, for the protection of the inhabitants, without any cause or provocation, and for which some of said Volunteers were tried, arraigned, and convicted.

Petitioner represents his loss at two hundred and forty-six pounds, and has furnished your Committee a copy of a certificate corroborating his statements, which is as follows :

"We, the undersigned, are cognizant to the fact set forth in Mr. Leggo's petition, which are strictly correct, and do, therefore, from our personal knowledge of his character and conduct, recommend him to the favourable consideration of the Governor General.

(Signed) CHARLES JONES, L. C.

E. HUBBLE,

JAMES MORRIS, and several other
Magistrates, the Sheriff, Clerk of the Peace, two Clergymen, and several Barristers and Merchants—which certificate, and a petition, were forwarded to Lord Durham, as Governor General, and by him transmitted to Sir George Arthur, who expressed his regret that he knew of no fund from which it was in his power to pay Mr. Leggo, but recommended him to apply to your Honourable House.

Your Committee have carefully taken the whole case into their consideration, and cannot but express their strong condemnation of the conduct of the Volunteers, and their sincere regret that any part of a force, so distinguished for loyalty, courage, and patriotism, should thus sully their well won honours by acts of insubordination and outrage—alike dangerous to the stability of the Government and the liberty of the people.

As there is no fund from which the Petitioner can be paid by the Executive, and the outrage having been committed by men immediately in the employ of Her Majesty's Government, your Committee beg leave to recommend a humble Address to Her Majesty, praying Her to pay the amount claimed.

All which is respectfully submitted.

CHAIRMAN.

*Committee Room, House of Assembly,

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE,
ON
PETITION OF JOSEPH TURTON.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee to whom was referred the Petition of Joseph Turton, of the City of Toronto, builder—

BEG LEAVE TO REPORT :

That Mr. Turton claims a balance of £290 16s. 8d. upon the contract made by him (as a Sub-contractor) for the erection of the Parliament buildings.

This is the fifth time that Mr. Turton's claim has been before the Legislature, and it is remarkable that no less than three Bills have passed your Honourable House for his relief in this particular matter.

His first petition was referred to a Select Committee, who, on the 5th March 1834, reported in his favour, but from some inadvertence or other, the Chairman, (the late Colonel Thomas Horner,) did not present the report, and Mr. Turton, consequently was not paid. In 1835, Mr. Turton again petitioned the Legislature, and his petition was referred to a Select Committee, who, on the 30th March, 1835, reported very clearly and fully upon the whole case. That report confirmed the former one, and all the evidence and documents upon which it was grounded, are together with the report itself, entered upon the Journals of this House, and will be found in the second volume of the appendix to the Journal of the 1st Session, 12th Parliament, (1835,) No. 124, page 13, to which your Committee respectfully beg leave to refer your Honourable House. That report was adopted, and on the 15th of the following month, a Bill passed your Honourable House for Mr. Turton's relief, but it proceeded no further, in consequence, as your Committee supposes, of His Excellency, the Lieutenant Governor, having prorogued the Parliament on the following day.

In the first Session of 1836, Mr. Turton again petitioned the Legislature, and his petition was referred to the then Committee of Finance, who reported in his favor, and on the 13th April, 1836, a bill passed your Honourable House for his relief, by a majority of 15. All which facts appear upon the Journals to which your Committee again respectfully beg leave to refer your Honourable House. That bill did not pass the Legislative Council.

In the first Session of the present Parliament, Mr. Turton again petitioned the Legislature, and his petition was referred to a select Committee, who reported in favor of the petitioner, and on the 25th of February 1837, a bill passed your Honourable House for his relief, by a majority of 16.

That bill however did not pass the Legislative Council.

Your Committee therefore, under all the circumstances above mentioned, feel that they cannot but confirm the four reports heretofore made in Mr. Turton's favor; they feel that he ought to be paid the full amount of his claim, being £290 16s. 8d. and that it was due to him at the time Messieurs Ewart and Parke measured the work, on the 16th April, 1832.

Your Committee, therefore, respectfully recommend that provision be forthwith made for payment to Mr. Turton, of £290 16s. 8d., and interest from 16th April, 1832.

All which is respectfully submitted.

CHAIRMAN.

GENERAL REPORT
OF
COMMITTEE ON ROADS AND BRIDGES,
ON THE
SEVERAL PETITIONS REFERRED TO THEM.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee on Roads and Bridges report :

That they have had many petitions before them praying for grants of money, but as the embarrassed state of the public funds does not warrant them in recommending grants in the way that large sums have heretofore been granted, and as it is doubtful how far it is desirable to continue the system that has heretofore prevailed in granting small sums of money to be expended in making partial improvements, your Committee recommend that a general law be passed, authorizing the appointment of Trustees on the different lines of road through the country, with power to receive commutation of statute labour, collect tolls, and borrow money upon the credit of the same, for the levelling, turnpiking, building of bridges, and, in process of time, Macadamizing the roads; the Trustees to have power to borrow money from the public funds, to the extent they can make it appear they can pay the interest, whenever the funds of the Province will admit of such loans being made, in addition to other sources from which the interest of the money may possibly be raised—tax on the lands lying on and near the lines of road to be improved. The tax to be regulated upon a graduated scale in proportion to the benefits conferred. It has been already shown to your Committee, by petition and otherwise, that much inconvenience, and some loss, has been sustained by the withholding of 50 per cent. of the loan of £50,000 granted for the improvement of the roads at the first session of the present Parliament, as many of the Commissioners named in that Act were induced, from a laudable desire to expend the money to the best advantage possible, to let contracts to the full extent of the grants made, and have made themselves liable to the contractors, and some have actually paid the money out of their own funds—with this view of the subject, your Committee reported a bill at the early part of the session which will enable the residue of the grant above made to be paid into the hands of the several parties entitled to receive the same, and thus pay what may be fairly considered a debt of honour.

All which is respectfully submitted.

CHAIRMAN.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE SUBJECT OF THE

TOLLS COLLECTED ON THE RIDEAU CANAL.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

Your Committee to whom was referred His Excellency's Message, laying before your Honourable House, a statement of the tolls on the Rideau Canal, proceeded to examine into the effects resulting to the Commerce of this Province from the construction of that work, and beg leave to make the following Report :—

They find by an examination of a number of respectable Millers and Merchants—that since 1835, the freights on imports and exports have been actually increased, at least, fifty per cent., instead of being decreased in that proportion. It is notorious that in 1835 and 6, the price of conveying a barrel of flour from Prescott to Montreal was 1s. 3d.—whereas the price now paid is 2s. Again, the price of carrying a ton of goods from Montreal to Prescott was £2 10s. per ton weight—whereas we now pay £2 10s. per ton, by measurement, the difference in which is at least fifty per cent.

Your Committee have also examined into the results of similar undertakings, and find that the price of conveying one cwt. of merchandize from Buffalo to the Hudson, prior to the construction of the Erie Canal, was 25s.—but since its construction freight has been reduced to 2s 6d. per cwt. Before the construction of the Welland Canal, the cost of carrying flour from Fort Erie to Queenston, was 2s. 6d. per barrel, and since the construction of that work, the same article is carried for five-pence—although we admit the natural obstructions by the Saint Lawrence were not equal to the land carriage by the other routes, nevertheless, the very striking contrast in the effects produced in reducing the price of freights on the above Canals, compared with the results produced from the construction of the Rideau, induced your Committee to examine minutely into the causes which have led to such an extraordinary and unprecedented result.

Your Committee also find that on most Canals a tow-path is provided by the Government or Company constructing the same. This opens the Canal to all classes of competitors who may place thereon a simple and cheap power propelled by Horses, and thus producing an active competition ; but as a tow-path could not be constructed on the Rideau Canal, it became necessary to substitute Steampower therefor. However, the defect in the present system is apparent from the fact, that one Company has obtained the entire possession of all the Steamboats on the Canal, which gives them the same power that the exclusive possession of the towing-path on the Welland or any other Canal would confer on a private Company. No craft can pass up except by submitting to such terms as they choose to exact, consequently all the forwarders formerly on the Saint Lawrence, have entered into an agreement—and thus have constituted a formidable monopoly—subjecting the public to the payment of any price they may please to impose.

Your Committee recommend that the communication should be placed in such a situation, that trans-shipment of produce or merchandize should be unnecessary. To obtain such an object, it will be necessary—1st. To remove the arches over the Rideau and Lachine Canals, and substitute swing bridges, as are now on the Welland. 2nd. By purchasing the lock at the Saint Ann's from the present proprietors—or by constructing another for the benefit of the public. 3rd. The managers of the Canal should be desired to place as many steamers on the navigation as to ensure a regular daily line from Montreal, which would enable a vessel carrying 800 to 1,000 barrels of flour, to pass from any port on the upper lakes, by the Saint Lawrence, direct to Montreal, and to return by the Canal to Kingston, which is now impracticable ;—or, to pass an Act limiting the towing, and thereby preventing injurious combinations—thus affording the public all the advantages derived from the limited dimensions of the Lachine Canal. The cost of the first improvement would hardly exceed the sum of £ 2,500

For the purchase of the Lock.....	4,000
The cost of seven Steamers .....	28,000

The practical operation of this plan will be—First. To reduce the freight to at least one-half the present prices. Second. To enable the canals to realize a large income, the grower being enabled to pay toll on downward freight, (which is not at this time exacted) in consideration of the facilities afforded on return cargoes, and increase the transportation materially by diverting the trade from the Erie Canal, which will be the effect of reducing the price of transportation on the Saint Lawrence. Third. All monopolies effectually prevented—forwarding companies rendered unnecessary, as the communication and the means of conveyance would be open to every person who can command sufficient capital to build a barge or vessel.

General dissatisfaction has prevailed in all parts of the Province, for the last two years, amongst all classes of the trading community, from having been subjected to an increase of freight, instead of a reduction, which had been anticipated on the completion of the Rideau Canal ; but no means of redress has heretofore offered, until the appointment of a Council in Lower Canada. Your Committee, therefore, (with a view of affecting the objects contemplated in this report) recommend the accompanying resolutions, for the consideration of your Honourable House.

All which is respectfully submitted.

G. H. DETLOR,

CHAIRMAN.

Committee Room, House of Assembly,
22nd April, 1839.

Resolved—That this House feel deep regret that so noble a work as the Rideau Canal should, from want of due precaution or proper management, have a tendency rather to embarrass than promote the commerce of this Province.

Resolved—That from the evidence obtained, by a Committee of this House, it appears that instead of the freights or transportation of the products and merchandize, the growth and consumption of the inhabitants of this Province, having been reduced in price, it has actually increased from fifty to one hundred per cent.

Resolved—That, in the opinion of this House, the causes which have produced this unprecedented result arise:—1st. From the obstruction of the navigation, consequent upon the only lock at Vaudreuil, being under the control of one Company; and, 2nd, From the bridges over the Canal being constructed with arches instead of swings or slides. 3rd. The entire control and power of conveying boats being in the possession of a private Company.

Resolved—That an Address be presented to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, requesting he will be pleased to transmit a copy of the Report of a Committee of this House, to His Excellency Sir John Colborne, requesting him to recommend the passing of an Ordinance, to the following effect:

1st. Authorizing the purchase of the lock now held by a private company at Vaudreuil, or the construction of another.

2nd. The removal of all arched bridges, over the Lachine and Rideau Canals, and substituting swing or slide bridges in their stead, which, from an estimate, will not probably exceed £2500.

3rd. To recommend the Government, or those in charge of the Rideau Canal, to place a sufficient number of steamboats on the route, to establish a daily line from Montreal to Kingston in place of a towing-path, or otherwise to pass a law compelling any company, who may establish a line of steamboats on the route, to tow every craft, that may offer in their regular turn, at a given price, not exceeding the sum of twelve pounds ten shillings for any boat with not exceeding ten tons, and one pound per ton for every ton of merchandize exceeding ten tons by weight in all cases.

Resolved—That the importance of the last provisions cannot be too strongly pressed on the consideration of His Excellency and Council. For in the event of the two former obstructions being removed, the same monopoly will still exist; and the entire canal may as well be placed under the control of this company, as the steam power by which the canal alone can be used, and, from the very nature of the navigation, unless this power is supplied by the managers of the canal or regulated by law, monopolies must continue to exist to the disadvantage of the public; although competition may for a time exist, yet it is evident that the interest of the forwarders will induce them from time to time to unite against the public. Whereas the latter plan will supercede the necessity of any forwarding companies whatever. And, as from the evidence of a partner in a respectable firm in this city, it appears that they have paid an increase of freight in one year, rising £400, being on an average about 90 per cent. upon former rates—the sooner the services of this company are dispensed with the better.

THOMAS McKAY, ESQUIRE, M.P.P. EXAMINED.

1. Who has the present direction and control of the lock at Vaudreuil?—Messrs. McPherson & Co. Montreal, on behalf of the Ottawa Company.

2. What sum do you think would purchase this Lock?—About £4000 would have purchased it some time since, and I think the Company would sell.

3. How many arches are there over the bridges on the Lachine Canal, or other obstructions to prevent a craft with a standing mast passing?—Three of stone and three wood bridges.

4. What would be expense to replace them with swing bridges?—At most £1000.

5. What obstructions are there on the Grenville or Rideau Canal, for passage of craft with standing masts?—Four bridges of wood on the Grenville, which could be removed at a trifling expense. There is one stone bridge at Bytown, 22 or 24 feet high, and one wood bridge at Burritt's Rapids. The former will cost about £1000, and that the latter £100 to £200.

6. How many Steam-boats are now on the line between Kingston and Lachine?—Seven. One between Lachine and Carrillon; one between Carrillon and Grenville Canal; one between Grenville and Bytown; four between Bytown and Kingston.

7. Are they sufficient to run a daily line throughout?—Yes.

8. What would a similar line of Boats cost, when new?—£28,000.

9. How long would it take to remove those bridges?—Two months, but they could be removed, and not stop the navigation one day.

10. Do you think the trade of the country would be improved by passing a law regulating the amount of toll to be paid for towing on the Rideau Canal?—Yes.

11. What price do you think would be reasonable for towing per ton from Lachine to Kingston?—One pound per ton would be ample, and for each vessel or boat, if less than twelve tons, £12 10s.

MR. HARRIS, of the firm of Isaac Buchanan & Co., Toronto, examined.

Have been in business in Toronto six years, have been in the habit of paying at the rate of 2s. 6d. per cwt., by weight, from Montreal to Prescott or Brockville, until the autumn of 1836, since which they have paid 1s. 1½d. per foot, which makes an actual increase on the former rate of 90 per cent.—Have regularly weighed their goods, and the above is the actual result by this different mode of rating freight; an increase on light goods, in some instances, is from four to five hundred per cent.; the increase of freight paid by their firm in one year was something over £400.

---

MR. McDONELL, examined.

The cause of monopoly, and consequently less competition, is owing to the Lock at the St. Ann's Rapids being the property, originally, of an individual—and now the property of a company, and all forwarders are subject to the terms imposed by the Ottawa and Rideau Company.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON LOSSES, ON PETITION OF JAMES HOLMES, AND ALL OTHER PETITIONS, PRAYING FOR
PENSIONS FOR WOUNDS AND ACCIDENTS.

The Committee to whom was referred the petition of James Holmes, and others, petitions praying for pensions on account of wounds and accidents, beg leave to report:

That during the last Session of the present Parliament, a bill was passed entitled, "An Act to provide pensions for the widows and children of Militia-men killed during the late rebellion, and for other purposes therein-mentioned": and that the fifth and last clause of said Act fully provides for petitioners, and points out the necessary steps to be taken, by which they can be placed upon the pension list of this Province, without applying to your Honourable House.

All which is respectfully submitted.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly of Upper Canada.

THE report of the Select Committee, to whom were referred certain documents sent down to the House by His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, on the subject of claimants for loss sustained during the late insurrection, beg leave to recommend that a bill be passed authorizing the payment of claims which have been adjudicated by the Commissioners appointed under authority of Act of Parliament, or by a Committee of this House during its last Session.

THE Committee to whom was referred the petition of various persons, sufferers during the late Rebellion, beg leave to make their second report :

Your Committee have carefully examined the several petitions before them, and are preparing a general bill, which your Committee hope may prove satisfactory to the parties interested.

Your Committee beg leave with feelings of regret to state, that the claims of the following persons are not such as your Committee can recommend to the favourable consideration of your Honourable House—Joseph Gero, John Scott, Caleb W. Benedict, and twenty others, John F. Rogers, James Turney, Charles Prior, James Swift, Arthur McIntosh, John V. Murphy.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE
ON
PETITION OF ELIZA POWELL.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

THE Committee to whom was referred the petition of Eliza Powell, beg leave to report :

That the several statements set forth in said petition, particularly that relating to the services of the petitioner's late husband, as Clerk to your Honourable House, and to the Honourable the Legislative Council, for twenty-five years, are true.

Your Committee would therefore recommend the prayer of the petition to the favourable consideration of your Honourable House ; several precedents of grants in like cases, in consideration of services, are to be found : and especially one to the widow of the late John Powell, (in his life-time also Clerk of the Legislative Council,) for two hundred pounds, which was granted by the Legislature in the year 1832.

Your Committee, therefore, are of opinion, that there ought to be granted to the said Eliza Powell, the sum of two hundred pounds, and recommend the adoption of the accompanying Resolution in Committee of Supply.

REPORT ON PETITIONS
OF THE
MAGISTRATES OF THE NIAGARA DISTRICT.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

Your Committee, to whom were referred the Petition of Thomas Butler, Esquire, and seven other Magistrates, of the Niagara District—and also the Petition of George Ball, Esq., and seventy-four others, Magistrates and freeholders of that District—

BEG LEAVE TO REPORT :

That they have carefully enquired into the merits of the respective petitions. They find it stated by the petitioners to the former, that the present assessment is inadequate to the expenses of the District, and therefore pray that an additional tax may be levied upon the inhabitants of that District, to pay off the present debt ; while those of the latter consider the present annual assessment amply sufficient to meet all proper demands upon its resources, and beg that the prayer of the former may not be granted.

Your Committee are aware that a large debt does exist in that District, owing, as your Committee believes, chiefly to the misapplication of the funds for several years past, and to the defalcation of the late Treasurer; but, as the Books of the District are withheld (as your Committee are informed) from the public, by the said Treasurer, the accounts have not yet been investigated and properly adjusted; and as it appears from these petitions, that a strong conflicting feeling exists among the inhabitants of that District, upon the subject of an additional assessment; and no notice having been given, in the Upper Canada Gazette, as required by the rules of your Honourable House, of such intended application—your Committee, therefore, cannot recommend any additional tax to be levied upon the inhabitants of that District, until a full and correct statement of all the receipts and disbursements, and the actual deficit necessary to be provided for, be clearly shewn, and until due notice of the proposed additional assessment be given.

All which is respectfully submitted.

GEORGE RYKERT,
CHAIRMAN.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE,
ON
PETITION OF ROBERT F. GOURLAY.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee, to whom was referred the Petition of Robert F. Gourlay, beg leave to make the following Report:—

It appears that the object of the Petitioner is to have an expression of the House of Assembly, relative to his conduct while in this Province, in 1817, 18 and 19—and on certain judicial proceedings of the local Authorities, and the Court of Assize and of General Gaol Delivery, held in the District of Niagara, in the month of July, 1819, when a judgment was recorded against him as guilty of having disobeyed the order of certain Magistrates, acting under the authority of an Act of the Parliament of the Province, entitled, "An Act for the better securing this Province against all seditious attempts or designs to disturb the tranquillity thereof," which Act was subsequently repealed. Your Committee find, that the judgment aforesaid was perpetual banishment.

Waving the legality of the judicial proceeding, your Committee having a personal knowledge of the conduct of the petitioner, during the aforesaid period, in the District of Niagara, have no hesitation in giving full credit to the declaration of the petitioner, that his motives were for the benefit of the Province, and however far he might have deviated from the then law of the land, it appears to your Committee that your Honourable House would render but an act of justice to the petitioner by addressing His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, humbly requesting His Excellency to use the prerogative of the Crown to enable the said Robert F. Gourlay, to return and reside in this Province, if he shall think fit so to do.

RICHARD WOODRUFF,
CHAIRMAN.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE
ON
PETITION OF C. FOTHERGILL AND C. F. FOTHERGILL.

To the Honorable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee to whom was referred the petition of Charles Fothergill, and Charles Forbes Fothergill, Esquires, beg leave to report:—

That in investigating the claims of the petitioners to the consideration of your Honourable House, your Committee have carefully examined the literary work which is set forth in the petition, as deserving of some portion of Legislative patronage and encouragement.

The work in question is entitled "The Toronto Almanac, and Royal Calender for 1839," and forms a compendious volume of nearly 500 pages.

In the course of the last fifteen years, several publications of various degrees of merit, have emanated from the Press, having for their object the extension of knowledge among the British public, respecting the sources of Upper Canada, the nature of its climate, and the advantages which it presents as a grand depot of British immigration.

The "Royal Calender," the latest publication of the nature alluded to, appears to your Committee to possess merits, which from the known enterprise and intelligence of its author and compiler, and the ready access which that gentleman possessed, to the most authentic sources of official and statistical information, will be sought in vain among the crowd of other publications on the same subjects.

Without entering into abstract theories, and fanciful opinions, the "Royal Calender," presents in a condensed and lucid form, an interesting, and your Committee believe, an accurate, view of the statistics of the Province, and of the peculiar attributes of its climate, and capabilities; a correct knowledge of which is eminently calculated to induce a greatly extended influx of immigration to the Colony.

In addition to this, the "Royal Calender," supplies numerous other details, both of a local and miscellaneous nature, which form a very desirable addition to the stock of general information.

Your Committee are of opinion, that the laborious, and well directed spirit of research which has so obviously been called into action, to produce a work like the "Royal Calender," is really deserving of both private and public encouragement.

The extension of the latter by your Honourable House will, as your Committee have ascertained, be justified by a precedent recorded in the Journals of the Session of 1826. The merits of the work, even in its infancy, were justly appreciated by the then House of Assembly, and the members were supplied with copies of it, which were paid for out of the contingent fund of the Session.

Since that period, the growing importance of this Colony, and the improved and extended knowledge of its resources, have rendered the publication alluded to of greatly increased value, as an index for public guidance, respecting the statistics of the Province; and the present edition appears to be as authentic and satisfactory as any such work can be which is not published "by authority."

Taking this deliberate view of the subject, your Committee respectfully recommend the following resolution for the adoption of your Honourable House.

All which is respectfully submitted.

R. P. HOTHAM,
CHAIRMAN.

*Committee Room, House of Assembly,
26th April, 1839.*

Resolved—That three hundred copies of the "Toronto Almanac and Royal Calender for 1839," be provided by the Clerk for the use of the Members of this Honourable House, and that the expense be defrayed out of the contingent fund of the present session.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE
ON
PETITION OF N. H. BAIRD.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee to whom was referred the Petition of N. H. Baird, Esquire, civil engineer, praying for remuneration for his time and expenses in giving information to Select Committees of your Honourable House, at the request of the several Chairmen, on his plans, maps, and report on the improvement proposed to the inland waters of the Newcastle District, surveyed by him in conformity with an Address of the House of Assembly, dated 16th April, 1835—Beg leave most respectfully to report as follows:

It appears that your Petitioner rendered an account of his time and charges in attending said Committees attested under oath to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, amounting to £77 8s. 4d., which account was examined and certified by the Inspector General, and referred by His Excellency to his Council.—By a minute of the Council of the 6th September, 1838, the claim of Mr. Baird is rejected, assigning as a reason, that it is not usual for the Executive Government to enquire into or interfere with the attendance of witnesses or others before the House of Assembly. The Council having thus refused to consider the claim of the Petitioner, he, therefore, makes the application for payment to your Honourable House.

Your Committee fully concur with the views of the Council, that it is not usual for the Executive Government to enquire into or interfere with the attendance of witnesses or others before the House of Assembly, and consider the Council fully justified in forbearing to recommend the claim.

Your Committee are satisfied, however, that the Petitioner did attend at the request of the several Chairmen of certain select Committees of your Honourable House, which attendance was also desired by the Members of such Committees.

Your Committee are further aware that much valuable information was derived from the Petitioner, without which, satisfactory reports on the important measure submitted to them of improving the inland waters of the Newcastle District, and particularly that of the River Trent, could not have been made.—And being persuaded that Mr. Baird is entitled to remuneration for such attendance—recommend the case of the Petitioner to the favourable consideration of your Honourable House.

Your Committee would further beg leave to suggest, that the usual charge for time and services of an engineer should not be allowed, but that a reasonable compensation for his attendance as a witness—which your Committee conceive would be about £25.—And should your Honourable House be disposed to receive favourably the recommendation of your Committee, they further suggest that the charge is a legitimate item of contingences.

DAVID THORBURN,

CHAIRMAN.

*Committee Room, House of Assembly,
29th April, 1839.*

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE,
ON PUBLISHING THE STATUTES, &c.

The select Committee appointed to enquire into the present mode of publishing the Statutes and other public documents and papers, and the expediency of providing more effectually for the promulgation of the information contained in such documents among the people of this Province—Beg leave to make the following (first) Report:

The Committee, for the more satisfactory prosecution of the enquiries intrusted to them, thought it proper to address a circular letter to each of the newspaper Proprietors in the Province; but answers not having been generally received, it is deemed most advisable to embody such information as may be derived from this source in a second report or appendix.

Your Committee, however, are extremely anxious that the present Session should not close without some attempt being made to awaken the Government, the Legislature and the country, to the necessity there exists of a more effectual system of promulgating and disseminating throughout the community, not only the Statutes and other public and official documents, but also such general information as shall be calculated to counteract the mischievous influence which abuses of the liberty of the press and political dissension in this, as in all free countries, must uniformly exercise. The Committee think themselves fully justified under the order of the House "to enquire into the expediency of the more effectual promulgation of information among the people of Upper Canada," in bringing under review the effects generally produced upon any people by the press, and in calmly discussing the degree of influence which it has hitherto exercised in the political relations of this Province.

The liberty of the press is so well understood wherever the English language is spoken, that the Committee deem it altogether superfluous to say any thing further in its behalf, than that they are advocates for it, to the fullest extent, and that in their opinion, it is rather to the restrictions which have directly, and indirectly been put upon it in this country, that we are in a great measure to attribute the lamentable effects which Upper Canada has of late experienced from this all powerful, but too much neglected Engine.

Your Committee believe, it will not be denied, that evil, as well as good, flows from the Press, and that in political affairs at least, the one or the other effect will preponderate, as the one or the other has encouragement and facilities for its production. We are therefore led to the enquiry, what has been the influence of the Press in Upper Canada?

In commencing this investigation, the Committee refrain from entering into any prolix discussion, as to whether the late disturbances have been caused by a corrupt Government or not, taking it for granted, that the House, as well as every loyal man in the country, will agree with them in attributing such to some other source; and your Committee will at once state, that not only the evidence of the facts which will presently be adduced, but their own conviction, founded on experience, fully justifies them in broadly declaring that these evils were the direct result of a corrupt, and in those parts of the Province, where the disaffected were found, an unopposed Press. The ordinary grounds from which rebellions have generally sprung, were in the late instance altogether wanting.

The Committee are not aware, that the people of Upper Canada, have ever complained of taxation; they are not aware that even one individual in the whole Province has ever done so. They are not aware, and they do not believe, that any one has ever asserted that he has been in the least, or most remote degree interfered with, or oppressed by the Government on the ground of his religious belief. If we look for the causes that prompted the revolt, to the administration of Justice, do we find it there? No.—The administration of this branch of the public service, has never to the knowledge of the Committee, formed the subject of well-grounded, or even definite remonstrance. Well then, does the question recur, whence is the disaffection? If the people do not breathe a whisper against the present system of taxation—if the laws be purely and impartially administered—if every man be allowed to serve his God in his own way—it must follow, your Committee submit, that no grievance justifying rebellion can have existed—and that the charge of oppression on the part of the Government, was founded upon the imaginary infliction of wrongs. What then, it will here be naturally asked, induced these individuals who took up arms against the Queen's authority, to break out into insurrection? your Committee reply, that it was the abuse of the Press; and they further add, that without timely precautions, the same effects will at no distant period, be again produced by the same cause.

Your Committee proceed to assign the reasons for which they impute to a press—abused on the one side, and neglected on the other—so great a share in producing the late disturbances.

In tracing the causes that led to the rebellion of 1837, it cannot fail to be remarked that many of the individuals implicated in it, were more deluded than disaffected; and that they were inveigled into their criminal designs by being made to believe in the existence of grievances which, although they could not have excused, would in some degree have palliated their guilt.

It may seem incredible to persons living within the reach of daily intelligence, and having the means of judging of the acts of Government from almost ocular demonstration, that political falsehood should take deep root in the minds of any portion of the community, or have power to impair the allegiance of loyal subjects; but when it is considered that the main strength of the republican faction in this Province has chiefly been found in remote agricultural parts, and not in towns and populous villages—and when it is further borne in mind that the people of Upper Canada, from causes which must always operate in a newly settled country, have not, until lately, been much disposed to seek after political intelligence, it will cease to be a matter of wonder that, in too many instances, they should have fallen victims to the machinations of democratic agitators, and have been entrapped, step by step, into an open declaration of revolt.—Although not inclined to devote much time, or trouble, or money, to the procuring of public intelligence, many of them readily open their ears to those who voluntarily undertook, for the worst of purposes, to supply them with news regularly and almost gratuitously. Thus, furnished with only one side of the questions constantly occupying the public mind, they unconsciously imbibed the most pernicious doctrines, and credited the most monstrous fabrications. What were shadows to the most intelligent of them, were, to this description of persons, objects of real and sincerely entertained apprehensions. Contradictions of the false or exaggerated statements with which their minds were weekly poisoned against every thing British, whether on this Continent or in the Mother Country, never reached them. The appetite for politics, which was first implanted in them by the republican leaders, was duly and plentifully administered to by the same hands; and can we, therefore, be surprised that many once loyal men enrolled themselves as members of a revolutionary union or actually joined the rendezvous at Montgomery's Tavern, under the impression that if they did not arm for their liberties they would soon be wrested from them by despotic power or crushed beneath the weight of burthensome impositions, taxes and even tithes!

It is an extraordinary and very painful truth, that several of the rebels were men whose loyalty was, at one time, unimpeachable; indeed, some of them had signalized themselves during the late war with the United States by their spontaneous services and conspicuous gallantry. How then can we account for the defection of individuals of this stamp, and for their forfeiture, at a mature age, of that honourable distinction which they had earned in their youth. It can, we submit, be accounted for on no other ground than that which we have assigned, namely, that they have been left to fall a prey to the wiles of republican agitators, who worked out their traitorous ends by that formidable, and comparatively uncounteracted, engine—the PRESS.

This assertion, however, does not rest upon mere conjecture, nor is it based upon any inferences, however just—The evidence taken before the Commissioners of enquiry, appointed in December 1837, furnishes ample corroboration of the soundness of our position; and we cannot do better than quote the very words of several of the prisoners themselves.

Joseph Gould states, "I think the whole discontent in the country arose from the dissemination of McKenzie's paper. I had not seen another paper for two years, and in the country we had no means of information than through the means of the paper."

Francis Helmky remarks, that "the newspapers generally read in his neighbourhood, was that edited by William Lyon McKenzie—and he believes that all the mischief and disturbance has originated in the circulation of that paper."

Peter Matthews, who suffered on the scaffold, made this voluntary declaration, "generally about where I lived the people are Radicals. McKenzie's paper was generally taken amongst them, and I think it contributed in a great degree to the present unfortunate revolt."

Aaron Glover deposes that "Mackenzie's paper influenced him to take up arms."

Adam Graham makes the following avowal:—"I was once a loyal subject, and was so until Mackenzie stated in his paper that the Governor had said we could not have the British Constitution, I said to myself that if Mackenzie stated a falsehood, he would be prosecuted for a libel."

Samuel Curry says—"I used to read Mackenzie's 'Constitution,' for which I was a subscriber."

In similar language also did several of the Prisoners for High Treason address the Lieutenant-Governor, when he released them from Toronto Gaol, in the month of May, 1838—"We are led," (they thus express themselves) "sincerely to believe that your Excellency has with clearness observed, how easily the ignorant though honest inhabitants of the country

“were led astray by the artifice and chicanery of designing men, who availed themselves of every opportunity of imposing upon the unsuspecting by productions emanating from a mendacious and unrestrained press.”

These instances, it is presumed, are quite sufficient to prove that the spirit of disaffection which exhibited itself so undisguisedly in December, 1837, was not created by any real acts of the Government, but was fomented by the dissemination among a credulous people, of seditious newspapers, filled with details of fictitious grievances, and goading on the unwary with groundless alarms and inflammatory appeals. And it cannot be doubted that the evil thus produced, and which is far from being removed, can be thoroughly eradicated, but through the same to which it owes its growth. Indeed there is stronger reasons than before for supplying the great mass of our population with sound, impartial, constitutional information of the Acts of the Executive Government, and the proceedings of the Legislature, and of holding up the Monarchical Institutions of Great Britain, in their true light, to a people living under a civil polity as similar in all respects as can reasonably and judiciously be to that of the Parent State.

A thirst for political information is now becoming common to the inhabitants of Upper Canada. Their means, generally, do not enable them, and their habits do not lead them to go to any expense in procuring this information, and for good or for evil it must in a great measure be brought home to their own doors; or at all events, be placed, and that too, gratuitously, with their immediate reach.

The question then arises: Is it not the duty of the Government and Legislature to profit by the innumerable lessons which history, since the invention of printing presents, to take warning from the events of which we ourselves have been eye-witnesses, and in which most of us have been actors during the last two years; and as individual exertion is inadequate to the task, to prevent, by the wide and systematic diffusion of truth, the recurrence of a rebellion sown in ignorance and matured by falsehood.

The Government of almost every civilized and enlightened country, except that of Upper Canada, has a virtual if not an openly recognized organ in the press. By this it communicates with the people, and elicits their opinions. This is the channel through which the state may learn whether the measures it proposes are acceptable to its subjects—in what respects they are objectionable—in what susceptible of improvement. A government press, therefore, is not to be regarded as an instrument of arbitrary power, but as a firm ally of popular liberty—as a correspondence addressed by the Governor to the governed, with a view of arriving at the true state of their feelings, opinions and wishes—as a means of shedding truth and light and clearing away the mist of error and falsehood—not of enwrapping the public in mystery and darkness. To a despotic or corrupt Government this would be of little use, but to that of this Province it would be of incalculable benefit, because whilst it incurs the general censure of keeping its acts and measures in the dark, because they will not bear scrutiny, it has nor can have in fact, not only nothing to conceal, but on the contrary, would, by an open and continuous communication with the people, entitle itself to their support and confidence, and always have the power of offering instant contradiction to the groundless rumours, and worse falsehoods with which wicked men have already worked with such fatal effect upon the minds of the credulous and uninformed.

But as we have before stated, the press of this country has not, as the example of the mother country would fully warrant, been called in to the aid of good Government.

Not only, also, are we led to desire that the Government of this Province should speak to the people through the press, because a precedent is to be found for it in the mother country, but because to the same reason which holds good in Great Britain, is superadded the peculiarity of our actual position—our remoteness from the fountain head of the Empire—our distance from the monarchical institutions after which our own colonial polity is framed—our close vicinity to an encroaching republic. Here we are, barely half a million, almost surrounded by a republic containing fifteen millions of people, who, enamoured of their own democratic constitution—enamoured of the self-governing, but delusive principle, which the steady and downward course of its government towards its opposite extreme, despotism, serves to feed and cherish, and to which extreme it is (although but of some sixty years growth) manifestly already approaching—are desirous of thrusting it upon us. How great a necessity hence arises, for the Government to be ever watchful in vindicating the principles of that constitution which has stood the test of so many ages, and shewing its adaptation, beyond all other forms, to the lasting peace and prosperity of mankind! How great the need of a skilful, yet plain and intelligible detection of the thousand fallacies by which the people of this Province are warped from their attachment to the British Constitution!—and consequently, how greatly is it to be deplored, that with these additional reasons for calling in the constitutional aid of the press, so valuable an auxiliary should have been utterly neglected by the Government and Legislature of this Province.

It is indeed wonderful, how the respectable press in this country, (struggling on in the dark, and in spite, we may say, of the Government) has opposed even so powerful a barrier as it has, against the steady assaults of republicanism. Yet, so long as the Government does not, through some channel, furnish the press generally with the means of informing the country of its acts and views, and of contradicting error, whether wilful or unintentional, this is no answer to our assertion, “that falsehoods propagated by bad men are permitted to go forth uncontradicted.”

The Committee having thus trespassed further upon the limits of this document than they had intended, are unwilling at this time to urge further their views upon the House, leaving for another occasion the submission of such a plan, for carrying into full operation the object referred to, as the nature of the information which they expect to receive, and their own judgment, may justify them in adopting. But they cannot close their report upon this all-important matter, without respectfully laying before the House this their deliberate conviction, that upon the moral power of the press, for weal or for woe, mainly depend the destinies of this country.

CHAIRMAN.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE

ON

PETITION OF JOHN BRISTOWE.

---

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly of Upper Canada in Provincial Parliament assembled.

The select Committee, to whom was referred the Petition of John Bristowe, of the City of Toronto, gentleman—

BEG LEAVE TO REPORT :

That they have ascertained that the Petitioner is an Attorney of the Court of Queen's Bench, at Westminster, and that he practised in the High Court of Chancery, in England, and that he was admitted as one of the six solicitors in the Court of Chancery, in this Province, under the provisions of the Act which erected and constituted that Court. Your Committee have also satisfied themselves that he is a skilful practitioner in equity, and a gentleman of moral worth and good character. Your Committee have also well weighed the statements contained in his petition, and they are of opinion that it will be advantageous to the practice of the Court, and an act of justice to the Petitioner, if he be admitted to practice at the equity bar.

Your Committee, therefore, recommend your Honourable House to pass an Act, enabling the Petitioner to practise at the bar of the Court of Chancery, in this Province. Your Committee cannot but be aware that your Honourable House has already decided, in the case of Mr. Adam Ainslie, that bills of the nature above referred to are considered as private bills, and as such, are required to be given notice of in the Upper Canada Gazette six months previous to the meeting of Parliament—but they find that such notice was not given by the Petitioner. But they recommend, respectfully, that your Honourable House may allow a bill to be brought in for the Petitioner's relief, and that the thirty-ninth Rule of your Honourable House may be dispensed with for that purpose.

All which is respectfully submitted.

CHAIRMAN.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE,

ON

MESSAGE OF THE HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY,

ON THE

BILL APPOINTING COMMISSIONERS ON PUBLIC MATTERS.

---

The Committee of Conference, on the part of this House, are instructed to represent that the Legislative Council have desired this conference for the purpose of presenting to the House of Assembly the copy of a Report of a select Committee of the Legislative Council, adopted by this House, on the subject of the message from the House of Assembly, transmitting the copy of a Report of a Committee of Privilege on the resolutions of the Legislative Council on a Bill, entitled "An Act to appoint Commissioners to proceed to England on behalf of this Province, and for other purposes therein mentioned."

Copy of Report of Committee of Privilege of Legislative Council on Message of House of Assembly on Commissioners' Bill.

The Committee of Privilege appointed by your Honourable House to search for precedents, and report upon a message of the Assembly, received on the twenty-third instant, on the subject of certain resolutions adopted by the Council in relation to the Bill, entitled "An Act to appoint Commissioners to proceed to England on behalf of this Province, and for other purposes therein mentioned"—

BEG LEAVE TO REPORT :

That after a deliberate consideration of the subject of the Message, and an attentive examination of the proceedings of the Imperial Parliament, together with the precedents as laid down by Hatsell, they cannot concur in the opinion expressed by the House of Assembly, that your Honourable House "was bound to reject, adopt, or amend the Bill," for nothing appears more common in either House of Parliament, than to drop a Bill without a formal motion to "reject" it. Bills are often referred to Select Committees, who report that the "allegations contained in the preamble, have not been proved," and that therefore they "have not proceeded further with the Bill," this report is ordered to lie on the table, without any expression of opinion on the part of the House, which shews that the view taken by the House of Assembly of the duty of the Legislative Council in respect to the matter under consideration, is not borne out by the practice of the House of Lords; for a Bill under the circumstances above described, can at any moment during the Session, be restored to the order of the day, by observing the rules in that respect—and so may the Bill sent up from the House of Assembly to appoint Commissioners to proceed to London, be placed on the order of the day, and passed, if your Honourable House should desire to do so. When that Bill was under consideration in a Committee of your whole House, it was deemed inexpedient to pass it without information from Her Majesty's Government, which might show a greater necessity for the proposed mission, than appeared to your Honourable House to exist, and under these circumstances the Committee adopted the Resolutions which were sent to the Assembly, informing that Honourable House that if the information which was hourly expected from Her Majesty's Government, relative to measures deeply affecting the interests of this Colony, seem to render such a mission important, that the Legislative Council would in that case, either unite with the House of Assembly in sending a Commissioner or Commissioners to London, or in an address to the Queen, as circumstances might require. And your Committee cannot but think that such a course was much more respectful to the House of Assembly, than the rejection of the Bill would have been, without conveying any reason for refusing to agree with them. The Committee are the more disposed to abide by this opinion, as they have been unable to discover a single precedent in Parliamentary practice to forbid the course which the Legislative Council pursued—a course which your Committee know was dictated by an anxious desire to avoid all cause of offence to the House of Assembly, and to show that if the Legislative Council could not at that moment unite with them in the proposed measure, that they were unwilling to reject the Bill, and thereby put it out of their power under actual circumstances which were anticipated, to proceed with it.

Knowing that such feelings of respect, actuated the Legislative Council on the occasion in question, and that it is always influenced by an earnest desire to maintain its correspondence with the House of Assembly, in a sincere spirit of courtesy and good will; your Committee cannot but regret that in the instance in question, intentions and motives so proper and necessary in a Legislative Body, should have been so greatly misunderstood by the Assembly. And if, after an expression of these sentiments, the House of Assembly are not satisfied, but shall persist in viewing the course adopted by the Legislative Council, as an interference with their privileges, your Committee would recommend that the Resolutions of the fifteenth day of April, instant, be withdrawn from the Assembly—not because they contain any thing which ought to give offence, but rather to remove any obstacle, however unimportant, which could at all interrupt the friendly intercourse which has long subsisted between the two Houses, and which it is the special duty of both Houses to promote, without too great a sacrifice of established principles.

All which is respectfully submitted.

CHAIRMAN.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE

ON

MESSAGE AND DOCUMENTS ON TORONTO HOSPITAL.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

THE Committee to whom were referred the Message of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, and accompanying Documents, on the subject of the Toronto General Hospital—beg leave to make their first report.

Your Committee, after an inquiry into the state of the funds of the said Hospital, and into the advantages which the institution appears to have extensively afforded, are fully impressed with the necessity of a further grant of money being made for its support.

During the year ending on 31st December, 1838, from the return laid before your Honourable House, it appears there were 580 patients admitted into the Hospital—404 of whom were discharged cured—22 were discharged for irregularity—46 were discharged relieved—17 were discharged as being incurable—46 of the number died in Hospital—8 died within two days after their admission—and 37 were remaining in hospital at the time of the return. In addition to the above, there were 1,154 out-patients relieved out of the funds of the institution.

The expense of supporting the Hospital has, for the last three years, averaged nearly £1,300 per annum—a sum more than treble its income during the same period. The Treasurer, James Nation, Esquire, states in a communication directed to the Trustees dated the 11th March last, that the sum of £200 is due on account of the quarter ended on the 2nd February last, "which," he adds, "I have no present means of discharging."

Your Committee being of opinion that the benefit of this Hospital ought to be considered rather Provincial than sectional, and feeling well assured that great and incalculable suffering would follow if its doors were closed, feel themselves bound to recommend to your Honourable House to assist in extending the benefit of the said institution, by making a grant of £500 for its support.

Your Committee beg further to state, that they intend entering into a more minute examination of the management and affairs of the said Hospital, which, when done, they will embody in a second report.

All which is respectfully submitted.

CHAIRMAN.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE,

ON

PETITION OF J. SINCLAIR AND OTHERS.

---

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee to whom was referred the Petition of J. Sinclair, and others, beg leave to report the following Address to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor:

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, Knight Commander of the Royal Hanoverian Guelphic Order, Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, Major-General Commanding Her Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY:

We, Her Majesty's faithful and loyal subjects, the Commons of Upper Canada, in Provincial Parliament assembled, beg leave to represent to your Excellency, That a memorial has been presented to the House of Assembly by a large number of the most respectable ship owners, forwarders, lumber merchants, and mariners, in the carrying trade on Lakes Huron, Erie, Ontario, and the River Saint Lawrence—representing that they labour under many and great disadvantages in consequence of the present defective state of the Navigation Laws, and the facility which they afford American vessels to encroach upon and almost entirely monopolize a trade which ought exclusively to be carried on by Her Majesty's subjects in this Province—and in which the Petitioners cannot compete with the Americans for the reasons hereafter stated.

The first grievance of which they complain is the transport of staves, the growth and manufacture of Upper Canada, as well as oak timber, which, important staple articles of commerce, are now principally obtained on the Canadian shores of Lakes Erie and Ontario, where they are shipped on board of United States vessels, and landed within that territory, there entered, and afterwards forwarded to the Montreal and Quebec markets.—That the cause of the Americans not landing the cargoes at a British port is occasioned by the eleventh section of the Act of the Imperial Parliament, passed in the sixth year of George the Fourth, entitled "An Act for the encouragement of British shipping and navigation," which prohibits foreign vessels from carrying goods from one part of a British possession to another part: a measure which was doubtless intended by the Legislature for the protection of subjects, in these Provinces, engaged in the coasting trade—an object which is thus easily defeated.

The reasons stated by the Petitioners that they cannot compete with the Americans in this branch of trade are—that the New York market is the place from whence the western merchants are principally supplied, consequently their upward freight, through Lakes Ontario and Erie, far exceeds ours; and alone amply remunerates them for the voyage, whilst our vessels are principally obliged to go up in ballast to procure downward cargoes. Thus all the Americans gain by encroaching upon the lumber carrying trade from our shores is to them clear gain, over and above the profits of their upward freights, (an advantage which is eagerly sought after by them) whilst our sole dependence is on the downward freight.

That the lumber and stave trade on the shores of Lakes Erie and Ontario is annually increasing, in proportion to the difficulty of procuring those articles of merchandise on the banks of the Saint Lawrence, and in a few years will be of the highest Provincial importance.

That upon a careful estimate the freight annually paid by British merchants to American shipowners in these branches of commerce amount to about thirty thousand pounds. They beg to adduce an instance, among many others, of the importance of the trade:—That the firm of Smith and Merrick, of French Creek, have, in the course of last season, transported from the Welland Canal, three hundred thousand feet of oak timber, which, at the usual freight of fifteenpounds per thousand feet, will amount to four thousand five hundred pounds.

The petitioner further represents that if this state of things is allowed to continue, the carrying trade of this Province will be utterly annihilated. That the number of British vessels does not at present exceed forty, of from sixty to one hundred and fifty tons burthen, of which small number many are frequently laid up for months in the summer, whilst if they were regularly employed, they would on an average gain one thousand pounds each of freight, during the season, by the transport of lumber and staves alone; in addition to which, British mariners are now by necessity compelled to seek employment under the American flag; whilst among the innumerable vessels of the United States, which crowd the lakes, an instance never occurs of one not being fully employed during the whole season of navigation, which can only be attributed to the causes above stated; and it must be evident, that, in case of a war, the number of Canadian vessels on the lakes ought not to be inferior to that of the United States.

That, as a proof of how sensibly alive the Americans are to the advantages of the carrying trade, no less than fifteen sailing vessels were built on the shores of the lake in 1837, and they are annually increasing their number; whilst on the Canada side, only four were built within the last three years, one of which, the Brock, was immediately chartered for Her Majesty's service.

The Petitioners call attention to the state of the salt trade, for which indispensable article we are at present dependent upon the United States, and of which not less than seventy-five thousand barrels are annually imported into this Province almost entirely in American vessels.—Thus not only enriching a rival country by the large amount paid for that article, but also by the profit of its transport, while we could obtain Liverpool salt (the superiority of which, in strength and other properties, for preserving beef, pork, and fish, for foreign markets and home consumption, is decided) at nearly as cheap a rate. It would also give outward freight to many of the vessels which come from the United Kingdom in ballast for homeward cargoes from Montreal and Quebec, and thus enhance the importance of the Canada trade with the shipping and commercial interests of the Parent Country, and also promote the internal navigation of both Provinces.

That, situated as this Province is with regard to the United States, Petitioners most respectfully submit the policy and expediency of affording every encouragement and protection calculated to increase its shipping, were it only for the purpose of forming a nursery for mariners acquainted with the rivers and lakes in case of war; verily believing, that, if a war should at present break out, it would be difficult to procure competent pilots for Her Majesty's vessels.

That the ship building would rapidly increase, affording employment to thousands of ship builders, carpenters, and other mechanics, which would not only encourage the emigration of those useful classes to this Province, but also increase the importation of British manufactures.

And humbly pray the Assembly to take into consideration the important subjects above stated, and to devise such means for securing to them the carrying trade in lumber and staves, as, in their wisdom, they may deem most expedient, and that a bill may be passed closely restricting the importation of salt from the United States to this Province.

The House of Assembly being aware that they have no Constitutional power to enact any laws to give effect to the prayer of the Petitioners, so far as respects the American shipping and carrying trade, but, nevertheless, fully sensible of the general truth of the statements contained in their memorial, and the importance of their receiving the attention they desire, humbly request that your Excellency will be pleased to bring the subject under the notice of Her Most Gracious Majesty, accompanied by such remarks as your Excellency may deem of advantage to the trade and commerce of the Province; but expressing an opinion that the present condition of the public revenues of this Province precludes the recommendation of the repeal of any laws under which duties are levied upon salt or other articles.

All which is respectfully submitted.

C. A. HAGERMAN,
CHAIRMAN.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE,

ON

MESSAGE ON KINGSTON AND LONDON COURTS MARTIAL.

To the Honorable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee to whom was referred His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor's Message of the 10th April last, relating to the expenses incurred in the holding of the Militia General Courts Martial, held at Kingston and London—

BEG LEAVE TO REPORT :

That they have carefully examined into the different items charged in the several pay-lists, relating to, and accounts of, expenses incurred in the holding of the general courts martial upon the prisoners taken at Prescott and Windsor, and find that the charges correspond with those which have heretofore been allowed, and recognized as legitimate and proper to be made.

It appears by the correspondence between Colonel Halkett, Assistant Military Secretary to Sir George Arthur, with Colonel Rowan, Military Secretary to Sir John Colborne, that the charges are, by the Governor-General, considered "very moderate," and that those incurred for similar services for Lower Canada, have been borne by that Province, and not by the military chest. Indeed your Committee conceive, whatever arrangement may hereafter be made respecting the transferring these expenses to the account of the military chest, the circumstance of these Courts having been held under a Provincial Statute, leaves your Committee, and as they conceive, your Honourable House, no other alternative than to recommend the payment out of the Provincial funds.

That provision in some way, for the payment of these expenses, ought, without any loss of time, to be made by the House of Assembly, no one can doubt: for upon the prompt, effectual, and due execution of the laws at this time, depends the security of the Province, no less than upon its military defence.

The total amount of charges for the Court at Fort Henry, is.....	£ 521	0	8½
For that at London.....	527	1	11¾
	£ 1,048	2	8¼

All which is respectfully submitted.

CHAIRMAN.

ON HIS EXCELLENCY'S SPEECH, RELATING TO EDUCATION.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee to whom was referred that part of the Speech of His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, at the opening of the present Session, which relates to Education—

BEG LEAVE TO REPORT:

That they have agreed to two Resolutions, to provide means for the maintenance and support of Common Schools, which they report herewith, and earnestly recommend to the adoption of your Honourable House.

1st. Resolved—That there be granted annually to Her Majesty, the sum of ten thousand pounds, from the Provincial funds, to enable Her Majesty to provide for the establishment, maintenance, and permanent support of Common Schools, throughout this Province.

2nd. Resolved—That there be granted annually to Her Majesty, the sum of ten thousand pounds, to be raised annually, by assessments upon the people of the several Districts—each District furnishing its proper quota of that sum, in proportion to its population, to provide for the establishment, maintenance, and permanent support of Common Schools throughout this Province.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE,

ON

CASUAL AND TERRITORIAL REVENUE BILL.

THE Committee of Conference on the part of the Legislative Council, are instructed to represent that the Legislative Council find in the Bill sent up from the Commons House of Assembly, entitled "An Act to place the disposal of the casual and territorial revenue under the control of the Legislature of this Province, and for other purposes therein mentioned,"—

First,—That the said Bill, in purporting to provide for the payment of annuities to certain Indians, charges the said annuities upon a fund which does not at present exist, and upon which they cannot justly be charged, should moneys arising from the sale of Indian lands be vested as mentioned in the said Bill.

And further, that the annuities aforesaid, are now charged upon the Hereditary Revenues of the Crown in this Province, as consideration for cessions of territory to a very large amount, and that the security for the payment of these annuities to the Indians, cannot be decreased without breach of bona fide contract entered into with the said Indians by the Crown.

And further, that certain annuities and payments in aid of the several religious churches and denominations of christians, charged by Her Majesty's Government upon the casual and territorial revenues, are not provided for in the Bill sent up; although the temporary provision for these charges is mentioned in the Despatch laid before the Legislative Council from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies, as a condition upon which the said revenue is to be surrendered.

And further, that the sum of ten thousand pounds required to be paid as a condition upon which the proceeds of the military reserve at the City of Toronto, is to be given up, is charged upon the first proceeds of the sale of such reserve, but that the immediate payment thereof is not provided for.

And further, to suggest to the Committee on the part of the House of Assembly, the following amendments to the said Bill, to meet the objections which appear to the Legislative Council to exist to the passage of the Bill in its present shape.

Press—4 Line 14.—After "Majesty," expunge to "the following" in line 17, and insert "out of the joint revenues aforesaid, for the purpose of enabling Her Majesty to pay."

Press 5—Line 18.—After the 3rd clause insert "4. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that during the incumbency of the present annuitants, or until the annuities in this clause mentioned shall be provided for otherwise, there be granted to Her Majesty, Her Heirs and Successors, out of the joint revenues aforesaid, to enable Her Majesty, Her Heirs and Successors, to pay and discharge the following annuities in current money of this Province, that is to say—

"Missionaries of the Church of England, two thousand eight hundred and fifty pounds.

"Ministers of the Church of Scotland, one thousand five hundred pounds.

"Ministers of the United Synod of Upper Canada, seven hundred and seventy-seven pounds fifteen shillings and six-pence.

"Roman Catholic Bishop, five hundred and fifty-five pounds eleven shillings and two-pence.

"Roman Catholic Priests, one thousand one hundred and eleven pounds two shillings and three-pence."

Press 6—Line 9.—Expunge the 5th clause.

Press 8—Line 20.—After "out of the," expunge to "to such," in line 21, and insert "out of the joint revenue aforesaid."

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE,
ON
DOCUMENTS RELATING TO TORONTO HOSPITAL.

To the Honourable the Comm.ns House of Assembly in Provincial Parliament assembled.

The Committee to whom were referred the accounts and other documents respecting the General Hospital, at Toronto, have agreed to the following report—

Your Committee have carefully considered the subject, and have endeavoured to ascertain the resources and system of management of this institution, and have, for this purpose, examined several witnesses whose testimony is appended to this report.

It appears from this evidence, that certain lands have been granted, or set apart, for the use of this Institution, in or near the City of Toronto—of this land a portion to the value of about £12,000 has been sold. The sum of £8000 or nearly, has been paid, and a balance of about £1300 remained, after completing the building, and 164 shares of bank stock have been purchased. It does not appear, that there has been any other investment of this money, unless indeed, some portion has been expended in the erection of those buildings, from which the rents stated to be yearly paid, to the amount of near £150 arise.

It also appears, that both rents, and purchase money, have been very irregularly paid, and that the principal money has been deeply entrenched upon, for the support of the necessary expences and outlay—to the extent which your Committee find from the Treasurer's report, threatens, if continued, to exhaust this fund in a short period.

Your Committee regret to observe, that although there has been a deficiency for years in the Hospital funds, notwithstanding several appropriations by the Legislature, no effectual means have been adopted to render the lands set apart for the Hospital productive of a larger income. Your Committee cannot help thinking, that if the funds of the Institution prevented their building on some part of the lands in the City, building leases might have been granted, which would yield a permanent support to this useful establishment. The want of the necessary funds has doubtless prevented such improvements from taking effect.

Your Committee learn also, with great regret, that it should have been thought necessary to give up a part of the Hospital for the accommodation of the militia, as the result has unfortunately been, to expose the patients requiring surgical treatment, to the danger of infection from those labouring under fevers, or other disorders of a similar character.

Your Committee have every reason to express their satisfaction at the conduct and exertions of the Medical Gentlemen who give their attendance upon patients who are received in the Hospital, and who receive no remuneration for their constant visits and professional aid.

Your Committee find that the Trustees of the Toronto Hospital are gentlemen of the highest character and respectability, but whose other important duties and avocations must prevent most of them from giving sufficient time and attention to the superintendence of this Institution; and disclaiming any intention of censuring their motives and conduct, your Committee feel it their duty to state that they do not think the management of the Trust property has been as beneficial to the advancement and prosperity of the Institution as might have been reasonably expected from the value of the property set apart.

Your Committee, therefore, respectfully recommend that an humble Address be presented to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, requesting that he will be pleased to direct a careful enquiry to be made into the receipts and expenditures in the management of this Hospital—the nature and extent of the property set apart for its support—the system pursued for its management, and also what plan can be adopted for the leasing or improving such lands, or any part thereof, which will increase the yearly income and render the Institution more efficient.

All which is respectfully submitted.

CHAIRMAN.

*Committee Room, House of Assembly,
11th May, 1839.*

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY,
7th May, 1839.

SIR,

Will you have the goodness to answer the following questions, on the subject of the Hospital, in addition to the number I sent you this morning.

"Do not certain rules and regulations exist, for the guidance of persons connected with the Hospital; and by those rules are not persons allowed to subscribe to the funds of the Hospital—If so, have any steps been taken to carry these objects into effect?"

Your obedient Servant,

H. SHERWOOD,
CHAIRMAN.

To DR. GWYNNE.

SIR,

In compliance with your request, I furnish you with such answers to your interrogatories, as my knowledge of subjects embraced in them enables me to give.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your obedient Servant,

WM. GWYNNE.

HENRY SHERWOOD, Esquire,
Chairman.

DOCTOR GWYNNE—EXAMINED.

1. How many Trustees to the Toronto Hospital are there, and who are they?

Ans. The Trustees of the Hospital, I believe to be the Chief Justice; the Archdeacon; the Hon. J. H. Dunn; the Hon. Wm. Allan; and Christopher Widmer, Esquire. The latter alone, I have understood, takes any interest in the management of the Institution.

2. What is the nature and amount of property held in trust, in money, houses and lands. Where, and how, is such property situated.

Ans. I am not prepared to state the nature or amount of property held in trust. I believe it, however, to be considerable, and to consist principally of lands and houses, situated in and about the City of Toronto.

3. What amount of rents are paid yearly into the Hospital fund, and are the rents regularly paid?

Ans. I cannot say what are the amount of rents paid annually into the Hospital fund, or whether the rents are regularly paid or not.

4. Has any part of the land been sold, and to what amount has the purchase money been regularly paid?

Not answered.

5. Has any part of the property been given to the Government, or to the House of Industry in Toronto, without purchase or otherwise—and if so, state what quantity, and what is its value, and where situated, and whether any equivalent has been demanded or received?

Ans. I am ignorant of every thing connected with this question.

6. What is the average number of patients confined in Hospital within the last six months. Is it less than formerly; and if so, has not the letting of one-half of the Hospital to the Military, partly produced the change, and tended to incommode, much, the patients taken in?

Ans. Being but lately appointed to the Hospital, I cannot say what the average of patients for the last six months has been, or give an answer to the remaining portion of this question.

7. Are there separate wards for the reception of contagious diseases—If not, have you known serious or even fatal consequences result from contagious diseases being treated indiscriminately in the same ward with persons affected with diseases that were not so?

Ans. To the first part of this question I answer, that there are no wards set apart for the reception of persons afflicted with contagious diseases; to the remaining portion of the question, if it refers to the Toronto Hospital, I am not prepared to give an answer—but if it is put generally, I can say that I have known instances of the most serious and even fatal consequences resulting from patients afflicted with contagious diseases being indiscriminately treated in the same ward with persons afflicted with diseases which are not so.

8. What remedy would you propose for such a dreadful evil?

Ans. The remedy I would propose is, clearly and decidedly, separate apartments for persons afflicted with contagious diseases, in other words the erection of a Fever Hospital in a healthy part of the city.

9. Is there a sufficient number of attendants and servants in the Hospital, in order that the wants and comforts of the patients should be properly attended to?

Ans. As far as I can judge, there are a sufficient number of attendants and servants to provide for the limited number of patients now in Hospital.

10. Is there in general a sufficient supply of medicines, medical and surgical apparatus and instruments, so as that persons may be safely and properly treated for the various remediable complaints presented for relief at the Hospital?

Ans. The supply of medicines in the Hospital is in general adequate to the demand, but I believe there is a deficiency of surgical apparatus.

11. Who are the medical attendants—What are their various qualifications and the date of their appointments—Do they receive any remuneration for their services?

Ans. The medical attendants are, Doctors Widmer, King, Hornby, and Gwynne; the first, I believe to be a Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, in London; the second, to be a Doctor of Medicine in the University of Edinburgh, and a Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, in Edinburgh; the third, to be a Doctor of Medicine in the University of Edinburgh, and Licentiate of the Royal College of Surgeons, in Edinburgh; and the last, to be a Bachelor of Arts and Medicine in the University of Dublin, and Licentiate of the Royal College of Surgeons, Ireland. They do not receive any remuneration for their services.

12. Who are the other officers of the Institution, and what are their several salaries?

Ans. The other officers in the Institution are Mr. F. St. George Wilkinson, apothecary, and Mr. George Sinclair, steward—respecting their salaries I have no knowledge.

13. Do not certain rules and regulations exist for the guidance of persons connected with the Hospital, and by those rules are not persons allowed to subscribe to the funds of the Hospital—If so, have any steps been taken to carry these objects into effect?

Ans. Certain rules and regulations for the guidance of persons connected with the Toronto Hospital were drawn up and printed, in pamphlet form, in the year 1830—which rules provided for increasing the funds of the Institution by subscription and otherwise, but, I believe, they were never regularly adopted by the Trustees, and certainly they have not been acted upon—for, some years since, wishing to become a Subscriber, I applied to the Treasurer to know whether he would accept from me the sum specified in the 1st Rule, as entitling a person to be chosen a Director, which he refused to do, informing me, at the same time, that he was not authorized to receive subscriptions.

WM. C. GWYNNE, A. B. M. B.

DOCTOR HORNBY—EXAMINED.

---

1. How many Trustees to the Toronto Hospital are there, and who are they?

Ans. Six. The Archdeacon of York; the Chief Justice; the Honourable W. Allan; the Honourable J. H. Dunn; G. H. Markland, Esq.; and C. Widmer, Esquire.

2. What is the nature and amount of property held in trust, in money, houses and lands—where, and how is such property situated?

Ans. Do not know.

3. What amount of rents are paid yearly into the Hospital fund, and are the rents regularly paid?

Ans. Do not know.

4. Has any part of the land been sold, and to what amount, has the purchase money been regularly paid?

Ans. Do not know.

5. Has any part of the property been given to the Government, or to the House of Industry in Toronto, without purchase or otherwise, and if so, state what quantity, and what is its value, and where situated, and whether any equivalent has been demanded or received?

Ans. Do not know.

6. What is the average number of patients confined in Hospital, within the last six months—Is it less than formerly, and if so, has not the letting of one-half of the Hospital to the military, partly produced the change, and tended to incommode much, the patients taken in?

Ans. 153 patients, much discomfort has been experienced by them, from the militia occupation of the best and greater number of wards.

7. Are there separate wards for the reception of contagious diseases? if not, have you known serious, or even fatal consequences result from contagious diseases, being treated indiscriminately in the same ward with persons affected with diseases that were not so?

Ans. No separate wards, and it has occurred that fatal consequences have resulted from the want of them.

8. What remedy would you propose for such a dreadful evil?

Ans. Either separate wards, or what would be more desirable, a fever hospital in which there might be distinct wards for the reception of various descriptions of contagious disorders.

9. Is there a sufficient number of attendants, and servants in the Hospital, in order that the wants and comforts of the patients should be properly attended to?

Ans. Barely sufficient servants, and it would materially advantage the Institution, were there a regularly educated Surgeon, to fill the situation of House Surgeon.

10. Is there in general a sufficient supply of medicines, medical and surgical apparatus and instruments, so as that persons may be safely and properly treated, for the various remediable complaints presented for relief at the Hospital?

Ans. A fair supply, but a great want of surgical instruments and apparatus, for treating surgical complaints.

10. Who are the Medical Attendants.—What are their various qualifications—and the date of their appointments.—Do they receive any remuneration for their services?

Ans. Mr. Widmer, Dr. King, Dr. Hornby, and Dr. Gwynne. The exact date of appointment of the two former, I do not know. Dr. Hornby was appointed in May 1835. Dr. Gwynne, in April 1839. No remuneration.

12. Who are the Officers of the Institution, and what are their several salaries?

Ans. Mr. Wilkinson, who fills the situation of Apothecary, with a salary of £112 10s. per annum. Mr. Sinclair, the Steward, with a salary of £70 per annum—each having apartments, and allowance of fuel and candles.

13. Do not certain rules and regulations exist for the guidance of persons connected with the Hospital: and by those rules are not persons allowed to subscribe to the funds of the Hospital.—If so, have any steps been taken to carry these objects into effect?

Ans. I am not aware of any rules and regulations for the instruction of persons connected with the Hospital, nor of any subscribers to its funds. I, however, think it would be advantageous to have an annual Board of Management elected from the number of Trustees, who would frame rules for its guidance, and see them enforced. Indeed it has frequently been matter of surprise, that such a body was not in existence, there being no Institution of the kind without one.

R. HORNBY, M. D.

Toronto, May 9th, 1839.

DOCTOR KING—EXAMINED.

1. How many Trustees to the Toronto Hospital are there, and who are they ?

Ans. I believe there are six—The Chief Justice; The Archdeacon; Dr. Widmer; The Honourable Messrs. Markland, Allan, and Dunn.

2. What is the nature and amount of property held in trust, in money, houses and lands. Where and how is such property situated ?

Ans. I am not aware.

3. What amount of rents are paid yearly into the Hospital fund, and are the rents regularly paid ?

Ans. I am not aware.

4. Has any part of the land been sold, and to what amount has the purchase money been regularly paid ?

Ans. I am not aware.

5. Has any part of the property been given to the Government or to the House of Industry, in Toronto, without purchase or otherwise, and if so, state what quantity, and what is its value, and where situated, and whether any equivalent has been demanded or received ?

Ans. From my own knowledge I cannot answer this question, but I have heard, (and indeed it is currently reported), that a piece of land, part of the Hospital property, in this City, has been given by the Trustees, without purchase or an equivalent, to the House of Industry.

6. What is the average number of patients confined in the Hospital within the last six months—Is it less than formerly, and if so, has not the letting of one half of the Hospital to the military partly produced the change, and tended to incommode much the patients taken in ?

Ans. I cannot say exactly what may have been the average number of patients for the last six months, but that it is less than formerly, I am certain. The letting one half of the Hospital to the military must have partly caused the change, and in a great degree incommoded the patients taken in; for the males were necessarily confined to two wards, (one of them a very small one), and the females to one. The Trustees, I am informed, agreed to it in order to add to the funds, then very low.

7. Are there separate wards for the reception of contagious diseases—If not, have you known serious or even fatal consequences result from contagious diseases being treated indiscriminately in the same ward with persons affected with diseases that were not so ?

Ans. There are no separate wards for contagious diseases; the construction of the Hospital is such as to render it impossible to keep contagious diseases sufficiently apart from those that are not so, consequently, it has often happened that persons taken in for other complaints, have been seized with typhus fever or small pox while in the Hospital, and, in some instances, even death resulted.

8. What remedy do you propose for such a dreadful evil ?

Ans. The remedy is sufficiently obvious. The adding to the Hospital two fever wards, or what would be still more preferable, the building a fever hospital apart from the present Hospital.

9. Is there a sufficient number of attendants and servants in the Hospital, in order that the wants and comforts of the patients should be properly attended to ?

Ans. I dare say the number of attendants are sufficient for the number of patients.

10. Is there in general a sufficient supply of medicines, medical and surgical apparatus and instruments, so as that persons may be safely and properly treated for the various remediable complaints presented for relief at the Hospital ?

Ans. The supply of medicine is in general good. I cannot say so much for the other articles mentioned; the supply of surgical instruments is bad, but the medical attendants generally provide instruments for particular operations.

11. Who are the medical attendants—What are their various qualifications—and the date of their appointments—Do they receive any remuneration for their services ?

Ans. The medical attendants are Doctors Widmer, King, Hornby, and Gwynne. The professional qualifications of Doctors Widmer, Hornby, and Gwynne, I always understood to be of the very first order. Those gentlemen give, I suppose, the required information as far as regards themselves. I am a Doctor of Medicine, a Surgeon, and a Licentiate in the Midwifery of the Lying-in-Hospital, Dublin. They receive no remuneration for their services.

12. Who are the other officers of the Institution, and what are their several salaries?

Ans. The other officers of the Institution are Mr. Wilkinson, apothecary, and Mr. Sinclair, steward. I do not know what salaries they receive.

13. Do not certain Rules and regulations exist for the guidance of persons connected with the Hospital, and by those Rules are not persons allowed to subscribe to the funds of the Hospital—If so, have any steps been taken to carry these objects into effect?

Ans. There are printed regulations, and, according to them, persons can subscribe and become Governors of the Institution; but those salutary regulations have never been acted upon, and to this neglect is chiefly attributable the present embarrassed state of the funds, and the want of proper internal arrangements. One or two Trustees only take much trouble about the Hospital affairs, and, in my opinion, it is owing to the praiseworthy and indefatigable exertions of Dr. Widmer, that the Hospital continues still in operation.

---

C. WIDMER, ESQUIRE, Surgeon—EXAMINED.

---

1. How many Trustees to the Toronto Hospital are there, and who are they?

Ans. There are six Trustees of the Toronto Hospital, viz.—The Archdeacon of York; the Chief Justice; the Honourable William Allan; the Honourable J. H. Dunn; the Honourable George Markland, and myself.

2. What is the nature and amount of property held in trust, in money, houses and lands, where and how is such property situated?

Ans. The property held in trust consists of certain bank stock, and lands granted by the Crown: the amount of the former, and the quantity of the latter, I cannot state without reference to the Treasurer's books.

3. What amount of rents are paid yearly into the Hospital fund—and are the rents regularly paid?

Ans. I am unable to reply to this question.

4. Has any part of the land been sold, and to what amount has the purchase money been regularly paid?

Ans. I cannot answer this question.

5. Has any part of the property been given to the Government, or to the House of Industry in Toronto, without purchase or otherwise; and if so, state what quantity and what is its value, and where situated; and whether any equivalent has been demanded or received?

Ans. I have heard it stated, that a lot of land granted to the Hospital, has been alienated by the Trustees, for the location of a House of Industry; but if such is the fact, it is not within my knowledge.

6. What is the average number of patients confined in the Hospital within the last six months?—Is it less than formerly; and if so, has not the letting of one-half of the Hospital to the Military, partly produced the change, and tended to incommode much the patients taken in?

Ans. The total number of patients admitted within the last six months has been 153. It is less than formerly; for owing to the necessity of supporting so many applicants for admission, by the appropriation of a part of the capital of the Institution, it was deemed prudent to decrease the number of beds; and by letting a part of the building to the Military, the rent received, would, in some measure, supply a remedy for such a deficiency of income as must soon leave the Hospital without any funds at all for its support. This measure was adopted also with a view to exclude a class of persons always presenting themselves on account of their destitution, who were not the subjects of disease, but required a place of refuge from the ills of poverty.

7. Are there separate wards for the reception of contagious diseases—If not, have you known serious or even fatal consequences result from contagious diseases being treated indiscriminately in the same ward with persons affected with diseases that were not so?

Ans. Separate wards have been kept for contagious diseases as far as the structure of the Hospital would admit. But since a part of the building has been let to the military, the separation has not been as perfect as was desirable; but fewer cases of fever have been received during this period, and the evil has, therefore, not been of considerable magnitude.

8. What remedy would you propose for such a dreadful evil?

Ans. The remedy for this evil is obvious, viz., the increase of the funds of the Hospital to an adequate extent which would allow of the construction of new wards.

9. Is there a sufficient number of attendants and servants in the Hospital, in order that the wants and comforts of the patients should be properly attended to?

Ans. There is a sufficient number of servants to supply the wants and comforts of the patients.

10. Is there in general a sufficient supply of medicines, medical and surgical apparatus and instruments, so as that persons may be safely and properly treated for the various remediable complaints presented for relief at the Hospital?

Ans. There is always an abundant supply of medicines, &c. but many of the expensive surgical instruments and apparatus are wanted—these, when required, have been furnished by the Medical Attendants, from their own resources.

11. Who are the Medical Attendants.—What are their various qualifications—and the date of their appointments.—Do they receive any remuneration for their services?

Ans. There are four Medical Officers in constant attendance on the Hospital, viz.—Dr. King, Dr. Hornby, Dr. Gwynne, and myself. Their qualifications are well known. I cannot state the date of their respective appointments. They receive no remuneration for their services.

12. Who are the other Officers of the Institution, and what are their several salaries?

Ans. Mr. Sinclair, the Steward, receives £70 per annum, with accommodation in the house, fuel and candles. Mr. Wilkinson is the resident Apothecary, at a salary of £112 10s. per annum, with the same allowances.

13. Do not certain rules and regulations exist, for the guidance of persons connected with the Hospital; and by those rules are not persons allowed to subscribe to the funds of the Hospital.—If so, have any steps been taken to carry these objects into effect?

Ans. Certain rules and regulations have been printed for the guidance of persons connected with the Hospital. By those rules, persons were allowed to subscribe to the funds of the Hospital. No steps have been taken to carry these objects into effect.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE,

ON SUPPLY BILL.

---

The Committee of Conference on the part of the Legislative Council on the subject matter of the Bill, entitled "An Act to provide for the payment of certain sums in support of the Civil Government of the Province," are instructed to represent to the Committee on the part of the House of Assembly the following objections, which appear to the Legislative Council to the passage of the Bill in its present shape.

---

In the Estimate for Government Office, and in that for Secretary and Registrar.

It appears by a message now before this House, from His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, that His Excellency contemplates such an alteration in the respective duties of the office of Civil and Provincial Secretary as will render both more efficient for the despatch of public business.

The Legislative Council, in anticipation of some such change or at least of the discussion of the measure, object to a vote of supply which takes away the salary of one of the officers and gives him a sum of £600 only out of his fees, the duties remaining as at present, or if altered, upon a new appointment, the fees appearing necessary to carry into effect the proposed arrangement.

Executive Council Office.

The Legislative Council object to the reduction of one of the clerks of the Executive Council, which they think cannot fail to be injurious to the public service, in a department, the business of which is necessarily increasing.

Surveyor General's Office.

Pending the negotiation with the Provincial Legislature for the surrender of the Casual and Territorial Revenue, the Legislative Council object to the making an additional charge upon that fund, which has hitherto been borne out of the general revenue.

Estimate for the Arrest, Trial, &c. of State Prisoners.

The Legislative Council object, that a service which has hitherto been found so imperatively necessary, should be left altogether unprovided for.

Advances from the Crown Fund, on the same account.

The Legislative Council object, that advances made by Government, in expectation of their recognition by the Assembly, should be omitted in the supply. This omission appears not only to embarrass the Government, as to the advances already made, but to render it impossible for it to discharge the sums yet remaining due, or to carry on the public service in this important branch, should occasion therefor unhappily arise during the present year.

Secret Services.

The Legislative Council object, that these services have not been provided for, as the Government must thereby be considered as left altogether powerless for the future, should a necessity arise such as the occurrences of the past year have exhibited, for the exercise of the vigilance of the Executive Government, in the discovery of the treasonable designs of the enemy.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE

ON

PETITION OF DAVID SIDEY.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee to whom was referred the Petition of David Sidey, most respectfully report:

That, having made enquiry into the allegations stated in the Petition, and having examined some of the persons connected with the office of the Commissioner of the Crown Lands, your Committee find that very great irregularity seems to prevail in it—there appears to be no doubt that the Petitioner purchased, at public auction, and paid an instalment on a small broken front of about thirty acres on the Rice Lake, adjoining a lot he had previously purchased from the Crown, and that, subsequent to such purchase and payment of an instalment thereon, an order of Council was made upon an ex-parte statement, rescinding the sale to the Petitioner, without his even being allowed an opportunity of resisting it: that this proceeding on the part of the Council and the Commissioner of Crown Lands is manifestly arbitrary and illegal, and in violation of the law providing for the disposal of the public lands of the Crown, as well as contrary to the spirit and tenor of the despatch communicated to your Honourable House this session on the subject of that law. Indeed this law seems to have been either overlooked or altogether disregarded, for it appeared in evidence, that this is not the only instance in which, after a sale and payment of an instalment to the Commissioner of Crown Lands, an order in Council has been made rescinding such sale, and directing the patent to issue to another person.

It appears that the Council and Commissioner of Crown Lands by this means assume the power and authority of the Court of Chancery, and your Committee consider such power and authority could not be exercised by any other tribunal than the Court of Chancery.

Your Committee, moreover, in reference to the law for the disposal of the public lands, find that the Commissioner of Crown Lands is required to make certain returns to the Legislature within ten days after the meeting of any session thereof, a true copy of the accounts or lists of all sales and expenditure respecting the public lands—and of the names of his Agents in the several Districts of the Province, and to publish the same in the Upper Canada Gazette for the information of the public. Your Committee regret to learn that this wise provision of the Legislature seems to be totally disregarded by that officer, and your Committee are of opinion that such remissness on the part of that officer in the discharge of the very important duties of his station are to be attributed, in a very considerable degree, to his being chiefly occupied with matters connected perhaps with the public service, but having no reference to the functions of this particular employment.

Your Committee cannot but express a decided opinion, that the Commissioner of Crown Lands ought, personally, to devote almost his entire attention to the discharge of duties affecting so materially the most important branch of the revenues of the Crown—without which, it cannot be expected that the public interests will be properly guarded, or confidence be maintained.

Your Committee, in conclusion, have to state, that as the Patent has issued for the land claimed by the petitioner, his redress must now be sought for in the Court of Chancery, at a very considerable expense and loss of time, thereby subjecting him to a vexatious litigation, which an ordinarily correct discharge of the duties of this office would have obviated.

All which is respectfully submitted,

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE ON THE SUBJECT OF EMIGRATION:

Reported 7th December, 1836—1st Sess. 13th Parl't.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

---

The Committee to whom was referred that part of His Excellency, the Lieutenant Governor's speech, at the opening of the present Session of the Legislature, which relates to the subject of emigration, beg leave to report:—

Your Committee have taken into their earnest consideration, the best means of attracting the superabundant population, and capital of the Parent State into this Province, are quite sensible that the means which the Canada Company originally took of diffusing throughout Great Britain, a more accurate account of the soil, climate, and productions of the country, than it then possessed, led to a very great emigration to this Province, and proves that an accurate knowledge of the still greater capabilities and advantages of the country, is all that is now required to ensure the like results.

Your Committee are aware that a combination of causes has tended for the last three years to divert the emigration from this Province, to the neighbouring States, but they are embolden in their expectations that "no time will be lost in the adoption of an improved system in the land granting department,"—"so that the extensive tracts of rich lands lately obtained from the Indians," "will be thrown open to settlement upon terms of the most favourable nature, for those who desire to become residents upon them," and thus the tide of emigration to this Province be restored.

Your Committee feel convinced that many of the inhabitants of Great Britain, in making up their minds to emigration, and determining upon the country to which they shall emigrate, do not sufficiently take into consideration, that the burdens on productive industry, which frequently induce them to quit the parent State, are not met with in this Colony, where they may possess the inestimable advantages of the same institutions, without any drawback on their industrious exertions.

Your Committee think it very desirable that the respective Poor Law Commissioners, Clergy, gentry and magistracy throughout England, should be made acquainted with the fact, that a large proportion of poor labourers, that have been sent out to this Province by the charitable assistance of parishes and private individuals, have become freeholders, and possess the means of comfortable subsistence for themselves and families.

Your Committee deem it of vital importance to the interests of this Province, that a faithful, accurate and full description of this country—the nature of its soil, the price of partially cleared farms, of wild lands, of its public works, of the character of its settlers, its general tranquillity, and the independence and happiness of its people—should be laid before the British nation.

That, to accomplish this desirable object, one or more individuals should be judiciously selected, who could convey this necessary information to an inquiring people; and your Committee feel satisfied that it is owing, in a great degree, to British capital and British emigration, that the neighbouring States teem with abundance from the Atlantic to the farthest West; that towns and villages are rising in the wilderness, so will British emigrants prefer a colony of the British Crown, if they are assured of the same benefits; and thus the desert wastes of this Province would become the habitations of men, and the forest peopled with a thriving and contented population.

Your Committee further recommend, that His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor be requested to appropriate the necessary funds to accomplish this desirable object, out of the proceeds arising from the Casual and Territorial Revenue.

All which is respectfully submitted.

CHAIRMAN.

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE ON THE SUBJECT OF THE RECTORIES.

---

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

---

The Committee to whom was referred His Excellency's Message, and the accompanying documents, on the subject of the fifty-seven Rectories—

RESPECTFULLY REPORT :

That they have carefully examined the said documents, as well as all others that appear on the Journals of your Honourable House, all of which are appended to this report; and on a reference to those papers, it will be seen that the legality of that much to be regretted act of a former administration, the establishment and endowment of fifty-seven Rectories, may, with propriety, be doubted, inasmuch as the Minute in Council, under the authority of which that transaction took place, cites, as authority, the despatch of Lord Goderich, dated 6th April, 1832, which has been distinctly declared, on two different occasions, by the Law Officers of the Crown, not to contain sufficient authority to justify that act, and that if endowed under the authority of that despatch, they were not legal endowments.

It is true that those Law Officers have been induced to alter their decision on that subject, from statements that have subsequently been made, and calling their attention to a despatch dated many years antecedent to the despatch alluded to in the Minute in Council, and during another reign, also in another administration, both here and at home.—In addition to which, it is to be taken into consideration, that the attention of the Colonial Legislature had been invited on the subject of the Clergy Reserves; and no one would have supposed that any attempt would have been made to dispose of any part of the lands set apart (conditionally) for the support of a Protestant Clergy, inasmuch as the 31st Geo. III. gives the power of altering and repealing those clauses that refer to the Clergy Reserves—a provision, that in the opinion of your Committee, was wisely made; as the circumstances of the country do not justify so large a portion of the lands being set apart for one denomination of christians, which does not comprise a thing like a majority of the population, but in the opinion of your Committee, quite the reverse. Your Committee need not further revert to this very impolitic Act, than to state that in the opinion of your Committee, the late rebellion in this Province may in some degree be attributed to that much to be regretted Act. Your Committee think it due to themselves to state, that they by no means agree with the opinion that has been for a long time entertained by the exclusive advocates of the Church of England, namely, that they were the only denomination recognized by the term “Protestant Clergy”—while your Committee feel bound to declare that in their opinion the erection and endowment of fifty-seven rectories, was very improper, and the legality of these endowments, may with propriety be doubted.

Your Committee perceive that a Resolution, which passed this House in February, 1839, has been alluded to in a late Despatch, and stated as a reason why those endowments should not be interfered with. Your Committee feel confident that, had the whole circumstances connected with that matter been then distinctly understood, no such resolution would have passed, as it would have been an acknowledgement that this House had no right to interfere, even by an expression of opinion, with an appropriation of public property, whether made contrary to the principles of equity or not—an acknowledgement that, in the opinion of your Committee, ought not to be made, as your Honourable House ought (as the public guardians and the highest Court in the land) at all times assert their right of interfering whenever (in their opinion) an improper act has been perpetrated. Yet they have no disposition to throw any impediment in the way of the Church of England carrying out her church government and discipline; but, on the contrary, are desirous that every facility shall be afforded as well to that as all other orthodox churches, in the fullest manner. To effect that object, and at the same time allay all apprehension that has and does exist, (whether well founded or not) with respect to the ecclesiastical power one church may exercise over the members of another—an apprehension that cannot be denied—has been the cause of much excitement throughout the country, and by means of which much bad feeling has been engendered, which it must be admitted it is most desirable to allay. For the purpose of accomplishing so desirable an object, and finally setting at rest this exciting question, your Committee recommend that those clauses of the Constitutional Act, which authorises the establishment and endowment of Rectories be repealed, and that an Act be passed, constituting the Ministers of the Church of England, as well as other Ministers, or executive part of other Churches, to hold lands, and giving them all the power that may be necessary to carry out to the fullest extent their different forms of church government, confining this jurisdiction to their own voluntary members. Your Committee believe that by such a measure, in conjunction with a fair distribution of the Clergy Reserves, will have the most beneficial effects, in allaying those feelings of dissatisfaction that, it must be acknowledged, have too much disturbed that social harmony that ought to exist amongst all classes of Her Majesty's subjects. Should the course above recommended appear objectionable, your Committee recommend that an humble Address be presented to Her Majesty, praying Her Majesty to take the necessary steps to bring the subject of the endowment of the Rectories fully before the Privy Council, or such other legal tribunal as may be necessary, in order that their legality may be fully tested without throwing the expense on any portion of the community in particular. With this view of the subject, your Committee have passed an Address, which they report herewith.

All which is respectfully submitted.

E. W. THOMSON,
CHAIRMAN.

Committee Room,
May, 1839.

APPENDIX TO REPORT ON RECTORIES.

GEO. ARTHUR,

In compliance with the address of the House of Assembly, of the 8th instant, the Lieutenant Governor now transmits a copy of the minute in council, under the authority of which fifty-seven rectories were established and endowed within this Province, together with copies of several despatches and other documents connected with these rectories, and with the Clergy Reserves.

The correspondence on those subjects already communicated to the House of Assembly by Sir Francis Head, with his message of the 16th of February, 1838, includes a despatch from Lord Glenelg, of the 15th Nov. 1837; and the Lieutenant Governor has accordingly considered the present application of the House, for further information respecting the rectories, to be necessarily confined to papers of a subsequent date.

With reference to the despatch to Lord Glenelg, No. 63, of the 21st September, 1838, the Lieutenant Governor deems it proper to observe that copies of the several papers originally forwarded with that despatch to his Lordship, are in a course of preparation, and shall be laid before the House of Assembly, as soon as they can be completed.

Under an anxious desire to avoid delay, in furnishing the House with all the information in his power on the subject of their address, the Lieutenant Governor has been induced to transmit the accompanying documents, without waiting for the copies of the enclosures to which he has just alluded.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER, AT TORONTO,
Friday, 15th January, 1836.

PRESENT:

THE HONOURABLE PETER ROBINSON, PRESIDING COUNCILLOR.
" " GEORGE H. MARKLAND,
" " JOSEPH WELLS.

To His Excellency SIR JOHN COLBORNE, K. C. B. Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major-General Commanding, His Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY:

Pursuant to the views of Lord Goderich, shown by his despatch of the 5th April, 1832, in which he concurs with your Excellency, and expresses his desire "that a moderate portion of land should be assigned in each Township or Parish, for ensuring the future comfort, if not the complete maintenance of the Rectors." The Council caused the necessary steps to be taken for the purpose of setting apart lots in each Township throughout the Province.

Much delay has been caused by their anxiety to avoid interfering with persons who might have acknowledged claims to any of the reserves to be selected either for lease or purchase.

A difficulty in completing what his lordship most appropriately calls "this salutary work," was also caused by the Crown Officers not concurring in the form to be used in the instrument by which the endowment is to be confirmed, which left the Council to decide as to the mode to be adopted for that purpose.

These obstacles have now been surmounted, and it is respectfully recommended that no time be lost in authorizing the Attorney General to prepare the necessary instruments to secure to the incumbents named in the annexed schedules, and their successors, the lots of land there enumerated, as having been respectively set apart for glebes.

All which is respectfully submitted.

EXTRACT from Lord Goderich's Confidential Despatch to Lieutenant-Governor Sir John Colborne, dated Downing-Street, 5th April, 1832.

"And I am happy to find that your practical views, founded upon personal knowledge and experience, are so coincident with those which, upon a more speculative view, I had been led to entertain. I quite concur with you in thinking, that, the greatest benefit to the Church of England would be derived from applying a portion, at least, of the funds under the control of the Executive Government in the building of rectories and churches; and I would add, in preparing, as far as may be, for profitable occupation, that moderate portion of land which you propose to assign in each township or parish for ensuring the future comfort, if not the complete maintenance of the rectors. With this view, it appears to me, that it would be most desirable to make a beginning in this salutary work."

Downing Street,
23rd December, 1837.

SIR,

I have received your Predecessor's despatch, No. 103, of the 16th September, transmitting two memorials from the Synod of the Presbyterian Church of Canada, in connection with the Church of Scotland; having reference to the claim of that Church to a share of the revenue accruing from the clergy reserves, and to the rectories lately constituted in the Province of Upper Canada.

With respect to the first of these subjects, I am led to believe, from the terms of the memorial, that some misapprehension exists on the part of the Synod as to the declared intentions of Her Majesty's Government. In order that they may be clearly understood, I have to request that you will communicate to the Synod so much of the correspondence, enclosed in my despatch to Sir Francis Head of the 7th September last, No. 231, as relates to the claims of the Scotch Church in Upper Canada, and the views of Her Majesty's Government in reference to those claims.

With respect to the constitution of the rectories, you will inform the Synod that, without entering on the discussion of the question as to the legality of these endowments, or the policy of the measure by which they were created, I trust an arrangement will shortly be effected, by which the conflicting claims of various religious denominations in Upper Canada will be satisfactorily adjusted, and the means of Christian worship and instruction, in connection with the Presbyterian Church in the Province, be materially extended.

I have, &c.,

(Signed) GLENELG.

Colonel SIR GEORGE ARTHUR.

(No. 4.)

Downing Street,
26th December, 1837.

SIR,

Amongst the questions to which your attention will be called upon your arrival in Upper Canada, one of the most important is, that which relates to the provision for the maintenance and diffusion of Christian knowledge throughout the increasing population of the Province. This subject has recently engaged much of the public attention in Upper Canada, with reference to the most beneficial appropriation of the lands set apart by the Act of 1791, for religious purposes, and known by the name of Clergy Reserves.

It could scarcely be expected that the discussion of this question could fail to produce considerable controversy and excitement, or that its settlement could be accomplished without serious difficulty. I entertain, however, a confident hope that some plan may, at an early period, be agreed to, by which the difficulties which have hitherto opposed a satisfactory adjustment of the conflicting claims of various religious denominations may be removed, and an adequate provision be made for meeting on comprehensive principles the religious wants of the great body of the inhabitants. I regret that the agitated question of the endowment of fifty-seven rectories, in the commencement of the year 1836, has introduced a new element of dissension. The correspondence which has taken place between Her Majesty's Government and your Predecessor on this subject will place you fully in possession of the facts of this case.

How far the view originally taken of that subject by the law officers of the Crown may be altered when they shall have maturely considered the explanations which have recently, for the first time, reached me, as to the grounds on which the Lieutenant Governor and Executive Council really proceeded, I am at present unable to state. In the mean time, however, before I can receive their report, I think it right to acquaint you with the view which I at present entertain of the course which it may be desirable to pursue with reference to this subject.

The House of Assembly of Upper Canada, as appears from their Journals of the 9th February, 1837, adopted a series of resolutions relative to these endowments, of which the sixth declared, "that this House regard as inviolable the rights acquired under the patents "by which rectories have been endowed, and cannot, therefore, either invite or sanction any "interference with the rights thus established."

On the part of Her Majesty's Executive Government, I cannot hesitate to avow our entire adoption of the principle by which this resolution was dictated—although the endowment of the Rectories in the year 1836, did not take place with the previous concurrence or knowledge of the present Ministers of the Crown, yet, as they appear to have been made at least under a presumed authority from the Secretary of State, and as considerable time has now elapsed since the parties were put in possession of the lands, I should much regret to be compelled to disturb that settlement, or to dispossess the Clergy of the Church of England of the lands which have been assigned for their maintenance, should the legal right now appear to the law officers of the Crown to be indefeasible, no practical question will of course remain for the decision of the Government—but even on the contrary supposition, I feel, that with the concurrence of the local Legislature, the endowments which have actually been made, might be ratified in connection with some general scheme for the future appropriation of the Clergy Reserves, which would satisfy the reasonable claims of other denominations of christians. As a basis of such a settlement, I would propose that under the peculiar circumstances of the case, the right of the Church of England to the endowments of January, 1836, should be acknowledged and ratified; I would further suggest that this measure should be accompanied by a Legislative Declaration "That the establishment and endowment of Rectories in "the Province, shall not be construed to confer any right to exercise any Ecclesiastical or "spiritual power whatever, except over the members of the Church of England."

I quote these words from the Resolutions of the Assembly of the 9th of February, 1837, to which I have referred.—That House, indeed, proposes that this declaration should proceed not from the Local Legislature, but from Parliament. But I conceive, that, if the arrangement I suggest should meet with general acceptance, there will be no difficulty in obtaining an Act of General Assembly for the purpose, and that the interference of Parliament in the internal affairs of the Province may thus be avoided.

In the next place, I have to refer you to my Despatch to Sir Francis Head of the 7th September, No. 231, in which, and in the enclosure accompanying it, will be found an explanation of the system established on my advice, by His late Majesty, for providing for the religious instruction of the inhabitants of the Australian Colonies. I do not here enter into the details of that measure, with which you are already familiar, but I confine myself to the statement that the general principle of it is, that the contributions of the State towards the support of the different Christian communions, should be regulated by the extent of the voluntary efforts which the members of each should make for the promotion of the same general end. Of the success of that plan in New South Wales, I have the most satisfactory proofs. The result in that Colony, considering the short period which has elapsed since the provisions of this measure have been in operation, has been greatly to increase the spontaneous exertions of the various denominations of Christians, the number of ministers, and the means applicable to the general diffusion of Christian instruction.

If the Clergy Reserves of Upper Canada should be converted into a fund, subject to a similar appropriation, I perceive no reason to doubt of a corresponding result. If, by the adoption of this scheme, with any modifications which the knowledge possessed by the Local Legislature of the circumstances of the Province and the comparative numbers of the religious denominations existing in it may suggest, concord, and a mutual good understanding could be restored amongst the different Christian societies existing in Upper Canada, an object of the highest importance would be attained.—We should have closed a controversy, hostile to the general peace of Her Majesty's subjects inhabiting that part of Her dominions, and should have brought to an end a debate painful to every one who is justly alive to the interests of the Christian faith, which we all acknowledge and profess under various forms of ecclesiastical government; you are, therefore, authorized to convey these or any other suggestions which you consider better adapted to effect the object in view to the Legislative Council and House of Assembly, in whatever manner may be most consistent with constitutional forms and with a careful respect for their rights and privileges; and I earnestly hope that they will cordially co-operate with Her Majesty's Government, and with yourself, in the adoption of such measures, with reference to this important subject, as will most effectually conduce to the advancement of the best interests of all classes of Her Majesty's subjects in the Province.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your most obedient humble servant,

Downing Street,
9th February, 1838.

SIR,

Referring to the Despatches enumerated in the margin on the subject of the rectories established in Upper Canada, under an order made by Lieutenant Governor Sir John Colborne, with the advice of the Executive Council in the year 1836, I have now the honour to transmit, for your information, a copy of a further report which has reached me from the Queen's Advocate, and from Her Majesty's Attorney and Solicitor General. You will perceive that, advertent to the facts now, for the first time, brought under their notice, they affirm the validity of the endowments in point of law, while they continue to maintain the insufficiency of the authority to which alone the order itself referred as the foundation of the measure.

I regret that the real basis on which the Act proceeded was not communicated to me in answer to my first demand for explanation on the subject, in which case this discussion would have been saved. The legal right being now established, no further question respecting them can remain for the consideration of the Government.

The Synod of the Scots Church in Upper Canada has, as you are aware, made the strongest representations against these endowments, and especially against what they apprehend must follow, namely, that the ecclesiastical authority thereby established in the parishes created by this measure must affect not merely the members of the Church of England but those also of other religious communions. If this be really the legal consequence of the measure, of course the Ministers of the Crown cannot prevent it. I confess, however, that

I do not distinctly understand what is that ecclesiastical authority which the incumbents of the Church of England have thus acquired, and against which the Members of the Scots Church remonstrate. I am much disposed to doubt, whether, in practice or in theory, the fifty-seven rectories will exercise any authority spiritual or temporal, excepting over those who may voluntarily submit themselves to it.

If, however, any members of the Scots Church, or of any other Christian community, shall insist upon a further investigation of the question of law, and shall be able to state any material fact or to suggest any important argument which may hitherto have escaped notice, it will be my duty to afford them the same facility for bringing the question under the review of the highest accessible legal authority which has already been afforded to the clergy of the Church of England. But, as there is little prospect of any such fact or argument being now elicited, I should rejoice to believe that the discussion is finally closed. I trust that the efforts which you have been instructed to make for the adjustment of the question of the Clergy reserves will tend to that result.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your most obedient humble servant,

(Signed) GLENELG.

Doctors' Commons,
24th January, 1838.

MY LORD,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands, signified in your letter of the 19th ultimo, transmitting certain documents which were referred to us on the 12th of April last, on the subject of the endowment of certain Rectories in the Province of Upper Canada; also enclosing a copy of the report made by us in answer to that reference, with copies of a correspondence which has since taken place on the subject, between your Lordship and the Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada, also enclosing a copy of the Commission under which the Government of the Province was administered in the month of January, 1836, when the order of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, respecting those Rectories, was made.

Adverting to these various documents, and especially to the report of the Archdeacon of Toronto, accompanying Sir F. Head's Despatch of the 18th of October, your Lordship is pleased to request that we would report our joint opinion, whether the addition of the material fact now communicated to us, affects the conclusion which we adopted and reported to your Lordship on the 8th of June; and if so, that he would report the answer which we would now give to the questions proposed in your Lordship's letter of the 12th April, viz. :—

“First, Adverting to the terms of the Statute 31 Geo. 3, chap. 41, sec. 36 and 40, and to the terms of the Royal Commission, could the Lieutenant-Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, lawfully constitute and erect, or endow any parsonage or Rectory within the Province, without the further signification of His Majesty's pleasure?”

“Secondly, Can Lord Ripon's Despatch, of the 3rd April, 1832, be regarded as signifying His Majesty's pleasure for the erection of Parsonages, or for the endowment of them, or for either of those purposes?”

“Thirdly, Are the erection and the endowment of the fifty-seven Rectories, by Sir John Colbourne, valid and lawful acts?”

“Fourthly, If the preceding questions be answered in the affirmative, have the Rectors of the parishes so erected and endowed, the same ecclesiastical authority within their respective limits, as are vested in the rector of a parish in England—or within what other bounds is that authority vested?”

In obedience to your Lordships commands, we have the honor to report that adverting to the various documents and especially to the instructions contained in Lord Bathurst's despatch to Sir P. Maitland, of the 22nd July, 1825, referred to in the report of the Archdeacon of York (Toronto,) and also to the terms of the royal commission, the whole of which is now before us, we are of opinion—

1st. That the Lieutenant Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, could lawfully constitute, and erect, or endow, any parsonage, or rectory within the Province, without the further signification of His Majesty's pleasure.

2nd. We are of opinion that Lord Ripon's despatch of the 5th April, 1832, cannot be regarded as signifying His Majesty's pleasure for the erection of parsonages, or for the endowment of them, or for either of those purposes.

3rd. We are of opinion that the erection or endowment, of the 57 rectories, by Sir John Colborne, are valid and lawful Acts.

4thly. We are of opinion that the rectors of the parishes so erected, and endowed, have the same Ecclesiastical authority within their respective limits, as are vested in the rector of a parish in England.

We have, &c.

No. 63.

Toronto, 21st September, 1838.

MY LORD:

In compliance with your Lordship's Despatch, of the 30th March, (No. 48) communicating the copy of an Address, agreed to by the House of Lords, requesting certain Returns, relative to the Clergy Reserves and Rectories in Upper and Lower Canada, respectively, and desiring me to furnish you with this information, so far as the Province of Upper Canada is concerned, I have now the honour to transmit to your Lordship, herewith, the following returns:—

1st. The Return from the Crown Lands Office, shewing the amount of Clergy Reserves sold in Upper Canada in each year since 1827, and the number of acres sold in each year—the total amount for which they were sold—the total amount of money received in each year upon such sales, distinguishing principal from interest—the disposal of sums received on account of principal and interest, and the total amount invested or paid over.

2nd. The Receiver-General's account of moneys received by him from various sources, and of payments made therefrom for the support of a Protestant Clergy within Upper Canada, in each year from 1827 to 1837, inclusive, respectively.

3rd. The Surveyor-General's statement of the Rectories created in Upper Canada, with an account of the lands assigned to each.

4th. Statement of the Salary paid to each of the Incumbents of Rectories in Upper Canada, by warrant on the Receiver-General.

From these Returns, your Lordship will gather all the information which this Government can afford, in answer to the requisition of the House of Lords.

Upon one of the heads of inquiry, the information can only be officially furnished by the proper department in London, where the amount of the proceeds of successive sales of Clergy Lands is, from time to time, understood to be vested in the public funds.

The officer receiving such proceeds in this province pays the amount each year into the military chest, under the authority of a despatch from the Secretary of State, dated 2nd April, 1831.

I have to honour to be,

&c. &c. &c.

(Signed) GEO. ARTHUR.

The LORD GLENELG,

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE ON EXPENDITURE OF ROAD AND BRIDGE MONEY.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly.

The Committee appointed to examine and report upon the sums of money paid by the Receiver General to the Treasurers of the several Districts, and by them paid to Commissioners in their respective Districts, for the improvement of Roads and Bridges, in conformity with the Acts of the Legislature of this Province for that purpose, from the year 1830 to 1837, inclusive—

BEG LEAVE MOST RESPECTFULLY TO REPORT :

Your Committee, after a laborious and minute examination of the subject matter referred to them, find unaccounted for—

In 1830 .....	£ 3,136 11 10
1831 .....	3,857 16 4
1833 and 4 .....	22,118 11 8
1837 .....	22,743 11 5½
Total .....	£51,861 11 3½

Your Committee would remark, that, although the above sum has been paid by the Government to the Treasurers of the respective Districts for the purposes intended, to be accounted for in accordance with express provisions of the several Acts of the Legislature, directing the raising and applying monies for the benefit of Roads and Bridges, such an account has not been rendered as the law directs. Your Committee, however, have a personal knowledge of monies unaccounted for, having been applied for the purposes intended, though they are not prepared to say that all the above sum of £51,861 11s. 3¼d. has been so applied; some of them have reason to believe otherwise—but that the provisions of the Legislature, requiring returns from the parties to whom the monies were entrusted, may be carried into effect with as little further delay as possible, so that the real defaulters may be discovered, and the unexpended monies returned to the Receiver General for the public uses of the Province. Your Committee would suggest, that your Honourable House should, by an Address to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, request His Excellency to cause circular letters to be sent to the Treasurers of the several Districts for returns, accompanied by vouchers, signed by the parties to whom the several sums of money were paid, and likewise circular letters to each and every Township Clerk in the Province, requiring that they do ascertain the several sums of money laid out and expended in their respective Townships, reputed Townships, or places, during the period mentioned in this Report, from 1830 to 1837, both inclusive; and that such returns be made in time to the Executive Government, to be laid before the Legislature at its next session. Your Committee herewith append a list of Defaulters and the several sums of money unexpended.

T. MCKAY,
CHAIRMAN.

Committee Room, House of Assembly,
22nd April, 1839.
